R. Scar. No, not to my Remembrance.

Mr. Davy. Do you remember she told him of four, five, or six Pieces of Bread, or twenty-four?

R. Scar. I don't remember any particular Pieces of Bread.

Mr. Davy. Do you remember any Question of an old Stool?

R. Scar. Not to my Knowledge.

Mr. Davy. Nor an old Table?—R. Scar. No.

Mr. Davy. Nor old Pictures over the Chimney?---R. Scar. No.

Mr. Davy. Nor Hay?---R. Scar. No, not to my Knowledge.

Mr. Davy. Can you remember all the Particulars of her making her Escape?---R. Scar. No, I cannot.

Mr. Davy. Was you examined as a Witness on the Trial of Mary Squires?---R. Scar. I was.

Mr. Davy. In the Evidence you gave, did you not swear, that you had heard her examined before the Sitting Alderman, and that before him she had given the same Account as on that Trial?

R. Scar. It corroborated; to the best of my Knowledge. I swore, to the best of my Knowledge, she did.

Mr. Davy. Did you do that, in order to make her whole Story the better to be believed?

R. Scar. I spoke to the best of my Knowledge, and so I do now.

Mr. Davy. Did you soften your Evidence, by saying you believed?

R. Scar. I don't remember that I spoke generally to it. I cannot keep such Things in my Head now.

Mr. Davy. Did you ever hear her mention any Hay in your Life?

R. Scar. I never did.

Mr. Davy. Did you not hear her say upon the Trial, there was Hay in the Room?---R. Scar. I don't remember she did.

Mr. Davy. Was you in Court the whole Time of the Trial?

R. Scar. I was.

Mr. Davy. Have you read the Sessions-Paper since?

R. Scar. No, I have not.

Mr. Davy. Did you hear her say before the Alderman, how she made her Escape?

R. Scar. I did; in getting out through a Window.

Mr. Davy. As you was in Court all the Time, you must hear what she said of the Manner of making her Escape.

R. Scar. She gave the same Account then as before the Alderman, to the best of my Knowledge. Then I remembered her Evidence before the Alderman a great deal better than I can now.

Mr. Davy. Do you think you could then have repeated every Particular?---R. Scar. I cannot say I could; it corroborated, to the best of my Knowledge.

Mr. Davy. Was not the Evidence she gave on the Trial contradictory to what she gave before the Sitting Alderman?

R. Scar. I cannot exactly remember it.

Mr. Davy. Did you, or did you not, tell Mr. Alderman Chitty, the Person she described could not be Mother Wells?

R. Scar. I did not mention such a Thing to him.

Mr. Davy. Did she take the Person that cut her Stays off to be the Mistress of the House?---R. Scar. She did.

Mr. Davy. Did she know who was the Mistress of the House?

R. Scar. No, she did not.

Mr. Davy. Did you know there was a Warrant granted?---R. Scar. I did.

Mr. Davy. Against whom was it granted?

R. Scar. Against Mrs. Wells in particular, for cutting off her Stays.

Mr. Davy. Was you not sure it could not be Mother Wells, according to Canning's Description?

R. Scar. No, I was not: I said, it might not be her.

Mr. Davy. How came you to remember every Particular of what was ſaid at the Houſe of Canning, and forget what paſſed before the Alderman?

R. Scarrat. We were a great while before the Alderman, and I could not contain it in my Head.

Mr. Davy. Did you know the Outſide of Wells's Houſe?

R. Scar. I did.

Mr. Davy. Did you not know whether there was a Pent-houſe, before you went down?——R. Scar. I did not.

Mr. Davy. Did you, or did you not, before Mr. Alderman Chitty, hear her ſay ſhe lay on bare Boards?

R. Scar. She ſaid, ſhe had no Bed to lie upon: I don't remember hearing her ſay ſhe did lie down.

Mr. Davy. Do you remember you heard her ſay there was a Grate in the Room?

R. Scar. I do not remember that.

Mr. Davy. Did you hear her mention a Saddle?

R. Scar. To the beſt of my Knowledge, ſhe deſcribed a Saddle and an old Caſk; but I cannot ſay.

Mr. Davy. How did ſhe deſcribe the Room, when you went down with her?

R. Scar. To the beſt of my Knowledge, ſhe ſaid it was a long, darkiſh Room, but I am not poſitive; but I am poſitive ſhe ſaid it was a long, darkiſh Room, before ſhe went down.

Mr. Davy. Where did ſhe ſay that?

R. Scar. I believe, before Alderman Chitty; if ſhe did not there, it was in her Mother's Houſe.

Mr. Davy. Are you poſitive to all the Queſtions you aſked her at her Mother's, and her Anſwers?——R. Scar. I am.

Mr. Davy. Did you write any of it down?---R. Scar. No, I never did.

Mr. Davy. Did ſhe deſcribe the Jug before the Alderman?

R. Scar. I believe ſhe did.

Mr. Davy. And the Bread?——R. Scar. I believe ſhe did.

Mr. Davy. How many Pieces of Bread?

R. Scar. I do not remember how many Pieces; but it was about a Quartern Loaf.

Mr. Davy. Are you ſtill in the Service of Mr. Snee?

R. Scar. No; I have left it three Years this Month, Old Stile.

Mr. Davy. In what Employment are you now?

R. Scar. I work for Mrs. Waller in the Old-'Change. I am a Hartſhorn-raſper, and live at Mr. Carlton's, a Potter, in Aldermanbury-Poſtern.

Mr. Davy. How long have you lived there?

R. Scar. I have boarded in that Houſe about a Year and half: I boarded there before I lodged there.

Mr. Davy. Have you boarded or lodged at any other Houſe, ſince this Affair at Enfield-Waſh?——R. Scar. No, I have not.

Mr. Davy. How far is Mr. Carlton's from Mr. Lyon's Houſe?

R. Scar. Mr. Lyon lives in Aldermanbury, and the other is in Aldermanbury-Poſtern; they are about ſeven or eight hundred Yards Diſtance.

Mr. Davy. How far is Mr. Carlton's from Mrs. Canning's Houſe?

R Scar. It is next Door but one.

Mr. Davy. Whoſe Servant came and told you Elizabeth Canning was come Home?——R. Scar. It was the Apothecary's Maid.

Mr. Davy. Did you lodge there then?

R. Scar. I did; and believe I had bedded and boarded there a Year before.

Mr. Davy. Did you lodge there the whole Month of January?

R. Scar. I did, and did not lie out of the Houſe one Night.

Mr. Davy. And work'd for Mrs. Waller then?——R. Scar. I did.

Mr. Davy. Did you work every Day?

R. Scar. No, I did not; but I did that Month from the 5th to the 27th, to the beſt of my Knowledge.

Mr. Davy. Where was you from the 1ſt to the 5th of January 1753?

R. Scar. I was backwards and forwards at Mr. Carlton's; I eat and drank there.

Mr. Davy. Are you certain you dined at Home from the 1ſt to the 5th?

R. Scar. No, I am not, it being Holiday-Time.

Mr. Davy. Where did you dine the 1ſt?---R. Scar. At Mr. Carlton's.

Mr. Davy, What did you do after Dinner?

R. Scar. I went to ſee a Play in Covent-Garden Houſe; but being too late, the Houſe was full, we returned Home between Nine and Ten at Night.

Mr. Davy. Who were with you?

R. Scar. Mr. Knowles, a Coal-merchant, and his Wife. We tried to get in at Covent-Garden, then at Drury-Lane. When we found we could not, we made the beſt of our Way to Mr. Knowles's Houſe, and there I ſtayed.

Mr. Davy. How long did you ſtay there?

R. Scar. I might ſtay there till almoſt nine o'Clock; and then I went Home with Mr. Carlton's Daughter, who is ſince my Wife.

Mr. Davy. How long have you been married to her?

R. Scar. Better than eleven Months.

Mr. Davy. I hope you had your Health at that Time?

R. Scar. I had, to the beſt of my Knowledge.

Mr. Davy. Was you not under the Care of any Surgeon, or Quack?

R. Scar. No, I was not.

Mr. Davy. Was you perfectly well at that Time?

R. Scar. I cannot give an Anſwer for a Cold, or the like.

Mr. Davy. At what Time of the Day did you go out on the 1ſt of January after Dinner?

R. Scar. I went out about Three o'Clock.

Mr. Davy. At what Time was you at Mrs. Carlton's at Night?

R. Scar. I was there before Ten o'Clock.

Mr. Davy. How did you diſpoſe of yourſelf on the 2d of January?

R. Scar. I don't know whether I was at Work, or not.

Mr. Davy. I thought you ſaid you did not go to Work till the 5th.

R. Scar. I carried Work Home on the 5th; on the 2d in the Evening I was at a Club in the Old-Bailey, and I can bring the Club-Book to ſatisfy you of that.

Mr. Davy. How came you to be ſo extremely particular at this Diſtance of Time, where you was on the 1ſt and 2d of January?

R. Scar. By looking over Mrs. Waller's Book.

Mr. Davy. What led you to be ſo particular in all theſe Circumſtances?

R. Scar. I don't know any thing in particular.

Mr. Davy. Did you expect to have been aſked any thing about it in this Cauſe?

R. Scar. I have heard that it ſhould be alledged againſt me, that I took the Girl away.

Mr. Davy. When was it at firſt ſo ſuggeſted?

R. Scar. I cannot remember that; it is ſince the Time of finding the Bills againſt the Abbotſbury People; but I cannot ſay the Time I did firſt hear it.

Mr. Davy. How long have you been acquainted with Mother Wells?

R. Scar. It is four or five Years ago.

Mr. Davy. Have you been in her Houſe, ſince you left Mr. Snee's Service?

R. Scar. No, not in her Houſe, nor near her Houſe ſince; that is three Years ago.

Mr. Davy. Had you never a Quarrel with Mother Wells?

R. Scar. No.

Mr. Davy. Upon your Oath, did you never threaten that you would be revenged on her?

R. Scar. No; upon my Oath, I never expreſſed any ſuch Words.

Mr. Davy. Where does Mr. Snee live?

R. Scar. He has a Country-Houſe at Edmonton.

Mr. Davy. How often have you been in the Houſe of Mother Wells?

R. Scar. I have once or twice.

Mr. Davy. Will you venture to ſwear, that you have not been there oftener than twice?

R. Scar. I may have been there two or three Times.

Mr. Davy. Have you been there no more than three Times, upon your Oath?

R. Scar. I cannot ſay, whether I have or have not: I have called, may-be, three or four Times, I don't know.

Mr. Davy. Upon your Oath, have you not been there five Times?

R. Scar. I don't know; I cannot ſay how many Times.

Mr. Davy. Will you take upon you to ſay, you have not been there ſix Times?——R. Scar. No.

Mr. Davy. Upon your Oath, will you take upon you to ſay, you never was there ten Times in your Life?——R. Scar. No, I never was.

Mr. Davy. Will you ſwear you have not been there eight Times?

R. Scar. I believe I have not.

Mr. Davy. Are you poſitive of that?

R. Scar. I believe, I could ſwear I never was there eight Times in my Life.

Mr. Davy. Was you at Edmonton before the 1ſt of January was Twelve-month?---R. Scar. Yes; I was, in the Chriſtmas Week.

Mr. Davy. What was your Buſineſs there then?

R. Scar. I went to ſee ſome Acquaintance and Friends for my Pleaſure, and, I believe, I lay at Mr. Hubbard's, a Shoe-maker, two Nights.

Mr. Davy. Had you any Women there?——R. Scar. No.

Mr. Davy. How did you divert yourſelf, while you was there?

R. Scar. I did not divert myſelf there.

Mr. Davy. When did you dance there laſt?

R. Scar. I don't know how long it is ago: I was dancing at the farther Bell at Edmonton, laſt Edmonton Statute.

Mr. Davy. Who was your Partner?

R. Scar. She that now is my Wife.

Mr. Davy. When you came into Mrs. Canning's Houſe, what made you be ſo particular in aſking Queſtions?

R. Scar. There were others aſked a great many Queſtions beſides me.

Mr. Davy. Where had you uſed to ride your Maſter's Horſe to Water, when you lived at Edmonton?

R. Scar. Sometimes to one Place, and ſometimes to another.

Mr. Davy. Did you never water your Horſe near Mrs. Wells's?

R. Scar. I have at the Brook on this Side her Houſe.

Mr. Davy. Did you ever put your Horſe up there?

R. Scar. I once did; I believe he was hung at the Door; I don't remember any of my Maſter's Horſes being put in the Stable.

Mr. Moreton. Did you ever ride your Horſe in at the Window, where the Girl jumped out at?——R. Scar. No, Sir.

Mr. Moreton. Are you ſure, that between the Hours of Nine and Ten on the 1ſt of January, you did not go to ſee Bedlam?

R. Scar. No, Sir; I am poſitive of that.

Mr. Moreton. Tell me the Truth, or perhaps half Bedlam will be called to contradict you.——R. Scar. No, I did not, Sir.

Mr. Moreton. Was you in Moorfields that Night?

R. Scar. No, I was not.

Mr. Moreton. Did you take away Betty Canning that Night up to Houndſditch?——R. Scar. No, Sir.

Mr. Moreton. Did you ſee that Door to the Room open, where Betty Canning was confined, when you was there with her?

R. Scar. No, I did not, Sir.

Mr. Moreton. If the Door had been open, and ſhe had looked in, and ſhe had not fixed upon the Room, ſhould you have believed her Story?

R. Scar. I verily believe I ſhould not.

Mr. Moreton. Was your Situation ſuch, that it was expected of you to be more particular than other People?

R. Scar. No; there were a great Number of People there. I did not regard any more than any body elſe.

Mr. Moreton. Had you any thing to do, to direct Mr. Alderman Chitty againſt whom he ſhould make out a Warrant?—R. Scar. No, Sir.

Recorder. Was there any Lock upon that Door leading to the Hay-loft?

R. Scar. I believe there was none at all; but I did not take Notice of that.

Mary Myers ſworn.

M. Myers. I live in the Neighbourhood, and know the Mother and Daughter.

Mr. Nares. How long have you known the Daughter?

M. Myers. About eleven Years. She is a very ſober, honeſt Girl, as any in England; ſhe always behaved very handſome to every body.

Mr.

Mr. Nares. Do you remember her being miſſing on the 1ſt of January?

M. Myers. I do.

Mr. Nares. When was the firſt Time you ſaw her after?

M. Myers. On the 29th at Night, at her Mother's Houſe. There were her Mother, Mrs. Woodward, and Mary Lyon there. Elizabeth Canning was ſitting by the Fire-ſide in a very black, dirty, bad Condition; her Face, Arms, and Hands were black; I took it to be a Cold, or Numbneſs occaſioned by Cold; her Nails were as black as my Bonnet, and her Fingers ſtood crooked.

Mr. Nares. How was ſhe dreſſed?

M. Myers. She had a black quilted Petticoat on, all torn about the Knees; ſhe had a Bed-gown on, and a Rag about her Head, I believe it was a Muſlin Half-handkerchief; ſhe was very low in her Spirits. I kneeled down on my Knees, to aſk her what was the Cauſe of her being in that Condition? She told me, ſhe went on the 1ſt of January to ſee an Aunt and Uncle, and ſtayed with them till Night, and they ſaw her into Houndſditch; and how ſhe was robbed and ſtripped in Moorfields by two Men, and they gave her a Blow on her Head, and deprived her of her Senſes, and was carried into a Houſe by theſe two Men; and when ſhe came in, there were an elderly Woman and two young ones; the old Woman took hold of her Arm, and aſked her if ſhe would go their Way; and ſhe ſaid, No; that then ſhe went and took a Knife out of a Drawer, and cut the Lacing of her Stays, and took them off, and gave her a great Slap on the Face, and told her ſhe ſhould ſuffer in the Fleſh; and opened a Door, and ſhoved her up a Pair of Stairs into a Room; and after ſhe was in, ſhe d———d her, and ſaid, if ſhe moved or ſtirred, or made any Reſiſtance, ſhe would come and cut her Throat.

Mr. Nares. What Time did ſhe ſay ſhe was carried in there?

M. Myers. About Four in the Morning, as ſhe reckoned.

Mr. Nares. Were there any other People in the Room, beſides what you have mentioned?—M. Myers. There were ſeveral others.

Mr. Nares. Did you ſee Scarrat there?

M. Myers. I did not know he was there, till I got off my Knees from talking to her.

Mr. Nares. What did ſhe tell you was in the Room?

M. Myers. She told me there was Hay there, and a Pitcher with Water in it, ſhe believed about a Gallon of it; and that there was a Fire-place in it, and about the Value of a Quartern Loaf of Bread in Pieces.

Mr. Nares. Did ſhe ſay there was a Grate in the Room?

M. Myers. She did; and that ſhe took the Bed-gown and Rag out of the Grate in the Room.

Mr. Nares. Did ſhe give any Deſcription of the Size of the Room, whether long, round, or ſquare?

M. Myers. No; I cannot ſay ſhe did. She ſaid ſhe got out at the Window at the End, by pulling down two Boards, and put her Head and Shoulders out, and took out ſome Part of the Window, and pulled out her Legs, and ſo dropped down; and that ſhe tore her Ear in coming out. I looked at her Ear, and it appeared to be a great Scratch; there was a great deal of Blood appeared to be freſh, and dropped of Blood (while I was there) upon her Shoulder. She was aſked, how far the Houſe was off? She ſaid, about ten Miles out of Town. She ſaid, while ſhe was in the Room, there was a Stair-caſe lay cloſe to the Room, and ſhe heard People run up and down in the Nights, and ſhe heard the Name of Mother Wills, or Mother Wells, mentioned. I was cloſe by her, and heard every Word ſhe ſaid; ſhe ſpoke very low.

Mr. Nares. Had Scarrat ſpoke to her before ſhe ſaid Mother Wills, or Wells?—M. Myers. I don't know that he had.

Mr. Nares. If he had ſpoke to her, ſhould you have known it?

M. Myers. I ſhould: I did not hear him ſpeak to her at all then.

Mr. Nares. Tell the Court what ſhe ſaid farther.

M. Myers. She ſaid, ſhe eſcaped about Four in the Afternoon, and aſked her Way to London. She was ſo low, that I could ſcarce hear what ſhe ſaid.

Mr. Nares. Did you go before Mr. Alderman Chitty?

M. Myers. No, I did not.

Mr. Nares. Did you go down to Enfield-Waſh afterwards?

M. Myers. I did on the Thurſday after her Return. There were in the Chaiſe with me, the Mother and Daughter, and Mrs. Garrat; and ſeveral other People went down, ſome on Horſeback. Mr Adamſon was one on Horſeback. We met him, as we were going. He had been there. He ſpoke to the Coachman, and aſked him what made him ſo long in coming; and ſaid they were out of Patience in waiting.

Mr. Nares. Did he ſay any thing to the Girl?

M. Myers. He ſaid to her, Bet, what Sort of a Room was you in? She ſaid, Sir, it is an odd Sort of a Room, there is Hay, and a Fire-place in it. He ſaid again, What do you ſay? Is there Hay in it, Bet? That is all he ſaid, and went away directly.

Mr. Nares. When he ſpoke to the Girl in this Manner, did he tell her there was Hay?

M. Myers. He did not. We then proceeded on, and came to the Houſe at Enfield-Waſh; and Bet was carried into the Kitchen, and from thence into the Parlour. The Gentlemen deſired her there to be very cautious and careful what ſhe ſaid, and take Time; and after that up Stairs. After ſhe had looked about, ſhe pointed to Mary Squires, and ſaid, That is the old Woman that cut my Stays off.

Mr. Nares. Was ſhe ſitting or ſtanding then?

M. Myers. I cannot ſay; there were a great Crowd of People; I could not get to the Sight of her.

Mr. Nares. Did the Deſcription ſhe had given of the old Woman ſhe told you of on the 29th at Night, tally with the old Woman, when you ſaw her?

M. Myers. Indeed, it did. She then ſaid, Theſe two young Women were in the Room (that was Virtue Hall, and the Gypſey's Daughter). The old Gypſey-Woman ſaid, ſhe never ſaw her in her Life before, and hoped ſhe was not come to take her Life away, or ſomething to that Purpoſe.

Mr. Nares. Was the Day mentioned, when Elizabeth Canning ſaid ſhe was robbed?---M. Myers. I don't know that.

Mr. Nares. Did you hear the old Woman ſay ſhe had been any Diſtance from Enfield-Waſh?

M. Myers. No, I did not; but I heard the old Woman ſay ſhe had lain there but three Nights, and George ſaid ſo too. After that they carried Elizabeth Canning up one Pair of Stairs, and into two Rooms; one of them was lock'd, and the Key ſent for; ſhe ſaid, none of them were the Room in which ſhe was confined: Then ſhe was carried through the Kitchen and up into another Room; then ſhe ſaid, Gentlemen, this is the Room that I was in; but here is more Hay in it, than there was when I was here.

Mr. Nares. Was you in the Room then?

M. Myers. I was. She took her Foot, and put the Hay away, and ſhewed the Gentlemen two Holes; and ſaid, they were in the Floor, when ſhe was in it before.

Mr. Nares. Had you heard her mention them two Holes before?

M. Myers. No, I never did. Mr. Adamſon ſet his Back againſt a Window, and aſked her what ſhe had ever obſerved out of that Window? She ſaid, Hills at a Diſtance.

Mr. Nares. Which Window was this?

M. Myers. That next to the Fire-place. She had told us there was a Pewter Baſon there, and a Saddle; but when we came there, there were two Saddles.

Mr. Nares. Did you look out at the Window?

M. Myers. I cannot ſay I did.

Mr. Nares. When he put his Back to the Window, could ſhe have ſeen what was to be ſeen there?

M. Myers. No, ſhe was not ſo high up to it.

Mr. Nares. Did you find the Pewter Baſon there?

M. Myers. We did.

Mr. Nares. Did ſhe mention what Colour the Pitcher was of, at her firſt mentioning it?

M. Myers. I cannot ſay ſhe did; but ſaid it would hold a Gallon of Water.

Mr. Nares. Where did you firſt ſee the Pitcher?

M. Myers. In the Kitchen.

Mr. Nares. Did you go to Juſtice Taſhmaker's?

M. Myers. No, I did not. The other Woman and I were a-cold, ſo we went over to a Public-Houſe.

Croſs-Examined.

Mr. Willes. Was her Linen dirty when you was with her on the 29th of January?

M. Myers. I looked all about the Neck and Shoulders; it was not very dirty, but it was dirty, it was ſoiled from her Body.

Mr. Wil. Was you by when ſhe was undreſſed?

M. Myers. No, I was not.

Mr. Wil. Do you know what Number of Petticoats ſhe had on?

M. Myers. No, I do not.

Mr. Wil. Pray, did any of you know Mr. Scarrat?

M. Myers. I knew him.

Mr. Wil. Do you believe old Mrs. Canning had any Knowledge of him?

M. Myers. I believe ſhe might.

Mr. Wil. Did you hear her call him by his Name?

M. Myers. No, I did not.

Mr. Wil. Why do you think ſhe might know him?---M. Myers. Becauſe he lived in the Neighbourhood, next Door to her but one.

Mr. Nares. Who was there when you was there?--- M. Myers. There was Mrs. Woodward, Mrs. Lyon, and Elizabeth Canning's Mother.

Mr. Nares. Did you hear Scarrat examine Elizabeth Canning where ſhe had been?---M. Myers. No, I did not.

Mr. Nares. Did you obſerve the Blood to drop very faſt from her Ear?

M. Myers. No; it had dropped upon her Shoulder, and another Drop was then at her Ear.

Mr. Nares. Was the Handkerchief then on her Head?

M. Myers. It was.

Mr. Nares. Was there much Blood on the Handkerchief?

M. Myers. There was a pretty deal upon it.

Mr. Nares. Was you at Enfield-Waſh, when Canning was carried into the Kitchen?---M. Myers. I was.

Mr. Nares. Do you remember the Door to be open that leads up into the Hay-loft, when ſhe was there?

M. Myers. I don't remember it was.

Mr. Nares. Upon her being carried into the Kitchen, did ſhe ſay, ſhe had been there before?

M. Myers. No, I did not hear any thing of that.

Mr. Nares. When Mr. Adamſon aſked, what Proſpect there was out of the Window, did not ſhe ſay, there were Trees near it?

M. Myers. Not as I heard.

Mr. Nares. I think you ſay, ſhe deſcribed the elderly Woman?

M. Myers. I heard her deſcribe the two Girls that were by; one was a black Girl, the other a fair one, and the old Woman, a tall, black, ſwarthy Woman.

Mary Woodward ſworn.

M. Woodward. Elizabeth Canning's Mother ſent for me the Night ſhe came Home. I went there about half an Hour after Ten, and ſtayed till about One. There came Mr. Scarrat, Mr. Wintlebury, and others, after I was there. Mrs. Canning aſked me, who ſhe ſhould ſend for? I ſaid, Send for her beſt Friends. I mentioned Mr. Lyon and his Wife, and others. She ſent the Apprentice; he returned, and ſaid, he was gone to-Bed. There came Mrs. Myers and Polly Lyon; the latter lives Servant with Mr. Roberts.

Mr. Williams. Had you any Converſation with Elizabeth Canning?

M. Woodward. I had: The firſt Word ſhe ſaid to me was, Mrs. Woodward, I am almoſt ſtarved to Death. (She was ſitting in the Chimney-corner, and lifted up her Head, and put her Hands together.) I have had nothing, ſaid ſhe, but Bread and Water ſince New-year's Day at Night, and I have had no Bread ever ſince Friday. I aſked her, where ſhe had been? She ſaid, ſhe had been confined in a Room in a Houſe on the Hertfordſhire Road.

Mr. Williams. Was this before any body came in?

M. Woodward. Upon my Oath, this ſhe ſaid before any body came in. I knowing nothing of the Hertford Road, aſked her no more of it.

Mr. Williams. Do you remember her mentioning any body's Name?

M. Woodward. I did not obſerve, through the whole Time I was there, that ſhe mentioned any body's Name. I mulled her a little Wine, but was never out of the Room. I aſked her, what was become of her Cloaths?

Mr. Wil. Go on; you need not give a particular Account of the firſt Robbery in Moorfields.

M. Wood. She ſaid, about half an Hour after ſhe came to her Senſes, ſhe came to a Houſe where ſhe was confined; there were three Women took hold of her; the old Woman aſked her, if ſhe would go their Way? She anſwered, No. Upon that ſhe went to a Dreſſer or Dreſſer-drawer, and took a Knife, and ripped the Lacing of her Stays, and after that took up her Petticoats, and looked at them, and took her a Slap on the Face, and ſaid, D—n you, you Bitch, I'll give you that; and turned her up a Pair of Stairs into this Place, where ſhe was confined, with threatening Oaths to cut her Throat if ſhe heard her cry out. I aſked her, what Sort of an old Woman this was? She ſaid, ſhe was a tall, black, ſwarthy Woman; and the young Women did nothing but laugh at her. I was there with her beſt Part of Half an Hour before the others came in.

Mr. Wil. Was there any thing from your Examination, that could poſſibly lead her to give her Anſwer?

M. Wood. No; nor her Mother never ſpoke to her, during the whole Time I was talking to her.

Mr. Wil. Did ſhe tell you this of her own Accord?

M. Wood. She began and went on, after I aſked her where ſhe had been confined.

Mr. Wil. Did ſhe ſay, during her whole Confinement, that ſhe ſaw any body?

M. Wood. Not as I remember. She was in a moſt deplorable Condition; ſhe had an old ragged Bed-gown on, and a Bit of an Handkerchief.

Mr. Wil. Look at this Bed-gown: Is this the ſame?

M. Wood. I do really believe this to be it; but I will not take upon me to ſwear it.

Mr. Wil. Had you ever ſeen it before that Night?

M. Wood. No, never.

Mr. Wil. Upon your Oath, do you know whether that is her Mother's?

M. Wood. Her Mother never had ſuch a Thing on her Back in her Life.

Mr. Wil. Look upon this Half-Handkerchief.

M. Wood. This I know is the ſame ſhe came Home in.

Mr. Wil. You ſay you mulled her ſome Wine; did ſhe drink much?

M. Wood. I gave her about half a Tea-cup full, and about the Value of a Nutmeg in Quantity of Bread ſoaked in Wine; ſhe rolled it about in her Mouth, and ſaid, Mrs Woodward, I cannot ſwallow it, and ſpit it out. She ſpoke very faint and low.

Mr. Wil. Do you believe ſhe was really in that bad State of Health, in which ſhe appeared to be?

M. Wood. I believe ſhe was as bad as ſhe appeared to be; I am ſenſible of that. She ſupped about a Spoonful of the Wine; whether ſhe ſwallowed it all or not, I don't know. She gave an Account of having no Stools in that Time, and the Apothecary did all he could to aſſiſt her in that Caſe.

Mr. Wil. When was ſhe able to go abroad?

M. Wood. On the Tueſday Se'nnight after ſhe came Home (which was on a Monday) ſhe came to my Houſe, and was there almoſt three Weeks; ſhe was ill all the Time, and the Doctor and Apothecary came to her; during Part of the Time ſhe was at my Houſe, ſhe was dangerouſly ill. She was brought in a Man's Arms, and put in a Chair to go to Mr. Fielding's, the Day after ſhe came to my Houſe.

Croſs-Examined.

Mr. Gaſcoyne. Did you obſerve her Ear at all?

M. Wood. I did not that Night ſhe came Home, but the Apothecary's Man did; the Handkerchief was all bloody; it bled ſo, that it ſhocked me, I could not look at it; it was very cold Weather, and the Blood had congealed, and was thick upon her Ear; and ſitting by the Fire, I fancy, that made her bleed afreſh.

Mr. Gaſ. Do you remember Mrs. Mayle inquiring for the Shift that ſhe came Home in?

M. Wood. Yes, ſhe ſaw it; her Mother ſhewed it her.

Mr. Gaſ. Do you know it was the Shift ſhe came Home in?

M. Wood. I do.

Mr. Gaſ. Do you remember Mrs. Mayle's Obſervation?

M. Wood. I do; that was, that ſhe would take her Oath that no Man ever lay with her, for if there had, there would have been Nature on one Side or other.

Mr. Gaſ. Do you remember whether ſhe obſerved whether it was clean or dirty?

M. Wood. Upon my Oath, ſhe did not obſerve any thing elſe in my Hearing.

Mr. Gaſ. Was the Shift dirty?

M. Wood. It was; but not ſo dirty, as if ſhe had been at hard Work in it.

Mr. Gaſ. What did you think of it?—M. Wood. It was dirty.

Mr. Gaſ. Was it as dirty as if it had been worn by a Perſon that was dragged from London to Enfield-Waſh, and lay upon Hay ſo long afterwards?

M. Wood. Yes, it was.

Mr. Gaſ. Did you ever expreſs yourſelf to the contrary to any body?

M. Wood. No, I never did.

Mr. Gaſ. Whether you ever expreſſed you were ſurprized that the Shift was no more dirty, upon being worn ſo long?

M. Wood. No, I never ſaid ſuch a Thing.

Mr. Gaſ. Did you obſerve any Splaſhes of Dirt on it?

M. Wood. I did not; if there had been any, I muſt have ſeen them.

Mr. Gaſ. Were there no Spots on it at all?

M. Wood. There were no Spots of any kind in the World.

Mr. Gaſ. Take care, you are upon your Oath.

M. Wood. I am ſo.

Mr. Gaſ. Did you think the Shift was not ſo dirty as it might have been, if ſhe had worked in it all the Time?

M. Wood. I think it might have been as dirty in a Week, if ſhe had worked in it all the Time?

Recorder. Did you ſee Mrs. Mayle there?——M. Wood. I did.

Recorder. Did not ſhe ſay, it could not have been worn above a Week?

M. Wood. No, I never heard her.

Recorder. Whether Mrs. Mayle and Mrs. Canning did not quarrel?

M. Wood. No, not in my Hearing.

Recorder. Was ſhe there above once?---M. Wood. I never knew ſhe was.

John Wintlebury ſworn.

I have known Elizabeth Canning the Mother about fourteen or fifteen Years; ſhe lives in Aldermanbury-Poſtern, and bears as good a Character as any in the Pariſh. I have known the Daughter, I believe, twelve Years; ſhe is a very ſober Girl as any I know; and I believe the whole Neighbourhood will ſay ſo. She lived with me about eighteen Months, about three or four Months before this happened. She always behaved herſelf in a very ſober Manner. I keep a Public-Houſe. I have a back Room, where ſhe would commonly be. She very ſeldom came forward.

Mr. Moreton. Did ſhe ſhew a Diſpoſition to be forward, or gay?

J. Wintlebury. Quite different. I don't believe ſhe went out once in a Quarter of a Year. When ſhe went away from me, many of the Neighbours would have had her.

Mr. Mor. Do you remember her being miſſing on the 1ſt of January?

J. Wint. I do; and her coming Home on the 29th. I ſaw her that Night at her Mother's Houſe, ſitting by the Fire.

Mr. Mor. How came you to go there?

J. Wint. A Neighbour came and told me, ſhe was come Home.

Mr. Mor. Do you know who that Neighbour was?

J. Wint. I do not.

Mr. Mor. Was it Mr. Scarrat?

J. Wint. No, it was not. I went; and when I came into the Room, I met with ten or a dozen People: There was the Girl, in a very bad Condition; with a Handkerchief wrapped about her Head, and, I think, it was bloody on one Side. She was very weak. I took hold of her Hand, and ſaid, Bet. She ſaid, O Lord, Sir, you don't know what I have gone through! or ſomething to that Effect. Said I, You are at Home now; and, it is to be hoped, you have Friends to aſſiſt you if you have been uſed ill. I aſked her where ſhe had been? She ſaid, On the Hertfordſhire Road. I ſaid, How do you know that? She ſaid, ſhe remembered ſeeing (through ſome Cracks, when ſhe was in the Room) the Coachman that uſed to carry Things for me.

Mr. Mor. What Coachman had you uſed to ſend Things by?

J. Wint. By the Royſton or Hertford Coach. I aſked her, how far ſhe was from London? She ſaid, about ten or eleven Miles. Then I ſaid, Pray can you tell whoſe Houſe you were at? She ſaid, I cannot; but I heard the Name Wills, or Wells, by People below Stairs.

Mr. Mor. Do you know Robert Scarrat?——J. Wint. I do.

Mr. Mor. Was he in the Room, when ſhe mentioned the Name Wills or Wells?

J. Wint. He might be; I did not ſee him then.

Mr. Mor. Do you recollect that Scarrat mentioned Wills or Wells to her?

J. Wint. To the beſt of my Knowledge, he did not.

Mr. Mor. Did you ſee Mary Myers there?

J. Wint. I can't remember.

Mr. Mor. Did you ſee a Woman kneeling by the Side of her?

J. Wint. I don't know, indeed. I ſtayed there but about three or four Minutes, and there were a great many People in the Room.

Mr. Mor. Was you before Mr. Alderman Chitty?

J. Wint. I was; but that is quite out of my Memory. I don't know the Particulars that paſſed.

Mr. Mor. Was you at Enfield-Waſh?

J. Wint. I was, with Mr. Colley, Mr. Sparham, Mr. Adamſon, Mr. Lyon, and Mr. Hague. I got down before the Chaiſe came down, and went to the Sun. The Headborough went with a Warrant to Wells's before me ſome Time: After that I went into the Houſe, the Parlour, and Kitchen, and up Stairs, and into another Room out of the Kitchen; it is a long Room, it goes up about four or five Steps: I obſerved there was a great deal of Hay there; it ſeemed as if it had been toſſed up afreſh, it laid very light.

Mr. Mor. Did Mr. Naſh go in with you?

J. Wint. I was in before him an Hour. He and Mr. Lyon, Mr. Hague, and Mr. Aldridge, came all down together: We were there an Hour before them.

Mr. Mor. Who went down with you?

J. Wint. Mr. Adamſon and Mr. Scarrat did. We put up at the Sun; and another or two went down on Foot.

Mr. Mor. Who was in the Room with you?

J. Wint. Mr. Adamſon was, and them.

Mr. Mor. What did you obſerve in the Room?

J. Wint. There was an old Cheſt of Drawers, a Saddle, and a Place where Somebody had laid on, and a Rug upon them: I did not diſturb it much: I can't tell what was under the Rug; it ſeemed to be a Parcel of old Sacks. I obſerved a broken Pitcher.

Mr. Mor. Did ſhe tell you, the Night of her coming Home, of a Pitcher?

J. Wint. She did, of a broken one. She deſcribed it by being a broken one, and which would hold about a Gallon, or ſomething like that: And when I ſaw it in this Room, I thought it was the ſame ſhe deſcribed.

Mr. Mor. Look at this Pitcher; do you think this is it?

J. Wint. I believe it may be it.

Mr. Mor. Whether or no you know of any of your Friends carrying that Pitcher up into the Workſhop?

J. Wint. I believe I was the firſt Perſon of us that went into the Room.

Mr. Mor. Are you ſure there was a broken Pitcher in the Room, when you went in firſt?

J. Wintele. I am ſure there was.

Mr. Moreton.

Mr. Moreton. How long did you ſtay in the Room then?

J. Wintlebury. I ſtayed but a little Time, and then came down again.

Mr. Mor. Did you ſee any Thing of a Man that obſtructed any body from going into this Hay-loft?

J. Wint. No. This was about Half an Hour before Elizabeth Canning was come. Mr. Naſh, Mr. Aldridge, Mr. Hague, and Mr. Lyon, were not come then. When they came, they deſired me to go and deſire them to make haſte; then I took my Horſe, and went and met the Coach. After this, Canning came down, and was brought into the Kitchen, and ſet upon the Dreſſer, and after that into the Parlour; there ſhe was deſired to fix upon the Perſon that cut her Stays off: She fixed upon Mary Squires.

Mr. Mor. Was you near Elizabeth Canning then?

J. Wint. I was; and ſo were a great many more.

Mr. Mor. Did ſhe ſee Squires's Face before ſhe fixed upon her?

J. Wint. She ſaw a little of her Face, I ſuppoſe. There were about eight or nine People round the Fire. The old Gypſey had a little Pipe in her Hand, ſitting crouching, with her Head and her Knees together; and as Canning looked round, ſhe ſaid, That is the Woman that cut my Stays off.

Mr. Mor. Had Elizabeth Canning given you any Deſcription of the Perſon, that cut off her Stays, before?

J. Wint. I can't ſay ſhe had.

Mr. Mor. What was done after Canning had charged her?

J. Wint. Squires got up, and ſaid, What, I, Madam! did I cut your Stays off? Canning ſaid, Yes; you cut my Stays off in ſuch a Place in the Kitchen. Then ſhe went and ſat down again.

Mr. Mor. Did Mary Squires ſay where ſhe was at the Time thoſe Stays were cut off?

J. Wint. No; ſhe did not mention any Thing, as I heard.

Mr. Mor. Did ſhe mention how long ſhe had been at Wells's Houſe?

J. Wint. No, not at that Time.

Mr. Mor. What do you mean by ſaying, at that Time? Did ſhe at any other Time?

J. Wint. She did not at any other Time, to my Knowledge.

Mr. Mor. Did ſhe deſire Canning not to ſwear her Life away?

J. Wint. Indeed, I don't know that ſhe did.

Mr. Mor. What was done after this?

J. Wint. Then Canning was carried up Stairs, and did not fix upon any of the Rooms: I think there are three of them: They were going to carry her farther, and ſhe ſaid, I was not carried ſo high; I did not go up above four, five, or ſix Steps at the moſt.

Mr. Mor. Who did ſhe ſay ſo to?

J. Wint. She ſaid ſo to me. Upon this ſhe was brought into the Kitchen again, and the Hay-loft Door was open, and ſhe went up there and looked about her, and ſaid, This is the Room in which I was confined.

Mr. Mor. Where was ſhe, when ſhe ſaid this?

J. Wint. This ſhe ſaid as ſhe was going up Stairs. I believe I then had hold of her Hand. When ſhe was in the Room, Mr. Adamſon put his Back againſt a Window, and aſked her, if ſhe could mention any Thing that ſhe could ſee out at that Window.

Mr. Mor. Could ſhe at that Time ſee any Thing out at it?

J. Wint. Then, I know, ſhe could not.

Mr. Mor. But could ſhe before he had put his Back to it?

J. Wint. He was up Stairs before her.

Mr. Mor. Was Mr. Naſh in the Room then?

J. Wint. Very likely he was; but I don't know that.

Mr. Mor. What was her Anſwer to Mr. Adamſon?

J. Wint. She ſaid there were ſome Hills a pretty Way off; and one, two, or three Houſes on the left-hand Side.

Mr. Mor. Did ſhe give a true Deſcription of the Proſpect?

J. Wint. She did.

Mr. Mor. Which Window was this?

J. Wint. This was the Window neareſt the Fire-place, in the Eaſt. After this Mr. Adamſon opened the Window: The Girl ſaid, That Window was nailed up when I was here. I looked at the North Window, where ſhe got out at. That was a little Caſement, about 9 by 18, or 10 by 20: There were Boards nailed over this North Window: It ſeemed to be freſh done, and in a very cobbling Way: The Nails were not drove home, but bent double; it did not ſeem to be done by a Man; and, I think, Mr. Adamſon made the ſame Obſervation.

Mr. Mor. Did you make that Obſervation to any Body then?

J. Wint. No, I did not. We all went away to Juſtice Taſhmaker.

Mr. Mor. Did Elizabeth Canning ſee George Squires, when ſhe was firſt brought in?---J. Wint. No.

Mr. Mor. When did ſhe firſt ſee him?

J. Wint. I believe ſhe firſt ſaw him when ſhe went into the Parlour, when we went in firſt; then George was in a very great Hurry, and ſeemed much perplexed, and ran up Stairs, and was going to go away; he was bundling up ſome Stockings: Some People, two or three, went in, and ſaid, Where are you going? You muſt not go away. And they would not let him go; and brought him into the Parlour again. Then he had a large Great-Coat on.

Mr. Mor. Who were there, two or three People?

J. Wint. There was one Ball; he is ſince dead. George Squires grew obſtreperous, and wanted to get out at the Window, and Ball called out for more Help; and then, I think, another Perſon went in.

Mr. Mor. Was you then in the Room?

J. Wint. I was not. When Canning was brought in, ſhe was aſked, if ſhe knew that Perſon? meaning George. She ſaid, ſhe could not ſay it was the Man, but it looked very much like him. He had before this pulled his Great-Coat off; then they made him put the Great-Coat on. She ſaid, He looks very much like the Man, but I will not poſitively ſwear to him.

Mr. Mor. Where was this?

J. Wint. In the Parlour. She ſaid alſo, there were two Girls in the Room when her Stays were cut off. We had her out into the Kitchen, and brought them in one by one, and ſhe pitched upon Virtue Hall and Lucy Squires. Then we went before Juſtice Taſhmaker; there Canning was examined.

Mr. Mor. Did ſhe give the ſame Account there, as ſhe gave to you?

J. Wint. I don't know that ſhe varied in her Account at all.

Mr. Mor. Was it the ſame ſhe gave before Mr. Alderman Chitty?

J. Wint. I will not be poſitive to what ſhe gave before the Alderman; I can remember but a little of that, about how ſhe was robbed.

Mr. Mor. Was you preſent at the Trial of Mary Squires?

J. Wint. I was.

Mr. Mor. Did you hear her give her Evidence in this Court?

J. Wint. I did.

Mr. Mor. Could you obſerve any material Difference between that and what ſhe did before Juſtice Taſhmaker?

J. Wint. No, I could not.

Mr. Mor. Had you any Reaſon at all to doubt her Story?

J. Wint. No, I had none at all.

Mr. Mor. Did Mr. Naſh ſay, as he was going Home, he was not ſatisfied with Canning's Account?

J. Wint. He did not appear to be diſſatisfied.

Mr. Mor. Nor Mr. Hague?---J. Wint. No.

Mr. Mor. Nor Mr. Aldridge neither?---J. Wint. No, Sir.

Mr. Mor. Did you dine at Newington?

J. Wint. No, I did not.

Croſs-Examined.

Mr. Willes. Don't you ſubſcribe towards the Support of Canning?

J. Wint. No, Sir.

Mr. Willes. Is yours a Tavern or Ale-houſe?

J. Wint. An Ale-houſe.

Mr. Willes. At the Time Canning lived with you, was ſhe at all fond of Men?

J. Wint. No, ſhe was not.

Mr. Willes. How old was ſhe, when ſhe came firſt?

J. Wint. She might be about ſeventeen Years of Age.

Mr. Willes. What was the Reaſon ſhe left your Service?

J. Wint. Becauſe ſhe got a better Place; that was the only Reaſon.

Mr Willes. Was ſhe employed in your Houſe in ſerving Cuſtomers?

J. Wint. Sometimes; very ſeldom. She very ſeldom came into our outward Room amongſt the Cuſtomers.

Mr. Willes. How came you, on the Trial of Mary Squires, to ſay ſhe had a Bed-gown and a Cap on?

J. Wint. I ſay now, I did not know whether it was a Cap.

Mr. Willes. Did you call it a Cap or Handkerchief upon that Trial?

J. Wint. I don't know which I then ſaid.

Mr. Willes. Do you know Robert Scarrat?

J. Wint. I do.

Mr. Willes. How long have you known him?

J. Wint. May-be a Year and a Half, or two Years. He is a Hartſhorn-raſper.

Mr. Willes. Has he uſed to uſe your Houſe?

J. Wint. Yes, he has as a Cuſtomer.

Mr. Willes. Did he uſe to uſe your Houſe when Canning was your Servant?

J. Wint. No; he may once or ſo, but I don't believe he did.

Mr. Willes. Did you know him before this Accident happened?

J. Wint. I hardly did.

Mr. Willes. How came you, on Squires's Trial, to give no Account of what paſſed at Enfield?

J. Wint. I believe I did not.

Mr. Willes. How came you to omit ſo many material Circumſtances?

J. Wint. I believe the Gentlemen did aſk me no more then.

Mr. Willes. Was White in, when you firſt came down?

J. Wint. No, he was not.

Mr. Willes. When ſhe was carried into the Kitchen, and ſet upon the Dreſſer, did ſhe ſay ſhe had been in that Room before?

J. Wint. No, I never heard her ſay ſo.

Mr. Willes. Did ſhe ſay there were Trees grew againſt that Window, hen Mr. Adamſon had his Back againſt it?

J. Wint. No, I don't remember it. I remember Mr. Adamſon turned about and opened the Window, and looked out: She ſaid then, that Caſement was nailed up when ſhe was there.

Mr. Willes. Did you make any Remarks, whether there had been Nails to faſten it?---J. Wint. No, I did not inſpect into it.

Mr. Willes. Can't you recollect what ſhe ſaid before Alderman Chitty?

J. Wint. I remember but little of what paſſed there.

Mr. Willes to T. Gurney. Turn to your Notes of what this Evidence ſaid on the Trial of Squires, concerning what paſſed before Mr. Alderman Chitty. Can you ſwear to them?

T. Gurney. To the Subſtance of the Evidence I can; though not always to the exact Words.

Mr. Willes. Do you ever put down any Thing you don't hear?

T. Gurney. No, never.

Mr. Willes. Give the Court an Account what you have there put down.

T. Gurney. On that Trial this Evidence was aſked, if he had heard the Evidence Canning had then given? To which he anſwered, He had; and that ſhe gave the ſame Account the Night ſhe came Home; but not quite ſo fully that Night, as ſhe did before the Sitting Alderman on the Wedneſday after.

Mr. Willes. What did he ſay paſſed the Night ſhe came Home?

T. Gurney. He ſaid, he ſaw her the Night ſhe came Home, at her Mother's Houſe; ſhe appeared in a very bad Condition, and had a dirty Bed-gown and Cap on. He aſked her how ſhe did? She anſwered, Very bad; and that ſhe had been ſomewhere on the Hertfordſhire Road, which ſhe knew by ſeeing the Hertfordſhire Coach go backwards and forwards. After which he was aſked, if he had heard Canning's Evidence then given, as mentioned before?

Mr. Willes to Wintlebury. How long was ſhe before Alderman Chitty?

J. Wintlebury. I don't know.

Mr. Willes. How did ſhe get there?

J. Wint. I believe, ſhe went in a Coach.

Mr. Willes. What Day did ſhe go to Enfield?

J. Wint. On the Thurſday after ſhe came Home.

Mr. Willes. How did ſhe go down?

J. Wint. I believe, in a Chaiſe and Pair. The Chaiſe would hold four People, and four People were in it.

Mr. Willes. How far is it there?---J. Wint. It is about eleven Miles.

Mr. Willes. Did you ſee her ſet out?---J. Wint. No, I did not.

Mr. Willes. What Time did ſhe get down there?

J. Wint. At about Ten or Eleven o'Clock in the Morning.

Mr. Willes. Had ſhe any Refreſhment there?

J. Wint. There was a little Wine brought her there. I believe ſhe did not drink a Spoonful of it.

Mr. Willes. Did ſhe go over to Cantril's?

J. Wint. I don't know whether ſhe did or not.

Mr. Willes. How far is Juſtice Taſhmaker's from Enfield-Waſh?

J. Wint. It may be three Miles.

Mr. Willes. How far is it out of the Way to London from Enfield-Waſh?

J. Wint. It may be an hundred and fifty Yards.

Mr. Willes. When did ſhe return to Town?

J. Wint. She returned the ſame Night.

Mr. Willes. Was Scarrat your Cuſtomer when Canning lived with you?

J. Wint. He was not, as I know of. I did not know him then.

Mr. Willes. Was there any Intrigue betwixt Scarrat and her?

J. Wint. No; ſhe would hardly go to the Door to ſpeak to any body. I believe her quite different from an intriguing Perſon.

Mr. Willes. How long have you known Scarrat?

J. Wint. I have known him about a Year and a Half.

Mr. Willes. Did you hear any Part of what paſſed before Mr. Alderman Chitty?

J. Wint. I heard a little, but did not take much Obſervation of it; and ſhe talked ſo low. I heard her ſay two Men met her and robbed her in Moorfields.

Mr. Willes. Did what you heard vary from what you heard on Squires's Trial?---J. Wint. No, it did not.

Recorder. You have heard the Note-taker ſay, you ſaid ſhe was more full before the Sitting Alderman than in the Account ſhe had given before; and here you ſay you took little Notice of it.

J. Wint. I may forget Things. If I ſaid ſo then, I might forget ſince.

Joſeph Adamſon ſworn.

J. Adamſon. I have known E. Canning eleven or twelve Years, ever ſince ſhe was big enough to play about her Mother's Door. I am one of the Perſons that went down to Enfield-Waſh. I had not ſeen her for three Months before that Day. Mr. Wintlebury and one Scarrat went down with me; the laſt was a Stranger to me: We were the only Men that had Horſes. We had been there an Hour and a Half. They told me, I muſt go back and prevent the Chaiſe from ſtopping. I ſaid, I took the Horſe without Leave, and I would not go back. I took the Horſe, and went back.

Mr. Moreton. Did you tell Canning there was Hay in the Room?

J. Adam. I did not, either directly or indirectly, from firſt to laſt; nor have I aſked her a Queſtion ſince, only when we were in the Room. After I had ſpoke to the Coachman to make what Haſte he could, they aſked me, if we had taken any People up? I ſaid, We had; and ſome of the People were uneaſy to be gone. Then I aſked, what Sort of a Place ſhe was confined in? She ſaid, an odd, or a wild Sort of a Place; ſome Hay, and ſomething elſe which I can't remember: I think it was a Chimney in the Corner.

Mr. Mor. Did you mention Hay to her?

J. Adam. I never did, to my Knowledge. I then rode on; and as her Maſter Mr. Lyon and others were going from the Ale-houſe to Mother Wells's, I hallooed to them, and told them what the Girl had told me, that is, that there was ſome Hay in the Room, and a Fire-place, or a Chimney, I can't tell which. When ſhe came down, I took her out of the Chaiſe, and ſet her on a Dreſſer; ſhe ſat there ſix, ſeven, or eight Minutes.

Mr. Mor. Did ſhe make any Obſervations there?

J. Adam. She did not. Then we took her into the Room where they all were (there was a Room full of People); ſhe turned herſelf round by the Door, till ſhe came to where Mary Squires ſat, and ſaid, That is the Woman that cut my Stays off.

Mr. Mor. Did any body give her any Intelligence which was Mrs. Wells?

J. Adam. I dare ſay Nobody did; becauſe her Maſter gave her a very ſtrict Charge to take Care who ſhe charged.

Mr. Mor. Do you remember Mrs. Wells's ſaying any thing?

J. Adam. I do not. After this, ſhe was carried up the great Stairs, and at the Bottom, ſhe ſaid, I believe this is the Stair-caſe. (This was juſt as we came out of the Room.) We went up Stairs into every Room (I believe there are four of them). She ſaid, None of them is the Room. Then ſhe was brought down again, and we took her through the Kitchen and up the Stairs into the Hay-loft. She pauſed a little before ſhe ſpoke; and the firſt Word that I remember ſhe ſaid, was, There is more Hay than there was (as I remember) in the Room. Then I cautioned her to be careful, and let go her Arm, and went up towards the Hay, and felt it; and it was quite light, as though it had not lain there a long Time. Some People ſaid, they thought there had been ſome put lately in. I ſaid, I thought there was not; for I went round the Houſe to make Obſervation, and did not think there had been any brought in; becauſe, if there had, there muſt have been ſome ſcattered. Then they had got the Jug and Baſon, and ſome other Things that ſhe knew; but I can't ſay how ſhe came to pitch upon them, becauſe I was making Obſervations on the Hay. I walked then directly between her and the Caſement, and turned round, and ſet my Back againſt the Caſement, and ſaid, If you have been confined in this Room ſo long, you will be able to give a very good Account of it, and I expect you will. She ſaid, That was nailed up when I was here. What, boarded up? ſaid I. No, ſaid ſhe, but I tried to open it, and could not. She deſcribed Fields, and a Hill at a Diſtance, and ſome Trees; but the moſt remarkable Thing was, ſome Houſes to be ſeen on the Left-hand Side the Lane.

Mr. Mor. Are you ſure ſhe ſaid ſo?

J. Adam. I am.

Mr. Mor. Are you ſure ſhe could not ſee them when ſhe ſpoke?

J. Adam. I ſtood ſo, that I am ſure ſhe could not, I ſtood ſo betwixt them and her. After the Gentlemen had all looked out to ſee how the Deſcription anſwered, I aſked her, where ſhe had looked out to ſee the Hertfordſhire Coach? She pointed to the Window which was boarded up; and ſaid, That is the Window; and that alſo is the Window that I made my Eſcape out at.

Mr. Mor. Did you look to ſee whether there was any Reaſon to think any body had got out?

J. Adam. I helped Colley, her Uncle, to pull the Boards down. I called all the Gentlemen to ſee that it was not in the ſame Condition with the reſt of the Things in the Room, with Cobwebs, as other Places had. The Wood was freſh ſplit with driving a great Nail through it, and appeared as freſh as it could be; that is, the Crack ſeemed quite freſh.

Mr. Mor. Was the Crack before you pulled them down, or done by pulling them down?

J. Adam. That was before we attempted to pull them down.

Q. from a Juryman. Was it boarded all over the Window?

J. Adam. It was boarded like a little Shutter. It was one Piece of Wainſcot that went clear acroſs, and covered it all pretty near to the Top. There was a Caſement on the right-hand Side, and the other Side had nothing in it.

Mr. Mor. Did you make any Obſervations on the Outſide of this Window, whether there was the leaſt Appearance of any Thing, as though any body had got out there?

J. Adam. Colley and I went out; there we ſaw the Surface of the Plaiſter was ſcratched off, and we ſhewed it to ſeveral People.

Mr. Mor. What were their Names?

J. Adam. I don't know them; but there were a great many People looked at it, and the freſh Pieces of the Mortar on the Ground, then below the Window. Juſt on the Edge, between the Plaiſtering and Brick-work, it was broke.

Mr. Mor. Do you remember ſeeing Mr. Hague and Mr. Aldridge there?

J. Adam. I do. Mr. Aldridge and I both made Obſervations on the Girl's pauſing a little.

Mr. Mor. Did Mr. Aldridge ſeem to ſhew any Diſſatisfaction upon that then?

J. Adam. No. I obſerved a large Pitcher in the Parlour, when we firſt went in. There were ſix or eight of us went in, two-and-two; and when there was no Reſiſtance, I and Mr. Colley went behind the Houſe.

Mr. Mor. Did you ſee a Pitcher in the Hay-loft or Workſhop?

J. Adam. I did.

Mr. Mor. Look at this Pitcher; do you know it?

J. Adam. I ſuppoſe that is it, it is like it; I ſaw it ſince at the Manſion-Houſe before my Lord-Mayor; it was broken as this is.

Mr. Mor. Did you carry the Pitcher there?---J. Adam. No, Sir.

Mr. Mor. Do you know any body that did?

J. Adam. No, I do not.

Mr. Mor. Did Canning make any Obſervation on the Pitcher, whether it was, or was not the Pitcher, that was in the Room when ſhe was there?

J. Adam. I did not hear that; I was making Obſervations on the Hay then.

Croſs-Examined.

Mr. Davy. Was the Door that leads up into the Workſhop open or ſhut, when ſhe went into the Kitchen the firſt Time?

J. Adam. I really cannot tell.

Mr. Davy. When ſhe was gone from the Kitchen to the Stair-caſe of the Houſe, what did ſhe ſay there?

J. Adam. She ſaid at the Bottom of it, ſhe believed that was it.

Mr. Davy. How many Stairs were there?

J. Adam. I cannot tell; there is a Hatch or Door on the Top-Stair.

Mr. Davy. Upon your Oath, could ſhe not ſee the whole Flight of Stairs up from the Bottom, where ſhe then ſtood?

J. Adam. Upon my Oath, I cannot tell whether ſhe could or not.

Mr. Davy. Was that Stair-caſe any thing like the few little Steps that lead up into the Hay-loft?

J. Adam. There is a very great deal of Difference.

Mr. Davy. Did you aſk her, how ſhe could make that Miſtake?

J. Adam. I did; and ſaid, You ſee you was once miſtaken in the Stair-caſe.

Mr. Davy. What was this in Anſwer to?

J. Adam. She had ſaid, That was the Corner where the Girl ſtood and laughed at me, when my Stays were cut off; which ſhe ſaid afterwards was Virtue Hall.

Mr. Davy. When you ſtand at the Bottom of the Stairs leading up into the Workſhop, don't you ſee there are but few Steps?

J. Adam. I cannot tell whether the Steps are without the Door, or after the Door is open?

Mr. Davy. How long was ſhe in the Kitchen the ſecond Time, before ſhe fixed upon the Room ſhe was confined in?

J. Adam. I believe ſhe was led up into the Room directly.

Mr. Davy. Was the Door open then, when ſhe came from the other Stairs?

J. Adam. I believe it was, and ſome People going up.

Mr. Davy. Did ſhe ſay, when ſhe was in the Kitchen, (pointing to the Door) That is the Door that leads to the Room I was confined in?

J. Adam. I do not remember that.

Mr. Davy. Who ſhook up the Hay?

J. Adam. I do not know.

Mr. Davy. Upon your Oath, did not you, when you was up there, put your Hand into the Hay?

J. Adam. Yes; I did, to ſhew it was light; I ſet my Foot upon it firſt.

Mr. Davy. Were Mr. Naſh, Mr. Aldridge, and Mr. Hague, in the Room then?

J. Adamſon.

J. Adamſon. I cannot tell whether they were or not; I believe they were not. They might be all there, or none of them, for aught I know.

Mr. Davy. How much Hay was there in the Room?

J. Adam. I think there might be about half a Load, or more; I cannot tell Hay by the Bulk of it.

Mr. Davy. How came Scarrat and you to toſs up, which ſhould go back to Canning?

J. Adam. It was an indifferent Perſon ſaid, To end Diſpute, you had better toſs up. We had ſome Words after that; and I went at laſt, but againſt my Will.

Mr. Davy. How came you to have Words, after it was decided by Lot?

J. Adam. After Scarrat had won, I ſaid, he was to go.

Mr. Davy. Had any body obſerved at that Time, that ſhe had not mentioned any Hay being in the Room?

J. Adam. I had not heard any body mention any thing about it; but when I went, ſhe told me there was ſome.

Mr. Davy. What did you mean, when you came back, in ſaying, We are all right, ſhaking your Hat?

J. Adam. Going through the Waſh, my Horſe got away from me. (I believe I had my Hat in my Hand.)

Mr. Davy. Was you rejoiced, when ſhe ſaid there was Hay?

J. Adam. No, Sir.

Mr. Davy. Was you ſurpriſed?——J. Adam. No, Sir.

Mr. Davy. Why did you tell them there was Hay in it?

J. Adam. Becauſe ſhe ſaid ſo.

Mr. Davy. Why ſhould you come back to tell them ſhe ſaid there was Hay in it, if ſhe had never obſerved there was Hay?——J. Adam. I don't remember any body obſerved ſhe had not mentioned Hay.

Mr. Davy. Had you heard ſhe had deſcribed the Particulars of the Room?

J. Adam. I had never heard ſhe had given a Deſcription of the Room.

Mr. Davy. Then why did you go to Enfield-Waſh?

J. Adam. I went with Mr. Wintlebury for Company; he deſired I would go with him. The Warrant was gone down before, and we went with an Intent to meet them.

Mr. Davy. Had you been before the Sitting Alderman?

J. Adam. No, I had not.

Mr. Davy. Did you go down to aſſiſt in taking the People up?

J. Adam. I did not know any body would be taken up.

Mr. Davy. Did you go down to ſee whether the Room anſwered the Deſcription?——J. Adam. I had not heard her deſcribe any.

Mr. Davy. Do you remember your ſaying theſe Words, What, Hay, Bet?

J. Adam. I don't remember that I ever mentioned the Word Hay. I remember ſhe ſaid Hay, and ſomething elſe; and I ſaid, And what? then ſhe told me, a Fire-place.

Mr. Davy. Whether, before you put your Back to the Window, had you not heard ſhe had given an Account of ſome Particulars in the Room?

J. Adam. No, I had not. I did it to ſee whether ſhe could give an Account of the Proſpect or no.

Mr. Davy. Should not you think it more adviſable for the People to be ſatisfied with the Account ſhe could give of the Things in the Room firſt?

J. Adam. She was in the Room.

Mr. Davy. Upon your Oath, did ſhe tell you there were Trees to be ſeen out of the Window?——J. Adam. Yes, ſhe did, upon my Oath.

Mr. Davy. Where did ſhe ſtand then?

J. Adam. She was juſt by the Caſement.

Mr. Davy. Did you fill the Window ſo that ſhe could not poſſibly ſee Trees?——J. Adam. I ſtood ſo near her, that I believe ſhe could not ſee out at the Window.

Mr. Davy. Are you ſure ſhe could not ſee Trees?

J. Adam. I believe ſhe could not.

Mr. Davy. Was you cloſe to the Window?

J. Adam. No, not cloſe to that, but cloſe before her; which I think would anſwer the End, to prevent her looking out better.

Mr. Davy. How far was ſhe from the Window?

J. Adam. She might be two Yards from it, and I a Yard and a Half.

Mr. Davy. Was the Window boarded?

J. Adam. It was not. I aſked her the Queſtion; ſhe ſaid, it had not been boarded up.

Mr. Davy. Did you ever ſee a Window in the Country, where there have been no Hills to be ſeen out of it?

J. Adam. Yes, I have, upon the Sea-coaſts.

Mr. Davy. How long had ſhe been in the Room before you tried this Experiment?——J. Adam. About five or ſix Minutes.

Mr. Davy. Had ſhe not Time enough to look out there?

J. Adam. I don't think ſhe had.

Mr. Moreton. When did you hear ſhe was come Home?

J. Adamſon. I never heard ſhe was, till the Night before we went down.

Mr. Moreton. Did you go down voluntarily, as a Friend of the Girl, or upon Requeſt?

J. Adam. No; it was upon the Requeſt of Mr. Wintlebury, and others. I was juſt come off a Journey, and took a Friend's Horſe without Leave.

Mr. Moreton. Did you tell Mr. Lyon there was a Fire-place or Chimney, as well as Hay?

J. Adam. Yes, I mentioned both to him.

Mr. Moreton. Did Mr Lyon hear your Obſervations on the Hay?

J. Adam. No; he then was engaged in the Right-hand Corner of the Room; there they had got the Jug, a Baſon, and Tobacco-mould.

Mr. Moreton. Suppoſing ſhe could ſee the Trees, could ſhe ſee the Houſes on the Left-hand Side the Way?

J. Adam. No; them ſhe could not ſee, till we looked.

Mr. Moreton. What is the Character of Elizabeth Canning?

J. Adam. I never heard a bad Character of her before this in my Life. I always looked upon her to be a Girl of a good Character.

Baron Legge. At the Time you ſtood there, and aſked what could be ſeen out at the Window, and ſhe ſaid Trees, and Hills at a Diſtance, did ſhe tell you what was betwixt the Trees and the Window?

J. Adam. I don't remember any thing ſhe ſaid beſides.

Baron Legge. Did ſhe mention any Foot-way near there?

J. Adam. No, not as I remember.

Baron Legge. Were the Boards pulled down from the Window before the Girl came there, or after?

J. Adamſon. They were not pulled down till after ſhe came. I aſked her, which was the Window from whence ſhe had ſeen the Hertfordſhire Coach? She ſaid, That; and pointed to it. Then I ſaid, Let's ſee whether we can ſee the Road out at it or not: Then I went to pull the Board down, and the Man who ſaid he was her Uncle helped; we wrenched it off.

Baron Legge. Could you have ſeen the Hertfordſhire Coach go by, as the Board was then up?

J. Adam. I might, as it was light over the Board, had I looked over it.

Baron Legge. Were there any Cracks big enough in the Board to look through?

J. Adam. I cannot ſay there were.

Sutherton Bakler ſworn.

I live at Aldermanbury-Poſtern. I was applied to on the 30th of January, the Day after Elizabeth Canning's coming Home, to come to her. I attended her, and found her in a very low and weak Condition. She was ſo extremely low, that I could ſcarcely hear her ſpeak. She was in Bed, with cold clammy Sweats upon her. She complained of being very faint and ſick at Times, with a Pain in her Bowels; and complained of having been coſtive all the Time of her Confinement. I ordered her a purging Medicine; but her Stomach was too weak, and could not bear the Medicine ſhe took. Finding that, I ordered a Glyſter to be adminiſtered on the 30th in the Evening.

Mr. Nares. Did they give it her?

S. Bakler. They did, I think. I alſo ordered opening Medicines the ſame Day. She had no more Medicines till the 3d of February: Then I ordered another Glyſter, that had ſome little Effect, and brought away ſome ſmall Quantity, but did not anſwer the End. I ordered her another on the 5th, that had no Effect at all. She continued ſtill bad. Dr. Eaton was ſent for upon the 6th. He wrote proper Preſcriptions for her for fourteen Days.

Mr. Nares. How long was ſhe before ſhe had her Health tolerably?

S. Bakler. He preſcribed diuretic Medicines and gentle Cathartics; and after a Fortnight he did not come paſt three or four Days, and ſhe was tolerably well in about a Month. Her Face appeared very wan. Her Face uſed to be of a remarkable red Complexion; but her Colour was quite gone, and her Arms of a livid Colour, ſpotted. I had known her ſome Years.

Mr. Nares. Had you ever attended her with Medicines before this?

S. Bakler. No, never.

Mr. Nares. How came ſhe to go to Enfield, when the Glyſters had not had the Effect?

S. Bakler. I thought ſhe was very unable to bear it, and wondered that ſhe did: I thought it extremely improper. I thought ſhe could not bear the Fatigue.

Mr. Nares. What may you imagine thoſe Symptoms you ſaw upon her to be owing to?

S. Bakler. I don't know that: She was very much emaciated and waſted, from what ſhe was when I ſaw her before.

Mr. Nares. Do you think the Confinement you have heard of would not occaſion it?

S. Bakler. To be ſure, by living upon what ſhe ſays, ſhe muſt be very much waſted. Dr. Eaton was called in, becauſe they thought her in a very dangerous Way.

Mr. Nares. From the Appearance of her at the Time that you ſaw her, was there any Appearance of her having been in a Salivation?

S. Bakler. She was very much emaciated and waſted, to be ſure; but I never did ſee a Perſon as ſoon as they came out of a Salivation in my Life, or attended one in it.

Mr. Nares. Had ſhe any Appearance of a Woman that had been brought to-bed?

S. Bakler. She looked like a Perſon half-ſtarved, in a weak, waſting, decaying Way: But what was the Cauſe of it, I do not know.

Croſs-Examined.

Mr. Willes. When ſhe complained ſhe had no Stool, what did ſhe ſay about making Water?

S. Bakler. I believe ſhe did not make Water till the Doctor had attended her, which was not till the ſixth Day, by giving her Diuretics.

Mr. Willes. How long did ſhe ſay ſhe had been without a Stool?

S. Bakler. She ſaid, ſhe had not had any during the Time of her Confinement; but did not ſay ſhe had not made Water.

Mr. Willes. Did ſhe ſay ſhe had made Water?

S. Bakler. I do not remember ſhe ſaid ſhe had made Water.

Mr. Moreton. Do you believe, that a Perſon that is half-ſtarved is not ſo fat as a Perſon that is full-fed?

S. Bakler. No, to be ſure, Sir, he cannot.

Mr. Willes. What Colour were her Nails?

S. Bakler. Her Arms were black and livid, and her Nails looked of a Sort of a blueiſh Caſt.

Dr. Eaton ſworn.

Dr. Eaton. I am a Phyſician. The firſt of my attending Elizabeth Canning was at her Mother's Requeſt, on the 6th of February: Hearing it was a compaſſionate Caſe, I attended her. I found her in a very weak Condition, and was very apprehenſive ſhe would die: She appeared to me to be in very great Danger for a few Days. She complained of Colics and Pains in her Bowels, and could ſcarce keep any thing upon her Stomach. I cannot ſay ſhe entirely kept her Bed. She took a little Chicken Broth.

Mr. Williams. Did you ſee any Signs of an Impoſture?

Dr. Eaton. No, I ſaw none at all.

Mr. Williams. Had you heard ſhe had been away from her Friends?

Dr. Eaton. I had. I was very full of Buſineſs: I only attended to her: I did not aſk Queſtions about her Confinement. I found ſhe was coſtive to a very great Degree. She had had one Stool before I came. I happened to ſee the Apothecary, and he was relating this Caſe to me: He was ſaying what he intended to give her. I ſaid, mild Things, after ſo long Faſting, would be better; and he gave it her, and it had had ſome Effect. It was ſeven or eight Days before the Danger began to be over.

Mr.

Mr. Williams. How long did you attend her?

Dr. Eaton. I attended her from the 6th to the 20th of February, the 20th included, every Day; and after that every other Day, for a few Days; the laſt Time was on the 4th of March: Then ſhe was well enough to go abroad in the Neighbourhood; and I believe ſhe had been abroad a Day or two before that.

Mr. Wil. Have you not had Objects under your Care in Salivations?

Dr. Eaton. I have.

Mr. Wil. Whether that does not leave very remarkable Symptoms in the Mouth, Throat, and Breath?

Dr. Eaton. Yes; it does for ſome Time after.

Mr. Wil. Was there the leaſt Symptom of this?

Dr. Eaton Oh! nothing like it, nothing like it, I'll aſſure you, nothing like it in the World: It was nothing like coming out of a Salivation.

Mr. Wil. Did you obſerve her Arms or Legs?

Dr. Eaton. I did not take ſo much Notice of them.

Mr. Wil. If you had not been told the real Caſe, what ſhould you have imagined it to have been?

Dr. Eaton. I can't but ſay, the Caſe correſponded with a Perſon that had ſuffered Hunger, Thirſt, and Cold, and great Hardſhip.

Croſs-Examined.

Mr. Davy. Did you obſerve her Hands and Legs?

Dr. Eaton. Nobody deſired me to take Notice of her Hands and Legs.

Mr. Davy When had ſhe her firſt Evacuation?

Dr. Eaton. She had the firſt, the Day before I came, which was the 6th; then I heard that ſhe had had one the Day before; and I believe ſhe had the next Day after.

Mr. Davy. Was there any Difficulty after that?

Dr. Eaton. There was; and Medicines ordered pretty commonly, to the 20th. I gave her Diureticks a pretty deal.

Mr. Davy. Had you any Converſation with her?

Dr. Eaton. I had none at all. I was very full of Buſineſs at that Time, and I did my Buſineſs as well as I could.

Mr. Davy. Did you examine any outward Appearance?

Dr. Eaton. No, I did not. They complained ſhe had too little Evacuation by Urine.

Mr. Davy. How was her Pulſe?

Dr. Eaton. She had a ſingular Pulſe: I was afraid of her falling into a Fever, and I ordered that which was material for a Fever.

Mr. Davy. Had you never a Patient in this Condition before?

Dr. Eaton. Many.

Mr. Davy. Did all their Diſorders proceed from Hunger, Thirſt, and Cold?

Dr. Eaton. No. She was weak and emaciated, and her Stomach weak. When we preſcribe for a Perſon, we attend to all the Circumſtances, and aſk all the Queſtions neceſſary to let us into the concomitant Symptoms. I formed my Opinion from what I found, a low, flaſhing Pulſe, and fluttering. Every Thing correſponded to what they ſaid; and therefore I had no Reaſon to diſbelieve the Story.

Mr. Davy. Whether all the Symptoms you obſerved in the Defendant, might not ariſe from another Cauſe than that which is now aſſigned?

Dr. Eaton. I'll give you the beſt Account of that I can. It might poſſibly in part ariſe from other Cauſes, and it might not.

Mr. Davy. May not a Perſon be reduced to a low State by a Fever?

Dr. Eaton. To be ſure, they may: If I am ſent for to a Patient, and they tell me they have ſuffered with Hunger or Thirſt, I never doubt it.

Mr. Davy. That is not the Queſtion: Is it not poſſible a Perſon may be reduced to the Condition ſhe was, by ſome other Ailment?

Dr. Eaton. I think it is poſſible.

Mr. Davy. Might not ſhe be in the Condition you ſaw her, and yet her whole Story a great Lye?

Dr. Eaton. All I can ſay, it might proceed from another Cauſe: but I muſt beg leave to mention one Thing, and that is, it may proceed from another Cauſe, as when in a Fever a Perſon's Stomach is taken away, then that Cauſe of Hunger comes not by Force, but becauſe they can't eat; but the Conſequence was ſuch, it muſt proceed from her having loſt her Appetite ſome way or other. A Perſon may loſe their Appetite by a Fever, or by Force. It is plain ſhe had not eat for ſome Time.

Mr. Davy. If they had not told you that this Girl had been half-ſtarved, and kept from Meat, Drink, and expoſed to Cold, ſhould you have concluded, upon your own Obſervations, that ſhe had been ſo uſed?

Dr. Eaton. I ſhould have concluded ſhe had either by Diſtemper loſt her Appetite, or by ſome other Accident.

Mr. Nares. Is it poſſible for one to live twenty-eight Days without any more Subſiſtence than ſhe mentions?

Dr. Eaton. There is no Doubt of the Poſſibility of a Perſon's ſubſiſting twenty-eight Days, as in this Caſe.

Mr Nares. Did you obſerve the Defendant's Ear?

Dr. Eaton. There was a Diſorder behind her Ear. After I had attended her ſeven or eight Days, the Surgeon was taken ill, and they had not mentioned that to me till then; upon which I looked upon it: It had inflamed her Face, and threatened it ſomething like a St. Anthony's Fire, and I ordered a Fomentation for it.

Mr. Nares. What might cauſe it to be ſo bad?

Dr. Eaton. I take it, her bad Habit of Body, concurring with this Sore upon her Ear, occaſioned that like a St. Anthony's Fire upon her Face.

Mr. Moreton. We are now coming to Enfield-Waſh.

Robert Beals ſworn.

R. Beals. I was ill laſt Chriſtmas was Twelvemonth. I attend Stamford-Hill Turnpike in Tottenham Road, towards Enfield, betwixt Tottenham and London: About the Middle of February I heard of this Story, about a Girl being forced away from her Friends near Moorfields, to a bad Houſe at Enfield-Waſh, and had been kept there a Month on a Pitcher of Water and ſome mouldy Cruſts.

Mr. Moreton. How did you hear of it?

R. Beals. My little Children, about eight or nine Years old, brought the Account from School. I ſaid, upon hearing this, I believed I was at the Gate when the poor Girl came by.

Mr. Moreton. Give an Account of what you ſaw.

R. Beals. About the Fore-end of January, I was ſtanding at the Gate between Ten and Eleven, or near Eleven at Night; it was a very calm ſtill Night; I heard ſomething of a ſobbing, crying Voice; it came from towards Newington, going towards Tottenham; at firſt I ſaw Nobody; I ſtood ſtill; it came nearer me.

Mr. Moreton. How far off do you imagine it to be, when you heard the ſobbing at firſt?

R. Beals. It may be two or three hundred Yards. At laſt I perceived there were more than one. As they came near, I ſaw there were two Men, and a young Perſon, ſeemingly by her Voice. I had a large Candle burning (the Stile is at the End of the Turnpike over the Way). As ſoon as they got up to the Light, I ſaw them more plain. One Man was taller than the other. They went towards the Stile; one, the foremoſt, began to ſay, Come along, you Bitch, you are drunk; that was ſaid when the Candle began to ſhine upon them. I put myſelf a little farther out without-ſide the Poſts, that they might ſee me. The Woman ſeemed not willing to go along with them, by her crying and ſobbing, but never ſpoke a Word. The Man behind made a Sort of a Laugh, and ſaid, D---n the Bitch, how drunk ſhe is! When they came up to the Stile, the tall one got over firſt, and the hindmoſt lifted her over by either one Leg or both Legs; ſhe came down upright on the other Side; then ſhe hung back, and fell on her Breech upon the Step, and cried bitterly. I thought ſhe would go no farther. As I thought they could ſee me, I expected ſhe would have ſaid ſomething to me; but ſhe did not ſpeak a Word. He before, plucked her up by the Hands at full Length, and ſaid, D---n you, you Bitch, come along, you are drunk; the other came on the other Side of her, and they went away together; he laughed, and ſaid, D---n the Bitch, how drunk ſhe is! He that came over laſt joſtled her along. I could ſee them ſome Way after they got over the Stile. One of them never let go her Hand all the Time I ſaw them.

Mr. Moreton. From what you heard, did you think that ſhe was a Perſon in Diſtreſs?

R. Beals. I did; ſhe burſt out a-freſh with ſobbing, going off. They were out of my Sight preſently.

Mr. Moreton. Did you ſee her Face?

R. Beals. I can't ſay I did: I might ſee one Side of her Face.

Mr. Moreton. How was ſhe dreſſed?

R. Beals. She had ſomething of light-coloured Cloaths on.

Mr. Moreton. About what Size?

R. Beals. She did not ſeem to be tall; they both of them ſtood above her.

Mr. Moreton. Had the two Men Great-Coats on?

R. Beals. I can't tell whether they had or not.

Mr. Moreton. What Reaſon have you to believe this was the Beginning of January?

R. Beals. I think it was, to the beſt of my Knowledge. I was not well then: I attended ſome Nights for my Partner, and fell ill about three Weeks after; and from that, when I came to recollect it, I thought it was about the Beginning of January.

Mr. Moreton. Do you know Moſes Holloway?---R. Beals. I do.

Mr. Moreton. Was he well or ill then?

R. Beals. I don't know whether he was well or not. Sometimes I have done Duty for him, and he for me.

Recorder. Are you ſure it was the Beginning of January?

R. Beals. I really believe it was.

Mr. Moreton. Why did you not attempt to give her your Aſſiſtance?

R. Beals. There were two Men with her, and we are fearful in our Buſineſs; except they aſk us any Queſtions, we never meddle with ſuch; and I was then alone.

Mr. Moreton. When did you give Information of what you heard and ſaw?

R. Beals. I never did till about ſix Weeks after. At firſt, I thought it might have been one of the Men's Wives, or Siſter, or ſome drunken Girl.

Mr. Moreton. Is it a common Thing to ſee a drunken Woman along with two Men?

R. Beals. I never ſaw one ſo particular as this.

Croſs-Examined.

Mr. Willes. When was you firſt taken ill?

R. Beals. It was in the Beginning of February. I was much troubled with the Rheumatiſm.

Mr. Willes. Do you always attend your Duty?

R. Beals. Sometimes I do, and ſometimes I do not.

Mr. Willes. How far is your Turnpike from Moorfields?

R. Beals. It is about three Miles.

Mr. Willes. How far is it from Stamford-Hill Turnpike to Enfield-Waſh?

R. Beals. It is ſeven Miles.

Mr. Willes. Is it poſſible for a Woman to walk to, or be carried by two Men from your Turnpike to Enfield-Waſh in a Quarter of an Hour?

R. Beals. No, Sir, it is not poſſible.

Mr. Willes. Was ſhe walking on her Feet?

R. Beals. She was, and went pretty faſt.

Mr. Willes. Did you imagine ſhe was in a Fit of Convulſions?

R. Beals. No, Sir, I took her to be in Liquor.

Mr. Willes. Was you near enough for her to have ſeen you?

R. Beals. I was.

Mr. Willes. What did the Men ſay?

R. Beals. One ſaid, Come along, you Bitch, you are drunk; and the other ſaid, How drunk the Bitch is!

Mr. Willes. What was the Colour of her Gown?

R. Beals. It was a lightiſh one, it looked ſo.

Mr. Willes. Had ſhe a Gown on?---R. Beals. I think ſhe had, I durſt to ſay ſhe had, or elſe I ſhould have taken more Notice of it.

Mr. Dilles. Did ſhe keep crying all the Time?---R. Beals. She did.

Mr. Will. Was it Crying or Screaming?

R. Beals. It was only Sobbing and Crying.

Mr. Willes. Was ſhe near enough that ſhe might have cried out to you for Help?----R. Beals. Yes, that ſhe was.

Mr. Willes. How came you not to tell this to any of your Neighbours before?---R. Beals. I did not, till I mentioned it to my Children innocently, not thinking to hear any thing more of it.

Mr.

Mr. Willes. Was it a dark or light Night?

R. Beals. It was a dark Night.

Mr. Willes. Could you diſtinguiſh whether ſhe had a Hat or Bonnet on?

R. Beals. I can't ſay what, ſhe had ſomething on her Head.

Mr. Willes. Had ſhe a Cap on her Head?

R. Beals. I can't ſay whether ſhe had or not; I believe ſhe had; ſhe appeared to be a young Perſon with light-coloured Cloaths on.

Mr. Willes. Had ſhe an Apron on?

R. Beals. I don't remember whether ſhe had or not; I rather believe ſhe had.

Mr. Willes. Don't you keep Chriſtmas?—R. Beals. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Willes. Don't you know New-year's Day?

R. Beals. We don't keep that.

Mr. Willes. Was you garniſhed out on this Day with Roſemary, or an Orange on a Skewer?—R. Beals. We don't do no ſuch thing.

Mr. Willes. Is it not a Cuſtom in your Pariſh, on New-year's Day, to wiſh one another a happy New-year?

R. Beals. Yes, Sir, it is.

Mr. Willes. Do you remember this Morning you had wiſhed any of your Neighbours ſuch?

R. Beals. No, I do not: Indeed I don't remember what Day it was.

Mr. Willes. Don't you remember any thing to diſtinguiſh this to be New-year's Day?

R. Beals. No, I do not; I made no Remark at all, being very ill at the Time.

Mr. Moreton. Do you remember at what Time you begun to attend the Turnpike?

R. Beals. Mine began on the Sunday in the Evening, when we come in our Turns; but we often come out of Turn.

Mr. Moreton. Was there any Moon?

R. Beals. I am ſure there was no Moon, and a very ſtill Night, and it rained a little.

Mr. Willes. How far may your Road be over?

R. Beals. It is about eight or ten Yards over.

Mr. Moreton. Did you ſee her go any Part of the Way without a Man holding her by the Hand?—R. Beals. No, I did not.

Mr. Moreton. My Lord, I only mention this as circumſtantial: Grant me the Woman was at this Turnpike, I'll not call another Witneſs. We are now going to call a Perſon that ſaw a Perſon in the Situation that Canning returned in on the 29th.

Thomas Bennet ſworn.

T. Bennet. I live at Enfield, at the Ten-mile Stone: I was coming Home from my Shop near Mrs. Wells's Houſe, on the 29th of January 53; between her Houſe and the Ten-mile Stone, between Four and Five in the Afternoon, there was a miſerable poor Wretch to look to, in the Gravel-pit Gate-way, a five-acre Field near the Ten-mile Stone, betwixt two little Houſes, Richard Wright's and Widow Jenge's.

Mr. Nares. Deſcribe her Dreſs.

T. Bennet. She had neither Gown, nor Stays, nor Cap nor Hat on, only a ragged dirty Thing, a Half-Handkerchief like, and a Bit of ſomething that reached down below her Waiſt, and no Apron on, and her Hands lay before her: She was coming in at that five-acre Field Gate-way.

Mr. Nares. How far is this beyond the Ten-mile Stone?

T. Bennet. It is but the Breadth of the five-acre Field, and twenty or thirty Pole on the other Side, and about a Quarter of a Mile on this Side Mrs. Wells's: She aſked me the Way to London; I told her; ſhe ſaid ſhe was affrighted by the Tanner's Dog. I bid her turn on the right Hand, and then on the left, and that would bring her to London. She was going to turn out of the great Road into the Foot-way.

Mr. Nares. Whereabouts is the Tanner's Houſe?

T. Bennet. That is a little farther nearer London.

Mr. Nares. Which Way did ſhe come?

T. Bennet. I can't tell which Way ſhe came; I ſaw her firſt coming in there; but ſhe went for London: If ſhe had not ſpoke to me, ſhe would have gone the wrong Way for London.

Mr. Nares. How far was ſhe from the Tanner's Houſe?

T. Bennet. She was about half a Quarter of a Mile from it.

Mr. Nares. How came you to know this was the 29th of January?

T. Bennet. On the 30th of January, (which was the Day after I met her) a Man came to me about taking my Son Apprentice: I met him according to Appointment on the next Day, which was on a Wedneſday, at Waltham-Croſs, in order to put my Son out Apprentice, but we did not agree; and the Day after, which was on a Thurſday, I came to London; and on the Friday, which was next Day, I met Mrs. Kimpſton near the Ten-mile Stone, coming by this very Gate-way; ſhe told me what had happened at Mrs. Wells's; then I ſaid, I will be hanged if I did not meet the young Woman near this Place, and told her the Way to London.

Croſs-Examined.

Mr. Gaſcoyne. Which Way was ſhe going?

T. Bennet. Out of the high Road into the Fields.

Mr. Gaſ. Where did you gather up the Word Half-Handkerchief, upon your Oath?

T. Bennet. I never gathered it up at all; it is what I ſaid at firſt, and always took it ſo.

Mr. Gaſ. How do you know ſhe had no Stays on?

T. Bennet. I ſaw her Shift-Sleeves, and ſhe had no Gown on.

Mr. Gaſ. Which Way was ſhe coming from?

T. Bennet. I can't tell that; ſhe met me juſt coming in at the Gate-way.

Mr. Gaſ. Which is neareſt London, that Gate-way or the Tanner's Houſe?——T. Bennet. The Tanner's Houſe is.

Mr. Gaſ. Which Way did you direct her?

T. Bennet. I directed her in the Foot-way by the Road-ſide.

Mr. Gaſ. Where was you the Day the People were taken up?

T. Bennet. That very Day I was at Hodſdon, at Mr. Pierce's, to put my Son Apprentice to a Butcher.

David Dyer ſworn.

D. Dyer. I live at Enfield-Waſh, about a Quarter of a Mile on this Side Mother Wells's, right againſt the Ten-mile Stone. I was at my Door three Evenings before Mrs. Wells and her Family were taken up; I was chopping ſome rotten Buſhes; about Four in the Evening I ſaw a poor diſtreſſed Creature come by me out of the Common Field, from Mrs. Wells's-ward, for London.

Mr. Nares. Deſcribe how ſhe was dreſſed.

D. Dyer. Upon my Word, I can't give any Account of her Cloathing; ſhe had a Thing tied over her Head like a white Handkerchief, with her Hands before her; ſhe walked very weakly. She was a ſhortiſh Sort of a Woman, and had a ſhortiſh Sort of a Thing about her, it did not come very low about her. I looked at her Face as ſhe came by me: I ſaid, Sweetheart, do you want a Huſband? She did not ſpeak to me.

Mr. Nares. How ſoon after this did you ſee her again?

D. Dyer. It was a conſiderable Time after that; when I ſaw her, I took her to be the ſame; when I ſaw her, I believed her to be the ſame.

Mr. Nares. Stand up, Elizabeth Canning. Look upon her, is that the ſame Perſon?

D. Dyer. I have ſeen her betwixt that Time and this; this is the young Woman, I think, that paſſed by me at the Gate-way; I do believe this is ſhe.

Mr. Nares. Have you ſeen the Place ſhe got out at, at Mrs. Wells's?

D. Dyer. I have many a Time.

Mr. Nares. Might ſhe come that Way from her Houſe, where you met with her?

D. Dyer. Yes, ſhe might, from either the back or fore Part of her Houſe, that Way.

Croſs-Examination.

Mr. Davy. Was ſhe a likely Girl in the Face?

D. Dyer. The Girl was a likely Girl enough to look at, but her Cloaths were not; ſhe looked as if ſhe wanted ſome Victuals.

Mr. Davy. You did not miſtake her for a Blackmoor?

D. Dyer. No, I did not.

Mr. Davy. Was ſhe not black in the Face?

D. Dyer. No, ſhe was not.

Mr. Davy. Was ſhe freſh-coloured.

D. Dyer. No, I did not ſee any red in her Face; ſhe looked thin and weakly; ſhe had not much Colour.

Mr. Davy. Did ſhe look pale in the Face?

D. Dyer. She looked whitely.

Mr. Davy. Then ſhe was not red?---D. Dyer. No.

Mr. Davy. Nor yet black?---D. Dyer. No.

Mr. Davy. Then ſhe was white?---D. Dyer. Yes.

Mr. Davy. Was it pretty late at this Time?

D. Dyer. It was not dark; I ſaw her Face very plain.

Mr. Davy. Did you take particular Notice of her Face?

D. Dyer. I did; I took particular Notice of her, I looked at her very wiſhfully.

Mr. Davy. If ſhe had had black Eyes, ſhould you have ſeen them?

D. Dyer. Yes, I ſhould.

Mr. Davy. If ſhe had had a Bruiſed Face, ſhould you have ſeen it?

D. Dyer. I can't ſay whether ſhe was or was not bruiſed.

Mr. Davy. How long did that ſhortiſh Thing come down?

D. Dyer. I can't ſay.

Mr. Davy. Did ſhe walk faſt or ſlow?

D. Dyer. She walked very ſlowly.

Mr. Davy. Of what Colour were her Cloaths?

D. Dyer. I can't ſay as to that.

Mr. Davy. What was the Colour of that ſhort Thing you mention?

D. Dyer. I can't ſay.

Mr. Davy. What the Colour of her Petticoat?---D. Dyer. I can't ſay.

Mr. Davy. Was it a red one?---D. Dyer. Indeed, I can't tell.

Mr. Davy. Did you ſee a coloured Handkerchief, tied over the white Handkerchief on her Head?---D. Dyer. I did not.

Mr. Davy. Are you ſure the Priſoner is ſhe?

D. Dyer. I am pretty ſure; I am partly poſitive; I will not be punctual.

Mr. Davy. You ſay, ſhe had her Hands before her?---D. Dyer. She had.

Mr. Davy. Had ſhe a pretty Hand?

D. Dyer. I did not handle them; they were as other People's are.

Mr. Davy. A white Hand?---D. Dyer. Yes.

Mr. Davy. How ſoon after this did you ſee her again?

D. Dyer. I can't tell; it was after I heard there had been People taken up at Mother Wells's, for confining ſuch a Girl; then I ſpoke of this.

Recorder. How do you live?

D. Dyer. I get my Living by my daily Labour.

Mary Cobb ſworn.

M. Cobb. I live in Silver-Street, at Edmonton; I was going Home from Tanners-End; I was in Ducks-Fields, juſt at the ſetting-in of Day-light (as much as I can remember) on the 29th of January. On a Monday Night, I met a Perſon; ſhe had a Handkerchief pinned over her Head, it almoſt hid her Face; ſhe had a black Petticoat, and an old Bed-gown on; it was either a quilted Thing, or it was a printed or flowered Thing; the Flowers ſeemed to be faded. She wrapped her Arms in it. The firſt Sight I had of her, ſhe was getting over a Stile, and looked at me, and made a Slip, but did not fall: She came up directly towards me, and looked at me, and I at her: I was afraid, and moved ſlowly. I turned about, as ſhe came up to me, and looked at her: I thought ſhe would have aſked me Charity; I put my Hand in my Pocket, and had no Half-pence. I had a Mind to have ſpoke to her; but having nothing to give her, I did not. I perceived her to have a young Face. She appeared to be in a very wretched, miſerable Condition, as ever I ſaw a Perſon in all my Life. She walked creeping along. I could not tell what to make of it, whether ſhe was afraid of me, or what.

Mr. Williams. You ſay, you had a Mind to have ſpoke to her; what would you have ſaid?

M. Cobb. I wanted to aſk her, why ſhe walked ſo?

Mr. Williams. How do you recollect it was the 29th of January?

M. Cobb. When I heard the Affair, it came into my Head, that this was the Perſon that came down to Juſtice Taſhmaker's; then I heard it was on a Thurſday Night ſhe got away, and I thought from that it was impoſſible; but when it came to be publiſhed in the Papers, I found it to be on the ſame Day of the Month, by looking back.

Mr. Williams. What Size did she appear to be?

M. Cobb. Much about a Head shorter than myself.

Mr. Wil. Have you ever seen her since?—M. Cobb. No, I have not.

Mr. Wil. Look at Elizabeth Canning now, there she stands.

M. Cobb. The Size answers: I firmly believe this to be the same Person, by the Tip of her Nose; that bears some Resemblance to the Person I saw.

Mr. Wil. Have you any Reason to believe this is not she?

M. Cobb. No, I have not.

Cross-Examined.

Mr. Willes. How many Fields are there, called Ducks-Fields?

M. Cobb. There are three of them.

Mr. Willes. How far is that Part of the Foot-way, where you met this strange Creature, from the great Road?

M. Cobb. There is nothing but a Ditch parts it.

Mr. Willes. What Time does the Day shut in on the 29th of January?

M. Cobb. I can't say I have made Remarks on that.

Mr. Willes. Where was you going to?—M. Cobb. To my own House.

Mr. Willes. What Time was it when you came Home?

M. Cobb. Then the Children had lighted a Candle.

Mr. Willes. Where had you been?

M. Cobb. I had been at Tanners-End to Mrs. Carter's House, to carry Home a Child's Vest that I had made.

Mr. Willes. What Time did you set out from Home?

M. Cobb. About Three in the Evening.

Mr. Willes. How far is your House from Mrs. Carter's?

M. Cobb. About a Mile.

Mr. Willes. How long did you stay at Mrs. Carter's?

M. Cobb. There was Nobody at Home there, and I left my Errand, and I never stopped or stayed, but came away.

Mr. Willes. Did you call any where coming back?

M. Cobb. No. I had another Place to go to, and I was afraid of being too late; so did not go, but returned Home. I met several People, and stopped a little on the Return.

Mr. Willes. How long in all might you be detained, after you went from Mrs. Carter's?—M. Cobb. It might be a Quarter of an Hour.

Mr. Willes. How many Times might you stop?

M. Cobb. I am in a public Way of Business, and met several People; I think I stopped three or four Times.

Mr. Willes. From the Time you left Mrs. Carter's House, to the Time you met this Girl, how long might that be?

M. Cobb. It might be about a Quarter of an Hour.

Mr. Willes. Then you met this Woman at three Quarters after Three o'Clock?—M. Cobb. It was later than that.

Mr. Willes. How long might you be in going from your own House to Mrs. Carter's?

M. Cobb. I do think, by the Length of the Way, I might be about a Quarter of an Hour in going.

Mr. Willes. Was you stopped in going?

M. Cobb. I don't remember I was.

Mr. Willes. Was you above an Hour from your own House, before you met this Girl?

M. Cobb. Yes, Sir, to be sure, I was about two Hours.

Mr. Willes. How far from your own House did you meet her?

M. Cobb. It was about a Quarter of a Mile from it.

Mr. Willes. Tell me how you account for having spent two Hours in only going a Mile and three Quarters?

M. Cobb. I proposed to be at Home in two Hours, and I exceeded it about a Quarter of an Hour. I really think it was about Five o'Clock.

Mr. Willes. Where is your House?

M. Cobb. In Church-Street, Edmonton; but I met her between the five and six-mile Stones from London. The six-mile Stone stands near the Nether Bell; but the House I lived at then, was beyond the seven-mile Stone.

Mr. Willes. Was her Face brown or white?

M. Cobb. I observed the Tip of her Nose; it was a young Face; she looked very dismal and black, in a dirty Way.

Mr. Willes. Did you see her Hands?

M. Cobb. I did not; they were wrapped up.

Mr. Willes. Did no Words pass?

M. Cobb. I did not speak a Word to her, or she to me. I thought she wanted Charity by her deplorable Condition.

Mr. Willes. What are you?—M. Cobb. I am a Widow.

Mr. Willes. Any Family?

M. Cobb. The eldest of my Children is at Home with me; she is in the twelfth Year of her Age.

Mr. Willes. When did you first mention meeting such a Creature?

M. Cobb. That very Night I heard of the Affair of Elizabeth Canning's Confinement; which was the Friday Night following.

Mr. Willes. Who told you of it?

M. Cobb. I can't tell who; but several of my Neighbours did.

Mr. Willes. Who first spoke to you to come here to be an Evidence?

M. Cobb. Justice Tashmaker did; that was after the Trial of Squires.

Mr. Willes. How long after that?

M. Cobb. I can't tell; it was the Week after; but what Day of the Week, I know not.

Mr. Willes. In what Manner did he apply to you?

M. Cobb. He came to my House, and asked me, if I met such a Person? I told him, as I have told you before.

Mr. Willes. Did he describe any Person to you?

M. Cobb. No, none at all, any more than it was talked on. I told him, I could not take an Oath to swear to her.

Mr. Willes. When was you subpœna'd?

M. Cobb. On Monday was a Fortnight.

Mr. Willes. Who served you with it?

M. Cobb. I don't know the Gentleman; he is pretty much pitted with the Small-pox.

Mr. Willes. Was you ever examined on your Oath before?

M. Cobb. No, I never was.

Mr. Willes. How long have you been in Town?

M. Cobb. Ever since Monday Morning.

Mr. Nares. Can you recollect what Time it was when you met this Girl?—M. Cobb. I know it was pretty near dusk.

Mr. Nares. What is your Business?---M. Cobb. I am a Mantua-maker.

Mr. Nares. How many Children have you?

M. Cobb. I have but two at Home with me; I maintain them with my own Labour.

Mr. Nares. My Lord, we have closed the Account of a Person's being seen going and coming. We shall next begin our Defence to the alibi of Mary Squires.

MONDAY the 6th of May.

(Here Mary Squires, George her Son, and Lucy and Mary her two Daughters, were brought into Court, to be seen by the Witnesses as they were called.)

William Howard sworn.

Mr. Nares. Do you know Mr. Edward Aldridge?---W. Howard. I do.

Mr. Nares. Do you remember any thing about his coming down to you about Elizabeth Canning?

W. Howard. The two Edward Aldridges came both together twice; the first Time of their coming, I can't say positively to the Day, it was about three or four Days after the People were taken up at Mrs. Wells's, as near as I can remember.

Mr. Nares. What are these two Edward Aldridges?

W. Howard. One of them is a Silversmith in Foster-Lane; the other is my Neighbour.

Q. from a Juryman. What is your Employment?

W. Howard. I live upon a small Fortune, and a little Employment under the Government.

Mr. Nares. What Account did they come upon?

W. Howard. They brought me a printed Case of Elizabeth Canning, and recommended a Contribution on her Behalf.

Mr. Nares. Whether this was Edward Aldridge of Foster-Lane?

W. Howard. Yes, it was; and the other with him. The second Time of coming was about six or seven Days after the first.

Mr. Nares. Did he say, he was dissatisfied with the Story, or that he believed it?

W. Howard. There was not a Syllable of his Disbelief; but I understood him, as though it was a Thing he believed. The printed Case they brought each Time of coming; there were two initial Letters at the Bottom of it, and an Account that Virtue Hall had impeached. We were talking about the Girl's being confined: I said, What do you think of it? He said, There was one Thing, I think, the Girl is not clear in, and that is the Description of the Room.

Recorder. What did he say upon the whole?

W. Howard. He said, he thought the Girl had been used ill, and he did believe she was there; but he was not quite clear in her Description of the Room.

Mr. Nares. In both the Times, did he express any Dissatisfaction, or could you understand him, that he thought the Girl was an Impostor?

W. Howard. He said nothing at all in Contradiction to the Girl.

Cross-Examined.

Mr. Willes. Where do you live?

W. Howard. I live right against Wells's House.

Mr. Willes. Tell us what particular Words the Silversmith made use of to recommend a Contribution to you.

W. Howard. I don't remember any more than what I said.

Mr. Willes. Then the only Means was, by bringing a printed Case?

W. Howard. And the little Conversation we had about it.

Mr. Willes. The first Time you saw him, did he mention any Disbelief of her Story?—W. Howard. No, Sir.

Mr. Willes. Could you collect, he either believed or disbelieved her Story?

W. Howard. Every thing that passed the first Time was in Favour of the Girl.

Mr. Willes. But it was not so the second?

W. Howard. There was that single Objection made.

Mr. Willes. How far is your House from Mother Wells's?

W. Howard. About fifty or sixty Yards.

Mr. Willes. Did you live at Enfield during the Month of January that Year?---W. Howard. I did; and have seen all Wells's Family pass and repass about their private Affairs.

Mr. Willes. What Time in the Month of January did you first see Squires's Family about the House?

W. Howard. Really, I used to take but very little Regard of any thing in Mrs. Wells's House. I can't recollect the Time positively; if I mention a Time, I must guess at it.

Mr. Willes. Look at this black Pitcher; do you know it?

W. Howard. I know nothing of it. I can't swear particularly to a broken Pitcher.

Mr. Willes. Have you seen them carry such a black Jug as that to your Pump?

W. Howard. I can't recollect any such Thing; I give all my Neighbours Privilege to come for Water.

Mr. Nares. What Character does Mrs. Wells's House bear?

W. Howard. As bad as can be.

Recorder. Do you remember your first Time of seeing the Gypsey?

W. Howard. I never used to take Notice of them.

Mr. Just. Clive. Did you ever know there were Gypsies there, before the Time you saw them?

W. Howard. I never did. I know there used to be bad People.

Mrs. Howard sworn.

Mrs. Howard. The last Evidence is my Husband. I know the two Aldridges; one lives in London, the other by us.

Mr. Nares. When did you see them both at your House?

Mrs. Howard. The first Time that I call to Mind was, I believe, on the Saturday or Monday after Wells and the People were taken up. I remember, I came down Stairs, and they were both in the Parlour. The Country Aldridge said, they were come to us; the London Aldridge said, it was with a Desire that I and my Husband would contribute. I asked him, whether or no he was of Opinion, the Girl had been used as she had said?

He

He aſked the Country Aldridge, whether he had any of the Caſes? and ſaid, he would ſhew me one; then I might judge better: He took it out of his Pocket, and the Country Aldridge gave it to me.

Mr. Nares. Did he ſay any Thing to you, from which you could conclude, that he believed or diſbelieved her Story?

Mrs. Howard. When he gave it me in my Hand, I aſked Mr. Aldridge, what he thought of it? The Anſwer he made was, As ſure as he was alive, he was aſſured the Girl had been uſed as ſhe had ſaid in the Caſe; and that Mr. Say printed them gratis for the Uſe of the Girl, and he ſhould have more to give away.

Mr. Nares. Which Aldridge was this?

Mrs. How. This was the London Aldridge.

Mr. Nares. Was this all the Converſation?

Mrs. How. He was with me almoſt Half an Hour; and he recommended it to me and my Huſband to ſubſcribe, and deſired me to get my Friends to do the ſame: I ſaid, my Acquaintance were chiefly in London.

Mr. Nares. When did he come again?

Mrs. How. Within eight or ten Days after he came again, and brought me another printed Caſe; and there was wrote at Bottom, that Virtue Hall had made an Information. He ſaid, it was to raiſe Money for the Girl; and if we did not aſſiſt, the Gentlemen in London would not think we wanted to get rid of the bad Company we had about us.

Mr. Nares. What did he ſay about the Girl's being in the Room?

Mrs. How. Upon my Word, I don't remember he mentioned any thing to me about it then. I never ſent for him, or ſpoke to him, till he came to me in my own Parlour.

Mr. Nares. Look at the Woman there (meaning Mary Squires); do you know her?

Mrs. How. That is the Woman, I think, I have ſeen paſs and repaſs; but never was nigh her to ſpeak to her.

Mr. Nares. When was the firſt Time you ſaw her, can you recollect?

Mrs. How. The firſt time, to be poſitive, was the Sunday was Se'nnight before ſhe was taken up. I ſaw her, the Son, and two Daughters, at Mrs. Wells's Door: I do think they are the ſame. It is a great while ſince; there may be an Alteration; her Daughter Mary uſed to come to our Pump for Water: The firſt Time I took Notice of them, my Servants told me they were Gypſies; then I bid them not to unbolt the Door.

Recorder. The Sunday was Se'nnight before they were taken up was the 21ſt of January.

Mr. Juſtice Clive. How do you know it was the Sunday was Se'nnight before?

Mrs. How. I'll tell your Lordſhip why I know it was that Day; becauſe on the Friday my Servant told me ſhe was there; and ſhe called me out, when the Girl was taking ſome Linen off the Hedges at Wells's; ſhe was in a brown ſtuff Gown and a ſpeckled Hat; and when ſhe came up to the Frame of my Pump on the Saturday, ſhe turned about and made me a Curtſey, and I bowed to her as ſhe went out at the Gate: This was the Saturday before the Sunday of my firſt ſeeing the old Woman, and Son, and two Daughters.

Recorder. What Time of the Sunday was it you ſaw them?

Mrs. How. It was in the Afternoon: I was told they were her Son and two Daughters, and I looked wiſhfully at them.

Mr. Nares. Did you ſee the old Woman after this?

Mrs. How. I did; I ſaw her put into the Cart after ſhe was taken up.

Mr. Nares. When you ſaw her put into the Cart, ſo ſoon after you ſaw them at the Door, did you believe it to be the ſame Perſon you ſaw at the Door?---Mrs. How. Yes, I did believe it then.

Mr. Nares. You ſay, you was told there were Gypſies there before; did you ever ſee Gypſies there before that Time?

Mrs. How. No, not to my Knowledge. That was the Reaſon I cautioned my Servants to have nothing to ſay to them; but let them come as the reſt of the Neighbours for Water; for we refuſe none, unleſs they give Offence: But I cautioned my Servants not to let her into the Houſe.

Croſs-Examined.

Mr. Willes. How far might they be off at the Time you ſaw them firſt?

Mrs. How. As nigh as I can gueſs, not above fifty or ſixty Yards: I was within my own Gate, which faces it exactly.

Mr. Willes. Are you ſhort-ſighted?———Mrs. How. Yes, I am.

Mr. Willes. When did you firſt ſee one of the Gypſey's Girls come for Water to your Pump?

Mrs. How. It was that Saturday Morning.

Mr. Willes. Which Daughter was it?

Mrs. How. I do think it was Mary.

Mr. Willes. Which Pariſh-Church did you go to on the Sunday Morning?---Mrs. How. We go to Enfield Church.

Mr. Willes. Have you Service all Days of the Week?

Mrs. How. I believe we have; but I am not able to walk ſo far.

Mr. Willes. Do you keep King Charles's Martyrdom?

Mrs. How. No; but I keep my Son's Birth-day; as the Stile is altered, that comes to be the 29th of January.

Mr. Willes. Was that the Monday immediately after the Sunday you ſaw her, or not?

Mrs. How. No, it was the Monday was Se'nnight.

Mr. Willes. What did the Daughter fetch the Water in?

Mrs. How. I have ſeen her ſeveral Times at the Pump in that Time; and I have ſeen them come with a Pail and a large Pitcher: One Time in particular ſhe was met by another, and they took it and carried it for her: One Morning I ſaw her with a very little black Pitcher.

Mr. Willes. Can you ſpeak of its being broke about the Neck?

Mrs. How. I don't know.

Mr. Willes. Are you a Church-woman or a Diſſenter?

Mrs. How. I am a Church-woman.

Mr. Nares. How near was you to the Girl when you obſerved her?

Mrs. How. As near as I am to that Gentleman (pointing to a Perſon about three or four Yards off).

Mr. Nares. Then you was near enough to diſtinguiſh the Girl?

Mr. How. I was. She made me a Curtſey, and looked me full in the Face, and I her: I think ſhe looked fatter in the Face than ſhe does now.

Mr. Nares. Did you think it was a Gypſey's Face?

Mrs. How. I thought as other People did.

Mr. Nares. Was you near enough to know Mary Squires as ſhe paſſed and repaſſed?---Mrs. How. Yes, I was. She was in the Foot-way, and I within my Gate.

Mr. Nares. From what you obſerved of her then, do you think her to be the ſame Perſon?---Mrs. How. I do; but can't be poſitive.

Recorder. Are you poſitive?

Mrs. How. No, I am not: I never converſed with her, or ſhe with me.

Recorder. Was your Huſband with you that Sunday?

Mrs. How. No, he was not; he was gone to Church.

Recorder. Did you tell him when he came from Church?

Mrs. How. I think I did.

Recorder. Can you be poſitive to your Sight forty or fifty Yards off.

Mrs. How. I was more poſitive when I ſaw her paſs and repaſs, than I was on that Sunday.

Recorder. Can you be particular to the Days you ſaw her paſs and repaſs?

Mrs. How. No; I can't, my Lord.

William Headland ſworn.

Mr. Nares. Where did you live laſt Chriſtmas was Twelve-month?

W. Headland. I can't really ſay where I was then: I believe I was at Enfield, becauſe my Father lives there.

Mr. Nares. How old are you?

W. Head. I was twenty Years of Age the 30th of laſt Month.

Mr. Nares. Do you remember being at your Father's about a Year and a half ago?

W. Head. I know I was there when I came out of Place: I had not been in Place theſe two Years till laſt Chriſtmas: I did live at Henham-Hall, with Henry Headland, my Couſin; that is thirty-eight Miles from London.

Mr. Nares. During the Time you was there, was there any Talk about Canning and the Gypſey?

W. Head. Yes; that was in laſt January was Twelve-month: I remember Wells being taken up; I was at Home then.

Mr. Nares. How far is your Father's from Mrs. Wells's Houſe?

W. Head. There is only a Lane and two Fields part us.

Mr. Nares. Do you know the Window where it is ſuppoſed the Girl got out at? What does that Window front?

W. Head. It is by the Corner of the Lane; you may ſee into the Road.

Mr. Nares. Where does the other Side look to?

W. Head. There is only a little Window, which looks into the Field.

Mr. Nares. Did you find any Thing, and when, near that Place?

W. Head. One Day I was going to the Shop, and there were a Parcel of People come about Wells's Houſe: I went there, and found a Piece of Lead, juſt at the Corner of the Window that joins to the Houſe; it looked as if it came out of ſome Window.

Mr. Nares. How near to the Houſe did you take it up?

W. Head. Within a Yard, or thereabouts, under the Window that fronts the Road: I doubled it up as ſoon as I found it, becauſe I thought I would carry it Home.

Mr. Nares. What made you take ſuch Notice of it?

W. Head. Becauſe it was bloody; and I heard Bet Canning had torn her Ear.

Mr. Nares. For God's Sake tell me the true Reaſon, upon Oath, why you took Notice of that Lead?

W. Head. Becauſe I heard the young Woman had torn her Ear againſt the Caſement, or Something.

Mr. Nares. Was it bloody when you picked it up?

W. Head. It was all bloody; I believe it was Blood. I carried it Home, and gave it to my Mother.

Mr. Nares. Did you tell your Mother why you brought it Home?

W. Head. I did.

Recorder. When did you hear Elizabeth Canning had torn her Ear?

W. Head. I do not know.

Recorder. What Day did you pick up this Lead?

W. Head. I cannot tell.

Mr. Nares. Whether ever you ſaw Mary Squires the Gypſey?

W. Head. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Nares. Look about the Court.---W. Head. That is the Woman (pointing to her); I know her from a thouſand.

Mr. Nares. Did you ſee that Gypſey Woman at any Time before you took up the Lead?---W. Head. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Nares. How long before?

W. Head. Indeed I cannot ſay how long before; but I ſaw her on the 9th of January, I know.

Mr. Nares. Why do you think it was the 9th of January?

W. Head. Becauſe it was on a Tueſday, Waltham Market-day.

Mr. Nares. Had you ever ſeen her before?

W. Head. That was the firſt Day.

Mr. Nares. Where did you ſee her?

W. Head. I ſaw her under Mr. Loomworth Dane's Back-wall, telling a young Man his Fortune.

Mr. Nares. Where does Mr. Dane live?

W. Head. At the Sign of the Bell, at Enfield Highway. A young Man came from a Coachman; he was in a ſilver-laced Hat; I ſtood looking at her; ſhe ſaid, Go along, Boy, leſt your Maſter ſhould want you. I ſtood leaning againſt a Tree, and then went a little farther; and could not hear what they ſaid.

Mr. Nares. How could you tell ſhe was telling his Fortune?

W. Head. Becauſe I ſaw her lay hold of his Hand.

Mr. Nares. Are you ſure it was ſo early in January as the 9th?

W. Head. I am.

Mr. Nares. Did you ſee her any Day after?

W. Head. Yes, I ſaw her on the 12th, in Mrs. Wells's Houſe: I went there to carry two Pails of Water; there were the Gypſey's two Daughters; one of them had a Pair of Pumps on, and was buckling them up.

Mr. Nares.

Mr. Nares. Look about the Court, and see if you see her.

W. Headland. That is the Girl (pointing to Mary Squires); I am sure it is one. If you were in your brown Camblet Gown, I should know you better; I then could swear to it.

Mr. Nares. Do you believe this is her?

W. Head. I do really believe it is.

Mr. Nares. What did you carry that Water for?

W. Head. It was two Pails of Wash for a Sow that was big with Pigs.

Mr. Nares. Where did you carry it from?

W. Head. From my Mother's.

Mr. Nares. How do you know it to be the 12th?

W. Head. Because it is Epping Market-day.

Mr. Nares. What Day of the Week is that on?

W. Head. It is on a Friday.

Mr. Nares. Did you see her any Time after this?

W. Head. Yes; I was in Madam Johnson's Walk, and saw her coming down a Field. I spoke to her, and said, You are ganging Home, it is very cold. She said, So it is.

Mr. Nares. Did you see her after that?

W. Head. Yes; I saw her getting into the Cart, when she was taken up.

Mr. Nares. Was she the first or last that got into the Cart?

W. Head. She was the first, I believe; but I am not sure.

Mr. Nares. Was you in Court when Mrs. Howard was examined?

W. Head. No, Sir.

Mr. Nares. From what you observed of her before, and from what you observed since, are you sure this is the same Person?

W. Head. I am sure it is the same.

Cross-Examined.

Mr. Willes. What Business is your Father?

W. Head. He is a Gardener.

Mr. Willes. Where had you lived before you came home to your Father, before January was a Twelve-month?

W. Head. I worked at several Farm Houses.

Mr. Just. Clive. Had you been a hired Servant, or worked by the Day?

W. Head. I worked with one Man a Matter of two Years.

Mr. Just. Clive. Before you came home to your Father, who did you work with then?——W. Head. I cannot tell indeed; I might be out of Place, for what I know.

Mr. Willes. What Time of the Year is Christmas in?—What Month is it in?——W. Head. I do not know what Month in particular.

Mr. Just. Clive. There are twelve Months; pick out which Christmas is in.

W. Head. Indeed I cannot rightly say what Month it is in.

Mr. Willes. How many Days are there in a Week?

W. Head. There are seven, if you put Sunday in.

Mr. Willes. What, is not Sunday one of your Days?

W. Head. Yes; but some People make but six Days in the Week.

Mr. Willes. Who are they?——W. Head. The Jews do not.

Mr. Nares. You say you worked with one Man two Years before you came home to your Father; how long did you live in one Place together?

W. Head. I have lived half a Year, and three Quarters of a Year together.

Mr. Nares. Tell who you lived with three Quarters of a Year.

M. Head. I cannot rightly tell.

Mr. Nares. Can you tell any Master you lived with two Years?

W. Head. I worked for one Mr. Long for half a Year together; he lives at Freezy-Water. I worked for Farmer Allen, at Enfield Highway, right against the Black-Horse; I have worked many Times for him.

Mr. Just. Clive. How long together?

W. Head. It might be a Quarter of a Year together, or less.

Mr. Nares. Who did you work with first?——W. Head. Mr. Allen.

Mr. Nares. Did you ever live as a hired Servant in a Family with any body?——W. Head. Yes; I lived in Featherstone-Street at 'Squire Feast's Brew-house, with one Mr. King, ten or eleven Weeks.

Mr. Nares. Did this Master you lived with keep Christmas?

W. Head. I reckon he does.

Mr. Nares. Cannot you tell what Month Christmas is in?

W. Head. I can hardly tell.

Mr. Nares. Tell as well as you can.

W. Head. I cannot tell.

Mr. Nares. Is it in Winter or Summer?—W. Head. It is in Winter.

Mr. Nares. Is it before or after January?——W. Head. I cannot tell.

Q. from a Juryman. Can you read and write?

W. Head. I can read and write too, a little.

Mr. Just. Clive. Where did you find this Lead?

W. Head. I found it at the End of the Wall, by the Window fronting the Road.

Mr. Just. Clive. What Sort of a Bit of Lead was it?

W. Head. It was a Piece of Window Lead.

Lord Mayor. Explain what you mean by Window Lead.

W. Head. It was such as they put the Glass into.

Mr. Just. Clive. Was it one single Piece?

W. Head. No; there were two or three Pieces of it, all joined together; so I bent it together, and put it into my Pocket, and gave it my Mother.

Mr. Just. Clive. What did you say to her at the Time you gave it her?

W. Head. I bid her take it, because, they say, Bet Canning had tore her Ear at the Window; but it is lost since.

Mr. Willes. How long before Squires was taken up, and put into the Cart, was it that you first saw her?

W. Head. She was taken up on a Thursday, and if she had stayed till Friday, it would have been three Weeks.

Q. from a Juryman. Whether you shewed this Piece of Lead to any Body after you picked it up, besides your Mother?

W. Head. No, I shewed it to Nobody.

Elizabeth Headland sworn.

Mr. Nares. Did your Son, at any Time, bring any thing home to you, which he said he found?

E. Headland. Yes, Sir, it was a Piece of Window Lead; there was a Piece of Solder on it. It was a small Time after the People were taken up.

Mr. Nares. What Account did he give you of it?

E. Head. I looked at it; there was some Blood upon it; he said, he picked it up a little Way off from Mrs. Wells's Window, where it was supposed the Girl got out at; I wrapped it up in a Piece of Paper, and laid it on a Shelf.

Mr. Nares. How came it not to be here?

E. Head. I brought it to London with me at Michaelmas Time, and carried it down again before Christmas; I laid it in a Table-drawer; and when I went to look for it last Friday was a Week, I could not find it but I found the Piece of Paper it was wrapped in. This is really Truth.

Cross-Examined.

Mr. Willes. Was it two or three Days after they were taken up?

E. Head. Indeed I cannot tell.

Mr. Willes. Was it the Day they were taken up?

E. Head. No, it was not; it was some time after.

Mr. Wiles. Was the Blood wet or dry upon the Lead?

E. Head. It was dry.

Mr. Willes. This Son of your's, how has he spent his Time, where has he lived? He says he is twenty-one Years of Age.

E. Head. He is. He has lived in Service some Part of his Time; and sometimes he has lived at Home; he has gone to drive Plough, and to Day-labouring Work.

Mr. Willes. Has he been a dutiful Sort of a Boy, or one that you can say much in his Favour?

E. Head. I have no Occasion to give the Boy an ill Word.

Mr. Just. Clive. When did he come home from Service?

E. Head. He has not been out these three Years, till within this Half-Year; he has been at Home a Year and half, I believe; but used to be out at Hay-making and Harvest-work.

Mr. Just. Clive. How long had he lived at Home with you, before the People were taken up at Wells's?

E. Head. He had been at Home all the Winter long, and I believe from the Michaelmas before.

Mr. Just. Clive. Where was the last hired Service he was in before January was Twelve-month?

E. Head. Upon my Word, I can't tell; he was two Years ago with a Gentleman at Hackney; but he did not live there above two Months.

Samuel Story sworn.

Mr. Nares. Are you of any Business?

S. Story. I live upon my Fortune, at Waltham-Abbey, in Essex.

Mr. Nares. Look at that old Woman (meaning Mary Squires): Did you ever see her before?

S. Story. I have divers Times: That is the Gypsey. I do not know her by Name.

Mr. Nares. Tell us, when you think you first saw her?

S. Story. I have seen her several Times at a House in White-Webbs-Lane, that is since pulled down, going to the Chace; that used to be my constant Road to ride out, two or three Times a-Week. Then I lived in Turkey-Street, Enfield-Wash. I have been moved from thence about a Year and half. I have seen her both before and since I removed. The last Time I saw her was on the 23d of December, 1752, except the Time I saw her in Newgate.

Mr. Nares. Where did you see her?

S. Story. She was standing within the Door of Mrs. Wells's House.

Mr. Nares. What Reason have you to think it was on that Day?

S. Story. It was the Saturday before Christmas Day, a very fine frosty Morning; which induced me to take a Walk to see Mr. Howard, who lives directly over-against Mrs. Wells's. I walked the Horse-pad, because it was better beaten; and my Feet are a little tender. When I came over-against Mrs. Wells's House, I saw the Gypsey at the Door. Curiosity led me a little out of the Path, to see if it was the same Gypsey I had seen in the House in White-Webbs-Lane.

Mr. Nares. Did you go close to her?

S. Story. Not very close; I might go, perhaps, within ten Yards of her.

Mr. Nares. Was you so near her, as to form any Judgment whether it was the same Person?

S. Story. I was; I was certain it was the same Person.

Mr. Nares. Did you see her after that?

S. Story. No; I never saw her afterwards, till I saw her in Newgate, about the 14th or 15th of March.

Recorder. Upon the Oath you have taken, is this the same Person?

S. Story. Upon my Oath, it is. When I came to see her in Newgate, it was on a Friday. I was denied Admittance then, but I went to Alderman Glynn, and begged the Favour of an Order; and then I saw her.

Mr. Nares. Who denied you?——S. Story. The Keeper did.

Mr. Nares. Was you then satisfied it was the same Woman?

S. Story. I was then, and am now, well satisfied, that this is the same Woman.

Mr. Nares. Have you any other Reason, so as to be certain it was the 23d of December you saw her?

S. Story. I have. I observed it was a hard Frost in the Morning; and the Weather altered about Noon to Sleet and Rain, by which it was very wet, and the Wind and Weather drove on my right Side, as I was going Home; and I being subject to the Rheumatism, was taken with it; and the St. Anthony's Fire seized me about the Monday or Tuesday following; then I sent for an Apothecary, and he attended me afterwards. So I am very positive as to the Day, for I never went out after that Saturday, when I came home, for near two Months after.

Cross-Examined.

Mr. Willes. Did you find Mr. Howard at Home?

S. Story. I did.

Mr. Willes. How long did you stay there?

S. Story. I believe I might stay best Part of an Hour there.

Mr. Willes. While you was there, did you hear there were any Gypsies at that Time there?

S. Story. No; we had no Talk about them, as I remember.

Mr. Willes. Was it in your going there, or Return, that you saw her?

S. Story. It was in my going there.

Mr. Willes. Was she standing without the Door, or within?

S. Story. She was just within, at the Threshold of the Door.

Mr. Willes. Did you look fronting or side-ways?

S. Story. The Door is opposite to Mr. Howard's. I went a little farther out of my Way, to see whether it was the same Gypsey that I had seen in White-Webbs-Lane.

Mr. Willes. How long was it before this, that you had seen her before?

S. Story. I saw her when I lived in Turkey-Street, and I moved from thence on the Michaelmas before. I had seen her at Times for three Years together.

Mr. Willes. Can you name any particular Time before this?

S. Story. I remember I had seen her in the Spring of the Year.

Mr. Willes. Did you ever converse with her?

S. Story. No, I never did, Sir.

Mr. Willes. Was you ever in the same Room with her?——S. Story. No.

Mr. Willes. At this Time you went a little out of your Way, did you say any Thing to her, or she to you?——S. Story. I did not.

Mr. Willes. What did she appear to be doing?

S. Story. Nothing at all.

Mr. Willes. Had she a Pipe in her Mouth?——S. Story. No, she had not. She had a dirty Clout or Handkerchief over her Head.

Mr. Willes. Who used to be with her in White-Webbs-Lane?

S. Story. There used to be two younger Women with her at Times, which, I have heard since, are her Daughters.

Mr. Willes. Was there a Man?——S. Story. Yes, there was.

Mr. Willes. At this Time, at Wells's, did you see any of these young People with her?——S. Story. I did see a young Girl with her.

Mr. Willes. Look at these two young People, and see whether either of these are them.

S. Story. I cannot swear to their Faces. The Girl's Back was towards me then, talking to the old Woman; she stood without the House. I cannot swear to the Girl.

Mr. Willes. When was it you first recollected these Circumstances of having seen her there?

S. Story. In my Illness the Apothecary told me what had happened at Mrs. Wells's House.

Mr. Willes. Can you tell what Day it was?

S. Story. That I cannot, to two or three Days; it was after they were taken up.

Mr. Nares. It comes out now, which I did not know before, that you had seen this Woman two or three Years before that?

S. Story. I had, and took Notice of them as a Parcel of Gypsies. They used to have two Asses and a little Horse: I have seen the Horse grazing in White-Webbs-Lane, as I have rode through there; and the two Asses, I have met with them on the Road, and the two young Women and a Man; but their Dress is so altered now, that I could not know them. They used to have a perfect Gypsey's Dress, with Blankets over their Shoulders, and Handkerchiefs over their Heads (you might see their black Locks through them), following the two Asses. The last Time I met them, I believe, might be at the Beginning of December, just against Durant's House.

Mr. Nares. I believe, you was rather too ill to go out, to be a Witness when the Trial of Squires came on?

S. Story. I was; I thought I should have died.

Recorder. Was you ever of any Business?

S. Story. I was a Finisher of Clock Dial-Plates.

Recorder. Was you acquainted with Mr. Lyon before?

S. Story. I have seen him before at Newington-Green; I rented a House that he built.

William Smith sworn.

Mr. Nares. Where do you live?

W. Smith. I live in Ranton-Row, at Enfield; I am a Farmer.

Mr. Nares. What do you rent per Year?

W. Smith. An hundred and five Pounds per Year, and have these twenty Years; it belongs to the Duke of Portland.

Mr. Nares. Look, if you see Mary Squires in Court.

W. Smith. Yes, Sir; I see her.

Mr. Nares. Did you ever see her before?——W. Smith. Yes, I have.

Mr. Nares. Tell us where you remember to have seen her about a Year and a Half ago.

W. Smith. I saw her in my Cow-House on the 15th of December 1752.

Mr. Nares. Had she been about the Country some Time?

W. Smith. She had a pretty while; I saw her several Times.

Mr. Nares. Have you seen her before that Time?——W. Smith. I have.

Mr. Nares. How came she in your Cow-House?

W. Smith. They came to ask for Lodgings; I was not at Home.

Mr. Nares. Who do you mean by They?

W. Smith. The Company that was with her.

Mr. Nares. Who did they ask?

W. Smith. My Housekeeper; her Name is Swain.

Mr. Nares. When did you first see them about your House?

W. Smith. The next Day in the Morning, which was the 15th of December.

Mr. Nares. Had you any Conversation with them?

W. Smith. I had none at all.

Mr. Nares. Are you sure this is the Woman?

W. Smith. I am, that was in my Cow-House; there were two Men and two Women with her; she called them her Sons and Daughters.

Mr. Nares. Do you see any Man in Court that is like her Son?

W. Smith. I did not take so much Notice of them, as I did of her; because I have seen her often.

Mr. Nares. What Reason have you to think it was the 15th of December?

W. Smith. I was out the Day before at Dr. Crow's, stamping of Apples; and when I came Home, my People told me, the People that had laid there before, came to ask for Lodging again. They had lodged in our Cow-House and Barn before that.

Mr. Nares. Are you sure of that?

W. Smith. They have asked me before this; and used commonly to come about once a Year, for a pretty many Years together.

Mr. Nares. Has this Woman herself asked you for Lodging?

W. Smith. She has. I have known her a pretty many Years, and have seen them about the Country; they lost their Horse the while they were at my House; I think, they said it was a little black one; the Son asked my People, in my Hearing, whether they saw him, or no.

Mr. Nares. How long did you see them afterwards?

W. Smith. They lay at my House till the Sunday after. They were there three Nights and two Days, and lay in my Cow-House; they came on the 14th, but then I was not at Home.

Mr. Nares. How long, from that Time, was it before you saw them again?

W. Smith. I was at Home once when the Son came, as they called him, to ask for the Horse.

Mr. Nares. Was you examined on the Trial of Mary Squires?

W. Smith. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Nares. Did you then swear she was the same Woman?

W. Smith. Yes.

Mr. Nares. Do you now believe she is the same?

W. Smith. I do.

Cross-Examined.

Mr. Willes. Was you examined when Mary Squires and Susannah Wells were tried?

W. Smith. I was.

Mr. Willes. How long after Wells was taken up?

W. Smith. It was soon after.

Mr. Willes. How soon?

W. Smith. Within a Fortnight or three Weeks after.

Mr. Willes. Was you examined in this Place, where you are now?

W. Smith. I don't know.

Mr. Willes. Where was it?

W. Smith. I don't know where; but I am sure I was examined.

Mr. Willes. Had you any Conversation with the Gypsey on the 15th of December, in the Morning?

W. Smith. No, I only went and looked at them; she did not speak to me.

Mr. Willes. Then you cannot say you know the Faces of the two Men, and two young Women?

W. Smith. No, I do not.

Mr. Willes. How long before that December might it be, when they were there before?

W. Smith. May-be it was a Twelvemonth before.

Mr. Willes. Did you ever see them at Mrs. Wells's House in your Life?

W. Smith. No, Sir.

Mr. Willes. How far is your House from Mrs. Wells's?

W. Smith. It is near two Miles Distance.

Mr. Willes. What had you been doing the Day they came to your House?

W. Smith. I had been stamping Apples to make Cyder with, at Dr. Crow's.

Mr. Willes. Were the Apples your own Apples?

W. Smith. They were. I went there for the Use of his Press; he gave me Leave.

Mr. Willes. How long had these Apples been gathered?

W. Smith. I believe, about two Months.

Mr. Willes. Do you keep your Apples so long before you grind them?

W. Smith. Yes, and longer too.

Mr. Willes. When did they go away?

W. Smith. On the Sunday Morning, the third Day.

Mr. Willes. Did you know where they were going?

W. Smith. No, I did not.

Mr. Willes. Did you see her, after that Time, till you saw her in Newgate?

W. Smith. No, Sir.

Mr. Willes. Was you any Time in January at Mrs. Wells's?

W. Smith. No, Sir; I seldom go by there.

Mr. Willes. Had they any Thing to sell?

W. Smith. No, not as I saw.

Mr. Willes. Did you ask Dr. Crow Leave to use his Press?

W. Smith. He was then dead, I believe; I asked his Gardener; the Family were not in the Country then.

Mr. Willes. Why do you fix upon that Day, you stamped your Apples on, to be the 14th of December? Did you make any Minute of the Day?

W. Smith. I know it was that Day; I did make a Minute; I sold some Corn that Week, and delivered it the same Week, and I set it down in my Book.

Mr. Willes. Don't you sell Corn almost every Week?

W. Smith. I do.

Mr. Willes. What Day of that Week did you sell your Corn?

W. Smith. It was on the Saturday.

Mr. Willes. Where is that Book?——W. Smith. It is at Home.

Mr. Willes. Why is it not here?

W. Smith. I did not know I should have Occasion for that here.

Mr. Willes. Is your House farther from London than Mrs. Wells's?

W. Smith. Much about alike for that.

Mr. Willes. Is it in the Way to Mrs. Wells's?

W. Smith. No, it is out of the Way, on the left Hand.

Mr. Willes. Is it in the Road to Basingstoke?

W. Smith. I know nothing of the Place.

Mr. Nares. You say you was not examined in the Place you are now in, at the other Trial; do you know whether it was in this Court or no, you was examined?

W. Smith. I was examined.

Mr. Nares. Was it when Squires and Wells were tried, or at any other Time?

W. Smith. I think it was then.

Mr. Just. Clive. Was you ever examined in this Court?

W. Smith. I never was, but once.

Mr. Just. Clive. Was you ever examined in a Court of Justice, at any Time, but when you was examined about the Gypsey and Wells?

W. Smith. No.

Mr. Just. Clive. Where was you examined?

W. Smith. Some Gentlemen examined me about it.

Mr. Just. Clive. Was it in this Court, or at Hicks's-Hall?

W. Smith. I don't know Hicks's-Hall.

Mr. Nares. Was the old Gypſey in Court at the Time?

W. Smith. No, ſhe was then in Newgate.

Court. This muſt be before the Grand Jury at Hicks's-Hall, when the Bill was found.

Loomworth Dane ſworn.

L. Dane. I keep the Bell at Enfield-Waſh; I have lived there two Years and a half; but I have lived near there about twelve Years and a half.

Mr. Nares. Do you remember ever ſeeing Mary Squires there? Look, and ſee if you ſee her in Court.

L. Dane. That is the Woman, I am ſure (pointing to her). I cannot ſay I ever ſaw her before Winter was Twelve-month.

Mr. Nares. What Part of the Winter did you ſee her?

L. Dane. I cannot remember the firſt Time; but I am ſure I ſaw her on old Chriſtmas-Day, and, I believe, I ſaw her before.

Mr. Nares. What Reaſon have you to remember the Day?

L. Dane. My Man came to me, and I promiſed him a Holiday on the Old Chriſtmas-Day.

Mr. Nares. When did you promiſe him that?

L. Dane. I promiſed it him on New Chriſtmas-Day.

Mr. Nares. Had he one on the New?

L. Dane. Yes, Sir. On the Old Chriſtmas-Day I went up to my Shop (I keep a Collar-maker's Shop); while I was there, Farmer Norton came and aſked me, if I had ever a Collar that would fit his Horſe; I meaſured his Horſe, and put it down in my Book; he ſaid, he would come and ſettle with me on the Sunday following. I fitted it, and carried it Home, and left it that very Day, as I went to Dinner.

Mr. Nares. What Book did you ſet it down in?

L. Dane. In my Day-Book; it is a Piece of Paper ſewed together.

Mr. Nares. Could you have remembered it without that Circumſtance?

L. Dane. I cannot ſay I could.

Mr. Nares. Where is that Book?

L. Dane. I believe I can produce it; it is not here; but I am ſure it was Old Chriſtmas-Day.

Mr. Nares. Did you take particular Notice of her that Day?

L. Dane. Yes, Sir, I did. I was filling a Barrow of Gravel, from a Heap at my Door, to lay down in the Yard; I ſtood reſting myſelf; ſhe came by me, and I looked very wiſhfully at her. As ſhe went by me, the Wind blowed up her Gown, and there was a great Hole in the Heel of her Stocking. I ſaw her till ſhe got into the Field.

Mr. Nares. Did you ſee her when ſhe was in Confinement?

L. Dane. I did, and when ſhe was taken up, and ſaw her go into the Cart.

Mr. Nares. From what you obſerved on her going by, did you believe it was the ſame Perſon?—L. Dane. Yes, Sir, I am ſure of it.

Mr. Nares. Are you ſure now this is the ſame Perſon?

L. Dane. Yes, Sir, I am. I ſaw her in Newgate, and was ſure of it then.

Croſs-Examined.

Mr. Willes. Did you ever converſe with her?

L. Dane. No, never at all.

Mr. Willes. How near was ſhe to you when ſhe walked by?

L. Dane. I believe it might be two or three Yards off.

Mr. Willes. Have you a Coach-Road goes by your Houſe?

L. Dane. Yes, Sir, the York-Road.

Mr. Willes. Do you know William Headland, that has been examined?

L. Dane. I do.

Mr. Willes. Did you ſee any body with her?

L. Dane. No, I ſaw Nobody with her.

Mr. Willes. Was that the only Time?

L. Dane. I believe I ſaw her ſeveral Times, but cannot fix upon the Days.

Mr. Willes. Did you ſee any young People with her?

L. Dane. I ſaw her Son ſeveral Times.

Mr. Willes. How long after?——L. Dane. I cannot ſay how long.

Mr. Willes. Did you ever ſee her Daughters with her?

L. Dane. No, only when they were taken up.

Mr. Willes. Was it a very high Wind that Day?——L. Dane. It was.

Mr. Willes. What had ſhe on her Head?——L. Dane. I cannot tell.

Mr. Willes. Was her Face covered over?——L. Dane. No, it was not.

Mr. Willes. How did ſhe walk?

L. Dane. She went crouching and cringing.

Mr. Willes. Which Way was her Face?

L. Dane. It was then towards the Town; I looked at her very wiſhfully.

Mr. Willes. Then you cannot ſay you ſaw her before?

L. Dane. I believe I did.

Mr. Willes. Do you know Elizabeth Headland? What is her Character, a good or bad one, in the Neighbourhood?

L. Dane. I never heard ſhe robbed any body.

Mr. Willes. Is it as good as the reſt of her Neighbours?

L. Dane. I cannot ſay that; her's is not ſo clear as ſome People's are; but I never heard ſhe was a Thief.

Mr. Willes. What is her Son's Character?

L. Dane. I know no Ill of him.

Mr. Willes. Do you know David Dyer?—L. Dane. Yes, Sir, I do.

Mr. Willes. What is his Character?

L. Dane. He is a very honeſt Man.

Mr. Nares. I own the Boy has given a ſtrange Account; but did you ever hear any Harm by him?

L. Dane. No, never in my Life.

Mr. Nares. In what Particular is the Mother's Character ſuppoſed to be bad?

L. Dane. I do not know, not I.

Mr. Nares. How far does David Dyer live from you?

L. Dane. He lives oppoſite me.

Mr. Nares. What is his Buſineſs?——L. Dane. He is a Shepherd.

Mr. Nares. Did you ever hear any Harm of him?

L. Dane. No, never in my Life: He has a good Character.

Samuel Arnot ſworn.

S. Arnot. I live at White-Webbs, on Enfield Chace; and have lived there theſe fourteen Years.

Mr. Nares. What are you?—S. Arnot. I am a labouring Man.

Mr. Nares. Do you know ſuch a Perſon as Mary Squires?

S. Arnot. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Nares. Look, and ſee if you ſee her.

S. Arnot. That is the Woman (pointing to her).

Mr. Nares. How long have you known her?

S. Arnot. The firſt of my ſeeing her was on a Friday Morning: She aſked me, if I ſaw a little brown Horſe? This was as near as I can gueſs, about nine or ten Days before New Chriſtmas-Day.

Mr. Nares. How came you to fix upon that Time?

S. Arnot. I had been at a Place called Clay-Hill, and met her in the Buſhes: She aſked me if I ſaw this Horſe, and ſaid his Legs were tied, and he had a Clog upon him: Then I turned back again, and aſked, what Sort of a Clog? She ſaid, her Name was Squires.

Mr. Nares. For what Reaſon did ſhe tell you that?

S. Arnot. Becauſe I might give her an Account of the Horſe, if I light of him.

Mr. Nares. Upon your Oath, are you ſure this is the Woman?

S. Arnot. Upon my Oath, I am, Sir.

Mr. Nares. Did you ever ſee her any Time but that?

S. Arnot. I never ſaw her after that Time till I ſaw her in Newgate; but do not know the particular Day I ſaw her there.

Mr. Nares. How long was it after you had ſeen her before?

S. Arnot. It was, I believe, a Quarter or Half a Year after.

Mr. Nares. Was you certain then it was the ſame Perſon?

S. Arnot. I was, Sir; and, to the beſt of my Knowledge, I believe now it is the ſame.

Croſs-Examined.

Mr. Willes. What is your Employ?

S. Arnot. I follow labouring Work: I work ſometimes at Cheſhunt, and ſometimes at other Places.

Mr. Willes. Have you any Family?

S. Arnot. I have a Wife and three Children.

Mr. Willes. Why are you poſitive as to the Time?

S. Arnot. Becauſe it was on a Friday Morning that I ſaw her; and on the Sunday following I met her again, and aſked her if ſhe had found her Horſe; and ſhe ſaid, No.

Mr. Willes. Why do you apprehend it was nine or ten Days before New Chriſtmas you had this Converſation with the Gypſey?

S. Arnot. I think New Chriſtmas was the Sunday Se'nnight following.

Mr. Willes. Are you ſure Chriſtmas-Day was on a Sunday that Year?

S. Arnot. No; it was on a Monday. I ſay, it was the Sunday was Se'nnight before New Chriſtmas that I ſaw her.

Mr. Willes. Was there any body with her at that Time?

S. Arnot. There were a Man, two Women, and two Children with her, this ſecond Time; there was Nobody with her the firſt Time.

Mr. Willes. Had ſhe either of the Times a Horſe or Aſs with her?

S. Arnot. No, neither.

Mr. Juſt. Clive. Who carried the Children?

S. Arnot. They walked on Foot.

Mr. Willes. How old might they be?

S. Arnot. Four, or five, or ſix, or ſeven Years old.

Mr. Willes. What was the Colour of the Horſe ſhe enquired after?

S. Arnot. A little brown one, with his Legs tied together.

Mr. Willes. Do you know Farmer Smith?

S. Arnot. I do; his Houſe ſtands about two or three Pole from mine.

Mr. Willes. Did theſe two Children ſeem to be Gypſey Children?

S. Arnot. I did not obſerve their Colour; they ſeemed to belong to that Gang.

Mr. Willes. Do you know of their lying in Farmer Smith's Cow-houſe?

S. Arnot. I do; they did, to the beſt of my Knowledge.

Mr. Willes. If thoſe People had lain there, do you think he would not have remembered there being two Children with them?

S. Arnot. His Remembrance is nothing to me.

Mr. Nares. Did you ſee them at Farmer Smith's?

S. Arnot. I never ſaw them in the Cow-houſe: I know no otherwiſe than as I met them on the Chace, and heard they lay there; and it being ſo near my Houſe, I could hear them talk in the Cow-houſe. On the Sunday Morning I met her betwixt Clay-Hill and White-Webbs: I aſked her, whether ſhe had found the Horſe or not? She ſaid, ſhe had not.

Mr. Juſt. Clive. Was it then that the Man, two Women, and two Children, were with her?

S. Arnot. It was.

Mr. Juſt. Clive. Look about the Court, and ſee if you ſee the two Women that were with her.

S. Arnot. I cannot ſwear to any Perſon beſides her, really: I did not take Notice of the two Women; I did not converſe with them.

Mr. Nares. Did the Notice you took of her, the firſt Time you ſaw her, give you ſuch an Idea of her Perſon, as to aſk her, of your own Accord, whether ſhe had found her Horſe?

S. Arnot. It did.

Recorder. What particular Reaſon have you to imagine that theſe two Children were with them at Farmer Smith's?

S. Arnot. I don't know that: I heard a Noiſe of the Voices of ſmall People; I cannot ſay they were Children, young or old.

Recorder. Could you diſtinguiſh the Voice of Children?

S. Arnot. I could, to be ſure; but I did not ſee the old Woman.

Baron Legge. You ſay, you firſt of all ſaw the old Woman on a Friday; when was it you ſaw her next?

S. Arnot. On the Sunday after the Friday.

Baron Legge. Did you ſee her the next Sunday after that Sunday again?

S. Arnot. No.

Elizabeth Arnot ſworn.

E. Arnot. I am Wife to Samuel Arnot: We have lived where we do fourteen Years.

Mr. Nares. Do you know Mary Squires?

E. Arnot. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Nares. Look about the Court, and ſee if you can ſee her.

E. Arnot.

E. Arnot. There she is; I am sure it is her.

Mr. Nares. When was the first Time you remember to have seen her?

E. Arnot. It was about a Week before New Christmas.

Mr. Nares. How came you to fix upon that Time?

E. Arnot. To the best of my Knowledge, it was: I know it was about a Week before the first New Christmas.

Mr. Nares. Where did you see her?

E. Arnot. I saw her lying in Farmer Smith's Cow-house, close to my House: I saw her come out of the Cow-house into the Lane on the Chace. She asked me, if I saw a little Horse of her's? I said, I had not. This is the Truth.

Mr. Nares. Was your Husband with you at that Time?

E. Arnot. He was not.

Mr. Nares. Did you see any others in Company with her?

E. Arnot. I saw several more, but I did not take Notice of them: I saw her Son on the Chace, whistling for his Horse.

Mr. Nares. Did you see her after that?

E. Arnot. No, never, only in Newgate, till now.

Mr. Nares. What Time was that you saw her in Newgate?

E. Arnot. I don't know the Time; I never kept the Account of that.

Mr. Nares. Was it before or after her Trial?

E. Arnot. It was after her Trial.

Mr. Just. Clive. Should you know the Son if you was to see him?

E. Arnot. I took so little Account of him, I can't say whether I should know him or not.

Mr. Nares. Did you ever see a Woman like the old Woman in your Life?——E. Arnot. No, never before I saw her.

Mr. Nares. Did you think the Woman you saw in Newgate, was the same Person you saw enquiring for her Horse?

E. Arnot. The very same Person.

Mr. Nares. Do you think this is the same Person here, you saw there, and in Newgate?——E. Arnot. The very same.

Cross-Examined.

Mr. Willes. How long was she with you enquiring for her Horse?

E. Arnot. It might be some Minutes before she turned her Back, and went to look for him.

Mr. Willes. Did you see her in the Cow-house?

E. Arnot. No, I did not; I saw her coming out of it.

Mr. Willes. Did she mention the Colour of the Horse?

E. Arnot. She did not.

Mr. Willes. What did you say to her?

E. Arnot. I told her I had not seen him.

Mr. Willes. Was this the only Space of Time you had to see her Face, till you saw her in Newgate?——E. Arnot. It was.

Mr. Willes. How long were you talking together?

E. Arnot. It might be two or three Minutes.

Mr. Willes. Do you swear absolutely that was the Person?

E. Arnot. I do, Sir.

Mr. Nares. Did you change a Word with the Son?

E. Arnot. I did not.

Mr. Nares. Was you near the Cow-house?

E. Arnot. My House joins almost to it: She came out of the Farmer's Yard, and said, Good Woman, did you see a little Horse of mine?

Mr. Nares. Did she come towards you before she spoke to you?

E. Arnot. No; I was going for a Pail of Water, and she came out to look for her Horse.

Mr. Just. Clive. How came you to say that Man was her Son?

E. Arnot. She said, it was her Son that was calling her Horse.

Sarah Star sworn.

Mr. Nares. Do you know Mary Squires?

S. Star. I do; that is the Gypsey (pointing to her). I live the next Door to Mrs. Wells's House at Enfield-Wash: My Husband rents a Farm there.

Mr. Nares. How long have you lived there?

S. Star. I have lived there three Years this May.

Mr. Nares. When was the first Time you saw the Gypsey?

S. Star. She was at my House on the 18th or 19th of January was Twelve-month.

Mr. Nares. By what do you recollect the Day?

S. Star. My Husband was gone to Hertford for a Load of Pease for a Gentleman in Town: The Note is in Court, as far as I know, with the Date on it: Mr. Miles, the former Attorney, had it of me.

Mr. Nares. Did you ever see her at any other Time?

S. Star. I never saw her before or after, till she was taken up.

Mr. Just. Clive. How near do you live to Mrs. Wells's House?

S. Star. My House is as near to her House, as it is across the Sessions-house Yard.

Mr. Nares. What Conversation passed between you?

S. Star. At first she came and asked at the Door, if I had any Delft to mend, or China? My Man and Boy were at Dinner: I bid them give her an Answer, because I was busy. Then she came into the Kitchen to me, and asked to buy some Pork of me, and brown Bread: I said, I had but that Piece of Bread in the House, and more need to buy than to sell. Then she asked me to sell her some Chitterlings, I having some, and black Puddings, lying on the Table: I gave her a good Piece of Chitterling to get rid of her.

Mr. Nares. How long might this Conversation take up?

S. Star. I had rather set a lesser Time than it was. I do believe she was three Quarters of an Hour with my Men and me, that is, in my Sight and Hearing. She offered to tell my Servants their Fortunes, and to tell me mine. She was some time in the Porch with my Servant; but I believe she was in my Sight three Quarters of an Hour.

Mr. Nares. Did she tell any of them their Fortunes?

S. Star. After she found she could not tell me mine, she said, Don't be scared at me; for I have been before Dukes, Lords, and Earls, and I hurt Nobody, Madam; I will not hurt you. She did not tell any of my Servants their Fortunes in my Hearing. I wanted to get rid of her, for I was terribly scared, seeing such a strange Gypsey-Woman; though I have seen Hundreds of Gypsies at one Time or other: The Man took her into the Porch, then the Boy bolted the Door, so we got her out. I saw her when she was taken up and put into the Cart; and I saw her in Newgate after that.

Mr. Nares. Are you sure this is the same Person?—S. Star. Yes, Sir.

Cross-Examined.

Mr. Willes. How are you certain as to Time, so as to fix it to be the 18th or 19th of January?

S. Star. Upon this Account; my Husband was gone for a Load of Pease, and the Note was dated the 18th or 19th of January.

Mr. Wiles. Where is that Note?——S. Star. It was delivered into Mr. Miles the Attorney's Hands, and I have not seen it since.

Mr. Willes. How long is it ago since you delivered it to him?

S. Star. I believe it may be above a Twelvemonth ago.

Mr. Willes. What did you look upon him to be at that Time?

S. Star. I took him to be a Lawyer concerned for Elizabeth Canning.

Mr. Willes. Where was your Husband when you gave him that Note?

S. Star. I can't tell.

Mr. Just. Clive. When did you deliver this Note to Mr. Miles?

S. Star. Indeed I can't tell. I know my Husband took the Pease up one Day, and delivered them the next; that is the Reason I say the 18th or 19th of January.

Mr. Nares. We have not got the Paper to produce.

Baron Legge. Did you deliver that before or after the Trial of Mary Squires?

S. Star. After, a great while.

Mr. Willes. How came you not to appear here on Squires's Trial?

S. Star. They did not require it.

Daniel Vass sworn.

D. Vass. I am a Day-labouring Man; and live in Turkey-Street in Enfield Parish, and have lived there almost fourteen Years.

Mr. Nares. How near is that to Mother Wells's?

D. Vass. About a Quarter of a Mile, as near as I can guess.

Mr. Nares. Have you ever seen Mary Squires?

D. Vass. I have seen that Woman that was in Newgate; I don't know her Name.

Mr. Nares. Look about you, and see if you can see her.

D. Vass. There she is (pointing to her): She is remarkable enough: She has now a red Cloak on.

Mr. Nares. Where did you see her first?

D. Vass. The first Time I saw her going along the Causeway behind my House; it was on Old Christmas-Day, by the New Stile the 5th of January 53. I was then in my own Yard.

Mr. Nares. How near was you to her?

D. Vass. Perhaps I might be four or five Yards from her.

Mr. Nares. Had you any Conversation with her?

D. Vass. I never said any thing to her, or she to me.

Mr. Nares. How came you to take such Notice of her?

D. Vass. By reason she stopped; and I thought she would have come into the Yard, but she did not; if she had, I should have told her there was Nobody in the House.

Mr. Nares. Was there any body in the House then?

D. Vass. No, Sir.

Mr. Nares. Had you a full Sight of her Face at that Time?

D. Vass. I had, certainly.

Mr. Nares. Was she alone?

D. Vass. She was, without she had got any body under her Cloak: I saw Nobody with her.

Mr. Nares. Did you see her any Time else?

D. Vass. Only in Newgate.

Mr. Nares. Did these Observations you made of her, furnish you with a sufficient Remembrance of her Person, to recollect she was the same?

D. Vass. I am sure she is the same; now I am sure of it, Sir. It is the same Person, but not the same Cloaths.

Mr. Just. Clive. What coloured Cloaths had she on then?

D. Vass. She had a brick-coloured Gown on, an old red Cloak, and a whitish-coloured one over that, and an old black Beaver Hat; it was not a black Hat as Women commonly wear.

Mr. Nares. What Reason have you to fix upon Old Christmas-Day?

D. Vass. By reason I went to work with a Master I have worked for almost eleven Years, and he did not chuse I should work on that Day.

Mr. Nares. Why did he not chuse you should work?

D. Vass. By reason he thought it was Christmas-Day, and ought to be kept.

Mr. Nares. Are you certain that was the same Day you saw this Woman?

D. Vass. I am, Sir; that was the same Day; my Door was locked when I came home, and I did not know where my Wife was gone with the Key, and at that Time the Woman came by.

Cross-Examined.

Mr. Willes. Did you ever see her before?

D. Vass. No, Sir; nor never saw her again, till I saw her in Newgate.

Mr. Willes. How long did she stop there?

D. Vass. Perhaps a Minute, or half a Minute.

Mr. Willes. When you went into Newgate, did you go by yourself, or with other Persons?

D. Vass. I did not go by myself; if I had, I should not have found her; but we went but one at a Time up to her.

Mr. Willes. Was she brought out among a Number of other Persons, or was she singled out?

D. Vass. She sat upon the Bed, but I knew her long before I came at her.

Mr. Willes. Were there any other Prisoners there?

D. Vass. I did not know who were the Prisoners.

Mr. Willes. Was she sitting by herself?

D. Vass. She sat by herself on one Side of the Bed.

Mr. Willes. Were there any other People shewed to you in that Corner of the Room, besides the Gypsey herself?

D. Vass. There was no other Person sitting on the Bed, nigh her, as I know of.

Mr. Willes. Were there any other People in the Room?

D. Vaſs. There were a great many; but I knew the Woman when I ſaw her, and ſhould from a thouſand.

Mr. Juſt. Clive. Who deſired you to go into the Room?

D. Vaſs. I don't know who it was; it was by the Gentlemen.

Mr. Juſt. Clive. Did any body come up from the Country with you?

D. Vaſs. Yes, there were nine or ten of us came up in a Coach together.

Mr. Willes. Did you all go into Newgate together?

D. Vaſs. I don't know how many did when I did, or how many went in together.

Mr. Willes. Was not the Purpoſe of your going up, to ſee if you could find out the Gypſey?

D. Vaſ. No, no; I was carried up to ſee if I could find out the ſame Woman that I had ſeen before.—A blind Man can't ſee her; but a Man, if he has but half an Eye, might know that Woman, if he ſees her again.

Mr. Nares. Upon your Oath, did any body point out to you that this was the Gypſey?

D. Vaſs. No, no; I did not want them to do that.

Mr. Nares. Did any body tell you how ſhe was dreſſed?

D. Vaſs. No, certainly.

Mr. Nares. Was there any other Woman there?

D. Vaſs. There were in the Room.

Mr. Nares. Did you, of your own Accord, ſay which was the Woman?

D. Vaſs. Certainly.

Mr. Juſt. Clive. How near do you live to Mother Wells's?

D. Vaſs. As near as I can gueſs, about a Quarter of a Mile off.

Mr. Juſt. Clive. Have you ever been in her Houſe?

D. Vaſs. I have ſeveral Times.

Mr. Juſt. Clive. Was you there the Beginning of January?

D. Vaſs. No, nor I had not been in the Houſe above two Years, till they were taken up.

Mr. Willes. Had you uſed to go there at any Time?

D. Vaſs. I have been in the Houſe divers Times formerly; then ſhe ſold Beer; then a poor Man might take a Pint of Beer there, as well as at another Houſe.

Recorder. Who was the firſt Perſon that applied to you to go to Newgate?

D. Vaſs. I am ſure I don't know the Gentlemen's Names one from another.

Recorder. Have you heard their Names?

D. Vaſs. I have heard a good many of the Gentlemen's Names that are on the Girl's Behalf; if I were to hear their Names, perhaps I might know them.

Mr. Juſt. Clive. Do you know Farmer Smith?---D. Vaſs. I do, very well.

Mr. Juſt. Clive. Do you know his Cow-houſe?

D. Vaſs. I never was in his Yard.

Jane Dadwell ſworn.

J. Dadwell. I live in Turkey-Street at Enfield-Waſh.

Mr. Nares. How long have you lived there?

J. Dad. I have lived there two Years?

Mr. Nares. What is your Buſineſs?

J. Dad. I keep a Shop; I ſell Butter, Cheeſe, Coffee and Tea, and thoſe Sort of Things.

Mr. Nares, Do you know Mary Squires?

J. Dad. I do; this is the Woman (pointing to her).

Mr. Nares. When did you firſt ſee her?

J. Dad. The firſt Time was at our Shop; the Time I can't tell; but I can tell one Day in particular, that was the Thurſday in Chriſtmas Week.

Mr. Nares. Which Chriſtmas?---J. Dad. The New Chriſtmas Week.

Mr. Nares. Upon what Account did ſhe come to your Shop?

J. Dad. She came for Coffee, Tea, and Butter; but I can't tell what particular Weight ſhe had any one Day.

Mr. Nares. Had ſhe been at your Shop before that?

J. Dad. She had ſeveral Times before that.

Mr. Nares. Why do you fix upon that Day?

J. Dad. We dreſſed a Piece of Meat for our Cuſtomers, as I uſually do at Chriſtmas: This was dreſſed on Chriſtmas-Day; the Cuſtomers came on Tueſday Night and Wedneſday Night; and this of her coming was after my Cuſtomers had been there.

Mr. Nares. What Reaſon have you to think it was after they had been there?

J. Dad. I was in my back Houſe waſhing my Diſhes (that had been uſed when my Cuſtomers were there) when ſhe came in.

Mr. Nares. Did you ſee her any Time after that?

J. Dad. I can't ſay particularly whether ſhe was or not at my Houſe after that.

Mr Nares. From her coming ſo often to your Shop, can you be certain of her Face?---J. Dad. I know it very well.

Mr. Nares. Did you ſee her in Newgate?---J. Dad. I did.

Mr. Nares. Was ſhe ſhewn you there, or did you know her of yourſelf?

J. Dad. I knew her immediately, and then ſhe owned ſhe had been at my Shop.

Recorder. Did ſhe own ſhe had been at your Shop that Thurſday?

J. Dad. No: She knew me, and owned ſhe had been at my Shop, but did not fix upon any Time.

Mr. Nares. I need not aſk you any more as to your Certainty of the Perſon then: Are you ſure now this is the Perſon?

J. Dad. Yes, Sir, I am.

Croſs-Examined.

Mr. Willes. Was you ever examined before?---J. Dad. I was.

Mr. Willes. By what Perſon was you examined?

J. Dad. I don't know the Gentleman.

Mr. Willes. How long is it ago?

J. Dad. It is a Twelve-month ago laſt Chriſtmas.

Mr. Willes. How long is it ſince you was examined before the Grand Jury?

J. Dad. I don't know.

Mr. Willes. Was you ever examined upon Oath?

J. Dad. I was, but not upon ſuch Things as theſe.

Mr. Willes. Was it upon the Abbotſbury Men for Perjury?

J. Dad. I don't know what it was about; it was about this Affair.

Mr. Willes. When did you recollect any of theſe Circumſtances, about your waſhing your Diſhes?

J. Dad. I gave this Account to the Grand Jury, and told the ſame as I have now.

Mr. Nares. Is the Account you tell now true?

J. Dad. I am ſure it is.

Mr. Willes. When was it you firſt recollected it, to tell thoſe Circumſtances of her being there?

J. Dad. I can't recollect the Day of the Month; after they were taken up, the Lawyer came to me, and I told it him.

Mr. Willes. Don't you waſh your Diſhes every Day?

J. Dad. No, I do not; but I know in particular it was that Day: One of my Neighbours came in, and aſked me, what ſtrange Woman that was?

Mr. Willes. Did ſhe ſtay any Time in your Shop?

J. Dad. She ſat down and ſmoaked a Pipe there.

Mr. Willes. At the Time you ſaw her in Newgate, what Day did Squires ſay it was that ſhe was at your Shop?

J. Dad. She did not ſay what Day, but ſhe ſaid ſhe knew me: I aſked her whether ſhe knew me.

Mr. Nares. Then this Affair had made a great deal of Noiſe in the Country?

J. Dad. Yes, it had.

Mr. Nares. And the Lawyer deſired you to recollect the Time, did he not?---J. Dad. Yes, he did.

Mr. Nares You ſay ſhe ſmoaked a Pipe; where did ſhe ſit?

J. Dad. She ſat down by the Fire.

Mr. Nares. Who is that Neighbour that came in, and aſked about the ſtrange Woman?

J. Dad. She was one of the Witneſſes, but is ſince dead.

Mr. Nares. Was ſhe examined when you was before?

J. Dad. She was; her Name was Anne Parſley.

Mr. Willes. Was you by when ſhe was examined?

J. Dad. No, I was not; there was but one examined at a Time.

Recorder. How old are you?

J. Dad. I am threeſcore Years of Age.

Recorder. Are you no more?---J. Dad. I am not.

Recorder. Have you ſeen Gypſies at Enfield-Waſh before this?

J. Dad. I have, ſuch as are called Gypſies.

Recorder. Had any of them uſed to come to your Shop?

J. Dad. No, none of them.

Mr. Willes. Were they and this Woman alike that you had ſeen before?

J. Dad. No.

Recorder. What was her Errand the firſt Time ſhe came to your Shop?

J. Dad. She came and aſked if we had any China to mend.

Recorder. Had ſhe any body with her?

J. Dad. I never ſaw any body with her.

Recorder. Did ſhe tell you where ſhe lived?

J. Dad. She ſaid ſhe lived up yonder; and ſaid no more.

Tobias Kellog ſworn.

T. Kellog. I am a Huſbandman, and live at Enfield in a little Houſe of my own.

Mr. Nares. How long have you lived there?

T. Kel. Twenty-ſix Years, come Michaelmas.

Mr. Nares. Do you know Mary Squires?---T. Kel. I have ſeen her.

Mr. Nares. Look about, and ſee if you ſee her now.

T. Kel. I ſee her, Sir.

Mr. Nares. When was the firſt Time you ſaw her?

T. Kel. The firſt Time was in January, ſomething better than three Weeks in January was Twelve-month.

Mr. Nares. What Day in January?--T. Kel. I cannot ſay to the Day.

Mr. Nares. Have you any Reaſon to ſay you ſaw her before?

T. Kel. I have not.

Mr. Nares. Where did you ſee her?

T. Kel. She was on the other Side of the Way where I was at Work in Mr. Fletcher's Barn, at Bull's-croſs; ſhe was walking up Turkey-Street Green, in the Foot-path.

Mr. Nares. What have you to charge your Memory with, as to the Day?

T. Kel. I can't ſay but it may be a Day or two before Old Chriſtmas-Day.

Mr. Nares. Was it before Old Chriſtmas, or after?

T. Kel. It was rather before Old Chriſtmas.

Mr. Nares. Are you certain of it?---T. Kel. Yes, I am.

Mr. Nares, What Day of the Month was Old Chriſtmas-Day on?

T. Kel. It was on a Friday, and I believe I ſaw her on the Thurſday; but I can't ſay to the Day of the Month.

Mr. Nares. Are you ſure it was three Weeks in January?

T. Kel. I mean ſo, and better.

Baron Legge. From what Period, or Time, do you reckon your three Weeks in January?

T. Kel. I ſay, near a Month.

Baron Legge. Was it the Beginning of January?

T. Kel. No, there were two or three Days paſt the Beginning.

Mr. Nares. What do you mean by three Weeks in January?

T. Kel. I ſaid three Weeks, very near a Month in January.

Baron Legge. How long was it before Squires was taken up?

T. Kel. I reckon it about a Month before the Time ſhe was taken up.

Mr. Nares. When you ſay better than three Weeks, or near a Month, do you mean before Squires was taken up?---T. Kel. I mean ſo.

Mr. Nares. Are you ſure you ſaw her then?---T. Kel. I am ſure.

Mr. Nares. How far is Mr. Fletcher's Barn from Mother Wells's?

T. Kel. His Houſe is very near a Mile from it; but the Barn is about a Quarter of a Mile.

Mr. Nares. Did you ſee her Face then?

T. Kel. I did.

Mr. Nares. Did you ſee her after that?

T. Kellog. I did, twice, walk by my Barn-door. She aſked me for a Bit of Tobacco; I ſaid, I uſed none, and away ſhe went: I ſaw her four Times in all, with the Time ſhe was taken up. She was at my Barn-door the Day before ſhe was taken up, about One o'Clock, and aſked the Man that was in the Barn with me, (whoſe Name is John Rowley) for a Bit of Tobacco: Then ſhe came into the Barn, and ſaid to him, Young Man, I'll tell you your Fortune; and told him, there is one young Man has a very great Enmity to him, and aſked him to croſs her Hand with four Half-pence to tell him his Fortune: He ſaid, If I do, I muſt go on the Highway for it: Then ſhe turned her Leg over the Board, and away ſhe went.

Mr. Nares. Is John Rowley here?——T. Kel. No, he is not

Mr. Nares. Where does he live?——T. Kel. At Enfield Highway.

Mr. Nares. Are you ſure this is the Woman that aſked you for Tobacco, and that afterwards offered to tell Rowley his Fortune?

T. Kel. It is the ſame.

Mr. Nares. Have you ſeen her ſince that Time?

T. Kel. No, I have not till now; but ſhe is a very remarkable Woman.

Mr. Nares. What makes you fix it to be the Day before Old Chriſtmas-Day?

T. Kel. I have no particular Reaſon.

Croſs-Examined.

Mr. Willes. Had you any Converſation with her the firſt Time?

T. Kel. No, I had none at all.

Mr. Willes. Had you ever in your Life ſeen her before?

T. Kel. No, Sir.

Mr. Willes. Did ſhe continue walking when you ſaw her?

T. Kel. She was walking along.

Mr. Willes. Did you ſee any Gang of Gypſies about the Town, beſides her?

T. Kel. No, I did not ſee any.

Mr. Willes. How long was the ſecond Time after the firſt?

T. Kel. It was about a Week after.

Mr. Willes. Had you ſeen any Gypſies with her at any Time?

T. Kel. No, Sir.

Mr. Willes. Should you have recollected the Perſon of that Gypſey, if it had not been for that of coming into the Barn, and aſking for Tobacco?

T. Kel. Yes; if I had not ſeen her a ſecond Time, I ſhould have remembered her Face.

Recorder. Was you in Newgate to ſee her?---T. Kel. I was not.

Mr. Willes. How long is New Chriſtmas Day before the Old?

T. Kel. Eleven Days.

John Frame ſworn.

J. Frame. I lived with 'Squire Parſons, and have a Year and Half; but I am out of Place at preſent.

Mr. Nares. Where does he live?

J. Frame. He lives in James's-Street, Groſvenor-Square, but he lived in Turkey-Street, Enfield, in the Country; and I lived with him there as a Footman and Gardener.

Mr. Nares. During the Time you was there, did you ſee Mary Squires there?---J. Frame. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Nares. Do you think you ſhould know her now?

J. Frame. There ſhe is, I am ſure (pointing to her).

Mr. Nares. When did you firſt ſee her?

J. Frame. On the 11th of January was Twelve-month.

Mr. Nares. Where did you ſee her?

J. Frame. I was at Work in Maſter's Garden, and ſhe came and talked with me through the Paliſadoes, pretending to tell me my Fortune.

Mr. Nares. How came you to think it was the 11th of January?

J. Frame. Becauſe my Maſter and Miſtreſs went to Town on the 9th of January, and this was after they went.

Mr. Nares. Tell us the Converſation as well as you can.

J. Frame. She ſaid a great many Things to me. She told me, I little thought of coming into that Country once; and ſhe wanted me to give her Three-Pence: I gave her Three-Half-pence; but ſhe did not tell me what ſhe would have told me if I had given her more. When I gave her the Three-Half-pence, ſhe bid me put it in my Hand, and put it through the Pales. She took it out and went away.

Mr. Nares. How long might you converſe with her at this Time?

J. Frame. It might be four or five Minutes.

Mr. Nares. Was your Fortune good or bad?

J. Frame. She told me it would be good Fortune.

Mr. Nares. Are you ſure this is the Woman?

J. Frame. I am ſure it is.

Mr. Nares. Did you ever ſee her before?

J. Frame. I had ſeen her about a Year before: I lived then at one Mr. Woodcock's at Enfield Clay-Hill; he is ſince dead: I had then but very little Talk with her; Maſter was at Dinner, and I could not ſtay.

Mr. Nares. Did you ever ſee her at any other Time?

J. Frame. Not to take much Notice of her: I ſaw her two or three Times between that and ſeeing her in Newgate.

Mr. Nares. Are you ſure the Woman you ſaw at Mr. Woodcock's, is the ſame Woman that told you your Fortune at Mr. Parſons's?

J. Frame. I am very ſure of it.

Mr. Nares. And are you ſure this is the ſame Woman, that is here?

J. Frame. I am very ſure of it: I ſaw her ſeveral Times after the Time I mentioned, but not to take Notice of her, any farther than ſeeing her walking in the Street: I knew ſhe was in that Part of the Country from that Time, to the Time ſhe was taken up.

Mr. Nares. You ſay you ſaw her in Newgate?—J. Frame. I did.

Mr. Nares. Was you certain of her then?

J. Frame. I was very certain, and I am ſure this is the ſame now.

Mr. Nares. Was you before the Grand Jury?——J. Frame. I was.

Mr. Nares. How long is that ago?

J. Frame. I can't tell; it was about this Time Twelve-month, I think.

Mr. Nares. Did you give the ſame Account before the Grand Jury, as you have now?——J. Frame. I did.

Mr. Nares. Was that true?——J. Frame. It was, and ſo is this.

Croſs-Examined.

Mr. Willes. Were there any other Gypſies with her?

J. Frame. No, Sir.

Mr. Willes. When you ſaw her about a Twelve-month before, were there any others with her?

J. Frame. No, none as I ſaw; ſhe then only juſt opened the Gate.

Mr. Willes. Was ſhe in Company with any others in Newgate, or ſhewed by herſelf?——J. Frame. By herſelf.

Mr. Willes. How long had your Maſter and Miſtreſs been down at that Time?

J. Frame. I cannot tell; they were up and down very often.

Mr. Willes. If they have been up and down very often, how can you fix upon their going up this Time, more than any other?

J. Frame. By reaſon my Maſter and Miſtreſs gave me and my Fellow-Servant leave to go out on the 1ſt of January.

Mr. Willes. Had not your Maſter and Miſtreſs been in Town between the 1ſt of January and the 9th?——J. Frame. Yes, they had.

Mr. Nares. Have you Reaſon to believe it, becauſe your Maſter and Miſtreſs were down at Chriſtmas?---J. Frame. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Nares. How long had they been there at that Time?

J. Frame. I believe a Month; and I am ſure they gave me leave to go out on the 1ſt of January.

Recorder. How was the Gypſey dreſſed?

J. Frame. She had a reddiſh Sort of a Gown on, I think, to the beſt of my Remembrance.

Mr. Juſt. Clive. What other Cloaths?

J. Frame. A lightiſh-coloured Cloak.

Mr. Juſt. Clive. Do you know Mary Jewel?

J. Frame. She ſaw her ſomething before me the ſame Day; her Fortune was told her; ſhe gave her ſome boiled Beef: ſhe is gone away from thence.

Joſeph Gould ſworn.

Mr. Nares. Where do you live?

J. Gould. I live in Turkey-Street, in the Pariſh of Enfield: I am a Day-labouring Man.

Mr. Nares. How long have you lived there?

J. Gould. Thirty-ſeven Years.

Mr. Nares. Tell me whether you know Mary Squires?

J. Gould. That is the Woman that ſits there.

Mr. Nares. Are you ſure of it?——J. Gould. I am.

Mr. Nares. When did you firſt ſee her?

J. Gould. To the beſt of my Knowledge, it was the 8th or 9th of January 1753, that is, a Year ago laſt January.

Mr. Nares. Where did you ſee her?

J. Gould. I ſaw her in a Walk we call Trotts-Walk, leading up to Bulls-Croſs, about a Quarter of a Mile from Mrs. Wells's Houſe, or ſomething better.

Mr. Nares. Had you any Converſation with her?

J. Gould. No: I took Notice of her; I thought I never ſaw ſuch a Woman in my Life before for Features.

Mr. Nares. Had you heard Mother Wells had Gypſies lodged at her Houſe?---J. Gould. I had.

Mr. Nares. Did you ſee her after that?

J. Gould. Yes, I ſaw her twice afterwards.

Mr. Nares. About what Time?

J. Gould. As nigh as I can gueſs, about eight or nine Days before ſhe was taken up; and another Time, about four or five Days before ſhe was taken up.

Mr. Nares. Are you ſure the Priſoner is the ſame Perſon you ſaw on the 8th or 9th of January, and the other Times after that?

J. Gould. I am, Sir.

Mr. Nares. By what do you remember the Time?

J. Gould. Mr. Parſons and his Lady went to Town on the 9th, (I live next Door to him) and my Wife was at Work there on the Monday.

Mr. Nares. What Day of the Week was the 9th?

J. Gould. It was on a Tueſday; I knew of their going.

Mr. Nares. By what did you know of that?

J. Gould. It was the Time they went away after Chriſtmas.

Mr. Nares. Did you ſee the old Woman in Newgate after this?

J. Gould. I did.

Mr. Nares. Was ſhe ſhewed you, or did you find her out?

J. Gould. She was ſhewed me: There were a great many People in the Room; ſhe was by the Fire-ſide.

Mr. Nares. Do you mean any body pointed at her, and ſaid, that was the Woman?

J. Gould. No, Sir; on the firſt Sight, at coming into the Room, I knew her again, without being told.

Mr. Nares. Are you ſure the Woman you ſaw in Newgate, is the ſame you ſee now?---J. Gould. Yes, Sir.

Croſs-Examined.

Mr. Willes. How far was you off from her when you ſaw her on the 8th or 9th of January?---J. Gould. Cloſe by her.

Mr. Willes. Was it the ſame Day that Mr. and Mrs. Parſons went to Town?

J. Gould. I cannot tell whether it was the ſame Day or no.

Mr. Willes. Was any body with her at that Time?

J. Gould. No, Sir.

Mr. Willes. Had you any Converſation with her?---J. Gould. No, Sir.

Mr. Willes. When was you told that Mother Wells had got Gypſies lodged at her Houſe?

J. Gould. That was before I ſaw her the firſt Time.

Mr. Willes. Who told you ſo?

J. Gould. To the beſt of my Remembrance, Virtue Hall did: I heard her tell other People ſo.

Mr. Willes. What Day was this?

J. Gould. I cannot tell the very Day.

Mr. Willes. When did you firſt recollect this of Mr. Parſons's going to Town, in order to aſſiſt your Memory?

J. Gould. After I had ſeen the Old Gypſey in Newgate.

Mr. Willes. When you ſaw her there, were there no other People in that Part of the Room but her?

J. Gould. Upon my Word, I don't remember there were any, beſides the People that went with me.

Mr. Willes. When you ſaw her, four or five Days before ſhe was taken up, were there any body with her then?

J. Gould. She came into a Public-Houſe where I was.

Mr. Juſt. Clive. Where did you ſee Virtue Hall, when ſhe was relating this?

J. Gould. At a Place called the Two Bridges; there were ſeveral People there then.

Mr. Juſt. Clive. Can you tell any of their Names?

J. Gould. I cannot: Then they told me that Perſon was Virtue Hall, and they called her by her Name: I did not know her before.

Mr. Willes. How long was this before the People were taken up?

J. Gould. It was ſome Time before.

Mr. Juſt. Clive. Did you uſe the Houſe of Mother Wells?

J. Gould. I never did uſe it; I have kept a Farm fifteen Years next Door to it.

Mr. Nares. What is the Two Bridges? A Houſe of that Name, or what?

J. Gould. No, it is in the Street.

Recorder. How was the Gypſey dreſſed?

J. Gould. Upon my Word, I cannot certainly tell: She had a Cloak, and a Hat tied over her Head, and ſmoaking a Pipe.

Mr. Juſt. Clive. Was ſhe briſk and nimble, or was ſhe feeble?

J. Gould. No, not briſk.

Mr. Juſt. Clive. Was your Wife with you when you ſaw Virtue Hall?

J. Gould. No.

Mary Gould ſworn.

Mary Gould. I am Wife to the laſt Evidence, and live in Turkey-Street.

Mr. Nares. Do you know Mary Squires?

M. Gould. I know the Gypſey-Woman. I did not know her Name when I ſaw her.

Mr. Nares. Look about, and ſee if you ſee her.

M. Gould. Yes, Sir, there ſhe ſits; I am ſure that is the Woman.

Mr. Nares. When did you ſee her at Enfield?

M. Gould. I ſaw her on the 11th or 12th of January 1753, at my Door in Turkey-Street: I am not certain which Day of the Two; it was either on a Thurſday or Friday, I am ſure.

Mr. Nares. In what Manner did ſhe come?

M. Gould. My Door was bolted: She called at it, and I opened it: She aſked me, If I had any China to mend? I ſaid, No. She ſaid directly, You will not live long. I ſaid, Miſtreſs, I ſhall not give any thing, for I don't want to hear my Fortune told. I ſhut the Door, and watched her out at the Window, and ſaw her go into Mr. Harrington's Yard and out again. I was a little ſurprized at her, becauſe I thought ſhe was a very ordinary Woman. I ſaw her another Time before ſhe was taken up, and that was as I ſat at Work at my own Window; that was the Week before ſhe was taken up: She aſked me, If I had any China to mend then? and I told her, No.

Mr. Nares. Are you ſure it was the ſame Perſon that ſpoke to you thoſe two Times?---M. Gould. I am very ſure.

Mr. Nares. What Reaſon have you to think the firſt was the 11th or 12th of January?

M. Gould. By reaſon 'Squire Parſons went to Town on the Tueſday that Week. I uſed to be there almoſt every Day: I was there on the Monday, the Day before they went, which was the 9th.

Mr. Nares. Upon your Oath, was it in that Week Mr. Parſons went to Town?

M. Gould. I am ſure it was, and I am ſure this here is the ſame Woman.

Mr. Nares. Did you ever ſee her before that Time?

M. Gould. I don't particularly know that I have.

Croſs-Examined.

Mr. Willes. How do you know Mr. Parſons went to Town on the 9th?

M. Gould. Becauſe I was much there: I was there on New-year's Day; they were to have gone on that Day, but Madam was not very well, ſo it was put off till Tueſday.

Recorder. Did you know Virtue Hall?

M. Gould. I had ſeen her, but I had but little Knowledge of her.

Mr. Willes. Was you ever in Mother Wells's Houſe?

M. Gould. I have.

Mr. Willes. Did you ever ſee the old Gypſey there?

M. Gould. No, I never did.

Mr. Juſt. Clive. Do you remember when your Huſband ſaw Virtue Hall near the Two Bridges?

M. Gould. I told him, I had been affrighted by a Gypſey; and he made Anſwer and ſaid, Virtue Hall told him, there were Gypſies at Mother Wells's Houſe.

Mr. Juſt. Clive. How was ſhe dreſſed when you ſaw her?

M. Gould. She was dreſſed in the very ſame Dreſs as ſhe was when I ſaw her in Newgate, with a Clout about her Head, and a plain Cap under it; a brown Sort of a Gown, I cannot tell the Colour of it, but it was not a Snuff-Colour; it was a yellowiſh Sort of a Gown; ſhe was in a very tight Sort of a Dreſs, conſidering her Trade.

Humphrey Holding ſworn.

Mr. Nares. Where do you live?

H. Holding. I live in Turkey-Street, and have theſe eighteen Years: I am a Gardener.

Mr. Nares. Do you know Mary Squires, the Gypſey?----H. Hold. I do.

Mr. Nares. Look about, and ſee if you can ſee her.

H. Hold. There ſhe is.

Mr. Nares. When was the firſt Time you ſaw her?

H. Hold. It was on the 8th of January 1753.

Mr. Nares. Why do you think it was on that Day?

H. Hold. Becauſe a Gentleman, whom I work for, came Home on the 9th.

Mr. Nares. What Gentleman is that?

H. Hold. That is Mr. Parſons: the Gypſey came and aſked me, if the Family was at Home? I ſaid, Aye.

Mr. Nares. Had you any other Converſation with her?

H. Hold. No, I had not.

Mr. Nares. Did you ſee her any other Time after this?

H. Holding. I ſaw her on the 11th of January, that was on a Thurſday, in the ſame Week; then I was nailing up Vines for Dr. Harrington.

Mr. Nares. What Converſation paſſed?

H. Hold. She aſked me, if there was any China to mend? I told her to aſk at the Door. She aſked at the Door, and Somebody ſaid, No; I cannot ſay who, but I heard the Words very plain; I was then at the End of the Houſe.

Mr. Nares. By what do you remember this to be the Day?

H. Hold. I remember it, becauſe I was not paid for that Work, and it was ſet down in my Book.

Mr. Nares. Did you ſee her after this?

H. Hold. I ſaw her again, when ſhe was carried away to Juſtice Taſſ-maker's.

Mr. Nares. Are you ſure this is the ſame Woman you ſaw before?

H. Hold. It is the very ſame Woman, I am certain of it; I could pick her out of a thouſand.

Croſs-Examined.

Mr. Willes. What did you ſet that Work down in?

H. Hold. In my Pocket-book.

Mr. Willes. How came you not to bring your Book here?

H. Hold. I had not Preſence of Mind to bring it with me.

Mr. Willes. Did you work for 'Squire Parſons then?

H. Hold. No, I did not, becauſe he had hired a Perſon in the Houſe.

Mr. Willes. Are you ſure Mr. Parſons went away on the 9th?

H. Hold. I live, as it were, on the Spot; I know he went away on the Morrow after I ſaw her.

Mr. Willes. How long might the Gypſey be in aſking thoſe Queſtions?

H. Hold. She was not long with me.

Mr. Willes. How near might you be to her, when you was nailing up the Vines, on the 11th?

H. Hold. About half the Length of this Court.

Mr. Willes. Was there any Fence parted you?

H. Hold. No, none but the Gate, and I believe that was open.

Mr. Willes. Before that Time had you heard of any other Gypſies being at Mother Wells's?

H. Hold. As to that, I cannot ſay, for I never was at Mother Wells's in my Life.

Mr. Willes. Were there any body with her then?

H. Hold. No, there were not.

Mr. Willes. How long had 'Squire Parſons been in the Country that Chriſtmas?

H. Hold. I don't know; but I know when he came out of the Country.

Mr. Willes. How come you to remember the Day of going out of the Country, better than when they went down?

H. Hold. By reaſon they are very good to the poor People when they are in the Country.

Mr. Willes. Are you uſed to work for Dr. Harrington? What is his Method of paying?

H. Hold. He pays ſometimes in a Quarter of a Year, and ſometimes in Half a Year.

Mr. Willes. Don't he pay you the Day you do his Work?

H. Hold. He very ſeldom does; and if I am not, I book it.

Mr. Willes. How came you to remember this particular Minute of the 11th, more than any other Minute? Was this any uncommon Thing?

H. Hold. No, it is what I did always, when I was not paid.

Mr. Willes. Was you ever examined upon Oath before?

H. Hold. Yes; but I could not fully give an Account, becauſe then I could not reſolve myſelf of the Time.

Mr. Willes. How long after this Time did you work for Dr. Harrington?

H. Hold. Not for a conſiderable Time.

Mr. Willes. Did you work there the next Day, or the Day before?

H. Hold. No, I did not.

Mr. Willes. How many Months after this Time was it that you was examined, and could not recollect yourſelf?

H. Hold. I cannot juſtly ſay how long it was after.

Mr. Willes. Cannot you tell the Day of the Month you was examined at the Manſion-Houſe?

H. Hold. I cannot tell the Month, if I was to die.

Mr. Willes. Was you ever examined upon Oath any where elſe?

H. Hold. I was at the Fleece in Edmonton, by the Juſtices.

Mr. Willes. Can you remember the Day you was examined there?

H. Hold. I cannot.

Mr. Willes. Had you any Friend with you, when you was at the Manſion-Houſe?

H. Hold. I had a Scrub-Lawyer with me, and, I believe, there are a great many of them in Town.

Mr. Willes. What was his Name?---H. Hold. The Man is dead.

Mr. Willes. In what Way do you make your Minutes in your Book?

H. Hold. I write ſo much per Day.

Mr. Willes. Tell us the little Line you made on the 11th of January?

H. Hold. I put down the Day of the Month, ſo much per Day; that is, my Wife puts it down, as ſoon as I come Home: I can read, but I cannot write.

Mr. Willes. Were there any other Perſons with you when you was examined at the Manſion-Houſe?

H. Hold. There were, may-be, Half a Dozen.

Mr. Nares. Upon your Oath, was it the 11th of January you worked for Dr. Harrington?

H. Hold. Upon my Oath, it was put down that very Night.

Mr. Nares. Does your Wife always ſet down your Work in the Book?

H. Hold. She always does.

Mr. Nares. When you was examined before my Lord-Mayor at the Manſion-Houſe, had you ſeen your Book to refreſh your Memory?

H. Hold. I told them there, I could not recollect it till I ſaw my Book.

Mr. Nares. Was you deſired to recollect, the Day you was examined before my Lord-Mayor?----H. Hold. No.

Mr. Nares. Nor before the Commiſſioners neither?

H. Hold. No, Sir.

Baron Legge. When you could not recollect that, for Want of your Book, at that Time, how came you not to bring it now?

H. Holding. Upon my Oath, I had no Preſence of Mind to bring it: I did not know it would be looked into.

Baron Legge. Do you remember how this Woman was dreſſed, when you ſaw her?

H. Hold. I cannot ſay as to Particulars; ſhe was dreſſed very poorly.

Baron Legge. Give the beſt Account you can.

H. Hold. She had a Hat on her Head, and a Sort of a darkiſh yelloviſh Gown; but, as to her Face, I know it from five thouſand.

Baron Legge. What ſort of a Hat?---H. Hold. A Straw Hat.

Mr. Juſt. Clive. Was it a Straw Hat or a Bonnet?

H. Hold. I cannot ſay which.

Baron Legge. Was it a black, or white one?

H. Hold. Blackiſh it looked to be.

Baron Legge. How near was you to her?

H. Hold. As near as I am to your Honour.

Baron Legge. Had ſhe a Cloak on?

H. Hold. She had a ſhort one, but I cannot tell the Colour.

Baron Legge. What Sort of Health did ſhe appear to be in? Did ſhe appear to be a ſtrong or weak Woman?

H. Hold. She did not appear to be very ſtrong.

Baron Legge. Did you ſee her in Newgate afterwards?

H. Hold. I did, and knew her again: She was ſitting on the Feet of the Bed.

Baron Legge. Were there any other Women with her?

H. Hold. I ſaw none, but us that went from Enfield, as I remember. We were admitted in by Order of Sir Richard Glynn.

Sarah Vaſs ſworn.

Sarah Vaſs. I am Wife to Daniel Vaſs: I live at Enfield, in Turkey-Street.

Mr. Nares. How long have you lived there?

S. Vaſs. Either thirteen or fourteen Years, come Michaelmas.

Mr. Nares. Do you know Mary Squires?

S. Vaſs. I do; that is the Woman (pointing to her).

Mr. Nares. When did you ſee her?

S. Vaſs. I ſaw her on the 11th of January was Twelve-month.

Mr. Nares. Where did you ſee her?---S. Vaſs. At my own Houſe.

Mr. Nares. What was her Buſineſs there?

S. Vaſs. She came to tell me my Fortune at the Door.

Mr. Nares. Did ſhe tell you your Fortune?

S. Vaſs. No, I would not let her.

Mr. Nares. Did you ſee her at any other Time?

S. Vaſs. Yes, ſeveral Times.

Mr. Nares. How came you to think this was the 11th of January?

S. Vaſs. I can give you a good Reaſon for it: I chare at 'Squire Parſons's, in waſhing and ironing: They took Coach and went to London on Tueſday the 9th of January, and I returned Home directly when they took Coach, and I ſaw the Gypſey two Days after that.

Mr. Nares. Are you ſure of it?

S. Vaſs. I am certainly ſure I did: After that I ſaw her ſeveral Times.

Mr. Nares. Did ſhe ever aſk you to tell you your Fortune after this?

S. Vaſs Yes, ſhe did the Day before ſhe was taken up: Then ſhe came into my Houſe; I was drinking a Diſh of Tea; ſhe came in and ſat down by me, and aſked me for a Pipe of Tobacco; I went to my Huſband's Mug in which he keeps his Tobacco; ſhe took hold of my Hand, and aſked me to tell me my Fortune, but I refuſed her: Then ſhe aſked me for a Diſh of Tea, and I gave her two Diſhes of Tea.

Mr. Nares. How long did ſhe ſtay?

S. Vaſs. I believe ſhe might ſtay about a Quarter of an Hour, She aſked me, What Gentleman's Houſe that was over the Way? I ſaid, Madam Gibſon's. She aſked me, Whether they would admit her? I told her, I thought they would not.

Mr. Nares. Are you very certain that is the ſame Woman you ſaw before, on the 11th of January?

S. Vaſs. I am ſure ſhe is the ſame.

Mr. Nares. Did you ſee her when ſhe was taken up?

S. Vaſs. I did not, but I ſaw her in Newgate.

Mr. Nares. Are you certain this Woman, that ſits here, is that Woman?

S. Vaſs. I am certain that is the ſame Woman, I am poſitive of it.

Croſs-Examined.

Mr. Davy. Did you ever ſee any Gypſey at Enfield-Waſh like her?

S. Vaſs. No.

Mr. Davy. Do you think it poſſible for any Perſon, that has good Eyes in his Head, to miſtake her for another Woman?

S. Vaſs. No, indeed, I ſhould think not.

Mr. Davy. How often have you ſeen her?

S. Vaſs. Twice at my Houſe, and ſeveral other Times; I ſaw her twice ſitting in a Chandler's Shop.

Mr. Davy. By what Name was ſhe called?

S. Vaſs. She went by the Name of the Gypſey-Woman.

Mr. Davy. Where did they ſay ſhe lodged?

S. Vaſs. At Mother Wells's.

Mr. Davy. Did you hear ſhe lodged there on the 11th of January?

S. Vaſs. No, not till afterwards.

Mr. Davy. How long afterwards?

S. Vaſs. As nigh as I can gueſs, it was three or four Days after.

Mr. Davy. Was you at Home when they were taken up? Before that Time did you hear ſhe lodged at Mother Wells's?

S. Vaſs. Yes, before that.

Mr. Davy. Who told you where ſhe lodged?

S. Vaſs. I went to a Shop, and enquired of the Woman (her Name is Mrs. Dadwell) who ſhe was, and where ſhe lodged; they ſaid at Mother Wells's.

Mr. Davy. When did you hear this?

S. Vaſs. As nigh as I can gueſs, it was three or four Days, or a Week, after the firſt Time I ever ſaw her.

Mr. Davy. What is 'Squire Parſons?

S. Vaſs. He is a Gentleman that took a Country-Houſe, and he was here all the Summer to and fro; now he lives in Town; he had Lodgings in Town, and uſed to be backwards and forwards pretty often in the Summer; in the Winter he was at London pretty much.

Mr. Davy. How long does he uſually ſtay in the Country?

S. Vaſs. He very ſeldom comes down in Winter; ſometimes, may-be, he'd ſtay a Month or ſix Weeks.

Mr. Davy. Who does your Huſband work for?

S. Vaſs. He works for Farmer Yarrow, and has a good many Years.

Mr. Davy. Does he work for him every Day of the Week?

S. Vaſs. He does, except it happens to be a Holiday.

Mr. Davy. Did you ever ſee the Gypſey go in or out of Wells's Houſe?

S. Vaſs. No, I never did.

Mr. Davy. Did you ever ſee any body with her?---S. Vaſs. No, Sir.

Mr. Davy. Did you ever ſee that young Man or Woman (meaning George and Lucy Squires)?---S. Vaſs. I ſaw them once ſince this.

Mr. Davy. Do you know Fortune Natus?---S. Vaſs. Yes.

Mr. Davy. Do you know Virtue Hall?---S. Vaſs. I do.

Mr. Davy. Did you ever ſee them going into Wells's Houſe?

S. Vaſs. No, never.

Mr. Davy. Nor coming out?---S. Vaſs. No, Sir.

Mr. Davy. Did Natus and his Wife lodge at Mother Wells's?

S. Vaſs. I heard afterwards they did, but not before.

Mr. Davy. Did you ſee Natus and his Wife in January?

S. Vaſs. I don't know that I did.

Mr. Davy. Nor in the December before?---S. Vaſs. No, Sir.

Mr. Davy. Then, when did you ſee them?

S. Vaſs. Since the great Hurliburly.

Mr. Davy. Did you not ſay, you ſaw them often?

S. Vaſs. Yes, but never before that Time.

Mr. Davy. Did you ever ſee Virtue Hall, before ſhe was taken up?

S. Vaſs. No, I never did.

Mr. Nares. Did your Huſband work on Old Chriſtmas-Day?

S. Vaſs. No, Sir; he went to work, and his Maſter refuſed him, and would not let him work.

Baron Legge. How long have you known Natus and his Wife?

S. Vaſs. Now I know them, but I did not before this Thing happened.

Baron Legge. How was Mary Squires dreſſed?

S. Vaſs. She was in a light-coloured Cloak, a Beaver Hat, and a Brick-coloured Gown.

Anne Johnſon ſworn.

A. Johnſon. I live at Enfield.

Mr. Nares. How long have you lived there?

A. John. Going on to twenty-ſeven Years.

Mr. Nares. What do you do for your Living?

A. John. I ſpin for my Living, ſince my Huſband died.

Mr. Nares. What was his Buſineſs?----A. John. He uſed to ſell Fiſh.

Mr. Nares. Do you know Mary Squires?

A. John. I do; I ſaw her at my Door.

Mr. Nares. Look about, and ſee if you ſee her.

A. John. There ſhe ſits (pointing to her): I am ſure that is ſhe.

Mr. Nares. When did you firſt ſee her?

A. John. It was at my Door, January was a Twelve-month.

Mr. Nares. How came you to think it that Time, more than any other Time?

A. John. I am ſure of it; it was the 18th of January.

Mr. Nares. How do you know it?

A. John. By carrying Home my Work; I carried it Home two Days before, which was the 16th.

Mr. Nares. Who do you work for?

A. John. Mr. Smitheram; I have worked for him many Pounds.

Mr. Nares. How do you know by carrying Home that Work in particular?

A. John. That was the firſt I carried Home in the New-Year, which is the Reaſon I remember when it was.

Mr. Nares. Where did you ſee Mary Squires on the 18th of January?

A. John. She came to my Door, and aſked me, If I had any China to mend? I told her, I had not. Then ſhe aſked me, If I had any blue and white Ware to mend? I ſaid, I had none but what I could mend myſelf. Then ſhe aſked me for ſome Victuals.

Mr. Nares. Was ſhe alone?

A. John. Yes, I ſaw Nobody with her.

Mr. Nares. Did you give her any Victuals?

A. John. No, I did not.

Mr. Nares. Did you ſee her any Time after this?

A. John. I ſaw her twice after; ſhe was four Times at my Door in all.

Mr. Nares. Did you ſee her all the four Times?

A. John. I ſaw her three of them; the next Time ſhe begged for ſome Victuals, and to light her Pipe; I gave her no Victuals.

Mr. Nares. What, the next Time?

A. John. She aſked me the next Time to let her light her Pipe.

Mr. Nares. Are you ſure this is the ſame Perſon?

A. John. I am ſure it is.

Mr. Nares. How ſoon was it you ſaw her after?

A. John. This was all in ten or eleven Days; I think, the laſt Time I ſaw her was two Days before ſhe was taken up to be brought away.

Mr. Nares. Did you ſee her when ſhe was taken up?

A. John. No, I did not.

Mr. Nares. Did you ſee her in her Confinement in Newgate?

A. John. I did.

Mr. Nares. Did you know her then?

A. John. I did, and I am ſure ſhe is the ſame Woman.

Croſs-Examined.

Mr. Willes. How many Years have you ſpun for Mr. Smitheram?

A. John. Two Years and a Half.

Mr. Willes. How often in a Year did you uſe to carry Home your Work?

A. John. I don't know; I ſpin for another Man; ſometimes him, and ſometimes the other.

Mr. Willes. Do you always ſet it down?

A. John. No, but they ſet us down.

Mr. Willes. Is Mr. Smitheram here?

A. Johnſon

A. Johnson. I do not know.

Mr. Willes. Did you ever see his Book?

A. John. Yes, I have: That Day I am sure to be the 16th of January; and he set it down.

Mr. Willes. What Day of the Week do you carry home your Work?

A. John. I don't know that; sometimes one Day, and sometimes another.

Mr. Willes. Can you tell what Day of the Week this 16th of January was?——A. John. I can't say whether it was Tuesday or Wednesday, but it was a snowy Day.

Mr. Willes. Have you ever heard there were Gypsies at Mother Wells's?

A. John. I have several Times.

Mr. Willes. What Sort of a Dress was she in?

A. John. She had a light-coloured Cloak on, and a red one over that, and an old black Hat, and a Thing pinned close to her Face, (it was a Clout or Handkerchief) and an old brown Gown.

Mr. Nares. Had you heard of Gypsies being at Enfield, before she came to your House?

A. John. I had; I had been asked if she had been at my House, and told my Fortune.

Grace Kirby sworn.

Grace Kirby. I live at Enfield.

Mr. Nares. How long have you lived there?

G. Kirby. I have lived a Twelve-month last Christmas, or a little after, about a Week or a Fortnight.

Mr. Nares. Do you know Mary Squires?——G. Kirby. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Nares. Look about the Court, and see if you see her.

G. Kirby. That is she, Sir (pointing to her).

Mr. Nares. Do you remember seeing her there?

G. Kirby. Yes, she came to my Door about a Fortnight before she was taken up at Mrs. Wells's.

Mr. Nares. Are you sure it is so long as a Fortnight?

G. Kirby. Thereabouts; it may be a Day over or under: I believe it was no more than that either way.

Mr. Nares. What did she come to your Door for?

G. Kirby. She asked me if I sold Potatoes? I told her, I had none, nor did not know where they were sold.

Mr. Nares. Did you take much Notice of her?

G. Kirby. I did; so much, that I knew her again when I saw her.

Mr. Nares. Where did you see her again?

G. Kirby. The next Time I saw her was in Newgate.

Mr. Nares. Did you know her then?

G. Kirby. Then I was certain sure she was the same Person.

Mr. Nares. And are you certain sure this is the same Person here?

G. Kirby. I am, Sir.

Mr. Nares. What Reason have you to think it was about the Time you have mentioned?

G. Kirby. Because I had been but a very little Time in my House: I had lived in the same Parish about half a Mile further.

Mr. Nares. What Time did you come to that House?

G. Kirby. It was some Time after Christmas.

Mr. Nares. Were there any body with her?

G. Kirby. No, there were none.

Mr. Nares. How was she dressed?——G. Kirby. I don't know that.

Cross-Examined.

Mr. Davy. How soon after your coming to that House did you see her?

G. Kirby. I can't say to any Time.

Mr. Davy. How soon after Christmas did you come to live there?

G. Kirby. I cannot say; it might be a Week, or it might be a Fortnight.

Mr. Davy. Why do you believe this?

G. Kirby. Because I have recollected my Memory.

Mr. Davy. How soon after did you recollect your Memory?

G. Kirby. The next Day.

Mr. Davy. Was you desired so to do?——G. Kirby. I was considering with myself when it was that I saw that Woman.

Mr. Davy. When did you consider?

G. Kirby. I don't know: I did consider it.

Mr. Davy. How far do you live from Mrs. Wells's House?

G. Kirby. About half a Mile.

Mr. Davy. Are you sure it was eight Days before they were taken up, that you saw her?——G. Kirby. I cannot tell.

Mr. Nares. Tell as near as you can.

G. Kirby. As nigh as I can guess, it was a Fortnight, within a Day over or under.

Mr. Nares. How many Days is a Fortnight?

G. Kirby. There are fourteen.

Mr. Nares. Do you believe what you have said, that about a Fortnight was the Time?——G. Kirby. Yes, Sir.

Wife Bassett sworn.

Mr. Nares. What is your Husband's Name?

W. Bassett. It is John: We live in Green-Street at Enfield, and have lived there twenty-one Years.

Mr. Nares. Do you know Mary Squires?

W. Bassett. I do; I have seen her twice.

Mr. Nares. Look about the Court, and see if you see her.

W. Bassett. That is she.

Mr. Nares. When did you see her before?

W. Bassett. She came to my House, and asked me to let her light a Pipe, and I gave her a Breakfast.

Mr. Nares. When was this?——W. Bassett. It was either the 21st or 22d of January was Twelve-month.

Mr. Nares. What do you recollect the Day by?

W. Bassett. Because I killed a Hog on the Thursday before New Christmas, and that Day a young Woman that lived with me went to Service; and that Day Month I saw the Gypsey.

Mr. Nares. What do you compute your Time from?

W. Bassett. I take the Account Day by Day from the Killing the Hog.

Mr. Nares. What Day of the Week do you reckon it was?

W. Bassett. It was of a Monday, to be sure; that I am very certain of.

Mr. Nares. Had you any Conversation with Mary Squires?

W. Bassett. She came and opened the Door, then came in, and asked me to let her light her Pipe: I gave her a Penny for telling me my Fortune.

Mr. Nares. Did she offer to tell you your Fortune?

W. Bassett. She began to tell me.

Recorder. Are you a married Woman?——W. Bassett. I am; it was a little Foolishness that belongs to Woman-kind.

Mr. Nares. Then she offered to tell you; you did not offer it.

W. Bassett. I did not: She said, if I would cross her Hand with a Penny, she would tell me my Fortune.

Mr. Nares. Upon my Word, that is cheaper than she has done to any body else as we have heard of: Did she tell you your Fortune?

W. Bassett. I had a little of her Nonsense.

Mr. Nares. Was it good or bad?

W. Bassett. I don't know; I cannot say for that.

Mr. Nares. How long was she about telling your Fortune, and lighting her Pipe?——W. Bassett. I can't tell the exact Time: I gave her some Tea, and let her sit down and warm herself.

Mr. Nares. Did you take so much Notice of her as to know her again?

W. Bassett. I did; and this is the Woman.

Mr. Nares. Did you see her after this?

W. Bassett. I saw her in Newgate, and told her the same that I do now; and she said, What signifies that, did I wrong you of any Thing?

Mr. Nares. Did you say to her, what Time you saw her at your House?

W. Bassett. Yes, I did; and she said it was not the right Time: But I said it was, and I stood to that Time.

Mr. Nares. Are you sure it was that Day?

W. Bassett. It was that Day indeed.

Cross-Examined.

Mr. Willes. Is that the only Reason you have to remember it, because you killed a Hog on the Day you mention?

W. Bassett. That is the only Reason.

Mr. Willes. In what Manner was you introduced into her Presence in Newgate, and how was she sitting?

W. Bassett. She was sitting smoaking her Pipe by the Fire-side.

Recorder. Was it a Month before you saw her at your House, that you killed a Hog, or not?——W. Bassett. I killed my Hog on the Thursday before New Christmas, and that Day my Servant went to her Place; and I saw the Gypsey, a Month after I killed my Hog, at my House.

Mr. Willes. Was she alone, or in Company, when you saw her in Newgate?——W. Bassett. There were a great many People with her, her two Daughters, and several People that were carried up to see if they knew her or not.

Recorder. Are you sure she told you it was not right, when you mentioned the Day?——W. Bassett. I am.

James Pratt sworn.

J. Pratt. I live at Cheshunt, about two Miles from Enfield; but I did live at Enfield.

Mr. Nares. What are you?——J. Pratt. I am a Day-labouring Man.

Mr. Nares. Have you seen Mary Squires?——J. Pratt. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Nares. Look about, and see if you can see her.

J. Pratt. Yes, that is she (pointing to her).

Mr. Nares. When was the first Time you saw her?

J. Pratt. The first Time I saw her was in William Smith's Cow-house, on a Thursday. When she came there, she asked me Leave to lie there (I work there as a Day-man); I told her to go to the House, and ask Leave there; she went up to the Door.

Mr. Nares. Did you hear her ask Leave?

J. Pratt. No, I did not hear her, but she lay there.

Mr. Nares. How long did she continue there?

J. Pratt. Three Days; she went away on the Sunday.

Mr. Nares. Did you see her in the Time?

J. Pratt. I did several Times.

Mr. Nares. What Day of the Month did she come there?

J. Pratt. To the best of my Remembrance (I cannot be positive no longer than as to the House I lived in; I went out of it three Days before New Christmas), it was before I went out of the House to go to Cheshunt, where I now live; but I cannot recollect any Day of the Month.

Mr. Nares Are you sure it was before you went to your new House?

J. Pratt. I am sensible it was.

Mr. Nares. Had you ever any Conversation with her?

J. Pratt. I can't say but I had.

Mr. Nares. Were there any other Persons with her?

J. Pratt. There were a Man and two Woman-kind, one a young Girl-like, and the other may be thirty, and better.

Recorder. Were there any Children?——J. Pratt. I can't tell.

Mr. Nares. Can you tell the Time of the Day you had this Conversation?

J. Pratt. It was on a Friday, some time of the Day, but can't tell the Hour: She complained that she lost a Horse, a little Poney, and asked me, whether I saw it? but I had not seen him.

Mr. Nares. Did she any otherwise describe the Horse but by a little one?

J. Pratt. Yes, she did; but I have forgot: I remember she said, he had a Clog on, and that her Name was on the Clog.

Mr. Nares. Did she tell you, upon your Oath, what her Name was?

J. Pratt. Yes, she did; but I did not take much Notice of it.

Mr. Nares. Should you know it when you hear it?

J. Pratt. I believe I should; I think she said her Name was Mary Squires, and that that Name was on the Clog.

Mr. Nares. Had you any other Conversation with her?

J. Pratt. Yes; on the same Day she told me it was her Belief I was the Man that had the Horse.

Mr. Nares. Why did she say so?

J. Pratt. Because I worked in the Yard, and the Horse was missing, and I happened to speak a Word to the Man that was with her: I asked him, what he would give me to help him to his Horse again? so he went and told her directly.

Mr. Nares. Do you think you ſhould know that Man?
J. Pratt. I can't be poſitive.
Mr. Nares. Look about, and ſee if you ſee any body like him.

(He looks round; and as his Eye paſſed over George Squires backwards and forwards, George held down his Head.)

A Juryman. I ſee George hold his Face down, as the Witneſs looks towards him.

Mr. Davy. George, when Witneſſes are ordered to look for you, hold up your Head; I myſelf ſaw you this Time; it does not look well.

J. Pratt. It is hard ſaying, I will not ſwear in that.

Mr. Nares. Had you any other Talk with her?

J. Pratt. Yes, Sir: After ſhe told me about having the Horſe, ſhe ſaid, ſhe had got a very good Friend not far off, and ſhe would go to him, and if ſhe wanted a Guinea or Two, ſhe could have it; and ſhe would go to the Cunning Man, and would have the Horſe, if he was above Ground.

Mr. Nares. How came ſhe to talk of going to a Cunning Man, when ſhe would be looked upon to be a Cunning Woman herſelf?

J. Pratt. I don't know that.

Mr. Nares. Did ſhe ever undertake to tell you your Fortune?

J. Pratt. No, ſhe did not.

Mr. Nares. Upon your Oath, is this the Woman you ſaw at that Time?

J. Pratt. Upon my Oath, that is the Woman, that is the Woman.

Mr. Nares. Did you ever ſee her after that, before you ſaw her in Newgate?

J. Pratt. No: When I ſaw her in Newgate, I was turned up Stairs; the Door was opened; there were ſeveral People at the Door; they bade me look in; I knew her immediately, the very ſame Moment; I ſaid, That is the Woman that I came after.

Croſs-Examined.

Mr. Davy. Was there any other Woman in Newgate but her?

J. Pratt. Not that I ſaw: I ſaid, That is the Woman, and ſo it was, certainly.

Mr. Davy. Were there other People at Enfield with her, when you ſaw her there?---J. Pratt. There were.

Mr. Davy. Were any of them like her in the Face?

J. Pratt. No, none of them.

Mr. Davy. Something like her?---J. Pratt. No.

Mr. Davy. Was you ever in a Court of Juſtice before?

J. Pratt. No.

Mr. Davy. Was you ever upon your Oath before?

J. Pratt. No, Sir.

Mr. Davy. Will you venture to ſay, as you are upon your Oath, that this is the Woman, and no other, and you are not miſtaken?

J. Pratt. Upon my Oath, this is the Woman, I am poſitive in my Conſcience, and I am ſure that was no other Woman; this is the Woman I ſaw at that bleſſed Time.

Mr. Davy. Did you ever ſee a Woman like her in your Life?

J. Pratt. No, never in my Days.

Mr. Davy. How came ſhe to tell you her Name was upon the Clog?

J. Pratt. Becauſe ſhe had loſt the Horſe; and ſhe deſired me, if I ſhould ſee the Horſe, or find the Clog, to let her know; and told me, her name was Mary Squires, and that it was upon the Clog.

Mr. Davy. Do you know how large the Clog was?

J. Pratt. No, I never ſaw it.

Mr. Davy. Do you remember ſhe told you the Name was Mary Squires?

J. Pratt. I am certain of it.

Mr. Davy. Was it not Sarah?---J. Pratt. I am ſure it was Mary Squires.

Lydia Farroway ſworn.

Mr. Nares. Where do you live?

L. Farroway. I live at Enfield-Waſh, with Mr. Howard.

Mr. Nares. How long have you lived there?

L. Far. I came there on the 1ſt of Auguſt was Twelve-month, and lived with them a Year and a Quarter, and upwards.

Mr. Nares. Was you there on Chriſtmas was Twelve-month?

L. Far. I was.

Mr. Nares. Tell us, as near as you can, when you firſt ſaw the Gypſey.

L. Far. I ſaw her more than once or twice.

Mr. Nares. Tell us the firſt Time.

L. Far. I will, as near as I can; but I muſt begin with another Time, not the firſt: As I was going with my young Maſter to School about the latter Part of January was Twelve-month, I ſaw her at a Gentleman's Houſe, talking to the Maid; to ſay to the Day of the Month, I cannot.

Mr. Nares. Do you know when the Gypſey-Woman was taken up?

L. Far. That was on a Thurſday, to the beſt of my Remembrance; and the Tueſday was Se'nnight before I ſaw her.

Mr. Nares. Name the Gentleman's Name that belongs to that Houſe.

L. Far. It was Mr. Mackhouſe's, a Quaker, juſt on this Side the Bell.

Mr. Nares. Did you ſee her before that?

L. Far. I ſaw her once or twice before; but how long before, I can't ſay.

Mr. Nares, Are you poſitive you ſaw her once or twice before?

L. Far. Upon my Oath, I am poſitive I ſaw her once or twice before.

Mr. Nares. Look about the Court; and tell me if you ſee her any where here.

L. Far. That is the Woman, I am poſitive to her (pointing to her).

Mr. Nares. Did you ſee her after that?

L. Far. I did; I ſaw her get into the Cart when ſhe was carried away, and I ſaw her after that in Newgate.

Mr. Nares. Did you think that was the ſame Woman, when you ſaw her get into the Cart?

L. Far. I did; ſhe was the firſt Woman that got into the Cart.

Mr. Nares. Are you ſure the Time you mention you ſaw her talking to a Maid-ſervant, was in January?—L. Far. It was, I am ſure.

Mr. Nares. Are you ſure that Woman is the ſame which you ſaw in the Cart?—L. Far. I am ſure of it.

Mr. Nares. Was that the ſame Perſon which you ſaw in Newgate?

L. Far. It was; and this is the Woman ſitting here.

Mr. Nares. How came you to fix upon the Tueſday was Se'nnight before ſhe was taken up?

L. Far. Becauſe I had been making ſome Pyes againſt my young Maſter's Birth-day, which was the 29th of January; and we made them before the Time, that they might be cold, to be heated again.

Mr. Nares. Did they come to your Maſter's Pump at all?

L. Far. One of the Daughters did; I ſaw her there two or three Times.

Mr. Nares. About what Time?

L. Far. About the Time I ſaw her Mother.

Mr. Nares. Are you the Perſon that went and told your Miſtreſs, that the Gypſey-Girl was in the Yard?

L. Far. I am, Sir; and my Miſtreſs went to the Parlour-Window to ſee her.

Mr. Nares. What Day of the Month was this?

L. Far. I can't tell that, nor I can't tell the Week.

Croſs Examined.

Mr. Willes. Are you ſure your young Maſter's Birth-day is on the 29th of January?—L. Far. I am ſure it is.

Mr. Willes. What Pyes were you making?---L. Far. Mince-pyes.

Mr. Willes. Why did you make them ſo long before-hand?

L. Far. I made them ſo long before-hand, that we might warm them by the Fire on his Birth-day?

Mr. Nares. Had you ever ſeen Mary Squires in any body's Shop at any Time?---L. Far. I can't ſay I had.

Mr. Willes. When was the firſt Time you ſaw her?

L. Far. To ſay the firſt Time, I can't; but the Time I can be poſitive of, was the 23d of January.

Mr. Willes. Is the Birth-day the 29th by Old Stile or New?

L. Far. It was on a Monday, and by the New Stile.

Mr. Willes. Did you ſee the Gypſey firſt, or her Daughter come for Water firſt?

L. Far. To the beſt of my Memory, I ſaw the Gypſey firſt.

Mr. Willes. Which of her Daughters was it that came to the Pump?

L. Far. I can't ſay which.

Mr. Nares. You ſay you ſaw the Gypſey before you ſaw the Daughter, but can't fix upon that Time?---L. Far. No, I can't indeed.

Margaret Richardſon ſworn.

Mr. Nares. Where do you live?---M. Rich. I live in Green-Street now, but did live in Turkey-Street, Enfield.

Mr. Nares. How long have you lived in Green-Street?

M. Rich. Ever ſince laſt Michaelmas; I lived in the other thirteen Years.

Mr. Nares. Do you know Mary Squires?

M. Rich. I know this Woman (pointing to Mary Squires).

Mr. Nares. Where did you ſee her?

M. Rich. I ſaw her at Mrs. Waterhouſe's in Turkey-Street, in the New Chriſtmas Week, as near as I can gueſs.

Mr. Nares. What is her Buſineſs?

M. Rich. She ſells Butter, Cheeſe, Flour, and all Manner of Things for poor Folks.

Mr. Nares. What did ſhe go to buy there?

M. Rich. I can't ſay nothing to what ſhe came to buy; ſhe was ſmoaking a Pipe when I went in there.

Mr. Nares. Are you ſure this is the ſame Woman?

M. Rich. I am ſenſible and certain ſure this is the ſame Woman.

Mr. Nares. Was you long in that Shop?

M. Rich. I ſat down there, I believe, a Quarter of an Hour; and I took particular Notice of her, becauſe I never ſaw the like before, and I was ſurprized.

Mr. Nares. Was you in the ſame Room with her?

M. Rich. The Shop and Houſe is all one Room; the Fire-place is there; I left her there when I went away.

Mr. Nares. Did you ever ſee her at any other Time?

M. Rich. I ſaw her come by my Door in Turkey-Street on Old Chriſtmas-Day: My Dog had like to have fell upon her; but my Huſband was in the Yard, and he prevented him.

Mr. Nares. Are you ſure that was the ſame Woman you ſaw in the Shop?—M. Rich. I am poſitive it was.

Mr. Nares. Are you ſure this was on Old Chriſtmas-Day?

M. Rich. I am.

Mr. Nares. Did your Huſband work on Old Chriſtmas-Day?

M. Rich. No; as he played the New Chriſtmas-Day, he was reſolved to make Holiday on that; ſo he was at Home.

Mr. Nares. Did you ever ſee her after?

M. Rich. Not till ſhe was out of Wells's Houſe, and put into the Cart; then I ſhook Hands with Mother Wells, and told her ſhe had done for herſelf: My Huſband was the Man that drove the Cart: The Gypſey was the firſt that got into it, and Wells the next, and Virtue Hall the next. I ſaw them all go off.

Mr. Nares. Did you ever ſee her in Cuſtody?

M. Rich. No, I did not.

Croſs-Examined.

Mr. Willes. So you told Mother Wells ſhe had done for herſelf; what was her Reply?

M. Rich. She ſaid, ſhe ſhould return again.

Mr. Willes. Then ſhe and you are very good Friends?

M. Rich. No.

Mr. Willes. How came you to inſult her?

M. Rich. I never had a Quarrel with her, upon my Oath.

Mr. Willes. Then how came you to ſay ſo?

M. Richardſon. Becauſe ſhe had been in a great many Broils and Troubles, and Nobody thought ſhe would have got out of them.

Mr. Willes. Do you know which is Old Chriſtmas-Day, and which is New Chriſtmas-Day?

M. Rich. You muſt tell me, my Memory cannot be ſo good.

Mr. Willes. Which comes firſt?

M. Rich. Why, the New Chriſtmas-Day.

Mr. Willes. How many Days Difference?

M. Rich. Some call it nine, but there may be more.

Mr. Willes. How old are you, good Woman?

M. Rich. I don't know juſtly.

Mr. Willes. What Day of the Week was Old Chriſtmas-Day?

M. Rich. It was of a Tueſday or Wedneſday, I can't remember which.

Mr. Willes. Is Chriſtmas-Day Holy Thurſday or Good Friday?

M. Rich. I can't reſolve no ſuch Thing; I am no Scholar; I can't pretend to know ſuch Things.

Mr. Willes. What Month is Chriſtmas-Day in?

M. Rich. I can't ſay that neither, becauſe you put me to a Stop.

Mr. Willes. Is it the 25th of February?

M. Rich. I don't know juſtly, indeed.

Mr. Nares. You put the poor old Woman in a Hurry.

Recorder. Don't be affrighted: Can you tell what Month Chriſtmas is in?

M. Rich. I cannot.

Recorder. In what Seaſon of the Year is it?

M. Rich. To be ſure I can tell that; it is in Winter.

Recorder. Don't be terrified; you are come here to tell the whole Truth, and nothing but the Truth, and not to tell a particular Story, but to anſwer all ſuch Queſtions that the Court ſhall think proper to aſk you.

Mr. Willes. Pray, why do you keep Chriſtmas Holidays?——No Anſwer.

George Clements ſworn.

Mr. Nares. Where do you live?

George Clements. I live at Enfield Highway with Mr. Hamilton; I entered Yeſterday after I went Home.

Mr. Nares. Did you live with Mr. Star any Time?

G. Clements. Yes, Sir; I came away laſt Michaelmas; he lives down the Marſh-Lane by Mrs. Wells's.

Mr. Nares. How long did you live with him?

G. Clements. About a Year and a Quarter.

Mr. Nares. Do you know Mary Squires?

G. Clements. I do; that is the Woman that ſits there in a red Cloak.

Mr. Nares. Are you very ſure of it?——G. Clements. I am ſure.

Mr. Nares. Do you know Mrs. Wells?——G. Clements. I do; my Maſter lives but about a hundred Yards from her Houſe.

Mr. Nares. Do you remember the Time ſhe was taken up?

G. Clements. I do.

Mr. Nares. How long had you ſeen Mary Squires, before Mrs. Wells was taken up?

G. Clements. I had ſeen her about a Fortnight before that.

Mr. Nares. Where did you ſee her?——G. Clements. She came into my Maſter's Houſe, and wanted to tell my Miſtreſs her Fortune.

Mr. Nares. Did ſhe come in of her own Accord?

G. Clements. She opened the Door, and came in, as I was ſitting at Dinner. My Miſtreſs would not let her tell her Fortune; ſhe was afraid of her, and gave her a Bit of black Pudding to get rid of her. She aſked my Miſtreſs to let her have a Pound of pickled Pork.

Mr. Nares. Did ſhe want any thing elſe?

G. Clements. I don't remember any thing elſe.

Mr. Nares. How long did ſhe ſtay in the Kitchen?

G. Clements. I can't tell how long.

Mr. Nares. Did you ſee her after this?

G Clements. I did, about two or three Days after, as ſhe was going up into the Walk to Turkey-Street; it was a very cold Day.

Mr. Nares. Was any body with her?——G. Clements. No, Nobody.

Mr. Nares. What do you call that Walk?

G. Clements. There is no Name to it, as I know of. I ſaid to her, It is a very cold Day. I remembered that was the Woman I had ſeen at my Miſtreſs's.

Mr. Nares. Did you ever ſee her afterwards?——G. Clements. No, only when I ſaw her in Newgate, and then ſhe knowed me.

Mr. Nares. How do you know that?

G. Clements. I aſked her whether ſhe knew me? She ſaid, ſhe did.

Mr. Nares. Did you aſk her that of your own Accord?

G. Clements. I did; and ſhe ſaid to me, I aſked your Miſtreſs to let me have a Pound of pickled Pork, and what Harm did I do you if I was there?

Mr. Nares. Was you before the Grand Jury?

G. Clements. No, I was not.

Croſs-Examined.

Mr. Willes. Why do you know it was a Fortnight before they were taken up?——G. Clements. She came to our Houſe on a Thurſday: My Maſter was gone to Hertford to fetch a Load of Peaſe, and he carried them to London on the Friday.

Mr. Willes. What Day of the Month?

G. Clements. I can't tell the Day of the Month. This Thurſday Fortnight before ſhe was taken up, then I was ſpreading Dung in the Marſh.

Mr. Willes. Do you ever ſlide on the Ice?

G. Clements. No, I never could ſlide in my Life.

Mr. Willes. Have you ſeen Boys ſlide on the Ice?—G. Clements. I have.

Mr. Willes. Do you remember a Pond near Mrs. Wells's Houſe?

G. Clements. Yes, I uſed to water my Horſes there.

Mr. Willes. Morning and Night?——G. Clements. Yes.

Mr. Willes. Do you know the Window that they ſuppoſe Canning made her Eſcape from?——G. Clements. I do.

Mr. Willes. Could you, by looking out of that Window, ſee that Pond?

G. Clements. I could, very plainly.

Mr. Willes. How many Yards might it be from the Window?

G. Clements. It may be about eight Yards.

Mr. Willes. Do you recollect whether there was froſty Weather that January?

G. Clements. Yes, there was.

Mr. Willes. Was that Pond froze over then?

G. Clements. It was; we were forced to break the Ice for the Horſes to drink.

Mr. Willes. Have you ever ſeen the Boys ſlide on the Ice on that Pond?

G. Clements. I have.

Mr. Willes. How many have you ſeen there ſliding together?

G. Clements. Two or three at a Time.

Mr. Willes. What Day of the Year is New Chriſtmas Day of?

G. Clements. I can't ſay that.

Mr. Willes. What Month is it in?——G. Clements. December.

Mr. Willes. The Beginning or latter End?——G. Clements. The 25th.

Mr. Willes. What Day is Old Chriſtmas-Day of?

G. Clements. It is eleven Days after.

Mr. Nares. Are you ſure it was on the Thurſday Fortnight before Wells was taken up, that you ſaw Mary Squires?

G. Clements. I am ſure it was; and that ſame Day my Maſter went to Hertford.

Mr. Willes. Do you know William Headland?——G. Clements. I do.

Mr. Willes. Is he a ſober Youth, or not?

G. Clements. I know no Harm of the Boy.

Mr. Willes. Whether, amongſt the Boys of the ſame Age, is his Character a good or bad one? If he has a good Character, upon your Oath ſay ſo; if not, upon your Oath ſay it.

G. Clements. I am ſure I never heard any body give him a bad Character.

Hannah Fenſham ſworn.

Mr. Williams. Where do you live?

H. Fenſham. I live at Enfield.

Mr. Wil. Are you a married Woman?

H. Fenſham. I am; my Huſband's Name is John Fenſham; he is a Gardener.

Mr. Wil. How long have you lived at Enfield?

H. Fenſham. Fifteen or ſixteen Years.

Mr. Wil. Look at that old Woman, take a full View of her.

H. Fenſham. I know her; I have ſeen her before.

Mr. Wil. When?——H. Fenſham. On the 16th of January 1753, I mean after New Chriſtmas-Day, I ſaw her in Trotts-Walk, on the Side of Madam Crow's Garden, in Enfield, pretty near the Highway.

Mr. Wil. What was ſhe doing?

H. Fenſham. I met her in the Walk.

Mr. Wil. What Time of the Day?

H. Fenſham. In the fore Part of the Day.

Mr. Wil. What Day of the Week?

F. Fenſham. I can't recollect what Day of the Week.

Mr. Wil. Have you ever ſeen her ſince the 16th?

H. Fenſham. I have ſeveral Times ſeen her paſs and repaſs.

Mr. Wil. What was her Buſineſs?

H. Fenſham. I don't know that, except it was going to the Chandler's Shop.

Mr. Wil. Do you know the Time ſhe was taken up?

H. Fenſham I was not there then.

Mr. Wil. Did you ſee her often between the 16th of January and 1ſt of February?——H. Fenſham. I did divers Times.

Mr. Wil. Did you ſee her after ſhe was taken up?

H. Fenſham. I did in Newgate, and I recollected her then.

Mr. Wil. Look at her again; are you certain this is the ſame Perſon?

H. Fenſham. Yes, Sir, I am certain of that.

Mr. Wil. What may be your Reaſon for recollecting the 16th of January?

H. Fenſham. There was a Snow on the 15th at Night, and the 16th it was wet; and walking along, I had like to have fell, as my Pattens were on: She ſtopped and looked at me, and I at her: When I came Home, my Neighbours ſaid, This Snow is come in the right Seaſon, Yeſterday was the 15th; then I ſaid, This muſt be the 16th; and not only that, but I went to the Almanack, and looked that very Day.

Mr. Wil. Did ſhe ſpeak to you?

H. Fenſham. No, nor I to her; but her Perſon is ſo particular, that I can ſwear ſhe is the ſame.

Mr. Wil. What did ſhe appear to be?

H. Fenſham. A Gypſey, which I had heard of before: I was aſked, if I had ſeen the Gypſey, becauſe ſhe went up and down telling Fortunes.

Mr. Wil. Was you aſked before or after this?

H. Fenſham. It was two or three Days after, and then I knew her.

Croſs-Examined.

Mr. Willes. What is the Reaſon you know it to be the 16th?

H. Fenſham. Becauſe it was a great Snow on the 15th at Night.

Recorder. Did you ſee any Company with her at any Time?

H. Fenſham. No, I did not.

Mr. Willes. Did you look directly to the Almanack?

H. Fenſham. No, Sir, not till the 16th at Night.

Mr. Willes. Are you very well ſkilled in Almanacks?

H. Fenſham. Why not? I can read and write a little.

Mr. Willes. Do you know what Day of the Week it is by the Almanack?

H. Fenſham. I can, I think ſo; my Head is good enough for that.

Mr. Willes. Look in this Almanack, and tell me what Day of the Week it is?

H. Fenſham. (She takes it in her Hand, which was a common Sheet Almanack, folded up into a Book.) I can't ſee by this, it is ſo ſmall.

Mr. Willes. Look at it again, and take your Time.

H. Fenſham. I cannot ſee without my Spectacles (ſhe puts them on); you ſhall not fool me ſo.

Mr. Willes. Tell me by this the Day of the Week for the 14th of December.

H. Fenſham. This is not ſuch an Almanack as I look in; I look in a Sheet Almanack; I cannot tell by this.

Mr. Willes. Give it me again, if you cannot tell. All the Reaſon you have to fix it is, that the Snow fell on that Day upon which you refer to your Almanack; and now you have ſhewn your Skill in Almanacks.

Mr.

Mr. Williams. How long was it after New Chriſtmas? Was it a Fortnight, or three Weeks, or a Month?

H. Fenſham. It was not much above a Fortnight after.

Mr. Will. Do you know which is Sunday in the Almanack? (She takes it again.)

Mr. Will. Look in the Month of January. (She tells down from the 1ſt to the 7th Day, and ſaid that was Sunday, which happened to be Tueſday.)

Elizabeth Sherrard ſworn.

Mr. Williams. Where do you live?

E. Sherrard. At Ponder's-End; that is about a Mile and Half from Enfield. I keep a Room, and pay my Rent myſelf.

Mr. Will. Do you remember ſeeing the Gypſey about Enfield?

E. Sher. I do; I ſaw her Three Days running before New Chriſtmas, Thurſday, Friday, and Saturday.

Mr. Will. Look about, and ſee if you ſee her here. (She could not ſee her; ſhe went down and looked about, and up again twice; the laſt Time ſhe pointed to her.)

E. Sher. Why, this is the Woman.

Mr. Will. What Thurſday, Friday, and Saturday do you mean?

E. Sher. I mean immediately before New Chriſtmas.

Mr. Will. Where did you ſee her?

E. Sher. In Mother Wells's Houſe. I went there, and went into her Parlour, and when I came out again, I ſaw the Gypſey ſtand at the Kitchen Door. I turned back again, and aſked Mrs. Wells, who ſhe had got in her Houſe? She ſaid, Lodgers. On the Friday I went into the Marſh-Lane, and ſaw her ſtanding at the Window; and on Saturday I went down to Cheſhunt, and ſhe was ſtanding then at the Door.

Mr. Will. How did you come to go to Mrs. Wells's?

E. Sher. She aſked me to come in, that is, my Neighbour Wills did; ſhe wanted to ſee me, becauſe I had not been well.

Mr. Will. Had you any Acquaintance with her?

E. Sher. No, nor never went near her Houſe.

Mr. Will. Have you ever ſeen the Gypſey ſince that Time, before To-day?

E. Sher. No, Sir, I never ſaw her but them Times, and this Time.

Mr. Will. Did you ſee any body there that belonged to her?

E. Sher. There were two young Wenches in the Parlour, and a young Man in the Kitchen; but whether they were her Son and two Daughters, I cannot tell.

Mr. Will. Had you any Converſation with her?

E. Sher. No, I never changed a Word with her; I don't like to have to do with them, I don't like them ſo well.

Croſs-Examined.

Mr. Davy. Look at that Man (meaning George Squires): Is that the Man?——E. Sher. I did not ſee his Face.

Mr. Davy. Did you ſee the two young Women's Faces?

E. Sher. I did; but whether I know them or not, I don't know; for they have changed their Habits, to be ſure; that is one of them (pointing to Mary the Daughter).

Mr. Davy. Lucy, ſhew your Face.

E. Sher. Yes, this is the other; I think I can ſwear to them.

Mr. Davy. Do you ſwear they are the ſame?

E. Sher. They are very much like them.

Mr. Davy. You went down twice to look at the old Woman; did you ſee her Face the firſt Time?

E. Sher. Yes, I did, but did not mind her till afterwards.

Mr. Davy. I hope you mind what you ſay; you know the Conſequence of Perjury: You are before God, and a Court of Juſtice; therefore attend to me: Did you ſee that old Woman upon your going down the firſt Time from off the Place you now ſtand?

E. Sher. I did not know her, becauſe ſhe is clean; ſhe is not ſo naſty and dirty as ſhe was before.

Mr. Davy. Then the ſecond Time you did recollect her: You ſay ſhe is the ſame Woman?

E. Sher. Yes, I do.

Mr. Davy. Did you ſee her Face the firſt Time going down?

E. Sher. No, I did not ſee her Face, becauſe I did not take ſo much Notice.

Mr. Davy. Did not you ſee her Face, or did not you know her Face?

E. Sher. I did ſee her Face; but being clean, ſhe is quite altered.

Mr. Davy. The Man that ſwore you ſaid, you were to ſwear to the whole Truth, and nothing but the Truth: You have one Foot in the Grave, and the other out, be careful what you ſay: Was ſhe cleaner the firſt Time than ſhe was the ſecond?

E. Sher. She is all the ſame, but I did not take ſo much Notice; and being cleaner, ſhe is altered.

Mr. Davy. Do you ſwear to her by her Complexion, or Features?

E. Sher. By her Complexion and Features both.

Mr. Davy. Did you ever ſee ſuch another Woman in your Life?

E. Sher. No, I never did.

Mr. Davy. What Day of the Month is New Chriſtmas-Day?

E. Sher. I cannot tell indeed, becauſe I can neither write nor read.

Mr. Davy. What Month is it in?---E. Sher. I cannot tell.

Mr. Davy. Was it in June, or July?---E. Sher. I cannot tell.

Mr. Davy. Was it in June?---E. Sher. I cannot tell.

Mr. Davy. Was it in April?---E. Sher. No, no, it was not in April.

Mr. Davy. What Month then?

E. Sher. It might be in June, for whatever I know: I know that is the Woman, to be ſure.

Alderman Scott. Was it in Winter, or in Summer?

E. Sher. It was in Winter.

Mr. Davy. Is New Chriſtmas before Old Chriſtmas, or after?

E. Sher. Nay, New Chriſtmas is before Old Chriſtmas, I am ſure.

Mr. Davy. Did you keep New Chriſtmas, where you live? do you go to Church?

E. Sher. Yes, I know it by going to Church, and every thing.

Mr. Davy. Did you go to Church on Old Chriſtmas-Day?

E. Sher. Yes.

Recorder. What Day of the Week was New Chriſtmas-Day?

E. Sher. It was on the Tueſday, was it not? It was Monday or Tueſday howſoever.

Mr. Davy. Do you go to Church every Sunday?

E. Sher. I very ſeldom miſs, when it is fair Weather.

Mr. Davy. Did you go to Church the Sunday before New Chriſtmas-Day?

E. Sher. I did on Chriſtmas-Day, and the Sunday before.

Mr. Davy. How many Days were there between?

E. Sher. You can make it but two Days, be it how it will.

Mr. Davy. Are you ſure?

E. Sher. It was about three Days; it was no more, nor could be any more.

Mr. Davy. How came you to know it was before New Chriſtmas?

E. Sher. Why, I'll tell you how I came to know: Mrs. Wells bid me come, and ſaid ſhe would give me ſomething for a Chriſtmas-Box: When I came there, ſhe aſked me to come in; I did, but did not ſtay but a very little Time: When I came to the Parlour Door, I ſaw the Old Gentlewoman ſtanding at the Kitchen Door.

Mr. Davy. What did ſhe give you for a Chriſtmas-Box?

E. Sher. She did not give me no great Matter.

Mr. Davy. There is no Harm in ſaying what it was.

E. Sher. It was a ſmall Matter; I had but a Penny.

Mr. Davy. Then ſhe gave you a Penny for your Chriſtmas-Box?

E. Sher. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Davy. Had you ever a Chriſtmas-Box of her before?

E. Sher. No.

Mr. Davy. Did ſhe give it you before or after Chriſtmas-Day?

E. Sher. It was three Days before.

Mr. Davy. Did any body elſe give you a Chriſtmas-Box?

E. Sher. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Davy. Had you ever a Farthing given you before Chriſtmas-Day?

E. Sher. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Davy. From whom? tell me that.

E. Sher. At Mr. Picket's, and all the People that are able; they always give me ſomething at Chriſtmas, and to all their poor Neighbours.

Mr. Davy. What Buſineſs are you?

E. Sher. I work for my Living, as other People do.

Mr. Davy. Is it uſual to give before Chriſtmas or after?

E. Sher. We always go before Chriſtmas.

Mr. Davy. Do all give before Chriſtmas?

E. Sher. No, ſome give after Chriſtmas.

Mr. Davy. Who are they?

E. Sher. The Gentlemen at Buſhy-Hill do.

Mr. Davy. Where do the People live that give before Chriſtmas?

E. Sher. All the People at Enfield do.

Mr. Williams. Then you have Chriſtmas-Boxes given you before Chriſtmas? Then, I believe, you know pretty well when Chriſtmas comes.

E. Sher. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Will. What, you are a poor Woman? Thoſe People give it you before Chriſtmas, in order to ſpend at Chriſtmas?

E. Sher. Yes, Sir; only the Quakers, at Buſhy-Hill, give it after Chriſtmas.

Mr. Will. When Chriſtmas comes, you know it, don't you?

E. Sher. Yes, I do, Sir.

Recorder. Do you know New-year's Day?——E. Sher. I do.

Recorder. When does that happen?

E. Sher. That is the Week after Chriſtmas-Day.

Recorder. How many Days are there after New Chriſtmas-Day to New-year's Day?——E. Sher. A Week.

Recorder. Was you ever in the Workſhop at Mrs. Wells's?

E. Sher. No, never in my Life; I never heard of it before.

Mr. Will. Did you never hear there was ſuch a Place as the Workſhop at Mrs. Wells's?——E. Sher. No, indeed I did not.

Mr. Nares. On Saturday Night, Mr. Moreton received a Letter in Court, giving an Account that there was one Mrs. Edwards, who could give ſome Light into this Affair: Upon that he deſired ſhe might be ſubpœna'd. She was not in our original Briefs, and, I declare, I have ſtuck to that very ſtrictly, not to admit any Witneſſes that are not in the Brief. We are totally in the Judgment of the Court, whether ſhe ſhall be called or not. The Letter is anonymous.

Mr. Davy. The Gentlemen have been ſo candid as to ſhew me this Letter: I have not, to this Moment, attempted to oppoſe any thing, or the asking any Queſtions. What has been done in this Caſe, I have not done it. I have been in the Search of Truth: But after your Lordſhip has tied us down very ſtrictly, without any Poſſibility of Releaſe, I hope the Rule extends general without Exceptance. I ſubmit it as an Objection, with regard to the general Rule of Practice; but, I imagine, the Court will not think it proper, conſidering what has been done.

Mr. Nares. Mr. Davy mentions he has not objected to any Evidence; I don't know any Evidence that has been called he could object to, on our Side. We have not objected, or ſtopped them, in any Inſtance: But here is a poor Girl on her Trial; I would ſubmit it, how far the Court thinks this Agreement binds.

Baron Legge. I will tell you my Opinion as to this Matter: I thought it a right Propoſal, when made, on both Sides, that you ſhould go on, according to your Briefs, ſtated at that Time, in regard to the Trial; and as it has come to an unuſual Length, there was an abſolute Neceſſity for ſuch an Agreement, and to depart from it is an unprecedented Thing; therefore we muſt ward againſt all the Miſchiefs that can ariſe from it; the worſt that can ariſe is a growing Evidence upon an anonymous Letter; there is no Foundation on either Side for it, and we are not to admit of it.

Mr. Juſt. Clive. I am entirely of the ſame Opinion with my Brother: Upon this Evidence it will be left with the Jury, upon which Side the Evidence is moſt concluſive.

Mr. Nares. It was my Duty to mention it, as Mr. Moreton deſired ſhe might be ſubpœna'd; therefore I hope the Court will excuſe me. We will call Mr. Salt to prove the Examination of Elizabeth Canning before Juſtice Fielding.

Mr. Davy. Mr. Salt cannot explain away a written Evidence taken before a Magiſtrate: I object to his Evidence.

Mr. Nares. Then we will call to the Confeſſion of Mother Wells.

Mr. Davy. My Lord, I object to that; She is a very proper Evidence herſelf, ſhe has been branded in the Hand; if they will produce her, ſhe is within a few Yards of the Court.

Mr. Nares. This Girl is indicted for what ſhe gave in Evidence againſt Suſannah Wells and Mary Squires; ſhe is now called upon for a Perjury in ſwearing upon that particular Trial. Now theſe two Perſons were convicted; therefore, I take it for granted, we are at Liberty to give in a Circumſtance to prove what ſhe ſaid, in Evidence on the Indictment. All that Wells had ſaid at that Time was Evidence againſt Wells, and all that Squires had ſaid was Evidence againſt herſelf. We are now come to eſtabliſh her Evidence, ſtanding at the Time ſhe was examined; and, if we can prove from their own Declarations that Canning and Squires were there, we have a proper Right to call in ſuch Evidence, in order to corroborate that Girl's Teſtimony; for it is that Teſtimony that ſhe gave upon the Trial that is to be admitted.

Mr. Davy I will beg leave, in order to give Light to this Objection, to put the Caſe more familiarly: Suppoſe a Perſon had ſworn on a particular Day that I was at York, and that I ſaid I was at York; now my ſaying I was at York, is no Reaſon at all for their ſwearing I was there. I can only give them Authority to ſay, I ſaid I was at York; but I am the proper Perſon to be examined to the real Fact. Mrs. Wells is here to ſwear whether ſhe was or was not in her Houſe, and ſhe is a competent Witneſs to that Fact.

Mr. Juſt. Clive. This is an Indictment for Perjury, for a Teſtimony ſhe gave at a Trial betwixt the Crown and the two Priſoners Squires and Wells; and in Strictneſs the Teſtimony, to wit, Suſannah Wells's, would not in the Courſe of the Trial have affected Squires, or Squires's have affected Suſannah Wells; but this is an Indictment for Perjury, in the Teſtimony that this Girl Canning gave of them both; therefore, I think, either are proper Witneſſes of what ſhe ſaid.

Baron Legge. To be ſure, what they ſaid is Evidence againſt the Perſon that did ſay it: When you have made uſe of thoſe which were not produced in Evidence at the Time, that could not have been Evidence againſt the Acceſſary and not the Principal; how will you produce that?

Mr. Nares. In the firſt Place, their not being called as Witneſſes can be no Objection in not calling them now, becauſe it has been done ſeveral Times: I do not call every Witneſs in my Brief; if I have fifty in my Brief, and fifty ſwear to the Fact, I would call them: When that Perſon which is a Witneſs is called upon, ſhould not ſhe have the Benefit of every Circumſtance that will confirm the Teſtimony? Or, will the Court exclude her, becauſe the Perſons concerned in the Proſecution did not think proper to call the other Witneſſes that they might have called?

Baron Legge. The Indictment was laid jointly againſt Mary Squires and Suſannah Wells; was it not, Mr. Ford?

Mr. Ford, Clerk of the Arraigns. They were both tried together, and the Indictment on the ſame Piece of Parchment.

Mr. Davy. This only ſets forth the Indictment of Mary Squires, not a Word of Suſannah Wells; ſhe is not mentioned in it.

Baron Legge. Would you produce that which originally had been Evidence againſt Squires?

Mr. Nares. The ſame Witneſſes were examined on the whole Trial all through, and they were found both guilty at the ſame Time, and the Jury were charged with both at the ſame Time; the Aſſignment of the Perjury is, that ſhe was in Suſannah Wells's Houſe, and robbed in her Houſe.

Baron Legge. Then the Evidence of Suſannah Wells is Evidence to that Account.

Mr. Juſt. Clive. This is an Indictment againſt Principal and Acceſſary, whereby they are complicated in the ſame Indictment: it is againſt Squires as Principal, and Wells as Acceſſary after the Fact: So far is extremely clear, that ſhe never could have been convicted as Acceſſary, unleſs there had been a Robbery; and ſhe knowing of that Robbery, therefore ſhe was intereſted at this Trial, as it was one and the ſame Indictment, and their Caſe ſubmitted to the Conſideration of the ſame Jury. I think, that if Suſannah Wells has given in any Teſtimony that there was a Robbery, conſidering the Nature of the Trial, as it comes before the Jury, it is the ſame as if Squires had declared it herſelf.

John Ward ſworn.

J. Ward. I have known Suſannah Wells, I believe, twenty Years.

Mr. Williams. When did you ſee her lately?

J. Ward. I ſeeing in a News-paper an Account of her being taken up, and put into Clerkenwell Bridewell, and living in Southwark, the firſt Time I came croſs the Water, I thought I would go and ſee her. (I had had a Notion that ſhe was dead, for I had not ſeen her for above twelve Years.) I went to ſee her in Bridewell. The firſt Word ſhe ſaid to me was, Who thought of ſeeing you here? My Reply was, by ſeeing your Name in the News-papers.

Mr. Williams. How long was this after ſhe was taken up?

J. Ward. It was juſt after ſhe was taken up; I cannot ſay to the Day of the Month; it was before the Trial of Squires and her. I aſked her, how ſhe came to keep the Girl there a Fortnight?

Mr. Williams. What did you mean by there?

J. Ward. I underſtood by the Paper, the Girl was kept at her Houſe.

Mr. Williams. What was her Anſwer?

J. Ward. She ſaid, ſhe was there twenty-eight Days. I aſked her, what Room ſhe kept her in? She ſaid, You know the Room very well.

Alderman Dickinſon. Had you been acquainted with her, and did you know the Rooms in her Houſe?

J. Ward. I had been acquainted there twelve or thirteen Years ago, (but not ſince I have been in Buſineſs for myſelf) and have been all over the Houſe.

Mr. Williams. Did you underſtand what Room ſhe meant?

J. Ward. No, Sir.

Mr. Williams. Did you ſee her after this?

J. Ward. I did, on the Sunday following; then I met her in the Bridewell-Yard. We never drank together the firſt or ſecond Time. I aſked her, how ſhe thought to get off of this Affair? She ſaid, ſhe muſt take her Trial.

Baron Legge. How came you to go a ſecond Time?

J. Ward Becauſe my Wife had a mind to ſee her: We both lived at Waltham-Abbey before I married. Mr. Jones went with me the firſt Time.

Mr. Williams. Where do you live now?

J. Ward. I live in Maid-Lane, St. Mary Overy's Pariſh, Surrey. I am a Breeches-maker.

Mr. Williams. Are you a Houſe-keeper?

J. Ward. Yes, Sir; I have lived there near the Spot thirteen Years, and have carried on Buſineſs fourteen Years.

Baron Legge. So you aſked her, how ſhe kept the Girl a Fortnight there, without knowing in what Room?---J. Ward. Yes, my Lord.

Baron Legge. Did ſhe form her Anſwer out of the News-paper?

J. Ward. Not as I know of.

Croſs-Examined.

Mr. Davy. What Buſineſs carried you there?

J. Ward. By ſeeing her Name in the Paper, I went to ſee if it was the ſame Woman, out of Curioſity, not having ſeen her above twelve Years.

Mr. Davy. How far did you live from Enfield-Waſh?

J. Ward. I lived at Waltham-Abbey.

Mr. Davy. Had you had a great Deſire to know whether ſhe had been dead or alive, you might have gone to Enfield-Waſh, and have known that.

J. Ward. I wiſh I had never gone to have ſeen her.

Mr. Davy. Had you any other Buſineſs there?

J. Ward. No, none at all; only I had ſome at Saffron-Hill, with a Man that works with me; and I had alſo ſome Buſineſs in Shoe-Lane, and Mr. Jones went with me.

Mr. Davy. What Buſineſs had he there?

J. Ward. He went with me as a Friend and Acquaintance; he had never ſeen her in his Life before.

Mr. Davy. Did not you aſk her, what ſhe was there for?

J. Ward. No, I did not.

Mr. Davy. Did not you aſk her more Queſtions than that you juſt mentioned?——J. Ward. No.

Mr. Davy. Do not you, upon your Oath, believe ſhe meant to let you know, ſhe was charged for keeping the Girl in her Houſe twenty-eight Days?---J. Ward. No, I did not underſtand her ſo.

Mr. Davy. Did not ſhe tell you ſhe was innocent of the Charge?

J. Ward. No, Sir.

Mr. Davy. Did not ſhe, before the Trial, ſay ſhe was innocent of it?

J. Ward. No, Sir; what I told you is all Truth.

Mr. Davy. How long did you take the Confinement to be, when you read the News-paper?---J. Ward. I took it to be a Fortnight.

Mr. Davy. What are the Words you made uſe of?

J. Ward. I ſaid, How came you to keep the Girl there a Fortnight?

Mr. Davy. Where did you mean?

J. Ward. I meant in her own Houſe; and ſhe ſaid, twenty-eight Days.

Mr. Davy. How came you not to give Evidence of this when ſhe was tried?

J. Ward. I did not know I ſhould be wanted: The Reaſon I came now was, I was with my Friend drinking a Tankard of Beer, and he threw his Skits, and ſaid, Mother Wells had been an old Procurer of mine; and the People in the Houſe heard this Affair talked over, and they went and brought ſome People from Aldermanbury, who came to me, to whom I related it again.

Mr. Davy. I inſiſt upon Mrs. Wells's being produced to know if he knows her.

Mr. Nares. That you never intend.

Baron Legge. You ſay you ſaw it in the News-paper, and you aſked her, how ſhe came to keep the Girl a Fortnight? She ſaid, Why, ſhe was there twenty-eight Days. Suppoſe it was to be ſaid, I ſaw in the News-papers you ſat five Days in the Old-Bailey: The Anſwer would be, We ſat ten, if the News-papers were ten.

Mr. Nares. Did you aſk this with any Apprehenſion of becoming a Witneſs againſt her?---J. Ward. No, not in the leaſt.

Mr. Davy. Did you ever make Affidavit of this before?

J. Ward. It was juſt when they were going to file a Bill againſt the Abbotſbury Men.

Mr. Davy. How long is it ago?

J. Ward. Before the Trial of the Abbotsbury Men; the Gentlemen aſked me to make it, which I did before Sir Robert Ladbroke.

Mr. Davy. Was you examined then before the Grand Jury?

J. Ward. I was.

Richard Jones ſworn.

Mr. Nares. Did you go with John Ward to Clerkenwell Bridewell?

R. Jones. Yes, Sir, he aſked me to go with him to ſee Mother Wells, and ſaid, he knew her in the Country.

Mr. Nares. When did you go with him?

R. Jones. I think it was about the Beginning of February was Twelvemonth.

Mr. Nares. What Converſation paſſed between Ward and Mother Wells there?

R. Jones. He aſked her, how ſhe came to be ſo vile as to ſhut up the Girl a Fortnight? A Fortnight, ſaid ſhe, ſhe was there eight-and-twenty Days.

Mr. Nares. What did he ſay to her upon that?---R. Jones. I cannot tell.

Mr. Nares. Did he aſk her any thing more?

R. Jones. No, nothing more, as I know of.

Croſs-Examined.

Mr. Davy. Was any thing ſaid about a News-paper?

R. Jones. No, he told me, he had read it in a News-paper of Mother Wells's being in Bridewell.

Mr. Davy. How came you to go with him?

R. Jones. I went with him to keep him Company.

Mr. Davy. Did he say any thing to her about seeing it before in the News-paper?---R. Jones. Not as I know of.

Mr. Davy. Not a Word?---R. Jones. No, not as I know of.

Mr. Davy. Did not she say she was innocent?

R. Jones. No, nothing at all about it.

Mr. Davy. Did not she say she had never seen the Girl in her Life?

R. Jones. No, she did not say she had, or had not.

Mr. Nares. Where do you live?

R. Jones. I live in Shoe-Lane; I am a Brass-founder; I have a Wife and Family there.

Mr. Nares. How long have you lived there?

R. Jones. About ten Years.

Mr. Nares. Are you a House-keeper?

R. Jones. I keep a House of 20*l. per* Year.

Mr. Nares. I have in my Brief some Witnesses of Credit and Character that were near the Gypsey when she was tried, and heard some Confessions which she made at that Time. How far your Lordship thinks these Witnesses are proper, I leave to your Lordship.

Mr. Davy. I wave that, I have no Objection to that.

Baron Legge. Whether any thing said in Court is any Evidence, unless said to the Court. There is here a manifest Difference between what is said in Court, and to the Court; for what is not said to the Court, is the same as said any where else.

Mr. Nares. It is no Part of the Evidence given, but Observations she made upon the Evidence given against her.

Mr. Just. Clive. That is giving Evidence of that which is no Evidence.

Mr. Nares. We are now going, my Lord, to impeach the Credit of some of the Witnesses: We begin with Judith Natus.

Nathaniel Crumphorne sworn.

N. Crumphorne. I live at Waltham-Cross in Hertfordshire; I have been a House-keeper there above seven Years.

Mr. Williams. What is your Business?—N. Crump. I am a Cordwainer.

Mr. Wil. Do you know Judith Natus?

N. Crump. I do, she is Wife to Fortune Natus; they live at Waltham-Cross.

Mr. Wil. Did you know them when they lived at Enfield-Wash?

N. Crump. No, I did not.

Mr. Wil. When did you see Judith Natus?

N. Crump. I saw her at my House on the 21st of April last. She came to know if one Thomas Pain wanted a Person to pick up Stones. I said to her, Mrs. Natus, how can you have the Conscience, knowing this innocent Creature Betty Canning was at Mrs. Wells's House, that you should go and be an Evidence against her? The Answer she made me was, Indeed, Mr. Crumphorne, I cannot say but she really was there, when we lodged there.

Mr. Wil. Did she come to your House accidentally?

N. Crump. She came to ask if Mr. Pain wanted a Person to pick up Stones.

Mr. Wil. Who was by at the Time?

N. Crump. My Neighbour and my Wife were.

Cross-Examined.

Mr Davy. Then they did lodge at Wells's, did they?

N. Crump. She said so.

Mr. Davy. When did you understand by her that she and her Husband lodged there?

N. Crump. She told me so on the 21st of April; but I cannot tell when they lodged there.

Mr. Davy. Did she tell you they all three lodged in one Room?

N. Crump. I can say nothing at all about that.

Mr. Davy. There is the little Word but, are you sure that was mentioned? I will read it without that Word—Mr. Crumphorne, I cannot say she really was there, when we lodged there.

N. Crump. She said the Word but.

Mr. Davy. Are you sure she said that Word?

N. Crump. She said it indeed.

Mr. Davy. What did you understand by it?

N. Crump. What I understood by it was, that she really was there, when she lodged there.

Baron Legge. When was it you had this Conversation?

N. Crump. It was on the 21st of April last.

Mr. Nares. Then what you charged her with was, how could she in her Conscience swear so, knowing the Innocency of Canning?

N. Crump. Yes, and the Words she said were, Indeed Mr. Crumphorne, I cannot say but she really was there, when we lodged there.

Baron Legge. How many Days before this Trial began was it that she said so?

N. Crump. It was a Fortnight ago Yesterday.

Elizabeth Crumphorne sworn.

E. Crump. Nathaniel Crumphorne is my Husband. Judith Natus came to our House on the 21st of April last.

Mr. Nares. Did you send for her?

E. Crump. No, I did not, nor I did not want to see her. She came to ask for a Person about picking up Stones. My Husband said to her, How could you be so cruel; knowing Elizabeth Canning was confined when you was there, to go to swear as you did? Her Answer was, Indeed, Mr. Crumphorne, really she was there, when we lodged there.

Mr. Nares. Tell the Words as near as you can.

E. Crump. She said, Indeed, Mr. Crumphorne, she actually was there, when we lodged there.

Mr. Nares. Did she say she was confined there?---E. Crump. No, Sir.

John Jackson sworn.

J. Jackson. I have lived at Edmonton fourteen or fifteen Years. I saw Fortune Natus lay a Wager at the Four Swans at Waltham-Cross, that he was at Wells's House all the Time of January 1753, and it was proved he lay at another House one Night.

Paul Stevens sworn.

P. Stevens. I live in New-Prison-Walk, Clerkenwell: I am a Publican, and have lived there between twelve and thirteen Years.

Mr. Nares. Do you know Susannah Wells?

P. Stevens. I do; I have seen her in Bridewell, and at her own House.

Mr. Nares. Do you know Mary Squires?---P. Stev. I do.

Mr. Nares. See if you see her here.

P. Stev. That is the Woman (pointing to her). I saw her in New-Prison, about three or four Days after she was taken up and carried there. There was a Gentleman or two and I went down to see the People on the Common Side in the Prison. She was sitting by the Fire-side in the Kitchen, in the Master's Side. We had a Bottle of Wine there. She began to speak and resolve some Questions. She acknowledged she was at Mrs. Wells's House, but said, For what I am here for, I am innocent of, that is, Cutting off her Stays; but to be sure the Person was there, I believe. She said, she never was guilty of robbing the Girl.

Mr. Nares. How long did she say she had been there herself?

P. Stev. She said she had been there a Fortnight and three Days, I think.

Mr. Nares. What Girl do you mean?

P. Stev. I mean Elizabeth Canning.

Cross-Examined.

Mr. Davy. Then she said, she did not cut her Stays off?

P. Stev. She put her Hands up, and said, As God is my Saviour, what I am sent here for, I am innocent of; but she said, she believed the Person was there.

Mr. Davy. Did she say she saw the Person there?

P. Stev. No, she did not. She said, she herself was there a Fortnight and three Days, and the Girl was there in the Time.

Mr. Davy. Answer my Question, Did she say she ever saw Elizabeth Canning at Wells's in her Life?---P. Stev. No, she did not.

Mr. Davy. Did she make use of the Word believe?

P. Stev. She said, she was sure she was there.

Mr. Davy. Did she acknowledge she was there?

P. Stev. She did; she came into a free Way of speaking at last, more than at first.

Mr. Davy. Did she say she was there not above a Fortnight and three Days in the whole?

P. Stev. She did not say she was there more.

Mr. Nares. Did she acknowledge she was there a Fortnight and three Days?---P. Stev. She did.

Mr. Just. Clive. Did she say she saw her there?

P. Stev. She said, she was in the House sure enough; she believed she was, and positively, almost, sure of it.

Mr. Just. Clive. What did you go to the Gaol for? Was it to get this Confession from her?---P. Stev. No.

Mr. Just. Clive. Who were those Gentlemen that you went with?

P. Stev. Mr. Martin and Mr. Dudley.

Mr. Just. Clive. Did you give Evidence here upon the Trial?

P. Stev. No.

Joseph Haines sworn.

Mr. Williams. Are you a House-keeper?

J. Haines. I live at Ware in Hertfordshire. I have been a House-keeper above forty Years there.

Mr. Wil. Do you know Fortune Natus?

J. Haines. I do. I have known him six or seven Years, or more.

Mr. Wil. Do you know his Wife?

J. Haines. I do, she was bred and born in the Town.

Mr. Wil. What Kind of a Character does he bear? Do you look upon him to be an honest Man?---J. Haines. No.

Mr. Wil. Do you believe his Oath is to be taken?

J. Haines. I believe it is not. I know it is not fit to be taken. He is a very dishonest Man.

Cross-Examined.

Mr. Davy. What is your Business?

J. Haines. I am a Barge-master. I am an Owner of Part of two Barges.

Mr. Davy. Did you ever hear any body speak well of him in your Life?

J. Haines. No, not lately. When he came to our Town, he turned a bad Man; when he worked at Fatham's-Hall, he went on better; but when he came to our Town, he deceived a great many People.

Mr. Davy. How long is that ago?

J. Haines. That is ten or twelve Years ago.

Mr. Davy. How long is it since you heard a good Character of him?

J. Haines. I have not heard a good one of him for almost three Years.

Mr. Davy. Do you think, if he was to come into a Court of Justice, and not to get a Farthing by it, that he would perjure himself?

J. Haines. I think he would say any thing to get a Shilling.

Mr. Davy. Suppose he could not get a Shilling by it?

J. Haines. He would try for it.

Mr. Davy. Do you think he would rather swear false than Truth, tho' he did not get a Shilling by it?

J. Haines. I think he would, he hates Truth.

Mr. Davy. You say you believe he hates Truth. I do not know what you mean. Is he a sad Rogue?

J. Haines. Nobody will give him a good Character about us.

Mr. Davy. Do you know his Wife? Is she a sad Wretch too?

J. Haines. She is a sad Body.

Mr. Davy. A drunken Beast?---J. Haines. You have guessed right as any Man in England. You give a very good Guess.

Mr. Davy. What, have you not made it up with him?---J. Haines. He once brought me a forged Note.

Mr. Davy. Are you at Law?---J. Haines. No, Sir.

Paul Chapman sworn.

P. Chapman. I live at Ware, and have done these twenty Years.

Mr. Williams. What are you?---P. Chapman. I am a Bricklayer.

Mr. Wil. Do you know Fortune Natus?

P. Chap. I do.

Mr. Wil. What is his Character?

P. Chap. He has a very bad Character.

Mr. Williams. Do you think he is to be credited upon Oath?

P. Chapman. I believe he is not to be believed upon Oath.

Croſs-Examined.

Mr. Willes. How long has he left Ware?

P. Chapman. I believe he has left Ware three or four Years.

Mr. Willes. Have you ſeen him ſince he left Ware?

P. Chapman. No, I have not till now; he behaved very ill there.

Thomas Green ſworn.

T. Green. I live at Ware in Hertfordſhire. I am a Farmer. I have lived there thirty Years, and have been a Houſe-keeper almoſt as long.

Mr. Nares. What do you rent per Year?

T. Green. I rent 600 l. per Year.

Mr. Will. Do you know Fortune Natus?——T. Green. I do.

Mr. Williams. What is his general Character?

T. Green. Really, in my Conſcience, he has a very indifferent one.

Mr. Will. Is he to be believed upon Oath?

T. Green. I make a Query whether he is—I believe not.

Mr. Juſt. Clive. Did you ever hear him forſwear himſelf?

T. Green. No, I never did.

Croſs-Examined.

Mr. Davy. One Queſtion, Yes, or no: Do you believe, that in a Caſe where he was not intereſted a ſingle Shilling, he would perjure himſelf?

T. Green. I have Reaſon to think he would ſay any thing for Hire.

Recorder. Give a Reaſon why he would ſay any thing for Hire.

T. Green. He has never injured me, nor robbed me; but he was a Pariſhioner of Ware, and he eloped, and left a Child to the Work-houſe.

Baron Legge. Is his Character ſo bad, he would wantonly perjure himſelf?

T. Green. That I cannot anſwer for.

Mr. Nares. My Lord, I will now call Juſtice Taſhmaker to ſhew, that Virtue Hall's Confeſſion was taken, not in the Hearing of Canning. Mr. White ſays, they were taken in the Hearing of one another.

Mr. Davy. This is applying to the Jury Matter foreign to the Caſe. With your Lordſhip's Leave, I will ſay, the Jury are not to know that ſuch a Perſon ever exiſted as Virtue Hall.

Mr. Moreton. The Jury are not to take Notice there is ſuch a Perſon as Virtue Hall in being; but we have a Right to call what Evidence ſhe gave in the Court here. You have heard Canning's Evidence, and called the Minuter here to prove it. If your Lordſhip thinks I have no Right to call the Juſtice of the Peace to prove ſhe gave her Teſtimony when the Parties accuſed were not by, that is, when Wells and Squires were not by; I would call Juſtice Taſhmaker to prove what ſhe ſaid, who was in the Room when ſhe was examined.

Mr. Willes. I think it would have been extremely right, if Canning's Evidence was not taken down in Writing.

Baron Legge. The Perjury is aſſigned upon the Evidence ſhe gave at the Old-Bailey. The Queſtion is not, Who was by when the Depoſition was made before a Juſtice of Peace? That is no-way in Iſſue in the Caſe.

Mr. Juſt. Clive. We are of Opinion it can be no Evidence to call Juſtice Taſhmaker.

Mr. Nares. My Lord, Ezra Whiffin ſwears, that on the 18th of January he was in the Room where Canning was confined, to buy ſome Sign-Irons. We will call the Man who painted the Sign, to ſhew that he was not there at the Time.

William Metcalf ſworn.

W. Metcalf. I am a Glazier, Painter, and Plumber, and live at Enfield Highway.

Mr. Nares. Do you know Ezra Whiffin?

W. Met. I do. I remember I carried a Sign Home to his Houſe, on the 8th of January 1753, Old Stile, and ſet it down directly in my Book.

Mr. Nares. Where is that Book?

W. Met. It is at Home. I could eaſily have brought it, had I had an Order ſo to have done. But I can ſatisfy you another Way. I have a Pocket-book in my Pocket, and I took it from this Pocket-book, and put it in my Day-book. (He produces the Pocket-book.)

Mr. Nares. Tell me, by looking into that Book, the Day you brought the Sign Home?

W. Met. It was on the 8th of January, O. S. I wrote this myſelf in his own Houſe, with his Pen and Ink.

Mr. Nares. Upon your Oath, is it your own Hand-writing?

W. Met. Upon my Oath, it is.

Mr. Nares. What Day was it, New Stile?

W. Met. It was on the 19th, N. S. He told me he had ſpoke to one Mr. John Garret, a Blackſmith, to make the Irons to hang it upon. I went directly to the Blackſmith, and aſked him, whether he had done them? He told me, he would not do them at all, till ſuch Time as Whiffin had paid what was due already.

Mr. Nares. Did you go back again then to Whiffin?

W. Met. No. About ten or fourteen Days after I ſaw Whiffin, and aſked him, if he had got the Irons? He ſaid, he had got none. Then I ſaid, You are very much to blame you did not go down to Mother Wells's, to ſee for her Hooks, becauſe they were the ſame that the Sign hung upon; and I thought they might be in the ſame Piece of Wood, which was ſawed off when the Sign was taken down.

Mr. Nares. Did he ſay he had been for them?

W. Met. No, he did not; but he ſaid he would go.

Mr. Nares. Had he the Hooks when you ſpoke to him?

W. Met. That I do not know. He did not ſay he had been at Mother Wells's, or that he had got them.

Mr. Nares. When was it hung up?

W. Met. I do not know.

Croſs-Examined.

Mr. Willes. The 1753, which is in black Figures, when was it wrote in this Book? I obſerve it to be in a different Ink.

W. Met. That was wrote on Saturday was Se'nnight, I believe; that was taken from the other Book. I took that Date out of my other Book; for I ſet it down in my Pocket-book without the Date at firſt.

Mr. Moreton. I obſerve in this, here is October 17, do you mean Old Stile or New Stile?

W. Met. I mean Old Stile. All that is ſet down, is ſet down by my Clock.

Mr. Moreton. When you made that Entry, did you mean it according to Old Stile or New?

W. Met. To the Old.

Recorder. Why did not you bring your Book here?

W. Met. I did not know it would be wanted.

To her Character.

Mr. Marſhall ſworn.

Mr. Marſhall. I have known Elizabeth Canning the younger almoſt ever ſince ſhe could go alone; ſince ſhe has grown up, ſhe has come to my Shop almoſt every Day. She bears a very good Character. I never knew a Girl behave more modeſtly in my Life. I am one of her Bail; and if I had not believed her to have been entirely honeſt, I would not have been Bail for her.

Croſs-Examined.

Mr. Davy. Look at this Paper; it has your Name to it; was it done with your Conſent?

Mr. Marſhall. It was not; but when it was done, I did not contradict it.

Mr. Davy. Here is an Atteſtation of all the Facts ſhe had ſworn, why did you ſuffer it to be printed?

Mr. Marſhall. I did not contradict it.

Mr. Davy. Did you ever declare that you was ignorant of the Things that you here atteſt?

Mr. Marſhall. As to the Facts, they put my Name in to atteſt her being a harmleſs Girl; the Contents I never ſaw, till I ſaw them in Print.

Mr. Davy. You have ſaid here, The Truth of the above-mentioned Facts, we, whoſe Names are under-written, being alſo ready to atteſt—Did you ever take any Pains to ſatisfy the World that you were not able to atteſt theſe Facts?

Mr. Marſhall. I had nothing to do with the printing the Papers. My Atteſtation was only to tell of the Girl's Abſence.

Mr. Davy. Did you give any of theſe Papers away?

Mr. Marſhall. I believe I did.

Mr. Davy. Do you know of their being ſcattered about at the Time of the Trial of Wells and Squires?

Mr. Marſhall. I have heard they were delivered about, but I did not do it. I ſaid, it was a bad Thing to diſtribute them about then.

Mr. Davy. Upon your Oath, did you conſent to the Publication of it?

Mr. Marſhall. Upon my Oath, I did not.

Mr. Davy. Was your Name put to it without your Conſent?

Mr. Marſhall. It was.

Recorder. Did you ſee your Name to them, before you diſtributed them about?——Mr. Marſhall. Yes, I did.

Mr. Davy. Whether the Intent of publiſhing theſe Papers was not to inflame the World againſt the Gypſey?

Mr. Marſhall. No, I believe not.

Mr. Nares. Did you believe the Truth of theſe Papers that you diſtributed?

Mr. Marſhall. My Belief was, that the Girl had been ſo long miſſing from her Friends.

Mr. Davy. I am to tell the Jury from the Proſecutor, I have nothing againſt the Girl's Character, excluſive of this Fact.

Mr. Nares. Then we need call no more to her Character.

Mr. Davy. I have only to call Witneſſes to the Support of Natus's and Whiffin's Characters.

TUESDAY the 7th of May.

Mr. Moreton. We laſt Night finiſhed this long Trial in Behalf of the Defendant. I am very ſenſible, that, perhaps, there never was a Caſe came before a Court of Juſtice, in which it was more proper, I hope I need not ſay more neceſſary, for ſome of the Counſel concerned to have made Obſervations from the material Part of the Evidence given on both Sides.

That is what is the Province of a Counſel, to obſerve how far our Evidence anſwered the Evidence given on the Behalf of the Proſecution.

It has been among the many Misfortunes of the Defendant, that it has been impoſſible for any one of her Counſel to have attended thro' this whole Trial. Mr. Williams, whoſe proper Province it was to have replied, has neceſſarily been abſent, during great Part of the Evidence; therefore it is impoſſible for him to diſcharge his Duty in that.

It has likewiſe been my Misfortune to be abſent, and it has alſo been Mr. Nares's Misfortune to be abſent, ſo that we could not attend upon that Part of the Evidence. I mention this, that I may lay in my Claim with your Lordſhip, who has been ſo very acute and attentive, that whatever Obſervations are proper to be made, the Jury may carry the Facts along with them, as well as the Proſecutor's Charge; and that your Lordſhip will be ſo kind to ſupply what we have been obliged to omit. I make no Doubt but you will do ſo, becauſe no greater Accuracy, and no greater Attention can be ſhewn, than has appeared in your Lordſhip through the Courſe of this Trial; therefore my Client will not ſuffer thro' this Abſence.

Recorder. You may aſſure yourſelves I ſhall, and I hope you will be preſent, when I ſum up to the Jury; and I ſhall not take it in the leaſt amiſs to be inſtructed, if I make any Miſtake whatſoever.

Mr. Moreton. When once the Caſe is in your Hands, I am very ſure it is in ſafe Hands.

Mr. Davy. I deſire it may be proved to the Jury, that the Days of the Arrival of the Letters from Baſingſtoke, are Mondays, Wedneſdays, and Fridays.

Thomas Ravenhill again.

Mr. Willes. As you are an Officer in the Poſt-Office, you can tell what Days of the Week the Poſt comes into Town from Baſingſtoke in Hampſhire.

T. Ravenhill. It comes in on Mondays, Wedneſdays, and Fridays, and no other Days.

Croſs-Examined.

Mr. Moreton. What Poſt-road does it lie in?

T. Ravenhill. It comes in the Portſmouth Mail; it is in the Weſtern Road.

Mr. Moreton. Does the Portſmouth Bag come through Baſingſtoke?

T. Ravenhill.

T. Ravenhill. I cannot tell that.

Mr. Davy. Whether the Portſmouth Bag does not come through Baſing-ſtoke? Or, Whether there is not ſome every Day's Poſt comes thro' Baſing-ſtoke?

T. Ravenhill. Upon my Word I cannot tell. Baſing-ſtoke Bag comes in three Days a-Week.

Mr. Moreton. That Letter is not proved ever to have been in Baſing-ſtoke Poſt-Office; it remains ſtill to be proved, that there is an every Day's Poſt comes through Baſing-ſtoke.

Mr. Davy. Do the Baſing-ſtoke Letters ever come in on any other Days beſides Mondays, Wedneſdays, and Fridays?

T. Ravenhill. No, they come in only on thoſe three Days.

Mr. Davy. When does the Salisbury Poſt come in?

T. Ravenhill. That comes in the ſame Days.

[Mr. Davy produced the Almanacks back to 1749, which proved the 19*th of* January was never on a Monday, Wedneſday, or Friday, ſince January 1749, till the Year 1753.)

Mr. Willes. There is one Anne Johnſon, who ſwears ſhe ſaw Mary Squires at Enfield-Woſh on the 18th of January; and ſhe has ſworn, that ſhe works for Mr. Smitheram; and that ſhe carried Home her firſt Work for that Year on the 16th of January; and that her Maſter conſtantly put the Work carried Home down in a Book; and we have that Book to prove it was carried Home on the 23d of January.

Thomas Smitheram ſworn.

Mr. Willes. What is your Buſineſs?

T. Smitheram. I keep a Boarding-School at Enfield Highway, and I keep a Shop likewiſe.

Mr. Willes. Did you employ one Anne Johnſon to ſpin Yarn for you?

T Smitheram. I did.

Mr. Willes. Have you a Book in which you ſet down the Work as it is brought Home?

T. Smitheram. I have; but it is ſeldom under my Management; I leave it to my Family.

Mr. Willes. Do you, or ſome of your Family, put down the Time when you deliver out Work to be done?

T. Smitheram. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Willes. Do you always put down the Time when you have it brought Home?

T. Smitheram. Yes, Sir; one Column is to put down the Delivery, and the other when brought Home ſpun.

Mr. Willes. Look in it to the Year 1753, and tell whoſe Hand-Writing that firſt Article is.

T. Smitheram. It is my Daughter's Hand-Writing; her Name is Anne Hudgel.

Mr. Willes. I ſee in it, here is January 16, one Pound S. fine, delivered.

T. Smitheram. That is the Work delivered out.

Mr. Willes. Is there a Mark upon the firſt Column that ſignifies it was the Time of the Delivery of it to be ſpun?

T. Smitheram. Yes, here is Anne Johnſon's Name on the Top.

Mr. Willes. Here is January 23, one P. S. fine, returned.

T. Smitheram. That is my Hand-Writing, the delivering out, but the receiving is not mine.

Mr. Willes. Was that the ſame Yarn that is returned?

T. Smitheram. I take it ſo to be. I did not receive it myſelf.

Croſs-Examined.

Mr. Moreton. In this laſt Entry, is the Word returned your Writing?

T. Smitheram. It is.

Mr. Moreton. When was that Word wrote?

T. Smitheram. The very ſame Day. The Reaſon of it is this, I had heard ſhe had ſworn what ſhe did, and I looked in my Book, and I ſaid, You are miſtaken; and the old Woman was ſo angry, ſhe brought Home my Work, and would ſpin no more for me; then I clapped that Mark upon it, Returned. She returned it unfiniſhed.

Recorder. When you heard what ſhe ſwore---Where did ſhe ſwear?

T. Smitheram. Before the Grand Jury. She came to our Houſe, and I looked in the Book after ſhe had ſworn. I ſaid, You brought your Work Home on the 23d, and you are miſtaken, or to that Effect.

Recorder. Was that Yarn you delivered to her on the 16th, the ſame ſhe returned on the 23d?

T. Smitheram. I cannot tell that; it is poſſible ſometimes they may change it.

Alderman Dickinſon. Did ſhe return the ſame Weight?

T. Smitheram. She did, for aught I know; I did not take it in.

Anne Hudgel ſworn.

Mr. Willes. What are you?

A. Hudgel. I am Daughter to Mr. Smitheram. I generally keep this Book; it is a Day-Book; I make Marks when delivered out, and when brought Home.

Mr. Willes. Look for Anne Johnſon's Account.

A. Hudgel. The firſt Entrance is my Father's, and that of being brought Home ſpun is mine, on the 23d of January. After we heard ſhe was concerned in this Affair, and had ſworn to the 18th Day of the Month, we told her it was the 23d.

Mr. Willes. Can you recollect what Time it was that you told her ſhe was miſtaken?

A. Hudgel. I cannot tell.

Mr. Willes. Did you ever tell her ſhe was wrong?

A. Hudgel. No, Sir; but I heard my Father tell her ſo, though I was not in the ſame Room.

Mr. Willes. Had you no Converſation with her about it?

A. Hudgel. No, Sir.

Croſs-Examined.

Mr. Moreton. Did not this Woman apply to you to ſee the Book?

A. Hudgel. When ſhe brought the Work Home undone, ſhe would ſee the Book to ſee me croſs it out, though ſhe could not read.

Mr. Moreton. Did ſhe ever apply to you to ſee the Time when ſhe brought the Work Home?

A. Hudgel. I do not remember ſhe ever did.

Mr. Moreton. She has ſworn ſhe did.

A. Hudgel. Very likely ſhe might, but I do not remember it, nor that ſhe did till after the Time ſhe ſwore before the Grand Jury.

Mr. Moreton. Do you think ſhe would forſwear herſelf?

A. Hudgel. I do not know that ſhe would.

Mr. Willes. Did not your Father tell her the Wool was not brought Home till the 23d?

A. Hudgel. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Davy. My Lord, we now call Witneſſes to the Support of the Characters of theſe two People which they have impeached; that is, Ezra Whiffin and Fortune Natus.

Thomas Smitheram again.

T. Smitheram. I have known Ezra Whiffin a Year and a Half.

Mr. Willes. What is his general Character?

T. Smitheram. I never heard but he was a very honeſt Man.

Croſs-Examined.

Mr. Moreton. Have you not known many honeſt Men miſtaken in point of Time, at a Year's Diſtance?

T. Smitheram. I do not know but I have.

John Barnes ſworn.

J. Barnes. I am High Conſtable of Edmonton Hundred. I know Ezra Whiffin very well, and have theſe three Years and a Half; he was two Years a Neighbour of mine. I believe him a very honeſt Man.

John Smart ſworn.

J. Smart. I am an Attorney. I knew Ezra Whiffin all the Time I lived at the Coffee-Houſe at Enfield.

Mr. Whiffin. How long is that?

J. Smart. I have known him about three Years. I never heard any Harm of his Character.

Thomas Bell ſworn.

T. Bell. I live at Waltham-Croſs at the Four Swans.

Mr. Willes. How long have you known Fortune Natus?

T. Bell. I have known him about fifteen Months; he has been a Servant to me about thirteen Months.

Mr. Willes. Did you ever know him before that?

T. Bell. No, Sir.

Mr. Willes. How has he behaved ſince he worked for you?

T. Bell. Very honeſtly, very civilly, and very induſtriouſly.

Mr. Willes. Do you look upon him to be an honeſt Man?

T. Bell. Indeed I do. He aſſiſts to brew, and goes out with a Load of Hay. He always behaved very honeſtly. When I go out, if I bid him do ſuch Things, I am ſure to have them done.

Mr. Davy. Do you think he would forſwear himſelf?

T. Bell. I do not think he would.

Mr. Willes. During the thirteen Months he has been with you, has he been faithful and honeſt?

T. Bell. During the whole Time I do not know he has told me a Lye. I have eight Servants about my Houſe, and I ſhould be glad to find the Fellow of him.

Mr. Moreton. The Gentlemen have called ſome freſh Evidence in. I do not think to give it any Anſwer; therefore it muſt reſt upon theſe People's given Teſtimony.

Here the material Things are, to ſupport the Letter ſuppoſed to be wrote at Baſing-ſtoke, and to contradict Anne Johnſon.

They endeavour to ſupport the Letter by producing the Man again from the Poſt-Office, who tells you, the Poſt comes in only on Mondays, Wedneſdays, and Fridays, from Baſing-ſtoke. Then they have produced ſome old Almanacks to ſhew the 19th of January was never on a Monday, Wedneſday, or Friday, ſince January 1749, to the Date 1753. But they have not proved the Letter was put in at Baſing-ſtoke yet: That remains to the Jury; and the Poſt-Mark, I own, my Eyes are not good enough to diſtinguiſh. This might have been made clear, if the Man that received it had been called; and if he had ſhewed he had received that Letter at the Time mentioned, that would have carried up this Evidence, that I could have had nothing to ſay againſt it; but whether it was ever put into the Office at Baſing-ſtoke or not, that muſt be left to the Jury; it is a very eaſy Thing to have a Letter dated, and it might be the 9th, or the 29th, ſtill there is no Concluſion.

Now, as to contradicting Anne Johnſon, a poor old Woman. What does ſhe ſwear? She ſwears ſhe did apply to theſe People to be ſet right, and ſhe was informed by their Book; therefore ſhe would have never referred to that Piece of Evidence, if ſhe had not been miſtaken in what ſhe ſwore; it is only a Miſtake.

Now, after we are done, I do think it is a great Misfortune for my Client, that the other Gentleman, who ſhould have made a proper Reply, was obliged to attend elſewhere; and was I to do it, I muſt do it very imperfectly; and ſo I reſt it in your Hands.

Mr. Davy.

May it pleaſe your Lordſhip, and you Gentlemen of the Jury;

After ſo unuſual a Time taken up in this Trial, I wiſh I could diſpenſe with giving you any farther Trouble.

But, Gentlemen, it is my Duty to recall your Attention to the Evidence, which was produced to maintain this Indictment---to reply to what has been urged by way of Defence---and to make ſuch Obſervations upon the Whole, as may convince you, that the Evidence for the Proſecution ſtands unanſwered, and is the moſt indubitable Proof of the Defendant's Guilt.

Before I enter upon this Undertaking, which, I am afraid, will engage more of your Time than would be found neceſſary, if the Conduct of this Proſecution was in abler Hands than mine, I cannot avoid taking Notice of the great Indulgence with which this Cauſe has been already favoured. For, although five long Days have been employed in this Inquiry, yet hath not the leaſt Hint of Impatience dropped, either from the Court, or the Jury.

To the Honour of this Country be it remembered, its Judges always adminiſter impartial Juſtice upon the moſt deliberate and careful Examination; and never think any Time miſpent, which may conduce to the Diſcovery of Truth. There was indeed a particular Neceſſity for a very ſolemn Examination in the preſent Caſe, becauſe this was become an Affair, not only of great Importance and public Expectation, but alſo of no

leſs

leſs Intricacy and Difficulty,—ariſing, not ſo much from the Nature of the Queſtion, as from the Clouds of Darkneſs in which it was inveloped by thoſe, who, merely in Oppoſition to the Proſecutor, adopted the Crime of Perjury, and formed a Faction to ſupport it.

But ſuch is the Force of Truth, and ſo ſtrongly does it ſhine forth in this Proſecution, that its Oppoſers muſt now hide their Faces, and reflect with Shame, that they have contaminated themſelves with the Guilt which they are no longer able to conceal.

Gentlemen, as in the Outſet of this Cauſe I deſired you to diveſt yourſelves of all Prejudices, which you might have received in the Defendant's Favour; ſo now, out of Humanity, I would caution you againſt falling into the like Error on the other Side, on Account of ſome Accidents which have happened during the Courſe of this Trial.

The Inſolence of Mobs about this Court, attempting to over-awe and intimidate Juſtice, you all have obſerved, and ſome of you have felt. Although the Deſign of theſe Outrages was eaſily diſcovered, yet it would be very hard that ſuch Miſbehaviour, however occaſioned, ſhould affect the unhappy Perſon at the Bar. She has enough to depreſs her, without the additional Load of others Guilt; and God forbid we ſhould attempt to call in the Aid of Prejudice againſt her! We deſire this Cauſe may be tried ſingly upon its own Merits, and that there may be no Ingredient in your Conſideration, but what fairly reſults from the Evidence on both Sides.

You will take Care, for your own Sakes, to diſcharge your Duty as Jurymen, conſidering the Obligation upon your Conſcience, the Notoriety of this Cauſe, and the Freedom with which Men will hereafter deliver their Sentiments concerning it. You will conſider, the Eyes of the World are now upon you; and the Circumſtances of this Cauſe are ſo peculiar, and have been ſo much the Subject of Controverſy, that the Hiſtory of this Tranſaction hath travelled wherever the Engliſh Language is underſtood. And, I doubt not, your ſerious and ſolemn Determination, upon this important Occaſion, will anſwer the Ends of Juſtice, will gratify the univerſal Curioſity, and will prove a laſting Honour to yourſelves.

Gentlemen, when you reflect upon the Nature and Circumſtances of the Offence this Woman ſtands accuſed of,—together with the Purpoſes it was intended to ſerve,—the Fullneſs of the Evidence produced to prove it,—and the weak, if not the wicked, Defence attempted in Anſwer to it; you will be fully ſatisfied, how much it concerns the Public to bring this Delinquent to Juſtice.

Of all the Crimes the human Heart can conceive, PERJURY is the moſt impious and deteſtable. But the Guilt of this Perſon is ſo tranſcendent, that it ſeems even to defy Aggravation.

To call upon the GOD OF TRUTH in the moſt ſolemn Manner, and upon the moſt awful Occaſion, to atteſt a FALSHOOD—to imprecate the Vengeance of Heaven upon her guilty Head—to proſtitute the Law of the Land to the vileſt Purpoſe—to triumph in the Ruin of an innocent Fellow Creature—to commit a MURDER WITH THE SWORD OF JUSTICE;—and then, having ſtripped her own Heart of Humanity, by all the Arts of Hypocriſy to inſinuate herſelf into the Compaſſion of others, is the peculiar SIN of this Perſon, not yet Twenty Years of Age!

One would wonder, indeed, at the FOLLY of an Attempt to impoſe ſo groſs, ſo abſurd a Falſhood upon the World, if we did not live in an Age wherein nothing is too incredible and fantaſtical to be well received.—— Let it be but a Novelty, and a Subject of Admiration, and it cannot fail to make its Way with the Bulk, the moſt ignorant Part, of Mankind.

How this ſtrange Story obtained Credit ſo far as to prevail with a Jury to convict two innocent Women, you have ſeen in the Courſe of this Trial. For that there was falſe Evidence given in that Cauſe by one Witneſs at leaſt, appears now confeſſed even by his own Teſtimony. SCARRAT (of whom I ſhall have Occaſion to ſpeak more hereafter) ſwore upon the Trial of Squires, that Canning's Information before Alderman Chitty thoroughly correſponded with her then Evidence: But he now owns, he does not know what Account ſhe gave before the Alderman; and, upon his beſt Recollection, he admits, in effect, that her Information to Mr. Chitty was, in many Reſpects, different from her Evidence upon the Trial. And yet this was one of the moſt material Queſtions in the whole Cauſe.

It is no Wonder, therefore, that this Story, with all its Abſurdities, ſo ſupported by Prejudice and Perjury, obtained Belief. And, that it was not fatal to the poor Wretch deſtined for a Sacrifice, was entirely owing to the Interpoſition of a MAGISTRATE, whoſe only Motive to it was Compaſſion, whoſe only Reward the bittereſt Invectives.

Gentlemen, in this Indictment there are as many Aſſignments of Perjury, as there are Circumſtances in the Defendant's Evidence, from the Time of the pretended Robbery in Moorfields; ſo that, if any Part of her Relation is falſe, ſhe is guilty of Perjury within this Indictment. However, we do not mean to cavil, and catch at little Circumſtances; for the Proofs we have offered are ſufficient to ſatisfy all Mankind, that the Whole of this Story is a Fiction from the Beginning to the End.

Gentlemen, as this was a Caſe of univerſal Inquiry, the Proſecutor was deſirous of giving all the Satisfaction in his Power: For though the indubitable Evidence of the GYPSEY's Innocence, without any farther Proof, would have been ſufficient to juſtify his own Conduct, and to convict the Defendant, yet his Regard for the Public called upon him to detect the whole Impoſture; and, if poſſible, to put an End to all the Diſputes and Troubles, to which this myſterious Tranſaction hath given Riſe.

To anſwer theſe Purpoſes effectually, there hath been a great Variety of Proof laid before you, under ſeveral Heads of Evidence; of which I will beg Leave to remind you, in the Order they were given.

Our firſt Head of Proof was to the ALIBI of Mary Squires.

With regard to this, and the Anſwer attempted to be given to it by the Defendant's Witneſſes, you will be pleaſed to recollect the Certainty or Incertainty of the Evidence on both Sides, as to the Identity of the Perſons ſworn to, and the Exactneſs of the Times in which the Witneſſes ſwear to have ſeen them. For a Miſtake in either of theſe Matters will account for a Variance in the Teſtimony, without impeaching the Credit of the Witneſſes, which I am always willing, as far as I can, to avoid.

In the firſt Place, as to the Identity of MARY SQUIRES.

She is not only ſo extremely remarkable, that it is almoſt impoſſible to miſtake her for another, but ſeveral of the Witneſſes for the Proſecution have known her a conſiderable Time, from two to thirty Years paſt, and have often ſeen her: It is impoſſible, therefore, for theſe People to miſtake with regard to this Perſon; and if they did not ſee this very Woman, they are certainly guilty of Perjury.—Beſides, the Witneſſes for the Crown ſwear not only to the old Woman, but likewiſe to her Son and Daughter, for they were ſeen all together through the whole Journey; by which Means they are leſs liable to Miſtake, than the Witneſſes for the Defendant.

Are all the Witneſſes to this Head of Proof, forty-one in Number, wilfully and corruptly forſworn?

Through the Whole of this Cauſe, hath the leaſt Reflection been thrown upon the Character of any one of them?

Has it been even ſuggeſted, that they have any Intereſt to ſerve, or any Paſſion to gratify, which could lead them to ſo much Wickedneſs and Danger?

Are they not Strangers to the Defendant, and moſt of them to one another, living at remote Diſtances?

They have all been ſeparately examined; and I refer to your own Obſervation, whether effectual Care has not been taken to prevent any Communication between them, ſo as that no one Witneſs could poſſibly know another's Teſtimony.

And yet what an amazing Congruity is there in the Whole of their Evidence!—Not a material Circumſtance varied from!—But the Teſtimony of each Witneſs correſponds ſo exactly with what went before it, that it demands Credit, and authenticates the Evidence of the former.

Conſider too the Variety and Weight of the Circumſtances ſworn to, and the Correſpondency of Events happening in Conſequence of them.—The Dancing at Abbotſbury,—the Fiddler there,—who and who were Partners,—the wet Night at Porterſham,—the heavy Rains that fell the next Day,—and the Waters being out at Dorcheſter, two Days after.——

How notorious are theſe Facts, and how eaſily diſproved, if falſe!

Was it ever known, that any Number of falſe Witneſſes pre-concerted Circumſtances, which ten thouſand People were capable of contradicting?

Is it conceivable, that there ſhould be a perfect Harmony in the Evidence of ſuch a Number of perjured Witneſſes, concurring in Circumſtances of public Notoriety?

Then the parting with Clarke at Ridgway,—the Piece of Nankeen pawned with the Landlord for a Reckoning, and produced in Evidence with the Man's Name upon it,—the ſkinning the dead Horſe, mentioned by ſeveral Witneſſes,——the Letter from Lucy Squires at Baſingſtoke, alluding to the Particulars of the Journey with Clarke, and to the Weather, "hoping he received no Illneſs from it,"——

Were theſe Circumſtances all pre-concerted, or did they really happen at ſome other Time, than that to which they have been applied by the Witneſſes?

Examine then into the Certainty of the Evidence with regard to Time.

Beſides the Impoſſibility, that all the Witneſſes, ſpeaking with ſuch abſolute Certainty, and referring to collateral Matters incapable of miſleading them, ſhould miſtake in this Reſpect; there are two Facts before you, which prove the Times of the Gypſies being at Abbotſbury and Baſingſtoke to Demonſtration.

The Time, referred to by the Abbotſbury Witneſſes, is aſcertained by the Books belonging to the EXCISE-OFFICE. Every one knows with what Preciſeneſs theſe Books are kept,---that not only the Days, but the very Hours of each Officer's Viſits, are regularly entered in his Accounts;—that all his Acts and Entries are ſcrutinized and chequed by a Superviſor,——and the Books tranſmitted to the General Exciſe-Office in LONDON.

Now the Book of January 1753, belonging to the Exciſe at ABBOTSBURY, has been produced in Evidence from the General Exciſe-Office; by which it appears, that Andrew Wake was placed at Abbotſbury in the room of Ward, the Officer ſtationed there, who was ill and incapable of Duty; and that Wake began to officiate in the Exciſe-Office at Abbotſbury on the 1ſt of January, and continued to the 14th.

Wake ſwears, and is confirmed in it by all the Witneſſes from Abbotſbury, that he came to Gibbons's Houſe, to officiate as Exciſeman in the room of Ward, on the very Day the GYPSIES came there.

Here then is no Poſſibility of Miſtake; and if the Abbotſbury Witneſſes are perjured, all the reſt of the Witneſſes muſt be ſo too; for the whole Evidence refers to the Journey from South-Parrot to Abbotſbury, and from Abbotſbury to Enfield-Waſh; and all the Facts ſworn to are like ſo many Links of a Chain, depending one upon another.

It is alſo remarkable, that this very John Gibbons, who has now given Evidence of this Fact, was produced as a Witneſs upon the Trial of Mary Squires in February 53; and he then gave the ſame Evidence he has given now, and with the ſame Circumſtance relating to the Exciſeman. For being aſked on that Trial, by what Circumſtance he recollected the Day of the GYPSIES coming to Abbotsbury, this was his Anſwer; "There "came an Exciſeman, one Andrew Wicks or Weeks, to officiate there for "one John Ward, who was ſick, and I put the Day of the Month down "when he came there; for the Exciſe-Office is kept at my Houſe."

It is alſo obſervable, that Gibbons was indicted for Perjury in that Evidence. What but the Conſciouſneſs of Truth could now encourage him to repeat the ſame Evidence, and run the Hazard of a ſecond Proſecution?

Another Circumſtance equally demonſtrates the Time of the Gypſies being at Baſingſtoke.

The Letter wrote there by the Witneſs, Mrs. Morris, for Lucy Squires to Clarke, bears Date the 18th of January, and ſhe ſwears that was the Day on which it was written.

On

On the Outside there appears the Mark of the General Post-Office, in LONDON; and if this Letter went from Baſingſtoke on the 18*th*, it muſt come to London on the 19*th*, for there is no Poſt-Road from Baſingſtoke to Abbotſbury, but by way of London. But the Poſt-Mark not being very legible, the Clerk of the Weſtern Mail, belonging to the General Poſt-Office, is called to clear up this Matter.

He tells you, that the Poſt comes in from Baſingſtoke on no other Days, but Monday, Wedneſday, and Friday;—that by the niceſt Obſervation he is able to make (and he produces ſome Stamps belonging to the Poſt-Office to verify his Obſervation), this Letter came into London on the 19*th* or 29*th* of January, and he gives you his Reaſons for ſaying ſo.—The only remaining Doubt then is, as to the Year; for the laſt Figure being torn off, there being only three Figures 175-, the Counſel for the Defendant have thought fit to rely upon it as a capital Objection, inſinuating as if it had been torn off on Purpoſe to miſlead you; but at the ſame Time they admit, that if the whole Date had appeared perfectly, the Fact intended to be proved by it would have concluded irreſiſtibly upon them.

Now it happens very fortunately, that this Defect can be ſupplied by another Evidence, which proves itſelf; and that is the Almanack.

I have all the Almanacks ſince 1749 now in my Hand, which I deſire you will examine yourſelves; and by them it appears, that no 19*th* of January, ſince January 49, has happened upon a Monday, Wedneſday, or Friday, except in 1753, when it happened on a Friday; and by the three Figures, which remain in this Letter, the Year's Date muſt be either 1750, 51, 52, 53, or 54.

To this Circumſtance you will be pleaſed to add another,---that all the Witneſſes mention the Days of the Week, as well as the Days of the Month; and if you trace them in all their Teſtimony, from Friday the 29*th* of December, at South-Parrot, to Wednesday the 24*th* of January, at Enfield-Waſh, you will find the whole Evidence refers to the Gypſies being at Baſingſtoke on Thurſday the 18*th* of January.

This Obſervation will entirely remove the only Doubt of the Poſt-Officer, whether the Poſt-Mark is the 19*th* or 29*th* of January. For the Days of the Week, ſworn to by all the Witneſſes, correſpond exactly to their being at Baſingſtoke on a Thurſday; and the Almanacks will inform you, that the 29*th* of January has not happened on a FRIDAY for ſeveral Years paſt.

From all which it appears, that the Witneſſes are as little liable to Miſtake in point of Time, as in reſpect of the Perſon of Mary Squires. And therefore, upon the whole of this Evidence, I will venture to ſay, no Man living can doubt that theſe Gypſies were at Abbotſbury on the firſt of January.

For, through the whole Chain of Evidence to prove it, I appeal to your own Obſervation, whether all the Circumſtances have not been ſupported by the beſt Teſtimony and the cleareſt Proofs, in their Nature they are capable of receiving? And whether it would not be as unreaſonable for one to doubt the Fact they conduce to prove, as it would be to believe the Story they are intended to contradict?

Surely there never was ſuch a Variety of Circumſtances ſo clearly and completely proved in any Caſe,—ſurely there never was a Caſe ſtanding ſo little in need of it!

But, ſufficient as it may be thought for the Defendant's Conviction, this is far from being the beſt Part of the Caſe. For though this fully proves the Defendant was not robbed by Mary Squires, yet it goes no farther. But the reſt of the Evidence for the Crown entirely overthrows the Defendant's whole Story, and evinces, to the utmoſt Degree of Certainty, that ſhe is an Impoſtreſs.

To the Evidence of Mr. Alderman Chitty, Mr. Naſh, Mr. Aldridge, and Mr. Hague, you'll be pleaſed to apply an Obſervation, I took the Liberty to mention in the Opening, and which I apprehend to be very reaſonable, That, if the Defendant was really confined in this Room at Wells's twenty-eight days, there being Light enough to ſee every Part of it, ſhe could not poſſibly fail of giving an exact Deſcription of it; much leſs could ſhe mention Things that were not there.

Now the Account ſhe gave, before ſhe was carried down to Enfield on the 1*ſt* of February, is liable to Objection both in reſpect to its Defectiveneſs, and its Falſity.

To try the Truth of any Relation, when its Authenticity muſt depend upon the Credit of the Relator, we ſhould inquire, whether at all Times, in all Places, and upon all Occaſions, he tells the ſame Story, with all its Circumſtances, in the ſame uniform, invariable Manner.

The Gentlemen of Counſel for the Defendant, aware of the Force of this Obſervation, have, with great Judgment, endeavoured to apply it in their Client's Favour, in reſpect to ſome few Particulars pretended (but far from being ſufficiently proved) to have been deſcribed by her, upon the 29*th* of January at her Mother's, and upon the 1*ſt* of February, with regard to the Proſpect from the Window.

In the firſt Place, her Deſcription is extremely defective.

When ſhe was aſked by Mr. Alderman Chitty to enumerate all the Particulars in the Room, by which her Veracity was to be tried, and when it ſo much concerned her to recollect the whole, ſhe omitted ſeveral material Things, which could not poſſibly eſcape her Obſervation for a whole Month together.—The Jack-line and Pulley, and the broken Caſement over the Chimney, entirely forgot.---The three Saddles are not one of them mentioned,---nor the Cheſt of Drawers. And, inſtead of mentioning half a Load of Hay, ſhe in Effect denied there was any; for Part of her Complaint, which melted the Hearts of her Friends, as they themſelves have ſworn, was the Want of any Thing, but the cold, bare Floor to lie upon.

Can it be pretended, that any Alteration had been made, between the Time of her pretended Eſcape, and her going there again in three Days after? On the contrary, is it not fully proved, that all theſe Things had been there, unmoleſted, for a very long Time? Had they not Marks of Antiquity,---Marks which could not be made, but by PROVIDENCE ITSELF, or by the Creatures he formed for the Purpoſe? When the Cheſt of Drawers was removed, in order to ſee if it had been newly put there, it rended from the Wall a thouſand Cobwebs, covered with Duſt.

The ſame Obſervation occurred, upon removing the broken Caſement from off the Chimney Ledge;---that alſo appeared to have been fixed there by many Generations of Spiders.

And it is remarkable, that the Defendant herſelf was ſo ſtruck with the Force of theſe Objections, and found herſelf ſo much in Danger of immediate Detection, that ſhe then pretended to recollect ſome of the Things,---particularly one of the Saddles, which you are to ſuppoſe ſhe had forgot.

This proves, at leaſt, that the Things had not been put there to deceive her. And to ſatisfy you that her not having mentioned them in her Information did not proceed from Hurry or Surprize, Mr. Alderman Chitty ſwears, ſhe was under Examination above an Hour, with all her Friends, and none elſe, about her;---and that, after recounting all the Particulars ſhe thought fit to mention, ſhe, apprized of the Danger of omitting any Thing, was again aſked, "Whether there was any Thing "elſe in the Room?" To which ſhe coolly and deliberately anſwered, "NOTHING BUT THE THINGS IN THE PAPER."

But, what Excuſe ſoever may be invented for the Defectiveneſs of her Deſcription, who can account for its Falſity? How came ſhe to ſwear to an old Stool or two, an old Table, old Pictures over the Chimney, and a Grate in the Chimney?

Is it not moſt certain, none of theſe Things were, or had been, in the Room? The Proofs, that ſome of them had not, are ſo ſtrong, and of ſuch a Nature, that one is tempted to ſay, The Finger of God points out the Diſcovery of this Impoſture.

Had this Woman been once in this Room, even five Minutes together, could ſhe poſſibly have miſtaken it for a little, ſquare, dark Room? She might as well have called it an Amphitheatre, or a Ship; for no Deſcription could be more unlike. And yet, you muſt either think ſhe was actually there with her Eyes open, Light ſhining thro' two Windows and a thouſand Holes, and a Month's Leiſure for Obſervation, or elſe that ſhe is guilty of Perjury. For no Charity can impute all this to Miſtake.

Gentlemen, the pretended Manner of her Eſcape is another Proof of her Guilt.

At firſt ſhe ſwore ſhe eſcaped, "by making a Hole, and removing a "Pane of Glaſs, and ſo ſliding down over a Pent-houſe." But when ſhe afterwards went down to make Obſervations, ſeeing the Wall perpendicular from both Windows, and that there was no Pent-houſe or Shed near it, ſhe cut the Knot ſhe could not untie, and boldly ſwore, "SHE "JUMPED OUT OF THE WINDOW.

Was there no other Evidence in the Cauſe, this alone would be ſufficient to falſify her whole Story.

But ſhe was ſo unlucky, as to give ſtill further Proofs of her own Guilt; and not only contradicted herſelf, but aided the Detection of her Mother's Evidence.

Her Account of being carried between two Men, one at each Arm, thro' Biſhopſgate-Street, is totally irreconcileable with her being ſtunned by a Blow in MOORFIELDS, which "threw her into a Fit, wherein ſhe remain-"ed inſenſible for Four Hours after."

The Mother had adverti ſed her being heard to ſcream in Biſhopſgate-Street.

Is it not marvellous that Biſhopſgate-Street ſhould be mentioned by both Mother and Daughter upon the ſame Occaſion, when they had not ſeen each other, and this too merely by the Force of Imagination! For the Daughter, you ſee, had no Foundation for ſaying it; and what led the Mother to it, I ſhall ſpeak of, when I come to obſerve upon her Evidence.

The multiplying four, five, or ſix Pieces of Bread into four-and-twenty, will not be thought a trifling Miſtake, when we are tracing the ſeveral Marks of Falſhood, to detect ſo ſtrange a Tale.

When ſhe applied for a Warrant againſt the Woman who had taken her Stays, did ſhe give any Deſcription of Mary Squires, who, you ſee, is marked ſo, as to diſtinguiſh her from all the reſt of the Creation? The Defendant had told her whole Story in the Hearing of honeſt Mr. SCARRAT, who had been acquainted with Mrs. Wells, but did not diſcover, by any Deſcription of the Defendant's, that Wells was not the Woman who had robbed her. For Scarrat was preſent, when a Warrant was granted againſt Wells for the Felony.

By what Name will you call him, if he knew this to be a Miſtake, without attempting to rectify it?

One of her own Witneſſes proves, that when ſhe was going up the great Stair-Caſe, ſhe ſaid, "THESE ARE THE STAIRS UP WHICH I WAS "CARRIED."

This was after ſhe had been in the Kitchen; for they all agree ſhe was firſt carried into the Kitchen, but took no Notice there, that it was the Place wherein ſhe had been robbed of her Stays, or that it was contiguous to the Room in which ſhe had been confined.---They all agree likewiſe, that ſhe went up the great Stair-caſe into all the Rooms of the Houſe to which it led, without the leaſt Intimation, that the Room ſought for was upon a lower Floor, and but ſix or ſeven Steps from the Ground.

Her Behaviour upon this Occaſion ſtaggered the Faith of her Friend ADAMSON. Even He thought it a ſtrange Miſtake.

Gentlemen, the next Evidence we troubled you with, was out of her own Mouth. That Witneſs, though unfit to be believed in any Thing elſe, may fairly enough be admitted to give Teſtimony againſt herſelf; for the beſt Kind of Evidence is Confeſſion.

Before Mr. Alderman Chitty ſhe ſwore, ſhe had not drank up all the Water, even at her coming away, but left ſome of it behind her.

Before Mr. Fielding ſhe ſwore, ſhe drank it all up on the Friday.

In this Court ſhe ſwore, that ſhe drank up the laſt Drop about Half an Hour before her Eſcape.

Let Faction, in the Maſk of Charity, ſuggeſt Miſtake and Inadvertency, to palliate theſe Self-contradictions as much as the Defendant can wiſh; yet what Regard is due to her Oath, who can be drawn in to ſwear ſo raſhly?

Shall one, detected of ſo groſs Prevarication, be believed, upon her ſingle Teſtimony, in the moſt marvellous Tale which was ever heard?

Shall that Tale, patched up with irrelative Circumſtances, ſtand a Moment in Competition with the indubitable Proof of its Falſity?

Our next Evidence was the poſitive Teſtimony of eleven Witneſſes, in abſolute Contradiction to the whole Story of the Defendant's Confinement.

It was proved by moſt of thoſe Witneſſes, each Witneſs referring to ſeveral Circumſtances, and each Circumſtance ſupported by other Teſtimony, that Natus and his Wife lay in this very Room every Night of the Month of January 53.

Is it even attempted in the Defence to deny this? No other Anſwer is given to it than by attacking the Characters of Natus and Whiffin, which I ſhall obſerve upon hereafter, though it does not depend merely upon their Credit.

White, the Officer, ſwears he ſaw Natus's Wife coming out of this Room, as if juſt out of Bed, in the Morning, when he went down with Mr. Alderman Chitty's Warrant to apprehend the People of the Houſe. The Bed of Straw, with a Sack of Wool for the Bolſter, was particularly deſcribed by him, and many others.

Is there any Anſwer given, or even attempted, to any Part of the Evidence which relates to the cutting the Trees? and yet that Evidence is totally incompatible with the Truth of the Defendant's Story. So is the Evidence with regard to the Sign-Irons bought by Whiffin, and taken out of this very Room while Natus's Wife lay in the Hay-Bed; which alſo ſtands clear of Contradiction.

Permit me now, Gentlemen, to make a general Obſervation, which goes to all the Witneſſes for the Crown;---that their Behaviour, and the Manner of their giving Teſtimony, from firſt to laſt, carries with it the Air of Sincerity and Candour.

Was there a ſingle Witneſs produced, who ſeemed in the leaſt inclined to ſuppreſs the Truth, or who heſitated, prevaricated, or was pinched at any Queſtion? Did they not, every one of them, ſpeak out fully, clearly, and openly, ſo as even to force your Aſſent to the Evidence? But to how few of the Defendant's Witneſſes may the like Obſervation be applied? I appeal to your Senſes, whether Truth is not viſibly marked in this Proſecution.

This, Gentlemen, I think, is in general the Subſtance of the Evidence for the Crown.

I have recollected it as well as I could, without troubling you with every minute Circumſtance, which might poſſibly loſe its Force by a tedious Repetition. And when I reflect that all this Weight of Evidence is to prove that falſe, which in itſelf is impoſſible to be true, I have more Need to apologize for having already taken up ſo much of your Time.

But, Gentlemen, how well ſupported ſoever this Charge againſt the Priſoner is, ſhe had yet a Right to give the beſt Anſwer to it in her Power; to which you have attended with unwearied Patience. And this Defence, if what has been attempted deſerves to be ſo called, I muſt now beg Leave to conſider and reply to.

In order to beſpeak your Approbation of what was to follow, the Gentlemen, who are of Counſel for the Defendant, were pleaſed to make their firſt Addreſs to your Paſſions; they hope, that if this Caſe ſhould appear doubtful, if you can impute the Defendant's Evidence to a Miſtake with regard to the Perſon of Mary Squires, your Compaſſion will incline you to acquit her.

In this I agree with them moſt heartily; and ſo far as your Humanity, under the Regulation of Reaſon, can afford her any Aſſiſtance, I wiſh her the full Enjoyment of it. If it ſhould lead you to acquit her, I ſhall for my own Part, and I hope every body elſe will, chearfully acquieſce under your Verdict.

But you will remember, that when Men ſuffer their Compaſſion to ſilence the Calls of Reaſon and Juſtice, they proſtitute the brighteſt Ornament of human Nature;---that the moſt deſerving Object of our tendereſt Concern is the Commonwealth;---and that whenever we extend Compaſſion to any one, at the Expence of the PUBLIC, we are guilty of the higheſt Injuſtice, and anſwerable for it to Society.

I could wiſh indeed, for her own Sake, that the Defendant's Title to Humanity from others, had received no Interruption from the Want of it in herſelf.

When a poor, friendleſs Wretch, the Object of no one's Pity, ſtood at this Bar upon Trial for her Life; the leaſt Remains of Humanity would have ſuggeſted to this Defendant to relax a little of her Severity towards her---If there was a Poſſibility of Miſtake, Compaſſion would have inclined her to doubt at leaſt; but if there was no Poſſibility of it at that Time, why ſhould it be ſuggeſted now?

Surely, the Defendant can have no Pretence to this Plea, having diſowned it herſelf, upon the moſt ſolemn Occaſion.--She ſwore poſitively to take away an innocent Woman's Life; and being now called upon to anſwer for it in a criminal Proſecution, 'tis too late to pretend ſhe was miſtaken.

It is objected, with an Air of great Seriouſneſs, that the Evidence for the Proſecution is inſufficient, becauſe there is no Proof where the Defendant really was during the Month of January.---An Objection which has been ſounded in the Ears of the Multitude, who have been fooled into a Concluſion, that if the Proſecutor could not prove this, ſhe muſt have been confined at Wells's.

I am ſorry the Defendant's Counſel have no better Opinion of this Jury, than to imagine that they are to be captivated by ſuch an Objection.

It was incumbent on the Proſecution to prove ſhe was not at Wells's; and if ſhe was not there, it is of no Conſequence where ſhe was.

However, if it could be fully proved, tho' it be merely a Queſtion of Curioſity, I ſhould be glad of it, for the Sake of ſilencing every Clamour. But her Friends, to do them Juſtice, have been ſo faithful to her, that this Secret is yet impenetrable.

I am ſtrongly inclined to include Mr. Scarrat in this Compliment; though I cannot conceive ſo highly of him, as to ſuppoſe he would retain this Secret at the Expence of his Intereſt; and therefore, when he finds the divulging it conſiſtent with his own Safety, he may, perhaps, chuſe to oblige the Public with this Diſcovery, rather than ſatisfy Juſtice in a Way that may be more inconvenient to him.

This Man's Behaviour, throughout the whole of this Affair, according to his own Account of it, will ſave me from the Imputation of a raſh Suggeſtion. He, who thought fit, at firſt, to help her to a Deſcription, by which her Evidence was afterwards to be authenticated, and to perjure himſelf in order to corroborate that Evidence, may fairly be preſumed a principal Agent in the whole Contrivance.

Where was ſhe? is a Queſtion we are not concerned to reſolve: But if you deſire to be further ſatisfied in it, aſk Scarrat: If he refuſes to inform you---aſk the Mother: If ſhe too refuſes it---I would refer you to her Conjurer: And if he would reveal ſo much of his Art, as to inform you what led him to tell Mrs. Canning, that her Daughter was in the Hands of an old Woman, and would ſoon return, you would not be far from unravelling this Myſtery.

But, in all Likelihood, the Time is not far off for an ample Diſcovery.

The Defendant has been hitherto very well ſupported by her Managers (that being the Name by which her Friends have thought fit to call themſelves in their late Advertiſement). But when ſhe ſhall be delivered up to Juſtice, and find that thoſe People can no longer protect her; when ſhe ſhall ſeriouſly reflect upon the Diſtreſs to which her Guilt has reduced her; Conſcience, perhaps, may prompt her to atone in ſome Meaſure for the Miſchiefs ſhe has occaſioned, and ſhe may, at the ſame Time, hope to obtain ſome Remiſſion of Puniſhment, by the Gratification of an univerſal Curioſity.

But, ſay the Gentlemen, why not call Lucy Squires to confirm her Brother's Evidence? She was a Fellow-Traveller with him and her Mother through the whole Journey; and therefore they inſiſt, that our not producing her, which they call a Concealment, is the ſtrongeſt Proof in the World that the Evidence of her Brother was falſe.

Was ſhe concealed? You ſaw her every Day during the whole Trial; ſhe is yet in Court; and if you think it would be material, in a Caſe of ſo much Conſequence, you have a Right even now to her Evidence.

But the true and only Reaſon of our not calling her, is her groſs Stupidity: Before her Brother was examined, I confeſs it was our Intention to have called her to the ſame Facts; but finding that, in the Courſe of his very long Croſs-Examination, he had fallen into many Blunders, and being told that Lucy was, if poſſible, ſtill more ſtupid than him, we did not think it prudent to riſque the Credit of any Part of our Caſe upon the Evidence of ſuch a ſilly Creature.

The Objection to the Brother's Evidence, from his being ſo much more exact in the Particulars of his Journey from South-Parrot towards London, than from London downwards, will have no Weight, when you conſider that his Memory, as to the former, has been refreſhed by his having ſince travelled that Road with Mr. Willis, and others, five Times, in order to aſcertain the Places particularly; and that his not having re-travelled any Part of the Road through which he had gone before he reached South-Parrot, is the probable and natural Reaſon of his Incapacity to deſcribe the other Part of his Journey.

You may eaſily conceive, in what an irregular Manner Gypſies dealing in ſmuggled Goods traverſe the Country. They avoid Market-Towns as much as poſſible; for, being Vagabonds, they are aware of the Danger of falling into the Hands of the Civil Magiſtrate.

But why not call Virtue Hall, in order to ſupport her Recantation from her Evidence againſt Squires? The learned Gentleman, who made that Objection, ſuppoſes the Omiſſion to ariſe from our Apprehenſion ſhe would have relapſed. If that be really his Opinion, I ſhould be glad to know, why ſhe was not called for the Defendant? For, they know, ſhe has attended the Trial every Day.

There are two Reaſons why we did not produce her as a Witneſs; one of which has been mentioned by the learned Recorder; that by Law ſhe was not admiſſible as a Witneſs to retract her own Evidence on the Trial of Squires.

Upon the Trial of Titus Oates, in the firſt Year of King James the Second, (I mean his firſt Trial, Vide Vol. IV. p. 47.) the Counſel for the Crown would have produced one William Smith, in order to prove, that what he had ſworn at a former Trial was falſe, and that he was perſuaded to it by Oates the Defendant. My Lord Chief-Juſtice Jefferys (who would have been glad to have hanged Titus Oates, and who of all Men living could leaſt be ſuſpected of Partiality towards him) rejected the Evidence; and being told by Sir Robert Sawyer, the then Attorney-General, that the like Evidence had been admitted in former Trials, the Chief-Juſtice (who, with all his Faults, has been ever eſteemed a great Lawyer, and, I am ſure, in this Inſtance did no Diſhonour to his moral Character) ſaid, "he hated ſuch Precedents in all Times;---that he could "not believe a Villain in one Word he ſaid, when he owned that he foreſwore "himſelf; and that he ought never to be received as a Witneſs." And in his Opinion all the Judges of the King's-Bench concurred.

But I had another Reaſon for not calling Virtue Hall.---As an honeſt Man, I dared not; nor could I reconcile it to the Hopes of ſupporting my own Character an Hour longer. For how immoral and treacherous would it have been to produce a Witneſs, to prove ſhe had been perjured in a former Trial; when by that very Evidence ſhe would have expoſed herſelf to Puniſhment!

Beſides, what Degree of Credit could be given to a Witneſs offering ſuch Teſtimony?

Gentlemen, there is a Reflection thrown upon Mr. Naſh, Mr. Hague, and Mr. Aldridge, for their not appearing on the Trial of Mary Squires; as their Teſtimony would have been extremely material upon that Occaſion, and, in all Probability, would have prevented her Conviction.

I muſt confeſs, that their Conduct, in this Reſpect, is not ſtrictly juſtifiable; nor are the Reaſons aſſigned for their Abſence ſufficient. This ſeems to be their own Judgment afterwards, when, ſenſible of their Neglect, they made the beſt Atonement in their Power. Mr. Naſh was ſo affected when he found the Woman was convicted, contrary to his Expectation, that he declares he was very uneaſy, and ſhould never have forgiven himſelf, if ſhe had been executed.

Finding ſhe was convicted, what was the Behaviour of theſe Gentlemen? They readily aſſiſted in an Application to the Throne for Mercy; and, in all Likelihood, the Facts diſcloſed in their Affidavits materially contributed to the ſaving the Convict's Life.

The Counſel for the Defendant have thrown another Reflection on Mr. Naſh, on account of the Letter which he wrote on the 10th of February to Mr. Lyon. Theſe are the Words of that Letter:---"Mr. Lyon, I am "informed by Mr. Aldridge, who has been at Enfield, that if a Perſon "be appointed there to receive Contributions, ſome Money may be "raiſed

"raiſed in that Place for the unhappy poor Girl. I wiſh you Succeſs, "and am yours."

The Gentlemen, by Miſtake, (for I dare ſay they would not miſrepreſent it knowingly) have taken Notice of this, as propoſing Contributions to carry on a Proſecution. But you ſee there is not a Word about a Proſecution, for it is only to raiſe Money for the unhappy poor Girl.---What does this prove, beſides Mr. Naſh's Compaſſion and Friendſhip to the Defendant, in diſtreſſed Circumſtances, whether her Story were true or falſe? She was poor, and under Affliction; and whether that Affliction was the Conſequence of Guilt or Innocence, his Humanity felt for her.

But there is a wide Difference between aſſiſting the Girl, and aſſiſting to carry on a Proſecution. This Letter ſhews, at leaſt, that Mr. Naſh did not then bear the leaſt Ill-will either to her, or her Mother: And ſeeing there is no Evidence, that he has ſince had any Reaſon to alter his Sentiments; What, but his Duty to the Public, brings him here? What ſhould induce him to appear in a Court of Juſtice, and perjure himſelf, to ruin a poor, unhappy, innocent Creature, who never offended him?

It is not pretended, that he can propoſe any Sort of Intereſt to himſelf, or the Gratification of any Paſſion whatever, by ſo foul a Villainy. And I defy Malice itſelf to ſuggeſt any thing to the Prejudice of his Character. He, as well as Mr. Hague, and Mr. Aldridge, being Citizens of extenſive Acquaintance, it is very likely their Characters are not unknown to you---and if ſo, their Credit muſt remain unſhaken.

Gentlemen, having now gone through the ſeveral Objections which were made by the Defendant's Counſel, I muſt intreat your Patience while I obſerve upon the Evidence which hath been offered on her Behalf.

Through the whole Defence, they have not attempted to prove a ſingle Fact in expreſs Contradiction to any Part of our Evidence, except to the Alibi of the Gypſey.

Neither have they attempted to impeach the Character of any one of our Witneſſes, except Natus and his Wife, and alſo Ezra Whiffin, by a little Side-reflection, which is now wiped away.---All the other Witneſſes for the Crown ſtand clear of Imputation.

It is alſo obſervable, upon conſidering every Part of the Defence, that the Defendant may be guilty of the Perjury charged in this Indictment, if all her own Witneſſes ſpeak Truth; but that ſhe cannot be innocent, unleſs fifty of ours are perjured.

For, is there one Circumſtance in the whole Defence, which neceſſarily infers a Belief of her Story? Or, is there one in the Charge, which does not clearly infer the contrary? So that, if you convict this Woman, you find a Perjury upon the fulleſt Proof that ever came before a Court of Juſtice; but if you acquit her, you muſt diſbelieve Facts uncontradicted, yet ſworn to by Witneſſes of irreproachable Characters.

If theſe general Obſervations are not juſtified by the Evidence you have heard on both Sides, I ſhall be very ready to retract them; for nothing is more remote from my Intention, than to miſlead you.

All the Evidence for the Defendant tends to prove,—That ſhe was miſſing from the 1ſt to the 29th of January:---That ſhe was in good Health on the 1ſt, and very ill on the 29th:---That ſhe was ſeen upon the Road between London and Enfield-Waſh, on the 1ſt of January at Night, between two Men:---That ſhe was ſeen in the ſame Road upon her Return Home:---That on the Night of her Return, and three Days afterwards, when ſhe went down to Enfield with her Friends, ſhe told her Story with ſuch Clearneſs and Conſiſtency, as ought to induce a Belief of it:---That Mary Squires was really at Enfield-Waſh on the 1ſt of January:---That Squires and Wells have confeſſed both the Robbery and Confinement: --That Natus and his Wife, and Ezra Whiffin, are a Sett of Wretches not fit to be believed:---And laſtly, That the Defendant herſelf bears an exceeding good Character.

What of all this is material, namely, the Defendant's being met upon the Enfield Road,---the Contra-alibi (if I may be allowed the Expreſſion) of Mary Squires,---the Confeſſion of Squires and Wells,---and the Defendant's Account of herſelf, I ſhall take Notice of, when I apply myſelf to the Witneſſes produced to prove theſe ſeveral Matters. And you will find, upon Conſideration, that it was not the Defendant, but other Perſons, who were met upon the Road the 1ſt and 29th of January, ſuppoſing their own Witneſſes ſwear truly;--- that the Evidence to encounter our Proof of the Alibi is extremely weak, uncertain, and improbable;---that the pretended Confeſſion of Squires and Wells was neither more nor leſs than a Declaration of their Innocence;---and that the Defendant's Behaviour upon her ſuppoſed Return, and afterwards at Enfield, is a further Confirmation of the Charge againſt her.

As to the reſt of the Evidence;

Whether the Defendant was miſſing from the 1ſt to the 29th of January, concludes nothing to the Purpoſe, unleſs it be proved ſhe was at Wells's. Nor is it material to this Cauſe, that the Defendant was in an ill State of Health on the 29th of January and afterwards, unleſs it were alſo ſhewn, that her Diſorder was the Effect of ſuch ill Uſage, as ſhe pretends to have endured.---But you obſerve, by the very Witneſs, the Phyſician, produced for that Purpoſe, that her Illneſs might proceed from other Cauſes.

The Characters of Natus and Whiffin I ſhall take Notice of, when I come to that Part of the Caſe.

The only remaining Evidence for the Defendant, was to her own good Character, to which ſeveral Witneſſes appeared;---but, thinking it immaterial, and for the ſaving Time and Trouble, I was ready to admit it. And becauſe ſuch Admiſſion ſhould be taken in the ſtrongeſt Terms againſt us, I am willing this young Woman at the Bar ſhould be conſidered (excluſive of the preſent Charge) as a modeſt, virtuous, honeſt, creditable Girl, fit to be believed in any thing, as far as any body ſhould be believed upon the like Occaſion.

But there is a Time, Gentlemen, wherein People begin to be wicked; With ſome it happens early, with others late: Some are miſled by ill Example and bad Education, and others by various Accidents.

What was the Cauſe of this unfortunate young Creature's deviating from the Path of Virtue ſo far, as at laſt to plunge herſelf into all this Guilt and Miſery, does not clearly appear: She was meanly, though not wickedly brought up, and had lately, you ſee, been a Servant in an Alehouſe, where we may ſuppoſe, at leaſt, that ſhe was not much ſtrengthened in Virtue. I do not pretend to ſay, there is any direct Proof of her Want of Chaſtity; but I think it may fairly enough be conjectured as the Incentive of her preſent Guilt; but whatever has been the Cauſe of it, ſhe has been proved guilty of Perjury, and as ſhe once bore a fair Character, it is probable that ſhe did not fall into this Sin at once. Which, I think, is all that can be inferred from her good Character.

I have no Objection to the Evidence of Mr. and Mrs. Colley, the Uncle and Aunt: For the Defendant might have parted with them at Houndſditch in good Health on the 1ſt of January, and they not ſee her again till the 29th.

But Mrs. Canning, the Defendant's Mother, who is called to prove ſeveral Circumſtances, has ſaid enough to create a Jealouſy, at leaſt, that neither her Daughter's Perjury, nor the Motives to it, are unknown to her.

Firſt, With regard to the Papers that were ſent to the Office, in order to be printed in Advertiſements; in one of which it was ſaid, that the Defendant had in her Pocket Twelve Shillings and Nine-pence Half-penny. She tells you, that in the Morning her Daughter had Half a Guinea, three Shillings, and a Farthing:---That ſhe lent her a Box to put the Half-Guinea in, and that the Girl took her Money out, and ſhewed it her. Why then did the Mother propoſe to advertiſe, as if her Daughter had juſt twelve Shillings and Nine-pence Half-penny? Why not inſert Half a Guinea, three Shillings, and a Farthing? Becauſe the little Brother had told her, ſhe had changed ſome Money, and had given to each of the Children a Penny; and ſo computing what remained of the thirteen Shillings and Six-pence Farthing, ſhe reckoned that the Girl muſt have twelve Shillings and Nine-pence Half-penny in her Pocket when ſhe parted with her Uncle at Houndſditch. Now, if this be true, the Defendant's Account of the Money is falſe: She ſwore, that the Men robbed her of Half a Guinea and three Shillings. The Farthing, you obſerve, was not taken from her; for ſhe brought it Home, and gave it, the ſame Night, to one of her Brothers. The Mother, being pinched at this obvious Objection, endeavoured to remove it by leſſening the Force of the Evidence ſhe had given before; and by way of Recollection ſays, ſhe is not poſitive whether the thirteen Shillings and Six-pence Farthing were not ſhewn to her after the Half-pence had been given to the Children. And if it was after, then the Mother is in Hopes ſhe has entirely removed the Objection, and left the whole Sum of thirteen Shillings and Six-pence in the Daughter's Pocket, which was the Sum ſhe ſwore to have been robbed of. But with all the Mother's Cunning and ſudden Recollection, Truth is too hard for her; for by forgetting a little Circumſtance, (Mr. Fielding's "pretty Incident of the Penny Mince-pye,") ſhe is in the ſame Dilemma as before. For, ſuppoſing the Half-pence had been given to the Children before ſhe had ſhewn the Half-Guinea, three Shillings, and a Farthing, yet the Mince-pye was bought after ſhe parted with her Uncle, as was ſworn by the Defendant: Now, out of what Money was the Pye paid for? And if ſhe had no Half-pence, and only Half a Guinea, three Shillings, and a Farthing, before ſhe bought the Pye, then how could ſhe be robbed of Half a Guinea and three Shillings in Moorfields afterwards? Thus that pretty Incident, "which her learned Advocate, in his Pamphlet, ſays, "poſſibly ſaved this poor Girl's Life," leads to a Detection of her Guilt upon the Evidence of her own Mother.

The Mother mentions another ſtrange Circumſtance. "She thought "the Girl had been murdered by the Jews, and thrown into Houndſditch." Why then did ſhe advertiſe her loſt, ſtrayed, or miſſing by her Friends? Why no ſearching for the Body? Was there a human Creature ſent to inquire about it? Beſides too, the very next Witneſs, the Apprentice, ſwears, what ſtands in flat Contradiction to the Miſtreſs, "That Mrs. "Canning told him, ſhe thought her Daughter had been ſnapped up by "ſome rakiſh young Gentleman."

The ſcreaming out of a Coach, in Biſhopſgate-Street, ſeems to be one of the wandering Thoughts ſhe ſpeaks of; for, though it is pretended ſhe received Information of that Matter by the Woman of the Oil-ſhop, yet they have not thought fit to produce this Perſon; which, in a Caſe where every Circumſtance is material, is an Omiſſion one cannot account for to the Credit of the Defence.

But it ſeems, as if the Thoughts of both Mother and Daughter wandered towards the ſame Objects; for the Daughter dreamt of Biſhopſgate-Street, while ſhe was in a convulſive Fit.

Then as to the CONJURER; to whom, by the bye, there was not a Word mentioned about being murdered by the Jews.

She was introduced to this illuſtrious Perſonage with great Solemnity; The Lights, the Skeleton, the Magic Inſtruments, the Wand, the Circle, and all the Apparatus proper to inſpire a poor ignorant Woman with Awe, and engage her to a Diſcovery of what ſhe wanted to know, were all before her.

She was ſo terrified, that you find, ſhe hardly remembers one Word ſhe ſaid to him; and yet ſhe muſt have ſaid ſomething very material, inſtructing him to give her ſo good an Account of her Daughter.

At laſt ſhe recollects, that ſhe did tell him ſomething about BISHOPSGATE-STREET, though ſhe does not remember the Particulars. But ſhe muſt have gone much further, before the Doctor could have found out, that her Daughter was in the Hands of an old Woman; that ſhe ſhould advertiſe her once more, and ſhe would come again. Whether ſhe really had this Intelligence from the Conjurer, or, in order to carry on the Plot, thought fit to invent it for the Amuſement of her credulous Friends, who had lent her Money for his Fee, is not eaſy to ſay: But either Way the Inference is, that ſhe knew more of her Daughter, than is conſiſtent with the Defendant's Innocence.

For, if what the Daughter ſwore had been true, how could the Mother, at one Time believing her murdered by the Jews at Houndſditch, and at another that ſhe was ſnapped up by ſome rakiſh young Gentleman, be ſo ſuddenly undeceived, and diſcover ſhe was in the Hands of an old Woman, and would return?

When

When one conſiders the Whole of this Woman's Evidence together, the ſeveral Advertiſements,---the Conference with this pretended Conjurer,---her wandering Thoughts,---the putting up Bills in the Church, and the Meeting-houſes of Preſbyterians and Methodiſts, to pray for her Daughter's ſafe Return, (by which the pious Congregations were prediſpoſed to Charity)--the nightly repeated Prayers to the ſame Purpoſe with the Apprentice at Home,---particularly the praying with him on the 29th of January for the Daughter's Apparition, (never mentioned till that very Evening)---that Prayer anſwered in the ſame Moment by the Daughter's ſuddenly ruſhing into the Room,---her Mother's pretended Surprize at ſeeing her, "Feel her, feel her, 'tis an Apparition!" and then fainting away; all theſe Things put together, together too with the Account the Daughter gave before Mr. Alderman Chitty about Biſhopſgate-Street, though they do not directly prove, yet ſurely they create ſomething more than a Suſpicion that the Whole was a Contrivance.

To ſupport the Defendant's Evidence, as to the Manner of her Eſcape out of Window, Mrs. Canning the Mother, James Lord the Apprentice, and Mrs. Myers, have ſworn, that her Ear (which the Defendant ſaid was ſcratched in breaking out of the Window) was bloody when ſhe returned Home. The Mother ſays, the "Ear was then bleeding." James Lord ſays, "it was all over bloody, and the Handkerchief bloody." And Mrs. Myers ſays, the Blood then dropt from her Ear upon her Shoulder."

This was ſix Hours after the Time of her leaving Enfield-Waſh; and, according to the Defendant's own Evidence, ſhe wrapped a white Linen Handkerchief round her Head, which ſhe found in Wells's Room, and wore it, inſtead of a Cap, all the Way to her Mother's: Now, if her Ear bled at the Rate thoſe Witneſſes would have you believe, the Handkerchief muſt have been extremely bloody in one particular Place. That Handkerchief has been produced to ſhew to the Witneſſes under another Head of Evidence, and is now before you. Does it not give the Lye to theſe three Witneſſes? It has indeed the Marks of little Spots of Blood upon it, but in different Places, all over the Handkerchief, and not at all correſponding with their Teſtimony, but rather like Dots made by a Finger on Purpoſe.

But it being a good while ſince Mrs. Canning had the Poſſeſſion of this Handkerchief, I do not wonder at her forgetting in what Manner ſhe had dreſſed it up, ſeeing her Want of Memory has betrayed her into a flat Contradiction to the Evidence ſhe herſelf gave upon the Trial of Squires. For ſhe now ſwears her Daughter came Home with two Handkerchiefs on her Head, and that "ſhe had no Cap on;" but upon that Trial, ſhe ſaid nothing of the Handkerchief, but ſwore, that, upon her Return, "ſhe had a Cap on."

Gentlemen, it is an Objection to the Credit of the Apprentice, that he has been hid, till he is brought here as a Witneſs, leſt he ſhould make Diſcoveries; for when Mr. Biddulph went to the Houſe in order to aſk him a few Queſtions, another Perſon was impoſed upon him in his Stead.

It will be material to another Part of the Evidence afterwards, to recollect Lord's Deſcription of the Defendant upon the 29th of January, that "ſhe was black and blue as if beaten," and that "her Arms and Face "were as black as his Hat." He alſo tells you, what is contradictory to all the reſt of the Evidence, that on her firſt coming Home, before Mr. Scarrat or any body came in, ſhe ſaid ſhe had been confined at Enfield-Waſh. If you conſider the whole Tenor of the Evidence for the Defendant, you muſt be convinced that this Lad has ſwore falſly, and that he was hid for a very iniquitous Purpoſe.

The Name of Mr. Scarrat, the next Witneſs, I have had Occaſion to mention once or twice already, in Terms not much to his Advantage.

He came to the Defendant, before ſhe was asked any Queſtions;---one of the Witneſſes ſays, it was before ſhe anſwered any Queſtions.

What brought him there, a total Stranger both to the Mother and Daughter? for, if you can believe him, he had never ſpoke to either of them in his Life.

He ſays, he was prompted merely by Curioſity, upon hearing, in the Neighbourhood, that Betty Canning was returned Home: And the Moment he came in he asked her, "where ſhe had been confined?"

Ready to ſatisfy this Stranger at once, ſhe told him ſhe had been confined ſomewhere on the Hertfordſhire Road, for ſhe remembered the Coachman's going by.

The next Queſtion was, "How far from London?" She anſwered, "Near nine or ten Miles."

Without further Inquiry, SCARRAT inſtantly replied, "I'll lay a Guinea to a Farthing, ſhe has been at Mother Wells's:" She immediately ſaid, "I think I did hear the Name of Wills or Wells:" And he then helped her to a perfect Deſcription of Wells's Houſe, and the Places about it.

Mr. Scarrat proceeds to aſk her various Queſtions, in order (as he ſays) to be ſatisfied, whether ſhe really had been there. He aſked her about the Proſpect from the Window,—the plough'd Land,—the Brook,—the Tanner's,—and every remarkable Thing he could recollect; and to every Queſtion ſhe anſwered in the Affirmative.

If Scarrat really meant to be ſatisfied whether ſhe had been at Wells's, ſeeing ſhe anſwered affirmatively to every Queſtion, why did he not put one Queſtion at leaſt, to which her anſwering Yes would have convinced him, ſhe had not been there? The Reaſon of that Omiſſion may be eaſily collected from the reſt of his Behaviour.

Being aſked, whether he knew Mrs. Wells's, he would have you think he only knew her Houſe by paſſing and repaſſing. Was you never there? Why, "he believes"---he is not ſure---"he has been there once or twice." No oftener?---Upon your Oath, have not you been there more than twice? "I believe I have been there two or three Times."---Four Times, Sir? "He "might have been there three or four Times." At laſt it came up to ten. "He could not ſay but he had been there ten Times!" But, ſays he, I had never been in the Hay-loft. In this I believe him, becauſe the Defendant appears to have been helped to no Deſcription of it.---If he had been there, he might have aſked ſome Queſtions about that too, which ſhe would alſo have anſwered in the Affirmative: But though he might have never been in this Hay-loft, yet he had been all round the Houſe, and muſt have known by the Outſide, that there was ſuch a Room, and where the Windows were.

He ſwears further, that as ſoon as the Defendant went into the Kitchen at Wells's, ſhe pointed to the Door leading to the Workſhop, though it was ſhut, and ſaid, "This is the Door leading to the Room in which "I was confined." But Scarrat, not knowing what the other Witneſſes had ſworn, after having out-run them all, was reduced to the Neceſſity of giving Evidence againſt the Defendant, by anſwering this Queſtion, viz. If ſhe had ever been before in the Kitchen with the Door of the Workſhop open, and yet had taken no Notice of it, and had never pretended to recollect the Place till after ſhe was in the Workſhop, and this too after ſhe had been in every other Room of the Houſe, ſuppoſing all this, what he would have thought of her? Little dreaming of what had been proved, he anſwered, it would have led him to diſbelieve her whole Story.

This is the Man who was preſent at Mr. Alderman Chitty's granting a Warrant againſt Mrs. Wells for a capital Felony; who knew by the Deſcription ſhe could not be the Perſon meant, and yet he never dropt the leaſt Hint to prevent it: And now he denies bearing any Ill-will to Mrs. Wells, his old Acquaintance, or that he ever vowed Revenge againſt her.

This is the Man, who, though an entire Stranger to Canning, firſt helped her to a perfect Deſcription of the Places about Wells's Houſe, which gave Credit to her Story; and afterwards, in order to give her Credit with a Jury to convict two innocent Women, by way of Corroboration, as he terms it, committed Perjury.

Mary Myers and Mrs. Woodward ſay, the Defendant's Shift was neither draggled, nor dirty. Yet this was the Shift, you are to ſuppoſe ſhe had on, when two Men had dragged her twelve Miles, for ſix Hours together, through dirty Roads, in January---which Shift ſhe wore for a Month in a filthy Room, and upon her Return through the ſame dirty Road.

Had this been true, not only the Shift would have been draggled and dirty, but her Petticoat, Shoes, and Stockings muſt have been extremely ſo---Why were they never produced?

Mr. Lyon, Mr. Wintlebury, and Mr. Adamſon are next called to prove what paſſed at Enfield-Waſh.

The firſt of theſe Witneſſes, being an exceeding honeſt Man, and cautious of what he ſwears, has done the Defendant ſo little Service by his Evidence, that he might very well have been ſpared. He tells you, that he himſelf has no other Reaſon for believing what the Defendant ſaid, than becauſe ſhe ſaid it; for that he never made the leaſt Inquiry about it, but ſwallowed the whole Story at once upon the Credit of this Servant of his, without ſuppoſing it poſſible ſhe ſhould tell him a Lye. Had his Head been as good as his Heart, he would certainly have required ſome Reaſon for aſſenting to the moſt wonderful Story he ever heard in his Life.

But as much as I admire his Goodneſs, I cannot help being ſorry for his Credulity; becauſe I am apprehenſive, his being ſo eaſily to be impoſed on, might have encouraged the Defendant at firſt to invent this ridiculous Excuſe for abſenting ſo long from his Service.

Mr. Wintlebury endeavours to account for the Defendant's ſaying there was more Hay in the Room than when ſhe had been confined there, by ſwearing that it appeared to have been toſſed up, and hollow towards the North Window. But this ſtands contradicted by almoſt every Witneſs.

He ſays alſo, That George Squires endeavoured to go away in a Hurry, and that he would have avoided an Examination. Though this is not much to the Purpoſe, yet it is a very ſuſpicious Evidence; for Squires was ſo well guarded, it was hardly poſſible for him to eſcape; and there being no Charge againſt him, nor the Defendant ſo much as pretending to have ever ſeen him before, what had he to apprehend, which ſhould make him attempt it? Beſides, you find, he voluntarily and readily gave a full Account of himſelf and his Mother, the Moment his Mother was charged with the Robbery, by declaring that they were at Acbotſbury on the 1ſt of January, and for ſeveral Days after.

Mr. Adamſon owns the Defendant made no Obſervation in the Kitchen: And yet you find, even by her own Witneſſes, that ſhe could have ſeen near Two-thirds of it from the Room in which ſhe is ſuppoſed to have been confined. None of them deny this; and ſome admit, that the Hole between the Hay-loft and the Kitchen was ſo large, that ſhe might have looked through the Kitchen into the Road. Now, if ſhe had been in this Hay-loft for a whole Month together, was it poſſible, when ſhe was brought to the Kitchen again, ſhe ſhould forget, that it was contiguous to the Hay-loft, and leading to it by only five or ſix Steps? Whereas you find by this Witneſs, that when ſhe was firſt brought into the Houſe, ſeeing the Stair-caſe which faces the Street-door, ſhe immediately ſaid, ſhe believed, "that was the Stair-caſe ſhe was carried up."

It appears inconteſtably, that this Stair-caſe is at a conſiderable Diſtance from the Hay-loft, and has no Sort of Communication with it. And Adamſon himſelf allows, it is not at all like the little Flight of Steps leading from the Kitchen;—that it ſtruck him, for he thought it ſtrange ſhe ſhould make ſuch a Miſtake. How contradictory to each other are the Teſtimonies of this Man and Scarrat! Obſerve here the good Effects of a ſeparate Examination.

When ſhe was carried into the Hay-loft, did ſhe immediately ſay, (what ſhe muſt have known before ſhe got up three of the Steps, if ſhe had ever been there before) This is the Place? No.—But when ſhe was in the Room, and after a Pauſe, ſhe recollected, (having ſeen every other Room of the Houſe) "This is the Room, but there is more Hay in it." Adamſon tells you, it occurred to him to ſearch about the Houſe, whether there had been any Hay lately carried there; but that there was no Appearance of any,---not a ſingle Blade could be found.

Not recovered from the Amazement into which her owning the Stair-caſe had thrown him, and having yet received no Proof of her Sincerity, he deviſed a moſt ingenious Trial, to ſatisfy himſelf that the Defendant had been really confined in the Hay-loft. And this was by aſking her concerning the Proſpect from the Window. But this ſagacious Gentleman had not thought of the Experiment, until ſhe had been in the Room for the Space of five or ſix Minutes, to furniſh herſelf with Obſervations.

And, after all, what was her Anſwer? "Hills and Trees at a Diſtance." The Chances were ſo many in her Favour, that Hills and Trees might might be ſeen from any Country Window, that ſhe might have ventured this, before ſhe was carried there. But if Mr. Adamſon had not been over-fond of removing Doubts, he would certainly have required a more ample Deſcription of a Proſpect ſhe pretended to have had for a Month together. The Trees were almoſt peeping in at the Window, and muſt have been ſeen by her, as well as the Hills, as ſoon as ſhe entered the Room.—But beſides theſe, there were many other Things (as you find by the Witneſſes) obſervable from the Room. A Hedge, and a Ditch broad enough for a Foot-way, juſt under the ſame Window,---ſeveral Fields, both plowed and in Graſs, and a Variety of other Things proper to be mentioned, in Anſwer to ſuch a Queſtion, of ſuch a Tendency. And yet, you obſerve, the Anſwer of "Hills and Trees at a Diſtance," was ſufficient with Mr. Adamſon to deſtroy the glaring Proof ſhe had juſt before given him of her Inſincerity.

He alſo ſwears, he helped to pull down the Boards from the Window, and that Mr. Colley aſſiſted in it. This was a Fact ſo very material, tending to deſtroy one of the capital Objections to the Defendant's Credit, that one ſhould have expected the fulleſt Evidence to prove it. Colley had been before called to Facts infinitely leſs material, but he has not mentioned a Word of this. From whence one might fairly conclude, that Colley's Account of this Matter would have done the Defendant or Mr. Adamſon no Service.

The Willingneſs of Adamſon to reconcile all Difficulties, and regain for the Defendant a forfeited Credit, appears by his riding back to aſk her about the Hay. To obviate this Objection to himſelf, he has ventured to deny even his ſaying to her, "What! Hay, Bet!" But he dares not diſown his riding back to inform himſelf about it; and another of the Defendant's Witneſſes, who was then with her, ſwears to the very Words. That other Witneſs was material to ſeveral Facts, as well as Mr. Adamſon; and as one of them muſt be forſworn (unleſs the Doctrine of Miſtake is to prevail univerſally), it will be of equal Advantage to the Proſecution, give up which you pleaſe.

Beals, the Turnpike-Man, was the next Witneſs to prove his ſeeing the Defendant on the 1ſt of January carried by two Men in the Road towards Enfield. But what does he prove? Moſt clearly, that he never ſaw her there; which appears paſt all Doubt, even by the Defendant's own Teſtimony. She ſwore, ſhe was ſtripped of her Gown and Apron in Moorfields, and had neither of them on when ſhe arrived at Wells's; but Beals ſwears, the Woman he ſaw had a light coloured Gown and an Apron on: So that, of all the Women in the World, whoever it was, certainly it was not Elizabeth Canning.

There is another Reaſon, why ſhe could not be the Perſon. Canning was inſenſible, in a convulſive Fit, and therefore unable to walk a Yard; but the Woman Beals ſaw, ſo far from being borne by two Men, was walking very faſt, "nimbly going along the Road, ſobbing and crying; whilſt one of the Men was pulling her on, ſaying, "Come along, you are drunk;" the other following, "Lord, how drunk ſhe is!"---Could this be Elizabeth Canning? Were the Cries he heard, like the Screams of a Woman in a convulſive Fit? Could Elizabeth Canning, in her then Condition, without either Gown or Apron, be the Perſon this Witneſs deſcribes? How many Impoſſibilities muſt be ſwallowed to ſuppoſe this Woman guiltleſs?

But even theſe are not the only Proofs it was not the Defendant, whom Beals is ſuppoſed to have ſeen on the Road. For, if you conſider the Place and Time of the Night, you'll find another Impoſſibility to contend with.

What Beals has given an Account of, was at Stamford-Hill Turnpike, about four Miles from Moorfields. According to the Defendant's Evidence, ſhe was robbed in Moorfields between Nine and Ten, and ſhe arrived at Wells's about Four in the Morning: So that this Journey of Eleven Miles (the Diſtance between Moorfields and Wells's) muſt have taken up above ſix Hours; at which Rate of travelling, ſhe could not have reached this Turnpike till almoſt Twelve o'Clock. But what Beals ſaw was betwixt Ten and Eleven, which was but an Hour after the Defendant was firſt attacked in Moorfields. Is it poſſible that two Men could have carried her, in ſuch a Condition, four Miles in one Hour?

Beſides, the Witneſs is uncertain as to the Day of the Month. He ſwears only to the "Fore-end of January," but is not able, by any Circumſtance whatever, to fix it to the firſt Day of the Month. Whereas New-year's Day being a very remarkable Time, it is probable he would have been able to recollect it particularly, had that been the Day.

Such was the Evidence of the Defendant's being ſeen upon the Road, between London and Enfield Waſh, on the 1ſt of January. Let us now examine the Proof of her being ſeen in her Return Home upon the 29*th*.

Thomas Bennet, the firſt Witneſs called to this Fact, ſays, that about a Quarter of a Mile from Mrs. Wells's, and twenty Poles below the ten-mile Stone, he met a Woman, "miſerably poor, without either Gown, "Stays, or Hat, yet with ſomething about her, not a Gown:"—That ſhe appeared to be a Stranger to the Road, for ſhe inquired the Way to London, and told him, "She had been frightened by a Tanner's Dog."

Had he omitted this laſt Circumſtance, there had been nothing to detect him of Falſhood by; and the Fact would then have depended merely upon his Credit, which, probably by Appearance, could not have weighed much, unſupported by other Proofs. But the Incident of the Tanner's Dog has quite defeated his Evidence, for it was impoſſible ſhe could tell him of this, in her Way from Enfield-Waſh to London, before ſhe was come ſo far as the Tanner's. She might, indeed, have met a Dog, and been frightened by him; but how could ſhe, a perfect Stranger, know he belonged to a Tanner? This Witneſs tells you, the Tanner's is an hundred Yards on this Side of the ten-mile Stone, but he met the Woman twenty Poles below the ten-mile Stone:---And it was not the Witneſs, but the Defendant, who called it a Tanner's Dog.

This will not be thought too nice an Objection to the Credit of one depoſing a Fact not very credible in itſelf, and which you will find to be falſe, when coupled with the Evidence of the ſubſequent Witneſſes. And in a Caſe of this extraordinary Nature,---where the Defendant's Attorney (not the preſent Attorney, to give him his Due) had advertiſed for Evidence, it became neceſſary narrowly to watch every Circumſtance coming from the Mouth of a Witneſs in ſo low a Station of Life.

The next Witneſs was David Dyer. He ſays, he ſaw a "poor diſtreſſed Creature" paſs very ſlowly by him on the 29*th* of January;---that he ſaid to her, "Sweetheart, do you want a Huſband?" Being aſked to give an Account of her Cloathing, he ſays, She had a white Handkerchief on her Head. In this he goes too far; for, according to her Mother's Account, the white Handkerchief was covered by a coloured one, which ſhe had taken out of her Pocket, and which, from the Smallneſs of the white one, muſt have totally concealed it.

Willing to fix every Circumſtance, he ſwears to ſomething that may anſwer to the Bed-gown,---"A ſhortiſh Thing about her, that did not "come very low;" and that he ſaw the Woman ſoon afterwards, and took her to be the ſame Perſon with the Priſoner at the Bar. But being called upon to deſcribe her, as ſhe appeared to him upon the Road, this Witneſs, unacquainted with what the reſt had ſworn, (another good Effect of a ſeparate Examination) proves moſt clearly, that the Perſon he ſaw, if any one he ſaw, was not Elizabeth Canning. Her Face, ſays he, was very pale,—not black, but whitiſh.—He looked earneſtly at her, and particularly obſerved her, and did not only admire her Face, but her Hands too---they were delicately white.

Refer yourſelves to the Deſcription given of her at her Return Home, particularly by the Apprentice: "She was black and blue, as if beat, her "Arms and Face as black as his Hat." Could this be a pale Woman with a white Hand, whom Dyer met upon the Road?

Mary Cobb, the only remaining Witneſs to the Defendant's being on the Enfield Road on the 29*th* of January, ſwears ſhe met her creeping along, in the Middle of the three Ducks-Fields, between the five and ſix-mile Stones. This is ſaid to be a Miſtake, and that it is between the ſix and ſeven-mile Stones. Take it either Way: If ſhe met her between the five and ſix-mile Stones, it was near five Miles from Wells's;---if between the ſix and ſeven-mile Stones, it was near four Miles from thence; for Wells's Houſe is about the Midway between the ten and eleven-mile Stones.

Now, by comparing this Woman's Evidence with what the Defendant has ſworn, you will find it impoſſible to be true.

The Defendant ſwore ſhe ſet out from Mother Wells's at Four o'Clock, and that the Clock ſtruck Ten as ſhe was going over Moorfields: So ſhe was ſix Hours travelling eleven Miles, (the Diſtance between Wells's and Moorfields) which is leſs than at the Rate of two Miles an Hour.

Reckoning from the Time the Defendant herſelf has fixed for her ſetting out, it muſt have been paſt Six before ſhe had crept to the Middle of the three Ducks-Fields, ſuppoſing it to be but four Miles from Wells's, and if five Miles, then it muſt have been half an Hour later. Now, at what Time did this Witneſs ſee her? She ſays it was duſkiſh. The 29*th* of January was the Day after a New Moon, ſo there could be no Moonlight; and if it was duſkiſh, it could not be ſo late as Five o'Clock. A great deal of Pains was taken, in the Croſs-Examination of this Witneſs, to fix the Time of her being at the Place, where ſhe is ſuppoſed to have met the Defendant. At Three o'Clock ſhe left her own Houſe,---ſhe had a Mile to go to one Mrs. Carter's---ſhe had been there, but I think ſtayed not a Minute,---ſhe called no where on the Road,---ſhe might indeed be detained a little by Acquaintances, who met her, but made no conſiderable Stop any where,---and met Canning within a Quarter of a Mile of her own Houſe, on her Return Home;---ſo then ſhe muſt have walked a Mile and three Quarters, and no more, from Three o'Clock, and make very little Stay. How late could it poſſibly be then? Let this Woman creep as ſlow as ſhe pleaſes, let her be as ſlow in Walking as ſhe appears in Invention, ſhe could not eke out the Time ſo as to meet the Defendant. Even Five o'Clock will not do---duſkiſh will not anſwer---It muſt have been paſt Six before Canning could poſſibly come to that Place, by her own Calculation. But this Mrs. Cobb has even ventured to ſwear to a perfect, an abſolute Remembrance of the Defendant's Face, by the Tip of her Noſe! By what Light could ſhe make ſo nice an Obſervation, after Six in the Evening, on the 29*th* of January?

Upon the Teſtimony of theſe three laſt Witneſſes I ſhall only make this further Obſervation, that, if it were poſſible to admit they ſaw any Perſon in the Manner they have ſworn, it appears, by every Circumſtance, they all ſaw one and the ſame Perſon, and the Evidence of Dyer fully proves, that Woman was not the Defendant.

Theſe, Gentlemen, are the Objections which have occurred to me on that Part of the Caſe, relating to the Defendant's having been ſeen on the Enfield Road on the 1ſt and 29th of January: By which it appears, that her Friends have reaped no great Benefit from their advertiſing for Evidence.

The next Attempt was to anſwer the Proofs we gave of the Gypſies being at Abbotſbury on the 1ſt of January; in my Obſervations upon which, I ſhall not take up much of your Time. Indeed I cannot take upon myſelf to enter minutely into the Evidence, becauſe I was unavoidably abſent Yeſterday, when moſt of the Witneſſes to it were examined. But from the Notes of my learned Friend, the Gentleman whom I have the Honour to aſſiſt, I am authorized to ſay, the Defendant has had no better Succeſs in this Part of her Caſe, than in the reſt.

Are the Witneſſes to prove the Gypſey's being at Enfield before the 24th of January ſo very certain, both as to the Perſon of Mary Squires, and the exact Times of ſeeing her there, as to leave no Poſſibility of Miſtake? If ſo, this will reſt merely upon the Credit of the Witneſſes; otherwiſe it will not admit of Diſpute. For it is moſt certain, that the Witneſſes for the Crown cannot poſſibly be miſtaken in either of theſe Reſpects.

It is obſervable, that none of the Defendant's Witneſſes pretend to have ever ſeen Mary Squires with either of her two Children; whereas every one of our Witneſſes ſwears directly to all their Perſons.

With what Uncertainty do the Defendant's Witneſſes ſpeak alſo to Point of Time! Some of them do not know one Day, and ſome not one Month from another, and ſome are ignorant whether Chriſtmas is in June or January.—One keeps the Day of the Month by his Clock,---another ther refers herſelf to the Almanack, without being able to diſtinguiſh by it what Day of the Week ſuch a particular Day of the Month was. The Experiment was made upon her Croſs-Examination, and an Almanack was put into her Hand,--ſhe underſtood nothing by it. But, ſays ſhe, I ſwear from the Aſſiſtance of a Sheet Almanack; yet what had been ſhewn her, was the ſame cut into Leaves, and bound up.

Gentlemen, thoſe who pretend to be poſitive as to Time, either refer to Circumſtances inconcluſive, or to Papers and Books, not one of which has been produced. It was material for them to be exact, and they ſaw the Neceſſity of being ſo. Why then did they produce no written Evidence to aſcertain Facts of ſuch Conſequence, ſince by their own Account this was to be had?---Is it not apparent, no Diligence has been wanting in this Defence to lay before you every Circumſtance that could be conſtrued in their Favour? To what Cauſe can ſuch Omiſſion be aſcribed? Perſons ſpeaking merely upon Memory are very liable to miſtake; and in a Cauſe of ſo much Spirit, the Zeal of Witneſſes may urge them to ſtrain the Truth at leaſt, even where they would not venture at direct Perjury. Falſhood is gloſſed with Doubtfulneſs, and Doubts are raiſed to Certainty.

An Inſtance of this was exemplified in the Evidence of Anne Johnſon, who ſwears ſhe ſaw Mary Squires at Enfield on the 18th of January. Was it poſſible for any Witneſs to be more poſitive than this Woman? She remembers the Time perfectly; it was juſt two Days after ſhe carried her Work Home to Mr. Smitheram her Maſter, who entered in his Book the Time of its being both delivered out and returned.

Here was a Reference to a written Memorandum, and the producing it would have fixed the Time paſt Doubt. Yet this, like all the reſt, was thought proper, by thoſe concerned for the Defendant, to be left merely upon the Credit of Memory. But, by Accident, we got Acceſs to Mr. Smitheram's Book of Accounts; and he and his Daughter, in whoſe Hand-writing the Entries were, have been ſo kind this Morning, as to produce the very Book which Anne Johnſon referred to; by which it appears, that the Work was carried Home on the 23d of January. So that the Time of her having ſeen Mary Squires, two Days after, muſt have been on the 25th, which was the Day after Squires's coming to Enfield, according to the Account of all our Witneſſes.

I do not mean by this to impute any thing more than Miſtake to this Anne Johnſon. But it ſhews how uncertain Memory is, how poſitively Witneſſes, warmed into a Contention for Victory, will depoſe Facts, which they ſhould relate with ſome Degree of Doubtfulneſs, and ſhews indeed the Reaſon, why no Books or Papers are produced.

Sarah Star ſwears to the 18th or 19th of January, and refers to a Note of Hand of the ſame Date, which ſhe delivered to Mr. Miles, the Defendant's then Attorney. But neither the Note itſelf, nor Mr. Miles, nor the Perſon, who, Star ſays, brought the Note to her, is produced.

In ſhort, for 'tis Time to make an End, nothing concluſive appears.

Grace Kirby, another Witneſs, ready as the reſt to fix an early Time of ſeeing Squires, upon her Croſs-Examination is not certain of having ſeen her, till within eight Days before Squires's being apprehended, which was on the 1ſt of February.

Wife Baſſet is ſure of the Time, becauſe ſhe killed a Hog on the Thurſday before New Chriſtmas-Day; and ſhe has no other Reaſon for fixing the Time, but becauſe it was the Monday was a Month after; which brings it to the 22d of January.

How vague and uncertain is all this Evidence, compared with the clear, determinate, poſitive, abſolute Teſtimony, that Mary Squires was at Abbotſbury on the 1ſt of January! I ſhould be aſhamed to take up more of your Time in Obſervations upon this Part of the Defence.

They next call Ward and Jones to prove, that Suſannah Wells confeſſed the Defendant's Confinement.

Ward, having juſt read the News-paper relating the Particulars of the Defendant's Story, went to ſee Mother Wells in Clerkenwell Bridewell, and Jones went with him as his Friend. One of them (Ward, as I recollect) aſked Wells, "How came you to keep the Girl a Fortnight?" To which Wells anſwered, "It was twenty-eight Days." The next Queſtion was, "In what Room was ſhe?" The Anſwer was, You know the Room very well." This was the whole Converſation tending to a Confeſſion: But ſuch a Confeſſion, I may venture to ſay, was never before given in Proof.

Wells, at every other Time, both before and after this pretended Confeſſion, ſtoutly denied every Article of the Charge. It is therefore moſt likely ſhe did not mean, at this Time, to admit it. And if you conſider the Occaſion of Ward and Jones going there, and the very Words of the Converſation, you will find that Wells really confeſſed nothing, but only corrected Ward's Miſtake by the Charge againſt her. The News-paper had mentioned, that Wells had confined the Girl twenty-eight Days; Ward had miſtaken it for a Fortnight, and Wells ſet him right. The whole of which, taken together, amounts to juſt as much as if Wells had more fully anſwered, viz. You are miſtaken as to Time, for I am charged with having confined her twenty-eight Days.

Her Anſwer to the other Queſtion naturally bears the ſame Conſtruction, "You know the Room very well." What Room did he know? That which he had read an Account of, and in which the Girl had ſaid ſhe was confined.

This is the natural and the only ſenſible Expoſition of the Words. If Wells intended to confeſs the Crime ſhe was accuſed of, ſomething more would have been ſaid, explaining the Motives and Deſign of ſuch an extraordinary Tranſaction. The ſame Curioſity, which carried theſe two Witneſſes to Bridewell, would certainly have urged them to further Queſtions; and the ſame Candour, which this pretended Confeſſion ſuppoſes at this Time in Wells, would as certainly have led her to explicit Anſwers.

If, on the contrary, Wells did not intend a Confeſſion, how infamous was it in theſe Men, by a pretended Miſtake of a Fortnight inſtead of twenty-eight Days, to enſnare her into an Anſwer, which by an equivocal Interpretation ſhould amount to a Confeſſion, and leave it unexplained, in order to be furniſhed with Evidence?

If this was the only ſcandalous Part of the Defence, it would require more Obſervation than I ſhall trouble you to make.

To as little Purpoſe was the Attempt by Paul Stevens, a Publican, to prove the Confeſſion of Mary Squires in Clerkenwell Priſon. This Witneſs went there with two or three Gentlemen to ſee her, about three or four Days after her Commitment. But who theſe Gentlemen are, or why they do not appear to ſuppore this Man's Evidence, we know not. The whole Confeſſion amounts to no more than this, namely, "What I am here for, I am innocent of;" and afterwards ſpeaking of being at Wells's Houſe, "I believe, whilſt I was there, Elizabeth Canning was there." This, and this alone, they call a Confeſſion; to procure which, they treated her with a Bottle of Wine. Severities had been tried before to no manner of Purpoſe: She had been complaining, that they had buffeted her about, becauſe ſhe was not willing to anſwer Queſtions. But good Words and a Bottle of Wine opened the old Woman's Heart, and ſhe frankly confeſſed to theſe civil Gentlemen,---What?---that ſhe was innocent of the Charge againſt her. But ſhe believed, whilſt ſhe was there, Elizabeth Canning was there. She never ſaid ſhe knew, but ſhe believed. It is plain ſhe never ſaw her; for if ſhe had ever ſeen her, it could not reſt upon her Belief. And the Witneſs himſelf is ſo doubtful of the Words ſpoken, that nothing, beſides the Innocence of Squires, and the Perjury of Canning, can be collected from it. At firſt, Stevens was poſitive, that the Words were, "I believe, while I was there, Canning was there." Then the Witneſs believes theſe were the Words--and then the Words were, "To be ſure Canning was there, as I believe." And ſeveral Times afterwards the Witneſs varied the Expreſſion, and could never fix it.

What a Confeſſion is here proved! A ſtedfaſt Declaration of her own Innocence, coupled with a Belief, touching a Tranſaction, which, if innocent, ſhe muſt be ignorant of.

This poor Woman was a Stranger to Wells having never ſeen her till the 24th of January, when ſhe came to lodge in her Houſe. Eight Days after, ſhe (with all the People of the Houſe) was apprehended on the Accuſation of Canning, that ſhe had been robbed and confined there.---Wells bore an infamous Character univerſally;---Canning's Complaint was favoured by ſeveral Perſons of Credit and Reputation; and therefore Squires was inclined to believe the Girl had been robbed by Somebody, and that her Story might be partly true. But her own Innocence ſhe perſiſted in;---ſo there's an End of all Pretence of Confeſſion.

They next call Witneſſes to impeach the Evidence of Natus and his Wife.

Nathaniel Crumphorne ſays, that ſo lately as laſt Friday Fortnight, the 21ſt of April, he aſked Judith Natus, "How came you to have the Conſcience, knowing this poor, innocent Creature was at Mother Wells's, to go and be againſt her?" And that Judith Natus anſwered, "Indeed, Mr. Crumphorne, I cannot ſay but ſhe really was there, when we lodged there."

Conſidering theſe Words as an Excuſe, in anſwer to Crumphorne's Reproach for giving Evidence againſt Canning, you will have no Difficulty in believing the very reverſe of what that Witneſs intends; and conſidering the Time of this Converſation, it looks as if this Crumphorne was tampering with the Witneſs to ſwear what in Truth ſhe could not. Crumphorne is certain to every Word ſpoken, and indeed it was very material he ſhould be ſo; for by ſtriking out the ſingle Word but, the Senſe would be intirely altered, and then the Anſwer would be proper to the Queſtion. And that Crumphorne goes too far in ſwearing to the very Expreſſion, appears by the next Witneſs, his Wife, who gives Evidence of theſe Words only, "Indeed, Mr. Crumphorne, ſhe really was there, when we lodged there." The former Part of the Words, "I cannot ſay but," is intirely left out. So that it remains doubtful, what were all, and the particular, though few, Words made uſe of upon this Occaſion. You will therefore apply your Attention to the Subſtance of this Converſation, that Judith Natus was reproached with giving falſe Evidence, and that ſhe was juſtifying herſelf.

That Natus and his Wife lay at Wells's during the Month of January, is ſuppoſed even by this very Witneſs. Now I ſhould be glad to know in what Part of the Houſe they lay. It appears, that every other Room in the Houſe, except the Hay-loft, was wholly occupied by the reſt of the Family. And if they lay in the Hay-loft, it could not be while the Defendant was there, becauſe ſhe ſwore, "ſhe did not ſee a human Creature during all the Time of her Confinement, but once through a Crack of the Door."

Further, to diſcredit Fortune Natus's Evidence, one Jackſon is called to prove the Propoſal of a Wager by Natus, at the Four Swans, whether he had not lain out of Wells's Houſe a ſingle Night during the Month of January. This was intended to contradict Natus, as having, in his Evidence, denied propoſing any ſuch Wager. But in reality Natus was ſo far from denying it, that he himſelf gave an Account of his having lain out of the Houſe one Night, and no more. And his Wife, you may remember, gave the ſame Account. This Circumſtance, ſo confirmed by the Defendant's Witneſs, would add Credit to Natus, if he ſtood in need of it.

The next Evidence is to the Impeachment of Natus's Character, by three Perſons ſwearing with ſuch Rancour and Malice, as is ſufficient to overthrow all Pretence of Credit in themſelves.

One of them, in effect, ſays, he believes Fortune Natus is ſo infamous a Fellow, that without the Temptation of Intereſt, or any Paſſion to indulge, but merely for the ſake of giving falſe Teſtimony, and from his Propenſity to Lying, he would perjure himſelf in a Court of Juſtice.

But let not human Nature bear the Reproach of ſuch a Character.---There cannot be a Man on this Side Hell ſo abandoned by his Maker, as that raſh Witneſs would have you to think. The Earth has never bore ſuch a Monſter, as to fall in Love with naked Falſhood. What Devil incarnate was ever heard of, who did not incline to Truth, till he was warped by ſome particular Temptation to leave her? For has not the Author of Nature created her lovely in the Eyes of all Mankind? Let any Man breathing aſk his own Heart, whether he was ever perſuaded to embrace a Falſhood, till ſhe was robed in the Garb of Truth to deceive him? It would be a Contradiction in Terms to ſay otherwiſe. The Witneſs, who is capable of repreſenting Natus in ſuch Colours, muſt be conſcious of the Truth of this Obſervation, and feel himſelf impelled to ſuch a horrid Miſrepreſentation, either by Avarice or Revenge, or ſome Paſſion which he dares not avow.

But see the real Character of this Natus, byone who knows him better.--Mr. Bell, his Master, says, he has known him very well for fifteen Months past, and that he is his Servant;---that he is a very honest, civil, and industrious Man;---that he never once caught him in a Lye in his Life;---that he has now eight Servants, and would be glad to have his Fellow.

The same Man may indeed have several Characters, as different People are differently affected to him. And perhaps it would be a good general Rule, to take the Medium betwixt the two Extremes of any Character whatever. But surely there never were two such Extremes as these concerning the same Character before; and considering the Nature of the Evidence, and who are the Witnesses, I may very safely rest upon the Credit of Natus's Testimony, especially as it has been so well supported by many other Witnesses, attesting such a Number of Circumstances to confirm it.

Another Witness, Mr. Metcalf, was called to contradict Mr. Whiffin, as to the Time of his receiving the Sign-Iron. But Metcalf's Evidence is so very uncertain and indeterminate, that it proves nothing. He swears to a Transaction upon the 8th of January; but when he is called upon to assign his Reason for being particular to the Day of the Month, all he can say is, that he keeps his Reckoning by his Clock, and is ignorant whether his Account is according to the Old Stile, or New.

But Mr. Whiffin's Evidence is sufficiently supported by several Circumstances, the Time is fixed beyond all Doubt, and there now remains no Stain upon his Character.

Gentlemen, I think I have taken Notice of all the material Circumstances on both Sides, two only excepted, which I did not sooner recollect.

One is, the Defendant's claiming the Bed-gown, before sworn by her to have been found at Wells's, in the Grate in the Chimney. This then lay, together with the Pitcher, on a Table at the Mansion-House; and she would have taken them both away; but that was objected to, because they did not belong to her, and that they might be deposited in some public Place, for the sake of further Discoveries: Upon this (relinquishing the Pitcher) she insisted on taking away the Bed-gown, for "That "was her Mother's"---It has been proved, that there was no Grate in the Chimney at Wells's.

And I should have added to the Observations upon the Evidence of the Mother, who proved the Defendant's Hand-writing to some Papers now before you, that the Innocence of the Defendant having been most cogently inferred from her supposed Simplicity, and she having been represented as a poor, silly, illiterate Creature, incapable of inventing such a Story, to furnish her Advocates with so excellent an Argument, she set her Mark to her Information before Mr. Fielding, as if unable to write her Name; which Information is also before you. I dare say, it was not then imagined that this Marks-Woman had received so good an Education. Who would have thought, upon reading the Pamphlet, which that good Magistrate was pleased to oblige the World with, containing the Information at large, with such ingenious Remarks upon her Stupidity;---who would have dreamt, that this "Child in Years, more "so in Understanding," was able to write a fair, legible Hand?

And this may serve as a Specimen to shew what mean Artifices have been made use of to deceive Mankind.

Gentlemen, you have now before you the whole Merits of this Cause; the Subject of universal Controversy, which it is hoped your Verdict will put an End to.

Permit me, therefore, to remind you briefly of what you must necessarily believe, in order to acquit the Defendant of the Charge against her.

In the first Place, you must believe a most astonishing Story of several Incidents, every one of which is to the highest Degree improbable. You must also believe, that above forty Witnesses to the Alibi of the Gypsey are all guilty of Perjury, although there is a greater Combination of Circumstances to add Credit to their Evidence, than was ever before required to satisfy a human Inquiry. To this End, you must also believe, that all these Witnesses conspired to this Perjury, and preconcerted every Circumstance with so much Art and Contrivance, as to defeat the Possibility of Detection upon a separate Examination; and all this you are to suppose, although the Evidence to contradict them is infinitely less clear, less certain, and less conclusive.

But if, notwithstanding, you can prevail upon yourselves to suppose Mary Squires to have been at Enfield, when we proved her elsewhere, or (which is as hard to suppose) that the Defendant mistook her for another, you have yet more Difficulties to reconcile. For you must further suppose, either that Mr. Alderman Chitty, Mr. Nash, Hague, Aldridge, together with many of the Defendant's own Witnesses to several Circumstances, are absolutely perjured; or else you must yield your Assent to a new Train of Events, as many and as wonderful as those in the Defendant's Story.

You must, moreover, believe all the ten Witnesses, confirming Natus's Evidence, likewise guilty of Perjury; although no Attempt has been made to disprove their Testimony, except only (what I hope is sufficiently answered) with respect to Natus himself, and also as to the Time of Whiffin's buying the Sign-Iron.

And upon what Foundation are you to suppose all this?---Upon the Credit of Elizabeth Canning, proved to be self-contradicted in no less than three Instances, relative to a single Fact; or, upon the Evidence of her Witnesses, who have given no Answer to the Charge. For it is observable, that not one of the Witnesses for the Crown, except to the Alibi of Squires, is contradicted by those for the Defendant; and yet, if their Evidence be true, she must be guilty.

These, Gentlemen, are the Remarks occurring to me upon the various Circumstances in this very long Trial. Many of them may, perhaps, have been unnecessary or improper, whilst some, which I may have omitted, should have been enforced; but whatever Errors are imputable to me in the Course of this Prosecution, I solemnly protest, that the mis-stating or misapplying any Facts has been intirely foreign to my Intention throughout the Cause; in the Merits of which I have at no Time been engaged, otherwise than, as I conceived, the Duty of my Profession directed me: And this Duty I have discharged to the best of my Abilities.

Mr. Nares. I only beg leave to mention one Thing. There has been one Reason attempted to be given, why a very material Witness is not produced, the Want of which Witness is attended with the utmost Inconveniency to the Prisoner at the Bar; that is, Virtue Hall: By her not being called we can give no Evidence relative to her; that is as to what she has said, and the Means used in her Recantation. Mr. Davy has given this as a Reason, because she is not in Law a Witness; but I beg leave to say, that according to all the Cases, and common Practice every Day, she is a Witness; it only goes to her Credit, and that goes to the Jury. You know the Case of Cartwright at Hertford; he confessed he had perjured himself in four or five different Courts. I should be glad if the Court would deliver their Opinions on it.

Mr. Baron Legge. I believe Witnesses have very often been called, that have declared they have been perjured in other Instances; but I will never admit or suffer a Person, that will say they have been perjured in another Affair, and I knew it before they were sent for. When she swears true, I cannot tell; but that she has swore false once, I must know.

Mr. Nares. In the Case of Subornation of Perjury they are admitted every Day.

Mr. Baron Legge. They are admitted; but it goes so much to their Credit.

Mr. Recorder. I remember, that in the Trial of Titus Oates, Lord Chief-Justice Jefferys would have been glad to have hanged him, but would not suffer a perjured Person to be examined against him. What must such Sett of Witnesses swear? Why, they must set out in saying they have been perjured before. Then what is the Consequence, but that they must destroy their own Credit.

Mr. Baron Legge. When a Witness stands up, and tells us she has once swore false, what Credit can be given to her Testimony?

Mr. Davy. I have known such Witnesses examined more than once: The Jury have a Right to call and examine her, but I have no Right to call her, neither has the Defendant.

Mr. RECORDER.

Gentlemen of the Jury, Elizabeth Canning, the Prisoner at the Bar, stands indicted for Perjury, in swearing that Mary Squires—[See the Indictment, the Perjury assigned, and the Averment mentioned before in this Trial].—But as this is a Trial of unusual Length, and of great Expectation, I shall state the Evidence in the clearest Manner I have been able to collect it; and if, in the stating the several Facts which have been laid before you, during the Course of this long Proceeding, I should accidentally disclose my own Opinion, I must desire that it may have no Weight, or make the least Impression on you, in determining your Verdict, otherwise than as the Weight of the Evidence justifies it. As this Indictment is founded upon the Evidence given by Elizabeth Canning against Mary Squires, on whose Testimony she was capitally convicted, Thomas Gurney, the Short-hand Writer, is called, who says, that upon the 22d Day of February, Mary Squires was tried in this Court; and upon that Trial, Elizabeth Canning swore, "That on the first Day of January, in the Year "1753, she had been at Saltpetre-Bank to see her Uncle and Aunt, and "stayed there till about Nine at Night;—that her Uncle and Aunt came "with her to Aldgate, when they parted;—that she was then alone, and "so came down Houndsditch, and over Moorfields by Bedlam Wall, where "two lusty Men, both in Great-Coats, laid hold of her, and took half a "Guinea in a little Box out of her Pocket, and three Shillings that were "loose;---that they afterwards tied her Hands behind her, and dragged "her to Wells's House at Enfield-Wash, where they arrived about Four "o'Clock in the Morning; that she saw there the said Gypsey Woman "Squires sitting in a Chair, who took her by the Hand, and asked her if "she chose to go their Way, saying, that if she did, she should have "fine Cloaths; but she refusing, Mary Squires then took a Knife out of "a Dresser-Drawer, and cut the Lace of her Stays, and took them from "her;---that Mary Squires gave her a Slap on the Face, and pushed her "up Stairs out of the Kitchen into a Room called the Hay-loft, and shut "the Door, and threatened her, if she stirred or moved, to cut her "Throat;---that when Day-light appeared, she could see in the Room "a black Pitcher, not quite full of Water, about twenty-four Pieces of "Bread, a Fire-place, and a Grate;---that she continued there a Month "by the Weeks, all but a few Hours;---that she broke down a Board "that was nailed up at the Inside of the Window, and got out on "Monday the 29th of January, about Four o'Clock in the Afternoon; "that she took out of the Grate in the Chimney an old Sort of a Bed-"gown and Handkerchief, which she tied over her Head instead of a "Cap, and got to her Mother's House in Aldermanbury, about a Quarter "after Ten o'Clock at Night."

In order, therefore, to prove that the Evidence she then gave was false, a great Number of Witnesses have been called to prove Mary Squires at a different Place, at the Time on which Elizabeth Canning has sworn to her robbing her at Wells's at Enfield-Wash.

The first of these Witnesses is Esther Hopkins, who says, that she keeps a Public House at South-Parrot, which is some Miles beyond Abbotsbury in Dorsetshire; is positive she saw Mary Squires, her Son and Daughter, at her House, on the 29th of December 1752; that they lodged at her House that Night; the Reason of her remembering it is, that two Gentlemen that Day had been there, who left their Reckoning unpaid; that Mary Squires, her Son and Daughter, went away next Morning; is particularly positive to Mary Squires, having never seen such another remarkable Woman; that she is more positive to the Son than to the Daughter, for he had a Bag which he carried under his Arm. They all travelled on Foot.

The next Witness was Alice Farnham, who lives at Winyard's Gap, ten Miles beyond Abbotsbury. She says, that she saw Mary Squires at Winyard's Gap, about Eight or Nine o'Clock, on the Saturday Morning next after New Christmas, with her Son and Daughter; the Reason of her being so positive to Mary Squires is, that having seen the Picture of Mother Shipton, she thought she resembled that Picture. They all stayed about an Hour at her House, and had a Quart of Beer, and some Bread and Cheese, and when they parted with her said, that they would come and see her again at Old Christmas; that they all went towards Abbotsbury, which is ten or eleven Miles from Winyard's Gap; that she had seen them come into South-Parrot the Day before, and seeing they were Gypsies, her Mother asked, if she was not frightened. This she remembers was on a Saturday, because she had a Mind to have gone that Day to Crookhorne Market to buy ſome Things againſt Old Chriſtmas, but her Mother would not let her go. She ſaw a Bag under the Son's Arm, and the Daughter dreſſed very neat in a white Holland Gown. Has never ſeen them ſince; but is very poſitive to them. That they had a Mug of Beer, and paid for it.

The next Witneſs, who undertakes to prove the whole Journey to Enfield-Waſh, is George Squires, who is Son to Mary Squires, who ſays, he was at South-Parrot on Friday next after New Chriſtmas-Day, and they put up at the Red Lion there, and ſtayed one Night only: That (they ſet out from Newington near Southwark about ſeven or eight Weeks before Michaelmas preceding) from South-Parrot they all went to Winyard's Gap, and then to Litton: That they lay there upon Saturday, and he left his Mother and Siſter there, and went to Abbotſbury on Sunday, to ſee ſome Friends he had there, and particularly to ſee William Clarke: That he and Clarke went to Litton for his Mother and Siſter the Monday following, and at Litton the Siſter, Clarke, and he, dined together; his Mother being gone towards Abbotſbury to ſee for Clarke and him; but upon her Return dined with them. After Dinner they all ſet out for Abbotſbury, and arrived there upon the Monday Night, being the 1*ſt* of January, and lay there, at the Sign of the Ship, at one Gibbons's; they danced till Twelve o'Clock at Night, and ſeveral People were with them. His Partner was Gibbons's Siſter, and having been at Abbotſbury before, he knew ſeveral there. Clarke danced with his Siſter; and that his Mother, his Siſter, and himſelf, ſtayed at Abbotſbury from the 1*ſt* to the 9*th* of January. That the 1*ſt* of January being a wet Day, one Andrew Wake, who was then an Exciſeman at Abbotsbury, borrowed his Great-Coat of him, in order to make his Survey. That on Tueſday the 9th of January, his Mother and Siſter and himſelf left Abbotsbury: Clarke went with them to a Place called Porterſham, about a Mile and a Half from Abbotsbury. The next Day they went to Ridgway, about five or ſix Miles from Abbotsbury. Clarke and he lay together, and lay there at the Sign of the Ship, at one Bewley's, where there happened to be a Horſe which had juſt died; and his Money being ſhort, he left a Piece of Nankeen for his Reckoning, his Mother and Siſter being then with him. From thence, on Thurſday the 11th, they all went to Dorcheſter, and there they had an Account of his Siſter Mary's Illneſs, and then they determined to haſten to her; and the Waters being very much out, he carried his Mother upon his Back, and a Miller took his Siſter on a Horſe behind him through the Water. They travelled on Foot almoſt the whole Night, and arrived at a Village called Chettle, which is four Miles beyond Blandford, and on the Saturday following they all lay at Martin in a Barn belonging to Farmer Thane. On the Sunday after they all went to Coombe, and lay there at one Greville's, the Sign of the Lamb, who is ſince dead. On the Monday following he does not recollect where they lay, neither can he recollect where they all lay till his Arrival at Baſingſtoke, and when they got there, they put up at the Spread-Eagle, where the Woman of the Houſe, at his Siſter's Requeſt, wrote a Letter to Clarke at Abbotsbury. They lay that Night at a Place called Old Bayſing (their uſual Way of travelling being about ten Miles a Day). From thence they went to Bagſhot, and lay at the Sign of the Greyhound there; and from thence to Brentford, where they all arrived and lay there upon the Saturday; and on the Sunday he went to London to ſee his Siſter Mary, and on the Monday he brought her to Brentford to one Mrs. Edwards's, where they all ſtayed till Tueſday, and on Tueſday they all went to the Sign of the Seven Siſters at a Green near Tottenham, and on Wedneſday they all arrived at Mrs. Wells's at Enfield, whom he never ſaw before, but was recommended there. That before they went to Mrs. Wells's, they called at another Houſe, where they were recommended to a Houſe at Cheſhunt; but that being too far, they went to Wells's, where he left his Mother and Siſters. That in two or three Days after he went to London to receive ſome Money, and returned next Day, and found his Mother and Siſters at Wells's. His Mother and Siſters lay in the Room over the Parlour, and he lay in a little Room fronting the Stairs, and Wells, her Daughter, and Virtue Hall lay in a Room on the left Hand, and one Fortune Natus and his Wife lay in a Room ſome few Steps out of the Kitchen. That, during the Time they were at Wells's, they bought their Chandlery Ware of one Larney, and it being Herring Time, they lived very much upon Herrings, which they bought of an old Man who carried them about to ſell. That, during the whole Time he was at Wells's, he never ſaw the Priſoner Canning, neither had he ever ſeen her before his Mother was arreſted, which was on Thurſday the 1ſt of February. Upon his Croſs-Examination he ſays, that he cannot recollect where he was the Chriſtmas before he ſet out towards Dorſetſhire, neither can he recollect the ſeveral particular Places through which he travelled, except Lewes and Salisbury, and ſome other principal Towns in the Weſt of England. He gives an Account of the whole Journey from South-Parrot to Enfield, except four Days, which is from their Arrival at Coombe till they got to Baſingſtoke.

Then, to confirm the Account which George Squires has given, they call a great many Witneſſes. The firſt is John Fry, who is a Tiler and Plaiſterer, and lives at Litton in Dorſetſhire. He ſays, that he ſaw a Gypſey the 30th of December at one James Hawkins's, a Public Houſe; that it was on a Saturday. He remembers it, becauſe it was New Chriſtmas Time, and the Monday following was New-Year's Day. Is very poſitive both to Mary Squires, her Son, and her Daughter. The Part of the Houſe he ſaw them in was the Kitchen, and has known Mary Squires for thirty Years.

Francis Gladman is called next. He is ſure that he ſaw Mary Squires, her Son and Daughter, at Litton, in the Morning of the 1ſt of January, for he ſhaved George Squires the Sunday before. He remembers the Day particularly, becauſe he was one of the Ringers who rung-in the New Year. That Mary Squires was aſked whether ſhe could tell Fortunes, and ſhe ſaid, No. Then he aſked her, whether ſhe could ſpeak Spaniſh or French? who anſwered, ſhe could not. The next Witneſs is

James Angel, who ſays, that he ſaw Mary Squires and her Daughter at Hawkins's at Litton on the 31ſt Day of December: But he did not ſee George Squires, becauſe he was gone to Abbotſbury. He remembers it, becauſe the Monday following he was called to ring-in the New Year. He did not ſee Mary Squires in the Evening, becauſe ſhe was gone to Abbotsbury, which was three Miles from Litton. The next Witneſs is

James Hawkins, who remembers that Mary Squires, her Son and Daughter, came to his Houſe at Litton on Saturday the 30th of December, and they ſtayed there all Sunday, except George, who went to Abbotsbury on the Sunday; and that George Squires and William Clarke returned from Abbotsbury about Ten or Eleven o'Clock on Monday Morning; and after they had dined, they all ſet out for Abbotsbury about Two o'Clock the ſame Day.

William Clarke is called next, who lives at Abbotsbury, and is very well acquainted with Mary Squires, her Son and Daughter. He ſays, that George Squires came to him at Abbotsbury on Sunday the 31ſt of December; he ſtayed with him there till Monday Morning. That he aſked George after his Siſter Lucy, who told him, that his Mother and ſhe were at Litton. That they both together went to Litton next Morning, where they arrived about three o'Clock. Mary Squires was not there upon their firſt Arrival, becauſe ſhe went towards Abbotsbury to meet her Son George. That upon her coming back to Litton, they all dined together upon a boiled Fowl, and after Dinner he went with them to Abbotsbury, and it being the 1ſt of January, they had a Dance at Gibbons's, the Sign of the Ship there. That Lucy Squires was his Partner, and one Arnold played on the Muſic. Is very ſure, that both Mary Squires, her Son and Daughter, were at Abbotsbury upon that Day, and is as ſure that they all continued there till Tueſday the 9th of January, for he ſaw them there every Day; and upon that Tueſday he ſet out with them on their Journey, and went with them to Porterſham, and then to Ridgway, where he left them at one Bewley's Houſe there. That they had Beef-Steaks for their Supper, and when he parted with them, George borrowed ſix Shillings of him. That he, the Witneſs, deſired Lucy to write to him, and told her how to direct to him. That he has known Mary Squires, her Son and Daughter, four Years.

The next is John Gibbons, who keeps the Sign of the Old Ship at Abbotsbury. He ſays, he knows Mary Squires, her Son and Daughter. Has known Mary Squires for three Years. Is very poſitive they were all at his Houſe the 1ſt of January, 1753, in the Evening, dancing. That George danced with his Siſter, Lucy with Clarke. That they all ſtayed at his Houſe from that Time till Tueſday the 9th of January; and remembers, that while they were there, the Exciſeman borrowed George's Great-Coat to go his Rounds. That they and Clarke went away together on Tueſday the 9th of January. He was a Witneſs at the Trial of Mary Squires, but doth not remember he was aſked about the Dancing on the 1ſt of January.

George Clements is called next, who confirms what the other Witneſſes have ſworn, about the Dancing at Gibbons's, in every Circumſtance. That he ſaw Mary Squires, her Son and Daughter, at Abbotsbury, the 2d and 3d of January. The Sunday following he dined with them at Gibbons's. That Clarke and they ſet out together the Tueſday following. That he knows them all very well, remembers Mary Squires many Years. The next is Melchiſedech Arnold, who is a Blackſmith, and lives at Abbotsbury. He ſaw Mary Squires, her Son and Daughter, at Abbotsbury the 1ſt of January, at the Old Ship there. Remembers the Dancing that Night, and played on the Fiddle. That Clarke was Lucy's Partner, and George was Mary Gibbons's Partner. That he ſaw them all ſeveral Times during the Week they were there, and remembers all the ſeveral Circumſtances mentioned by the other Witneſſes.

John Ford is called next, who is a Carpenter, and lives at Abbotsbury; is Uncle to Gibbons, who keeps the Old Ship, which is the Exciſe-Office; ſaw Mary Squires, her Son and Daughter, there every Day during their Stay there, which was from the 1ſt of January to the 9th; knows Mary Squires as well as his own Mother; that he ſells Bread, and they bought their Bread of him during the whole Time they ſtayed. The next is

Daniel Wallace, who is a Mercer at Abbotsbury. He is very poſitive that he ſaw Mary Squires, her Son and Daughter, at Abbotsbury on Sunday the 7th of January, and that George Squires bought Sugar of him; that ſeeing Mary Squires on the Day of his having bought a new Jack, ſhe aſked him to dine with her that Day. Then they call

Hugh Bond, who is a Schoolmaſter at Abbotsbury, who ſays, that on the 31ſt of December, being Holiday-Time, he went to ſee his Wife, who was ill in Devonſhire, and he returned to Abbotsbury on Monday the 8th of January. That he lodged at the Old Ship. Is very poſitive that he ſaw Mary Squires, her Son and Daughter, there that Night, and ſaw them there next Morning, the 9th of January. That he had ſome Converſation with George Squires, along with one Wake an Exciſeman, who officiated for one Ward an Exciſeman, who was then ſick; and Wake lay at the Ship in the ſame Bed where Ward uſed to lie, and that George Squires lay in another Bed in the ſame Room. Then

John Bailey is called, who is a Carpenter at Abbotsbury. He ſays, he has known Mary Squires ten or fifteen Years, and has known George and Lucy three Years. Is very poſitive that he ſaw them all at the Old Ship there on Monday the 1ſt of January; that they continued there from that Time till Tueſday the 9th; and that he ſhaved George twice within that Time, and remembers it particularly by his Brother's ſetting out on the 1ſt of January for Briſtol, in order to go to Sea. The next is

Thomas Anſon, who lives at Abbotsbury. He has known Mary Squires, her Son and Daugher, about four Years, and is very ſure he ſaw them at the Old Ship there on Friday the 5th of January, and is ſure they are the ſame Perſons he had ſeen four Years before; that Clarke was with them, and it was reported that Clarke and Lucy were Sweethearts. Then they call

John Hawkins, who is a Weaver at Abbotsbury, who remembers ſeeing Mary Squires, her Son and Daughter, at Abbotsbury the 1ſt of January at Gibbons's; is certain that they all continued there from the 1ſt to the 9th of January, having ſeen them every Day; and he particularly remembers the Dancing, and Arnold's playing on the Fiddle. Then

Andrew Wake the Exciſeman is called (who is mentioned by ſome of the former Witneſſes). He ſays, that he was ordered to officiate as Exciſeman at Abbotsbury during the Illneſs of one Ward, who was taken ſick there. That he went to Abbotsbury on Sunday the 31ſt of December, to to Gibbons's, the Sign of the Ship, which is the Excise-Office; was in Company with George and Lucy Squires, and Clarke, at that House, and on that Day; and that George and he lay in the same Room; and that he saw Mary Squires, was in Company with her and Lucy, and in the same House, on the Wednesday following. He also remembers the Dancing at Gibbons's on the 1st of January, and that George and Lucy and Clarke danced there on that Evening, and particularly remembers that Arnold played on the Fiddle; and he being a Dealer in Cyder, he surveyed him; and this Witness being at that Time out of Order, he borrowed a Great-Coat of George; and that Mary Squires ordered something for him to take; and says, that he left the Excise-Books with Ward, when he went away from Abbotsbury, which was on the 14th of January. He then refers to those Books, and swears to the Entries and the Journal. Says, that when he went to Bed at Abbotsbury, he always went to his own Room through that where Mary Squires and Lucy lay, and that he generally saw them every Night during his Stay there. He afterwards went to Dorchester, where he saw in the News an Account of Elizabeth Canning's being robbed by Mary Squires on the 1st of January, and that she was found guilty; and that he then immediately said, she could not be the Woman, because he saw her on that Day at Abbotsbury. He then went to Lewes, and there he received the Commissioners of Excise Orders to attend the then Lord-Mayor in London; and upon his Arrival there he went to Mary Squires then in Newgate, who immediately knew him, and seemed rejoiced to see him, and put him in mind of all the several Circumstances before-mentioned; and concludes with saying, that she is the same Person that he saw at Abbotsbury at the Time he has sworn to. The next is

Francis Aldborough, (who is produced to confirm the Evidence of the last Witness, with respect to the Entries in the Books returned to the Excise-Office by the Excise-Officers out of the Country) and he produces the Books, by which it appears that the last Witness Andrew Wake officiated for John Ward (who was ill) during that Time of which Wake has given you an Account. The next Witnesses are

William Haines, and John Haines his Son, who both prove, that Mary Squires, her Son and Daughter, were all at Portersham (which is a few Miles off Abbotsbury) on the 9th of January, and that William Clarke was with them, and that they lodged at the Sign of the Chequer there: That he invited them to his House, which they refusing, he and one Chipman, who was with him, went to them at the Chequer: That the Reason of the Father's being so certain of the Day of the Month is, because he went to Abbotsbury the Day before, which was the 8th. He is very positive to Mary Squires, and has known her for thirty Years.—The Son confirms the Testimony of his Father, in remembering them at Portersham, and remembers also his seeing Mary Squires at Abbotsbury on the 6th of January, and that it was wet Weather. From Portersham they went to Ridgway, which is four or five Miles from Portersham. To prove their Arrival at Ridgway,

Francis Bewley is called, who keeps a Public House there, who swears, that he saw this Family at Ridgway on Wednesday the 10th of January, about Ten or Eleven o'Clock in the Morning; that they had Beef-steaks there; that he remembers a Woman whose Horse died there; that he supplied her with another in its Place, and remembers this particular Circumstance of the Horse being drawn out of the Stable to be skinned, and that at that Time Mary Squires came into the Yard, and it was a remarkable wet Day; that Clarke bargained with a Turnip-man for an Horse to carry him back to Abbotsbury. Remembers that Mary Squires and her Family being short of Money, desired he would take a Waistcoat they had for the Reckoning, which he did, and which Witness produced it, and has kept it ever since; and that he remembers them both by those Circumstances, as well as by the dead Horse, the Witness of the Weather, and by its being Blandford Sessions, which is always held on the 10th of January. Then they call

Thomas Mockeridge, who is the Man that sold Turnips, and whose Horse Clarke hired to return to Abbotsbury; and he remembers all or most of the above-mentioned Evidence, as to Mary Squires, her Son and Daughter, being at Ridgway on the 10th of January; that they were at one Bewley's, the Sign of the Ship there; that he remembers Mary Squires above three Years before that Time, and is very positive as to the Circumstance about skinning the Horse. The next is

John Taylor, who lives at Fordington near Dorchester, who swears, That he saw Mary Squires, her Son and Daughter, there on Thursday the 11th of January. Remembers that the Rains had been so great on the 10th, that they could not go along the High Road, but were obliged to go through his Yard; that a Miller's Boy carried the Daughter through the Water on his Horse, and that Mary Squires walked through great Part of the Water, and there were three little Rivers to cross. They all told him they lay at Ridgway the Night before, and asked him their Way to Chettle. The next Witness is

Thomas Hunt, who was threshing in a Barn at Chettle on the 12th of January, and says, that he knows, and saw Mary Squires, her Son and Daughter, there on that Day; that there being no Public House there, he, at their Request, got them Lodgings in an Out-house belonging to Mr. Watts, where they lay on Straw, and stayed there till between Nine and Ten o'Clock next Morning: it was very wet Weather, and it was on or about Old New-year's Day. From Chettle they went to Martin; to prove which

John Elderton is called, who says, that he is Servant to one Farmer Thane, who lives at Martin, and is positive that Mary Squires, her Son and Daughter, by Consent of his Master, lay in an Out-house belonging to his Master; that he saw them all there at Four in the Afternoon on the Saturday Se'nnight after Old Christmas-Day, and he saw them about Eight o'Clock next Morning; and that his Master saw them at the same Time, of which he would have given Evidence, but was prevented by his being taken ill at Salisbury. This last Witness is confirmed by

William Hart in the Circumstances and Facts before-mentioned, with this further, that Lucy was next Morning mending some China. The next is

John Blandford, who is a Blacksmith, works for Farmer Thane, and is positive that he saw Mary Squires at Farmer Thane's Barn at the Time the other Witnesses swear to. Then

Joseph Hayter is called, who is a Maltster at Coombe, who says, that he met them all upon the Road between Martin and Coombe on the 14th of January, being the Sunday next after Old Christmas; is positive to Mary and George Squires, having seen them before; he met them about Eleven o'Clock in the Forenoon; and upon his Return to Coombe the same Day, he saw them all at one Mrs. Greville's, the Sign of the Lamb there. This last Witness is confirmed by

Mary Greville, who was Sister to Thomas Greville, who was prosecuted for Perjury, for what he swore at the Trial of Mary Squires, but is now dead; and she swears, that she saw them all at Coombe on the 14th of January at her Mother's, Mrs. Greville's, the Sign of the Lamb there, and that they lay there that Night, and went away the next Morning. They are also proved to be at Coombe on the 14th of January by four other Witnesses, the first of whom is

George Towil, who saw them there on the 14th of January at Mrs. Greville's, the Sign of the Lamb:

Richard Aimer, who saw them at Mrs. Greville's the Morning they went away, which was the 15th of January: And by

Robert Merchant, who saw them there the 14th of January: And by Martha Waters, who saw them there the same Day, and that she asked them to tell her Fortune. From thence they went to Basingstoke, which was about forty Miles, and they were four Days in travelling thither; but there is no Evidence laid before you of the several Places through which they went in getting there: But this Chasm will not be very material, if you give Credit to the several Witnesses whose Evidence I have already laid before you; for if you believe that Mary Squires was at Abbotsbury on the 1st of January, which is the Day on which the Perjury is assigned, it is impossible that she could have been at Enfield on the same 1st of January; which the Defendant swore she was.

Mary Morris is called next, who says, that she lives at Basingstoke, and is positive that she saw Mary Squires, her Son and Daughter, at her own House there, the Sign of the Spread-Eagle, on the 18th of January, and has this particular Reason for remembering it, which is, that Lucy Squires desired she would write a Letter for her to one Clarke at Abbotsbury. The Letter was produced, and she swears it was the same she wrote, and which she sent by her little Boy to the Post-Office. She says, that they stayed at her House about four or five Hours, and from thence they set out for Old Basing, which is about two Miles from Basingstoke. She is very certain as to their Persons, and says that Mary Squires had lain once at her House. From thence they went to Brentford; and to prove them there,

Elizabeth Edwards is called, who says, that she lives at Brentford; that Mary Squires, her Son and Daughter, came to her House there on Saturday the 20th of January; is sure they came on that Day; recollects the Time, because one of her Neighbour's Children was christened on that Day; and on the next Day, being Sunday, George Squires went to London to fetch his other Sister, and brought her on Monday, and on Tuesday they all went away; is positive to Mary Squires, because some Time after she saw her in Newgate. The next is

Susannah Burwill, who is Daughter to the last Witness, and confirms her Mother's Evidence in every Particular. From thence they went to a Place called Page-Green; to prove which, they call

William Tredget, who keeps the Seven Sisters, a Public House at Tottenham, four Miles from London; is very sure that he saw Mary Squires, her Son and Daughter, at Page-Green on the 23d of January, who told him they wanted Lodgings; that his Wife and he were together; she recommended them to lodge at a Farm-House in that Neighbourhood; and says, that he is certain as to the Person of Mary Squires, having seen her three Years before, and had taken Notice of her as the most uncommon Face he had ever seen, and went to see her when in Newgate. They then call

Mary Tredget his Wife, who agrees with her Husband in every Circumstance of his Evidence. And the next Day, as appears by the Evidence of George Squires, they all arrived at Enfield.

The next Piece of Evidence is to prove the Letter sent by the Post, which Mary Morris says in her Evidence she wrote to Clarke at the Request of Lucy Squires; and to prove this they call

Thomas Ravenhill, who is Clerk of the Western Road, and he proves the Letter to be sent from Basingstoke to London by the Mark of the Post-Office in London; it was sent to Dorchester, which is the Post-Town to which Abbotsbury is nearest; and that the whole Postage through London from Basingstoke to Abbotsbury amounted to Seven-pence.

The Evidence next proper to be laid before you is that of Mr. Alderman Chitty, who was the Sitting Alderman at Guildhall upon the 31st of January 1753, which was the Day on which Elizabeth Canning laid her Information before him of the Treatment she had met with at Wells's. The Account she then gave, appears by the Notes he took, which he produced, and which have been already read in Evidence; so that by comparing the Information she laid before him, and the Evidence she gave at the Trial of Mary Squires, you will find they differ in many remarkable Circumstances, both as to the Size of the Room she was confined in, the Furniture of it, as well as the Bread and the Water she swears she found and left there. As to the Size of the Room, she swore before him, that it was a square, dark, or darkish Room, furnished in the Manner you have heard; that there was some Water left in the Pitcher when she made her Escape; and that she found in the Room no more than four or five Pieces of Bread, amounting to the Quantity of about a Quartern Loaf: So that, by comparing the Information she then gave, with the Evidence she gave at the Trial of Mary Squires, you will find that there is a manifest Contrariety in those two Accounts in many Particulars. The next Witness is

Mr. Gawen Nash, who says, that upon seeing a very extraordinary Paragraph in the News-paper relating to Elizabeth Canning, and being an Acquaintance of Mr. Lyon, (who was her Master) he went to Mr. Lyon on the 31st of January 1753, and hearing that Elizabeth Canning was to be examined before Alderman Chitty that Day, he went with Mr. Lyon to hear the Account she gave; and remembers that being asked by the Alderman, what Sort of a Room ſhe was confined in, her Anſwer was, That it was a little, ſquare, dark, or darkiſh Room, and that there were ſome Boards nailed before the Windows, through which ſhe ſaw the Hertford Stage-Coachman, who uſed to carry her Miſtreſs; that there was in the Room a broken Stool, and an Iron Grate in the Chimney, and a few old Pictures over it. She ſaid, that ſhe lay on bare Boards, and that there were ſeveral Pieces of Bread which were blue and mouldy, and amounted to about the Quantity of a Quartern Loaf. The Account ſhe gave of her Eſcape was by pulling down a Board nailed on the Window, and that ſhe hurt her Ear by a Nail in getting out. She ſaid, ſhe heard the Name of Mother Wells during her Confinement, and therefore concluded ſhe had been at her Houſe; but ſhe never mentioned the Name of Virtue Hall before Alderman Chitty. Upon this, the Alderman granted his Warrant, which being backed by a Middleſex Juſtice, Aldridge, Lyon, Hague, and himſelf went to Enfield, to ſee it executed. That, when they went to Wells's, they ſaw ſeveral People in the Parlour there, and having taken a View of ſeveral Rooms in the Houſe, they ſaw a labouring Man there, and aſking him if there were not ſome other Rooms in the Houſe, he pulled a Button off a Door, and opened it, which led up ſeven or eight Steps into the Hay-loft or Workſhop. He is very confident that there was no Lock on the Door, or even the Marks of one, when he went into the Room: It appeared a very long one; and not reſembling the Deſcription which Canning had given of it, he wondered where the Room was in which ſhe was confined; and upon acquainting his Companions with the Variety of Things he had obſerved there, (and of which ſhe had not made the leaſt Mention) particularly of the Quantity of Hay, the Neſt of Drawers, the Tub of Pollard, the three old Saddles, the Bed made of Hay, where ſome poor People ſeemed to have lain, together with the Jack-line and Pullies, the little Chimney, where there did not appear to have been either Hearth or Grate, nor any Pictures over the Chimney, nor the Appearance of any; though he ſays there was a Window which commanded the great Hertford Road, through which might be ſeen a great Watering-Pond, which was within nine or ten Feet of the Window; and that this Window was in the Eaſt Part of the Room, but had not (as he could obſerve) the leaſt Appearance of ever having been boarded up, and was large enough for him to get out of, and was ſo near the Ground, that he ſhook Hands with his Wife out of it when ſhe ſtood on the Ground, the Caſement of which opened and ſhut very eaſy, and the Room was light; and if he had hung his Body out of that Window, his Feet could have been at moſt not above three Feet from the Ground. The Eaſt Window looks over a Lane, and Trees grow within Reach of it; and then obſerving that there was a good deal of Hay, which Elizabeth Canning had not mentioned, he told the Company with him, that he was ſure that could not be the Room. Afterwards they had an Account brought them, that Wells, and Mary Squires, and the reſt, were ſecured; upon which, they went to Wells's, and being impatient for the Arrival of Elizabeth Canning, who was then on the Road, Adamſon went to meet her, and aſked her upon the Road, whether there was any Hay in the Room? who anſwered, there was a little Hay there; at which he ſeemed very much pleaſed. And a very little Time after this, Elizabeth Canning was brought to Wells's; and being brought into the Parlour, where the Priſoners then were, ſhe was deſired to fix on the Perſon who robbed her, and ſhe inſtantly fixed on Mary Squires (but at this Time Mary Squires was in ſuch a Situation in the Room, that neither Canning nor he could ſee her Face). Upon which, Lucy Squires ſaid to her Mother, The young Woman (meaning Elizabeth Canning) charges you with robbing her. Mary Squires, upon that, came acroſs the Room to her, and ſaid, Madam, do you ſay I robbed you? Pray, look at this Face; for if you had ſeen it before, you muſt have remembered it; for God Almighty never made ſuch another. And upon Canning's ſaying that ſhe robbed her on New-year's Day, Mary Squires ſaid, Lord! Madam, I was on that Day an hundred and twenty Miles off. Upon which the Witneſs aſked, Where? Her Anſwer was, That ſhe was at Abbotſbury in Dorſetſhire, and that ſhe could bring an hundred People to prove it, who had known her for twenty, thirty, and forty Years. There was one Judith Natus then in the Room, who ſaid, that ſhe, Judith Natus, had been in the Houſe ten or eleven Weeks, and that Mary Squires had been in the Houſe but a very little Time; and that Judith Natus then ſaid, that ſhe had never ſeen Canning before. When ſhe was taken into the Room called the Hay-loft, ſhe ſaid, ſhe remembered a little Hay there, the Pitcher, and a Tobacco-roll; but being aſked about the Cheſt of Drawers, the Tub wherein the Pollard was, and ſeveral other Things in the Room, ſhe made no Anſwer. And being aſked, why ſhe did not endeavour to eſcape out of the Eaſt Window, ſhe ſaid, ſhe thought it was faſtened. And upon the whole, this Witneſs tells you, that upon comparing what he had obſerved at Wells's, with the Account which Canning gave before Alderman Chitty, he was of Opinion, that her Evidence was deſignedly falſe, or at leaſt that ſhe was groſly miſtaken. On his being aſked, why he did not give this Evidence at the Trial of Mary Squires? his Anſwer was, That he was that Day obliged to leave the Old-Bailey, to attend the Goldſmiths Company (having an Employment under them); and being fully ſatisfied of the Innocence of Mary Squires, concluded that ſhe could not be found guilty; and that he declared the Subſtance of what he has now ſworn to ſeveral People before that Trial; and being extremely uneaſy after her Conviction at his not giving Evidence upon her Trial, he went to Sir Criſp Gaſcoyne, then Lord-Mayor, to whom he diſcloſed the Whole or the Subſtance of the Evidence he has now given. The next Witneſs is John Hague, who went with the laſt Witneſs to Enfield, and having told him what paſſed before Alderman Chitty, agreed to go with him, Aldridge, and Lyon, to Enfield. He confirms the Account which Naſh has given in every Particular; but with this Addition, that during the Time that Elizabeth Canning was in the Houſe, till ſhe was carried into the Parlour, (where Mary Squires, Wells, and the reſt were) ſhe never mentioned her being robbed. He ſays, indeed, that Elizabeth Canning, on being aſked whether ſhe ſaw the Perſon who robbed her, pointed to Mary Squires; but he was ſurprized at her doing ſo, becauſe, in the Situation Mary Squires then was, he thought it impoſſible ſhe ſhould ſee her Face. Says, he heard Mary Squires expreſs herſelf (when ſhe was charged with the Robbery) in the Manner Naſh has mentioned. He deſcribes the Room in the ſame Manner Naſh has done; that there was not the leaſt Appearance of a Grate ever having been there, or Pictures over the Chimney. Agrees with Naſh as to the Windows, Trees, Hay, and Bed there, and likewiſe the Cheſt of Drawers, &c. which appeared to have been above a Year there, and that there was only a Button on the Door, and no Lock, no Pent-houſe under either of the Windows; and then finding that what he ſaw did not correſpond with the Account which Canning had given, ſaid to her with ſome Warmth, Zounds, Child, I cannot think you have been here at all. Upon which Naſh, Aldridge, and he told Lyon, that they thought her whole Story was falſe, which he thinks to be the Reaſon they were not ſubpœna'd to give Evidence at the Trial of Mary Squires, though he owns he was in Court during the whole Trial. He ſays, that Elizabeth Canning charged Virtue Hall and Lucy Squires, as being preſent when her Stays were cut off; but they both very ſolemnly affirmed at that Time, that they never ſaw her in their Lives, before ſhe ſo charged them. He ſays, he was ſo greatly affected by the Evidence which Elizabeth Canning had given, that he had not Spirits to deſire to be called to contradict her. And ſays farther, that upon Mary Squires's being convicted, he could not reſt till he applied to the late Lord-Mayor, to acquaint him with the Account he has now given; and that his only Motive in ſo doing, was that of reſcuing the Innocent from Oppreſſion.

The next is Edward Aldridge, who is a Silverſmith in Foſter-Lane, who went with Naſh, Lyon, and Hague, the 1ſt of February 1753, and who agrees with the two former Witneſſes in every Particular as to the Deſcription of the Room, and is of Opinion, that when Elizabeth Canning was firſt carried there on that Day, that ſhe did not ſeem to know where ſhe was; and that when ſhe was firſt taken into the Parlour, Wells aſked her, if ſhe knew her? Her Anſwer was, that ſhe did not. And that George Squires aſked her the ſame Queſtion as to her knowing him; to which ſhe gave the ſame Anſwer: But ſays, that ſhe charged the old Woman in the Corner of the Chimney (meaning Mary Squires) as the Perſon who cut off her Stays; but is of Opinion, that Elizabeth Canning could not at that Time ſee her Face; and is poſitive in remembering what Mary Squires ſaid as to her being very remarkable in her Perſon, and of her being at Abbotſbury at the Time when Elizabeth Canning ſwore ſhe was robbed. He then made his Obſervations on the Room called the Hay-loft, and recollects ſeeing all the Particulars there which Naſh and Hague have mentioned in their Evidence; and ſays, that from all the Obſervations he could make, he is convinced that it was not a Place of Confinement. He ſays, that he went to Wells's as a Friend of Canning's at his own Expence; and after laying all the Circumſtances attending this extraordinary Caſe together, he ſaw one Mr. Hall, of Theobalds, and told him, that he thought Elizabeth Canning was miſtaken; for he was ſure ſhe never had been at Wells's. He ſays, he was at the Old-Bailey Part of the Time of the Trial of Mary Squires, but went away to dine with the Goldſmiths Company, concluding that ſhe muſt have been acquitted, as being quite innocent of the Robbery with which ſhe was charged. The next Witneſs is

William White, one of the Marſhal's Men, who is one of thoſe who went to Wells's, in order to execute the Warrant, and took Wells, Mary Squires, and the reſt into Cuſtody. When they were ſecured, they deſired they might look over their Goods, which they did in his Preſence: But he ſaw no Stays amongſt them. He then went into the Hay-loft, where he obſerved about twelve or fifteen Truſſes of Hay, which ſeemed to have been there a conſiderable Time; and he alſo obſerved all the other Things in the Room, which the other Witneſſes have mentioned, and concluded as they did, (for the Reaſons you have heard from them) that Elizabeth Canning was miſtaken. He went under the North Window, out of which ſhe ſays ſhe eſcaped; but there were not the leaſt Marks or Footſteps to be ſeen of any body's getting out of that Window, neither was there the Appearance of any Shed or Pent-houſe. Was preſent when Elizabeth Canning fixed on Mary Squires, and heard both Mary Squires, her Son, and her Daughter ſay, that they were at that Time in Dorſetſhire; and the other Daughter ſaid, that ſhe was at that Time at her Uncle's in the Borough. The next Witneſs is

Fortune Natus, who is a poor labouring Man (and is mentioned by ſome of the other Witneſſes). He ſays, that he came to lodge at Mrs. Wells's about a Fortnight after Sir Criſp Gaſcoyne was ſworn Lord-Mayor, and that he and his Wife lay in the Room called the Workſhop or Hay-loft; that his Bed was made of Hay and Straw, and his Bolſter a Sack of Wool; and deſcribes the Situation of both Windows in the Room, and that one of them looked into the great Road. He ſays, that he and his Wife continued in that Room from the 27th of November to the 2d of February following, except one Night, during which Time he had a very good Opportunity of obſerving every Thing in it; and ſays, that there was no Grate in the Chimney, but remembers the Neſt of Drawers, the Side-ſaddles, the Tub with Pollard, and many other Things, which he ſpecifies particularly in his Evidence. He mentions the Sign of the Crown, which was at the Feet of his Bed, which he ſays was bought by Wells; but is poſitive that there were no Pictures over the Chimney; and ſays, that he is ſure that he lodged there the whole Month of January, and continued there till the Warrant was executed on the 2d of February, and after; and that he never ſaw Elizabeth Canning there, or any where elſe, before that Day. He ſays, that during that Month of January, Wells's Son and Daughters uſed frequently to go into this Hay-loft, where he and his Wife lay, for Hay and Pollard, as they wanted; and ſays, that during his Stay there, Virtue Hall was a Lodger in the Houſe; and ſays, that Mary Squires, her Son, and Daughters, had been there no longer than a Week and a Day before they were taken up; and when he is aſked why he is ſo particular, his Anſwer is, that Mary Squires's Perſon was ſo remarkable, that it ſtruck a Sort of Terror in him. He remembers the Pitcher, and ſays, that his Wife, and all Wells's Family, uſed to bring Water in it from Mrs. Howard's, which was oppoſite to Wells's; but ſays, that that he never ſaw a Bed-gown at Wells's. He was ſubpœna'd to give Evidence at the Trial of Mary Squires and Wells, and attended in the Yard at the Old-Bailey; but was aſſaulted there, and was (with ſome other Witneſſes, who attended there on the ſame Occaſion) turned out of the Yard three or four different Times. Then

Judith Natus (who is Wife to the laſt Witneſs) is called in, who agrees with the Evidence her Huſband has given in every Particular; that they lodged at Wells's ten Weeks all but three Days, and continued there till they were all taken up, which was on the 2d of February. She is rather more exact than he is as to the Signs; for ſhe ſays there were two Signs, one the Sign of the Fountain, and the other was the Sign of the Crown; and that Whiffin bought the Sign of the Crown ſome Time (as ſhe believes) before Old Chriſtmas, and afterwards bought the Irons of both the Signs, which were not taken away till about a Week before Mary Squires and the reſt were taken up. When ſhe is ſhewn the Bed-gown and Handkerchief, ſhe ſwears that ſhe never (to her Knowledge) ſaw them before. She remembers all the ſeveral Things in the Room, of which her Huſband has already given a very exact Account; and ſays, that ſhe gave the ſame Account ſhe does now before Mr. Fielding; but was ſo inſulted by the Mob at the Time when ſhe attended at the Old-Bailey upon the Trial of Mary Squires and Wells, that ſhe was not able to give Evidence. The next is Mary Larney, who keeps a Chandler's Shop at Enfield-Waſh, who ſays, that ſhe remembers the two laſt Witneſſes lodging at Wells's about the Time they have told you. She ſays, that the firſt Time ſhe ſaw Mary Squires was on Wedneſday the 24th of January, and ſhe did not ſee her after till the Thurſday Se'nnight following; and that during the Time that Mary Squires was at Wells's, Lucy Squires uſed to buy Chandlery Ware of her.

Sarah Hewit is the next, who is Wells's Daughter, and ſwears, that ſhe lived with her Mother that ſame Month of January which Elizabeth Canning has fixed on to be the Time of her Confinement; and ſays, that Mary Squires and her Family came to her Mother's on Wedneſday the 24th of January, and remained there till they were taken up. She is poſitive that Fortune Natus and his Wife lodged at her Mother's, in the Hay-loft, both before and after they were all taken up; and that they had been there conſiderably above two Months in the Whole; mentions the Hay and Pollard there, and the Uſe they were put there for. She is very certain that ſhe lay at her Mother's the whole Months of December and January, during which Time Virtue Hall and ſhe went very frequently into the Hay-loft. Remembers a particular Circumſtance of Trees growing againſt the Eaſt Window of that Room, and that upon the 8th of January, Edward Allen, Giles Knight, and John Larney lopped them, and at that Time Virtue Hall and ſhe both looked out of the Window, the Caſement of which, ſhe, the Witneſs, opened, and that the Trees belonged to one Richard Allen. She was preſent when Elizabeth Canning fixed on Mary Squires as the Perſon who robbed her; but ſays, that at that Time Mary Squires was in ſuch a Situation, that it was impoſſible for her to ſee her Face. The next Witneſs is John Larney, (who is produced to give an Account of the lopping the Trees mentioned by the laſt Witneſs) who ſays, that he very well remembers that he, Allen and Knight, went together on the 8th of January 1753, for that Purpoſe; and that Knight lopped them, and told him, that he ſhould have the Lops; and that at the ſame Time Sarah Howit and Virtue Hall were looking out of the Window of the Workſhop, and that Allen flung Dirt at them, which they deſired he would not do. He ſays, he had the Arms of the Trees, and Watts had the Spray. He ſays, that he plaiſtered up two of the four Windows in the Workſhop, and there remained only two, viz. one on the Eaſt, and the other on the North; that the Window on the Eaſt was not above ſeven or eight Feet from the Ground, and that the Wall was ſo very thin, being only Lath and Plaiſter, that any one might have puſhed it down. He is very poſitive to the 8th of January being the Day on which the Trees were lopped, becauſe his Child was chriſtened, and he ſet his Chimney on Fire with the Lops which he burnt on that Occaſion. He lives oppoſite to Wells's, and gave this Account before the Trial of Mary Squires.

Giles Knight is called next, who ſays, that he lopped the Trees mentioned by the former Witneſs, and is very poſitive that he lopped them on the 8th of January. Remembers that Circumſtance of Virtue Hall and Sarah Howit looking out of the Window of the Workſhop at the ſame Time, and of Dirt being flung at them, and that Larney had the Lops, and Wells the Spray, for which ſhe gave them ſome Beer. Remembers an Accident of one Mrs. Picket's Cart breaking down that Day; and ſays, that the Window out of which the Women looked at that Time was large enough for him to get out of. The next Witneſs is Edward Allen, who (as the two former Witneſſes ſwear) was with them at the Time of the lopping the Trees which were near the Workſhop, and is very poſitive to the 8th of January, as the other Witneſſes have ſworn; and particularly remembers that Virtue Hall and Sarah Howit looked out of the Window of the Workſhop or Hay-loft at the ſame Time; and confirms what they have ſaid in every Circumſtance.

John Cantril is called next, who keeps a Public-Houſe a little Diſtance from Wells's, and ſays, that upon this 8th of January, Knight and Allen came to his Houſe, and ſaid they had been at Play, throwing Clods at Sarah Howit and Virtue Hall, who were looking out of a Caſement that Day at Wells's: He is very particular to that Day, becauſe it happened on a Monday, and the Tueſday following he had a Piece of Beef, which he intended to roaſt for his Cuſtomers, being Chriſtmas Time; and ſays, That he remembers that Fortune Natus and his Wife lodged at Wells's between two and three Months. The End of producing this remarkable Piece of Evidence, as to that Circumſtance of lopping the Trees on the 8th of January, is, that (if theſe Witneſſes ſwear true) it is impoſſible that Canning could have been alone, or even at all in the Workſhop or Hay-loft at Wells's, upon the 8th of January 1753, which ſhe ſwore ſhe was, upon the Trial of Mary Squires and Wells. The next Witneſs is Ezra Whiffin, who is referred to by ſome of the former Witneſſes, as being the Perſon who bought Wells's Sign-Irons. He lives at Enfield-Waſh, and having Occaſion for ſome Sign-Irons, and hearing that Wells had ſome to diſpoſe of, he went to her on the 18th of January 1753, who told him they were in the Room called the Hay-loft; he went with her there, and looking about for the Irons, Wells ſaid, Now I recollect, the Irons are under the Feet of this poor Creature's Bed (pointing to the Bed where Natus's Wife then lay). She then took up from under the Bed a Piece of Wood, to which the Irons were then fixed. He agreed to buy the Irons, which his Son took out of the Wood, and brought the Wood back to her. He gives you a Reaſon for his remembering the Day ſo particularly, becauſe he was on that 18th of January going to a Place called Wormleigh, to borrow five Guineas of a Man who kept a Public-Houſe there, in order to make up a Sum he then owed his Brewer, (for which he had given a Note, in which one Livingſtone joined with him) who had arreſted him for it. Then Livingſtone is called, who confirms Whiffin in that Circumſtance of the Note.

John Whiffin, the Son of Ezra Whiffin, is called next, who ſwears that he went with his Father to Wells's on the 18th of January; and is poſitive to his taking the Sign-Irons out of the Wood by his Father's Orders, and returned the Wood to Wells in about three or four Days after. The next Witneſs is

Elizabeth Long, who is one of Wells's Daughters, and lives only three Doors from her Mother, and uſed to go there every Day. She is very certain that her Siſter, and Virtue Hall, and Fortune Natus and his Wife, lived at her Mother's the whole Month of January 1753. She ſays, ſhe has known the Room called the Workſhop above twenty-two Years, and believes ſhe went into it almoſt every Day during that whole Month. She is very poſitive to the Hay-bed, the Chimney, (in which there was no Grate) the Pollard, and the reſt of the Things mentioned by the other Witneſſes. Swears to the Pitcher being her Mother's; but as to the Bed-gown and Handkerchief, ſhe never ſaw them till ſhe ſaw them at the Lord-Mayor's. She was in the Parlour at her Mother's when Canning was brought in, in order to fix on the Perſon who robbed her, and gives the ſame Account of her Behaviour there which you have heard from the other Witneſſes. She ſays, ſhe was in the Old-Bailey Yard, together with Larney and Knight, when her Mother and Mary Squires were tried; but they were not ſuffered to continue there, or give their Evidence. The next is

John Howit, who married Wells's Daughter, and is very poſitive that he was in the Workſhop on the 19th, 20th, and 21ſt of January 1753, having ſome Tools there which he had Occaſion to make uſe of; remembers Fortune Natus and his Wife lodging there at that Time, but never ſaw Canning till the Trial of Mary Squires. He was at the Old-Bailey at the Time of that Trial, but was very near being killed there by the Mob.

Robert White is called, who very well remembers Fortune Natus and his Wife lodging at Wells's about the Time you have heard.

The next Piece of Evidence laid before you, is the Model of this Hay-loft, or Workſhop (to ſhew you that it is not a little, ſquare Room, as Canning deſcribed it before Alderman Chitty), which is produced by John Donoval, who is a Surveyor; and it appears to be thirty-five Feet three Inches long, and nine Feet eight Inches over.

Elizabeth Mayle, a Midwife, is called next, who ſays, that in the Beginning of February (being a few Days after Elizabeth Canning came Home) ſhe went to make her Mother a Viſit, and ſeeing Elizabeth Canning lying on her Bed there, and to all Appearance very ill, and inquiring into the Cauſe of her Illneſs, her Mother told her the Condition her Daughter came Home in. Elizabeth Canning then told her the Whole which had happened to her; and on the Witneſs's aſking her, whether ſhe had been debauched? ſhe anſwered, That ſhe had loſt her Senſes, or was in Fits, and could not tell. Upon which ſhe inquired for the Shift ſhe came Home in; and upon its being produced, ſhe aſked, if that was the Shift ſhe went away in? and upon being told it was, ſhe immediately ſaid, that ſhe ſuppoſed it had been waſhed ſince it came Home; but the Mother ſaying it had not, ſhe ſaid, ſhe thought it appeared a good deal too clean to have been worn ſo long; for it was uncommonly clean for ſo long wearing: That upon looking on the Shift, ſhe aſſured the Mother, that her Daughter had not been debauched, if ſhe had worn no other Shift: But ſhe ſays, that, in her Opinion, the Shift could not have been worn three Weeks; nay, thinks that a Week's Wear would have made it as dirty as it then appeared; for it was not the leaſt draggled. That there were only three little Spots upon it, which appeared to be Excrement. She ſaid, ſhe made her a few Viſits after, and ordered her a Glyſter; and on the laſt Viſit ſhe made her, ſhe mentioned the three Spots on her Shift as having the Appearance of Excrement; at which her Mother was very angry, and told her, that ſhe came to ſet her Friends againſt her. On being aſked the Character of Elizabeth Canning, ſhe gave her a very good one. The next Witneſs is George Brogden, Clerk to Mr. Fielding, and he is produced only to prove the Information, which ſhe ſwore to before Mr. Fielding, and to which ſhe ſet her Mark; and by that Information it appears, that the Water in the Pitcher was conſumed on the Friday; but in her Evidence ſhe ſwears it was conſumed the ſame Day ſhe eſcaped.

Deputy Molineux is called next, who ſwears, that being with Sir Criſp Gaſcoyne, then Lord-Mayor, at the Manſion-Houſe, ſome Time after Mary Squires was convicted, that Elizabeth Canning and Virtue Hall were there together; and after Sir Criſp Gaſcoyne had examined Virtue Hall, he aſked Elizabeth Canning, if ſhe had any Thing to ſay? who anſwered, No. And the Bed-gown and Pitcher being then upon the Table, Elizabeth Canning was rolling up the Bed-gown, in order to take it away. My Lord-Mayor then ſaid, ſhe muſt not take it: Upon which Elizabeth Canning ſaid, It is my Mother's. This ſurpriſed the Witneſs very much, becauſe he had heard, that, upon the Trial of Mary Squires, ſhe ſwore, that ſhe had found it in the Chimney at Wells's. The next and laſt Witneſs is

Mr. Reed, who ſwears, that he was preſent at the Manſion-houſe at the ſame Time which the laſt Witneſs mentions, and remembers the ſeveral Circumſtances mentioned by him, as aforeſaid.

Here concludes the Evidence given in Support of this Indictment.

The

The Counsel for the Defendant have made many Observations upon the Evidence you have heard, which it is unnecessary for me to repeat; but, upon the whole, insist upon it, that as this Matter has undergone a very strict Examination by a solemn Trial, that therefore any future Inquiry is unprecedented, and consequently improper: However, in order to oppose or contradict a good deal of the Evidence you have already heard, they have called several Witnesses; the first of whom is

Edward Lyon, who says, that Elizabeth Canning was his Servant, and continued in his Service till the 1st of January 1753; that he has known Elizabeth Canning above sixteen Years, and that she always behaved well; that the first Time he missed her was on the 1st of January 1753, and that she never had been absent before; upon which he went to her Mother's, but could hear nothing of her. The first Time he saw her after that was upon the 31st of the same Month, when she was under Examination before Alderman Chitty; but being thick of Hearing, did not know what had passed. He says, that a Warrant being granted, he went to Enfield-Wash, with Hague, Nash, and Aldridge. When they arrived there, he was told, that several Persons were secured at Wells's; and when he came to Wells's, he saw several Women in the Parlour there. That some Time afterward Elizabeth Canning arrived there, and was set upon the Dresser in the Kitchen. He says, he cautioned her very particularly not to charge any one but those she was very sure of. She promised him she would not. She was soon afterwards carried into the Parlour, where they all were. She saw Mrs. Wells first, and said, she had nothing to charge her with; but upon seeing Mary Squires, she said, she was the Woman who cut her Stays off. He believes she saw her Face before she charged her (because otherwise he thinks she hardly would have charged her). Upon this, Mary Squires came up to her, and said she hoped she would not swear her Life away, for she never saw her before: But says, that Elizabeth Canning did not at that Time mention the Day upon which she was robbed. She said, that Lucy Squires and Virtue Hall were in the Room at the same Time she was robbed; and that when she saw George Squires, she said, he looked very like the Man who robbed her in Moorfields; but she would not swear to him. At this Time he had no Great-Coat on; but when he was with his Great-Coat on at Mr. Tashmaker's, she was more positive to him, saying, that was the Great-Coat, under which he put her Gown when he robbed her in Moorfields. He said, for his Part, he never had any Doubt of the Truth of what Canning had sworn at the Trial of Mary Squires; and says, that he several Times, and with the utmost Seriousness, desired Elizabeth Canning would tell the Truth, and not deceive him; and owns that this Affair has been the Means of his breaking off his Acquaintance with Nash, Hague, and Aldridge. He denies his contributing any Thing towards the Prosecution of Mary Squires. The next Witness is

Thomas Colley, who married Elizabeth Canning's Aunt; and he says, that upon the 1st of January 1753, Elizabeth Canning dined at his House upon Mutton, and drank Tea in the Afternoon, eat Toast and Butter, and supped upon cold roast Beef. She lived at that Time with Mr. Lyon, and that he and his Wife went with her at Nine o'Clock that Night, and left her at the End of Houndsditch; and about Twelve o'Clock at Night her Mother's Apprentice came to his House, to enquire for Elizabeth Canning, which made him conclude she did not get Home.

His Wife, Mrs. Colley, is called next, who gives the same Account that her Husband has, with this Addition, that she did not see her from the 1st of January till the 30th, when Elizabeth Canning was at her Mother's, and complained she was very ill. The next Witness is

Elizabeth Canning, the Mother of the Defendant, who says, that her Daughter had been some Time in Mr. Lyon's Service, and that upon the 1st of January 1753, she called upon her in her Way to her Uncle Colley's; and that pretty late that Evening Mr. Lyon called upon her, to inquire for her Daughter. This surprised her a good deal; upon which she sent to Colley's, who sent her Word, that they had parted with her at Houndsditch at Nine that Night; and says, that she never heard of, or saw her from that Time till the Night before the 30th of January, when she came to her House about a Quarter after Ten that Night (though she advertised her three several Times). She says, that when she came into her House she was in a most deplorable Condition, her Hands black and blue, and her Face bloated, had on the Bed-gown now produced, and two ragged Handkerchiefs on her Head, neither of which she had ever seen before; her Ear was bloody; that she sent for Mrs. Woodward and some other Neighbours, who came to her; and on her Daughter's being asked, where she had been? she answered, she could not tell, but had seen the Hertford Coach from the Place where she was. She said, that she remembered an old Woman and two young Women. She gave an Account of her being robbed, and carried away, and her Confinement; and said, she had nothing at all to support her from the Friday before she made her Escape. She gives an Account of her Daughter's Illness, and that she sent for a Physician and an Apothecary. She remembers that her Daughter, on the Night she came Home, mentioned the Name of Wells or Wills. She mentions the Money her Daughter had in her Pocket at the Time of her going to Colley, which I think was between twelve and thirteen Shillings. She says farther, that during her Daughter's Absence, she was advised to go to a Conjurer, who bid her be easy, for she would certainly come Home again, and believes he told her she was in the Hands of an old Woman; but says, that her own Apprehensions were, that she was murdered by the Jews, and thrown into Houndsditch. She says, that she told her she lay in Hay durng her Confinement; that she has only a very moderate Stomach, and has known her frequently to be fourteen Days without going to Stool. Upon this Witness's being asked whether she did not swear, at the Trial of Mary Squires, that her Daughter had a Cap on her Head when she came Home? she answered, she did not; but upon the Short-hand Writer's being asked that Question, his Answer was, that she did, at that Trial, swear, that her Daughter had a Cap on her Head at that Time. At this Time some Notices were produced, and proved to be signed by the Defendant, signifying her Intention to take her Trial at some of the Times mentioned in some or one of those Notices, and her Name wrote in a very legible Hand; though in the Information before Mr. Fielding, nothing more appears but her Mark. After this, a Witness is called, who speaks only to the several Advertisements in the News-papers. The next Witness is

James Lord, (who is Apprentice to Elizabeth Canning's Mother) who agrees as to the Time of her being missing, and was sent to several Places to inquire for her; but he did not see her from the 1st to the 29th of January 1753; and on that very Night his Mistress went upon her Knees, to pray that she might see even the Apparition of her Daughter; and very soon afterwards the Latch of the Door was lifted up, and Elizabeth Canning came in. When he first saw her, he did not know her, she was in such a miserable Condition, much the same as her Mother has mentioned, and particularly her Ear bleeding fresh, (though she had then walked ten Miles) and was almost spent. He went for Mrs. Woodward, and others of the Neighbours; and she then told them, that she had been at Mrs. Wells's at Enfield-Wash, and said, that she had heard People go to and fro in the House, and mention the Name of Wells or Wills. Then

Robert Scarrat is called, who says, that hearing, on the 29th of January 1753, that Elizabeth Canning was come Home late that Night, he went to her Mother's, late as it was, to see her. She had a Bed-gown on her; and having heard her asked where she had been, and hearing her Answer, that she had been at a Place from whence she had seen the Hertford Coachman, and about nine or ten Miles from London, he immediately said, he would lay a Guinea to a Farthing that he guessed where she had been; and then said, he was sure she had been at Mother Wells's; upon which she said, she was sure she had heard that Name mentioned in the House where she was confined. She then described the Room to be a longish and darkish Room (which does not agree with her Description of it before the Alderman). She then described the Fields through which she passed in her Return Home, a little Brook, and a Tanner's Yard; said that she met a Man, who directed her in her Road to London; and described the Woman who cut her Stays to be a tall, swarthy, black Woman, and two young Women in the Room at the same Time. He says, that he went to Enfield-Wash the first of February, and was present when Elizabeth Canning was brought into the Parlour, and saw her point to Mary Squires, saying, That is the Woman who cut my Stays off; upon which Mary Squires said, Dear Madam, take care how you swear my precious Life away; to which Elizabeth Canning said, I know you too well, to my Sorrow. And on being asked whether she knew any other in the Parlour, she said, that she did not know George Squires; but that Lucy Squires and Virtue Hall were in the Room when her Stays were cut off. He says, that she mentioned some of the Things which were in the Room she was confined in, and pointed to the Window out of which she escaped. Upon his Cross-examination, he says, he never was in the Workshop at Wells's, till this 1st of February; but owns (with some Difficulty) that he might have been in the House near ten Times, and that he has known Wells for about three or four Years. He says, that he heard Canning give her Information before Alderman Chitty, and heard her give Evidence at the Trial of Mary Squires, and thinks that her Evidence on the Trial did not vary from her Information before the Alderman; but will not take upon him to give an Account of the Particulars of her Evidence before the Alderman. He owns, that when he was in Service at Edmonton, that he rode his Master's Horses to Wells's; but disowns his having any Quarrel with her, or saying that he would be revenged on her. And says, that he believes there was no Lock on the Door of the Room called the Workshop. The next is

Mary Myers, who says, that she has known Mrs. Canning and her Daughter some Time, and that the Daughter is a very sober Girl. She gives an Account of the Time when Elizabeth Canning was missing, and of her Return to her Mother's between Ten and Eleven o'Clock at Night on the 29th of January. She tells you the Company she saw there, and the Condition she was in, which was very bad. She says, that she gave the same Account of her being robbed in Moorfields, and her being carried to Wells's, and of her Treatment there, which you have already heard, and is much the same Account which she gave at the Trial of Mary Squires: That she then gave a particular Account of her Escape, which you have also heard; and that she tore her Ear, and the Blood dropped upon her Shoulder after she returned to her Mother's. This Witness says, that she went with Canning to Wells's on the 1st of February, and gives you an Account of her fixing on Mary Squires as the Person who robbed her, and what Mary Squires then said, as is before mentioned by the other Witnesses then present; that she fixed on the Workshop as the Place of her Confinement; but said, there was at that Time more Hay in it; and that Adamson put his Back against one of the Windows there, to try if she could give an Account of the Prospect; which she did, by describing Hills at a Distance. She says, that she looked at Canning's Shift, and that it was dirty. Cannot tell the Reason of Scarrat's being at Mrs. Canning's the Night her Daughter came Home; but says, he lived in that Neighbourhood. The next Witness is

Mrs. Woodward, who says, that she was at Mrs. Canning's the Night that Elizabeth Canning came Home, and was the first Person that came there. She came Home about half an Hour past Ten, the 29th of January, on Monday at Night, and saw Scarrat and Wintlebury there; and at Elizabeth Canning's Request, she sent for her Master and Mistress Lyon, and that Elizabeth Canning said to the Witness, Oh! Mrs. Woodward, I have been almost starved; I have had only Bread and Water, and have not had even Water since last Friday. She was asked where she had been, and said she had been confined in a Room on the Hertford Road. She then gave a very particular Account of her being robbed, and of the Treatment she met with from Mary Squires at Wells's, and of her being confined there. She agrees with the other Witnesses in the Account they gave of the deplorable Condition she was in, and believes her to be as ill as she then appeared to be. That she went with Elizabeth Canning to Enfield-Wash on Thursday the 1st of February; and upon Tuesday after that, she was so ill, they were forced to put her in a Chair, to carry her to Mr. Fielding's. The next Witness is fourteen or fifteen Years. He says, she is a very honest Woman, and that her Daughter Elizabeth lived with him as a Servant about eighteen Months; that he saw her the Night she came Home, when she was in a very bad Condition, and had nothing on but a Bed-gown, and a Piece of a Handkerchief upon her Head; that her Ear was bloody; that upon taking her by the Hand, she said, Lord! Sir, you do not know what I have undergone; that then she gave an Account where she had been, by seeing the Hertford Stage Coachman: That he was with her when she gave her Information before Alderman Chitty, but cannot be particular as to what passed there: That he went on the 1st of February to Wells's at Enfield-Wash, and went into the Room called the Workshop, and observed a good deal of Hay there, which appeared to be fresh tossed up; and says, he arrived there at least an Hour before Aldridge, Hague, or Nash: That upon Elizabeth Canning's being carried into the Parlour, she fixed upon, and charged Mary Squires, as the Person who cut her Stays off; to which Mary Squires made no Answer; but, on the contrary, denies that Mary Squires even desired her not to swear her Life away (which is a Circumstance the other Witnesses have very particularly sworn to): That when Elizabeth Canning saw the Door of the Workshop opened, she said, This is the Room I was confined in. He was present when Adamson set his Back to one of the Windows of the Room, and examined her about the Prospect; and says, that the North Window seemed to be fresh boarded up. That when he observed George Squires in the Parlour, Elizabeth Canning thought he was very like one of the Men who robbed her in Moorfields; and among eight or nine Women then in the Parlour, she fixed upon Virtue Hall and Lucy Squires, as being present when her Stays were cut off. He says, he cannot be so particular as to the Account she gave before Alderman Chitty, as to that which she gave before Mr. Tashmaker; and thinks that the Account she gave before Mr. Tashmaker corresponded exactly with the Evidence she gave at the Trial of Mary Squires. Upon his Cross-Examination, he owns, he did not give so particular an Account at the Trial of Mary Squires as he does now; and says, he took little Observation of the Evidence given by her before Alderman Chitty. The Witness called next is

Joseph Adamson, who has known Elizabeth Canning for eleven Years; but had not seen her for three Months till he went to meet her going to Enfield-Wash. He denies his giving her any Information of there being any Hay in the Room; but that she of her own Accord said there was. That when she was taken into the Parlour, she fixed upon Mary Squires as the Person who cut off her Stays; and when she was carried into the Workshop, she said the East Window was fastened up, and she could not open it; and that he made the Experiment by setting his Back to the Window, to know whether she could give any Account of the Prospect; and he observed that the Wood which covered the North Window seemed to be fresh cracked. The next Witness is

Sutherton Bakler, Apothecary, who says, that he saw Elizabeth Canning on the 30th of January; that she was in Bed, and in a very low Condition; that he administered some Medicines to her, being Glysters; and then Dr. Eaton, a Physician, was sent for; but before the Medicines which the Doctor prescribed had any Effect, she went to Enfield-Wash, which was on the first of February. He says, she appeared to be half-starved, and she did not make Water till after the 6th of February. And then they call

Dr. Eaton, who says, that he attended Elizabeth Canning on the 6th of February; that he found her very weak, and that she complained of a Colic in her Stomach and Bowels; that he thought her in Danger seven or eight Days, but upon the 4th of March she was quite recovered; and thought the Symptoms of her Illness proceeded from Hunger, Thirst, Cold, and great Hardships; though he says, that her Disorder might have proceeded from other Causes, and thinks she had a bad Habit of Body. The next Witness is

Robert Beals, who, upon the 1st of January 1753, kept the Turnpike on Stamford-Hill, which leads from Moorfields to Enfield; who says, that he was very ill the Christmas before; and that the February following, his two Children, which are very young, (not above eight or nine Years old) told him, that a Woman had been forced away from Moorfields to Enfield-Wash, and had been confined there above a Month; upon which he said, Lord! I was at the Gate when she was carried through; and says, that about Ten or Eleven o'Clock at Night, the Beginning of January, he heard a sobbing Sort of a Cry about three hundred Yards distant from him; that there appeared to him to be two Men and a Woman; that they did not come through the Gate, but as they were going over the Stile, heard one of the Men say, Come along, you Bitch, you are drunk; and the Woman seeming very unwilling to go over the Stile, one of the Men attempting to lift her over, she fell down, and cried bitterly, but never spoke; one of them held her, and the other pushed her along. She appeared to be a Woman in great Distress, and sobbed and cried bitterly; but, notwithstanding this Distress, he never mentioned it for above six Weeks; and he says, he durst not venture to stop the two Men, because he was alone. He cannot take upon him particularly to say, that this was upon New-year's Day; but says, the Gown the Woman then wore was white, though he says there was no Moon that Night. The next Witness is Thomas Bennet, who lives at Enfield, opposite to the Ten-mile Stone; and he says, that upon the 29th of January, coming towards London between Four and Five o'Clock in the Afternoon, he met a Woman, who appeared miserably poor, at a Gate-way between Wright's and Jenge's, about a Quarter of a Mile on this Side Mrs. Wells's; that she had neither Gown, Stays, Cap, or Hat on; that she enquired the Way to London, which he directed her: He remembers it by a Circumstance of binding an Apprentice that Day; but says, that he never mentioned this till the March following.

David Dyer is called next, who says, that about the same Time he met a poor distressed Creature, and asked her, if she wanted a Husband? and looking upon the Defendant, believes her to be the same Person? that he saw her about Four of the Clock in the Afternoon. She did not appear black in the Face, or at all bruised; but, on the contrary, very pale and thin. Then they call

Mary Cobb, who says, that about three Miles on this Side Wells's, in a Field called Ducks-Field, just at the shutting in of Day-light on the 29th of January, she met a Woman in a miserable Condition, dressed in a poor dirty Bed gown, a black Petticoat, and a Bit of an Handkerchief on her Head, who was near falling as she was getting over a Stile; that some Time afterwards, hearing of this Affair, and recollecting the Person she had so met, she concluded that she must be Elizabeth Canning; and now upon looking at her more minutely, believes it was her; for she then observed something particular about the Tip of her Nose, by which she is more certain of her now; that Justice Tashmaker asked her about this Affair, to whom she gave the same Account she now does. The next Witness is

William Howard, who is produced in order to shew, that the Witness Aldridge had once a different Opinion of Elizabeth Canning to that which he has now disclosed in his Evidence. He says, that Aldridge and his Brother, a little Time after Mary Squires was taken up, brought him the Case of Elizabeth Canning, and recommended her as an Object of Compassion, and proposed a Subscription to support her; and that he came to him a second Time on the same Subject; but when he came the second Time, he said, that the Girl (meaning Elizabeth Canning) was not so clear in her Description of the Room where she said she was confined. Then

Mrs. Howard, his Wife, is called, and confirms what her Husband has said as to Aldridge's desiring him to subscribe. She lives opposite to Wells's, and believes that she saw Mary Squires pass and repass several Times in the Month of January; and thinks that he saw Mary Squires and her Family at Wells's Door the Sunday Se'nnight before they were taken up, and believes her to be the same Woman now in Court. She owns that she is short-sighted, and that Mary Squires and her Family might be fifty Yards Distance from her, when she first saw them; but she thinks that she has seen them pass by her House within the Distance of thirty Yards. The next Witness is William Headland, who says, that to the best of his Memory, he was with his Father (who lives at Enfield-Wash) some Time before January was Twelve-month, and was there when Wells and the rest were taken up; and says, that he took a Piece of Lead up, which lay under the Window from whence Elizabeth Canning escaped: It was bloody, and he heard that it was the Lead which tore her Ear when she escaped. He cannot tell the exact Day he took it up, but he gave it to his Mother. He says, that he saw Mary Squires the 9th of January at Enfield-Wash, telling Fortunes; and also saw her there on the 12th, doing of the same; and her two Daughters were with her at Wells's; remembers it by its being Market-day. He saw her get into the Cart when she was taken away, and saw her in Court, and believes her to be the same Woman he saw there. He says, that he is twenty-one Years old; but though he is so particular in his Account of Mary Squires, &c. he gives but a very uncertain Account of himself: For he can scarce (if at all) give an Account with whom he has lived for several Months past before he returned to his Father; neither can he tell us in what Month Christmas is; he says indeed, that he lived with one Allen, as an hired Servant, ten or eleven Weeks.

Elizabeth Headland, the last Witness's Mother, is called, who only proves, that her Son gave her the Piece of Lead at or a little after the Time that Mary Squires and the rest were taken up, and the Blood on it was dry; but she has now lost or mislaid it. The next Witness is

Samuel Story, who (upon looking at Mary Squires) says, that he knows her very well, and has seen her several Times, and particularly at an House in White-Webbs-Lane, near Enfield-Chace; and that he saw her on the 23d of December 1752, at Wells's Door; and says, that his Curiosity led him to see if she was the same Woman he had seen before, and therefore he went within ten Yards of her, and thinks her the same; and afterwards went to see her in Newgate, and is still of the same Opinion; and says, that he has occasionally seen her for three Years together, but never spoke to her. He says, that he has seen two young Women with her, and that they all used to wear Blankets, and travel with two Asses and a little Horse. Then

William Smith is called, who lives at Enfield, and is a considerable Farmer there. He says, that he saw Mary Squires in his Cow-House on the 15th of December 1752, and has seen her and her Family about the Country several Times. They came at that Time to enquire for a Lodging. He saw Mary Squires next Morning, and there were two young Men and two young Women with her, whom he cannot remember. They lay in his Barn, and were there three Nights and two Days, and had a little black Horse with them, which they lost. He afterwards saw her in Newgate, and is positive to her. He is positive that he saw her the 15th of December, because he sold some Corn on the 16th. The Witness called next is

Loomworth Dane, who keeps the Bell at Enfield-Wash, and says, that he never saw Mary Squires till Winter was Twelve-month; and that upon Old Christmas Day, which was the 5th of January, as he was standing on an Heap of Gravel, he is sure he saw her at Enfield-Wash; for his Servant having an Holiday that Day, he kept Shop; and one Norton bought a Collar of him for his Horse, which he entered in his Book, (which Book is not produced) and that is the Reason which he gives of his remembering the Time. He saw her when taken up and put into the Cart, and also in Newgate, and is sure she is the same Woman. He is asked about Mrs. Headland's Character, (whose Evidence you have heard) which, he says, is not a very good one. The next Witness is

Samuel Arnot, who is a Labourer, and lives on Enfield Chace, and says, that upon a Friday, about nine or ten Days before New Christmas, Mary Squires asked him (telling him her Name) for a little brown Horse which she had lost; and says, that he saw her the Sunday after, and that a Man, two Women, and two Children were with her, which Children were not above four or five Years old, and he believes they all lay at William Smith's; that he afterwards saw Mary Squires in Newgate, and is of Opinion that she is the same he then saw. Then they call

Elizabeth Arnot, Wife to the last Witness, who says, that she saw Mary Squires in Farmer Smith's Cow-house at Enfield, about a Week before New Christmas, and that she then inquired about her Horse, which she had lost, and that she saw her afterwards in Newgate. The next is

Sarah Star, who lives next Door to Wells's, and ſays, that ſhe ſaw Mary Squires at her own Houſe on the 18th of January was Twelve-month; but had never ſeen her before: That ſhe then offered to mend China, and ſtayed at her Houſe three Quarters of an Hour, and wanted to tell her and her Servants their Fortunes, and terrified her very much. She afterwards ſaw her in the Cart when taken up, and in Newgate, and believes her the ſame Perſon. She believes ſhe ſaw her on the 18th of January, becauſe ſhe thinks her Huſband ſold a Load of Peaſe that Day, and that there was a Note given on that Account; but that Note has not been produced. Then

Daniel Vaſs is called, who ſays, that he ſaw Mary Squires go by his Houſe near Enfield on Old Chriſtmas-Day; ſhe went the Foot-way, and he was then in his own Yard; he looked pretty much at her, and ſhe ſeemed ſurpriſed at his doing ſo. He did not look at her above a Minute, and never ſaw her before; but he went to her when in Newgate, though in a different Dreſs; yet is ſure ſhe is the ſame Perſon he ſaw go by his Yard. The next is

Jane Dadwell, who keeps a Shop at Enfield, who ſays, that ſhe ſaw Mary Squires at her Houſe on Thurſday the 28th of December; knew her very well, for ſhe had been there ſeveral Times before; is particular to that Day, becauſe ſhe dreſſed Meat on Chriſtmas-Day for her Cuſtomers, and ſhe was then in her Back-houſe waſhing her Diſhes. She went to ſee her in Newgate, when ſhe owned that ſhe had been at her Shop. The next called is

Tobias Kellog, who lives at Enfield, and ſays, that he ſaw Mary Squires at Enfield ſome Time before Old Chriſtmas (though he is ſo ignorant, that he cannot tell on what Day of the Month Old Chriſtmas-Day was); but ſays, he believes he ſaw her there a Month before ſhe was taken up; he thinks that he ſaw her three or four Times; that ſhe aſked him for Tobacco, and would have told him his Fortune; and that ſhe told one John Rowley his Fortune. Then one

John Frame is called, who, in January was Twelve-month, lived as a Servant with Mr. Parſons in James's-Street, Groſvenor-Square, who had a Country-Houſe at Enfield; and being at Work in the Gardens there on the 11th or 12th of January was Twelve-month, Mary Squires ſpoke to him through the Paliſadoes, and wanted to tell him his Fortune, which ſhe told him: He is poſitive to the Time, becauſe his Maſter and Miſtreſs went to London on the 9th of that Month; and ſays, that he ſaw her about a Twelve-month before at Enfield, and ſaw her in Newgate, and thinks her the ſame Perſon. The next is

Joſeph Gould, who lives at Enfield, and ſays, that he ſaw Mary Squires on the 8th or 9th of January 1753, about a Quarter of a Mile from Wells's; and hearing from Virtue Hall that there were Gypſies at Wells's, he took particular Notice of her; and he ſaw her afterwards in Newgate. Then

Mary Gould, his Wife, is called, who ſays, that ſhe ſaw Mary Squires the 11th or 12th of January was Twelve-month, who aſked her, if ſhe had any China to mend, and told her ſhe would not live long. She ſays, ſhe ſaw her about a Week before ſhe was taken up, and ſaw her when ſhe (the Witneſs) was at Work at Mr. Parſons's; and alſo ſaw her in Newgate, and believes her the ſame. The next Witneſs is

Humphrey Holding, who ſays, that the firſt Time he ſaw Mary Squires was on the 8th of January 1753; that he is a Gardener, and was at Work at Mr. Parſons's, and that the Family went to London on the 9th of January; and that he ſaw Mary Squires the Day before, who aſking him if the Family were at Home, he anſwered, that they were; and ſays, that he ſaw her afterwards on the 11th, when he was pruning Dr. Harrington's Vines, and he ſet down his Day's Work in a Book, becauſe he was not paid for it. She alſo inquired if the Family had any China to mend. He is deſired to produce his Book, which he had not about him; and ſays, that he was examined two or three Times, but could not poſſibly recollect the Time of ſeeing her, becauſe he had not his Book wherein he ſets down his Work. He ſays, that he ſaw her at Mr. Taſhmaker's, and in Newgate. Then

Sarah Vaſs, Wife of Daniel Vaſs, a former Witneſs, is called, who was a Charewoman at Mr. Parſons's, and ſaw Mary Squires on Thurſday the 11th of January 1753: She fixes on that Day, becauſe Mr. Parſons went to London on the 9th, which was on Tueſday; and that ſhe would have told her her Fortune. She alſo ſaw her paſſing by the Day before ſhe was taken up; ſhe then aſked her for a Pipe of Tobacco, and had then ſome Converſation with her; and afterwards ſaw her in Newgate, and is certain ſhe is the ſame Perſon. The next Witneſs (whoſe Evidence is ſomething particular) is

Anne Johnſon, who has lived at Enfield ſome Years, and gets her Living principally by Spinning. She ſays, that ſhe ſaw Mary Squires on the 18th of January 1753, at her Door. The Reaſon of her fixing upon that Day is, becauſe ſhe ſpins for one Mr. Smitheram, and ſwears that ſhe carried her Work to him two Days before ſhe ſaw her (which was the 16th). She ſays, that ſhe ſaw Mary Squires three ſeveral Times before that, and in the Compaſs of ten or eleven Days; and afterwards ſaw her in Newgate. This Witneſs has alſo told you, that when her Work was given her to do by Mr. Smitheram, and alſo when ſhe carried it to him after it was done, that it was entered into a Book kept by Mr. Smitheram, or by ſome of his Family, for that Purpoſe. It was therefore thought proper to call Mr. Smitheram, and to enquire whether a Book was kept for that Purpoſe; and he tells you, that he did employ the Witneſs Anne Johnſon in the Buſineſs ſhe has mentioned; and he produces a Book, in which are two Columns, in one of which is entered the Yarn which he delivers out, and in the other, that which he receives after it is ſpun; and upon producing that Book, it is obſervable, that it is entered, that on January the 16th one Pound of Yarn is delivered to Anne Johnſon to be ſpun; and in the ſecond Column in the ſame Book, one Pound of Yarn is entered to be returned on January the 23d, by the ſame Perſon, Anne Johnſon, who ſpun it; ſo that it is impoſſible (if Credit is to be given to this Book, to which ſhe herſelf refers) that ſhe could have ſeen Mary Squires on the 18th of January; becauſe ſhe did not carry Home her Work (as appears by the Book) till the 23d of that Month; which is an Obſervation you will think worthy your Notice, and eſpecially as this is the only written Evidence referred to by the Defendant's Witneſſes which has been produced. They then call

Wife, the Wife of John Baſſet, who ſays, that ſhe ſaw Mary Squires at Enfield-Waſh on the 21ſt or 22d of January 1753, and remembers it by a Circumſtance of killing an Hog, and of a Servant's leaving her Service at that Time; that ſhe ſaw her in her own Houſe, and gave her a Penny to tell her Fortune. She ſaw her afterwards in Newgate; and upon a Converſation with Mary Squires there, about ſeeing her, Mary Squires told her, ſhe wronged her. The next is

James Pratt, who ſays, that he ſaw Mary Squires, a Man, two Women, and ſome Children, in Farmer Smith's Cow-houſe, about three Days before New Chriſtmas, as near as he can remember, where they continued about three Days; and that Mary Squires then complained of the Loſs of her Horſe. Then they call

Lydia Farroway, who was a Servant to Mr. Howard at Enfield-Waſh; and ſhe ſays, that ſhe ſaw Mary Squires there upon the Tueſday Se'nnight before ſhe was taken up, and remembers it by this Circumſtance, that ſhe was on that Day making Pyes for her young Maſter's Birth-day; and ſaw her afterwards in Newgate, and thinks ſhe can be certain to her. The next is

Margaret Richardſon, who ſays, that ſhe ſaw Mary Squires at Enfield laſt January was Twelve-month, in a Chandler's Shop there, and ſtayed with her a Quarter of an Hour, and left her in the Shop; and ſhe alſo ſaw her on Old Chriſtmas-Day; remembers it, becauſe her Dog was going to lay hold on her, which her Huſband prevented. She appears to be very ignorant; for, being aſked in what Month Chriſtmas is, ſhe ſays, ſhe does not know. Then

George Clements is called, who is Servant to Mr. Star at Enfield, and ſays, that he ſaw Mary Squires there a Fortnight before ſhe was taken up, and that ſhe wanted to tell his Miſtreſs her Fortune, which frighted her; and ſays, that he ſaw her two or three Days after, but Nobody was with her either of the Times. He afterwards ſaw her and knew her in Newgate, and ſhe aſked, what Harm had ſhe done him? The next is

Hannah Fenſham, who ſays, that ſhe ſaw Mary Squires alone at a Place near Enfield on the 16th of January 1753, and ſaw her ſeveral Times afterwards paſſing and repaſſing; and ſaw her afterwards in Newgate.

Elizabeth Sherrard is the next, and ſhe ſays, that ſhe ſaw Mary Squires at Wells's on Wedneſday, Thurſday, Friday, and Saturday next before New Chriſtmas; and ſays, that ſhe ſaw a young Man and two Women with her, which ſhe believes to be her Son and Daughters. She appears very ignorant, and can ſcarce give an Account at what Seaſon of the Year Chriſtmas is. The next Witneſs is

John Ward, (who is produced in order to prove a Confeſſion made by Suſannah Wells, at the Time of her Confinement in Bridewell, before ſhe and Mary Squires were tried) who ſays, that he went to ſee her in Bridewell; upon her ſhewing ſome Surprize at ſeeing him, he told her, that he ſaw her Name in the News, and then aſked her, how ſhe came to keep the Girl a Fortnight? She, upon that, ſaid, ſhe was there twenty-eight Days. He then aſked her, what Room ſhe was in? Her Anſwer was, that he knew the Room very well (though he ſays, that he had not ſeen it for twelve Years before). You will conſider in what Light this Evidence appears; for, as it is laid before you by the Defendant to prove Wells's Confeſſion of the Fact charged upon her, the Queſtion is, whether it can have that Effect? And in order to determine that, you will obſerve, he tells her, that the Reaſon of his Viſit was, becauſe he ſaw her Name in the News-papers, and then aſked her, how ſhe came to keep the Girl a Fortnight? Upon which ſhe ſaid, it was twenty-eight Days. Now it is very notorious, that the Account which the Defendant herſelf gave of her Confinement, as well as the Account given of it in the News-papers, was twenty-eight Days; ſo that you will take it into your Conſideration, whether you will believe this to be a Confeſſion, or whether ſhe ſpoke from the News-papers, in order to rectify the Witneſs's Miſtake in charging her with confining the Girl (as he then called the Defendant) a Fortnight, when it appeared by the News-papers to be twenty-eight Days. Then

Richard Jones is called, who was with the laſt Witneſs to ſee Wells in Bridewell, and agrees with him as to the Converſation which paſſed relating to the Defendant's Confinement in the Terms you have heard. The next Witneſſes they call, are

Nathaniel Crumphorne, and Elizabeth his Wife; and they are produced to prove a Converſation between thoſe Witneſſes and Judith the Wife of Fortune Natus, relating to the preſent Defendant, which ſeems very extraordinary; for they tell you, that upon the 21ſt of April laſt, Judith Natus was at their Houſe, and that Nathaniel Crumphorne ſaid to her, that as ſhe knew that Elizabeth Canning was at Wells's, how could ſhe go againſt her? And that the Anſwer ſhe made was, Indeed, Mr. Crumphorne, I cannot ſay but ſhe really was there when we lodged there. I mention this as a very extraordinary Piece of Evidence; becauſe, if what is ſworn by this Evidence is true, the Conſequence muſt neceſſarily be, that not only this Judith Natus and her Huſband, but many Witneſſes, whoſe Evidence I have already ſtated to you relating to that Fact of her being there, muſt be abſolutely and wilfully perjured. The next is

Paul Stevens, who is called to prove a Confeſſion which he ſays Mary Squires made in New-Priſon, and there he ſays, that Mary Squires owned ſhe had been at Wells's; but at the ſame Time ſaid, that ſhe neither cut the Defendant's Stays off, or robbed her; but ſaid, that Betty Canning was at Wells's about a Fortnight and three Days, and that ſhe was there at the ſame Time. Now this, as well as all other Confeſſions, muſt be taken intire; and if ſo, it is certain that Mary Squires diſowns the Robbery, though ſhe owns (if ſhe made this Confeſſion) that Betty Canning was at Wells's at the Time ſhe was there. This Confeſſion alſo (if ſhe made it) muſt appear ſomething wonderful, when you conſider the former Evidence.

Then, in order to diſcredit Fortune Natus, they call three Witneſſes, viz. Joſeph Haines, Paul Chapman, and Thomas Green. The firſt of them ſays, that he has in general a bad Character: The ſecond ſays, that both he and his Wife have but very indifferent Characters, and ought not to be believed upon Oath; but it ſeems that there has been ſome Difference between Chapman and him about a Note: And the laſt Witneſs ſays, that he believes Fortune Natus would ſwear any Thing for Hire. Then, to diſcredit Ezra Whiffin, they have called

William Metcalf, who is a Glazier and Painter, and he says, that upon the 8th of January, Old Stile, which is the 19th New Stile, Whiffin having employed him to paint his Sign, it was brought Home that Day, and then the Witness told Whiffin, that Mrs. Wells had got her Sign-Irons to sell; and therefore concludes, that if Whiffin had bought her Sign-Irons on the 18th, which he swore he did (which was the Day before) he would naturally have told him so. Upon his Cross-Examination, he tells you, that he remembers this Circumstance by an Entry in a Book, a Copy of which he produced; but he owns, that the Figures 1753 in that Copy were wrote so late as last Saturday. Now to establish the Characters of Whiffin and Fortune Natus, the Counsel for the King have called some Witnesses. The first is

Mr. Smitheram (who has been called before), who says, that he has known Whiffin a Year and an Half, and that his general Character is a very good one, and that he does not believe he would forswear himself. Then

Mr. Barnes and Mr. Smart are called, who both have known him between three and four Years, and agree in giving him the Character of a very honest Man. As to Fortune Natus's Character,

Thomas Bell is called, who says, that he has worked for him about fifteen Months, and that he has always behaved honestly and well, and does not believe he would be guilty of Perjury; and says further, that he has eight Servants, and does not think he has so good a Servant, or one he values so much as he does Fortune Natus.

I have now laid before you the Evidence given both on one Side and the other, with all the Exactness I have been able; and as the Verdict you are to give is attended with great Expectation, you will weigh and consider the Evidence you have heard with the utmost Care and Impartiality, and not suffer yourselves to be influenced either by popular Clamour, or by any Apprehensions of the Consequence of doing the Public and yourselves that Justice which is expected from you. 'Tis certain that this Trial has been carried on by different Setts of People, who have interested themselves in it with uncommon Zeal, and whose Passions have led them into the greatest Extremities, as well as the highest Extravagancies, according to the Part they have supported, which has drawn it into an unusual Length, and has given it the Appearance of greater Intricacy and Difficulty than otherwise it could have met with. As you have heard all the Witnesses examined with the utmost Accuracy, and carefully attended to their Evidence; your Verdict will, at least it ought, to give a general Satisfaction, in clearing up those Doubts which this extraordinary Affair has occasioned.

I believe there never happened a greater Contrariety of Evidence (not to give it a worse Name) during the Course of any Trial, than there has in this: However, it is generally so ordered by Providence, that Truth is attended with so strong a Connection, and such an invincible Uniformity, that it seldom, if ever, fails in having its due Weight.

It may not be amiss just shortly to recapitulate, and take a View of the Evidence as it has been given, and how it has been applied.

The first Fact they, who are concerned for the Prosecution, undertake to prove, is, that Mary Squires, her Son and Daughter, were, upon the 29th of December, at a Place called South-Parret in Dorsetshire; and that she and they travelled from thence through Abbotsbury (where they stayed from Monday the 1st of January to the Tuesday Se'nnight following), then arrived at Wells's on Wednesday the 24th of that Month; and their whole Journey through the several Counties they passed, proved by thirty-eight different Witnesses, confirmed by many Circumstances, who don't appear to have the least Correspondence together, or to act in Concert on this Occasion; but, on the contrary, most of them utter Strangers to each other.

You will then compare Elizabeth Canning's Information before Alderman Chitty, with the Evidence she gave at the Trial of Mary Squires, as to her Description of the Room, as well as the Account she gave of what was in it, and consider how, and in what Particulars, she differed. Then the Principles upon which Nash, Aldridge, and Hague went upon; first in giving her Credit, and then in disbelieving her whole Story after they had taken a View of the Room, and considered the different Accounts she gave, as well as their Opinion how easily she might have escaped, if she had been there. There is another very remarkable Circumstance, which you must remember is proved by four Witnesses, I mean that of lopping the Trees which grew at the Window of the Room she swears herself confined in, which was done on Monday the 8th of January, at which Time she swore herself in that Room. There is also something very particular as to the Shift she had on, in which she swore she was, at that Season of the Year, dragged to Wells's, and worn twenty-nine Days. Besides this, her setting her Mark only to the Information she gave before Mr. Fielding, and writing her Name in a fair legible Hand to the Notices she gave of taking her Trial. And added to all this, her attempting to take away the Bed-gown at the Time of her being at the then Lord-Mayor's, insisting upon its being her Mother's. When you have laid this Evidence together, and weighed it with proper Attention, you will then take her Defence into your Consideration, and determine whether she has answered the Crime with which she is charged to your Satisfaction. In the first Place, you will consider, whether the Evidence she gave against Mary Squires can possibly be true; and in the next Place, whether you think it probable. As to the first, there is no Sort of Evidence even to assist you in determining whether it is possible for Human Nature to subsist for twenty-nine Days together upon no more than a Quartern-Loaf, and a Pitcher of Water of the Size you have seen. If you should think this possible, you will then take the Probability of her Defence into Consideration. Her Master Lyon tells you, that he differed from the rest of his Companions who went with him to Enfield, and that, for his Part, he had no Doubt of the Truth of what she had sworn; and many other Witnesses she has called are of the same Opinion, for the Reasons you have heard them give. Then her Mother, and the Neighbours whom she sent for upon her Daughter's Return, have described her Dress, and have given you an Account of the miserable wretched Condition she was then in, as well as the Account she then gave of her Confinement, and the Place where she was. The Evidence of Beals, who kept the Turnpike at Stamford-Hill, is very observable, who says, that he believes Elizabeth Canning was dragged through the Turnpike on the 1st of January; yet says, that he never spoke of it till six Weeks after; and then closes this Part of her Defence with the Evidence of three Witnesses, who swear that they met her on the Road (as they believe) on her Return from Enfield-Wash. And then, to induce you to believe that she was not mistaken in the Person of Mary Squires, from whom she swore she met with this severe and cruel Treatment, she has called twenty-seven Witnesses, who all swear, that they saw Mary Squires in and about Enfield in the Months of December and January; which, if true, thirty-eight Witnesses, who positively swear to her being in other Places, must be wilfully perjured; but you must remember, that some few of those twenty-seven Witnesses have appealed to written Evidence, such as Entries in Books, none of which (as I recollect) have been produced, except that of Smitheram, which was referred to by Anne Johnson, by which it manifestly appears how greatly she was mistaken in her Evidence; and it is very remarkable, that there are not two of these twenty-seven Witnesses who can swear they saw her at the same Time. And last of all, you will consider the Confessions of Wells and Mary Squires after they were in Custody; and what Judith Natus said a few Days ago relating to this Affair, on which I made such Observations as have occurred to me.

And now, Gentlemen, the Whole rests for your Determination; and as it is very observable that you have attended to the Evidence with the greatest Application, and your Characters being such as will not suffer you to deviate from the Paths of Truth and Justice, I can make no Doubt but that you will acquit yourselves as honest Men. If therefore you are of Opinion that the Defendant is guilty of this Perjury, you will find her so; if innocent, you will acquit her.

The Jury withdrew at twenty Minutes after Twelve o'Clock in the Morning, to consider of their Verdict, and returned at fifteen Minutes after Two, and brought in their Verdict, Guilty of Perjury, but not Wilful and Corrupt.

Upon which the Recorder told them, "That he could not receive "their Verdict, because it was partial; and they must either find her "guilty of the whole Indictment, or else acquit her."

Upon which they were sent out again at twenty-five Minutes after Two, and returned at forty-one Minutes after Two; and brought in their Verdict, Guilty of Wilful and Corrupt Perjury.

Upon which she was committed by the Court to the Custody of the Keeper of Newgate.

On the Monday following, the 13th of May, she was called to the Bar, in order to receive Sentence; when her Counsel delivered into Court Affidavits of two of the Jurymen, Mr. Frome and Mr. Russel, setting forth that the Verdict given was not according to their Consciences, which were read.

Upon which Mr. Manning, the Foreman of the Jury, was sent for by the Court, and asked how this Matter was? who gave the following Account how they were divided.

The Foreman then acquainted the Court, "That all of them, but those "two, were of Opinion she was guilty of the whole Indictment, but "the said two did not think she was wilfully guilty, yet nevertheless, "thought she was guilty; but believing Somebody had seduced the Girl, "and forged the Story, for her to tell and stand by (in short, they all "believed so): And upon such Belief they found, and gave their Ver-"dict, Guilty, but not Wilful: But were informed by the Recorder, "that he could not take that Verdict, for they must either acquit her, "or else find her guilty of the whole Indictment.

"That when they withdrew to consider again of the Charge, the said "two Men declared they could not come in to find her guilty of the "whole Indictment; but upon arguing the Case with them, and telling "them, they might as well find her guilty of the whole Indictment, "they said, they could not agree to it, unless the rest of the Jury would "consent to recommend her to the Court for Mercy. That then they "all agreed to find her guilty of the whole Indictment; which they all "agreed she was guilty of before, except the said two; and accordingly "gave in their Verdict, Guilty of Wilful and Corrupt Perjury."

Upon which the Prisoner's Counsel insisted upon a new Trial, which the Court would not agree to.---The Court were divided, and the Recorder read the Act of Parliament concerning the Crime of Perjury, wherein it empowers the Court to sentence the Parties found guilty of the said Crime.---Her Counsel still insisted it was Law, and that they had a Right to a new Trial, and quoted the Case of Ashley and Simons the Jew; where the Jurymen made Affidavits, that the Verdict recorded was by Mistake, and was not what they meant or intended to bring in, and thereupon a new Trial was granted; and farther, that they had something to offer in Arrest of Judgment.

Then the Recorder said,---"As this Case is so much become a Party "Affair, (which I am sorry to see) I had rather put it off till next "Sessions, that it may be argued before the same Judges that tried her, "who may come down next Sessions on Purpose." Then the Court agreed to put it off till the first Day of next Sessions, which began May 30, 1754.*

At the Session of Oyer and Terminer holden for the City of London at Justice-Hall aforesaid, on Thursday the 30th Day of May, 1754, before the Query 1. Is not E. C. surrendering herself voluntarily, when she had nothing to lose by going away, an Argument of her Innocence?

Answer. As a Person's flying from Justice is a Presumption of Guilt, so a voluntary Surrender is, by Parity of Reason, a Presumption of Innocence; but then it is but a Presumption, which may be overthrown by direct positive Evidence.

Q. 2. Is it agreeable to Law, that a Jury, once charged with the Evidence, may be permitted to go at large, before they have delivered in their Verdict?

the Right Hon. Thomas Rawlinſon, Eſq; Lord-Mayor of the ſame City; Sir John Willes, Knt. Her Counſel argued for a new Trial, and to ſupport their Arguments, again quoted the Caſe of Aſhley and Simons the Jew, and inſiſted, That was a Precedent in their Favour.——Judge Willes acquainted the Court, "A new Trial could not be granted, for in the Caſe of Aſhley and Simons "the Judge there took a wrong Verdict, which was not the Meaning of "the Jury;—but in this Caſe the Verdict was General, and they all abide "by it, but two, who are but weak Men, firſt to conſent and give in "their Verdict according to their Oath, and then to recant."——On which the Motion was over-ruled.—Then the Court were proceeding to Sentence, when Sir John Barnard ſtood up, and recommended her for Mercy, and that her Sentence might only be ſix Months Impriſonment, for he believed ſhe was not guilty alone; in which ſeven other Aldermen joined.

Then Judge Willes told them, he had obſerved that Collections had been made for her amounting to conſiderable Sums of Money; and if her Sentence was only to remain in Newgate, there would be ſuch Sums collected, and ſuch Aſſemblies of an Evening, as would render her Sentence rather a Diverſion than a Puniſhment.——Nor the Pillory he no ways judged ſafe, fearing much Miſchief might be done.---And concluding, that he thought her notoriouſly guilty. Then Elizabeth Canning addreſſed the Court with the following Speech, with a low Voice,---"That ſhe hoped they would be favourable to her; "that ſhe had no Intent of ſwearing the Gypſey's Life away; and that "what had been done, was only defending herſelf; and deſired to be "conſidered as unfortunate." Then the Recorder ſpoke thus:

Mr. Recorder.

Elizabeth Canning, you now ſtand convicted (upon the cleareſt Proof) of Wilful and Corrupt Perjury; a Crime attended with the moſt fatal and dangerous Conſequences to the Community, though (as yet) it is not puniſhed with Death. Your Trial has taken up a great deal of Time, and the ſeveral Witneſſes have undergone the ſtricteſt Examination; and I think I may venture to affirm, that there is not one unprejudiced Perſon, of the great Numbers who have attended it, but muſt be convinced of the Juſtice and Impartiality of the Jury in the Verdict they have given.

It is with Horror I look back, and think of the Evidence you gave at the Trial of Mary Squires, whom you knew to be deſtitute and friendleſs, and therefore fixed upon her as a proper Object to make a Sacrifice of, at the dreadful Expence of a falſe Oath; this you preferred to the making a plain Diſcovery to thoſe who had a Right to know where you really were thoſe twenty-eight Days of your pretended Confinement at Wells's; and in this you were encouraged to perſiſt, as well by that miſapplied Charity, which was bountifully given you in Compaſſion to your ſuppoſed Sufferings, as by the Advice of your miſtaken Friends, whom you had deluded and deceived into a Belief of the Truth of what you had falſely ſworn.

This audacious Attempt, and that calm and deliberate Aſſurance with which you formed a Scheme to take away the Life of one (though the moſt abject) of the human Species, together with your Youth, and the Character you then had, as well as your ſeeming Inexperience, impoſed upon many, and gained you a Credit which muſt have exceeded your higheſt Expectations; and being thus abandoned, and thus encouraged, you not only wickedly perſevered, but even triumphed over thoſe who would not ſuffer their Judgments to be miſled by ſo groſs an Impoſition.

But when at laſt People had a little recovered their Surprize, and this almoſt miraculous Tale of yours came to be temperately canvaſſed and tried, by comparing your own original Information with the Evidence you had given at the Trial, and found to vary in ſo many material and ſignificant Circumſtances; then that Reſentment you had raiſed began to ſubſide, and give way to that moſt neceſſary Inquiry (which the worthy Magiſtrate who then preſided in this Court ſo charitably undertook, and) which in its Conſequence not only ſaved that Life, which by your falſe Teſtimony was intended to be taken away, but gave riſe to this Proſecution, which muſt both expoſe the Guilty, and convince the Doubtful. And as evil Actions have ſometimes been productive of unforeſeen, nay, even good Effects; ſo this Iniquity of yours will, I hope, inſtruct Mankind not to ſuffer their Credulity to get the better of their Reaſon, by giving way to thoſe very early Impreſſions, which the Artifice of Falſhood too often makes.

I ſhall add but very little more; for I would avoid aggravating your Guilt, which is ſufficiently manifeſt by your Trial, or ſaying any thing which may increaſe the Affliction of one whom I muſt call unfortunate: But as I attended both your Trial, as well as that of Mary Squires, it may be expected that I ſhould declare my Thoughts as well of one as the other; I therefore, in the moſt ſolemn Manner, affirm, that I always thought your Evidence falſe, and that the Witneſſes produced in your Defence were moſt groſly miſtaken.

The Policy of foreign Countries puniſhes Offences of this Magnitude with Death, and upon this moſt rational Principle, that when a Life is attacked by a falſe Oath, maliciouſly and deliberately taken, the Puniſhment to which ſuch a ſuppoſed Criminal is thereby expoſed, falls upon the Perſon guilty of ſo horrid an Attempt: But it is your particular Happineſs that you are in a Country, where ſevere and ſanguinary Laws are not ſo familiar; and though many may expect, and the Court ſurely could, in this Caſe, juſtify the moſt ſevere and exemplary Puniſhment which the Law can inflict; yet you will ſoon be convinced, that your Sentence is in no Degree adequate to the Greatneſs of your Offence. The Judgment therefore of this Court is,

That you ſhall be impriſoned in the Goal of Newgate for one Month; and after the Expiration of your Impriſonment, you ſhall be tranſported to ſome of his Majeſty's Colonies or Plantations in America for the Term of Seven Years; and if within that Term you return, and are found at large in any of his Majeſty's Dominions of Great Britain or Ireland, you ſhall ſuffer Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

The following Affidavits were ſoon after made and publiſhed by two of the Jurymen †.

"Joſeph Ruſſell and Richard Frome, two of the Jury for trying the "Iſſue between our Sovereign Lord the King and Elizabeth Canning, "Spinſter, upon an Indictment for Perjury, at, &c. each ſpeaking for "himſelf, and not one for the other, jointly and ſeverally make Oath "and ſay, That theſe Deponents, and the reſt of the Jurors ſworn to "try the ſaid Iſſue, agreed in their Verdict firſt delivered to the "Court, and which ſaid Verdict was unanimouſly agreed to be reduced "into, and was accordingly reduced into Writing; and was, that the "ſaid E. Canning was guilty of Perjury, but not wilful and corrupt; "as theſe Deponents, or either of them, did not apprehend or believe, "that ſhe the ſaid E. Canning knew or believed the Facts by her ſworn in "her Evidence againſt M. Squires, upon the Trial of the ſaid M. Squires, "were not true when ſhe ſo ſwore the ſame. But theſe Deponents ſay, "they were induced to join in and agree to the Verdict that is recorded, "believing that the Words wilful and corrupt were mere Matter of "Form, and underſtanding it to be the Opinion of the Court that the

A. I am of Opinion, that though a Jury once charged, may, by Conſent of Parties, be diſcharged wholly from trying the Cauſe; yet I do not apprehend that the Law will allow them to go at large, in a criminal Caſe, while the Trial is depending: For though in a long Trial ſuch a Confinement may be inconvenient, yet I cannot find that the Law has provided any Remedy for it; it being in the Eye of the Law a leſs Inconvenience, than expoſing the Jury to be tampered with before they have brought in their Verdict; yet I ſee not but that they may take Refreſhment, and retire to Reſt in a Place provided for them, provided that they be guarded by a ſworn Officer, that Nobody be admitted to ſpeak to them.

Q. 3. Is it not neceſſary upon an Indictment for Perjury, not only to prove that the Fact ſworn to is falſe, but alſo that the Defendant knew it to be ſo at the Time of ſwearing?

A. I think it to be very clear, that a mere miſtaken falſe Oath, without wilful and corrupt Deſign, is not Perjury within the Meaning of the Indictment; for the Indictment charges it to be done falſely, wilfully and corruptly. Nor did I ever know, hear or read of any one convicted of Perjury, without Evidence to prove a corrupt Deſign, Plot or Confederacy, or elſe that the Party muſt needs know it to be falſe; as in this Caſe, if it were proved that E. C. was elſewhere at the Time ſhe pretended to be at Enfield; for in this ſhe could not ſwear falſe through Miſtake, as ſhe might with reſpect to the Perſon of the Gypſey. Nor is it ſufficient that even this Evidence be but of equal Weight with the Defendant's Oath; for that would be but Oath againſt Oath, which determines nothing, unleſs it be of ſuperior Weight and Credit; for elſe, by turning the Tables, the Witneſs might equally be convicted on the Defendant's Oath.

Q. 4. Does the Law require that a Jury charged upon ſuch Indictment, muſt neceſſarily bring in their Verdict Guilty or Not Guilty generally?

A. Certainly the Law requires no ſuch Thing; for the Jury may, if they pleaſe, bring in their Verdict Special, or Guilty as to Part, and Not Guilty as to other Part. Indeed, if it be only verbolely worded, and amounts in Subſtance to a General Verdict, it may be right in the Court to tell them, it would be more proper to find it General; but then Care ſhould be taken ſo to explain it to them, that they may not by a General Verdict find the Defendant guilty of more than they believe or intended to find him.

Q. 5. Does not a finding the Defendant Not Guilty of Wilful Perjury, amount to an Acquittal, although they ſhould alſo find the Party Guilty of ſwearing falſely, not wilfully?

A. If the Jury really believed the Party innocent of wilful forſwearing, this is in Effect a General Verdict of an Acquittal, for this is the only criminal Part of the Indictment; and the ſwearing falſely, if not with Deſign and knowingly, is, as I conceive, not criminal in Law: And after this, to find a General Verdict of Guilty, is quite the contrary to their firſt finding.

Q. 6. Suppoſe the Jury, through Surprize, Inadvertency, or Miſtake, find ſuch a Verdict, is there any Remedy to prevent Judgment in ſuch Caſe?

A. This is extremely difficult, unleſs ſome Error can be ſhewn upon the Face of the Record, which may be Cauſe for arreſting Judgment. Perhaps the ſuffering the Jury to go at large in the midſt of the Trial may be ſuch a Cauſe, as being a Miſ-trial.

In the Caſe of Simons, the Poliſh Jew, upon Affidavits of the Jury, that they did not mean to give ſuch Verdict as was entered (as here, that they did not mean to find the Defendant guilty of that Part of the Indictment, which charges her with wilful and corrupt Perjury, but only that ſhe had in ſome Part ſworn falſely, though not wilfully) the Court did ſet aſide the Trial.—If this be really the Caſe, the Jury ought however, for diſburthening their own Conſciences, to make ſuch Repreſentations to the Court, and leave the Effect to them. S. Emlyn.

"ſaid

" ſaid Jury could not bring in their Verdict in the Manner they did at " firſt, and not from an Opinion or Belief that the ſaid E. Canning had " any Intent to charge the ſaid *M. RICHARD FROME."

" Joſeph Ruſſell, one of the Jurors ſworn to try the Iſſue between our " Sovereign Lord the King and E. Canning, Spinſter, upon an Indict- " ment for Perjury, at the Seſſions of Oyer and Terminer holden for the " City of London, the 24th Day of April laſt, and the following Days, at " Juſtice-Hall in the Old-Bailey, in the Suburbs of the ſaid City, maketh " Oath, and ſaith, That when the ſaid Jurors went out of Court to con- " ſider of their Verdict, they began to examine, from the Notes taken by " them in Court, the Evidence on Behalf of the Proſecution; and that " when they had proceeded therein ſo far as the Teſtimony of about twelve " or fourteen Witneſſes, (to the beſt of this Deponent's Remembrance as to " the Number of ſuch Witneſſes) making their Obſervations on thoſe whoſe " Teſtimony either appeared to deſerve Credit, or to be exceptionable, an " Officer (whoſe Name this Deponent doth not know) came (as he ſaid) " from the Court, to know whether the Jury were agreed in their Ver- " dict? Whereupon William Parſons, one of the Jury, ſaid, How can " they think we can agree on a Verdict in ſo ſhort a Time? Others of " the Jury ſaid, You find the Court is impatient, there is a Perjury in " the two Informations that lie on the Table: Others declared, that " was not the Thing they were come to yet: And one (the Foreman, to " the beſt of this Deponent's Remembrance and Belief) ſaid, If you can " make thoſe two Examinations one Thing, there is no Perjury; but as " one mentions all the Water to be drank up on one Day, and the other " mentions its being made an End of on a different Day, there is a Perjury: " Whereupon it was urged by ſeveral of the Jury, that That was not a " wilful and corrupt Perjury: And it was then (without further Exami- " nation of the Evidence in Behalf of the Proſecution, or any Examina- " tion of the Evidence in Behalf of the Defendant, or once reading of the " Indictment, or any Mention being made of the criminal Import thereof) " unanimouſly agreed to bring in the Defendant guilty of Perjury, but not " wilful and corrupt. And he this Deponent then ſpeaking to the Fore- " man ſaid, Mr. Foreman, as we have agreed of a Perjury, but not wil- " ful and corrupt, write it down, for fear you ſhould make a Miſtake in " giving of it in; which the Foreman did accordingly. And he this " Deponent took the ſame out of his Hand to read it, and finding it to " be as aforeſaid, returned it again. And this Deponent further ſaith, " That ſuch Verdict as aforeſaid was delivered by the Foreman to the " Court; who being diſſatisfied therewith, directed the Jury to go out a " ſecond Time. And this Deponent further ſaith, That he cannot re- " member particularly what paſſed or was ſaid in Court between the Ju- " ry's delivering in their firſt Verdict, and going out a ſecond Time to " re-conſider it: But ſaith, That he this Deponent did not ſee, nor does " he believe, that there was any Copy of the Indictment againſt the De- " fendant E. Canning before the Jury, nor did he hear the Meaning or " Purport of ſuch Indictment once mentioned by a ſingle Perſon on the " Jury whilſt they were conſidering of their Verdict, or either of them: " Nor did he this Deponent at that Time, nor doth he now believe, that " the Defendant E. Canning is guilty of wilful and corrupt Perjury, in " ſwearing falſly againſt Mary Squires; but ſaith, That on comparing " and conſidering the Evidence, as well on the Part of the Proſecution, " as in Behalf of the ſaid Defendant E. Canning, he then did, and doth " now believe, that Mary Squires was at the Houſe of Mother Wells, at " Enfield-Waſh, and that ſhe the ſaid Defendant E. Canning was wrong- " ed at Enfield-Waſh. And this Deponent further ſaith, That whilſt the " ſaid Jury were out a ſecond Time conſidering of their Verdict, ſeveral " of them were for bringing in the Defendant E. Canning Not Guilty, " alledging that they did not believe her guilty of wilful and corrupt Per- " jury, or of any other Perjury or Crime, than that of her Variations " in her ſeveral Examinations in regard to the Time of her having drank " up her Water as aforeſaid: But the Foreman of the Jury declaring they " could not bring in the ſaid E. Canning Not Guilty, becauſe they had " already found her Guilty of Perjury; it was upon that Account, and " for that Reaſon, and no other, as this Deponent believes, agreed by the " ſaid Jury, by their ſaid ſecond Verdict, to bring in the Defendant E. " Canning Guilty of a Perjury (no other Reaſon, Argument or Motive " whatſoever being mentioned, to the beſt of this Deponent's Knowledge, " Remembrance or Belief, by any one of the ſaid Jury). And this De- " ponent further ſaith, That he ſhould not have been induced to join in " and agree to ſuch Verdict, had he known or conſidered that it is the " Act of the Mind, and not an undeſigned Miſtake (to which every one " from the Imperfection of human Nature is liable), that conſtitutes the " Offence whereof the ſaid E. Canning was indicted; or if he had then " conſidered (as he ought), that whether the laſt or Remainder of the Wa- " ter was drank on the Friday preceding the Day the ſaid E. Canning " eſcaped from Enfield-Waſh, or but a few Hours before ſhe made her " Eſcape, it could have no Tendency to prove the ſaid M. Squires guilty; " or if ſhe was guilty, could not aggravate or leſſen her Guilt. And this " Deponent further ſaith, That when the Jury agreed to ſuch ſecond " Verdict, they agreed earneſtly to recommend E. Canning to the Mercy " of the Court (which Recommendation was unanimouſly agreed to by " all the Jury, and not objected to by any one, to this Deponent's " Knowledge or Belief). And this Deponent further ſaith, That whilſt the " Jury were conſidering of their ſaid Verdicts, he doth not remember to " have heard, nor doth he believe, any one of the ſaid Jury declared his " Belief, that the ſaid Defendant E. Canning was guilty of wilful and cor- " rupt Perjury, the Crime whereof ſhe ſtood indicted: And that he this " Deponent would not, nor hath he any Reaſon to apprehend or believe, " that any one of the ſaid Jury would have agreed to their ſaid firſt Ver- " dict; or upon bringing in of the ſecond, would (in Purſuance of what " was previouſly and unanimouſly agreed to as aforeſaid) have recom- " mended the ſaid E. Canning to the Mercy of the Court, had they be- " lieved her guilty of a Crime ſo heinous in its Nature, and ſo dangerous " in its Conſequences, as wilful and corrupt Perjury, with an Intent to " take away the Life of an innocent Perſon, which, in the Opinion of " this Deponent, deſerves a more ſevere Sentence than that paſſed on the " ſaid E. Canning, rather than a Mitigation thereof. And this Deponent " further ſaith, That after the ſaid Jury had delivered in their ſaid ſecond " or laſt Verdict, and before they came out of Court, Thomas Ford, Clerk " of the Arraigns, aſked him, this Deponent, what he thought of it now? " To whom this Deponent immediately declared, That he this Deponent " believed the Girl (the ſaid E. Canning) was wronged at Enfield-Waſh " more than ever he did before: Which Circumſtance he this Deponent " repeated in Court on the 13th Day of May laſt; when he made his firſt " Affidavit relating to the Verdict of the ſaid Jury, in the Hearing of the " ſaid Thomas Ford, who in no wiſe contradicted the ſame. And this " Deponent further ſaith, That the ſaid William Parſons, on the 12th " Day of May, declared, in the Hearing of Richard Frome, one of the " ſaid Jury, Thomas Hunt, and him this Deponent, that the Senti- " ments of him the ſaid William Parſons, reſpecting the ſaid E. Can- " ning and the ſaid Verdicts, were the ſame as thoſe of this Depo- " nent as above-ſtated; but that the ſaid William Parſons had conſult- " ed a Friend, who had adviſed him not to make any Affidavit, for " which Reaſon he declined it, or to that Effect. And this Deponent " further ſaith, That he this Deponent is an utter Stranger to all the " Perſons who have had, or now have, the Direction and Management " of the Defence of E. Canning (the ſaid Thomas Hunt only excepted, " whom this Deponent knew during his Clerkſhip, being then his Neigh- " bour, but had not ſpoken to the ſaid Thomas Hunt during E. Canning's " Trial, or for twelve Months before): But he had been with the Mo- " ther of the ſaid E. Canning, and had declared to her, and in publick, " his Diſſatisfaction and Concern at the ſaid Verdict of the ſaid Jury, " and his utter Ignorance of the Import and Conſequence thereof at the " Time he joined in the ſame: After which the ſaid Thomas Hunt came " to him this Deponent, in order to draw up and ſettle the Affidavit made " by this Deponent and Richard Frome, another of the Jury, on the ſaid " 13th Day of May laſt: And ſaith, his making the preſent Affidavit " proceeds from his own Motion and Free-will; and that it is made with " a ſtrict Regard to Truth, as well as a ſincere Deſire to prevent, as far " as in him lies, the ſaid E. Canning's ſuffering that Infamy and Pu- " niſhment which he is fully ſatisfied ſhe has in no wiſe merited.

The Case of ASHLEY and SIMONS the Jew, quoted in the foregoing Trial ‡.

HENRY SIMONS, a Native of Ostrog in Volhinia, near the Ukraine, in Poland, landed at Harwich in Essex, August 8, 1751, from Holland, with one Hyam Levi and another Jew; but before they were permitted to go on Shore, were examined by the proper Officer, and on a Belt round Simons's Body, with a Purse fastened to it, were found a large Quantity of Ducats, with which he was permitted to pass to London; and after staying some Days in that City, in order to buy Goods, he set out in his Polish Dress, on the 28th for Bristol, to traffick there. The first Night he reached Cranford Bridge, (beyond Hounslow) in Middlesex, and put up at the White-Hart Inn, kept by one Goddard; where Simons ordered some Bread, Butter, and Beer for Supper, and then told the People of the House in the best Manner he could (for he spoke very bad, if any, English) that he wanted a Lodging, and would pay for it; and shewed them his Arms and Bosom, that he was clean, and pulled out Money, to shew they need not fear their Reckoning; whereupon a Bed was ordered for him; and, being fatigued, he went early to Bed, and the Maid locked his Chamber Door; but very early in the Morning, he was robbed of five hundred and fifty-four Ducats, by two Men, who held a Knife to his Throat, and threatened to kill him if he made a Noise. On coming down Stairs that Morning, he complained heavily of his being robbed and ruined, but was only laughed at and ridiculed by the Servants of the House; on which he returned pennyless to London; and acquainting some Friends of it, they got a Warrant to apprehend Goddard for robbing him; but on going down to take Goddard, found he was gone out of the Way to avoid being apprehended; but he surrendered against the Sessions; and at the Old-Bailey in 1751, in Alderman Cokayne's Mayoralty, Goddard was indicted, for " that he, in his own Dwelling-
" house, on Henry Simons did make an Assault, putting him in corporal
" Fear, &c. and stealing from him one Leather Girdle, Value One
" Penny, and five hundred and fifty-four Pieces of Foreign Coin, called
" Ducats, Value two hundred and fifty Pounds." Simons swore, That Goddard was one of the two Men that came into his Chamber, took hold of him in Bed, and assisted in the robbing of him; but on the Evidence of Goddard's Niece, his Servants in the House, one Thomas Ashley, a Gardener‖, and several neighbouring Gentlemen and Innkeepers appearing, and giving him a good Character, he was acquitted.

Upon Goddard's Acquittal, he (that September Sessions) preferred a Bill of Indictment at Hicks's-Hall against Simons for Perjury, in swearing an Information before Justice Chamberlayne, for a Robbery against the said Goddard; which Bill was found by the Grand Jury of Middlesex. Whereupon a Warrant was obtained from Sir Crisp Gascoyne, Alderman of London, for apprehending him in London, which Warrant lay dormant till October 7 following; though he was publicly seen about London, asking Alms in his Polish Dress, and had Charity collected for him. On October 6, Simons set out for Harwich, in order to get over to Holland, with a mere Trifle in his Pocket (poor Jews paying nothing for their Passage) in his Way Home to Poland; how he was apprehended and brought to Trial by Mr. James Ashley for a Misdemeanour, will appear afterwards.—In the mean Time, it may be sufficient to mention, that some Friends of Simons removed the Indictment against him for Perjury, by Certiorari, into the Court of King's-Bench, at Westminster; where on the 10th of December, 1751, he was tried for Perjury by a Special Jury of Gentlemen of the County of Middlesex, and acquitted.

The Warrant for apprehending Simons on this Charge of Perjury lay dormant (as before-mentioned) in Goddard's Sollicitor's Hands, till October 7, when it was called for by Mr. James Ashley, an Acquaintance of Goddard's, who saw Simons on the Road near Ilford in Essex, on the 6th.---This Warrant, on the Perusal of it, being found for London only, the Words Essex and were added to it, to make it of Force both in Essex and London; and with this Warrant Mr. Ashley set out, with Mr. Newman, and apprehended Simons near Witham in Essex, and brought him to Chelmsford, where it was discovered, that Sir Crisp Gascoyne was no Justice of the Peace for Essex; and therefore the apprehending Simons on that Warrant in Essex illegal: However, the Warrant (after erasing Essex and) was backed by the Rev. Mr. Tindall, a Justice of the Peace for the County of Essex (on Alderman Gascoyne's Hand being proved), though Mr. Tindall declined committing him, but advised Ashley to carry him to the original Jurisdiction: Whereupon Simons was carried to London, and committed to New-Prison, on the Charge against him of Perjury; and whilst there, Mr. Ashley lodged a Detainer against him, for putting into his Pocket, at the Saracen's Head Inn in Chelmsford, three Pieces of foreign Gold, called Ducats, with an Intent to charge the said Ashley with a Robbery. However, after Simons's Acquittal of the Perjury, he was bailed out on Ashley's Detainer; and at the Lent-Assizes at Chelmsford in Essex, March 12, 1752, the Trial of Simons came on before Mr. Justice Foster, on the following Indictment.

The Indictment sets forth,

ESSEX. { " THAT Henry Simons, on the 5th of September, in the " twenty-fifth Year of his Majesty's Reign, did, in " Form of Law, before Richard Chamberlayne, Esq. one of his Majesty's " Justices of the Peace for the County of Middlesex, make his Informa" tion in Writing, by which he did, amongst other Things, charge and " accuse one Joseph Goddard, and one other Person, by the Description
" of another Person unknown, of the Crime of Felony and Robbery, to
" wit, That the said Joseph Goddard, and the same Person unknown, had
" lately before feloniously stolen and carried away from the said Henry
" Simons, in the Dwelling-House of the said Joseph Goddard, five hundred
" fifty-four Ducats.

" Count I. That the said Henry Simons, wickedly devising to vex and
" aggrieve one James Ashley, of London, Merchant, on the 8th of October,
" in the same Year, with Force and Arms, at Chelmsford, in the County
" of Essex aforesaid, did, secretly and subtilly, put and convey into the " Right-hand Pocket of the Coat which the said James Ashley had on and " wore, three Pieces of foreign Coin of Gold called Ducats; and the " said Henry Simons did afterwards, in the Presence of divers of his Ma" jesty's Subjects, falsely charge and accuse the said James Ashley, that
" he was the same Person, who, with the above-named Joseph Goddard,
" was so, as aforesaid, supposed to have committed the Felony and Rob-
" bery above specified, and to have stolen and carried away the said five " hundred and fifty-four Ducats from the said Henry Simons, with In" tention unjustly to cause the said James Ashley to be apprehended, and
" to have it believed, that he was the same Person, who, with the said
" Joseph Goddard, was so, as aforesaid, supposed to have committed the " Felony and Robbery aforesaid.

" II. That the said Henry Simons, on the said 8th of October, at Chelms-
" ford aforesaid, further wickedly intending to aggrieve the said James
" Ashley, did, privily and subtilly, put and convey into the Right-hand
" Pocket of the Coat which he then wore, three other Pieces of foreign
" Gold Coin, called Ducats; and the said Henry Simons did afterwards
" falsely charge and accuse the said James Ashley, that he had feloniously
" taken from him the said Henry Simons, the same three Ducats last men-
" tioned, and divers other Ducats, with Intention to cause it to be be" lieved and suspected, that the said James Ashley had been guilty of Fe" lony; and to cause him to be apprehended and arrested for the same.

" III. That the said Henry Simons, on the same Day and Year last " aforesaid, at Chelmsford aforesaid, with Force and Arms, did make an " Assault upon the said James Ashley, and into the right-hand Pocket of
" the Coat which he then had on and wore, three other Pieces of foreign
" Gold Coin, called Ducats, he the said Henry Simons did then and there
" privily, and without the Knowledge of him the said James Ashley, un" lawfully put and convey, and cause to be put and conveyed, with a
" most malicious, wicked, and cruel Intention, then and there falsely
" to charge and accuse, and to cause it to be thought and believed, that
" the said James Ashley had robbed him the said Henry Simons of the same.

" IV. That the said Henry Simons, on the same Day and Year last
" above-mentioned, with Force and Arms, at Chelmsford aforesaid, upon
" the said James Ashley did make an Assault, and into the right-
" hand Pocket of the Coat which the said James Ashley then and there had
" on and wore, three other Pieces of foreign Gold Coin, called Ducats,
" did privily, and without the Knowledge of him the said James Ashley,
" unlawfully put and convey, and cause to be put and conveyed; and
" that he the said Henry Simons did afterwards, then and there, most falsely
" and maliciously charge and accuse the said James Ashley with having
" robbed him the said Henry Simons of the said three Ducats, with Intent
" unjustly and wrongfully to subject the said James Ashley to the Pains
" and Penalties inflicted by the Laws of this Kingdom for such-like
" Offences."

To this Indictment Henry Simons pleaded, Not Guilty.

‡ The Case of Ashley and Simons, being a very extraordinary one, quoted in the last Trial, and probably may again, on some future Occasion, we shall give the Indictment, and the Affidavits of the Jurymen, to shew how a new Trial came to be granted in a criminal Case; but previous thereto, we shall insert the Case of Simons and Goddard, as an Introduction to it, to render the whole Affair compleat.

‖ This Thomas Ashley, the Gardener, a Witness for Goddard on his Trial, was himself tried in April 1752, in Alderman Winterbottom's Mayoralty, for Perjury, for the Evidence he gave at that Trial, and was found Guilty, and sentenced to stand once in the Pillory at the Sessions-House Gate for One Hour, to be imprisoned for Twelve Months, after which to be transported for Seven Years.

Simons had before moved the Court of King's-Bench for a Special Jury, which were as follows:

The Special Jury.

John Morley, of Halsted, Esq;
John Godsalve, of Great Baddow, Esq;
Robert Clarke, of Little Baddow, Esq;
Daniel Stratton, of Bromfield, Esq;
John Olmius, of Boreham, Esq;
George Dodson, of Shenfield, Esq;
Thomas Brograve, of Great Baddow, Esq;
John Hornby, of Ingatestone, Esq;
Samuel Ruggles, of Becking, Esq;
Peter Godfrey, of Woodford, Esq;
Poulton Allen, of Barking, Esq;
Henry Hall, of Hulton-Hall, Esq;

And on the Evidence of Mr. Ashley, Mr. Newman, Isaac Hubbard the Constable, Richard Taylor, and others, he was convicted after a Trial of twelve Hours; the Jury going out about Nine at Night, and not returning till Two in the Morning.

Henry Simons, thus found guilty, and being upon Bail, his Friends, instead of bringing him into Court within the four first Days of the next Easter Term, which began the 15th of April, according to the Condition of the Recognizance, moved the Court of King's-Bench, that Judgment might be respited; and prayed for a Rule, That the Prosecutor might shew Cause, why a new Trial should not be granted: Which the Court did not then come into, there not being then sufficient Reason shewn, Whereupon the following Affidavits were made soon after:

The Jurymen's Affidavits at large.

1. John Morley, of Halsted, in the County of Essex, Esq. saith, he served on the Jury at the Trial of this Cause, at the last Assizes, held, &c. as Foreman of the said Jury; and this Deponent, on the Evidence given on the said Trial, was of Opinion, that the Defendant did put three Ducats into the Prosecutor's Pocket; but did not find the same was done with any Intent whatsoever.---The Deponent saith, the Jury did agree to give their Verdict, That the Deponent was guilty of putting the said three Ducats into the Prosecutor's Pocket, by reason it was sworn to that Effect; and such was the Verdict intended to be given: But the Deponent hath lately been informed, That the Verdict of the Jury recorded finds the Defendant guilty upon the third Count in the Indictment, which, the Deponent is also informed, is finding the Defendant guilty of putting the said three Ducats into the Prosecutor's Pocket, with a most malicious, wicked, and cruel Intention, falsely to charge, and cause it to be believed, that the Prosecutor had robbed the Defendant of the said three Ducats: Whereas this Deponent, and the rest of the Jury, did not find the same was done with any such Intent, or any Intent whatsoever.---The Deponent saith, That the said Verdict, as it now stands, is contrary to the Intent of the Deponent; and therefore the Deponent hath made this Affidavit.

2. John Godsalve, of Great Baddow, in the County of Essex, Esq. saith, he served on the Jury at the Trial of this Cause, &c. That the Deponent, on the Evidence given to him on the said Trial, was of Opinion, That the Defendant did put three Ducats into the Prosecutor's Pocket; but the same was not done with Intent to charge the Prosecutor with Felony, or Robbery, or other Offence, with any evil Intent.---The Deponent saith, That the Jury did agree to give a Verdict, that the Defendant was guilty of putting the said three Ducats into the Prosecutor's Pocket, by reason it was sworn to that Effect; and such Verdict was intended to be given: The Deponent apprehended, That he and the rest of the Jury had given such Verdict: But the Deponent hath since been informed, that the Verdict recorded finds the Defendant guilty on the third Count in the Indictment, which, the Deponent is also informed, is finding the Defendant guilty of putting the said three Ducats into the Prosecutor's Pocket, with a most malicious, wicked, and cruel Intention, falsely to charge, and cause it to be believed, that the Prosecutor had robbed the said Defendant of the said three Ducats: Whereas the Deponent and the rest of the Jury did not find, that the same was done with such Intent, or any Intent whatsoever.---The Deponent saith, That the said Verdict, as it now stands, is contrary to the Verdict then given in Court.---Saith, he could not rest satisfied with such Verdict, and therefore the Deponent made this Affidavit.

3. Robert Clarke, of Little Baddow, in the County of Essex, Esq. saith, That he served on the Jury at the Trial of this Cause last Assizes, held at Chelmsford, in the County of Essex; and that he was of Opinion, that the Defendant put three Ducats into the Pocket of the Prosecutor; but that the same was not done with Intent to charge the Prosecutor with Robbery, or Felony, or any other Offence, or with any evil Intent. The Deponent saith, That the Jury did agree to give their Verdict, that the Defendant was guilty of putting the said three Ducats into the Prosecutor's Pocket, by reason it was sworn to that Effect; and such was the Verdict intended to be given: That the Deponent apprehended he and the rest of the Jury had given such Verdict: But the Deponent hath been informed, that the Verdict, as taken down and recorded, finds the Defendant guilty upon the third Count in the Indictment, which, the Deponent is informed, is finding the Defendant guilty of putting the said three Ducats into the Prosecutor's Pocket, with a most malicious, wicked, and cruel Intention, falsely to charge, and accuse, and cause it to be thought and believed, that the Prosecutor had robbed the said Defendant of the said three Ducats: Whereas the Deponent and the rest of the Jury did not find, that the same was done with such Intent, or any Intent whatsoever.---The Deponent saith, That the Verdict, as it stands, is contrary to the Intent of the Deponent.---The Deponent saith, he could not in his Conscience rest satisfied with such Verdict: Therefore the Deponent made this Affidavit to explain what Verdict he did intend to find.

4. Daniel Stratton, of Bromfield, in the County of Essex, Esq. saith, he served on the Jury at the Trial of this Cause, at the last Assizes, held, &c. That this Deponent, on the Evidence given to him on the said Trial, was of Opinion, that the Defendant put three Ducats into the Prosecutor's Pocket; but that the same was not done with Intent to charge the Prosecutor with the Felony or Robbery or Offence, with any evil Intent.---The Deponent saith, That the Jury did agree to give their Verdict, That the Defendant was guilty of putting three Ducats into the Prosecutor's Pocket, by reason it was sworn to that Effect; and such was the Verdict intended to be given: The Deponent apprehended he and the rest of the Jury had given such Verdict: But the Deponent hath lately been informed, that the Verdict recorded finds the Defendant guilty on the third Count in the Indictment, which, the Deponent is also informed, is finding the Defendant guilty of putting the said three Ducats into the Prosecutor's Pocket, with a most malicious, wicked, and cruel Intention, falsely to charge, and cause it to be believed, that the Prosecutor had robbed the said Defendant of the said three Ducats: Whereas the Deponent and the rest of the Jury did not find, that the same was done with such Intent, or any Intent whatsoever.---The Deponent saith, That the said Verdict, as it now stands, is contrary to the Intent of the Deponent.---Saith, he could not rest satisfied with such Verdict; and therefore the Deponent made this Affidavit.

5. John Olmius, of Boreham, in the County of Essex, Esq. saith, he served on the Jury at the Trial of this Cause, &c. That this Deponent, on the Evidence given on the said Trial, was of Opinion, That the Defendant did put three Ducats into the Prosecutor's Pocket; but the same was not done with Intent to charge the Prosecutor with Robbery, or Felony, or any other Offence. Saith, That the Jury did agree, that the Defendant was guilty of putting the said three Ducats in the Prosecutor's Pocket, by reason it was sworn to that Effect; and such only was the Verdict intended to be given. The Deponent apprehends such Verdict was given: But the Deponent hath been informed, that the Verdict, as recorded, finds the Defendant guilty upon the third Count in the Indictment, which, the Deponent is also informed, is finding the Defendant guilty of putting the said three Ducats into the Prosecuter's Pocket, with a most malicious and cruel Intention, falsely to charge, and cause it to be thought and believed, that the Prosecutor had robbed the said Defendant of the said three Ducats: Whereas the Deponent and the rest of the Jury did not find the same was done with any ill Intent whatsoever. The Deponent saith, when the Jury came into Court, there was such a Croud and Noise within and without the Court, that the Deponent could not hear distinctly what the Judge, who tried the Cause, said or explained to them. Saith, that he did not understand the Nature of the third Count of the said Indictment. Saith, that the Verdict, as it stands, is contrary to the Intent of this Deponent. The Deponent saith, he could not in his Conscience rest satisfied with such Verdict: and therefore did, together with Peter Godfrey and Poulton Allen, Esquires, two others of the Jury, lately wait on the Judge, who tried the Cause, and explained to him what Verdict they intended to find: And also acquainted him, that, by reason of the Noise in the Court, the Deponent could not understand the Judge's Explanation of the said third Count of the said Indictment, or the Nature thereof.

6. George Dodson, of Shenfield, in the County of Essex, Esq. saith, he served on the Jury at the Trial of this Cause, at the last Assizes, held, &c. That this Deponent, on the Evidence given him on the said Trial, was of Opinion, That the Defendant put three Ducats into the Prosecutor's Pocket; but the same was not done with Intent to charge the Prosecutor with Robbery, or Felony, or any other Offence, with any evil Intent.---The Deponent saith, the Jury did agree to give their Verdict, That the Defendant was guilty of putting three Ducats into the Prosecutor's Pocket, by reason it was sworn to that Effect; and such was the Verdict intended to be given: The Deponent apprehended he, and the rest of the Jury, had given such Verdict: But the Deponent hath lately been informed, that the Verdict recorded finds the Defendant guilty on the third Count in the Indictment, which, the Deponent is also informed, is finding the Defendant guilty of putting the said three Ducats into the Prosecutor's Pocket, with a most malicious, wicked, and cruel Intention, falsely to charge, and cause it to be believed, that the Prosecutor had robbed the said Defendant of the said three Ducats: Whereas the Deponent, and the rest of the Jury, did not find the same was done with such Intent, or any Intent whatsoever.---And the Deponent saith, that when the Judge, who tried the Cause, did explain to the Deponent, and the rest of the Jury, the Nature of the Indictment, the Deponent did reply, We find guilty of No Intent: But cannot say whether the Judge heard him.---The Deponent saith, that the Verdict, as it now stands, is contrary to the Intent of this Deponent.---Saith, he could not rest satisfied with such Verdict; and therefore made this Affidavit.

7. Thomas Brograve, of Great Baddow, in the County of Essex, Esq. saith, That he served on the Jury at the Trial of this Cause, at the last Assizes, held at Chelmsford, for the County of Essex; and this Deponent, on the Evidence given to him and them on the said Trial, was of Opinion, That the Defendant did put three Ducats into the Pocket of the Prosecutor; but that the same was not done with an Intent to prosecute the said James Ashley for Felony or Robbery: The Deponent apprehended he and the rest of the Jury had given such Verdict: But the Deponent hath lately been informed, that the Verdict of the Jury, as taken down and recorded, finds the Defendant guilty upon the third Count in the Indictment, which, this Deponent is also informed, is finding the Defendant guilty of putting the said three Ducats into the Prosecuter's Pocket, with a most malicious, wicked, and cruel Intention, falsely to charge and accuse, and cause it to be thought and be believed, that the Prosecuter had robbed the said Henry Simons the Defendant of the said three Ducats: Whereas the Deponent and the rest of the Jury did not find, that the same was done with Intent as aforesaid.---The Deponent saith, that the said Verdict, as it now stands, is contrary to the true Intent of this Deponent: Therefore the Deponent maketh this Affidavit to explain what Verdict they did intend to find.

8. Joseph Hornby, of Ingatestone, in the County of Essex, Esq. saith, he served on the Jury at the Trial of this Cause, &c. And that it appeared to the Deponent, on the Evidence given on the said Trial, That the Defendant did put three Ducats into the Prosecutor's Pocket; but on the Evidence given to the Deponent by Crisp Gascoyne, Esq. Alderman of London, it appeared to the Deponent, That the same was not done with a malicious, wicked, and cruel cruel Intention, falsely to charge, and cause it to be believed, that the Prosecutor had robbed the Defendant of the said three Ducats, or with any evil Intent.—The Deponent saith, that the Jury agreed to give their Verdict, That the Defendant was guilty of putting the said three Ducats into the Prosecutor's Pocket, by reason it was sworn to that Effect; and such was the Verdict intended to be given: And the Deponent apprehended, that such Verdict was given.---The Deponent saith, that when the Jury came into the Court to bring in their Verdict, there was such a Croud and Noise in the Court, that the Deponent could not hear what the Judge, who tried the Cause, said or explained to them.---Saith, he did not understand the Nature of the third Count of the Indictment, for the Reasons aforesaid.

9, 10. Peter Godfrey, of Woodford, and Samuel Ruggles, of Bocking, in the County of Essex, Esquires, severally make Oath, that they severally served on the Jury at the Trial of this Cause, the last Assizes, &c. and say, that these Deponents, on the Evidence given them on the said Trial, were of Opinion, That the Defendant did put three Ducats into the Prosecutor's Pocket, but the same was not done with Intent to charge the Prosecutor with Robbery, or Felony, or any other Offence, or any evil Intent.---The Deponents say, the Jury did agree to give their Verdict, that the Defendant was guilty of putting the said three Ducats into the Prosecutor's Pocket, by reason it was sworn to that Effect.---The Deponents apprehended, that they, and the rest of the Jury, had given such Verdict: But the Deponents have been informed, that the Verdict of the Jury, as is recorded, finds the Defendant guilty on the third Count in the Indictment, which, the Deponents are also informed, is finding the Defendant guilty of putting the said three Ducats into the Prosecutor's Pocket, with a most malicious, wicked, and cruel Intention, falsely to charge, and cause it to be believed, that the Prosecutor had robbed the Defendant of the said three Ducats: Whereas, when these Deponents, and the rest of the Jury, came into Court, there was such a Croud and Noise, that the Deponents could not hear distinctly what the Judge, who tried the Cause, said or explained to them.---Say, that they did not understand the Nature of the third Count of the said Indictment, for the Reasons aforesaid; the Deponents say, that the Verdict, as it now stands, is contrary to the Intent and Meaning of these Deponents.---This Deponent, Peter Godfrey, for himself, saith, he could not rest satisfied with such Verdict; therefore this Deponent did, together with John Olmius and Poulton Allen, Esquires, two others of the Jurors, wait on the Judge, who tried the Cause, and explained to him what Verdict they intended to find; and also acquaint him, that, by reason of the Noise in the Court, this Deponent could not understand the Judge's Explanation of the said third Count of the said Indictment, or the Nature thereof.

11. Poulton Allen, of Barking, in the County of Essex, Esq. saith, that the Deponent served on the Jury at the Trial of this Cause, &c. That the Deponent, on the Evidence given to him on the said Trial, was of Opinion, That the Defendant did put three Ducats into the Prosecutor's Pocket; but the same was not done with Intent to charge with Robbery, or Felony, or any other Offence. The Deponent saith, that the Jury did agree to give a Verdict, that the Defendant was guilty of putting the said three Ducats into the Prosecutor's Pocket, by reason it was sworn to that Effect.---The Deponent apprehended, he and the rest of the Jury had given such a Verdict: But the Deponent hath lately been informed, that the Verdict, as is recorded, finds the Defendant guilty on the third Count in the Indictment, which, the Deponent is also informed, is finding the Defendant guilty of putting the said three Ducats into the Prosecutor's Pocket, with a most malicious, wicked, and cruel Intention, falsely to charge and accuse, and cause to be believed, that the Prosecutor had robbed the said Defendant of the said three Ducats: Whereas the Deponent, and the rest of the Jury, did not find the same was done with such Intent, or any ill Intent whatsoever.---The Deponent saith, when the Jury came into Court to give their Verdict, there was such a Croud and Noise, that the Deponent could not hear distinctly what the Judge, who tried the Cause, said to them.---The Deponent saith, he did not understand the Nature of the third Count of the said Indictment, which the Deponent could not, for the Reason aforesaid, hear the Judge explain.---The Deponent saith, that the said Verdict, as it stands, is contrary to the Meaning of this Deponent.---The Deponent saith, that he could not be satisfied with such Verdict: Therefore the Deponent did, together with Peter Godfrey and John Olmius, Esquires, two other of the Jurors, wait on the Judge, who tried the Cause, and explain to him what Verdict they intended to find; and also acquaint him, that, by Reason of the Noise in the Court, the Deponent could not understand the Judge's Explanation of the said third Count of the said Indictment.

12. Henry Hall, of Hutton-Hall, in the County of Essex, Esq. saith, he served on the Jury at the Trial of this Cause, the last Assizes, &c. That the Deponent, on the Evidence to him given on the said Trial, was of Opinion, That the Defendant did put three Ducats into the Prosecutor's Pocket, but the same was not done with Intent to charge the Prosecutor with Robbery, or Felony, or any other Offence, with any evil Intent.---The Deponent saith, that the Jury did agree, that the Defendant was guilty of putting the said three Ducats into the Prosecutor's Pocket, as sworn to that Effect; which was the Verdict intended to be given. The Deponent apprehended, he and the rest of the Jury had given such Verdict; But the Deponent hath been informed, that the Verdict recorded finds the Defendant guilty on the third Count in the Indictment, which, the Deponent is also informed, is finding the Defendant guilty of putting the said three Ducats into the Prosecutor's Pocket, with a most malicious, wicked, and cruel Intention, falsely to charge, accuse, and cause it to be believed, that the Prosecutor had robbed the Defendant of the said three Ducats: Whereas the Deponent, and the rest of the Jury, did not find the same was done with any such Intent, or with any Intent whatsoever.---The Deponent saith, that the said Verdict is contrary to the Intent of this Deponent.---The Deponent saith, he could not rest satisfied with such Verdict; and therefore he made this Affidavit.

An Affidavit tending to prove the Jury's due recording Henry Simons's Conviction in public Court.

Cornelius Norton, of Red-Lion-Street, Clerkenwell, in the County of Middlesex, Solicitor for the Prosecutor in this Cause, maketh Oath, and saith, He was present in Court when the Jury, who tried this Cause, publickly delivered their Verdict: The Deponent saith, The Account thereof, and the whole Transaction relating thereto, is hereafter impartially set forth, according to the best of the Deponent's Knowledge and Belief.---First, the Deponent saith, That about One of the Clock of the next Day, after this Cause was tried, the Jury, who tried the same, having assembled together, came into open Court, and, having been called over, respectively answered to their Names: They were asked by the Associate, Whether they did abide by the Verdict they gave his Lordship in private? To which the Foreman of the Jury, or one of them, answered, They did. Upon which the Associate replied, Then this is the Verdict, You find the Defendant guilty. By which this Deponent understood, they found the Defendant guilty generally on the Indictment. For immediately thereon, the Honourable Mr. Justice Foster, who tried the Cause, got up, and told the Jury, That he apprehended they could not find the Defendant guilty of the whole Indictment; for that the Prosecutor had not given Evidence to support the first and second Count laid in the Indictment: But he thought there was Evidence to support the third Count: And then the said Mr. Justice Foster took great Care and Pains to explain the Difference between the several Counts, and declared it as his Opinion, That, if they found the Defendant guilty of the said third Count, they should acquit him of the rest.---Whereupon George Dodson, Esq. who was one of the Jury, declared himself to the Court, That they found the Defendant guilty of No Intent, or to that Effect.---To which the Honourable Judge replied, Then you must acquit him; for it is the Intent constitutes the Offence, or to that Purpose: And recommended it to the Jury to go out, and reconsider of their Verdict.---In Answer whereto one of the Jury replied, My Lord, we have considered it as much as we could consider it.---The Deponent saith, He believes that thereupon the Judge read, or ordered to be read, the said third Count; and asked the Jury, If they believed the Witnesses? and some one or more of them answering, they did; the Judge said, Gentlemen, you must connect the whole Evidence together. Whereupon the Jury appeared to the Deponent to consider of what the Judge said to them; and in a short Time, as the Deponent apprehends, brought the Defendant in guilty of the third Count in the Indictment, and acquitted him as to the rest: And the Verdict recorded in that Manner.---The Deponent saith, That, after the Verdict so recorded, they were desired to hearken to it: The Associate said, Gentlemen of the Jury, you find the Defendant guilty of the third Count in the Indictment, and acquit him of all the rest.---In Answer to which, they some one or more of them answered, Yes; and withdrew from the Bar seemingly well satisfied.---Saith, He stood very near to the Jury, when they delivered their Verdict, and heard distinctly the Whole that passed on that Occasion: And the Deponent does not remember, in his Conscience, that there was a great Croud or Noise in the Court at that Time.---Saith, That the whole Transaction above related is impartially set forth, as the Deponent believes: And that, if the Deponent hath made any Mistake therein, positively saith, it is not by Design: And humbly submits the Truth thereof to the honourable Judge who tried the said Cause.

C. Norton.

Sworn before
Judge Foster.

These Affidavits of the Jury being obtained, another Application was made to the Court of King's-Bench; whereupon the Court was pleased to make a Rule for Mr. Ashley to shew Cause, why a new Trial should not be granted? Which being spoke to by Nine several Counsel, who took up the Court several Days in the Hearing, the Court was pleased to adjudge a *New Trial.

Accordingly a second Trial came on for the same Fact, at Chelmsford Assizes, July 12, 1752, before Mr. Justice Dennison, by a Special Jury, on the same Indictment.

* "Which (says J. Ashley) is the first Precedent of the Kind to any Person who had been convicted of a criminal Offence." See Ashley's Case and Appeal, Page 23. In the same Page he adds, "In the mean Time, Actions having been brought (by Simons) against me (J. A.) as the Prosecutor, Isaac Hubbard the Constable, Richard "Taylor and John Newman, on account of altering the Warrant, and thereby ignorantly detaining the said Henry Simons in Custody, till the Warrant was properly backed "(by a Justice of Peace for the County of Essex), this Cause was tried before the Lord Chief Justice Lee, at Guildhall, London, July 9, 1752; when the Jury gave a Ver-"dict for Two Hundred Pounds against me, (J. A.) Richard Taylor, and John Newman; and the Costs were taxed at 70*l.*

The Evidence for the Profecution was much the ſame as in the former Trial. And the Defendant called no Witneſs to invalidate what the Profecutor's Witneſſes had proved; but ſet up for a Defence, that Aſhley was ſeen in Duke's-Place, ſhewing ſome Ducats, and deſiring to know the Value of them; on which Mr. Aſhley was called, and ſwore he had not been in Duke's-Place for ſeven Years, had never ſeen a Ducat (till thoſe produced at Chelmsford), and contradicted what Simons's Witneſſes had ſworn. Then ſeveral Jews were called to his Character; who ſaid, he was a very honeſt, religious Man; very poor, and obliged to pawn his Veil through Neceſſity. Upon the whole, on this ſecond Trial, the Jury acquitted Simons.

There were at this Time ſeveral Pamphlets and Paragraphs in the Newspapers publiſhed on both Sides about this Myſterious Affair, which has never yet been cleared up: However, it is certain, Simons found great Friends, who aſſiſted him in ſix Trials in leſs than a Twelvemonth, viz.

Four of theſe Trials were common ones, not worth inſerting here. The only two proper for this Work, would have been the Second for Perjury, and the Fifth for falſe Impriſonment; but we cannot find they were ever publiſhed, or even taken down in Short-hand.

LIII. The TRIAL of Stephen M'Daniel, John Berry, James Egan, (otherwiſe Gahagan) and James Salmon, at Juſtice-Hall in the Old-Bailey, on Saturday the 1ſt of March, 1755, before the Right Honourable Stephen Theodore Janſſen, Eſq. Recorder, and others of His Majeſty's Juſtices of Oyer and Terminer, for the ſaid City and County, for being Acceſſaries before a Felony committed by Peter Kelly and John Ellis, in the County of Kent; for which they were tried and convicted at the Aſſizes held at Maidſtone, Auguſt 13, 1754.

London Jury.

Richard Heavyſides,	Ebenezer Gardner,	Henry Knight,
Gamaliel Gardner,	John Poperton,	William Baſſon,
Nathaniel Norton,	Randolph Baileys,	John Brewin,
Samuel Neſbit,	John Keen,	John Pricklow.

STEPHEN M'Daniel, John Berry, James Egan (otherwiſe Gahagan) and James Salmon, were indicted, for that, at the Gaol-Delivery for our Sovereign Lord the King at the County Gaol at Maidſtone for the County of Kent, on Tueſday the 13th of Auguſt, in the twenty-eighth Year of our ſaid Sovereign Lord the King, Peter Kelly and John Ellis were, in due Form of Law, indicted for a Robbery on the King's Highway on James Salmon, by putting him in corporal Fear and Danger of his Life, in the Pariſh of St. Paul, Deptford, in the County of Kent, and taking from him one Linen Handkerchief, Value 4*d.* two Pair of Leather Breeches, one Claſp-knife, one Iron Tobacco-box, one Silver Pocket-piece, one Guinea, and one Half-crown; and that the ſaid Peter-Kelly and John Ellis were tried and convicted for that Robbery; and that the ſaid M'Daniel, Berry, Egan, and Salmon, on the 23d of July, 1755, in the City of London, were Acceſſaries before this Felony was committed; and feloniouſly and maliciouſly did aid, abet, aſſiſt, counſel, hire, and command the ſaid Ellis and Kelly to commit this Robbery, againſt the Peace of his Majeſty, his Crown and Dignity.

There was a ſecond Count in the Indictment, as an Offence at Common Law.

At the Deſire of Berry, the Witneſſes were examined apart.

Joſeph Cox ſworn.

(He produced the Copy of the Record of the Conviction of Peter Kelly and John Ellis.)

Q. Where had you this?——Cox. I had it of Mr. Knap's Clerk.

Q. Is it a true Copy?

Cox. It is; the Clerk and I examined it with the Record; I looked over the Record on the File, while the Clerk read this; after that the Clerk read the Record, while I looked over this. (It is read in Court, the Purport of which is) "That Peter Kelly and John Ellis were tried on the "13th of Auguſt, 1754, at Maidſtone Aſſizes, before Sir Dudley Ryder, "Knt. and Sir Michael Foſter, Knt. for the ſaid Robbery on the De-"fendant Salmon, and found guilty."

Thomas Blee ſworn.

Thomas Blee. I have known the Priſoner Berry eight or nine Years, and M'Daniel twelve Months laſt November. I never had any great Acquaintance with Salmon, till through Berry, in the Month of June laſt. I have known Egan four or five Years, by his coming backwards and forwards to Berry's.

Q. Did you know Peter Kelly and John Ellis?

Blee. I did; I believe they are now in Maidſtone Gaol; they were when I came away laſt Monday.

Court. Tell the Court the firſt Time you had any Converſation with them.

Blee. I lodged at Berry's Houſe, and worked for him; Berry ſaid to me, in the Beginning of July, Go to Mr. M'Daniel, (he lived then in Scrub's-Court, Holborn) and tell him I want to ſpeak with him. I went, and he and I came back together to Berry's Houſe. They both ſaid, Tom, Money grows ſcarce, you muſt give a ſharp Look-out for a Couple to go upon the Scamp now, and if you cannot get two, you muſt get one.

Q. What did they mean by going upon the Scamp?

Blee. That is, to go upon the Highway. I told them, as Kidden's was ſo bad an Affair, I did not chuſe to be concerned more. He was convicted laſt January was Twelve-month, and executed at Tyburn. M'Daniel ſaid, D---n your Eyes, if you don't, it ſhall be the worſe for you. Then Berry ſaid, I might go about my Buſineſs; ſo I went away. The next Morning Berry called me into his Room.

Q. Where did he live?

Blee. At a Place called the George-Yard, at the upper End of Hatton-Garden. He then ſaid, Go up to Mr. M'Daniel's Houſe, and deſire him to meet me in the Fields about Eleven o'Clock. I did, and we went into the Spaw-Fields, and Berry came to us. They both ſaid to me, Go and look about the Fields, and we will ſit down on the Graſs, and ſee if you can pick up a Couple of idle Fellows, that will do for the Purpoſe, and introduce yourſelf into their Company.

Q. What did they mean by that Purpoſe?

Blee. To go upon the Scamp were the Words they ſaid: Accordingly we three went into the Fields ſeveral Days, but could not meet with any body fit for the Purpoſe. I remember one Day in particular, it was Monday the 15th of July, that Day they ordered me to go into the Fields, and ſaid they would come, and I ſat there two Hours before they came nigh me: then M'Daniel came to the Top of the Hill, and bid me come to the Sign of Sir John Oldcaſtle, a Public Houſe, and ſaid, my Maſter was there; he and I went there, and down to the Bottom of the Yard; and, in the fartheſt Arbour but one, on the left-hand Side, there ſat Berry and Salmon the Breeches-maker. Berry bid me ſit down, which I did; there we all diſcourſed together about doing this Robbery: M'Daniel ſaid, We'll do the Thing ſomewhere towards Blackheath; then he and Berry had a ſort of a Wrangle whether they ſhould not have it done between Newcroſs Turnpike and Deptford, juſt facing the four-mile Stone.

Q. Was there any particular Reaſon to have it done in that Place?

Blee. Yes, they ſaid, there is a Reward of twenty Pounds, that is given by the Inhabitants of Eaſt-Greenwich for apprehending Highwaymen and Footpads: Berry ſaid, Suppoſe we have Egan concerned with us; then they talked about his being the Fence, as they call it.

Q. What did they mean by that Word?

Blee. That is, to buy the Goods after Salmon had been robbed of them: M'Daniel made an Objection to Egan's being in, becauſe he thought five would be too many to be concerned in the Reward: Berry ſaid, We cannot cleverly do without him, and if there are five of us concerned, it will be pretty nigh twenty Pounds each, if a Conſtable ſhould come in: And they all three, that is, Berry, M'Daniel, and Salmon, concluded that Egan ſhould be concerned as a Fence in the Robbery: And Berry ſaid, he would go and let Egan know of it that Night; and ſaid to me, Now, Tom, you may go Home about your Buſineſs, we will not be ſeen to walk along the Streets together; ſo I went away and left them. The next Morning I went out again, to ſee if I could find any body for the Purpoſe, but I could not that Day; the next after, which was on a Wedneſday, Mr. Berry called me into his Room, and ordered me to go and tell M'Daniel to come to him to the Bell Inn in Holborn; I went, and M'Daniel and I went to the Bell together; there were James Egan, James Salmon, and Berry; we were all five together; they bid me come and ſit down, which I did, and drank Part of a Pot of Beer; then we all concluded that the Thing ſhould be done.

Q. Where is the Bell Inn?

Blee. It is in the City of London, juſt beyond Bartlet's-Buildings, on the right-hand Side.

Q. What Thing was to be done?

Blee. That if I could get a Couple to go on the Highway, that Salmon ſhould be the Perſon to be robbed; and Berry and Salmon talked about making two Pair of Breeches that Salmon was to be robbed of, and to mark them under the Pocket or Waiſtband with ſome particular Mark; to the beſt of my Knowledge it was to be J. S. Then Berry and M'Daniel ſaid, they muſt have a particular Handkerchief too: Then M'Daniel put his Hand into his Pocket, and pulled out this Handkerchief that I have now in my Hand: James Salmon ſaid, he had got a Handkerchief at Home, that he would mark ſo as to ſwear to it; which he was to mark with four Oilet-holes, one at each Corner. Berry ſaid, they ſhould want a Tobacco-box; M'Daniel ſaid, he had got a very remarkable one, that any body might ſwear to; which I have fetched forty Halfpenny-worths of Tobacco in for M'Daniel, and I know it to be the ſame now; (taking it in his Hand) M'Daniel ſaid, he would give it to Salmon to be robbed of: Then they ſaid, they wanted a Halfpenny, and would have it mark'd; M'Daniel ſaid, he had got a Pocket-piece; which Piece I ſaw his Wife buy for Three-pence and a Halfpenny-worth of Gin ſome time before: He ſaid, that would do; and it ſhould be marked with a Shoemaker's Tool, and he gave it to Egan to mark it: Egan ſaid, he had got a Tool that he uſed to ſtamp the Shoes with, that he would mark the Piece with: Then they bid me go Home about my Buſineſs, which I did. The next Morning Berry called me up into his Room again, he gave me Three-pence, and ordered me to go down to the Fleet-Market, to ſee if I could pick up two Men or Lads there.

Q. Did he ſay any thing more at that Time?

Blee. He ſaid, to do the Thing. I knew what he meant; accordingly I went down to the Market, and met with Peter Kelly and John Ellis.

Q. Did you know them before?

Blee. I did; I knew them to be very bad Lads, that is, Pick-pockets. I gave them ſome Gin, but had no Diſcourſe with them that Day about the Thing: The next Morning Berry called me into his Room again, and gave me Three-pence more, and bid me go down to the Fleet-Market to them, and be ſure to have a little Talk with them, and told me what to ſay; and that was, to tell them, I knew where to get a brave Parcel of Lullies.

Q. What is the Meaning of that?

Blee. He meant, to get a Parcel of Linen, if they would go with me to Deptford. I went and met them there, and told them as Berry ordered me; that is, I told them I knew where to get a brave Parcel of Lullies, if they would go to Deptford with me.

Q. Did you tell them Berry told you ſo?

Blee. No, I did not; if I had, they would not have agreed to go; they both agreed to go with me any Time I thought proper; then I left them for that Day, and bid them a good Night.

Q. You ſay you knew Kelly and Ellis before; What are they?

Blee. Ellis is a Chimney-ſweeper, about twenty Years of Age; and the other about twenty-one, by their Looks. The next Morning Berry called me into his Room again; I came Home pretty late over-Night, ſo I had not ſeen him then: He ordered me to go and tell M'Daniel to come to him to the Sign of the Plumb-Tree, in Plumb-Tree-Court, Shoe-Lane, at the Bottom of Holborn-Hill; accordingly M'Daniel and I went there; there were Berry and Salmon. Berry told Salmon, I had got two Men, Ellis and Kelly, and they had agreed to go along with me any where, where I thought proper, as I had told him before, that Morning; Berry bid me drink once, and go about my Buſineſs.

Q. Did Salmon ſay any thing to it then?

Blee. No, he did not; the Reaſon they choſe I ſhould go by myſelf was, becauſe People ſhould not take Notice of me. I went away, and left them three all together.

Q. Did they ſay ſo?——Blee. They did.

Q. When did they ſay that?

Blee. When Berry and he gave me this Great-Coat I have now on, to diſguiſe myſelf.

Q. When was this?

Blee. It was on a Friday; I remember it was Market-day at Smithfield, and I had been there to Kelly and Ellis. I ſaw them in the Fleet-Market on a Pea-cart, betwixt Five and Six o'Clock: I aſked them, if they would have a Glaſs of Gin; and gave them each a Glaſs, and bid them Good-bye: About two Hours after I met them again in the Market, and aſked them, if they would go to Deptford or not? They ſaid, Yes. Kelly aſked me, if I had got ever a Bag to put the Linen in? I ſaid, we did not want a Bag, I would tell them more of that another Time; and left them then. At Night, it being Saturday, Berry called me into his Room, and aſked me, if I had ſeen them and talked with them? I ſaid, I had: He ſaid, that was very well. He ſaid, When you get up in the Morning, come into my Room before you go out, which was the Sunday Morning: I got up, and went in; he then gave me Six-pence to treat them with. I went out into the Brick-Fields, and found them, and treated them with ſome Gin and Beer; and we agreed to go to Deptford to ſteal ſome Linen, and I bid them a Good-bye for that Time; and ſaid to them, I would meet them on the Morrow Morning. I left them in the Spaw-Fields, and went to M'Daniel's Houſe and dined there. I told M'Daniel I had got two Lads that I believed would ſuit for the Thing, and told him who they were; and ſaid, I would let him know more of it on the Morrow, for I ſhould ſee them again To-night or To-morrow; he ſaid, that was very well. At Night I ſaw Berry, and told him what had paſſed between the Lads and I; he ſaid, it was very well, he ſhould ſee Egan To-morrow Morning; then I went to Bed. The next Morning, which was Monday the 22d of July, about Five o'Clock, Berry called me into his Room again, and bid me go and tell M'Daniel not to be out of the Way, and he alſo gave me Three-pence to go down to the Fleet-Market to treat Ellis and Kelly with ſome Gin. I went down, and there I met with them, and gave them each a Halfpenny-worth; and told them I would fix a Day when we ſhould go down to Deptford: Then I left them, and went to M'Daniel's Houſe. About Nine that Morning there came Berry and Egan up into his Room; Berry ſaid, G--d d--n you, Mack, you and my Lord mind nothing but that G--d-d--'d Tea-kettle; you don't mind to look after Buſineſs.

Q. What did he mean by my Lord?

Blee. He meant me; it was a Nick-name they gave me. M'Daniel anſwered, He is juſt come from the two Lads, as he tells me. I ſaid, If Egan has a Mind to go, he ſhall go and ſee them; he and I went down into the Fleet-Market, there were the two Lads ſitting on a Pea-cart; I put my Hand into my Pocket, and gave them a Halfpenny each to go and get ſome Gin. Egan ſtood not above three or four Yards from them at the ſame Time, leaning againſt a Poſt; then he went one Way, and I another; I went through Plumb-Tree-Court, and met Egan in Shoe-Lane; then he went to M'Daniel's Houſe again. Egan ſaid there to M'Daniel and Berry, By G--d they'll do very well, they are two pretty Lads.

Q. from Berry. Where was this?

Blee. You know well enough, it was at M'Daniel's Houſe: Then Berry, Egan, and I came down Stairs; we parted with Egan at the End of the Court. Berry and I went over to the Plumb-Tree; and, as we went by Salmon's Door in Shoe-Lane, Berry beckoned him out, and he went with us. I ſtayed and drank Part of one Pint of Beer, and then went away by Berry's Order, and left them together. On the Tueſday Morning Berry and I went to the Plumb-Tree Alehouſe again; he bid me go over, and tell M'Daniel he wanted to ſpeak with him; I went and told him, and he came: Then I went out of the Houſe, to ſee if I could find the two Lads again; I found them in the Fleet-Market, and diſcourſed with them; they ſaid, they were going to Work (as they called it) in the Artillery-Ground.

Q. What Work?

Blee. It was picking of Pockets. I came back and acquainted Berry and M'Daniel with it. Berry gave me Three-pence in Halfpence, and they bid me go out directly to them, and keep them Company: Berry always found the Money. They both ſaid, they would come into the Artillery-Ground about Two o'Clock to ſee the Lads: The White Regiment marched that Day: I went and walked up and down with them. About half an Hour after two I ſaw Berry in the Artillery-Ground; (I was to take no Notice to Berry and M'Daniel, or they to me) and preſently after, walking round by the Artillery-Houſe, I ſaw M'Daniel; after that I left the Lads, and went to Berry, as He ſtood at the Artillery-Gate, and ſaid to him, Mr. Berry, do you think they will do?

Q. from Berry. What Time of the Day was this?

Blee. It was about Three o'Clock.

Q. What was Berry's Anſwer to that?

Blee. He ſaid, Do! d—n me, I have done leſs than they over, for March and Newman were leſs: He put his Hand in his Pocket, and gave me Six-pence; and bid me be ſure not to leave them.

Berry. Here is a Man in Court will contradict that (pointing to one that ſtood near him).

Court. Don't you know, at your Requeſt, all the Evidences for the Proſecution were put out of Court, to be called in one at a Time; at which Time yours were put out alſo? How came this Witneſs in again? He muſt go out, and come in when he is called. (He went out, but did not come in again to give Evidence on Berry's Defence.)

Blee. I went with the Six-pence round the Artillery-Ground, and met with M'Daniel; he ſaid he was going to Berry. I aſked him if he thought the two Lads would do? He ſaid, D--n your Eyes, I have done leſs than they over at Kingſton.

Q. Had he a Sight of them?

Blee. He had, as we paſſed him before; he and Berry went into the Ground, on Purpoſe to ſee them. Then I left M'Daniel, and went and gave the Boys Part of a full Pot of Beer; then I bid them Good-bye, and told them I would ſee them again the next Morning, which was the 24th. I went Home, and got up in the Morning, and told Berry I was going to them; he gave me Three-pence. Then I went down into the Fleet-Market, and told them, I believed the Thing would be done on the Friday; this was on the Wedneſday: If not, I would let them know farther. Then I left them, and at Night I went Home, and told Berry I had been again along with Ellis and Kelly. He ſaid, D—n you, don't go to deceive us; do you come up to the Bell in Holborn by-and-bye, and tell M'Daniel I want him. I went to M'Daniel's Houſe, and left Word what Berry ordered me; for M'Daniel was not at Home. Then I went to the Bell, and Berry met me juſt at the Door: Juſt as I was going into the Houſe he ſaid, Here is Three-pence; go away to the Artillery-Ground, be ſure to be there about Two o'Clock: This was on Thurſday the 25th, in the Morning. He ſaid, Don't come in, for Mr. Bagley is there; I don't deſire he ſhould ſee you.

Q. Who was that Mr. Bagley?

Blee. He was a Neighbour of Berry's. I went away to the Artillery-Ground at the Time; and walked about an Hour and a half before I ſaw either Berry or M'Daniel; but walking by the Artillery-Ground, I ſaw M'Daniel; he told me he had been at Dinner along with Somebody in the Artillery-Houſe, and ſaid, Where the D--l is Berry? I ſaid, I never ſaw any thing of him. About half an Hour after that, there was Hue-and-Cry after a Pick-pocket. M'Daniel came to me, and ſaid, G--d d--n me, the chief Perſon is a-ducking in the Pyed-Horſe Yard; follow him, and give him ſome Gin, for they have almoſt killed him. I followed him (it was Ellis the Chimney-ſweeper, the biggeſt of the two Lads) croſs Moorfields; I ſaw the People go from him, and there were but two or three People behind him; I gave him a Penny or Three-halfpence, I don't know which. Then I went back to M'Daniel, and told him he was very ſafe; then he and I came out of the Artillery-Ground together: As we were coming out of the Ground, we met one they call Plump (his Name Brebrook) and another Fellow they call Doctor, that was Turnkey at Clerkenwell Bridewell. Plump ſeeing M'Daniel and I together, ſaid to me, G--d d--n you, you Raſcal, you deſerve to be hanged for that Affair of Kidden. M'Daniel ſaid to me, Come along, don't be afraid of any body. We went over Moorfields together. He ordered me to go to his Wife, which I did; and after that I went down the Fleet-Market, to ſee if Ellis was ſafe; I found them both, and told them I would meet them the next Morning: They ſaid, they had no Money to pay for their Lodging; I ſaid, Here is Three-halfpence for you, go and lie in the Brick-Field To-night. Then I went Home to Mr. Berry's; he told me he had been at the other End of the Town about ſome Buſineſs, and he could not come into the Artillery-Ground. If this Affair of Ellis's being ducked had not happened, the Robbery of Salmon was to have been committed on the Friday.

Q. When was it fixed to be on the Friday?

Blee. That was determined to be on the Wedneſday.

Q. By who?

Blee. Berry and I pitched upon the Thing in the Morning, and he was to go and let the reſt know.

Q. Where did you conſult this?

Blee. We did it in his Room, before we went out to go to the Bell.

Q. What did he ſay to you about it then?

Blee. He bade me tell the Lads we ſhould go to Deptford to ſteal the Linen on the Friday.

Q. Who did he mean by the reſt, which he ſaid he would let know it?

Blee.

Blee. He meant Egan, Salmon, and M'Daniel. On the Thurſday Night I told Berry of Ellis's being ducked; he ſaid, M'Daniel, Egan, Salmon, and he had agreed, that it ſhould not be done on the Friday, leſt the Lads ſhould be apprehended on the Saturday, and kept all Day on Sunday in the Watch-houſe; and Somebody might come to them, to whom they might tell ſomething about my being concerned with them, and ſo by impeaching me I might be apprehended; ſo he ſaid they had fixed it to be on the Monday. On which Morning I got up by Mr. Berry's Orders; he gave me Two-Pence or Three-Pence (I cannot be poſitive which) to go to the Fleet-Market to meet them, and bid them ſtay till Nine o'Clock, and ſay I would come to them again; which I did, and returned, as Berry ordered me, to him at the Plumb-Tree Alehouſe: There was Salmon and he; he ſent me out for M'Daniel; I went to him, and he bid me tell Berry he was ſhaving himſelf, and he would come when he had done. I went, and told Berry; he changed a Guinea, and gave me five Shillings, and bid me not to be extravagant: He gave me that, as he ſaid, to ſmuſh to the Boys; to ſhew it to them, and ſay, I made that laſt Night: I was to pull it out all at once. He gave Salmon Half-a-Crown to be robbed of.

Q. Was it in one Piece?

Blee. No; it was two Shillings and Six-Pence.

Q. Who were preſent at this Time?

Blee. There were Berry, M'Daniel, and Salmon. Then Berry ſaid to me, Now go away as faſt as you can; and I ſaid, At what Place ſhall I ſtop for you, to ſee you are going, that we may be both ſure? I ſaid, I will ſtop at the Bell in the Borough, and call for a Glaſs of Gin; then you may know and be ſure that we are going to Deptford. I left them, and went to the two Boys.

Q. About what Time was this?

Blee. It was about half an Hour after Nine in the Morning. I went with the Boys to a Houſe in Little-Britain; there I called for ſome Beer, and Bread and Cheeſe; and pulled off my Coat, and ſaid, I muſt go to the Fence to get ſome Money, for the Woman has not paid me all. Then I left my Great-Coat, and went to Berry; and told him to haſten away, for the Boys wanted to go. Berry bid me return to them directly, and ſaid, he would be over the Water Time enough for us. I went to the Boys again, and called for another Pot of Beer, to delay the Time. After we had drank that, we went out, to go to Deptford. When we came to the Bell in the Borough, we went in; and in the right-hand Box there ſat Berry and Salmon; there I gave the Boys each of them a Half-penny-worth of Gin; I was not to take Notice of Berry or Salmon. After we came out, Kelly ſaid, D—n your Eyes, there is that old Thief-catching Son of a B—h, your old Maſter. Said I, Never mind it, I don't belong to him now. Then we went down the Borough Market; they bought a Breaſt of Lamb for their Dinners, and we went to the Black Spread-Eagle in Kent-Street (which was the Houſe the Priſoners and I had appointed for them to come to the next Day). We had the Lamb fried for our Dinners; from thence we went to Deptford.

Q. What Time did you ſet out from Kent-Street?

Blee. We ſet out from thence about half an Hour after Twelve o'Clock: I had made them almoſt drunk. After we went from thence, it was too ſoon in the Day; we could do nothing till it was dark, I told them, ſo we would go over into the Fields, and go to Sleep: So, to prolong the Time, we went into the Fields, and all three of us went to Sleep: They ſlept pretty heartily. When I thought it proper Time to awake them, I did; and away we went for Deptford.

Q. What Time did you ſet out after this Sleep?

Blee. I cannot tell the Time.

Q. Was it dark?

Blee. No, it was not. We were in Deptford an Hour before Dark. I went with them to the Sign of the Ship, the Houſe that Berry and Salmon had appointed to come to. I called for a Pint of Beer at the Door, and bid them ſtay there; and ſaid, I had a Relation in the Town, near the Water-Gate, which I wanted to ſee: I left them, and went to ſee for Berry and Salmon. I found Berry; he and I went into a Public Houſe, I think it is the Duke William's Head; he called for a Pint of Beer, and bid me return to the two Boys, and Salmon ſhould come to the Houſe. I went to them (they were ſtill at the Door); I ſaid, Come, let us go into the Houſe; I expect my Couſin to come to me.

Q. Had you let the Boys into any Knowledge of this Affair, before you came to this Place?

Blee. No, I did not: Only I had told them it was to ſteal ſome Linen; they went for no other Intent. Then I went in, and called for a Pot of Beer, and Bread and Cheeſe; we eat the Bread and Cheeſe, and drank the Beer; and called for another Pot of Beer: In the mean Time in came Salmon. He firſt went and leaned againſt a Dreſſer for about half a Minute, and then came and ſat down in the Box near us, and began to diſcourſe about going to London (it was then duſk). I ſaw Berry go by the Window; he beckoned his Finger, and I went out to him. He ſaid, Be ſure follow Salmon when he comes out. I went in again, and Salmon preſently went out. I changed Half-a-Crown, and aſked the Lads if they would have any Gin. When Salmon firſt came in, Kelly ſaid, There is that old Blood of a B—h, the Breeches-Maker in Shoe-Lane; his Son and I have been picking of Pockets together many a Time. I ſaid, Never mind that; what is that to us? I knew the Place where he was to ſtop at; it was juſt by the four-mile Stone: This was agreed upon before. The two Boys and I went on; and by the four-mile Stone, by a Gate, Salmon ſtood making believe he was making Water. D---n me, ſaid Kelly, there is the old Breeches-Maker; he is ſuckey, let's ſcamp him.

Q. What Reaſon did you give Kelly and Ellis for your going after Salmon?

Blee. I ſaid, We will take a Walk, till it is Time to ſteal the Linen.

Q. Was it light or dark?

Blee. The Moon ſhone. Kelly ſaid, when he came up to Salmon, G---d d---n you, what have you got there? Salmon ſaid, Gentlemen, take what I have got, don't uſe me ill. He had the Breeches under his Arm, and he gave them to me; they were in a blue and white Handkerchief, and I gave them to Kelly; I ſaid to Kelly, What Money have you got? Salmon ſaid, Here, Gentlemen, what Money I have got is in my left-hand Waiſtcoat Pocket, in a Tobacco-box. (He had told me before what Money he had got would be there.) Kelly put his Hand into his Pocket, and took the Tobacco-box out, and a Claſp-Knife and Fork; then away we walked on for London, and came into Kent Street as faſt as we could, and lodged there all Night, at a Houſe where I paid the Lodging-Money at going down, by Berry's Order, to induce the Lads to come there again.

Q. What Time did you get to Kent-Street after the Robbery?

Blee. I believe we got there about Eleven o'Clock; the People had no Clock in the Houſe.

Q. What Money did you take from Salmon?

Blee. We looked at that coming along; I knew what was in it before: There were two Shillings and Six-Pence, and a Pocket-piece with Skilion on it, or ſome ſuch Name, and a punch'd Mark in the Middle of it (Mr. Cox produced the Things mentioned).

Court. Look at this Tobacco-box.

Blee. This is the very ſame, it is riveted within-ſide; I have had this Box a hundred Times in my Hand before.

N. B. The Box was an oval Iron Box, with a Roſe, and Garter round that; and a Lion and Unicorn (as on the King's-Arms) in Baſſo-Relievo on the Lid.

Court. Look at this Pocket-piece.

Blee. This is the ſame Piece which I mentioned before.

Court. Look at the two Pair of Breeches and Handkerchief.

Blee. Theſe are the ſame Breeches and Handkerchief.

Court. Look at this Knife.

Blee. It is the ſame Knife.

N. B. The Claſp-Knife and Fork were made to faſten together in the Handles.

Q. What was done the next Morning, when you lay in Kent-Street?

Blee. We got up the next Morning about Seven o'Clock, and went over the Way to the Sign of the Black Spread-Eagle (the Houſe that Berry ordered me to go to). I called for ſome Beer, and ſaid to Kelly and Ellis, Sit down, and I will go get you ſomething for Breakfaſt. I went out with that Pretence, and went to the White Bear in the ſame Street, where Berry ordered me to come to let him know. There ſat Berry, Egan, and Salmon at the Door on the Bench. Berry ſaid, That Son-of-a-Whore M'Daniel is not come yet; now we muſt wait for him: Go you back, and Egan ſhall come after you directly. Egan and I walked up the Street a little Way together. I ſaid, Stop there a Bit, while I go over to that Shop to buy a Lamb's Liver for Breakfaſt; he ſaid, he would go on. He went on before, and called for a Pint of Beer; I came after with the Liver. I ſaid to Ellis and Kelly, as I was going to cut the Liver, That Man deals in Rag-Fair (meaning Egan); at the ſame Time I knew he did not: But I was to ſay ſo when he came in. I ſaid, May-be he will buy the Breeches; ſhall I aſk him? Yes, ſaid they, with all our Hearts. I ſaid to him, Maſter, will you buy ſome Leather Breeches? He ſaid, Let me look at them; if you and I can agree, I will buy them. After he had looked at them, he ſaid, What will you have for them? I ſaid, Six Shillings. He ſaid, I will give you Five. He put his Hand into his Pocket, and gave Kelly a Shilling Earneſt; and ſaid, he had not ſo much Money about him, but he would come in an Hour or two, and pay the reſt of the Money; and he would leave the Breeches in our Care till he came back. I ſaid, My Friend, will you eat a Bit of Liver and Bacon before you go? He ſaid, I don't care if I do. He ſat down by the Fire-Side, and ſaid, Landlord, let us have a Halfpenny-worth of Tobacco; and ſaid, God bleſs me, I don't know what I ſhall do; I have loſt my Tobacco-box. (This he was to ſay, to get the Tobacco-box of them.) I ſaid to Kelly, Let us ſell him the Box, may-be he will buy it, Kelly ſaid, No, let us ding it; it is ſuch a remarkable one, may-be it may be known.

Q. What did he mean by dinging it?

Blee. He meant to fling it away; I ſaid, No, let us ſell it: Then Kelly ſaid, Maſter, I will ſell you a Tobacco-box, if you will buy it; Said he, Let me look at it; he looked at it, and aſked, What he would have for it? Kelly aſked Six-Pence for it; he ſaid, No, he would not give it. I ſaid, We will not have dry Money, we will have ſome Beer: Then Egan ſaid, He would give a full Pot of Twopenny for it; then Kelly ſaid, he ſhould have it: After he had eat his Breakfaſt, he went out, and goes to Berry and Salmon. I went backwards with the two Boys to play at Skittles to detain them, but the Ground was ſo wet we could not play; ſo we found another Paſtime, called The Devil and Taylors. I kept them there an Hour and half; then I ſaid, If the Man does not come, let us ſell the Breeches. I ſaid, I will go and be ſhaved; and I left my Great-Coat, and went to the White Bear; but when they came there, they did not like the People or the Houſe, becauſe when M'Daniel came they did not like him. I went out of the Houſe, and ſaw Berry come out of the Elephant and Caſtle; they beckoned me over; I went and called for a Pint of Beer; Berry ſaid to me, You may drink with us; and ſaid, D---n you, where is your Great-Coat? (which is the ſame I have now) He bid me turn back and fetch it, and ſaid, M'Daniel and Egan ſhall go.

Q. Who were there?

Blee. There were all the four Priſoners there, ſitting in the Box going in on the left-hand Side, drinking: I went back again to Ellis and Kelly, and ſaid, The Barber is buſy, and cannot ſhave me, I muſt come again in five or ſix Minutes. I ſaid, The Weather is cold, I muſt put my Great-Coat on; I put it on, and went to the Elephant and Caſtle to them again, Berry bid me go to the Bell in the Borough, and ſtay there till he came, and to get ſhaved. I went away; and, as I was going, Egan and M'Daniel went out: I got ſhaved, and went to the Bell in the Borough, and called for a Pint of Beer, and drank it. About an Hour after Berry came in, and we had another Pint; then he and I went Homewards together: We went as far as Ludgate-Hill, there we ſaw one Mr. Rogers coming along; ſo he ſaid, Leave me, don't be ſeen with me; and I left him. At Night, when Berry came Home, I ſaid to him, Maſter, be ſo good as to lend me ſome Money to go to the Fair To-morrow. He ſaid, That is right, Uxbridge Fair is To-morrow, the 31ſt; he lent me Eighteen-Pence, ſaying, it was to go to Billingſgate to buy Shrimps with; I went to the Fair,

Fair, and came back again on the 1ſt of Auguſt. Berry bid me not be afraid; ſaying, he would always keep a good Look-out: And they always ſaid, if I was taken up, Salmon ſhould never appear againſt me.

Q. You ſay you went to the White Bear in Expectation of ſeeing the Priſoners, and after that to the Elephant and Caſtle; when you came in there, what did you ſee?

Blee. I ſaw Mr. Berry, Salmon, and Egan; M'Daniel was down in the Yard at my firſt going in, but he came in before I went away.

Q. Recollect yourſelf, whether you ſaw them eat or drink?

Blee. I drank Part with them, but I had breakfaſted before I got there; I know Berry told me they had a Raſher of Bacon; and he ſaid I had had a better Breakfaſt than they.

Q. Where did he tell you this?

Blee. He told me ſo at the Bell in the Borough.

Q. Was you at the Trial of Kelly and Ellis in Kent?

Blee. No, I was not.

Q. Where was you at the Time of the Trial?

Blee. I was taken up on the Friday before, being the 8th Day of the Month.

Q. What Day was the Robbery committed?

Blee. It was on the 29th of July.

Croſs-Examination.

Q. You have given an Account of ſeveral Meetings and Converſations you had with Kelly and Ellis before the Robbery was committed; was not the Converſation about ſtealing Linen?—Blee. It was.

Q. Was there any Mention made about a Robbery on the Highway?

Blee. No, none; I ſaid what Berry ordered me to tell them.

Q. for Berry. You ſay Kelly and Ellis went with you under a Notion of ſtealing of Linen, and Kelly accidentally pitched on Salmon, and propoſed to you to commit a Robbery on him?

Blee. No, he did not till we juſt got up to him; then he ſaid, There is the old Breeches-maker, let us ſcamp him.

Q. Before that, had you propoſed to him to commit a Robbery upon Salmon?—Blee. No, Sir.

Q. Whether Mr. Berry had any Converſation with Kelly or Ellis?

Blee. No, none at all; he did not chuſe to be ſeen in it.

Q. Nor none of the other Priſoners?——Blee. No, they had not.

M'Daniel. He mentioned that he had been four or five times up in Holborn; I never was there with him in my Life.

Blee. He was ſeveral Times.

M'Daniel. He mentions he was at the Plumb-Tree in Shoe-Lane; I never was there with him in my Life.—Blee. Yes, he was ſeveral Times.

Q. from Berry. What Lodging did you lie in at my Houſe?

Blee. Sometimes in Berry's Hay-loft, and ſometimes in the Room adjoining to his: I lay in that Room till all the Money was gone of Kidden's Reward, then I was forced to lie in the Hay-loft.

Q. from Berry. He ſays I lent him one Shilling and Six-pence to go to Uxbridge Fair; what Time was that?

Blee. It was on the Tueſday Night, the Day after the Robbery; Uxbridge Fair is on the 31ſt.

Berry. Uxbridge Fair is always the 20th Day of the Month.

Blee. That is Old Stile.

Q. from M'Daniel. Aſk him, if he has not had a Quarrel with me, and ſwore he would be revenged on me.

Blee to the Queſtion. No, never; M'Daniel once got a long Knife, and threatened to cut my Throat.

Berry. Becauſe I took his Brother, that was tranſported, he always ſwore he would be revenged of me.

Blee. I never ſwore ſo; he did not take him.

Salmon. I have never been at the Bell in Holborn theſe five Years.

Blee. He was there, as I have mentioned.

Q. from Egan. I want to know, if it can appear by any Man or Woman that I have been in a Houſe with Blee?

Blee. There are ſeveral will prove that.

George Holewright ſworn.

George Holewright. I live in Scroop's Court, facing St. Andrew's Church, Holborn.

Q. Do you know either of the four Priſoners at the Bar?

Holewright. I know three of them.

Q. Which are they?——Holewright. M'Daniel, Salmon, and Berry. I do not take upon me to know Egan.

Q. Do you know Blee the Evidence?—Holewright. I do.

Q. How came you to know M'Daniel?

Holewright. I have known him and Berry ſome Years; M'Daniel kept the Sign of the Angel in Scroop's Court.

Q. Where did he lodge about July laſt?

Holewright. He and his Wife, as he calls her, came into my Houſe on Aſh-Wedneſday was Twelve-month. He gave me a Crown Earneſt, and they continued there about four Months; he lodged there till he was taken up at Maidſtone.

Q. Did you ever ſee the Evidence Blee coming to him amongſt the reſt?

Holewright. Yes, many Times; he was a very handy Man amongſt them, and a very willing Fellow.

Q. Have you ſeen him often with M'Daniel?

Holewright. I have ſeen them together many Times. Blee uſed to come there to waſh the Houſe, and clean the Diſhes; and he uſed to come often to aſk for his Maſter Berry. They uſed to be generally together.

Q. He has ſaid, in July laſt he was at M'Daniel's Lodgings in Scroop's Court; do you recollect yourſelf that he was there in that Time?

Holewright. The laſt Time I ſaw M'Daniel was on the Friday Night; and on the Saturday, the Day after, he was gone down to Maidſtone; but then I thought he was gone down to Coventry: And I ſaw Blee at my Houſe much about that Time. They were very buſy together; but I never did expect to be called upon in Court about theſe Things, and have made no Account of this; I cannot be exact as to the laſt Time Blee was there.

Q. Was you ever in the Artillery-Ground?

Holewright. I was, and ſaw Blee there, running backwards and forwards; that was, I remember, on a Tueſday: I don't know in what Month; but it was when the White Regiment marched.

Q. In what Manner did Blee appear there?

Holewright. I think he had a Great-Coat on; running backwards and forwards; I ſaid, Tom, what are you at? He ſaid, Hold your Tongue, hold your Tongue; I ſaw him croſs ſeveral Times.

Q. Did you ſee either of the Priſoners there?

Holewright. I did not ſee any of them, as I remember.

Q. You ſay M'Daniel went down to Maidſtone Aſſizes; did he tell you he was going there?

Holewright. No, he never mentioned a Word to me of that; he ſaid he had taken a Man in Smithfield for a Murder, and he expected to have the Reward; and ſaid, he ſhould go to Coventry one Day or another.

Q. Did you know the Priſoners at the Bar were acquainted together?

Holewright. I have ſeen M'Daniel and Berry together eſpecially, Salmon the leaſt: I have ſeen them all together, except Egan; him I never ſaw, to my Knowledge.

Q. Have you ſeen Blee with them?

Holewright. I have ſeen him with all three of them; he was a Sort of a Runner to them, as I thought.

Q. Did they appear as of one Company when you have ſeen them together?

Holewright. Very often; and if any thing was to be done, Blee uſed to run backwards and forwards; and there was whiſpering together, but it was nothing to me.

Q. Had you ever an Opportunity of hearing their Diſcourſe?

Holewright. No, I never had.

Q. from Berry. Where have you ſeen us drinking together?

Holewright. At M'Daniel's, when he kept the Angel in Scroop's Court.

Q. How long is that ago?—Holewright. It is about five Years ago.

Q. from Berry. Have you ſeen me lately?

Holewright. I have ſeen you lately at the Union-Arms in Union-Court, I have ſeen them all three there.

Q. from Berry. How long is that ago?

Holewright. That may be about ſeven or eight Months ago.

Berry. We have been in Gaol ſeven Months.

Q. from Berry. Did you ever ſee me up at your Houſe where M'Daniel lived?

Holewright. No, I never ſaw you within my Door; I have ſeen you about the Door in the Court, once, twice, or three Times.

Anne Pattey ſworn.

Anne Pattey. I know Egan and Salmon. I live Servant at the Plumb-Tree in Plumb-Tree Court.

Court. Look about the Court; do you ſee them?

A. Pattey. I don't ſee them.

Court. Go down, and look about till you find them out.

A. Pattey. Egan is lame on his right Leg. (She goes down and looks at Egan, but ſaid ſhe did not know that to be him.)

N. B. He is a lame Perſon.

Q. Do you know Blee?

A. Pattey. I think I do; he was once at our Houſe; he came and had two half Pints of Beer, my Maſter drew him one, and I another; he ſtood with his Back towards me.

Q. Did you ever ſee Blee and Salmon together?

A. Pattey. No, I cannot ſay I have.

James Kirby ſworn.

James Kirby. I live in Croſs-Street, Hatton-Garden.

Q. Do you know any of the Priſoners at the Bar?

Kirby. I know three of them; Berry, M'Daniel, and Salmon.

Q. Where have you ſeen them?

Kirby. I have ſeen Berry and M'Daniel at the Two Brewers on Saffron-Hill; on the 8th of July they were drinking at the Door.

Q. Did you ſee any of the others in Company together?

Kirby. I have ſeen M'Daniel and Salmon at the Union-Arms in Union-Court drinking together; I believe it was in the ſame Week, may-be a Day or two after the other; they were buſy together in Diſcourſe.

Q. Did you ever ſee Blee in Company with them?

Kirby. Blee came in that Evening at the Union-Arms juſt as Salmon went out, and ſtayed there ſome ſmall Time; M'Daniel's Wife came in, and they ſettled ſomething that Blee had ſold for her.

Q. Did you ever ſee them together after that Time?

Kirby. I ſaw M'Daniel, Berry, and Blee ſmoaking at the Union-Arms in a Trifle of Time after; may-be the next Week after the 8th Day of July laſt.

Q. From any thing that you ſaw paſs, do you think they were acquainted together?

Kirby. They were very well acquainted; Blee appeared to me to be M'Daniel's Man.

Q. By what do you think he was M'Daniel's Man?

Kirby. I have ſeen him come ſeveral Times to the Union-Arms to fetch Beer for his Maſter.

Q. Did he uſe to appear as if he ſhaved often?

Kirby. No, his Beard was very long moſt of the Time I knew him.

Q. How was his Beard at that Time you ſaw him laſt at the Union Arms?

Kirby. It was very long at that Time.

Q. Did you ever ſee them three together any other Time?

Kirby. No, never but once; but I have ſeen two of them together, by Turns, ſeveral Times.

Q. Did you hear of Salmon's being robbed?

Kirby. No, not a Word of it, till I was told of it by the Conſtable.

Q. from Salmon. How many Times have you ſeen me at the Union-Arms?

Kirby. I ſaw Salmon once in the Kitchen with M'Daniel, and another Time ſitting at the Door, and Blee came while he was with M'Daniel drinking, and fetched both away in a great Hurry: Before Blee came, they had got three Dogs, and were talking about them; this was a little after the 8th of July.

Q. from Berry. What Month was this in?

Kirby. It was in the Month of July.

Q. from Berry. Was it in the Middle or the Beginning of the Month?—Kirby. I cannot ſay within a Fortnight.

Q. What Apparel was Blee in when you ſaw him there?

Kirby. In his uſual Apparel.

James

James Price sworn.

James Price. I know John Berry; he lived in George-Yard, where I now live. I have seen M'Daniel frequently with him there. I have also seen Egan with him there

Q. Do you know any thing of Salmon?

Price. Salmon came into the Yard in August last, and asked me if I had seen Berry; I directed him to the Hat and Tun, where I had seen him go.

Q. Do you know Blee?

Price. I had a Warrant against him and young Berry. Berry kept Blee from me in his House.

Q. At what Time was that?

Price. I believe it was about a Year ago; I believe I had the Warrant in the latter Part of February. I remember about the Beginning of August I saw Berry, M'Daniel, and Egan, at the Two Brewers, at the Bottom of Saffron-Hill.

Q. Have you often seen them together?

Price. I have often seen M'Daniel and Berry together.

Q. Did they seem to be acquainted?

Price. They appeared to me to be very well acquainted, for they were almost always together.

Q. from Berry. How many Times may you have seen M'Daniel and I together?

Price. I believe a hundred Times and more, I dare swear; they were seldom ever apart; you would seldom see one without the other.

Q. How long had you a Warrant in your Hands to search after Blee?

Price. I believe I had it six Months; I could not get at him: This was about the Time that Kidden was taken up, and they were afraid of bringing the Affair out.

John Samms sworn.

John Samms. I know Berry, M'Daniel, Egan, and Salmon.

Q. Do you know any body at your left Hand?

Samms. Yes, that is Tom Blee.

Q. Do you know whether any of them were acquainted together, and who?

Samms. I have seen Berry, M'Daniel, and Egan together, at the George on Saffron-Hill.

Q. At what Time?---Samms. For these two Years past.

Q. When was the last Time?

Samms. I cannot say in particular; I saw them, I believe, in February or April.

Q. Did they appear to be tolerably intimate?

Samms. Egan has come and asked me many a Time, whether Berry was at Home.

Q. Did you ever drink with them?

Samms. I have two or three Times; M'Daniel has come and asked me many a Time, whether I had seen Berry, (my Stable was opposite to Berry's) I have directed M'Daniel where to find him.

Q. Have you any Reason to think they were acquainted with Blee?

Samms. I have; Blee lodged in Berry's House; they all seemed to know Blee. I have seen Blee with them all together, except Salmon.

Q. Where have you seen them?---Samms. In George-Yard.

Q. When have you seen them there?

Samms. I cannot say the Times when; I have seen them divers Times together.

Q. What were they doing?---Samms. They were talking together.

Q. from Berry. Was you ever up Stairs in my House to see what Beds I had?

Samms. I know my Lord (that is, Blee) always went up Stairs; and when Berry turned his Wife out, Blee used to lie there.

Q. from Berry. When he had neither Shoe or Stocking to his Foot, was he fit to lie with me?

Samms. I know, when Berry has turned his Wife out, he has took Blee in, and locked the Door.

Q. to Kirby. Look at this Tobacco-Box; did you ever see this before?

Kirby. Yes, I have, I am pretty sure of it.

Q. Whose Property is it?

Kirby. I think it belongs to M'Daniel; I remember the Time when Salmon and he were drinking at the Union-Arms together; when Salmon was gone, there was some Tobacco left upon the Table; this Box was taken out by M'Daniel to put the Tobacco in; it is a very remarkable one. I am pretty positive it is the same.

Q. When did you see it?

Kirby. I believe it was the same Week the 8th of July was in.

John Brayder sworn.

Q. Look at this Pocket-piece; do you know it?

John Brayder. (He takes it in his Hand.) I sold a Piece once pretty much like this; there was on one Side of it wrote Skilling; but there was not this Mark on it when I sold it (meaning the Mark which Blee said Salmon made in the Middle).

Q. Do you take it to be of the same Specie of that you sold?

Bray. Yes, it was; there was the same Writing on one Side of it.

Q. Who did you sell it to?---Bray. I sold it to a Woman.

Q. Was any body with that Woman when she bought it?

Bray. Yes, one Blee was.

Q. Should you know him if you was to see him again?--Bray. I should.

Court. Turn about, and see if you can find him.

Bray. This is the Man (pointing to him).

Q. to Blee. Was you by when this Man sold such a Pocket-piece as this?

Blee. I was; he sold it to M'Daniel's Wife, or Company-keeper; she gave him Three-pence, and a Halfpenny-worth of Gin for it.

Q. Where was she when she bought it?

Blee. It was by the Two Blue-Posts in Holborn, in the Beginning of July.

Q. to Brayder. What Time was it you sold that Piece you mention?

Bray. I don't know the Time, but I believe it was in the Cherry Season.

Q. What did you sell it for?

Bray. The Woman gave me Three-pence and a Half-penny Dram for it.

Joseph Cox again.

Joseph Cox. I have known M'Daniel two or three Years; I never saw the other till I saw them all together at Maidstone Assizes; I went down on the 14th of August.

Q. What was your Business there?

Cox. I am chief Constable of the lower Half-hundred of Black-Heath; and I had an Information about the 3d, or the Beginning of August, that a Breeches-maker had been robbed in the Parish of Deptford, where I live, by three Footpads, and that two of them were taken by M'Daniel and others, and sent to Maidstone Gaol; and the third Person, whose Name was Thomas Blee, I was informed kept Company with M'Daniel; and after two or three Days searching, I very fortunately took that third Person, with the Help of a Constable of Greenwich, on Friday the 9th of August, in Newgate-Street, very early in the Morning. I took him directly to the Water-side, in order to carry him to Greenwich. When we got him into the Boat, he said he would discover all he could concerning the Robbery on the Breeches-maker. I bid him not do it then, because of the Watermen in the Boat, till we came to a Magistrate. We took him before a Justice of Peace; there he made an Information: This is it. (Produced one.)

Q. Do you know whose Writing it is?

Cox. The Name is Thomas Blee's Writing, I saw him write it; the other is Justice Bell's Writing.

Q. Was it read over to him before he signed it?

Cox. He read it over, and I myself read it over to him before he signed it.

Q. When was it taken?

Cox. It was taken on the 9th of August, but not sworn to till the 13th; it was read over to him before the Justice; and the Justice and Blee signed it in my Presence.

It is read to this Purport:

Kent, to wit. } The Information of Thomas Blee, of the Parish of St. Andrew, Holborn, Breeches-maker, taken upon Oath, &c.

" This Informant saith, that about four Weeks or upwards ago, " Stephen M'Daniel and John Berry desired him to look out, and they gave " him Money to that Intent, to get into Company with two Lads, or " Men, which he should afterwards betray, by getting them into a " Robbery, and they share the Reward given upon their Conviction; " and in order thereto, they did go frequently with the Informant into " the adjacent Fields, but could not meet with any. And this Deponent " saith, that he has met Stephen M'Daniel, John Berry, James Salmon, " Breeches-maker, and James Egan, of Drury-Lane, Cordwainer, in " order to concert and put this their said Scheme into Execution; and " that he the said Deponent met with John Ellis and Peter Kelly (now " Prisoners in the County Goal at Maidstone) in the Fleet-Market, and " as he knew them to be Persons of bad Life and Conversation, in- " troduced himself into their Company; after treating them, he asked " them to go with him to Deptford to steal some Linen, which they " agreed to do on the Thursday following; but after that put them off " till the Monday following, by the Direction of the said M'Daniel, " Berry, Salmon, and Egan, who had all at different Times seen the " said Ellis and Kelly, and approved of them for that Purpose; and judged " it most fit to have the Robbery committed on the Monday Morning, " lest they should be detained near London on the Sunday, and some Cir- " cumstances might render their Schemes abortive; and that they met at " the Bell in Surry as they went.

" And this Deponent saith, that it had been concerted between them, " that the intended Robbery should be between New-cross Turnpike " and Deptford, to intitle them to the Reward offered by the said Parish: " That he took the said Ellis and Kelly to a Public-House, known by " the Sign of the Ship, where they had promised to come to him: And " after staying there some Time, he left Ellis and Kelly at the Ship, and " went out to look for Berry and Salmon; he found Berry, who coun- " selled this Deponent to return to Ellis and Kelly, and said, that Salmon " should follow him immediately; that he returned, and Salmon did come " into the House at the Sign of the Ship, and stayed there near an Hour. " During which Time, he, this Deponent, treated them with Bread, " Cheese, Beer and Gin; and Salmon going away in the Evening, they " followed, and agreed to rob him in the first Place that Salmon stopt at, " which was the four-mile Stone, under a Pretence to urine, but it was " in order that they might overtake him, that being thought the most " convenient Place; that they came up with the said Salmon there: And " this Informant, without his, or either of the said Ellis and Kelly pro- " ducing any Weapon, took from under the said Salmon's Arm two " Pair of Leather Breeches, which had been purposely marked, particularly " on the Waistband or Pocket; and that he took out of his Pocket a " Clasp-Knife, and a Tobacco-box, which Tobacco-box was, he says, " M'Daniel's; but as it was a particular and very remarkable one, he " lent it to the said Salmon on this Occasion, which had in it two Shil- " lings and Six-pence in Silver, and a Silver Pocket-piece, which he " had submitted himself tamely to be robbed of; and after they had left " this said Salmon, they went and lodged in Kent-Street, and in the Morn- " ing he took them to the Spread-Eagle, where he had agreed with the " said M'Daniel, Berry, Salmon, and Egan, to take them; that about " Seven in the Morning, the said Egan came in accordingly; and " that this Deponent told the said Ellis and Kelly, Egan dealt at " Rag-Fair, and he asked the said Egan if he would buy the said Leather " Breeches, and he agreed to pay five Shillings for them; that he " gave them a Shilling in Part; after that he called for a Pipe of To- " bacco, and said that he had lost his Box, with Intent to buy that " which they had taken from Salmon; that he bought it of them for " a Pot of Twopenny; then he went out to get the Remainder of " the Money for the said Breeches, and went to another Ale-house " in Kent-Street to M'Daniel, who immediately went with Egan, and " secured the said Ellis and Kelly with all the Things, except the said " Tobacco-box, which Egan had purchased of them, as he believes. " And this Deponent farther saith, that he has several Times been " in Company with the said M'Daniel, Berry, Salmon, and Egan, and " they have all severally encouraged him, and said, If he should be " impeached, they would say nothing against him; and they pro- " mised to share the Reward and Subscription-Money raised, between the " said

" ſaid Berry, Salmon, M'Daniel, Egan, and this Deponent; and that " this was contrived to convict the ſaid Ellis and Kelly on Purpoſe to get " the Reward.

" Sworn before me, —— BELL."

Cox. As ſoon as this was taken, the ſame Night I obtained a Warrant againſt M'Daniel, another againſt Berry, another againſt Salmon, and another againſt Egan. I was adviſed to attend the Trial of Ellis and Kelly, and not to diſcover that I had Blee in Cuſtody till after the Trial; and in order that he did not make his Eſcape, Thomas Warren went down to aſſiſt me. When I came to Maidſtone, I informed myſelf as ſoon as I could, who was on the Back of the Bill of Indictment of Ellis and Kelly. Their Trial came on the 15th of Auguſt at Night: I came into Court very ſoon after the Trial began; Blee was then in my Cuſtody, but Nobody knew it then at Maidſtone; he was brought down in the Night, and ſtopped ſhort of the Town. When I came in, I heard Salmon giving Evidence againſt Ellis and Kelly; he ſaid, that he went in at the Ship at Deptford, and had a Pint of Beer; that he ſaw three Men drinking in a Box, and Ellis and Kelly, the then two Priſoners at the Bar, were two of the three Perſons, and the other was a carroty-bearded Fellow; that after he had drank his Pint of Beer, in the Duſk of the Evening he went out, in order to go Home to London; and having got as far as the four-mile Stone, oppoſite to which, at a Gate, he ſtopped to make Water, in the mean Time the three Men came up, and one of them d---d him, and aſked, where he was going? He ſaid, he deſired him not to ſwear, and ſaid he was going to London; upon that one of them, the carroty-bearded Fellow, ſnatched the Bundle from under his Arm, and punched him on the Breaſt. The Judge was pleaſed to aſk him, if it was light enough to ſee their Faces, and whether he was ſure the Priſoners were two of the Men? Yes, he ſaid, it was light enough to ſee their Faces, and he was ſure they were two of the People that robbed him. Then he went on, and ſaid, that Kelly, one of the Priſoners at the Bar, drew a Knife, and ſaid, D---n him, let us ſearch him; and took out of his Pocket an Iron Tobacco-box, in which was a Guinea in Gold, two Shillings and Six-pence in Silver, and a Silver Pocket-piece, and likewiſe a Claſp-knife and Fork out of his Pocket: He ſaid, the Bundle contained two Pair of Leather Breeches marked with J. S. and a Figure of 4 under the right Pocket; and that the Handkerchief had an Oilet-hole at each Corner; and all thoſe Goods were produced in Court, and he looked at them, and ſaid, they were the Goods he was robbed of, and that they were his Property.

Q. Are theſe produced here the ſame?

Cox. Theſe are the ſame Goods; they were delivered into my Care, and have been ever ſince. The Judge was pleaſed to aſk him, how he knew the Pocket-piece? He ſaid, by a particular Mark it had in the Middle. His Lordſhip was pleaſed to aſk to ſee it, and it was delivered to him by the Conſtable of Greenwich.

Court. Look at that Pocket-piece and Tobacco-box.

Cox. I am ſure they are the very ſame Things he ſwore he was robbed of. I aſked the Judge what he was pleaſed to have done with the Things? His Lordſhip bid me take Care of them till the Perſons were tried. He was pleaſed to aſk the Priſoners, if they would aſk Salmon any Queſtions? Kelly deſired Salmon might be aſked, whether he ſaw him draw a Knife? Salmon ſaid, Yes, you did draw a Knife; but I ſuppoſe you will deny all the reſt preſently. Kelly ſaid, That cannot be, becauſe he had never a Knife. There was one Circumſtance which I had forgot: When the Judge had aſked him, if it was light enough to ſee their Faces, he alſo aſked him, if he could know the carroty-bearded Man, and if he had ever ſeen him before? He ſaid, No, he had not, to his Knowledge.

Q. Did you ſee either of the other Priſoners there?

Cox. I ſaw M'Daniel, Salmon, and Egan.

Q. Did they all give Evidence?

Cox. They did.

Q. from Berry. Did you ſee me in Court?

Cox. I did not; I ſaw him at Maidſtone in the Time of the Aſſizes. After Salmon had done, Egan was the next Evidence: He ſaid, he dealt in old Cloaths; that on the 30th of July he went into Kent-Street to the Lock-Hoſpital, to ſee if they had any old Cloaths to ſell; but they not being up, he went into the Black Spread-Eagle to get him a Pint of Beer; that he obſerved three Men ſitting in a Box drinking, and as he was telling the Landlady his Buſineſs, one of them, a carroty-bearded Fellow, not taken, (for they did not know he was taken then) aſked him, if he would buy two Pair of Breeches? He ſaid, Yes, if they could agree for the Price; and that they did agree for five Shillings; and that he gave Kelly one Shilling Earneſt to bind the Bargain, till his Wife ſhould come with more Money, or ſomething of that Sort; and he was aſking the Landlady for a Halfpenny-worth of Tobacco; and as he was ſaying he had loſt his Tobacco-box, one of the Men offered to ſell him one (I have forgot which of the Priſoners he ſaid that was). He ſaid, he bought it of him for a Pot of Two-penny (indeed they ſell no other Liquor at that Houſe): He ſaid, as he was looking at the Breeches, he knew them to be Salmon's Property, having heard that Salmon was robbed over-night; and after ſome Time he went out, under Pretence to get the reſt of the Money, but meeting with Mr. M'Daniel, an Acquaintance of his, and knowing him to be an Officer, he told him the Story, and M'Daniel ſaid, he need not give himſelf the Trouble to look for an Officer, for he could do as well as a Conſtable; and ſo he returned back with him, and took Ellis and Kelly at the Black Spread-Eagle; and upon ſearching them, took out of Kelly's Pocket a Silver Pocket-piece, the ſame that was then produced, and a Shilling, and a Claſp-knife. The Judge was pleaſed to aſk him, how he knew the Breeches belonged to Salmon? He ſaid, by a particular Mark they had. He was aſked, how he knew the Mark? He ſaid, he had bought Breeches of him for himſelf, and, I think, his Son, twelve Years, and knew his Mark particularly well. The Judge aſked the Priſoners, if they would aſk that Witneſs any Queſtions? And Kelly deſired he might be aſked, if the carroty-bearded Man and he did not wink at each other before he offered to ſell him the Breeches? And Egan alſo ſaid, what gave him the greateſt Suſpicion that the Breeches were ſtolen was, becauſe he had ſeen one of the two Priſoners ducked for picking of Pockets in the Artillery-Ground. M'Daniel was the next Witneſs; he ſaid, he met Egan, an Acquaintance of his, and Egan knowing him to be an Officer, told him the Story; and he went with him and took Ellis and Kelly; and upon ſearching Kelly, he found upon him a Silver Pocket-piece, the ſame that is now produced in Court, a Shilling, and a Claſp-knife (I ſuppoſe the Fork was then loſt). He ſaid, that was all he had to ſay, only there was a Drummer in the Room when he was taken, whom he ordered to aſſiſt him, which he did.

Q. Did he ſay any Thing about the Tobacco-box?

Cox. I don't remember that he did. The Moment the People were called into Court to give Evidence, I had fixed my Eye pretty ſteadily on Mr. Berry, whom I aſked to go with me to drink a Glaſs of Wine, (he was in the other Court) which he did, and I ſecured him at the Bell; then I went to ſecure the others according to my Warrants. As ſoon as they had given their Evidence, the Cryer ordered them to go out. We ſecured them. Upon ſearching M'Daniel, I found this Knife upon him (produced in Court a ſingular long-ſheathed Knife of the Dutch Sort); I was told of it before. As ſoon as they were ſecured, I was forced to get Leave to put them in the Mayor's Gaol. I aſked Salmon in particular, if he knew one Thomas Blee? He did, as he had done before in Court, ſay he knew no ſuch Man. I ſaid to him, I am ſure you muſt know him; he as poſitively denied it again: The next Day when he was carried before the Juſtices, (I believe there were twenty or thirty of them) Blee was brought Face to Face to him; he looked at him, and then declared he never ſaw that Man in his Life before. I aſked M'Daniel that Night, if he knew Tom Blee? He denied he knew any ſuch Perſon. I aſked Egan the ſame, and he as poſitively denied it as the reſt, at the Time Berry was in Cuſtody at the Bell. I remember, as we were going along to the Bell to drink a Glaſs of Wine, he aſked me what I thought would be the Fate of Ellis and Kelly, and who was to pay the Expence of the Proſecution, for it was very conſiderable; upon that I could not help obſerving, that if they were convicted, there would be ſufficient to pay the Expence very handſomely; and if they were acquitted, the Proſecutors, I ſaid, I believed muſt bear the Expence themſelves; he ſaid he knew that, and for that Reaſon if this Affair was well over he never would be concerned again; by that Time we had got to the Bell the Diſcourſe dropped, and I took him in Cuſtody. When I had ſecured the others in the Mayor's Gaol, I went and fetched Berry from the Bell; after I had got him into that Gaol, I aſked him, if he knew Tom Blee? He ſaid, he did not know any ſuch Perſon. I put them in ſeparate Rooms that Night, and ſet a Man in each Room with them. The next Day, when Berry had been carried before the Juſtice and was committed, he and I walked together from the Bell to the Gaol; in going along he ſaid, he hoped the Gentlemen would not admit M'Daniel an Evidence, (for at that Time it was thought he would get to be an Evidence) becauſe he had ſaved himſelf once before by the ſame Means; but ſaid he, If the Gentlemen will admit me an Evidence, I can do for M'Daniel and another Man, (whom he named) that is not in Cuſtody; whom I know not whether I ſhould name.

Court. Name that Perſon.

Cox. It is Ralph Mitchel. I aſked him, if he would tell me any Particular that he would alledge againſt him? He ſaid, he could write to me in a few Days; but he never did. As to M'Daniel, the next Morning after he was apprehended, he deſired to ſpeak with me in the Room where he was confined; I took Mr. Warren, one of the Conſtables of Greenwich, with me, and went to him. He ſaid, he had rather ſpeak to me by myſelf; with that Mr. Warren withdrew: He there cried a good deal, and begged of me to be his Friend, and get him committed for farther Examination; for he ſaid he could make a very great Diſcovery relating to the Public, and could put five hundred Pounds into my Pocket. I told him I would acquaint the Gentlemen with what he ſaid. Accordingly I did, and uſed my Endeavour to prevent his being committed for farther Examination; he was afterwards committed upon the Warrant.

Q. from Berry. Did you ſee me any Way buſy about the Affair?

Cox. Berry kept M'Daniel, Salmon, and Egan Company; and becauſe it was to be my Place to take them, I kept Company with them all four for two Hours.

Q. from Berry. Was I buſy in preferring the Bill?

Cox. I don't know that he was.

Q. from Berry. Was I not ſitting in Niſi Prius Court to ſee the Trials there?

Cox. Yes, he was. When I talked with Berry afterwards, he denied knowing Blee, and pretended to be a Stranger to them all; and ſaid, he came down into that Country about Horſes. As for Egan, he denied he knew Blee, or ever ſaw Berry. Some Time after, I had ſome Talk with him again; then he declared he never ſaw Berry in his Life till he ſaw him in the Graveſend Boat.

Q. Can you recollect whether there were any Enquiry made by the Judge, whether they knew one another upon their Oaths?

Cox. There was nothing ſaid of that Sort, that I remember.

Q. from M'Daniel. Whether or no I did not go to 'Squire Bell, to charge Blee with a Robbery after he was taken?

Cox. I know but little of that; but here will be an Evidence that can give a very good Account of that.

Elizabeth Pragnell ſworn.

Elizabeth Pragnell. I live at the Ship in the Broad-Way, Weſtminſter. I remember ſeeing Blee at our Houſe on the 29th of July in the Evening, in Company with two Lads, each of them dreſſed in blue-and-white ſtriped Waiſtcoats very dirty; and I ſaw thoſe two Lads at our Houſe the next Day, being the 30th; I have heard ſince one was named Kelly, the other Ellis. On the 29th, in the Evening, they came and ſat down at the Door, and called for a Pint of Beer; I believe they were there the beſt Part of an Hour. The Evidence Blee inquired for Somebody, I don't know who it was. He went out, and came in again in a little more than Half an Hour. Then the two Lads ſaid to him, Will you pay for this Pint of Beer? He ſaid, Yes, come in, and we will have a Pot of Beer; then they came in, and called for a Pot of Beer; one of them went over the Way to a Shop for ſome Bread and Cheeſe; he he brought some in, and they eat it; they stayed, I believe, about an Hour and half, and went away when it was dark. Salmon also came in, with a Bundle under his Arm in a Handkerchief, when they were there; he called for a Pint of Beer, and pitched himself against the Dresser, facing them, and looked at them, then went and sat down in a Box with his Back toward them: He went out a little before them; I remember Blee went out two or three Times.

Q. What Liquor had Blee and the Lads?

E. Pragnell. They had two Pots and a Dram; I cannot say whether it was a Quartern or not: Blee changed Half-a-Crown, and paid for the Liquor. On the Forenoon the next Day, the two Lads that were with Blee were brought in again by a Constable, and a Drummer, named Cornack, to assist him. The Man that I took to be the Constable, which was M'Daniel, called for a Pint of Beer; he asked me, whether I knew them two Boys to have been there over-night? I said, Yes. Then he asked me, if I knew that Man at the Door? I said, Yes; he had a Pint of Beer at my House the last Night (that was Salmon).

Q. Did he mention Salmon's Name, or say he knew him?

E. Pragnell. No, he did not.

James Cornack sworn.

James Cornack. I am a Drummer; I was quartered at the Black Spread-Eagle in Kent-Street. On the 30th of July last, I came down Stairs between Eight and Nine in the Morning; I observed three Men sitting together in a Box, one of them had a carroty Beard, which was Blee; they had had some Victuals, and there was some Drink before them.

Court. Look about, and see if you see Blee here.

Cornack. There he stands (pointing to him); his Beard is now much about the Length it was then, (it might be six Weeks Growth) the other two were the two Prisoners that were cast at Maidstone. Blee said, I think I will go out, and get shaved; he went out. In about eight or ten Minutes after that, in came M'Daniel, with a darkish-coloured Coat on; he laid hold of Kelly, and said, Come out, you Blackguard Dog. I said, What makes you abuse the Lad in this Manner? He said, D--n him, I have got a Warrant against him, I am an Officer; they have robbed a Man just against the four-mile Stone near Deptford; I desire you would aid and assist me. I said, If that is the Case, I will. He took a Piece of Rope out of his Pocket, and tied them together. Now, said he, I will take care of them; do you step down to the Elephant and Castle, you will see two Men, one in a light Surtout Coat, and his own curled Hair; I will pay you for your Trouble. I went there; there sat Berry the Prisoner, and Salmon was coming in from making Water. I said to Salmon, I believe you are the Gentleman that I want; there is a Gentleman at my Quarters that wants to speak with you: Berry said, Go along with him. Salmon went with me; coming along the Street, I said, What is the Matter? What has happened? Said he, I happened to be at Deptford-Yard last Night, and had taken some Money, and had some Breeches with me; there were three Chaps stopt me, and robbed me of a Guinea in Gold, Half-a-Crown in Silver, a Tobacco-box, and two Pair of Leather Breeches tied up in a Handkerchief; and if the Breeches are mine, they are marked with J. S. and a Figure of 4 on the right Pocket; and the Handkerchief has an Oilet-hole at each Corner. We went in; there stood the Bundle on the Table, and Egan sitting in a Box opposite the Lads. M'Daniel asked Egan, what he had in that Handkerchief? He answered, it was no Business of his, for the Handkerchief and the Things in it were his; for he had bought them of the Lads. I made him open the Handkerchief, we found it marked at each Corner as Salmon had said, and the Breeches J. S. 4. M'Daniel searched Kelly, and I saw him take a Clasp-knife out of his Pocket, a Shilling, and a Silver Pocket-piece; he gave him the Shilling back again, and said the Pocket-piece was marked in the Middle, and shewed it me, and desired me not to be mealy-mouthed when I came before the Justice; this he said once or twice. They tied the Things all up in a Handkerchief, and we set out with them to a Justice of the Peace at Greenwich.

Q. Did you see ever a Tobacco-box?—Cornack. No, I did not.

Court. Look at this Pocket-piece.

Cornack. I think this is the same; it has much the same Mark; it is hard for me to swear it, but I believe it is the same. Going along, M'Daniel said to the Lads, You have made a good Hand of it, if you have spent the Guinea already; the Lads said, they never took a Guinea from him. M'Daniel said to me, One of them has got Money in his Stocking, but let them keep it, poor Things, they'll want it; he wanted them sadly to confess the Robbery, and told them, if they would not, they would certainly be hanged.

Q. What were his Words, as near as you can recollect?

Cornack. He said, You Dogs, I would have you confess when you come before the Justice, it will be the better for you; and tell me where the other Fellow is gone to: They said, they could not tell any thing about it, and would give him no Answer: they said to him they wanted to go to some Bridewell, which I do not know. He said to them, if they would confess, he would do all in his Power for them, and he would untie them when they came into Deptford, and they should go by Water. We came to the Five Bells at the End of Deptford Road, there M'Daniel called for a Pint of Beer; the People brought the Beer out. M'Daniel asked the Lads, if that was the House they had been drinking at the Night before? They said, No, but they had been drinking at the Sign of the Ship; we drank the Beer, and then set out again: Egan and Salmon followed at a Distance. When we came to Deptford, M'Daniel took the Lads in, and desired Egan and Salmon to stay at the Door; he called for a Pint of Beer.

Q. How came Egan to follow you?

Cornack. I don't know; he came from my Quarters.

Q. Did M'Daniel charge him to assist?

Cornack. Not a Word as I heard. When he and Salmon were at the Door, M'Daniel asked the Landlady if she saw them Lads there the Night before? She said, Yes, they were there the Night before, and had some Bread and Cheese; then he said to her, Did you see that Man that is now at the Door? (meaning Salmon) She said, Yes, he was here at the same Time, and they went out about ten or twelve Minutes Distance one of another. Said M'Daniel to me, Take Notice of what this Landlady says, and don't be mealy-mouthed when you come before the Justice. Then we set out and went to Greenwich; and in the Clerk's Office they wanted M'Daniel to be bound over to prosecute; M'Daniel said he could not, for he had a Bit of an Estate left him in the Country, and he could not be there at the Time of the Assizes; then the Justice's Clerk was pleased to bind me over. We stayed at Greenwich and had some Beer, and were pretty merry till almost Nine at Night; coming Home all together, they let me and Egan go before. Egan swore by the Great G--d and the Sweet Jesus, he would not appear against them at the Assizes. Said I, You are bound over as well as I, and I cannot see you can be off from going down. He said, O! by J---s it is only changing my Parish; it has cost me three Shillings To-day, and the Breeches may go to the D--l, for I will never appear against them. We parted about Ten that Night; I went to my Quarters; M'Daniel told me to come to his House in Union-Court. I went in about a Week after, but could not hear of such a Person; I went to the Union-Arm, and found the Landlord knew something of him, and I found he lived in Scroop's-Court; I went and asked there for him, but never could find him at Home, although I went there three or four Times; his Woman always told me he was gone into the Country. I saw him once, but that was by mere Chance; he was then dodging me, or somebody else, at the End of Parliament-Street.

Q. Was you at the Assizes at Maidstone?

Cornack. I was; when I came there, I could not find any of them; they kept out of my Sight, I imagined, for fear I should come in for Part of the Reward. At last I happened to meet Egan in the Street: I said, What, have you done the Thing? (I meant, found the Bill:) He said, No, we shall not do it this Day or two; thinks I, I'll watch you: I did, and by-and-bye came Salmon and M'Daniel, and, I think, Egan, and one Sergant, a Constable; they and I went into the Clerk's Office to get the Bill of Indictment drawn, Berry did not go in, I followed them. When they came in, the Clerk said, Are you all here? Yes, said M'Daniel, we are all here. Said the Clerk, There are six of you. There are but five of us, said M'Daniel. Said the Clerk, Is there not a Drummer? Oh! said M'Daniel, I had forgot him. After we had prepared the Bill of Indictment, I went to the Cock at Maidstone, there sat Berry; I did not recollect him at that Time; said he, How do you do, Drummer? I said, You have the Advantage of me, I cannot say I know you. No, said he, don't you know that Morning when you went to the Elephant and Castle in Kent-Street for Salmon? Then I said, I believe you are the Gentleman that sat there in the Box. Yes, said he, I am: Then he asked me, what I thought of those Lads, will they be convicted? I said, It appears very plain against them. Then he said, If they are not, I must either beg my Bread, or go upon the Highway myself.

Q. from Berry. Were there any Company by at this Time?

Cornack. No, there were not; Berry was sitting by himself; he generally was by himself, except he was with his Companions.

Q. Are you certain he said these Words to you at that Time?

Cornack. I am positive of it he did.

Mary Hussey sworn.

Mary Hussey. I live at the Elephant and Castle in Kent-Street, I am Servant there; my Mistress's Name is Jane Smith. There came three Men into our House, and after that came in M'Daniel; they had a Rasher of Bacon for Breakfast. I don't know the others Faces.

Q. When was this?

M. Hussey. It was in the last Summer-time.

Thomas Sergant sworn.

Thomas Sergant. (He is shewn the Tobacco-box). I have seen such a one; I made a Remark that the Unicorn's Horn was broke off the Box, when M'Daniel shewed it me above a Year ago; this I see is broke as that was. His Box has been sent to my House many a Time, to be filled with Tobacco; it is near a Year ago since I saw it; this is like it, but I cannot tell this is it.

Q. How came M'Daniel to shew it you?

Sergant. He shewed it me as a Piece of Curiosity; saying, Here is an old Thing, a curious Thing. I said, It is not perfect now, here wants the Horn to the Unicorn.

Henry Sergant sworn.

Henry Sergant. I know all the Prisoners very well; I was at the taking them all at Maidstone Assizes last.

Court. Give an Account what you know of them.

Sergant. M'Daniel said I was a young Constable, and I should have my Share of the Reward; he should take the Money, and he would see me paid.

Q. What Reward did he mean?

Sergant. The Subscription-Money of our Parish, for the two Lads that were tried, John Ellis and Peter Kelly; I carried them down.

Q. Did you produce these Goods there?——Sergant. I did.

Q. Where had you them?

Sergant. I had them of Justice Bell, who sent for me, I being a Constable.

Q. What passed when he said, You are a young Constable?

Sergant. The Prisoner Berry said, We shall have a good Supper if the Prisoners are convicted; and if they were not, he thought he must beg his Way home. As I was going along the Road with Ellis and Kelly to Maidstone, they told me there was one Tom Blee concerned with them in the Robbery; and also where he lived, and what Sort of Cloaths he wore. I took it down in Writing; the Justice desired me to go and take him; I said, I would give Directions to a Thief-catcher, which I did to Ralph Mitchel; but he refused to act in it.

Q. Was you upon the Trial?

Sergant. I was.

Q. Was Salmon a Witness?

Sergant. He was; he swore he lost these Things. Also Egan and M'Daniel were both examined upon it.

Q. from

Q. from Berry. Did you ſee me concern myſelf at all in the Affair, or was I upon the Back of the Bill?

Sergant. No, he was not on the Back of the Bill; he had no Buſineſs there, if he could have truſted his Friends with the Money. I heard M'Daniel and him both ſay, they would ſhare the Reward.

Q. from Berry. Did not you ſee me ſitting at the Cock all the while?

Sergant. No, he walked about with us.

Q. to Blee. You ſay Berry gave you a Crown, what Money was it?

Blee. He gave me a Half-Crown and two Shillings and Six-pence that Day I went with the Lads to Deptford.

Berry's Defence.

On the 25th of July I was out of Town all Day, and returned the Sunday following; and ſtayed at Home all Day the Sunday Blee tells you he was with me, and I gave him a Crown. If your Lordſhip will indulge me to put it off till next Seſſions, then I can bring Witneſſes to prove he falſly accuſes me. I went out on the 5th of Auguſt to Bromley Fair; I ſaw Blee with a Saddle on his Back; he is a pilfering Sort of a Fellow. I went and took him by the Collar, and ſaid, I would chaſtiſe him; he ſaid, Mr. Berry, I can tell you a great deal, if you will not hurt me. I ſaid, If you can tell me a great deal, tell me where my Goods are. I heard on the 12th of Auguſt that he was taken up at Greenwich; I went there, and took M'Daniel over there, to ſee if he was taken, on purpoſe to have charged him with my Goods. My Son is gone, he has puſhed him away, and I have never ſeen him ſince, and they would never give me any Anſwer that they had got him. I aſked Mr. Sergant, if he had got him? He would not tell me. They never took him to give any Evidence before the Juſtice. People may go a-thieving for ever, if they may get off in this Faſhion.

M'Daniel's Defence.

I was called out about the 30th of July to go over to the King's-Bench; I met this Man Egan; he deſired me to go and take a Couple of Thieves in Kent-Street; I ſaid, What have they done? He ſaid, I believe they have broke open ſome Houſe, and ſtole theſe Things. I went with him to the Elephant and Caſtle in Kent-Street, and ſtayed there ſome time, till we ſent for Mr. Salmon; and when he came, Egan came with him to me. I ſaid, Is the Man come? He ſaid, Yes; then I went with Egan to the Black Spread Eagle; there were theſe two Men ſitting; one of them ſaid, I believe I have done now. I turned him about, and ſearched him, and took theſe Breeches from under their A—s, and alſo from one I took this Pocket-piece. After this I ſaid to Salmon, The only Way to ſave Expence is to examine them before Colonel Bell. In carrying of them down, the leaſt of the two ſaid, I wiſh I could be admitted an Evidence, I would be glad; I ſaid, You Dog, where is the reſt of you? where is the other Fellow, what is his Name? This Lord Blee lived along with me ſix or ſeven Months, I never knew his Name; when he told me my Lord, I gueſſed directly; one of them wanted to be admitted an Evidence before Juſtice Bell, and he would not admit either of them. After that I heard my Lord was taken, I goes down to Greenwich, and went to Mitchel at Deptford; and ſaid, Here, Cox has taken the other Fellow, Ralph, will you come up, and ſee if he has got him? He was afraid of being taken upon ſome Warrants, and would not go; ſo I went to the Colonel myſelf, the Clerk was there, and he was very ill; he ſaid to me, Mr. M'Daniel, he is not taken, if he was, he would be brought to me. After that I ſtopped a Man that had murdered another at Coventry; I brought him to Hicks's-Hall, the Juſtices committed him to New-Priſon. The Gentlemen told me, I muſt go down to Coventry along with him. I went down to Maidſtone; there I ſaid I could ſay nothing to the Robbery: The Drummer could ſay as much as I could as to the Pocket-piece and Tobacco-box. As God Almighty is in Heaven, I know no more of them than your Lordſhip there; I have taken a great many Thieves, and have ventured my Life, and been ſhot at by them. I never had my Name brought in Queſtion; I have been offered Money to let Priſoners go, but I never would do it: I could have had threeſcore Pounds to have done it.

Salmon's Defence.

That Fellow that ſwore I had been at the Bell in Company with him has ſwore falſe; I never was in Company with him in the whole Courſe of my Life, nor I have not been in that Alehouſe theſe five Years.

Egan's Defence.

Pleaſe to aſk where the Bell is? I do not know where it is; I have no Knowledge of that Man in the World (looking towards Blee).

Q. to Berry. Have you any Evidences to call to your Character?

Berry. Call Henry Warrington. (He was called, but did not appear.)

Berry. I lived ſeventeen Years in the Yard where this Man lives, that is, James Price; will you pleaſe to call him?

James Price again. I have known Berry, I believe, five Years.

Court. He calls upon you for a Character; what Character can you give him?

Price. A very bad one, my Lord.

Berry. Pleaſe to aſk him, what he can ſay as a Stain upon my Character?

Price. It will hurt you, if you inſiſt upon it.

Q. to M'Daniel. Will you call any Witneſſes?

M'Daniel. There is a Man that has known me theſe nine or ten Years, and that I have the beſt of Characters; that is Mr. Holewright.

Court. Do you chuſe he ſhould be examined to your Character?

M'Daniel. Yes.

G. Holewright again. I believe I have known M'Daniel eight or nine Years, or longer; he never did me any Injury in his Life-time; but as for the reſt of it, I believe he is bad enough.

Q. to Salmon. Have you any Witneſſes to call?

Salmon. No, my Lord; I have not had Time to ſend for any.

Q. to Egan. Have you any Witneſſes to call?

Egan. No, my Lord; none of my Acquaintance know that I am in Trouble.

The Jury found them all four guilty of all the Facts charged againſt them in the Indictment; but whether the Facts charged were within the Statutes of the 4th and 5th of Philip and Mary, and the 3d and 4th of William and Mary, they knew not *; and therefore prayed the Aſſiſtance of the Court. Whereupon the following ſpecial Verdict was found:

" We find the Record of the Conviction of Peter Kelly and John Ellis " prout.

" We find, That before the committing the ſaid Robbery, the Defen- " dants, M'Daniel, Berry, Egan, (alias Gahagan) and Salmon, and Thomas " Blee, did maliciouſly, and felonioufly, and with Intention to procure " themſelves the Rewards allowed by the Statute for the apprehending of " Robbers on the Highway, and ſome further Rewards offered by the In- " habitants of the Pariſh of Greenwich, and other adjoining Pariſhes, all met " at the Bell Inn in Holborn, in London; and that they all agreed Blee ſhould " procure two Perſons to commit a Robbery on the Highway upon the " Defendant James Salmon, in the Pariſh of St. Paul, Deptford, in Kent, " which is an adjoining Pariſh to the ſaid Pariſh of Greenwich; and for " that Purpoſe did maliciouſly and felonioufly contrive and agree, that the " ſaid Blee ſhould inform ſuch Perſons, that the ſaid Blee would aſſiſt " them to ſteal ſome Linen in the ſaid Pariſh of St. Paul, Deptford.

" That the ſaid Blee, in purſuance of the ſaid Agreement, and with " the Privity of the ſaid Defendants, did engage and procure the ſaid " Peter Kelly and John Ellis, in the ſaid Indictment named, to go with " him to Deptford to ſteal Linen, but did not at that Time tell the ſaid " Kelly and Ellis, or either of them, of the ſaid intended Robbery on Sal- " mon, nor at any other Time before the ſaid Robbery was committed; " and in conſequence of ſuch Agreement, and with the Privity of all the " ſaid Defendants, the ſaid Ellis and Kelly did go with the ſaid Blee to " Deptford.

" And that the ſaid Blee, Ellis, and Kelly, being at Deptford aforeſaid, " and the ſaid Salmon being then and there waiting in the King's High- " way, in purſuance of the Agreement aforeſaid; they, the ſaid Blee, " Ellis, and Kelly, did all felonioufly aſſault the ſaid Salmon, and did " take from his Perſon the ſaid Goods mentioned in the Indictment, on " which the ſaid Ellis and Kelly were ſo convicted as aforeſaid.

" And we find, that none of the ſaid Defendants ever had any Conver- " ſation with the ſaid Kelly and Ellis, or either of them, before the ſaid " Robbery was committed: But we find, that before the ſaid Robbery " was committed, the ſaid M'Daniel, Egan, and Berry, ſaw the ſaid Kelly " and Ellis, and told the ſaid Blee that they would do very well for the " Purpoſe of robbing the ſaid Salmon as aforeſaid: But whether the De- " fendants, or any of them, are guilty of felonioufly and maliciouſly com- " forting, aiding, abetting, aſſiſting, counſelling, hiring, or commanding " the ſaid Kelly and Ellis, or either of them, to commit the Felony and " Robbery above-mentioned, or whether the ſaid Defendants, or any of " them, are guilty of felonioufly and maliciouſly moving, procuring, abet- " ting, or counſelling the ſaid Kelly and Ellis, or either of them, to commit " the ſaid Felony and Robbery, in Manner and Form as in the ſecond " Count of the ſaid Indictment is charged againſt them, we know not, " and pray the Advice of the Court. TRINITY VACATION, 28 Geo. II.

June 19, 1755.

At Serjeant's-Inn-Hall, in Chancery-Lane, before all the Judges.

The Special Verdict argued †.

The King againſt M'Daniel, Berry, Egan, and Salmon.

CASE.

PETER Kelly and John Ellis were indicted for a Robbery on the Highway, committed near Deptford, in Kent, on James Salmon; on which Indictment they were tried, and were capitally convicted.

The Defendants were indicted as Acceſſaries before the Fact, to the Robbery committed by Kelly and Ellis.

The Judges at the Old-Bailey directed a Special Verdict to be found on the laſt-mentioned Indictment.

Which Verdict firſt finds the Record of the Conviction of Kelly and Ellis prout.

It alſo finds, " That the Defendants, M'Daniel, Berry, Egan, and " Salmon, together with one Blee, with an Intention to procure to them- " ſelves the common Reward given by Act of Parliament, and an addi- " tional Reward offered by the Pariſhes of Greenwich and Deptford, for " apprehending Highway-men, met together at the Bell in Holborn; and " there they agreed, that Blee ſhould procure two Perſons to rob, and " that he ſhould inform them that he would aſſiſt them in ſtealing ſome " Linen in the Pariſh of Deptford."

It finds alſo, " That Blee did procure and engage, with the Privity of " the Defendants, the ſaid Kelly and Ellis to ſteal the ſaid Linen; but " that he did not acquaint them of any Intentions to rob Salmon."

* 4 and 5 Phil. and Mar. c. 4. which ſays, Every Perſon that ſhall maliciouſly command, hire, or counſel, any Perſon or Perſons to commit or do any Robbery in or near any Highway in this Realm of England, and be thereof convicted, ſhall not have the Benefit of Clergy.

3 and 4 Will. and Mar. c. 9. That all and every Perſon and Perſons that ſhall comfort, aid, abet, aſſiſt, counſel, hire, or command any Perſon to rob another, ſhall be excluded from the Benefit of the Clergy.

† Theſe Notes were communicated by a Gentleman of the Temple.

It finds alſo, " That the Defendants never had any Converſation with " Ellis and Kelly before the Commitment of the Robbery; but that the " Defendants ſaw them, and ſaid they would do: And if, upon this " Caſe, the Judges ſhall be of Opinion they are ſo, then the Jury find " them ſo, &c."

Mr. HUME CAMPBELL.

I have the Honour to attend your Lordſhips on this very ſolemn Occaſion, as Counſel on the Part of the Crown, againſt the Defendants, M'Daniel, Berry, Egan, and Salmon; and as this is a Caſe which concerns the Lives of four unhappy Subjects, and the public Safety in general, I hope I ſhall be excuſed, if I obſerve a Minuteneſs ſomewhat ſingular before this Aſſembly.

That I may obſerve ſome Degree of Method, I ſhall conſider the Charge againſt the Defendants under two Heads:

I. Whether all or any of them are Acceſſaries before the Fact in the Felony for which Ellis and Kelly have been convicted?

II. If they are, whether they are deprived of their Clergy?

The firſt of theſe includes three Propoſitions:

1. That a Robbery was committed, in which Kelly and Ellis were Principals.
2. That the Principals, which is ſufficient to draw the Acceſſaries to Trial, have been convicted.
3. That ſuch Things have been done by the Defendants, as will make them Aiders, Commanders, and Abettors in the Robbery.

The firſt of theſe is ſufficiently eſtabliſhed by the finding the Record of the Conviction: For wherever a Deed operates by way of Eſtoppel, and the Jury find it prout, your Lordſhips muſt conſider it as an Eſtoppel. In the preſent Caſe the Jury have found the Record prout; and by that it appears, that a Robbery was committed by them on Salmon, one of the Priſoners. The Verdict finds likewiſe, that Salmon agreed at the Bell that Blee ſhould procure Perſons to rob him. It finds too, that Ellis, Kelly, and Blee did felonioufly aſſault, and in the Highway take from the Perſon of Salmon, the Goods mentioned in the Indictment. Upon this Point, nothing in the Verdict appears contrary to the Record of Conviction; and you cannot conſtrue the latter Words of the Verdict, ſo as to deſtroy the firſt *. This appears from the Caſe of Monſon v. Weſt, Moore's Reports 431. (N. B. S. C. in Popham 110.) The Caſe was this: In Aſſize, the Tenant pleaded no Tenant to the Freehold, and ſo no Diſſeizin, niſi les parols entiel volunt, gives the Tenant Title; upon which Verdict there was Judgment for the Demandant, and Error brought and aſſigned, that the Jury did not find the Demandant ſeized, and that the Tenant diſſeized him, as the Cuſtom is, as appears from the Book of Entries, which ſays, that the Aſſize ſhall find Seizin and Diſſeizin; alſo that the Verdict was imperfect, by reaſon of the Niſi, &c. After divers Arguments, the Judgment was affirmed; for finding the Diſſeizin implies Seizin alſo; and the Niſi the Court looked upon as nugatory, becauſe the Verdict is complete before upon the Point on which the Jury were charged, viz. the Seizin and Diſſeizin. Vaughan 77. Rowe v. Huntington.

If a Jury, by their Verdict, ſhall take upon them to collect the Contents of a Deed, and yet by the ſame Verdict find that Deed in hæc Verba, the Court is not to regard the Collection they have made of the Subſtance of the Deed, but the Deed itſelf †.

2. Bulſtrode 56. James v. Harris. Action for Words. The Jury found, that the Defendant ſpoke theſe Words of the Plaintiff, viz. Thou art a Thief, and I will prove thee ſo; but that they were ſpoke in the Abſence of the Plaintiff. Sed per tot Cur. the latter Part of the Verdict ſhall not ſtand, for the Iſſue is the Words, and that they have found. Brooke Tit. Verdict, pl. 96. abridged from 11 H. VI. 42. N. H. brought a Writ of Error againſt A, and aſſigned for Error, that the Wife of the ſaid A, who had obtained a Judgment againſt him upon a Writ of Maintenance, died ſuch a Day at C, pending the Writ and before the Judgment. The Defendant pleaded, that his Wife was ſtill alive at W, &c. The Inqueſt was taken at Bar, and the Wife appeared in Evidence, declaring herſelf to be the ſame Woman who was ſaid to be dead, and was known by others in the Court. The Jury found, that the Wife was dead, as the Plaintiff had aſſigned for Error: And all the Court were aſtoniſhed at this Verdict, which found the Woman dead, when ſhe appeared at the Bar alive; and the Record of the Writ of Maintenance was viewed; and by that it appeared, that at the Day of Niſi Prius in the ſaid Writ of Maintenance, the Wife appeared in her proper Perſon, which Day was four Days after the Day the Verdict finds ſhe died. Cheine.

It is proved by this Record, that the Wife was alive four Days after the Verdict ſays ſhe was dead: It ſeemed to him, that this Verdict is nothing to the Purpoſe, but is a Jeofail, to try a Thing which is contrary to the Record.

Afterwards Cheine aſſembled all the Judges; and their Opinion was, that the Verdict was nothing to the Purpoſe, and is a Jeofail: For a Matter of Record before the Juſtices ſhall not be put in Averment, but ſhall be tried by the Record itſelf; and though the Verdict has found contrary to that which is proved by the Record, it is nothing to the Purpoſe; for the Verdict cannot defeat the Record, nor is it of ſo great Force as the Record: And if the Court had been apprized of the Record before Inqueſt taken, the Inqueſt ought not to have been taken, becauſe of the Record; and ſhe was proved to be alive four Days after ſhe was alledged to be dead: But if the Record had not proved her alive, then the Plaintiff would have been intitled to Judgment.

But in the preſent Caſe, no Contradiction is here found, not even by Implication: For, though it may be ſaid, that here was no Robbery, becauſe Salmon was conſenting, yet in all Robberies there is ſome Degree of Aſſent, and that is to avoid the Injury which is threatened the Perſon robbed. If a Man is felonioufly aſſaulted, and made to ſwear to bring Money to ſuch a Place, and he does it; this is determined to be a Robbery, though done with the Aſſent of the Perſon robbed. And your Lordſhips cannot, without ſhaking the Principles of Law, ſay there is no Robbery committed, when it is found by the Jury that there is.

I apprehend, my Lords, it is a Rule in Law, that Acceſſaries ſhall not be tried till the Guilt of the Principals is eſtabliſhed, and the Reaſon is, to avoid contradictory Verdicts upon the ſame Fact. [Vide Brooke Coron. 117. 40 Aſſ. p. 8. Fitz. Coron. 33.] There would be a Subverſion of all Law, if Acceſſaries, who cannot be tried till the Guilt of the Principals is eſtabliſhed, ſhould upon their Trial be allowed to controvert whether there has been a Robbery or no. I hope, therefore, it is plain that there was a Robbery committed upon Salmon; for as to the putting in Fear, the Common Law did not require it, only required a taking by Violence. It is found, that Salmon was aſſaulted, and he might be put in Fear.

I come now, my Lords, to the ſecond Part of the firſt General Queſtion, viz. That the Principals have been convicted. This is found by the Verdict; it is alſo found, that Blee was one of the Robbers. It may be ſaid, perhaps, that the Defendants were only Acceſſaries to Blee, and he to Kelly and Ellis; whereas they are indicted for being Acceſſaries to Kelly and Ellis. But I apprehend that by the Law, a Man may be acceſſary to one or more. 'Tis found, that the Agreement was, that Kelly and Ellis ſhould commit the Fact, and Blee procure them: Therefore it does not follow, that the Defendants were Acceſſaries to Blee. I admit, that, if the Defendants had been indicted as Acceſſaries to Blee, not to Kelly and Ellis, there might have been ſome Doubt, but now there can be none: For when the Principals are convicted, the Defendants cannot ſay, We were Acceſſaries to Three; but the Queſtion is, Were you not Acceſſaries to Two?

'Tis found, that the original Fact was committed by Kely and Ellis; and, as to the Pretence of ſtealing Linen, that was the Artifice by which theſe poor Lads were to be entrapped; it was not the Fact intended to be committed, nor was it the Fact which was committed: For the Agreement at the Bell was, that Blee ſhould procure two Perſons to rob Salmon, and that he ſhould inform them, he would aſſiſt them in ſtealing ſome Linen in the Pariſh of Deptford.

There are many Caſes in Keyling where theſe Pretences have been rejected, particularly p. 44. where ſome Rogues influenced a Conſtable to break open the Door of a Houſe, and thereupon they entered and rifled it; this was adjudged Burglary; and it was re-determined in 1730, in the Caſe of the King and Cornwell ‡.

I come now to the third and laſt Part of the firſt general Queſtion: Whether all the Defendants, or any of them, have committed ſuch Things as will make them Aiders, Commanders, and Abettors of the Robbery?

Under this Head I intended to inquire,

1. Into the Nature of Acceſſaries before the Fact: And,
2. Whether there is any material Difference in the Caſe of Salmon from any of the reſt?

But as I have already taken up ſo much of your Lordſhips Time, I ſhall leave that which relates to Salmon, to the learned Gentleman who is to ſpeak next.

As to the firſt, the Nature of Acceſſaries:

By the Common Law, the Perſon alone who committed the Fact was deemed the Principal, and thoſe who procured it to be done qualicunque Modo, who contrived it, plotted it, counſelled, and aſſiſted, were Acceſſaries before the Fact; and the Trial was poſterior in reſpect of the Commiſſion, becauſe the Exiſtence of the Crime was to be firſt examined into; for before then it could not be known, whether they had been guilty of a Crime or no. But when the Fact was eſtabliſhed, they proceeded inverſo Ordine, and he that firſt counſelled was laſt tried, as appears from Bracton, B. 3. cap. 19. p. 138. ſect. 4, 5. and p. 139. ſect. 10, 11. where he makes uſe of the Words, Fortia, Præceptum, Auxilium, } Which three Sorts include all Sorts of Perſons who contribute to, or in any wiſe aſſiſt to the Commiſſion of the Fact.

In Sect. 5. he has the particular Form of an Appeal. Staunford, in his Pleas of the Crown, B. 1. c. 45. p. 40, 41. which is an Abridgment of Bracton, ſays, That in an Appeal of Felony all the Principals and Acceſſaries muſt be joined; and there he deſcribes Acceſſaries thus: " Qui venit, vel " tenuit, vel vinxit eum, vel fuit in Auxilio vel Conſilio qualicunque modo, " vel Præcepto vel Mandato, quo magis ipſe C. interfectus fuit." [This is verbatim from Bracton.]

Theſe Words are general, but prove what the Law at that Time was; he was Acceſſary, of whom it might be ſaid, qui fuit in Conſilio; and

* When an Act inflicts a Penalty for a ſecond Offence, the Indictment for the ſecond Offence muſt recite the Record of the firſt Conviction; and upon the Evidence, the Record of the firſt Conviction muſt be proved: But the Matter of the firſt Conviction ſhall never be re-examined, but muſt ſtand for granted. 1. H. H. 686. Burn's Juſtice, in Introduction, p. 27.

† For that Collection derives its Authority from the Deed; and therefore muſt of itſelf fail and come to nothing, when it is oppoſite to the Deed of which it is a Collection. Gilbert's Law of Evidence, p. 98.

‡ This Joſhua Cornwell was Footman to Nicholas Fenwick, Eſq. and in October Seſſions, in Sir Richard Brocas's Mayoralty, 1730, " He, and Thomas Rivers, of St. Botolph Aldgate, were indicted at the Old-Bailey, for burglariouſly breaking the Houſe of the ſaid Nicholas Fenwick, and ſtealing divers Pieces of Plate, to the Value of 85*l.* and " Holland Shirts to the Value of 20*l.* and other Goods, on the 8th of September. The Loſs of the Goods was proved by Mr. Fenwick and others, though no breaking open " the Houſe appeared; but he found Part of his Plate by the Direction of John Girſt, an Accomplice, who ſwore, That after divers Conſultations with Cornwell, one Sunday " Evening, about robbing Mr. Fenwick's Houſe, it was agreed, that he and Rivers ſhould do it on the Tueſday following. Accordingly, Girſt and Rivers came to Mr. Fenwick's Houſe about Two o'Clock in the Morning, and found Cornwell ſtanding in his Shirt, with the Door open, peeping out for them; that they went in, and Cornwell " opened the Door of the Beaufet, and there was a Candle burning in a Silver Candleſtick, and Cornwell took out the Plate, and ſet it on the Carpet on a Table, and then " went and fetched the Napkins and Linen out of a Bureau, and the Lady's laced Head, the Tea-Equipage, and two Silver Caſters; Rivers bundled them up. He and " Rivers carried all to Rivers's Lodgings, and Rivers afterwards pawned them to one Grub, who ſwore he took in fifty-ſix Ounces of the Plate of Rivers." The Fact being plainly proved, the Jury found Rivers Guilty, Death: But as to Cornwell, it being a new Point, the Court directed the Jury to find a Special Verdict.

In December Seſſions following, the Court ordered Joſhua Cornwell to the Bar, and told him, That the opening the Door of his Maſter's Houſe in the Night-time, and letting in two Perſons to rob him (on which the Jury brought in a Special Verdict laſt Seſſions), was referred to the Twelve Judges, who adjudged his Caſe to be Burglary, and he received Sentence of Death.

Rivers was executed at Tyburn, Monday, Nov. 16, 1730; and Joſhua Cornwell was hanged at Tyburn, Wedneſday, Dec. 23, following. He owned, " That by the Perſuaſion of Rivers and Girſt, while in Mr. Fenwick's Service, he conſpired with them to rob his Maſter; which accordingly he did, by opening the Back-door, and letting " them in, and then ſuffering them to take away the Goods mentioned in the Indictment, with many others: But ſaid, he did not hand out the Goods, as Girſt ſwore, " but only ſhewed them where they were; and then Rivers bundled them up, and they carried them off to his Lodgings."

he alone was not an Acceſſary, whom the Jury found to be nullo modo in Conſilio, which is only the Negative. So Fleta, B. 1. c. 23. p. 33, 34. Theſe Days had not arrived at that critical Skill; they thought it was the Participation of Guilt which conſtituted the Crime.

The Story of * Tarquin in Livy is a ſimilar Caſe; and no one can doubt, but that he was Acceſſary before the Fact, though he ſpoke not, though he ſaw not his Son Sextus. There is a like Story of Thraſibulus and Periander of Corinth, related in Herodotus and Ariſtotle.

The Mirror, cap. 1. ſect. 13. page 42. is more particular, and recites nine Kinds of Acceſſaries:

1. Thoſe who command.
2. Thoſe who conceal.
3. Thoſe who allow or conſent.
4. Thoſe who ———
5. Thoſe who aid.
6. Thoſe who are Partners in the Gain.
7. Thoſe who knew it, and did not diſturb it by Defence or Excuſe.
8. Thoſe who received them knowingly.
9. Thoſe who are in the Force.

Thus Coke's Inſtit. 182. in the Comment on the Statute of Weſtminſter, c. 14. Acceſſaries before the Fact are divided into three Branches, Commandment, Force, and Aid.

Præceptum. Under this are underſtood all thoſe that incite, procure, ſet on, or ſtir up any other to do the Fact, and are not preſent when the Fact is done.

Fortia is a Word of Art, and properly ſignifies the furniſhing a Weapon of Force to do the Fact, by Force of which the Fact is committed, and he that furniſheth is not preſent when the Fact is done; and cites Bracton, B. 3. page 139. "Ubi Factum nullum, ibi Fortia nulla, nec Præ-" ceptum nocere debet;" and again, "Vulnus, Fortia, et Præceptum gene-" rant unicum Factum; non eſſet Vulnus forte, ſi non adfuiſſet Fortia; nec " Vulnus, nec Fortia, niſi Præceptum præceſſiſſet." And ſometimes, in a large Senſe, for any that is Acceſſary before the Fact.

Auxilium. Under this Word are to be comprehended all Perſons counſelling, abetting, plotting, aſſenting, conſenting, and encouraging to do the Fact, and are not preſent when the Act is done; for, if preſent, they are Principals. Before the Time of Henry the Fourth, there was no Diſtinction between preſent and not, but only he who ſtruck the Stroke was Principal; the others, who were preſent, were Acceſſaries, Plowden 98 and 100. Fitz. Coron. 33. Brooke Coron. 118. The Word Procure is often uſed by Brooke Coron. 19, 104, 188. Fitz. Coron. 33.

The View of the Common Law was to prevent, if not prevent to puniſh, all thoſe who ſhould ſtir up any one to commit a Felony: And the Law reſpects the Intention.

The Law of England is not a Cobweb, which Offenders may ſlip thro' by being greater Villains than are allowed of by the Laws of other Nations; and I hope this Kind of calm and deliberate Villainy ſhall not eſcape by a Criticiſm.

But it may be ſaid, that the Verdict has not found any Communication by expreſs Words. But this will make no Difference, whether they did it by Blee, or by Letter, or by any Sign; for, by whatever Method it is done, they did it: And, though there were no Words, they ſhall be Acceſſaries.

Suppoſe a Perſon ſhould plot High Treaſon, and employ another to kill the King: Here he is not Principal; but is he not Acceſſary? Certainly he is. It would be very ſingular, after all the Encomiums that have been given to the Common Law of England, if this ſhould not be the Law of the Land, when it is the Law of all the Nations in the World. Julius Clarus, in his Practica Criminalis, B. 5. Q. 89. puts this caſe: If a Meſſenger is employed by A, to convey a Letter to B, which Letter adviſes B to commit a Felony, and the Felony is committed, they are all three to be puniſhed with the ſame Puniſhment. But there is, my Lords, a Caſe of the higheſt Authority, that is, that of Ahab and Naboth, 1 Kings, c. 24. (and very artfully recited it before he mentioned the Authority.) Can any one ſay, that Ahab was not an Acceſſary, though he ſpoke not at all? I need not cite Caſes from Hiſtories of other Nations, when Sir Thomas Overbury's Caſe, I. State Trials, page 331. is ſo applicable to the preſent Caſe. There was only one Principal convicted, though there were ſix Acceſſaries; and five convicted, though the Poiſon paſſed through three or four Hands; and Franklin was executed.

Where then is the Reaſon of the Law, that ſays, this Conſent muſt be in expreſs Words? The Conſent is the Crime, and That the Jury have found; and that that is ſufficient, appears from Plowden 473, 4. Saunders and Archer's Caſe. Where Archer counſelled Saunders, who wanted to get rid of his Wife, to give her Poiſon in a roaſted Apple, which he accordingly did; and the Wife was going to give ſome of it to their Child, whom Saunders was very fond of: Whereupon he endeavoured to diſſuade her from giving it, ſaying, It is not good for Children; but the Wife anſwered, It is better for it than for me, and gave the Child ſome: But the Wife lived, and the Child died. Here Saunders was guilty of Murder, though he intended none to the Child; becauſe his Intention was to murder. But as to Archer, the Queſtion was, Whether he was Acceſſary? And though the Judges in this Caſe were of Opinion that he was not, yet they thought it more proper that he ſhould be delivered by a Pardon than otherwiſe, and accordingly they kept him in Priſon from one Seſſions to another, till he procured a Pardon: And Plowden, the Reporter, ſays, it was his Opinion, that whoever counſels or commands an evil Thing, ſhould be judged acceſſary to all which follows from that evil Action, but not from any diſtinct Thing. If I command one to ſtrike or rob another, and he kills him, I am Acceſſary to the Murder, becauſe it is done in conſequence of my Command. The ſame, if I command one to burn a particular Houſe, and he does it purſuant to my Command; but if he burns another Houſe, this is not in conſequence of my Command.

I come now, my Lords, to the ſecond general Queſtion, which is, Whether the Defendants are deprived of their Clergy? And if the firſt Propoſition is eſtabliſhed, I apprehend they are. This Queſtion depends on the Conſtruction of the Acts of the 4th and 5th of Philip and Mary, cap. 4. and the 3d and 4th of William and Mary, cap. 9.

The 4th and 5th of Philip and Mary is for the due Puniſhment of ſuch as command, counſel, or hire any Perſon to commit any Felony, and deprives them of their Clergy.

The 3d and 4th of William and Mary deprives thoſe of Clergy, who ſhall comfort, aid, abet, aſſiſt, counſel, hire, or command any Perſon to commit Felony.

Theſe Acts conſtitute no new Offence; they follow the Common Law, and are ſuppletory, and ſpeak of an Offence known at Common Law; and I ſubmit it, that if your Lordſhips determine theſe Men to be Acceſſaries before the Fact, unleſs the King interpoſes his Mercy, they muſt be executed. If a Statute ſpeaks of Matters known at Common Law, it muſt, as to that Matter, be conſtrued and extended according to the Common Law. Hobart 98. Coke Lit. 381. 6 Modern 143.

This is no new Caſe; for in a ſimilar Caſe it is determined, that if a Statute is made ſuppletory to the Common Law, and taking away the Clergy, it muſt be conſtrued liberally, Jenkins, 2 Cent. 97. The Statutes 23 H. VIII. and 27 Edw. III. which take away Clergy, are pro bono publico; therefore to be taken by Equity.

But it may be ſaid, that the Words excite, procure, &c. are not in the Acts of Philip and Mary, and William and Mary: But this will make no Difference; for, 1 Anderſon 194. the Words of the Indictment were, excitavit, movit, et procuravit: Reſolved, That the Indictment was good, though the Word counſel was out; for it is not poſſible to excite, move, and procure, without counſelling.

Mr. MADAN, on the ſame Side,

States the Queſtion as Mr. Hume did.

I ſhall take Notice of the Word Aid; and I apprehend, my Lords, that the Defendants will certainly fall within the Senſe of Aiding. In Hale's Pleas of the Crown, page 616. there is a Definition of Acceſſaries, viz. That which makes an Acceſſary before the Fact, is Command, Counſel, Abetment, or Procurement, by one to another, to commit a Felony, when the Commander or Counſellor is abſent at the Time of the Felony committed; for if he be preſent, he is Principal. But in the Caſe of Poiſoning, a Man may be Principal, though abſent, as in Vaux's Caſe, 4 Coke 44, 6. Hale's P. C. If a Man is indicted as Principal, and acquitted, he ſhall not be indicted as Acceſſary before the Fact, Stamford 105. and 2 Edw. III. 150, 282. Fitz. Coron. So that Salmon, it may be ſaid, is no Acceſſary before the Fact (and if he is to be looked upon as a Principal, he will not come under this Indictment), becauſe he was preſent when the Fact was done. This is abſurd; for the Fact could not have been done, if he had not been preſent. Becauſe he was at Deptford when the Fact was committed, therefore not at the Bell when contrived; this is a plain non ſequitur.

I ſhall now conſider,

1. Whether your Lordſhips can conſider it to be a Robbery on Salmon, as the Indictment is for putting in Fear, which could not have happened, if he purpoſely put himſelf in the Way?
2. Whether the Priſoners, as they never ſpoke to Kelly and Ellis, are guilty of being Acceſſaries?
3. Whether, as the Priſoners agreed that Blee ſhould tell Kelly and Ellis that he could aſſiſt them to ſteal Linen, this will alter the caſe, as Blee enticed them to commit one Felony, and they committed another?

1. The Jury have found the Record of the Conviction of Kelly and Ellis prout, and your Lordſhips and the whole World are eſtopped to ſay the contrary, viz. That a Robbery has not been committed: For to ſay that Salmon was not robbed, is to ſay againſt that Record, which the Jury have found to be true. The Record lies before your Lordſhips, as Part of the Special Verdict, and Records cannot be contradicted, Coke Lit. 117. b. Id. 260.

In Lord Lovat's Caſe, the Crown called Mr. Murray as Evidence againſt him: Lord Lovat objected to him, as he ſtood attainted of High Treaſon: It was there ſaid, he had been proceeded againſt in the King's Bench for not ſurrendering within the Time limited. Mr. Murray pleaded, he did ſurrender himſelf within the Time limited by the Act of Attainder; and the Attorney-General confeſſed his Plea to be true: How did he prove this? By the Record of the Admiſſion of his Plea to be true. And if your Lordſhips determine this to be no Robbery, it is not only overturning the original Conviction of Kelly and Ellis, but alſo the Finding of the preſent Jury.

The Matter now to be conſidered is not, whether a Robbery was committed by Kelly and Ellis, but whether the Priſoners are guilty of counſelling them to do it. The Parts of the finding of the Jury, ſubſequent to the finding of the Record, are now to be looked upon, as upon private Knowledge, Plowden 83. b. The Jury cannot find the Record in one Part, and contradict it in another.

Whoever counſels a Felony or Robbery to be done, is Acceſſary before the Fact: The Defendants counſelled, &c. ergo Acceſſaries before the Fact. That they did counſel, is found in the Special Verdict; and the third Propoſition follows from the Premiſſes.

But it is ſaid, that the Defendants counſelled Blee to counſel Kelly and Ellis.

1. What is Counſelling, within the Meaning of the Statutes? Procuring, Moving, are only Species of Counſelling, and ſhall be good in an Indictment, though the Word Counſelling is left out, 1 Anderſon 194. And I inſiſt, that by the Word Counſel, is not meant Counſelling by Word of Mouth only, though the ſecond Count of the Indictment does not conclude with a contra Formam Statuti; but having the Word Counſel in it, it will be ſufficient, 1 H. P. C. 525. A Man may be acquitted

acquitted upon an Indictment which concludes contra Formam Statuti, and found guilty of simple Felony at Common Law.

Kelly and Ellis were seen and approved of by all the Prisoners. As far as I can find, this Indictment is the same as all Indictments for Accessaries. The Gist of the Indictment is the Counselling.

A General Malice is transferable to any one a Man meets with; as Particular Malice to one Person may be transferable to another: As in Saunders's Case, Plowden 473. The Indictment is, ea intentione felonicè præbuit, and reached to one not intended; so ea intentione felonicè percussit, will reach one who did not strike at all; for the Stroke of one extends to all that were present and abetting, Plowden 98.

2. If the Defendants had never seen Ellis and Kelly, the general Command to Blee, to procure two Persons to rob, would, by Operation of Law, operate against the Defendants, as soon as Ellis and Kelly were procured.

Counsel even against one not in rerum natura, if when the Person is in being, the Counsel is followed, it will make the Counsellor accessary, Dyer 186. a. Blee did nothing, said nothing, without the Advice and Consent of all the Prisoners.

3. Blee was directed to tell Kelly and Ellis, that he could help them to steal some Linen at Deptford, which he did; but told them nothing of the robbing Salmon.

I admit, if I counsel one to commit one Species of Felony, and he commits another, I am not accessary, H. P. C. 616. So in H. P. C. 618. If a Man, after having counselled another to commit Murder, and, before the Fact is done, he repents, and forbids and countermands it, he is not accessary if the Murder is committed. So in the present Case, if the Defendants intended that Kelly and Ellis should only steal Linen, and they met with Salmon by Chance and robbed him, the Defendants would not be accessary to that Robbery: But it appears by the Record to the contrary; their Intention was to get the Rewards offered by Act of Parliament and the Inhabitants of Deptford; and, from the Nature of the Action, Blee could not tell them the Design, for it would have been absurd to have told them; for how could Blee know Salmon would be there? This must have struck them upon his first mentioning it.

A Robbery was counselled, a Robbery was committed, and a Robbery was committed as counselled.

But if all these Arguments should fail, the Argument ab inconvenienti is often allowed to be of great Weight, and it would deserve in no Case more than the present. Had I been asked my Opinion upon such a Case as this, I should not have hesitated in my Opinion: But if, after your Lordships Determination to the contrary, I should have the same Case put to me; I should tell my Client, That provided he saw not, nor spoke not to him that committed the Murder, he might ride in his Coach, and laugh at his Friends, while they went to be hanged. The Defendants cannot be said to be accessary to an Accessary; for that is, by Construction of Law, one who receives another before the Fact, knowing him to be an Accessary.

But it may be said, after all, that I have produced no Case in Point; I must confess, after a long and diligent Search, I cannot find one: But there will be one; there will be a Report of this Case, and the King and M'Daniel and others will be a Case in Point hereafter.

Trinity Vacation, 28 Geo. II.

July 28, 1755.

The King against M'Daniel and others.

The Judges met again at Serjeant's-Inn Hall, to hear the Arguments in Favour of the Defendants.

Mr. Hume begged Leave to mention a Case which he had met with since his Argument, which seemed to be applicable to the present: That was the Case of William Belchier, who was tried at the Old-Bailey, in the Mayoralty of Robert Alsop, Esq; in June Sessions 1752. No 345. Page 209. and recited the Case at large from the Sessions-Paper, viz.

" William Belchier was indicted, for that he, on the King's Highway, on " William Norton did make an Assault, putting him in corporal Fear and " Danger of his Life, and taking from his Person five Shillings, June 3.

" William Norton. The Chaise to the Devizes having been robbed two " or three Times, as I was informed, I was desired to go in it, to see if " I could take the Thief, which I did on the 3d of June, about half " an Hour after One in the Morning. I got into the Post-Chaise: The " Post-Boy told me, the Place where he had been stopped was near the " Half-Way House, between Knightsbridge and Kensington. As we came " near the House, the Prisoner came to us on Foot, and said, Driver, " stop: He held a Pistol Tinder-Box to the Chaise, and said, Your " Money directly, you must not stay, this Minute your Money. (He pro- " duced the Tinder-Box). I said, Don't frighten us; I have but a " Trifle, you shall have it. Then I said to the Gentlemen, (there " were three in the Chaise) Give your Money, &c. I took out a Pistol " from my Coat Pocket, and from my Breeches Pocket a five-shilling " Piece, and a Dollar, and held the Pistol concealed in one Hand, and " the Money in the other. I held the Money pretty hard: He said, " Put it in my Hat. I let him take the five-shilling Piece out of my " Hand: As soon as he had taken it, I snapped my Pistol at him; it " did not go off: He staggered back, and held up his Hands, and said, " O Lord! O Lord! I jumped out of the Chaise; he ran away, and " I after him, about six or seven hundred Yards; and there took him. " I hit him a Blow on his Back; he begged for Mercy on his Knees. I " took his Neck-Cloth off, and tied his Hands with it, and brought him " back to the Chaise: Then I told the Gentlemen in the Chaise, That " was the Errand I came upon, and wished them a good Journey; and " brought the Prisoner to London.

" Q. Did you lose Sight of him in the Pursuit?

" Norton. No, I did not, my Lord; it was a very clear Morning.

" Q. from the Prisoner. Ask him how he lives?

" Norton to the Q. I keep a Shop in Wych-Street, and sometimes I " take a Thief.

" William Messenger. I drove the Post-Chaise. I took Mr. Norton in " the Chaise at Hyde-Park Corner; and told him, if we did not meet the " Highwayman between Knightsbridge and Kensington, we should not meet " him at all. I saw him coming, and said, He is coming, get the Pistol " ready. He came up to the Chaise, and said, Your Money, make Haste, " your Money. I heard the Pistol snap. The Prisoner said, O Lord! " and ran away, and Norton after him, and took him.

" Q. Did you ever lose Sight of him in the Pursuit?

" Messenger. I did, for a little Time: The Pursuit was not above " three Minutes. I heard the Prisoner cry, O Lord! the Moment he " was taken.

" Prisoner's Defence.

" I leave it to your Lordship and the honourable Court. Guilty, " Death."

Mr. Serjeant Davy.

I have the Honour of attending your Lordships as Counsel for the Prisoners; and I must own, that I could not have been prevailed upon to have been Counsel for such a Sett of Rogues, had I not been appointed by your Lordships.

I shall consider the Question under two general Propositions:

I. Whether, upon the State of the Verdict, it does appear, that any Robbery was committed by Ellis and Kelly?

II. If there was a Robbery committed by them, Whether they are Accessaries in such a Manner as to be liable to any Judgment against them?

I shall first take Notice of the Objections which have been raised against the Defendants. And I find it is chiefly insisted on, That the Jury having found the Record prout, is sufficient Proof that there was a Robbery; and that the Defendants are thereby estopped to say the contrary.

I admit, that the Rules laid down relating to Estoppels shall prevail at Law. But it is as to the Extent of those Rules which I contend for; and I insist that they do not extend to Parties that are not Privies to the Record. The Reason of the Rules of Law in this Case, is, that there may be an End of Strife; for the Witness to the Record might be dead; and therefore Records shall bind Parties and Privies, but shall not bind Strangers. There is another Reason: Parties to the Record may have an Attaint for a false Verdict, or the modern Method of moving for a new Trial, but Strangers cannot.

And this appears from Lock and Norbonne, 3 Modern 141. Trial at Bar in Ejectment for Lands in Wiltshire. The Case was this:

" Mary Philpot, in 1678, made a Settlement, by Lease and Release, to " herself for Life, then to Trustees to support the contingent Remain- " ders; then to her first, second, and third Sons in Tail Male, &c. " then to Thomas Arundel in Tail Male, &c. It was objected at the " Trial, that she had no Power to make such a Settlement; because, " in the Year 1676, her Husband had settled the Lands in Question " upon her for Life, and upon the Issue of his Body, &c. and for Want " of such Issue, then upon George Philpot in Tail Male, with several " Remainders over, Remainder to Mary Philpot in Fee; proviso that, " upon a Tender of a Guinea to George Philpot by the said Mary, the " Limitations as to him should be void. George Philpot having after- " wards made a Lease of this Land to try the Title, the Trustees brought " an Ejectment; but because the Tender of a Guinea could not be " proved, there was a Verdict for the Defendant."

And now Mr. Philpot would have given this Verdict in Evidence at this Trial, but was not suffered by the Court; for if one Man hath a Title to several Lands, and if he should bring Ejectments against several Defendants, and recover against one, he shall not give that Verdict in Evidence against the rest: because the Party, against whom the Verdict was had, may be relieved against it if it is not good, but the rest cannot, though they claim under the same Title, and all make the same Defence.

So if two Tenants will defend a Title in Ejectment, and a Verdict be had against one, it shall not be read against the other, unless by Rule of Court.

But if an Ancestor hath a Verdict, the Heir may give it in Evidence, because he is privy to it; for he who produceth a Verdict must be either Party or Privy to it; and it shall never be received against different Persons, if it doth not appear that they are united in Interest.

Therefore a Verdict against A shall never be read against B; for it may happen that one did not make a good Defence, which the other may do.

If upon the Writ of contra formam collationis a Recovery is had against the Abbot, and a scire facias issue against the Terre-Tenant, he is not concluded by any Trial had against the Abbot, 2 Inst. 488. [N. B. I have looked into the Authorities quoted, but cannot find any thing in Point.]

If this Doctrine which the Gentlemen have laid down relating to Estoppels, and that Accessaries upon their Trial cannot controvert the Robbery, should be admitted,

It would,

1. Encounter the known Principles of natural Justice.
2. Be contrary to the Principles of Law, and the Practice in Trials.
3. Contrary to Authorities.

Suppose A is indicted and convicted of the Murder of B, and C is afterwards tried as Accessary to A, and upon the Trial the Prosecutor brings the Record of the Conviction of A, to prove the Murder: C admits that he did give such Counsel, but that it was never executed, for B is still alive, and offers to bring Proof of it: No, say the Gentlemen, here is a Record, which says he was murdered, and Records cannot be contradicted; therefore C must be hanged. If this is the Law of England, it is contrary to the Law of God. But it may be said, that in such a Case the Crown would pardon: But that is a Favour. Mercy is the King's Privilege, and the brightest Diadem he wears; Justice is the peculiar Attribute of the Law.

The same Doctrine with that I have laid down holds with those who are to bring a Writ of Error; for none can bring a Writ of Error, but, 1. Parties; 2. Privies; 3. Those who may receive any Advantage from the Reversal of the Judgment: But it is contrary to the Rules of Law, to assign Error contrary to what appears upon the Face of the Record, 1 Rolle's Abridgement, 747, 1, 2, 3, 4. Dyer 90. 5 Coke 39. b. Godbolt 377. 1 Leon. 261.

The great object of the Law is to protect the Innocent; the Punishment of the Guilty is only so far observed, as it tends to protect the Innocent; every thing, therefore, which tends to destroy the Innocent, is against Law. So Records are often the Effects of Perjury; and those who are guilty of Perjury may be tried, notwithstanding the Record is not reversed. As for Instance, A is indicted for assaulting B. To prove the Assault, J. S. is called as a Witness, and he swears he saw it: Afterwards B indicts J. S. for Perjury, which Indictment sets forth, that there was such an Indictment found against A, &c. and that he was found guilty upon it, &c. Upon this Trial the first Thing produced is the Record of A's Indictment, which sets forth, that A was indicted and found guilty. It would be impossible therefore, according to the Doctrine the Gentlemen have laid down, that J. S. could be tried; for here is a Record which says, that A was convicted.—So in Canning's Case, (p. 223.) a Case which has lately happened, and has made a great deal of Noise; I was concerned in it; and upon her Trial, the Record of the Conviction of Mary Squires was produced, and it remains still, and Squires is subject to all the Disadvantages attending it.

'Tis said, that Records cannot be contradicted; but they often are, as in the Case put. A Record is no Evidence in some Cases; as suppose the above Case, and afterwards B brings an Action for the same Assault against A, who has been already indicted and convicted, the Record is no Evidence. I speak this with great Deference to your Lordships: I think it is not Evidence, but I am sure it is not conclusive.

The Reason why Accessaries cannot be tried till the Principal is convicted, is this: The Principal best knows, whether he is guilty or no; and therefore is best able to make his Defence.

I must own, the Case cited from Brooke, Tit. Verdict, pl. 96. by Mr. Hume, has an ugly Aspect; but upon looking into the Year-Book from whence it is abridged, I find it will answer no Purpose at all; and as it is a Case somewhat curious, I beg Leave to mention it (and then recited the Case, quod vide).

It was insisted, That it was sufficient to say that the Principal was convicted, not that the Principal Felony was convicted: The Reason is, because, upon the Face of the Record, the Conviction is a presumptive Proof of it, and the Accessary may endeavour to acquit himself either by denying the Counsel or the Principal Felony.

I apprehend it is a Maxim, That in all Special Verdicts, the Judges will only judge of what the Jury find in their Verdict, and so it was resolved in 2 Siderfin 8. Street v. Roberts.

The Jury finding the Record, is no Proof that it is true. Their finding is of the Fact of the Existence of the Record: And your Lordships can only from thence judge that the Principals were convicted, sufficient to bring the Accessaries to their Trial. The Question then is, Whether this Special Verdict finds, that any Felony was committed by Kelly and Ellis?

There are some Words in the Verdict which I consider as only descriptive, and chuse to lay out of it: Feloniously robbed. The Office of the Jury is to find the Fact, and leave the Law to the Judgment of the Court. In 9 Co. 69. Mackally's Case, Exception was taken, because it was not found by the Verdict that the said Mackally felonicè percussit, but percussit only; sed non allocatur, for the Reason above. If then the omitting the Word felonicè will not hinder the Fact from being a Felony, the putting it in will not make it a Felony. Having stripped the Verdict of these unnecessary Words, which the Jury had no Right to put in, I shall consider the Nature of a Robbery; and here, in order to constitute a Robbery, two Things are necessary:

1. Violence, and putting in Fear.
2. A taking against the Will.

If either of these are wanting, there is no Robbery. 3 Inst. 68. Fear constitutes the Difference between a Robber and a Cut-purse.

2. The taking against the Will; for Volenti non fit injuria. So Bracton, b. 3. fol. 150. b. Furtum est contrectatio rei alienæ fraudulenta, cum animo furandi, invito illo domino, cujus res illa fuerit *.

Let a Man, when he parts with his Money to a Robber, be asked, If he gives it willingly? No; he chuses the lesser Evil to avoid the greater, and had rather suffer the Loss of his Money than Death.

As to the Case of swearing to put Money, &c. the Answer to that is given in the Book. 'Tis the Fear and the Oath continuing, which make it a Robbery: Suppose a Man did not think the Oath obligatory, and had no Fear upon him, then I apprehend, my Lords, it would be no Robbery.

But suppose that Salmon was put in Fear, the Defendants must be acquitted. As to Salmon, the Jury are silent as to his being afraid: They have in Fact found that he was not afraid, because they have found the Fact was done according to his Agreement. But the putting in Fear ought to be found positively, or to appear from the Words of the Verdict.

'Tis insisted by the Gentlemen on the other Side, that this was a Felony to which Salmon was Accessary before the Fact; they might have gone a little further, and made him Principal, as aiding that Counsel which he had given. If Principal, he might have been indicted as Principal: Where there are many Principals, each is a separate Offence, and each may be separately indicted: If so, Salmon might be indicted alone (and then recited Part of the Indictment as it would stand against him, to shew the Absurdity of it).

Whether Salmon consented or not to Blee, he certainly did not to Kelly and Ellis; their Intent was to rob a Man against his Will, and if Salmon did consent to be robbed, it could be no Robbery.

Mr. Hume insisted, that nothing appeared in the Verdict contrary to the Record of Conviction. But there certainly is, for it first finds a Robbery, and afterwards finds such Circumstances as make it impossible there should be a Robbery. And Hobart 53. Foster and Jackson, Wherever a Jury begin with a Direct and end with a Special Matter, which is either contrary to their Verdict or to Law, the Special Matter shall over-rule the General.

1 Inst. 227. a. and 4 Co. 53. Rawlin's Case. The Court held, that the Jury being sworn ad veritatem dicendam, must leave the Matter of Law to the Court; and if the Jury find an Estoppel, the Court will not regard it, but will judge upon the Special Matter.

Every Fact found by the Jury ought to be attended to, your Lordships see, even in Disputes relating to Property; God forbid, that in Favour of Life any should be neglected.

If the Conviction of Ellis and Kelly be any Proof of a Robbery, then the Jury have found the Record one Way, and the Fact another.

I come now to the second Question; which is, Whether, supposing a Robbery to have been committed, the Defendants are Accessaries in such a Manner as to be liable to any Judgment against them?

If Blee was no Accessary, the Defendants cannot. In Reality this was a Felony committed by Ellis and Kelly spontaneously, and without any Accessary at all. In order to make this a Robbery by Procurement, these three Things are necessary to be proved:

1. That this was the very Robbery which Blee undertook to procure Kelly and Ellis to commit.
2.

3. Whether the Defendants are within the Statutes of Philip and Mary.

The Question is, whether Blee procured Kelly and Ellis to commit this Robbery? And here I must observe, that the Word Procure is the most general of all those applied to Accessaries: But it is plain, he did not procure them to commit this Robbery, but to steal Linen; and whatever was intended by Blee, cannot fall under Consideration.

There is a Distinction between procuring an Act to be done, and procuring the Persons to commit it. As for Instance, If I am walking in the Street, and designedly let my Handkerchief hang out of my Pocket, in order that it may induce Somebody to pick it; here I could not be said to procure the Persons to commit this Felony, but the Felony to be committed. The Act intended to be committed must be communicated to the Parties who are to commit it. And whether the Defendants intended that Kelly and Ellis should steal Linen or no, they were originally acted by such a Disposition, and this Robbery was committed without any previous Intention of Kelly and Ellis, and therefore there can be no Accessaries; as in Manslaughter there are no Accessaries before, because the Nature of it implies that it was done without Premeditation or Design: Therefore if, upon an Indictment for Murder, the Principal is convicted of Manslaughter, the Accessary is ipso facto discharged, Moore 461. Goose's Case. 4 Co. 44. 1 Hale's P. C. 437.

But let us consider, whether the Defendants are within the Statutes of Philip and Mary.

The Word Procure is put into the second Count; and if the Defendants are at all guilty, they are guilty of all.

The Word Procure, which is not in the Statutes, is added to some Words which are in the Statutes, and if the Defendants merely procured, no Judgment can be given against them upon this Indictment: For, if they procured without counselling, they will not come within the Statute.

[Judge Foster observed, That the Word Procure was in all the Precedents of Indictments.]

Mr. Serj. Davy. I admit the Case which was laid down relating to the Construction of Statutes, which being made for the public Good, should be construed for the public Good.

But Statutes now shall have a very particular Construction.

It is going a great Way to extend Penal Statutes to operate capitally.

Greville's Case, 1 Anderson 194. is different from this; the Words there were Excited, Moved, and Procured; and the Judgment was, that it included Counsel. Suppose Excited and Moved had been out, the Court would not have given the same Opinion on the Word Procure. Counselling is but one Species of Procuring, which is the Genus; and therefore, by this Way of Reasoning, he that is guilty of the Species is guilty of the Genus.

There are many Ways of Counselling without Procuring; Blee's Procuring cannot be extended to mean the Defendant's Procuring.

It will be proper to review the Facts as they stand to each Count.

The general Question is, Who moved? The Defendants did not; for they had no Communication with either Kelly or Ellis, by any Way whatsoever. If Kelly and Ellis had been asked, By whose Advice are you doing this Felony? the Answer would have been, By Blee, not by the Defendants. Blee advises them to steal Linen, and the Defendants advised Blee to be an Accessary.

I admit all Mr. Hume's Doctrine relating to Signs, Messages, &c. The Meaning of the Counsellor must be conveyed to the Perpetrator of the Fact, and the Consent must be in consequence of the Advice, in order to make him a Commander, Adviser, and Counsellor: So that Tarquin's Case does not come up to this Case. The Slave was the passive Instrument to convey Tarquin's Mind; but here Blee gave Blee's Advice. Who did procure? The Answer is, Blee. If a Stranger had advised Tarquin, would he have been Accessary to Sextus? There is a Difference between advising a Thing to be done, and procuring it to be done. The Words of the Statute are applied to advising any Person to commit a Felony, not any Felony to be committed. The Defendants counselled, before any Persons were fixed upon.

The Act of Forgery is, Whoever shall forge, or procure to be forged, or assist [in procuring] to be forged; if procured the Forgery, he is a Principal; if procured a Person to commit the Forgery, an Accessary.

Jenkins only means the Receiver.

If all the intermediate Persons are to be considered as Accessaries, then it will be proper to consider, whether the Defendants did advise any Felony to be committed. The Agreement was, that they should rob Salmon, who agreed that it should be done. Salmon could not be robbed by his own Consent. This does not refer to the Record: But if there was a Robbery, the Felony exceeds the Agreement, for no Felony was agreed to be done; only the Appearance of a Felony, which those who did it should apprehend was a Felony; and that they might avail themselves of that Appearance, either the Goods taken from Salmon were taken againſt his Will, or not.

If againſt his Will, it was different from the Agreement, which was, that he ſhould part with them willingly: If not againſt his Will, there could be no Felony. I admit that Salmon might be in Fear, if they had taken more than he agreed to part with; but eo inſtante that his Will departed from him, there was a Departure from the Agreement; this extends to all the Defendants.

As to the Caſe of Ahab and Jezebel, which my learned Friend cited, however guilty they may have been deemed, they are certainly not Acceſſaries according to the Law of England; according to which Law the Defendants are to be tried.

Mr. Aston, on the ſame Side.

I alſo have the Honour of being appointed by your Lordſhips as Counſel for the Defendants; and here I cannot but obſerve, how tender the Law is in Favour of the worſt of Men, that it allows them to make uſe of Subtilties before ſuch an auguſt Aſſembly.

Before I conſider the Argument made uſe of by the Gentlemen on the other Side, I ſhall juſt mention an Objection upon the Face of the Indictment.---By the Common Law, an Acceſſary in one County could not be tried in another: But by 2 Edw. VI. c. 24. Acceſſaries may be tried in that County where the Offence of Acceſſary was committed, 9 Co. 118. a. It is not ſet forth in the Indictment, that the Fact was committed in Kent, only that the Party was indicted there; and the Defendants are to be tried by this Jury, not by the Jury of Ellis and Kelly.

I ſhall conſider three Things:

Firſt, it is ſaid, That the Defendants muſt be Acceſſaries to the Offence which was committed. In Anſwer to which,

1. This Verdict does not find any Felony or Robbery, which can make the Defendants Acceſſaries to any Felony or Robbery charged in the Indictment.
2. The Defendants were not eſtopped from controverting the Fact of the Robbery.
3. Suppoſing the Felony and Robbery ſufficiently found, it is not ſufficiently found to make the Defendants Acceſſaries.

The Aiding and Abetting is a Matter of Fact, which this Jury ought to find, which they do not here find.

I admit that the Jury have properly found the Record prout. The Jury muſt proceed to ſtate the Facts, which make the Defendants Acceſſaries, and the Finding muſt be of the actual Felony laid in the Indictment. There is no Time found when Kelly and Ellis committed the Robbery on Salmon; it may be after the Robbery on which they were convicted. Pulton, de Pace 128. defines a Robbery to be the felonious taking away any Thing from the Perſon of another againſt his Will. Fitz. Coron. 115.

The Caſe of the King and Belchier, which Mr. Hume mentioned, was put out of Doubt by the Jury finding him Guilty; therefore he was put in Fear, which is eſſential to conſtitute it a Robbery, as appears 1 Hawkins 96, 97. Hale P. C. 534. Dyer 224. Keyling 70. 3 Inſt. 68. Pulton 128. By the Omiſſion, the Nature of the Offence is varied; it muſt be expreſsly found that he was put in Fear, otherwiſe it will be no Robbery.

As to the Caſe of ſwearing to put Money, Pulton 128. ſect. 28. gives the Reaſon why it is deemed a Robbery; becauſe (ſays he) it is againſt his Will.

The Verdict cannot be helped by any Intendment, 2 Hawkins 47, 9. King and Plummer. Keyling 111. But it is ſaid, that the Jury having found the Record, it operates by Way of Eſtoppel. But the Record found, and the Fact found, may ſtand conſiſtent with the ſubtle Doctrine of Eſtoppels. Therefore I will lay all that out of the Queſtion; for nothing can be implied in this Caſe. The Jury have found Facts which muſt ſpeak for themſelves: The Jury have only found the Record. The Record of Conviction is not falſified; but the Charge upon the Fact is not ſufficiently proved, and the Acceſſary has a Right to controvert the Robbery; and there are Inſtances where Acceſſaries have been executed before the Conviction of the Principal, and upon the Principal's coming Home, found Innocent, 9 Co. 119. b. Pulton 140, 1. gives the Reaſon, becauſe the Party has waived that Privilege the Law gives him. Acceſſaries may be indicted with the Principal, and in the ſame Indictment; and then the Jury is firſt aſked, Whether the Principal is guilty or no? But they may be indicted ſeparate; and Plowden 100. ſays, might have ſeparate Venires.

The Conviction of the Principal is only to ſubſtantiate and warrant the Court to proceed to the Trial of the Acceſſary: In the preſent Caſe, this Indictment ſtating this Conviction is no more than a Mode neceſſary to found this Trial: It proves no Guilt, only is intended to try Guilt. There muſt be Proof of the Procurement of the Act, and of the doing the Act in conſequence of that Procurement.

The Defendants, in general, may give every Thing in Evidence which will ſhew them to be not guilty of the Charge: What then is ſo proper as to ſhew there was no Felony committed, and therefore not guilty of being Acceſſaries?

Wherever a Plaintiff brings an Action to defeat a Record, he is not eſtopped by the Record. Whenever a Record is made uſe of to found a Charge, the Defendant may make uſe of, and give Evidence againſt it. 6 Mod. 216. Cro. Car. 531.

Verdicts may be defeated in their Operation.

Suppoſing this Felony is ſufficiently found, yet it is not found ſo as to make the Defendants Acceſſaries. This will depend on the Nature of Acceſſaries, and what Privity there muſt be between the Principal and Acceſſary, and how far it is neceſſary the Act agreed to be done ſhould be done. In order to make an Acceſſary before the Fact, the Aſſent muſt be expreſs and ſhewn, Cro. Eliz. 540. pl. 4.

All the Caſes of Tarquin carry the Communication home to the Principal. And ſo in Saunders and Archer's Caſe, Plowden 475. the Judges ſaid, that Archer was not guilty of being acceſſary to the Death of the Child, as there was no Communication by Words between him and Saunders concerning the Child, only concerning the Wife.

And that the Felony intended muſt be communicated, appears further from Pepham 143.

Suppoſe a Man ſends a Letter to A, counſelling him to kill B; but A does it before he receives the Letter; here there is no Communication, and ſo he is not guilty of being Acceſſary.

2. The Act committed muſt be the ſame as was agreed to be done, or in conſequence of that Agreement, as in Saunders's Caſe, Plowden 475: There was no Perſuaſion to induce Ellis and Kelly to commit the Robbery on Salmon; for the Verdict ſays, they were never told of that being the Robbery intended.

The Procurement then was only to commit Larceny; and it was contingent, whether Grand or Petit Larceny; for it depended on the Value of the Goods they took. As to what Mr. Hume ſaid, that ſtealing Linen was the Artifice by which Ellis and Kelly were to be entrapped; it is not found, that it was the Artifice.

But laſtly, There is a Caſe founded on very great Authority, 2 Lord Raymond 1574; 1586. the King againſt Huggins, (Vide State Trials, Vol. IX.) where it is ſaid; that the Aiding and Abetting is a Matter of Fact, and muſt be found by the Jury, and not left to the Court: Same Caſe, 2 Strange 885, 6. The Court there ſaid, We are to determine upon Facts, not upon the Evidence of Facts: It muſt be expreſsly found that they have aided and abetted.

When a Perſon is ouſted of Clergy by Act of Parliament, two Things are neceſſary:

1. That the Indictment preciſely brings the Party within the Statute; otherwiſe, though poſſibly the Fact itſelf may be within the Statute, and it may ſo appear upon the Evidence; yet, if it be not alledged in the Indictment, the Party, the Convict, ſhall have his Clergy.
2. If the Fact laid in the Indictment does come within the Statute, yet, if upon the Evidence, though it is a Felony, it appears not to be ſo qualified as laid in the Indictment, the Jury ought to find him guilty of the Felony only, but not in the Manner laid in the Indictment; as for Inſtance, Guilty of the Felony, but not of the Robbery; and thereupon the Priſoner ſhall have his Clergy, 2 Hale P. C. 236.

Mr. Hume's Reply.

'Tis now, my Lords, incumbent upon me, in this Caſe, of ſo great Importance to the Defendants, the Law, and the Public, to offer ſomething to your Lordſhips by Way of Reply. I ſhall beg Leave, therefore, firſt of all, to lay two Objections, which were ſtarted by Mr. Aſton, out of the Caſe:

1. To the Form of the Indictment, becauſe the Queſtion now is not in Arreſt of Judgment.
2. The laſt Objections from the Caſe of the King and Plummer, and the King and Huggins.

I admit that the Jury are to find Facts. The Jury find that they Aided; this is finding that they were Acceſſaries, and ſo there was no Need of a Special Verdict. The Special Verdict is only, that the Judges may determine, whether what they have found will make them Acceſſaries or no.

I ſhall firſt conſider what is to be the Effect of the Record of Conviction. It may have two:

1. It may be deciſive and concluſive, in reſpect to all the Defendants, of the principal Felony exiſting, and ſaid to be committed.
2. It may be Evidence, on the Part of the Crown, of the Fact, ſufficient to prove the Fact, &c. thereby rendering it neceſſary for the Defendants to prove the contrary.

I lay out of the Caſe all that was ſaid of the Caſes where Records are no Evidence at all; for here the Record is Evidence legal and neceſſary.

Mr. Aſton ſeemed to contend, that the Record might be Evidence, but ſuch as to throw the onus probandi on the Defendants.

1. As to the Principal's being convicted firſt; all the Indictments are in the preſent Form.

The Defendants muſt give that in Evidence, according to the Nature of Evidence, and ſuch as the Law will admit. If the Record of the Conviction is ſufficient to ſupport the Charge, the Defendants cannot give parol Evidence againſt it.

2. Whether it does not operate on the Part of the Crown, unleſs any Evidence be given againſt it.

If the Defendants had given any Evidence, and the Jury had been of Opinion, that it appeared that there was no Robbery, the Judges would have directed a General Verdict. The Defendants ought to ſhew, that there was no Robbery committed in this Verdict. Let us ſee then, whether or no there is a Robbery found. It is found, that the Goods were taken by Aſſault, and feloniouſly: 'Tis not found, that he conſented to deliver the Goods. How can Salmon's Agreement at the Bell be taken to go to an after-time in the High Road, that he did aſſent to be robbed? This would be contradictory to the Verdict.

Your Lordſhips are to take the Robbery at the Time of the Commitment of it in the High-way, and to conſider whether it is found, that Salmon was robbed voluntarily, ſuppoſing there was a Robbery committed by them. All the Defendants ſaw Kelly and Ellis, but Salmon did not. If Salmon was put in Fear, ſays the learned Serjeant, it was not what he agreed to; for the Agreement was, that he ſhould be robbed voluntarily. Now the Fact was, that not knowing the Perſons who were to rob him, upon being uſed a little roughly by them, he trembled, and ſaid, Take what I have got, Gentlemen; don't uſe me ill. Vide Trial, p. 421.

The Caſes cited by the Serjeant and Mr. Aſton prove, that Salmon could not be a Principal to a Robbery upon himſelf; yet he may be an Acceſſary to that Robbery which was plotted at the Bell.

If Kelly and Ellis had ſtolen the Linen, the Defendants would not have been Acceſſaries, becauſe that was not the Felony plotted.

There may be Acceſſaries without Communication by Privity, Aſſent, and Conſent: Are theſe Defendants Acceſſaries, Auxilio, vel Præcepto, vel Mandato? And though Delegatus non poteſt delegare, yet, qui facit per alium, facit per ſe. And ſo all the Links of this Chain are found: The whole Chain hangs together, and your Lordſhips cannot ſeparate it. If Plotting makes a Man Acceſſary, did they not plot? If Conſenting is neceſſary, did they not conſent?

In December 1755, at the Old-Baily Seſſions, Juſtice Foſter pronounced the Judgment of the Court in the Caſe between the King and M'Daniel and others, to the Effect following:

THE Indictment chargeth, that at the General Gaol-delivery held at Maidſtone in the County of Kent, on the 13th of Auguſt, in the twenty-eighth eighth Year of the King, Peter Kelly and John Ellis were by due Courſe of Law convicted of a Felony and Robbery committed by them in the King's Highway in the Pariſh of St. Paul, Deptford, in the County of Kent, upon the Perſon of James Salmon, one of the Priſoners at the Bar; and that the Priſoners Stephen M'Daniel, John Berry, James Egan, and James Salmon, before the ſaid Robbery, did, in the Pariſh of St. Andrew, Holbourn, in this City, feloniouſly and maliciouſly Comfort, Aid, Aſſiſt, Abet, Counſel, Hire, and Command the ſaid Peter Kelly and John Ellis to commit the ſaid Felony and Robbery.

On this Indictment the Priſoners have been tried, and the Jury have found a Special Verdict to this Effect:

"That Kelly and Ellis were by due Courſe of Law convicted of the ſaid "Felony and Robbery.

"That before the Robbery, all the Priſoners and one Thomas Blee, in "order to procure to themſelves the Rewards given by Act of Parliament for apprehending Robbers on the Highway, did maliciouſly and "feloniouſly meet at the Bell-Inn in Holborn in this City; and did then "and there agree, That the ſaid Thomas Blee ſhould procure two Perſons "to commit a Robbery on the Highway in the Pariſh of St. Paul, Deptford, upon the Perſon of the Priſoner Salmon.

"That for that Purpoſe they did all maliciouſly and feloniouſly contrive and agree, that the ſaid Blee ſhould inform the Perſons ſo to be "procured, that he would aſſiſt them in ſtealing Linen in the Pariſh of "St. Paul, Deptford.

"That in Purſuance of this Agreement, and with the Privity of all the "Priſoners, the ſaid Blee did engage and procure the ſaid Ellis and Kelly "to go with him to Deptford in order to ſteal Linen; but did not at any "Time before the Robbery inform them, or either of them, of the intended Robbery.

"That in conſequence of the ſaid Agreement at the Bell, and with the "Privity of all the Priſoners, the ſaid Ellis and Kelly went with the ſaid "Blee to Deptford.

"That the ſaid Blee, Ellis, and Kelly being there, and the Priſoner Balmon being likewiſe there waiting in the Highway in purſuance of the "ſaid Agreement, the ſaid Blee, Ellis, and Kelly feloniouſly aſſaulted "him, and took from his Perſon the Money and Goods mentioned in the "Indictment.

"They further find, that none of the Priſoners had any Converſation "with the ſaid Ellis and Kelly, or either of them, previous to the Robbery. But they find that, before the Robbery, the Priſoners M'Daniel, "Egan, and Berry ſaw the ſaid Ellis and Kelly, and approved of them as "Perſons proper for the Purpoſe of robbing the ſaid Salmon."

But whether the Priſoners are guilty in Manner as charged in the Indictment, they pray the Advice of the Court.

This Special Verdict hath been argued before all the Judges of England, and two Queſtions have been made.

Firſt, Whether it appeareth from the Facts ſtated in the Special Verdict, that any Robbery was committed by Ellis and Kelly on the Perſon of James Salmon?

Second, Suppoſing that Ellis and Kelly were guilty as Principals in the Robbery, whether the Facts found will warrant the Court in paſſing Judgment upon the Priſoners, or any of them, upon this Indictment?

The ſecond Point ſeemeth to have been the Doubt on which the Jury pray the Advice of the Court; and I have Reaſon to believe, that when it firſt came to be conſidered, it was Matter of great Doubt with ſome Gentlemen of the Profeſſion, whoſe Abilities were never yet called in Queſtion.

For which Reaſon, and becauſe the Law touching Acceſſaries before the Fact is a Matter of great and very extenſive Conſequence to the Juſtice of the Kingdom, and ought to be well underſtood, I will deliver my Thoughts upon the ſecond Queſtion, before I come to that which will finally govern the preſent Caſe.

As to the Priſoner Salmon, the Judges, upon Conſideration of this Special Verdict, are unanimouſly of Opinion, that he cannot be guilty within this Indictment: For unleſs he was Party to the Agreement at the Bell, there can be no Colour to involve him in the Guilt of Ellis and Kelly.

And on the other hand, if he did part with his Money and Goods in Conſequence of that Agreement, it cannot be ſaid that in legal Conſtruction he was robbed at all; ſince it is of the Eſſence of Robbery and Larceny, that the Goods be taken againſt the Will of the Owner.

There was a late Caſe (Belchier and Norton's) cited in the Argument on the Part of the Crown, which I ſhall conſider by and bye, and diſtinguiſh from the preſent.

It hath been held, (Cromp. Juſt. 41. b. pl. 4, 5.) and I think rightly, that a Man may make himſelf an Acceſſary after the Fact to a Larceny of his own Goods, or to a Robbery on himſelf, by harbouring or concealing the Thief, or aſſiſting in his Eſcape.

And under ſome Circumſtances a Man may be guilty of Larceny in ſtealing his own Goods, or of Robbery, in taking his own Property from the Perſon of another. A delivereth Goods to B, to keep for him (1 Hale 513.) and then ſtealeth them, with Intent to charge B. with the Value of them, (Stanf. 26. A. 3. Inſt. 110.) this would be Felony in A. Or, A having delivered Money to his Servant to carry to ſome diſtant Place, diſguiſeth himſelf and robbeth the Servant on the Road, with Intent to charge the Hundred, this, I doubt not, would be Robbery in A.

For in theſe Caſes the Money and Goods were taken from thoſe who had a ſpecial temporary Property in them, with a wicked, fraudulent Intention; which is the antient known Definition of Larceny, Fraudulenta Obtrectatio Rei alienæ invito Domino. But I never did hear, before this Time, of any Attempt to charge a Man as Acceſſary before the Fact to a Robbery committed on his own Perſon.

As to the Priſoners M'Daniel, Berry, and Egan, the Judges are unanimouſly of Opinion, That ſuppoſing a Robbery was committed on Salmon, the Facts found by the Special Verdict are ſufficient to charge them as Acceſſaries in the Manner they are charged in this Indictment.

For the Verdict findeth, that every Circumſtance attending the Fact, the Place where, and the Perſon on whom it was to be committed, the Means by which it was to be effected, and the Perſons by whom it was to be done; all theſe Circumſtances were ſettled and agreed upon by the Priſoners previous to the Fact: And in conſequence of this Conſult and Agreement the Fact was committed.

It is indeed found, that none of the Priſoners had any Converſation with Ellis and Kelly previous to the Robbery; and that Blee did not acquaint Ellis and Kelly with his Intention to commit any Robbery, but drew them to Deptford under Pretence of ſtealing Linen.

Theſe Circumſtances ſeem to have been the Foundation of the Jury's Doubt; and the Priſoner's Counſel have laid great Streſs on them.

As to that Circumſtance, that Blee's true Deſign was not made known to Ellis and Kelly, it appeareth manifeſtly by the Facts found, that it was Part of the original Agreement at the Bell, that the true Deſign ſhould be concealed from them; and that they were to be drawn to the Place of Action under another Pretence. This Circumſtance therefore being Part of the original Agreement, the Priſoners cannot avail themſelves of it, if the Agreement upon the whole, and what was done in conſequence of it, be ſufficient to make them Acceſſaries.

As to the other Circumſtance, that the Priſoners had no Converſation with Ellis and Kelly before the Aſſault upon Salmon, their Counſel relied chiefly on the Words of the Statutes on which this Indictment is founded.

The Statutes are the 4th and 5th of Phil. and Mar. c. 4. and the 3d and 4th of W. and Mar. c. 9. The Words of the former, which are deſcriptive of the Offence, are, "If any Perſon ſhall maliciouſly Counſel, Hire, or Command." The latter retaineth the Words Counſel, Hire, or Command, and addeth others, "ſhall Comfort, Aid, Abet, or Aſſiſt." From theſe Words, which it muſt be admitted are deſcriptive of the Offence, the Priſoners Counſel concluded, That without a perſonal, immediate Communication of Counſels, Intentions, and Views, from the ſuppoſed Acceſſaries to the Principals, there can be no Acceſſary before the Fact.

But the Judges are all of Opinion, That whoever procureth a Felony to be committed, though it be by the Intervention of a third Perſon, is an Acceſſary before the Fact, and within theſe Statutes. For what is there in the Notion of Commanding, Hiring, Counſelling, Aiding or Abetting, which may not be effected by the Intervention of a third Perſon, without any direct immediate Connection between the firſt Mover and the Actor? A biddeth his Servant hire Somebody, no Matter whom, to murder B, and furniſheth him with Money for that Purpoſe; the Servant procureth C, a Perſon whom A never ſaw or heard of, to do it. Is not A, who is manifeſtly the firſt Mover or Contriver of the Murder, an Acceſſary before the Fact? It would be a Reproach to the Juſtice of the Kingdom to ſuppoſe he is not.

It is a Principle in Law which can never be controverted, That he who procureth a Felony to be done is a Felon. If preſent, he is a Principal; if abſent, an Acceſſary before the Fact.

In the Caſe of the Earl of Somerſet, (I. St. Trial.) who was indicted upon the Statute of Phil. and Mar. as an Acceſſary before the Fact to the Murder of Sir Thomas Overbury, the Lord Chancellor Elleſmere, High-Steward, in the Outſet of the Cauſe, and before any Evidence given, directed the Peers Triers, and all the Judges preſent concurred with his Lordſhip, that the only Point in Iſſue was, Whether the Earl cauſed or procured the Murder, or not. And accordingly the Earl was found guilty upon Evidence which ſatisfied his Peers, that he had contributed to the Murder by the Intervention of his Lady, and of Sir Jarvis Elways, and Franklin, who were themſelves no more than Acceſſaries, without any Sort of Proof that he had ever converſed with Weſton, the only Principal in the Murder, or had correſponded with him directly by Letter or Meſſage.

The beſt Writers on the Crown Law agree, that Perſons Procuring, or even Conſenting before-hand, are Acceſſaries before the Fact.

Lord Coke, in his Comment on Weſt. 1. c. 14. in explaining the Words Commandment and Aid as applied to Acceſſaries before the Fact, ſaith, "Under this Word Command are comprehended all thoſe who Incite, Procure, "Set-on, or Stir-up any to do the Fact. And under the Word Aid are "comprehended all Perſons Counſelling, Abetting, Plotting, Aſſenting, "Conſenting, and Encouraging to do the Fact, and not preſent when it "is committed."

Lord Hale ſaith, (1 Hale 374.) "Miſpriſion of Felony is Concealing a "Felony which a Man knoweth, but never conſented to; for if he conſented, he is either Principal or Acceſſary. (Id. 615, 616.) Again, Acceſſary before, is he that, being abſent at the Time of the Felony committed, doth yet Procure, Counſel, or Abet another to commit the Felony."

Many Authorities to this Purpoſe may be cited, which for Brevity ſake I will barely refer to *.

It was objected by the Priſoners Counſel, that Penal Statutes are to be conſtrued with great Strictneſs; and that the Words Procure or Conſent are not to be found in either of the Statutes upon which this Indictment is formed.

The Principle is true, that in Proſecutions on Penal Statutes the Words of the Statute are to be purſued. But it is equally true, that we are not to be governed by the Sound, but by the well-known, true, legal Import of the Words.

Some of the Words made uſe of in the preſent Indictment, and in one or other of the Statutes upon which it is founded, are Command, Aid, and Abet. The Paſſage I have juſt cited from Lord Coke ſheweth, that Perſons Procuring, Contriving, or Conſenting, come within the Words Aid and Command. And that Perſons Procuring are, in the Language of the Law, Abettors, may be proved by many Authorities, which it is not neceſſary to cite at large †.

This being ſo, the Priſoners M'Daniel, Egan, and Berry, who were the Contrivers of this Scene of Iniquity, agreed upon the Place and Manner of Execution, and conducted the Whole by the Intervention of their Inſtrument Blee, are Acceſſaries before to this Robbery, ſuppoſing a Robbery was committed. For in Conſtruction, and indeed in the Language of the Law, they did command Ellis and Kelly to commit the Fact, and did aid and abet them in it.

I come now to the other Queſtion, Whether, upon the State of the Caſe in the Special Verdict, any Robbery, in the legal Notion of that Offence, was committed on Salmon or no?

And the Judges are of Opinion, That it doth not appear, from the Facts ſtated in the Verdict, that the taking the Money and Goods from Salmon, by Ellis and Kelly, doth amount to a Robbery, in the legal Notion of that Offence.

Something was ſaid in arguing of this Caſe upon the Queſtion, how far a Perſon charged as an Acceſſary, and brought to his Trial after the Conviction of the Principal, can controvert the Truth of the Fact found by the Verdict againſt the Principal; or how far the ſuppoſed Acceſſary can be let in to ſhew, either that no Felony was committed, or that the Perſon convicted as Principal was not guilty of it.

This general Queſtion is of great Extent and of mighty Importance in Proſecutions of this Kind; and ſome Diverſity of Opinion there is among the Judges upon it.

But it will not be neceſſary at preſent to enter at all into it; becauſe the Court in the preſent Caſe muſt found its Judgment upon the Facts found by the Verdict, and upon them alone. Now it is expreſly found, that Salmon was Party to the original Agreement at the Bell; that he conſented to part with his Money and Goods under Colour and Pretence of a Robbery; and that for that Purpoſe, and in purſuance of this Conſent and Agreement, he went to Deptford, and waited there till this colourable Robbery was effected.

This being the State of the Caſe with regard to Salmon, the Judges are of Opinion, that, in Conſideration of Law, no Robbery was committed on him. His Property was not taken from him againſt his Will.

It was ſaid by the Priſoner's Counſel, That the Verdict doth not find that Salmon was put in Fear; and, ſay they, there can be no Robbery without the Circumſtance of putting in Fear.

I think the Want of that Circumſtance alone ought not be regarded. I am not clear that that Circumſtance is of Neceſſity to be laid in the Indictment, ſo as the Fact be charged to be done violenter et contra Voluntatem. I know there are Opinions in the Books which ſeem to make the Circumſtance of Fear neceſſary; but I have ſeen a good MS. Note of an Opinion of Lord Holt to the contrary. And I am very clear that the Circumſtance of actual Fear at the Time of the Robbery need not be ſtrictly proved. Suppoſe the true Man is knocked down without any previous Warning to awaken his Fears, and lieth totally inſenſible while the Thief riffleth his Pockets, Is not this a Robbery? And yet where is the Circumſtance of actual Fear? Or ſuppoſe the true Man maketh a manful Reſiſtance, but is overpowered, and his Property taken from him by the meer Dint of ſuperior Strength, this doubtleſs is a Robbery. And in Caſes where the true Man delivereth his Purſe without Reſiſtance, if the Fact be attended with thoſe Circumſtances of Violence or Terror which in common Experience are likely to induce a Man to part with his Property for the Safety of his Perſon, that will amount to a Robbery. And if Fear be a neceſſary Ingredient, the Law, in Odium Spoliatoris, will preſume Fear, where there appeareth to be ſo juſt a Ground for it.

I come now to the Caſe I promiſed at the Beginning to conſider, and to diſtinguiſh from the preſent Caſe. One Norton having been informed that one of the early Stage-Coaches had been frequently robbed near the Town by a ſingle Highwayman, reſolved to uſe his Endeavours to apprehend the Robber. For this Purpoſe he put a little Money and a Piſtol into his Pocket, and attended the Coach in a Poſt-Chaiſe, 'till the Highwayman came up to the Company in the Coach and to him, and preſenting a Weapon demanded their Money. Norton gave him the little Money he had about him, and then jumped out of the Chaiſe with his Piſtol in his Hand; and, with the Aſſiſtance of ſome others, took the Highwayman.

The Robber (Belchier) was indicted about a Year ago in this Court for a Robbery on Norton, and convicted. And very properly, in my Opinion, was he convicted.

But that Caſe differeth widely from the preſent. In that Caſe, Norton ſet out with a laudable Intention to uſe his Endeavours for apprehending the Highwayman, in caſe he ſhould that Morning come to rob the Coach, which at that Time was totally uncertain; and it was equally uncertain whether he would come alone or no. In the Caſe now under Conſideration, there was a moſt deteſtable Conſpiracy between Salmon and the reſt of the Priſoners, that his Property ſhould be taken from him under the Pretence and Show of a Robbery; and Time, Place, and every other Circumſtance, were known to Salmon before-hand, and agreed to by him.

In Norton's Caſe, there was no Concert, no Sort of Connection between him and the Highwayman; nothing to remove or leſſen the Difficulty or Danger Norton might be expoſed to in the Adventure. In the preſent Caſe, there was a Combination between Salmon and one at leaſt of the ſuppoſed Robbers, I mean Blee. And though Salmon might not know the Perſons of Ellis and Kelly; yet he well knew that they were brought to the Place by his Friend Blee, and were wholly under his Direction.

So widely do theſe Caſes differ.

To conclude, All the Priſoners have been guilty of a moſt wicked and deteſtable Conſpiracy, to render a very ſalutary Law ſubſervient to their vile, corrupt Views. But great as their Offence is, it doth not amount to Felony *. And therefore the Judgment of the Court is, That they be all diſcharged of this Indictment.

(Foſter's Reports, pi 121—130.)

Afterwards, at the February Seſſions, 1756, in Alderman Bethell's Mayoralty, they were proſecuted at the Expence of the Crown, upon the Repreſentation of the Judges, for a Conſpiracy, on the following Indictment:

" Stephen M'Daniel, John Berry, James Egan, (otherwiſe Gahagan), " and James Salmon, were indicted, for that they, being Perſons of wicked " and corrupt Minds and Converſations, and not having the Fear of God " before their Eyes, but being moved and ſeduced by the Inſtigation of " the Devil, not regarding the Laws of this Realm, or the Pains and Penalties that ſhould befal thereon, did wickedly, unlawfully, and maliciouſly combine, conſpire, and agree together, that one Thomas Blee " ſhould procure two Perſons, to wit, Peter Kelly and John Ellis, to go to " Deptford, in Kent, and to take divers Goods and Money from the Perſon of the ſaid Salmon on the King's Highway, who ſhould be waiting " there for that Purpoſe; with Intent that they ſhould cauſe the ſaid two " Perſons to be apprehended and convicted for robbing him the ſaid Salmon on the King's Highway, and ſo unjuſtly and wickedly procure to " themſelves the Rewards mentioned in the Act of Parliament, Proclamation, and other parochial Rewards for the apprehending of Highwaymen; to the great Diſpleaſure of Almighty God, and the great Diſhonour and Scandal of the Laws of this Kingdom, and the evil Example " of all others, againſt his Majeſty's Peace, his Crown and Dignity, July " 22, 1754."

Upon the Evidence of Blee, and others that confirmed him in every Thing, the Court declined calling more Witneſſes, though ſeveral were in Court; and the Priſoners making but a trifling Defence, they were all found Guilty. Their Sentence:

Stephen M'Daniel, John Berry, James Egan, (otherwiſe Gahagan), and James Salmon, to be impriſoned in Newgate for the Term of ſeven Years; and in that Time to be each of them ſet in the Pillory twice, in the Manner following: M'Daniel and Berry in Holborn, near Hatton-Garden; Egan and Salmon in the Middle of Smithfield. Afterwards M'Daniel and Berry at the End of King-Street, Cheapſide; and Egan and Salmon again in Fleet-Street, near Fetter-Lane End: And at the Expiration of that Time, to find Sureties for their good Behaviour for three Years, and to pay a Fine of one Mark each.

Stephen M'Daniel, John Berry, James Egan, (otherwiſe Gahagan), and James Salmon, have each once ſtood on the Pillory, viz. M'Daniel and Berry near Hatton-Garden, on Friday the 5th of March, 1756; and were ſo ſeverely handled by the Populace, that it was with the utmoſt Difficulty, that one of the Sheriffs, and the Keeper of Newgate, who ſtood in a Balcony juſt by, prevented their being utterly deſtroyed; and ſo great was the Mob, that the Peace-Officers found it impoſſible to protect the Priſoners from their Fury; and Egan and Salmon ſtood in Smithfield on Monday the 8th. They were inſtantly aſſaulted with Showers of Oyſter-ſhells, Stones, &c. and had not ſtood above half an Hour, before Egan was ſtruck dead; and Salmon ſo dangerouſly wounded in the Head, that it was thought impoſſible he could recover.—Whatever Puniſhment they might deſerve from the Law, it is certain they ought not to be killed, thro' the Rage of the Populace. And we find, that April 11, 1732, Edward Dalton and Richard Griffiths were tried at the Old-Bailey, for the Murder of John Waller in the Pillory, by pelting him with Cauliflower-Stalks, &c. and found Guilty, and both executed at Tyburn.

In June Seſſions, in Alderman Bethell's Mayoralty, 1756, two of the before-mentioned Miſcreants, M'Daniel and Berry, together with one Mary Jones, were tried for Murder, upon a Conſpiracy of the like Nature againſt one Kidden (who was convicted and executed for a Robbery on the Highway, and at the Gallows, in the moſt ſolemn Manner, declared his Innocence), on the following Indictment: Stephen M'Daniel, John Berry, and Mary Jones, were indicted " for the wilful Murder of " Joſhua Kidden, in maliciouſly cauſing him to be unjuſtly apprehended, " falſely accuſed, tried, convicted, and executed, well knowing him to be " innocent of the Fact laid to his Charge, with an Intent to ſhare to " themſelves the Reward, &c. Feb. 4, 1754.

The Fact was plainly proved againſt them upon this Indictment, and " the † Special Matter being ſet forth in the Indictment, the Court ſuffered them to be convicted (Death), but immediately reſpited Judgment; in order that the Point of Law might be more fully conſidered " upon Motion in Arreſt of Judgment ‡. But the Attorney-General declining to argue the Point of Law, the Priſoners were at a ſubſequent " Seſſion diſcharged of that Indictment.

" This Proſecution, I am ſatisfied, aroſe from a laudable Zeal for keeping the Fountains of Juſtice pure and unpolluted, and a juſt Indignation againſt an Offence of this ſignal Enormity.

" It muſt be confeſſed, that there are ſtrong Paſſages in our ancient " Writers, which greatly countenance a Proſecution of this Kind. But " thoſe Writers muſt always be read with great Caution upon the Subject " of Homicide.

* Judge Foſter, in his Reports, ſays further, p. 364. " At a Conference among the Judges upon the Caſe of M'Daniel and others above-reported, a general Queſtion was " moved, How far, and in what Caſes the Acceſſary may avail himſelf of the Inſufficiency of the Evidence in point of Fact, or of the Incompetency of Witneſſes in point " of Law, produced againſt the Principal; and in what Caſes he may be let in to ſhew, that the Facts charged and proved againſt the Principal, do not, in Judgment of " Law, amount to Felony? There was in that Caſe no Occaſion to enter far into theſe Queſtions; ſince the Facts, upon which the Point of Law then under Conſideration muſt neceſſarily turn, were all found by the Special Verdict. The general Queſtion was therefore waived."—And then goes (p. 365.) to treat on Acceſſaries; and adds, " Therefore, if it ſhall come out in Evidence upon the Trial of the Acceſſary, as it ſometimes hath, and frequently may, that the Offence of which the Principal was convicted did not amount to Felony in him, or not to that Species of Felony with which he was charged, the Acceſſary may avail himſelf of this, and ought to be acquitted. " This was the Caſe of M'Daniel, and others above-cited. The Youths who were convicted of the Robbery, being totally ignorant of the Conſpiracy mentioned in the " Report of that Caſe, took no Advantage of it, and were convicted upon full and legal Evidence. But when the whole Scene of Villainy came to be diſcloſed upon the " Trial of thoſe Miſcreants, they were diſcharged from that Indictment upon this ſingle Objection, that the Offence of the Principal did not, in the Eye of the Law, " amount to a Robbery.

" If this Opinion was well founded in Point of Law, and ſhall ſtand the Teſt of future Times, as I think it will, every other Perſon in the like Circumſtances may, upon " his Trial, avail himſelf of it, and will be entitled to a Verdict of Acquittal."—If any one wants to ſee more on this Head relating to Acceſſaries, he may conſult Judge Foſter's Reports, p. 130, 131, 366, and following Pages.

† Foſter's Reports, p. 131, 132.

‡ " There being a Doubt, whether the Facts proved againſt them amounted in Law to Murder, which was to have been argued before the Judges, if the Attorney-' General had not declined it.—It is a Doubt which could not have ariſen in any other Country, where the Roman Law is allowed to have any Weight; for by that Law ' it is expreſly declared, That Witneſſes, who by a falſe and malicious Teſtimony procure an innocent Man to be capitally condemned, ſhall be deemed guilty of Murder. Qui vi falſum teſtimonium dolo malo dixerit, quo quis publico judicio rei capitalis damnaretur. Digeſt. lib. 48. Tit. 8. ſ. 2."

" Bracton

" Bracton, whom the Writers of that Age for the moſt Part follow, was " a Doctor of both Laws before he came to the Bench. It is no Wonder " therefore, that having before him no tolerable Syſtem of the Engliſh " Law, then in its Infant State, he ſhould adopt what he found in the " Books of the Civil and Canon Law, which he had read, and ſeemeth " to have well underſtood *.

" Succeeding Writers of that Age refined upon him, and in their looſe " Way wrote upon the Subject rather as Divines and Caſuiſts than as " Lawyers; and ſeem to have conſidered the Offence merely in the Light " in which it might be ſuppoſed to be conſidered in Foro Cœli.

" But the Practice of many Ages backwards doth by no means counte- " nance their Opinion.

" And during all the Violence and Rage of the Proſecution againſt Dr. " Oates, it ſeemeth not to have entered into the Imagination of thoſe con- " cerned in it, or of the Court, who would not have ſpared him if they " could have taken their full Blow at him, that the Offences of which " he was convicted could have been ſo charged as to have reached his " Life. Though the Judgment they paſſed on him, the moſt cruel, I " believe, that ever was given in Weſtminſter-Hall in Caſe of a Miſde- " meanour, might probably have ended in his Death †."

Egan was killed in the Pillory, but M'Daniel and Berry continued in Newgate under their former Sentence till Feb. 26, 1762, when John Berry died in Newgate; and the Year following M'Daniel procured himſelf to be ſent abroad for Life to the Indies, as a Soldier.—Salmon, I take it, died in Newgate before.

LIV. The Trial of William Barnard, at the Seſſions-Houſe in the Old-Bailey, before the Right Honourable Sir Charles Aſgill, Kt. Lord-Mayor of the City of London, Sir Michael Foſter, Knt. one of the Juſtices of the King's-Bench, Sir Sidney Stafford Smythe, Knt. one of the Barons of the Exchequer, Sir William Moreton, Knt. " WILLIAM BARNARD, late of the Pariſh of St. James's, " within the City and Liberty of Weſtminſter, in the County of " Middleſex, Yeoman, was indicted, for that he being an ill- " diſpoſed Perſon, and ſeeking wicked Gain, and little regarding the " Laws and Statutes of this Kingdom, or the Pains and Penalties therein " contained, after the firſt Day of June in the Year of our Lord 1723, " to wit, on the 3d Day of December, in the thirty-firſt Year of the Reign " of our Sovereign Lord George the Second, King of Great-Britain, &c. After Mr. Moore had opened the Indictment, Mr. Serjeant Davy ſpoke as follows:

May it pleaſe your Lordſhips, and you Gentlemen of the Jury;

I am Counſel in this Cauſe for the Proſecution againſt the Priſoner at the Bar, who ſtands indicted on an Act of Parliament made in the ninth Year of his late Majeſty, very well known by the Name of the Black Act. That Act of Parliament, reciting the ſeveral Miſchiefs, and conſtituting ſeveral Felonies, amongſt other Things, enacts, That if any Perſon ſhall knowingly ſend any Letter, without any Name ſubſcribed thereto, or ſigned with a fictitious Name, demanding Money, Veniſon, or other valuable Thing; every Perſon ſo offending, being thereof lawfully convicted, ſhall be adjudged guilty of Felony, and ſhall ſuffer Death as in Caſes of Felony, without Benefit of Clergy.

It is on that Act that this Indictment now comes before you, that you have heard read. You ſee it is for ſending a Letter; for it is on the firſt of theſe Letters that the preſent Indictment is founded; the others are ſent in conſequence of the firſt, and explanatory of his Intentions.

I will open to you, as conciſely as I can, the ſeveral Circumſtances we have in Evidence, in order to affect the Priſoner at the Bar: They are Circumſtances of that Nature, correſponding ſo exactly with the Priſoner's Caſe, affecting him ſo very minutely, that the ſeveral Circumſtances do infer, I had almoſt ſaid, an Impoſſibility of his Innocence: You will find they all tally ſo exactly, they are ſo particularly relative to him, that it will be offering Violence to every Rule of Reaſon, not to find him guilty.

Gentlemen, on the 29th of November, a Letter was found under the Door of the Ordnance-Office, directed to his Grace the Duke of Marlborough: Upon opening this Letter, which was wrote in Imitation of Print-Hand, bearing Date that Day the 29th of November, it will be neceſſary, for the Sake of the following Circumſtances, to deſire your Attention to the ſeveral Parts. Theſe are the Words:

To his Grace the Duke of Marlborough.

xxviiii November.

" My Lord,

" As Ceremony is an idle Thing upon moſt Occaſions, more eſpecially " to Perſons in my State of Mind, I ſhall proceed immediately to ac- " quaint you with the Motive and End of addreſſing this Epiſtle to you, " which is equally intereſting to us both. You are to know, then, that " my preſent Situation in Life is ſuch, that I ſhould prefer Annihilation " to a Continuance in it: Deſperate Diſeaſes require deſperate Remedies; " and you are the Man I have pitched upon, either to make me, or to " unmake yourſelf. As I never had the Honour to live among the Great, " the Tenour of my Propoſals will not be very courtly; but let that be " an Argument to enforce the Belief of what I am now going to write. " It has employed my Invention, for ſome Time, to find out a Method " to deſtroy another, without expoſing my own Life; that I have ac- " compliſhed, and defy the Law. Now for the Application of it. I " am deſperate, and muſt be provided for: You have it in your Power, " it is my Buſineſs to make it your Inclination, to ſerve me; which you " muſt determine to comply with, by procuring me a genteel Support " for my Life; or your own will be at a Period before this Seſſions of " Parliament is over. I have more Motives than one for ſingling you " out firſt, upon this Occaſion; and I give you this fair Warning, be- " cauſe the Means I ſhall make uſe of are too fatal to be eluded by the " Power of Phyſic. If you think this of any Conſequence, you will not " fail to meet the Author, on Sunday next, at Ten in the Morning, or " on Monday, (if the Weather ſhould be rainy on Sunday) near the firſt " Tree beyond the Stile in Hyde-Park, in the Foot-walk to Kenſington: " Secrecy and Compliance may preſerve you from a double Danger of this " Sort; as there is a certain Part of the World, where your Death has " more than been wiſhed for, upon other Motives. I know the World " too well, to truſt this Secret in any Breaſt but my own. A few Days " determine me your Friend or Enemy.

FELTON.

" You will apprehend that I mean you ſhould be alone; and depend " upon it, that a Diſcovery of any Artifice in this Affair will be fatal to " you: My Safety is inſured by my Silence; for Confeſſion only can " condemn me."

This Letter containing every Thing that is dreadful, that might raiſe Apprehenſions of Terror, ſubſcribed by a Name which is painful to almoſt every Ear—the Name Felton! That was the Name of the Aſſaſſin that ſtabbed the Duke of Buckingham at Portſmouth.

My Lord Duke, not intimidated by the Letter, though greatly ſurprized at it, and willing to find out the Author, was not afraid to endeavour to apprehend him; he went alone to the Spot, and at the Time appointed; however, there was ſome Attendant on his Grace at a Diſtance, in order to obſerve what paſſed on the Occaſion. My Lord Duke had been there ſome Time on Horſeback, and as much undreſſed as a Man of his Quality is. He had Piſtols before him; he had been there ſome Time, and ſaw Nobody at all at that particular Place. After waiting ſome conſiderable Time, he was returning, and obſerved a Perſon come to the particular Spot juſt by the Tree beyond the Stile in Hyde-Park, by the Foot-walk to Kenſington: That Perſon held a Handkerchief to his Mouth in a ſeeming diſconſolate Manner, looking into the Water, and ſtood ſtill a very conſiderable while. Upon his Grace ſeeing this, that the Man was not purſuing any Way, the Duke had no Doubt in his own Mind, but that this Man (be he who he would) muſt be the Perſon who had ſent him this Letter. The Man ſauntering juſt at the Place, the Duke rode up to the Spot, expecting the Perſon would ſpeak to him: His Grace aſked the Man, Whether he wanted to ſpeak to him? He ſaid, No.—Sir, ſaid the Duke, do you know me? I am the Duke of Marlborough; telling you that, perhaps you have ſomething to ſay to me.—No, my Lord.—No Notice being taken, the Duke came away.

Gentlemen, you ſee, this was an Appointment on a Sunday to meet at a Place where ſeveral People might be ſuppoſed to be walking. What was the View of that Perſon may be ſeen by and bye. The Author of this Letter ſpeaks of his being exceedingly guarded againſt the

Poſſibility

Poſſibility of a Detection; he boaſts of the Care and Caution he had uſed for that Purpoſe,—He defies the Law,—nothing but Confeſſion could condemn him,—his Safety was inſured by his Silence,——he knew the World too well, to truſt this Secret in any Breaſt but his own.

A few Days after, in the ſame Week, the Duke received a ſecond Letter. This alſo was put under the Door of the Office of Ordnance, and was alſo wrote in Imitation of a Print-Hand: But the Directions of both the Letters are not; there will be Occaſion to take Notice of that Circumſtance by and bye. The ſecond Letter is in theſe Words:

To his Grace the Duke of Marlborough.

" My Lord,

" You receive this as an Acknowlegdment of your Punctuality as to " the Time and Place of Meeting on Sunday laſt, though it was owing to " you that it anſwered no Purpoſe. The Pageantry of being armed, and the " Enſign of your Order, were uſeleſs, and too conſpicuous: You need- " ed no Attendant; the Place was not calculated for Miſchief, nor was " any intended. If you walk in the Weſt Iſle of Weſtminſter-Abbey, " towards Eleven o'Clock on Sunday next, your Sagacity will point out " the Perſon, whom you will addreſs by aſking h Company to take a " Turn or two with you. You will not fail, on Inquiry, to be acquainted " with the Name and Place of Abode; according to which Directions you " will pleaſe to ſend two or three hundred Pound Bank Notes the next " day by the Penny-Poſt. Exert not your Curioſity too early: It is in " your Power to make me grateful on certain Terms. I have Friends " who are faithful; but they do not bark before they bite.

" I am, &c. &c.

F."

Gentlemen, you ſee, the Writer of the ſecond Letter ſpeaks of being himſelf in the Park, or at leaſt of knowing that the Duke was there, at the Time and Place appointed: And therefore this was a farther Circumſtance to convince the Duke, that the Perſon, whom he had ſeen the Sunday before in Hyde-Park, and ſpoke to, was the Writer of the ſecond Letter. You ſee it ſpeaks of the Duke's Punctuality as to the Time and Place of Meeting, the particular Dreſs his Grace was in, and aſſigns that as the Reaſon of not ſpeaking to him the Sunday before: So you ſee, Gentlemen, that Circumſtance, which was a little unaccountable of itſelf, of the Duke's not being owned by the Perſon whom he had ſeen the Sunday before, is by this ſecond Letter accounted for;---the Pageantry of being armed, and the Enſign of his Order. He had then only a Star on, and that perhaps an old one, ſo as not to be conſpicuous: So that this accounts for the Perſon's not ſpeaking to the Duke in Hyde-Park. There can be no Doubt at all, but that the Writer of the ſecond was the Writer of the firſt Letter.

The Conſequence then of this ſecond Appointment to meet the Writer of the Letters in the Weſt Iſle of Weſtminſter-Abbey, you will obſerve, Public Places were appointed, and at public Times; the firſt in Hyde-Park, the ſecond in Prayer-Time at Weſtminſter-Abbey, where the Duke was by his Sagacity to point out the Perſon—the Writer of this Letter. The Duke accordingly went to Weſtminſter-Abbey, to the Weſt Iſle (though indeed, properly ſpeaking, we don't know which to call the Weſt Iſle, the Church ſtanding Eaſt and Weſt). His Grace went to the Weſternmoſt Part of the Abbey, and obſerved Nobody lurking or ſtanding in Circumſtances ſuſpicious: After a little Time, his Grace was ſurprized to ſee that the ſame Perſon, whom he had ſeen the Sunday before exactly at the Spot in Hyde Park, appeared juſt in this Place at the Weſt End of Weſtminſter-Abbey; but he was ſurprized the more, that this Perſon did not ſpeak to him. Perhaps his Grace had not then conſidered the Tenour of this Letter; for it was not to be expected, that the Writer would addreſs the Duke, but rather refers to the Duke's Sagacity:—Your Sagacity will point out the Perſon, it then directs, whom you will addreſs by aſking h Company to take a Turn or two with you. His Grace perhaps did not conſider this exactly; but waiting ſome Time for the Perſon to ſpeak to him, and finding he did not, his Grace aſked him, Sir, have you any thing to ſay to me? No, my Lord.—Have you nothing at all to ſay to me? No.—Have you nothing at all to ſay to me? No, he had nothing to ſay to him. Now I ſhould have mentioned to you, when this Perſon came into the Abbey, another Perſon came in with him, who ſeemed by his Appearance to be a ſubſtantial Tradeſman, a good Sort of Man. Theſe two Perſons, after ſtopping and looking about at the Monuments near the Weſt Gate of the Abbey, the Duke being ſure one of them was the ſame Man he had ſeen before in Hyde-Park, his Grace thought proper to go and ſtand by them, to ſee if that Perſon would ſpeak to him. Seeing the Duke took no Notice of him, they both went towards the Choir: The Stranger went into the Choir, and the Man that his Grace had ſeen in the Park, came back again (leaving his Friend there) to the Spot where the Duke was. The Duke then aſked him, Whether he had any thing to ſay to him? No, he had nothing at all to ſay to him. No, he had nothing at all to ſay. Then the Duke walked a little on the other Side of the Iſle, to ſee whether the Man would follow him, or had a Mind to ſpeak to him at another Spot. He obſerved the Man looked eagerly at him: May-be it may be underſtood, he expected the Duke's Sagacity would point out the Man: However, the Duke did not do what the Letter required, that is, Aſk him to take a Turn with him.

At this ſecond Time there was Somebody that was with the Duke (when I ſay with him, I don't mean cloſe to him, but) near enough, ſo as to take Notice what paſſed, in order to apprehend the Perſon, ſo as to put it beyond all Doubt that he was the Author of thoſe Letters. The Duke, and this Attendant of his, went out at the Weſt Door of the Abbey, in order to go to his Coach. Now you will find by and bye, in the next Letter, that the Writer of theſe Letters took Notice of this Attendant, but was under no Apprehenſion of being watched by any body elſe; and that will account for thoſe Circumſtances I am going to mention: As ſoon as the Duke went out of the Abbey, that Man, whom the Duke had ſeen at both theſe Places, watched the Duke out of the Abbey, and as ſoon as his Grace had paſſed the Door of the Abbey, he went up, hid himſelf in a Corner, concealed from a Poſſibility of being ſeen by his Grace in caſe he had looked back, and ſo watched him into his Coach. It may be aſked, Why his Grace, upon having ſuch clear Conviction in his own Mind, that that Perſon muſt be the Writer of both the Letters, did not apprehend him? His Grace will tell you, he did not think himſelf juſtified in ſo doing; he could not reconcile it to his own Mind to take up a Man, where there was a Poſſibility of his Innocence.

Gentlemen, a few Days after this, came a third Letter to the Duke, wrapped up in a very ſmall Compaſs, and directed to his Grace the Duke of Marlborough at his Houſe. You will ſee, by comparing the Directions, that this third Letter was wrote by the Writer of the firſt Letter: It begins, My Lord, I am fully convinced you had a Companion on Sunday. So far it is proved, that the Writer of theſe Letters was in the Park on the firſt Sunday, and ſaw the Duke there; and was in the Abbey on the ſecond Sunday, and ſaw the Duke there; and that it was the ſame Man that the Duke ſaw at both theſe Times. I interpret it as owing to the Weakneſs of Human Nature; but ſuch Proceeding is far from being ingenuous, and may produce bad Effects, whilſt it is impoſſible to anſwer the End propoſed.—— Guarded through all.—You will ſee me again ſoon, as it were by Accident, and may eaſily find where I go to; in conſequence of which, by being ſent to, I ſhall wait on your Grace, but expect to be quite alone, and converſe in Whiſpers. You will likewiſe give your Honour, upon meeting, that no Part of the Converſation ſhall tranſpire.——So that you ſee, as he was guarded before, he was determined to make it impoſſible to be diſcovered: If they were to converſe in Whiſpers, and to be quite alone, it was impoſſible for other Evidence to riſe up againſt him——Theſe and the former Terms complied with, inſure your Safety; my Revenge, in caſe of Non-compliance, (or any Scheme to expoſe me) will be ſlower, but not leſs ſure, and ſtrong Suſpicion the utmoſt that can poſſibly enſue upon it.—You ſee, how artful he had contrived it: He was determined that nothing more than ſtrong Suſpicion ſhould ever be in Evidence againſt him—While the Chances will be tenfold againſt you. You will poſſibly be in Doubt after the Meeting, but it is quite neceſſary the Outſide ſhould be a Maſk of the In. The Family of the BLOODS is not extinct, though they are not in my Scheme. The Word BLOODS is in Capital Letters. That is a dreadful Name! As Felton was the Villain who aſſaſſinated the Duke of Buckingham, ſo this is the Name of the Fellow who ſeized the Duke of Ormond, and was going to carry him to Tyburn to execute him, and alſo who ſtole the Crown out of the Tower of London.

You ſee, Gentlemen, by this third Letter, that the Duke was to expect to hear ſomething farther from the Writer of theſe Letters. It contains no Appointment, but leads the Duke to expect he ſhall ſee the Writer again as by Accident, and was to obſerve where he ſhould go to, that the Duke might know where to ſend for him; and that he would come in conſequence of being ſent for; but when he came to the Duke, the Terms were, to be a ſecret Converſation, not in the Preſence of a third Perſon, and that too by Whiſpers, and the Duke promiſing, upon his Honour, that no Part of it ſhould tranſpire, without which he was not led to think the Writer ſhould diſcloſe any thing at all. The firſt Letter was dated and received the 29th of November, the ſecond received the next Week, the third in the ſecond Week of December, and the laſt was ſome Time in April.

The Duke waited, expecting to hear farther; but heard nothing more until the Middle of April. About the 14th there came a Letter to his Grace, wrote in a mean Hand, but not in Imitation of a Print-Hand, as the others were. Theſe are the Words of the fourth Letter:

To his Grace the Duke of Marlborough.

" May it pleaſe your Grace,

" I Have Reaſon to believe, that the Son of one Barnard, a Surveyor " in Abingdon-Buildings, Weſtminſter, is acquainted with ſome Secrets " that nearly concern your Safety; his Father is now out of Town, " which will give you an Opportunity of queſtioning him more private- " ly. It would be uſeleſs to your Grace, as well as dangerous to me, " to appear more publicly in this Affair.

" Your ſincere Friend,

" ANONYMOUS.

" He frequently goes to Storey's- " Gate Coffee-houſe."

Gentlemen, the Duke ſent for Mr. Barnard, the Son of Mr. Barnard, according to the Directions in that Letter. This Letter, you will ſee, bears no Date at all; no Memorandum, or any thing which could poſſibly indicate when the Letter was ſent, or when the Duke received it. The Duke, when Mr. Barnard came, was ſitting in his Room; and though upon opening the Door of the outer Room (which was at threeſcore Yards Diſtance from where the Duke was), yet, the Moment Mr. Barnard entered the Room, he was ſure that was the Man he had ſeen both in the Park and in the Abbey. Though the Duke had no Doubt in his own Mind on the former Circumſtances, that the Perſon whom he had ſeen before was the Writer of the firſt Letter, now he was fully convinced that he was the Writer of all the Letters. The Duke was determined the Scheme ſhould not ſo far take Effect, as to engage himſelf upon his Honour, that no Part of the Converſation ſhould tranſpire; if ſo, nothing could have prevailed upon him to proſecute: Therefore you are not to expect he complied with a Converſation in Whiſpers, and a Promiſe on the Duke's Part, that no Part of the Converſation ſhould tranſpire. The third Letter will tell you, that the Perſon that entered the Room was the Writer of all theſe Letters. As ſoon as he came into the Room, the Duke took him to the Window, and aſked him, whether he wanted to ſpeak with him? No my Lord.—No, Sir! I have received a Letter, which tells me, that you are acquainted with ſome Circumſtances that nearly concern my Safety.——Not I, my Lord. This is very ſurprizing, Sir! This is the Letter; and ſhewed him the laſt Letter. Still the Duke had not given him any Promiſe at all of not expoſing the Converſation. Sir, it is very odd that you ſhould be pointed out to me, to acquaint me with ſome Circumſtances relating to my Safety, becauſe it mentions ſome Circumſtances as to the Time, the Place where you you are to be found, your Father's being out of Town, and the like. The Priſoner incautiouſly ſaid immediately, My Lord, my Father was out of Town at that Time.----At what Time, Sir? The Letter bears no Date, nor have I mentioned to you a Syllablewhen I received it: How came you to know when I received this Letter, that you ſhould tell me, your Father was not in Town at that Time? You ſpeak clearly, as knowing when I received this Letter; therefore give me Leave on this Occaſion to tell you, that I do not only ſuſpect you know of this Letter, but that you have ſent to me ſome other Letters that I have received before: Then acquainting him with the other three Letters, his Grace obſerving upon them, that it was very odd and ſtrange, that the Letters correſponded ſo certainly and deciſively on him, he being always at the Places at the Times appointed, and that he being the Perſon named in the fourth Letter too, and that he knew the Time of the Duke's receiving that Letter, the Duke put it upon him, Sir, I am ſurprized at the Writer of this Letter; one ſhould ſuppoſe from the Style, and its being grammatically wrote, that the Perſon who wrote it, had had ſome Share of Education; at leaſt I am ſurprized that a Man that has had any Education at all, can deſcend to ſuch a Means of getting Money. My Lord, your Grace need not be ſurprized at that; a Man may be learned, and very poor. Very fond was he of ſoftening Things. My Lord, you need not be affrighted; I dare ſay the Writer of theſe Letters is a very Madman. Why! you are very much concerned to apologize for the Writer hereof, ſaid the Duke. Picking out this Circumſtance, The Man does not know me, he expreſſes his very great Surprize at my appearing in the Park with the Enſign of my Order, and my being armed—as incautious as he had been before, he is incautious upon that too, and ſaid, Indeed I was ſurprized to ſee your Grace armed. Was you ſo, ſaid the Duke? Was you ſurprized to ſee me armed? Can any Man doubt a Moment who wrote theſe Letters? But, however, Mr. Barnard, as you inſiſt upon it, and declare ſo ſolemnly your Innocence, I will not ſo far invade the Laws of Hoſpitality, whatever Crime you have done. (He would not for the World apprehend a Man in his own Houſe whom he had ſent for; he let him go ſafe Home again; it was for that Reaſon he would not give his Promiſe not to reveal the Converſation; but in regard to the Public he was determined to proſecute.) The Duke ſaid to him, Sir, If you are not the Writer of theſe Papers, it much becomes you to find out who is; for your Name is particularly mentioned in this laſt Letter; either you are the Writer, or allow me to ſay, Somebody elſe owes you very Ill-will that was the Writer of them. I am relying merely on the Terms of the laſt Letter, wherein he was to inform his Grace of ſome Secrets that nearly concern his Safety: What was the Anſwer that the Priſoner made? Firſt, what would have been the Anſwer? Muſt not a Man be ſtruck with Aſtoniſhment, to hear he was one that was to inform his Grace of Things that nearly concerned his Safety, ſo much to the Hazard of his own Life? What became him, as having a Regard to his own Reputation and Safety? To determine, as far as in his Power, to find out the Writer; nay to have given the Duke Aſſurance that he would do it: Inſtead of that, what was his Behaviour? A Smile of Contempt---an unmannerly Laugh in the Duke's Face, as if it did not concern him at all.

Gentlemen, I ſhould think that to this there can hardly be a Circumſtance added more clearly to convince any Man alive of the Circumſtances of this Man's being the Author of theſe Letters; but you will find afterwards the Priſoner (for what reaſon let him tell if he can) told his Grace, he had deſired his Companion that was with him in Weſtminſter-Abbey to leave him: Why? Becauſe he thought the Duke wanted to tell him of ſome Place he had for him. Good God! How could he imagine he wanted to tell him of a Place? A Perſon whom he had never ſeen before he ſaw him in the Park, how could he expect that? This was his aukward Reaſon for deſiring his Companion to leave him.

I beg Pardon, if I have omitted any Thing; theſe are the Circumſtances that have occurred to me on this Occaſion; they are ſo ſtrong and neceſſary in the Proof of the Priſoner's Guilt, that I will venture to ſay, it is much more ſatisfactory to an indifferent Perſon, than poſitive Teſtimony,---the poſitive Teſtimony of any Man, as Men are liable to Miſtakes, as a Miſtake in Time, a Miſtake in Perſons, will exceedingly vary the Caſe; but Variety of Circumſtances, which tally in their own Nature, cannot lye or deceive.

This Proſecution is commenced merely for the Sake of Juſtice; I am inſtructed to ſay from his Grace, it is perfectly indifferent to him what will be the Iſſue of this Trial: He thought it his Duty to come here, and leaves it to his Country to determine as they ſhall think proper.

The Duke of Marlborough ſworn.

I received this Letter from an unknown Hand, dated the 29th of November, and directed to me, appointing me to meet the Writer on a certain Spot in Hyde-Park.

(The firſt Letter read.)

To his Grace the Duke of Marlborough.

[With Care and Speed.]

xxviiii November.

" My Lord,

" AS Ceremony is an idle Thing upon moſt Occaſions, more eſpecially to Perſons in my State of Mind, I ſhall proceed immediately to acquaint you with the Motive and End of addreſſing this Epiſtle to you, which is equally intereſting to us both. You are to know, then, that my preſent Situation in Life is ſuch, that I ſhould prefer Annihilation to a Continuance in it: Deſperate Diſeaſes require deſperate Remedies; and you are the Man I have pitched upon, either to make me, or to unmake yourſelf. As I never had the Honour to live among the Great, the Tenour of my Propoſals will not be very courtly; but let that be an Argument to enforce the Belief of what I am now going to write. It has employed my Invention for ſome Time to find out a Method to deſtroy another, without expoſing my own Life; that I have accompliſhed, and defy the Law. Now for the Application of it. I am deſperate, and muſt be provided for: You have it in your Power, it is my Buſineſs to make it your Inclination, to ſerve me; which you muſt determine to comply with, by procuring me a genteel Support for my Life; or your own will be at a Period before this Seſſions of Parliament is over. I have more Motives than one for ſingling you out firſt upon this Occaſion; and I give you this fair Warning, becauſe the Means I ſhall make uſe of are too fatal to be eluded by the Power of Phyſic. If you think this of any Conſequence, you will not fail to meet the Author on Sunday next, at Ten in the Morning, or on Monday (if the Weather ſhould be rainy on Sunday) near the firſt Tree beyond the Stile in Hyde-Park, in the Foot-walk to Kenſington: Secrecy and Compliance may preſerve you from a double Danger of this Sort; as there is a certain Part of the World, where your Death has more than been wiſhed for, upon other Motives. I know the World too well, to truſt this Secret in any Breaſt but my own. A few Days determine me your Friend or Enemy.

" FELTON.

" You will apprehend that I mean you ſhould be alone; and depend upon it, that a Diſcovery of any Artifice in this Affair will be fatal to you: My Safety is inſured by my Silence; for Confeſſion only can condemn me."

Q. What did your Grace do upon the Receipt of this Letter?

Duke of Marlborough. I went to the Place at the Time appointed. It was at the firſt Tree near the Stile in Hyde-Park, in the Way to Kenſington, at the End of the Serpentine Water, betwixt that Water and a little Pond. I was there ſome Time, and ſaw Nobody ſtop that I could ſuſpect to be the Perſon; upon which I was going away: But as I came to Hyde-Park Corner, I turned my Horſe, and ſaw a Perſon ſtand loitering, and looking at the Water over the Bridge. This was, I believe, within twenty Yards of the Tree, and this induced me to go back again. I rode up to the Perſon very gently, and paſſed by him once or twice, expecting him to ſpeak to me; he did not. I made him a Bow, and aſked him, if he had ſomething to ſay to me? He ſaid, No, I don't know you. I ſaid, I am the Duke of Marlborough; now you know me, I imagine you have ſomething to ſay to me. He ſaid, No, I have not. Then I rode away.

Q. Was your Grace armed?

D. of Marl. I had Piſtols before me.

Q. Had your Grace any Great Coat on?

D. of Marl. No, I had not. My Star might eaſily be ſeen.

Q. Does your Grace ſee any body here that you ſaw there?

D. of Marl. It was the Priſoner at the Bar.

Q. Had your Grace any Servant or Attendant with you?

D. of Marl. I had no Servant with me; there was a Perſon, a Friend of mine, at a good Diſtance in the Park. A Day or two after, I cannot be ſure whether it was the next Day, or the Day after that, I received a ſecond Letter.

Counſel for the Priſoner. I am under a great Difficulty, whether I ſhall object againſt this Letter being read or not. Your Lordſhip ſees the firſt is a Letter ſent to the Duke of Marlborough, demanding a very valuable Thing, viz. a genteel Employment for Life. This is to the ſame noble Duke, not demanding that valuable Thing; but demanding two or three hundred Pounds in Bank Notes. Theſe Demands are very different and diſtinct from one another: So different and diſtinct, that they ſeem to me to be different Felonies. My Lord, I apprehend one Felony, whoever it may affect, cannot be Evidence of another Felony; nor can this Letter, ſuppoſing there is any Thing in it amounting to a Felony, be Evidence to another Felony—— but there were ſome Acknowledgment in that directly affecting the Priſoner at the Bar; but I am inclined that the whole of this Matter ſhall come before the Court, from my Opinion of the Defendant's Innocence, and the ſubſtantial Merits of his Defence; and I think myſelf very happy that I have the Aſſiſtance of ſuch a Court, who are always Counſel for the Priſoner, where the Life, Property, and Character of a Man is at Stake; and who, under theſe Circumſtances, will do that which is right, admit or not admit what is not proper Evidence. I don't firmly object to it; I don't think it for the Intereſt of my Client to ſuppreſs it, who is called upon to anſwer in this Matter; therefore I leave the Court to do as they think proper.

Coun. for Crown. I deſire, if you have any Objections, to make them now.

Court. The Uſe made of this Letter is to ſupport the Evidence of the firſt Letter, let the Contents be what they will. The Uſe they make of it is to ſhew, that the Priſoner at the Bar was the Writer or Sender of the firſt Letter.

(The ſecond Letter read.)

To his Grace the Duke of Marlborough.

" My Lord,

" You receive this as an Acknowledgment of your Punctuality as to the Time and Place of Meeting on Sunday laſt, though it was owing to you that it anſwered no Purpoſe. The Pageantry of being armed, and the Enſign of your Order were uſeleſs, and too conſpicuous: You needed no Attendant; the Place was not calculated for Miſchief, nor was any intended. If you walk in the Weſt-Iſle of Weſtminſter-Abbey, towards Eleven o'Clock on Sunday next, your Sagacity will point out the Perſon, whom you will addreſs by aſking h Company to take a Turn or two with you. You will not fail, on Inquiry, to be acquainted with the Name and Place of Abode, according to which Directions you will pleaſe to ſend two or three hundred Pound Bank Notes the next Day by the Penny-Poſt. Exert not your Curioſity too early: It is in your Power to make me grateful on certain Terms. I have Friends who are faithful; but they do not bark before they bite.

" I am, &c. &c.

" F."

Q. What did your Grace do upon the Receipt of this ſecond Letter?

D. of Marlb.

D. of Marlborough. I went to Weſtminſter-Abbey at the Time the Letter appointed. I had been walking there about five or ſix Minutes before I ſaw any body that I ſuſpected; then I ſaw the Perſon I had ſeen before in Hyde-Park, and another Perſon who ſeemed to be a good-looking Man, a ſubſtantial Tradeſman; They came in and looked on the Monuments. I knowing the Perſon again, went and ſtood by them; but the Priſoner ſaid nothing to me: Soon after they both of them went towards the Choir; the Stranger, I may call him, went into the Choir, and the Priſoner turned back and came towards me, but did not ſpeak to me. Then I aſked him, if he had any thing to ſay to me, or any Commands for me? He ſaid, No, my Lord, I have not. I ſaid, Sure you have? He ſaid, No, my Lord. He walked up and down one Side the Iſle, and I the other to give him a little more Time; but he did not ſpeak: Then I went away out at the great Door, and left him in the Abbey. I looked back to ſee if he watched me going out, but I did not ſee him.

Q. Had your Grace any body with you in the Abbey?

D. of Marlb. There were two or three People placed in Diſguiſe, ready, if I had given them the Signal, to have him taken up. Though I was certain it was the ſame Perſon whom I had ſeen and ſpoke to in the Park, I thought not proper to give the Signal, but to run a little longer Riſque rather than to take up an innocent Man. Very ſoon after this I received another Letter, this is it.

(The third Letter read.)

To his Grace the Duke of Marlborough.

"My Lord,

"I am fully convinced you had a Companion on Sunday. I interpret "it as owing to the Weakneſs of human Nature; but ſuch Proceeding is "far from being ingenuous, and may produce bad Effects; whilſt it is "impoſſible to anſwer the End propoſed. You will ſee me again ſoon, "as it were by Accident, and may eaſily find where I go to; in conſe-"quence of which, by being ſent to, I ſhall wait on your Grace, but ex-"pect to be quite alone, and to converſe in Whiſpers. You will likewiſe "give your Honour, upon meeting, that no Part of the Converſation ſhall "tranſpire. Theſe and the former Terms complied with, inſure your "Safety: My Revenge, in caſe of Non-compliance, (or any Scheme to "expoſe me) will be ſlower, but not leſs ſure; and ſtrong Suſpicion the "utmoſt that can poſſibly enſue upon it; while the Chances would be "ten-fold againſt you. You will poſſibly be in Doubt after the Meet-"ing, but it is quite neceſſary the Outſide ſhould be a Maſk to the In-"The Family of the BLOODS is not extinct, though they are not in "my Scheme."

Duke of Marlb. At about two Months after the Receipt of this, I received another Letter, this is it.

(The fourth Letter read.)

To his Grace the Duke of Marlborough.

"May it pleaſe your Grace,

"I Have Reaſon to believe, that the Son of one Barnard, a Surveyor "in Abingdon-Buildings, Weſtminſter, is acquainted with ſome Secrets that "nearly concern your Safety; his Father is now out of Town, which "will give you an Opportunity of queſtioning him more privately. It "would be uſeleſs to your Grace, as well as dangerous to me, to appear "more publickly in this Affair.

"Your ſincere Friend,

"ANONYMOUS.

"He frequently goes to Storey's-Gate
Coffee-Houſe."

D. of Marlb. There is no Date to this Letter. About a Week or ten Days after I received this Letter, I ſent a Meſſage to the Coffee-Houſe, by Mr. Merrick, who returned and told me he found Mr. Barnard there, and that he ſaid, What could the Duke of Marlborough want with him? He had ſpoke with him once in Hyde-Park, and another Time in Weſtminſter-Abbey. The Meſſenger told me, he ſaid he would wait on me, which he did at Marlborough-Houſe, about half an Hour after Ten o'Clock, I think, on the Friday following.

Priſoner. It was Thurſday, my Lord.

D. of Marlb. I cannot be ſure as to the Day. When he came in, I knew, at firſt Sight, it was the ſame Perſon that I had ſeen in the Park and in the Abbey. I deſired him to walk with me into a Room, and immediately ſhut the Door when we were in. I aſked him as before; he ſaid, he had nothing to ſay to me; then I told him of the laſt Letter I received, that it mentioned his Name, and that he knew ſomething concerning my Safety; he ſaid, he knew nothing of it. Then I recapitulated all the Letters, beginning with the firſt, and remarked to him, that it was ſtrange to me, that a Man that wrote ſo very correct, without falſe Engliſh in any Shape, ſhould be guilty of ſo low an Action; he ſaid, A Man may be very learned, and very poor. I then took Notice of the ſecond Letter, and ſaid, there muſt be ſomething very odd in the Man; he ſaid, I imagine the Man muſt be mad. I ſaid, he ſeems ſurpriſed that I ſhould have Piſtols; ſaid he, I was ſurpriſed to ſee your Grace with Piſtols, and your Star on. I ſaid, Why was you ſurpriſed at that? His Anſwer was, after ſtopping a Moment, It was ſo cold a Day; I wondered you had not a Great Coat on: Then I afterwards ſhew'd him the Letter again where his Name was mentioned, and walked with him to the Window; and as I read it, when I came to that Part where it ſaid his Father was out of Town, he ſaid, It is very odd, my Father was then out of Town. I ſaid nothing to him of that, though it ſtruck me a good deal, as there was no Date to the Letter. I ſaid, if you are innocent, it behoves you much more than me to find out the Author of thoſe Letters, particularly the laſt; for it was an Attempt to blaſt his Character behind his Back; he ſeemed to give me a Smile, and away he went. I did not apprehend him then.

Counſel for the Priſoner. In what Manner did your Grace receive this firſt Letter?

D. of Marlb. I am Maſter of the Ordnance. Somebody or other had put it in under the Door of the Office in the Night-time, and the Keeper of the Door ſent it to me the next Day.

Q. As to the ſecond Letter, which Way did your Grace receive that?

D. of Marlb. That was ſent the ſame Way, by being put under the Door as the other.

Counſel. In Conſequence of the firſt Letter, your Grace went into the Park on Horſe-back, and was there ſome Time without ſeeing any body you ſuſpected, Were there not People there?

D. of Marlb. I ſaw ſeveral People on Horſe-back, and ſome few walking in a Hurry on Foot.

Q. Pray, my Lord Duke, after you had ſeen this Perſon loitering, was there any thing going forward, ſuch as hunting a Duck, or the like?

D. of Marlb. No, nothing in the World as I ſaw; it was a very cold Day.

Q. Your Lordſhip ſaid there was another Perſon at a Diſtance, an Attendant on your Grace; How far might that Perſon be off when you was ſpeaking to the Priſoner?

D. of Marlb. I cannot tell exactly. I had ſpoke to him to keep a great Way off.

Q. Was he in View of your Grace?—D. of Marlb. I dare ſay he was.

Q. Might not any Perſon equally ſee that Perſon as well as your Grace?

D. of Marlb. I ſuppoſe he might.

Q. Was your Grace there at the Time?

D. of Marlb. I was there rather before the Time, I believe.

Q. Did he in the leaſt offer to follow your Grace?

D. of Marlb. No, he ſeemed to go the other Way.

Q. With reſpect to the ſecond Letter, your Grace went according to Appointment to Weſtminſter-Abbey, and ſaw the Priſoner and another Perſon come into the Abbey; Before that other Perſon had left him, had your Grace been near him?

D. of Marlb. I had; I ſtood by him in Hopes he would ſpeak to me, if he was the Perſon that wrote the Letters.

Q. Whether the Circumſtance was not ſuch, that That other Perſon might very well believe your Grace wanted to ſpeak to the Priſoner?

D. of Marlb. That I cannot tell. I ſtood very near the Priſoner, wanting him to ſpeak to me. It is poſſible he might think ſo.

Q. Whether there were not at that Time ſeveral Perſons attending on your Grace?—D. of Marlb. There were two or three.

Q. Did your Grace ſpeak to either of them in the Abbey?

D. of Marlb. No, I did not.

Q. Whether, if there was any other Perſon in Weſtminſter-Abbey at that Time, whether that third Perſon might not have taken Mr. Barnard for your Grace's Companion, as your Grace ſpoke to him?

D. of Marlb. Upon my Word, I cannot tell that.

Q. Could there be a Perſon to whom that Expreſſion, in the third Letter, might be applied, referring to your Grace's Companion, beſides Mr. Barnard?

D. of Marlb. Yes, it might be applied to a Gentleman that went away with me in the Coach from the Abbey.

Q. Whether your Grace did not bow ſeveral Times to the Priſoner before you ſpoke?—D. of Marlb. No, I don't think I did.

Counſel. With reſpect to the third Letter, your Grace heard no more of that till the fourth came?

D. of Marlb. I did not; and when the fourth came I ſent to Mr. Barnard.

Q. Did your Grace know Mr. Barnard before you received theſe Letters?—D. of Marlb. No, I did not at all.

Q. Does your Grace now know whether he was a Perſon in ſuch Situation in Life, as anſwered to the Deſcription in the Letters?

D. of Marlb. I don't know the leaſt Thing of him, either Character or Circumſtances.

Counſel. Then, abſtracted from theſe Circumſtances, ſhould your Grace have entertained any Suſpicion of him more than of any other Perſon?

D. of Marlb. I did not know there was ſuch a Man in the World.

Q. When he came to your Grace's Houſe, did he come in very readily?

D. of Marlb. He did.

Q. Whether his Anſwer was, I was ſurpriſed to ſee you armed too, or I was ſurpriſed to ſee you armed?

D. of Marlb. I cannot take upon me to ſay whether he laid ſuch an Emphaſis on it or not.

Counſel. Then he made no Secret of ſeeing your Grace in the Park?

D. of Marlb. No.

Counſel. Nor in the Abbey?

D. of Marlb. No.

Q. Your Grace mention'd, he ſaid, It is very odd, my Father was out of Town then! Could your Grace apply that, in the Manner it was ſpoke, that his Father was out of Town when the Meſſage came to him?

D. of Marlb. I really underſtood him, that he knew his Father was out of Town at the Time of his writing the Letter.

Q. Did your Grace mention the Time you received it?

D. of Marlb. No, I did not mention any Time.

Q. Did he come punctually to his Time?

D. of Marlb. He did; I think the Meſſenger ſaid he would wait on me about half an Hour after Ten.

Q. In what Manner was he apprehended?

D. of Marlb. I do not know; I underſtood he was ſummoned.

Q. It has been ſaid, he went away with a Smile; Pray, my Lord Duke, might not that Smile expreſs the Conſciouſneſs of his Innocence as well as any thing elſe?

D. of Marlb. I ſhall leave that to the Great Judge.

Q. He ſaid, A Man might be very learned, and very poor; Does your Grace know whether this Perſon at the Bar is either learned or poor?

D. of Marlb. I do not know indeed.

Q. May not that Expreſſion fall from any Man whatever?

D. of Marlb. I cannot ſay as to that.

James Merrick. I was directed from his Grace to carry a Meſſage to Storey's-Gate Coffee-houſe; I went, and there was the Priſoner at the Bar: I told him, the Duke of Marlborough wanted to ſpeak with him; he expreſſed ſome Surprize at what the Duke ſhould want with him, but no Fear.

Q. When was this?

Merri

Merrick. This was on Tuesday the 25th of April, in the Evening; and he said, he would wait on the Duke on the Thursday following, between Ten and Eleven o'Clock.

Cross-Examination.

Q. What Reason did he give for not waiting on his Grace sooner?

Merrick. His Excuse was, he was going out of Town.

Q. Did he say any thing to you of his having seen the Duke before?

Merrick. He did. He said, he had seen his Grace three Times in his Life, once in Hyde-Park, and once in Westminster-Abbey, and once at the Camp at Byfleet; he said, he did not know the Duke when he saw him in Hyde-Park, till the Duke himself told him who he was.

Q. Did he tell you what had passed either in the Park or in the Abbey?

Merrick. He told me, that in the Park the Duke rode up to him, and asked him, Sir, do you want any thing with me? His Answer was, No. Then the Duke asked him, If he knew who he was? He answered, No, again. Then the Duke told him, he was the Duke of Marlborough; then he made his Bow: And in Westminster-Abbey he told me he thought the Duke had spoke to him; but on turning about he said, he did not; and he turned and went away.

Q. Where had you this Conversation?

Merrick. This was in a Room in the Coffee-house by ourselves.

Q. Did he tell you this voluntarily?

Merrick. He did. At first he seemed surprized, and then said, he recollected these Circumstances.

Q. Did he express any Signs of Fear?

Merrick. No; but he seemed much surprized.

William Marsden. I was appointed by his Grace the Duke and Justice Fielding to watch the Duke in Westminster-Abbey, and had two Constables there in order to apprehend the Person, if his Grace had thought proper to give the Signal.

Q. Were you all together?

Marsden. No, but so dispersed that our Intention might not be known; I was within the Choir hearing the Prayers for some Time; there was a Gentleman near the Duke with a Sword, whom I thought the Person at first, but I learned afterwards, he was an Acquaintance of his Grace's; I was not apprized that any such Person would attend him: I saw Mr. Barnard and another Person come in, and his Eye was fixed on his Grace as he walked in the Isle; they walked down the Middle Isle, not directly to his Grace; in a little Time I observed his Grace to meet them, and as I thought by the Behaviour of Mr. Barnard, that he spoke first to the Duke, presently after that Mr. Barnard's Partner went off from him; then Mr. Barnard went and stood looking at the Duke; then I thought Mr. Barnard was the Person; so I did not mind the other: I saw his Grace speak to him again, but was not near enough to hear what they said: After that, his Grace walked backwards and forwards once or twice, and went out at the Door he came in at; the other Gentleman immediately followed the Duke; I followed to see what passed; the Gentleman, the Duke's Acquaintance, walked opposite to the Duke; Mr. Barnard was got looking behind a Post; any body that was on that Side he was on could see him, but a Person on that Side his Grace was on could not; I believe it was impossible for his Grace to see him at that Time; he looked after his Grace a considerable Time, then walked back: I followed his Grace, and told him what Observations I had made; his Grace immediately told me, the Man in black was the Man that he had seen in Hyde-Park: Then I said, I wonder your Grace did not give the Signal to have him apprehended; his Grace said the same as repeated here, He would rather let it be a little longer, than to take up an innocent Man; he should hear of him again, he apprehended, for he seemed to be afraid to speak to him at that Time.

Q. Was he apprehended after this?

Marsden. He was. I procured him to come before Justice Fielding, by a sham Summons, in which he was accused with Assault and Battery: He was not taken up till he came there, then he seemed surprized.

Q. Did he tell you about any thing that happened in Westminster-Abbey?

Marsden. I was with him in the Dining-Room at Mr. Fielding's, in order to take his Examination; I went as it were out of Complaisance to him, not to leave him alone; he talked a great deal, but I did not make such Observations of it as I should have done if I had thought of his coming here: I remember he said he ordered his Friend to walk off, that he might see what the Duke wanted with him; and said, he thought the Duke must come there by Appointment: He mentioned something about the Duke's giving him a Place or Post; I think he said he ordered his Friend to walk off, to see if the Duke would give him some Place; or, Perhaps the Duke wants to give me a Place.

Q. Are you sure he said the Duke wanted to give him a Place? Or, that his Friend said, Go towards him, perhaps the Duke wants to give you some Place?

Marsden. I cannot be sure which; I know the Word Place was mentioned.

Cross-Examination.

Q. Where is the Summons?

Marsden. This is the Summons (producing one); I did not serve it on the Day it bears Date; it was made out on Saturday the 29th of April. I was to have given him it that Afternoon, but I was told he was gone to Brentford; so I went early on Monday Morning following, and gave it him: This was only made out as a Decoy; the Name in it is one of the Constables that was fixed in Westminster-Abbey, named Roger Boucher.

Q. Did he shew any Unwillingness to come?

Marsden. No, none at all; he looked at it, and said, It is a Summons from Mr. Fielding; he read it over, and said, Roger Boucher! I know nothing of him; give my Compliments, tell him I will wait on him.

Q. As to this Place that he looked through, which Door is it at?

Marsden. It is the West Gate near the Gate-house; just at the Corner there is another Gate, and next to the Wall is a Sort of a Post, which is what he looked through, or by.

Q. Is not that Gate, as you call it, a close wainscotted Door?

Marsden. It is a Door, but the Place where I mean is a Post; he peeped between the Post and the Wall. I have never been since to look at it; if there is not a Hole between that and the Wall, he must look by the other Side of it.

Q. Which Way was his Head?

Marsden. That was towards the Gentleman who was close to the Wall, opposite him; he must have turned his Head farther from the Wall to have seen his Grace, as his Grace was going to take Coach.

Prisoner's Defence.

I am intirely innocent of this Affair with which I am charged. I leave it to the Court and the Jury, with the Evidence that will be produced.

For the Prisoner.

John Barnard. I am Father to the Prisoner at the Bar.

Q. What is his Employ?

John Barnard. He is employed in my Business as a Builder and Surveyor principally; in not only that, and drawing Plans, but also in receiving great Sums of Money.

Q. Have his Accounts always stood right and clear?

John Barnard. They always have.

Q. Do you look upon him to be a sober Man?

John Barnard. I have had great Reason to believe him such, more particularly lately.

Q. Has he been possessed of large Sums of Money?

John Barnard. He has, of considerable Sums; I have oftener asked him for Money than he me.

Q. Had you any Occasion to send him to Kensington on Sunday the 4th of December?

John Barnard. I had nothing, but Circumstances brought the Day to my Mind since: I gave him an Order on that Sunday Morning, when we were at Breakfast, to go to Kensington, to know whether there was some Money paid by the Treasurer of the Turnpikes for Gravel: I have a Brother there, named Joseph; he went there and did his Business, and dined with my Brother.

Q. How do you know that?

John Barnard. Because he told me so; and the Sollicitor of the Turnpike told me he had been with him, and in consequence of which I had my Money afterwards.

Q. Have you ever heard your Son take any Notice of his meeting with the Duke of Marlborough that Day?

John Barnard. When he came Home, he told me, he had met the Duke of Marlborough, and these Circumstances of his Grace's taking Notice of him; he mentioned it as an extraordinary Thing. I asked him, if he had not looked a little impudently (as he has a near Sight) at him, or pulled his Glass out? He said, he saw another Gentleman at a Distance, and the Duke was armed; and he imagined there might be a Duel going forwards; he has from that Time to this mentioned it as a very strange Event several Times in my House, without any Reserve at all.

Cross-Examination.

Q. At the Time you sent your Son to Kensington on the 4th of December, suppose you had not given him an Order to go there, whether he was not at Liberty to go where he pleased?

John Barnard. Yes; I never restrain him.

Q. Did he say he was surprized to see the Duke without a Great Coat?

John Barnard. I cannot remember that Particular.

Q. Did you hear him mention his seeing the Duke of Marlborough in Westminster-Abbey?

John Barnard. I have very often, and very publickly, and with some Surprize; as he has that in Hyde-Park. I said to him, I would not have you be public in speaking of Things of this Kind, lest a Use be made of it to your Disadvantage.

Thomas Barnard. I am First Cousin to the Prisoner at the Bar. On Saturday the 3d of December I was at Kensington, and lay at my Uncle's House there and dined there. On the Sunday the Prisoner came there before Dinner, he said he had been to do some Business that Way. He dined with us; there were my Uncle, Aunt, he and I; he related that Circumstance to us of meeting with the Duke of Marlborough in Hyde-Park; he said he rode up to him, and asked if he knew who he was; he answered, No; he replied, I am the Duke of Marlborough. He related it with some Chearfulness, though as Matter of Surprize.

Q. How long have you known the Prisoner?

T. Barnard. From his Birth: He is in Business with his Father; I always understood he would succeed his Father; I never knew him to behave any otherwise than well in my Life. I never thought him extravagant, nor never heard so; I had always looked upon him to be an honest Man; his Father is in very great Business.

Q. Should you look upon it, that a small Place would be equal to the Chance of succeeding his Father in his Business?

T. Barnard. I should never have thought of such a Thing; I look upon his Situation in Life to be a very extraordinary Thing: I thought he would give the Preference to that above any Thing else.

Cross-Examination.

Q. Do you think he would refuse a good Place?

T. Barnard. No Man would refuse a Place that is to his Advantage.

Joseph Barnard. I am Uncle to the Prisoner at the Bar; I live at Kensington; my Nephew, Thomas Barnard, lay at my House on the Saturday Night, and dined with the Prisoner at the Bar on the Sunday. I remember he then mentioned having met with the Duke of Marlborough in Hyde-Park, while we were sitting at Dinner. I said I was surprized he should meet with him that Day; he said he saw but one Gentleman at a Distance, and the Duke was armed; and his Grace looked him full in the Face, very earnestly (which he seemed to speak with a great deal of Pleasure to me); he is very near-sighted, he can see nothing at a Distance without the Use of a Glass. I have heard him since speak four or five Times of seeing the Duke in Westminster-Abbey.

Q. How long ago?

Joseph Barnard. About a Month ago. He is brought up under his Father in very considerable Business, and a Man of some Property besides, and was employed as his Clerk or Book-keeper.

Q. Is he a sober Man?

Joseph Barnard. Very ſober; I never heard to the contrary; neither did I ever hear his Father ſpeak of him as idle or dilatory.

Thomas Calcut. I live at Kenſington: I remember the Priſoner coming there on a Sunday Morning; a very cold, foggy Morning; with ſome Meſſage from his Father to me, to know whether the Sollicitor had paid ſome Money or not. He was under his Father, as I am under mine; he deſired me to go with him; I ſaid, Stay and dine with me; he ſaid, he could not promiſe, becauſe he had promiſed to dine with his Uncle Joſeph: He went into the Parlour, and ſaid, It is vaſtly cold: There has been the oddeſt Accident happened as I came over the Park! The Duke of Marlborough came up to me, and aſked me, if I knew him? I ſaid, No. He aſked me, if I wanted any thing with him? I told him, No. He ſaid, I am the Duke of Marlborough, if you want any thing with me; then the Duke went away, and he came there. He expreſſed a great Surprize at it, and I thought it a very odd Affair.

Henry Clive, Eſq. I have known the Priſoner two Years; I remember dining with him on the 8th of December, at his Father's Houſe, with a great deal of Company; I heard him then ſay at Dinner, that ſome few Days before, he had met the Duke of Marlborough in Hyde-park; that the Duke aſked him, if he had any Buſineſs with him? He ſaid, No; he then told him who he was, and aſked him the ſame again; he ſaid, No. That the Duke ſeemed in ſome Confuſion, and was armed; and he thought he was about a Duel; and indeed I thought it was a very great Lye. I have gone very frequently to his Father's in relation to Brentford Bridge. I have no other Acquaintance with him, only going to his Father's, ſo cannot ſay any thing to his Character, either frugal or extravagant.

Q. Can you name any body that dined there that Day?

Mr. Clive. Yes, there was Mr. Wilſon and his Lady, Mr. Tunſtall and his Lady, another Gentleman and his Wife, and the Priſoner's younger Brother that is at Weſtminſter School.

Mrs. Mary Wilſon. I dined at Mr. Barnard's on Thurſday the 8th of December; the Priſoner I remember ſaid he had been in Hyde-Park ſome Days before, and there he ſaw a Gentleman on Horſeback come up to him, and aſked him, if he had any thing to ſay to him? He ſaid, No; then he ſaid, I am the Duke of Marlborough, now you know me, have you any thing to ſay to me? He ſaid, No. He talked of this very freely to us all.

James Greenwood. I live at Deptford, with a Relation in the Brewing-Way; I came from Deptford on Saturday to the Priſoner's Father's; and on the Sunday following I was there at Breakfaſt; I ſollicited the Priſoner to get himſelf dreſſed to go with me into the Park, being to meet a Perſon at Twelve o'Clock; I with a good deal of Difficulty got him to dreſs himſelf; I put my Shirt on in the Parlour, and after that he put on his; I fancy we breakfaſted about Nine o'Clock; when we got to the End of Henry the VIIth's Chapel, the Priſoner would have gone the other Way into the Park without going through the Abbey; I took hold of his Sleeve, and ſaid, Barnard, you ſhall go through the Abbey; this was a little after Eleven; this was no unuſual Thing; we have ſeveral Times walked in the Park, and ſometimes parted.

Q. Which is the neareſt Way to the Park?

Greenwood. I do not know which is the neareſt Way, through the Abbey, or by the Side of it; this was the firſt Time I believe that I ever ſaw the Monument of General Hargrave. After that we walked down to the Monument erected at the public Expence for Captain Cornwall; the Preacher was in the Pulpit; when we were ſtanding at Captain Cornwall's Monument, the Priſoner made ſome Obſervation on the Execution of it in his own Way. After we had ſtayed there ſome Time, I ſaw his Grace the Duke of Marlborough, who was got pretty near us: Upon ſeeing the Duke, I jogged him by the Elbow, and ſaid, Step this Way; he ſeemed to look at him.

Q. Had you heard what happened in Hyde-Park, previous to this?

Greenwood. I had; I believe it was told to me by the Priſoner at the Bar; on my jogging him we walked up the Middle Iſle towards the Choir. I ſaid, Did you ſee that Gentleman in the blue Coat, or do you know him? No, ſaid he, not I. No, ſaid I, it is the Duke of Marlborough; we will walk to the Monument again. The Duke came, and placed himſelf pretty near me a ſecond Time; after this we walked away. I believe we walked ſome conſiderable Time in that Iſle in which is the Monument of Sir Godfrey Kneller, there I believe we paſſed and repaſſed again.

Q. Why did you jog him?

Greenwood. Becauſe he is very near-ſighted. At laſt I think it ſo happened, we paſſed the Duke between two of the Pillars; and as I had hold of his Arm walking together, there was barely Room for three People to paſs a-breaſt; the Duke rather gave way, and made, as I thought, a kind of a Bow. Upon this I ſaid, The Duke of Marlborough's Behaviour is extremely particular; he certainly has ſomething to ſay to you; I ſuppoſe he does not chuſe to ſay it while I am with you, I will go into the Choir, and do you walk up and down here, and he will poſſibly ſpeak to you. While I was there, I looked; the firſt Thing I ſaw was the Duke of Marlborough and the Priſoner at the Bar, with their Heads bowing together, as if it was the firſt Salutation.

Q. Had the Priſoner the leaſt Inclination to go into the Abbey before you propoſed it to him?

Greenwood. No: he did not diſcover any.

Q. Did he diſcover any Inclination to be left alone, when you propoſed to go into the Choir?

Greenwood. No, he did not in the leaſt; in ſome few Minutes after, the Priſoner and I met together, he told me the Duke of Marlborough was gone out of the Abbey, he had ſeen him go out. I ſaid, What paſſed? To which he replied, The Duke ſaid, did you ſpeak to me? or who ſpoke firſt I cannot tell.

Q. In this Tranſaction did the Priſoner appear openly, or as if he had ſome ſecret Tranſaction to do with the Duke?

Greenwood. No, it was open and clear.

Q. Did you ſee the Duke come in?

Greenwood. No, I did not; we were employed in looking at the Monuments; we looked at ſeveral.

Q. What did you do when you firſt came in?

Greenwood. We walked along, and looked on the Monuments.

Q. Did you ſee the Priſoner's Eye fixed on any Perſon?

Greenwood. No, I did not.

Q. Is Mr. Barnard very near-ſighted?

Greenwood. He is; I queſtion whether he can be able to ſee a Perſon acroſs this Room.

Q. Where did you go, when you went out of the Abbey?

Greenwood. We went immediately into the Park; and after walking there, we met with two Ladies whom I knew, and to whom Mr. Barnard was not unknown, to whom we related this Affair; he always repeated theſe Things, that is, this and that in Hyde-Park, as Matter of great Curioſity.

Q. How long have you been acquainted with him?

Greenwood. I have been acquainted with him ſeven Years.

Q. What is his Character?

Greenwood. I know nothing to the contrary but that he is an induſtrious, ſober young Man.

Q. Did you ever hear that he was a profligate, expenſive Man?

Greenwood. No, never.

Q. His Father is in great Buſineſs; is he not?

Greenwood. His Father's Buſineſs is a very conſiderable Thing.

William Ball. I am the Maſter of Storey's-Gate Coffee-houſe; I remember Mr. Merrick coming to my Houſe, to inquire for Mr. Barnard; he aſked me, if Mr. Barnard was at my Houſe? I ſaid, Leave any Meſſage, I will deliver it to him; he ſaid, he wanted to ſee him that Evening; he left his Meſſage, I delivered it to him; and he came rather before Eight o'Clock to him. He has uſed my Houſe ſome Years, always a well-behaved Man; I never perceived any Extravagancy in him, always a ſober, regular Man. I have heard him ſpeak of having met the Duke of Marlborough, but not till after this; he ſaid he had been to his Grace at his Grace's Houſe; this was as he called at my Houſe, after he had been there.

Q. Did he mention what had paſſed?

William Ball. No, he did not; only that he had ſeen his Grace.

Croſs-Examination.

Q. Did he not tell you any Thing that paſſed?

William Ball. He did not tell me a Syllable of it.

Q. What did you ſay to him?

William Ball. I told him, may-be he was going to have a Commiſſion; he ſaid, he would not thank his Grace, except it was a very good one.

Q. How did he appear as to Chearfulneſs, or Dullneſs, or the like?

William Ball. He ſeemed to be very chearful, not in the leaſt concerned; the ſame as uſual, compoſed, rather more chearful.

Counſel. We will now ſhew his Behaviour after he was apprehended.

Mr. Ford. While he was in Cuſtody, Mr. Fielding did me the Honour of ſending for me; he told me it was upon ſome Buſineſs which concerned the Duke of Marlborough's Life; he aſked me to go along with him and Mr. Box to New-Priſon, which I conſented to; we went together in a Coach; this was about Twelve at Night, and Mr. Barnard was then in Bed; I have really forgot what Day it was: Mr. Fielding told him, he had omitted examining his Pockets at the Time he was before him; he then ſearched his Pockets, in order to ſee whether he had any Letters or any Writings that might give Light into the Affair; he very readily let me look into his Pocket-book and Papers. Mr. Fielding with great Candour told him, he was in the Hands of a very honourable Proſecutor, and one that would be as glad to diſcover his Innocence as his Guilt. Mr. Fielding aſked him for his Keys, and he gave him the Keys of his Scrutore and Compting-houſe with great Readineſs; and I remember that I then told him, that, if he was guilty, ſome Copies might be found to correſpond with the original Letters; and if nothing of that Sort did appear, it would be a Circumſtance in his Favour.

Q. Did you or Mr. Fielding tell him he was not obliged to part with his Keys, and did he do it as Matter of Choice?

Mr. Ford. I do not recollect that; I know he parted with them very readily.

The Rev. Dr. Markham. I have known the Priſoner ſome Years; I have always conſidered him as a young Man of remarkable Sobriety and Attention to Buſineſs: I have had ſome Experience of him; I entruſted him with the Execution of ſome Matters of Importance relating to myſelf, in regard to ſurveying and valuing Eſtates, in which he acquitted himſelf ably and honeſtly; that is the Character he always had: He lives in my Neighbourhood, his Father is a Man of conſiderable Property, and carries on a large Buſineſs.

Counſel. Then you don't ſuppoſe the Priſoner to be in diſtreſſed Circumſtances?

Dr. Markham. I never ſuppoſed it, I have no Reaſon to imagine it; if he had come to me, wanting Money, he might eaſily have impoſed on me, he might have had any thing of me; he is one of the chief Perſons I truſted, and I don't know a Man on whom I would have had a greater Reliance; I thought him remarkably able in his Buſineſs, and very likely to be a conſiderable Man; and I never was more aſtoniſhed in my Life than when I heard this ſtrange Story.

Samuel Cox, Eſq. I have known Mr. Barnard about the Space of three Years laſt paſt. The Beginning of my Acquaintance was on the Account of his ſurveying of Houſes in the New Square, Dean's-Yard; the Surveys were generally made by him; he did his Buſineſs with ſuch Accuracy, that I have always thought him a Man very attentive to his Buſineſs, and very unlikely of being charged with this Fact; and upon his being employed upon public Schemes, I employed him in my own Affairs; I employed his Father to finiſh ſome Houſes for me at Hammerſmith, the Son was conſtantly employed till the 6th of April laſt; I have at different Times paid to Mr. Barnard about ſeven hundred Pounds, all paid into the Hands of the Priſoner, except fifty or ſeventy Pounds of it. He has appeared as the Perſon that managed his Father's Buſineſs: If he had come to me, and mentioned any Want of Money, upon his Father's being out of Town, or the like, he might have had two or three hundred Pounds at any Time. When I firſt was acquainted with him, I obſerved he had a remarkable ſhort Sight; when he has looked full at me, I have thought he ſneered at me; he has ſuch a Fall with his Eye-lids on the Account of his Short-Sightedneſs; I have found his Eyes ſo fixed upon me, that I have been going to ſpeak to him, which, by my long Acquaintance with him, I ſince found was only an Accident.

Robert Vanſittart, Eſq. I have known Mr. Barnard about five or ſix Years; my Acquaintance with him was by being acquainted with his Father, who was employed in carrying on a large Building for Mr. Lee, an Acquaintance of mine in Oxfordſhire; and theſe five Years I have been acquainted with the Son, and frequently in Company with him. In the Beginning of April he was in my Chamber, putting up ſome Book-caſes; I remember one Morning at Breakfaſt he told me the Circumſtance of meeting the Duke of Marlborough in Hyde-Park and in Weſtminſter-Abbey, in the ſame Way as the Court has been told from his Grace and the reſt of the Witneſſes: It appeared to me to be a very ſtrange Story, and he ſeemed to tell it as ſuch, as I or any body elſe would have told it. I ſuſpended my Judgment upon it, and never related it to any body, only to my Father and another Gentleman, and they looked upon it as a great Lye that Barnard had invented; I, knowing his Character, did not take it as ſuch, but thought he muſt have known it to be as he ſaid.

Q. What is your Opinion of him as to his Buſineſs?

Mr. Vanſittart. From my own perſonal Acquaintance with him, and from the many Surveys I have ſeen of his, he certainly is very capable and Maſter of his Buſineſs. I never heard any thing ill as to his private Character.

Q. Did you ever ſee him write?

Mr. Vanſittart. No; he draws very well; I have ſeen him draw.

John Smith, Eſq. I have known him eight or ten Years, and his Father's Family twenty-five. He always appeared an induſtrious, ſober, diligent Man, particularly within theſe four or five Years, ſince he has come into Buſineſs with his Father. I conſidered him as a very promiſing Genius in his Way, and one capable of conducting his Buſineſs with Reputation and Character.

Q. Did you look upon him likely to be driven to Diſtreſs, or in Want of a Place?

Mr. Smith. No, I did not. I can with great Truth ſay, moſt of the Payments in my Compting-Houſe, on his Father's Account, have moſt of them been paid by the Hands of this young Man; except the laſt five hundred Pounds: Then Mr. Barnard and his Wife came over and dined with me, and paid it; and then I blamed him for not bringing his Son.

Q. What are you?

Mr. Smith. I am a Timber-Merchant.

Joſhua Smith, Eſq. I am in Partnerſhip with my Father, the laſt Evidence. I have known the Priſoner ſeveral Years; I always thought him a very honeſt, ſober Man, capable in his Profeſſion: The Money that has been paid to us lately, except that five hundred Pounds, has been by him; they never paid leſs than a hundred Pounds at a Time, except once.

Q. Have you any Reaſon to imagine him in deſperate Circumſtances?

Mr. Joſhua Smith. There is no Reaſon as I know of to imagine ſo.

Robert Tunſtall, Eſq. I have known him two Years.

Q. What is his general Character?

Mr. Tunſtall. He is induſtrious, and very capable of his Buſineſs. His Behaviour has been prudent; he is the principal Man in his Father's Buſineſs in drawing and ſcheming *.

Mr. Peter Bruſhel. I have known him from a Child.

Q. What is his Character?

Mr. Bruſh. I always took him to be a very ſober, honeſt Man. His Father has done a great deal of Buſineſs for me, and is now at Work for me.

Q. Who did you generally pay the Money to?

Mr. Bruſh. I generally paid the Father; if the Priſoner had applied to me, I would have let him have a hundred Pounds at any Time.

Q. Is he capable of his Buſineſs?

Mr. Bruſh. He is very capable: He drew a Plan for me laſt Saturday was Se'nnight.

Q. Do you look upon him to be in deſperate or diſtreſſed Circumſtances?

Mr. Bruſh. No, I do not.

Q. Has he been always a viſible Man?---Mr. Bruſh. Always.

Mr. Jelfe. I am the King's Maſon. I have known the Priſoner ſeven Years and more.

Q. Do you look upon him to be capable of his Buſineſs?

Mr. Jelfe. I believe he is a very capable Man in his Buſineſs.

Q. What is his general Character?

Mr. Jelfe. Always a very worthy, honeſt Man.

Q. Did you ever ſee him guilty of any Extravagancy?

Mr. Jelfe. No, never.

Q. Do you live near him?

Mr. Jelfe. I am a very near Neighbour to him, and keep him Company on Evenings, within this Year or two more particular.

William Robinſon, Eſq. I have known him about ſix or ſeven Years.

Q. Is he a Perſon capable of his Profeſſion?

Mr. Robinſon. I believe he is.

Q. What has been his Behaviour?

Mr. Robinſon. I always looked upon him to be a very ſober, diligent, frugal Man.

Q. Did you look upon him to be in deſperate Circumſtances?

Mr. Robinſon. No, not at all.

Thomas Kynaſton, Eſq. I have known him ſix or ſeven Years.

Q. What are you?---Mr. Kynaſton. I belong to the Board of Works.

Q. What is your Opinion of the Priſoner's Situation?

Mr. Kynaſton. I think he is in a good one.

Q. What has been his Behaviour?

Mr. Kynaſton. That has been always good.

Mr. Keynton Cowſe. I have known him ſeven Years, and been in his Company many Times.

Q. What is his Character?

Mr. Cowſe. He is a very worthy young Man, ſober and induſtrious, always attending his Father's Buſineſs.

Mr. Uffort. I have known him about ſix or ſeven Years; he is a ſober, ſedate young Man as ever I met with. I have done Buſineſs for him ſeveral Times.

Mr. Brent. I have known him upwards of three Years.

Q. What is his Character?

Mr. Brent. He has a good Character; he is a very induſtrious Man. I have frequently paid him Money.

Mr. Jones. I have known him ſeveral Years.

Q. What is his general Character?

Mr. Jones. He is very honeſt; no Ways extravagant, that could lead him into a deſperate State; he is as moral a Man as any I know, and has as good a Character.

Mr. Wilſon. I have known him about ſeven Years.

Q. What has been his Behaviour during that Time?

Mr. Wilſon. It has been always very well. I always looked upon him as an honeſt Man.

Q. Did you ever look upon him to be in a deſperate Way in his Fortune?---Mr. Wilſon. No, never.

Q. to Mr. Barnard the Elder. Where was you when your Son was ſent for to the Duke of Marlborough's?

Mr. Barnard. I was then out of Town. I have not been in Town above one Week theſe five or ſix Weeks.

Mr. Serjeant Davy's Reply.

My Lord, and Gentlemen of the Jury,

I AM ſorry to take up any more of your Time; but the Defence conſiſting of various Parts, I would beg Leave to treſpaſs a little longer on your Patience, and make a very few Obſervations on the Caſe, as it now ſtands before you. I do not claim any Merit at all for their not oppoſing any Evidence, as was attempted on the other Side; I am ſure I ſhall be juſtified in your Opinion. Nothing has paſſed in the Courſe of this Proſecution, but what clearly manifeſts that the Duke is totally indifferent about the Iſſue of it: In this Matter he is only a Friend to Juſtice, and would wiſh for the Priſoner not to be diſturbed in any Method he ſhould take in the Courſe of his Examination: Be that as it may, I have done what I have thought right, and am very glad they have done every thing they could for the Priſoner.

I ſhall now conſider two general Queſtions: The firſt is, Whether the ſeveral Circumſtances that have been given in Evidence, on the Part of the Proſecution, independently, are in themſelves ſufficient to convince a reaſonable Underſtanding of the Priſoner's Guilt; I mean your Underſtandings as Jurymen. The ſecond Queſtion is, Whether the Defence that has been ſet up, thoſe Circumſtances are ſufficient to repel the Weight of the Evidence; I mean, whether the Defence is reconcileable to the Suſpicions of the Priſoner's Guilt; for if they are irreconcileable with the Priſoner's Guilt, (as I do not intend to impeach the Credit of any one Witneſs) I am content upon that Suppoſition, he may be acquitted: I don't mean, that any Witneſs has laid a ſingle Circumſtance before you that is not ſtrictly true, but that they may be reconcileable with the Suſpicion of his Guilt.

I do not mean to draw your Attention back to the ſeveral Circumſtances of the Proſecution; they are all before you, and they are too ſtrong and ſtriking to be eaſily forgot; they would be diminiſhed conſiderably by attempting to recapitulate them, and therefore I ſhall not attempt it: And, as I ſaid at the Opening, they are irreconcileable with any Suppoſition of the Priſoner's Innocence, independently of the Defence ſet up for him, if they are ſo ſtrong in themſelves, as it would be offering Violence to one's Underſtanding, not to conſider them as Circumſtances neceſſarily inducing his Guilt.

It will remain for your Conſideration, it is now the capital Queſtion, Whether theſe Circumſtances laid before you, conſiſting of five or ſix Parts on the Part of the Priſoner, may be reconciled with the Suſpicion of his Guilt? Becauſe, if they may, it is no Defence at all.

Gentlemen, the firſt is, the Priſoner being ſent by his Father to Kenſington on this Sunday on which he met the Duke in Hyde-Park. I did not chuſe by any Means to aſk the Father any Queſtion; I ſhould have diſobliged my Noble Client if I had done it. As, Why he was ſent to Kenſington? What Converſation might have led to that Matter? What happened at Breakfaſt with his Father was the ſole Occaſion of his going there. The Son, you ſee, is principally concerned in conducting his Father's Buſineſs; he might, or he might not propoſe the Expediency of ſuch a Journey. It is a little extraordinary, this Buſineſs (not being urgent in its own Nature) ſhould be appointed by the Father to be tranſacted on the Sunday, when the Father might as well have employed his Time in going elſewhere: Going to aſk whether a Sum of Money had been paid on the Account of Gravel, to make it neceſſary to be ſent juſt at Church-time. His Father talked of his going; he did go——What does that prove? Does it prove he was not to go to Hyde-Park any other Way? Whoever was the Writer of theſe Letters, certainly intended to have a Meeting on both the Sundays, in the Park and in the Abbey, in a very public Manner; and that agreeable to the Tenour of the Letter, he did provide himſelf with a Defence in caſe of Need. Now, be the Author of theſe Letters who it may, the Author did contrive a Subterfuge for himſelf afterwards, in order to reply to a Charge of that Nature.

Gentlemen, the next Part of the Defence is, that he at ſeveral Times and to ſeveral People related the Meetings he had had with the Duke,

* Mr. John Barnard, the Father of the Priſoner, built Kew Bridge for this Mr. Tunſtall.

and the extraordinary Occurrences. This indeed corresponds with the Observations I made: The Writer of these Letters proposed to meet the Duke at a Time that People were walking out on a Sunday, and in the Abbey, the most public Places, and at the most public Times: Is that irreconcileable with the Suspicion that the Prisoner (if he was the Author of these Letters) might have been contriving with other Persons, telling People of the several Meetings he had had with the Duke, and the Substance of those Meetings? But one Observation will arise, perhaps not much to his Service; and that is, when he told those People of his seeing the Duke, he spoke to his seeing an Attendant, which corresponds with the second Letter: What does he say about it to the Persons to whom he relates the Meeting? He saw he was armed---He saw one likewise at a Distance, and he thought there was a Duel going forwards. Now, when he spoke to the Duke of the Surprize he had entertained on seeing the Duke armed, does he assign that as a Reason of apprehending a Duel? No; it was because it was cold Weather, and he wondered to see him without a Great-Coat: So that the same Man that speaks of it to his Friends as a Circumstance that might induce a Surprize, speaks of it at another Time as being surprized, without giving that as a Reason for it.

The next Circumstance is, Mr. Greenwood's Evidence of going with him to Westminster-Abbey. There are two or three Things a little particular: After Breakfast, about Nine o'Clock, he sollicits the Prisoner to dress himself in order to go to the Park. The Prisoner seemed unwilling to go there. He said, it was not an unusual Thing, when they were to go together, for them to differ, and upon that Occasion to part. Supposing the Prisoner wanted to get rid of this Companion of his, who had layed there, and was not easily to be got rid of, why might not that account for his being unwilling to dress himself at Nine in the Morning, in order to get rid of him? For he had Time enough to dress himself an Hour after that, and to meet the Duke in the Abbey at Eleven. It is a little odd, that the Prisoner wanted to go another Way, and expressed a Reluctancy in going through the Abbey. It is clear, he did not mean to be seen by Mr. Greenwood in the Abbey: But when he could not get rid of that, and he plucked him by the Coat for that Purpose, did they prosecute their Design in going to the Park, and yet saunter a good while in the Abbey? (No Reason why they did so) First they went to General Hargrave's Monument, then to Captain Cornwall's Monument; there they stayed some Time, the Duke's Behaviour being in Mr. Greenwood's Evidence particular; from the Duke's bowing, he thought that the Duke wanted to speak to him in private. How is this reconcileable? There is not a Circumstance in all that Part of the Story of Mr. Greenwood's Evidence, which suits so well as this of his Guilt: First he wanted to get rid of Mr. Greenwood, and when he could not do that, then making no Secret of having seen the Duke, and make that tally with his telling him he had met him.

The next Circumstance is Mr. Ball's; and if that Circumstance of his Evidence strikes you as it did me, I wonder he was produced as a Witness; for, you see, he was very forward: He was blamed for it by one of his Witnesses; he thought he talked too much of having met the Duke, that was so singular, that it demanded Animadversions: Yet notwithstanding, when he had had a third Interview with the Duke, and there appeared so very material a Circumstance of the Duke's having charged him with a very extraordinary and wicked Proceeding against him; when he had told him of all these Letters, and one of them set forth his Name, as a Person that could inform his Grace of something which nearly related to his Safety, and hinted to him the Strangeness of these Letters, and charged them upon him; and after having pretended a total Ignorance of this Matter, he afterwards conceals all this from Mr. Ball: And what is another Circumstance, Mr. Ball says, he was rather more chearful in relating what he did than usual. God knows, he had no Reason to be chearful! for the Duke had charged him home with a capital Offence; the Duke had admonished him, and told him, either he was the Author of the Letters, or he was used exceeding ill by the Person that did write them. Yet, you see, in mentioning these Things to his Friend Mr. Ball, Ball considers it as a Fruit of the Duke's Benevolence to him, and says, he will give you a Post in the Army. The Prisoner replied, It must be a very good one, if I accept it.

These are all the Circumstances that they have insisted upon as Proofs of his Innocence, except one, that is his Character. They have called to that many Witnesses; they say he is very expert in his Business, a very diligent, sober Man; nothing about him as Marks of Distress; no Vices to which they find him inclined; which give him an Occasion for a Demand of this Kind; and that, upon the whole, he has passed as a very honest Man.

Gentlemen, when you come to consider that, Character goes but a very little, and indeed no Way at all, towards proving his Innocence.

In the first Place, Character can only be of Service to a Man, where his Case hangs as it were in equal Scales, and it is doubtful whether innocent or guilty; there it is that a good Character stands in some Stead, and will balance the Scale in his Favour. But this is that Sort of a Case, that this particular Character they have given of him will have no Weight to repel those several suspicious Circumstances that tally so exactly as to his Guilt. Might it not happen, that a Man betwixt twenty and thirty Years of Age, dependant in some Measure on his Father, might have a secret Call for Money, which he would wish his Father, and those Friends that are fond of lending him Money, not to be acquainted with? We know very well, there are certain Circumstances, some in this Capital City of London, where a Man might be very hard driven for the Want of Money, which he would chuse to hide from his Friends.

I know nothing of the Prisoner's particular Character; but it is enough for this Purpose, that it possibly may be his Case: If so, What then has the present Character to do with it? If the Circumstances of the Out-lines are such, can any doubt about believing he is Guilty or not? Then all those other Circumstances will have no Weight at all to counterpoise the Weight of the former.

As I said at first, if upon any Circumstances offered on the Part of the Prisoner, if the Weight of Evidence on the Part of the Prosecution is sufficient to charge him, there is nothing in the Defence that will lessen it at all.

Gentlemen, he is safe in your Hands. I doubt not but that you will do your Duty: If you think him guilty, you will find him so; if not, you will acquit him. With regard to the Duke, his Grace has discharged his Duty which he owed to the Public, which he will at all Times do, and is perfectly indifferent about the Issue of it.

The Jury acquitted the Prisoner.

He was a second Time indicted by the Name of William Barnard, for feloniously sending another Letter to the Most Noble Charles Duke of Marlborough, signed F. demanding two or three hundred Pounds; but no Evidence appearing against him, he was acquitted.

Prothonotary. Prisoner, hold up your Hand.

Prisoner arraigned.

You stand indicted by the Name of John Stevenson, late of Bickerton, in the County of Chester, Yeoman, for that you, not having the Fear of God before your Eyes, but being moved and seduced by the Instigation of the Devil, on the 21st Day of March, in the thirty-second Year of the Reign of our Sovereign Lord George the Second, now King of Great-Britain, &c. with Force and Arms, at Bickerton aforesaid, in the County aforesaid, in and upon one Francis Elcock, in the Peace of God, and our said Lord the King, then and there being, then and there feloniously, wilfully, and of your Malice aforethought, did make an Assault; and that you the said John Stevenson a certain Gun of the Value of ten Shillings, then and there charged with Gunpowder and one Leaden Bullet; which Gun you the said John Stevenson in both your Hands then and there had and held, to, against, and upon the said Francis Elcock, then and there, feloniously, wilfully, and of your Malice aforethought, did shoot and discharge; and that you the said John Stevenson, with the Leaden Bullet aforesaid, out of the Gun aforesaid, then and there, by Force of the Gun-powder shot, discharged, and sent forth as aforesaid, the aforesaid Francis Elcock, in and upon the left Side of the Belly of him the said Francis Elcock, then and there, with the Leaden Bullet aforesaid, out of the Gun aforesaid, by you the said John Stevenson, so as aforesaid shot, discharged, and sent forth, feloniously, wilfully, and of your Malice aforethought, did strike, penetrate, and wound; giving to the said Francis Elcock, then and there, with the Leaden Bullet aforesaid, so as aforesaid shot, discharged, and sent forth out of the Gun aforesaid, by you the said John Stevenson, in and upon the left Side of the Belly of him the said Francis Elcock, one mortal Wound, of the Depth of five Inches, and of the Breadth of one Inch; of which said mortal Wound the said Francis Elcock, on the aforesaid 21st Day of March, in the Year aforesaid, for the Space of ten Hours, at Bickerton aforesaid, in the County aforesaid, did languish, and languishing did live; on which said 21st Day of March, in the Year aforesaid, the said Francis Elcock, at Bickerton aforesaid, in the County aforesaid, of the mortal Wound aforesaid died: And so the Jurors aforesaid, upon their Oath aforesaid, do say, that you the said John Stevenson, the said Francis Elcock, in Manner and Form aforesaid, feloniously, wilfully, and of your Malice aforethought, did kill and murder, against the Peace of our said Lord the King, his Crown and Dignity.

Prothonotary. How say you, John Stevenson, are you Guilty of the Murder and Felony whereof you stand indicted, or Not Guilty?

Prisoner. Not Guilty.

Prothonotary. Culprit, how will you be tried?

Prisoner. By God and my Country.

Prothonotary. God send you a good Deliverance.

Prisoner. Amen! God send me a good Deliverance.

Mr. Attorney-General challenged Edward Hamnett, of Newhall, as he came to be ſworn; as Mr. Hamnett owned he was related to the Priſoner.

Prothonotary then read the Indictment.

Mr. Attorney-General, Counſel for the Crown, opened the Caſe to the following Effect:

Gentlemen of the Jury,

The Priſoner, John Stevenſon, ſtands indicted before you, for the Murder of Mr. Francis Elcock, late of Nantwich in this County, an Attorney at Law; which Crime he (the Priſoner) perpetrated and committed upon the 21ſt Day of March laſt: And it is now my Duty, as Counſel on Behalf of the Crown, to uſe my Endeavours for the obtaining that Juſtice and Reſtitution, which the Law requires for Crimes of this horrid Nature. To which End, it may be neceſſary, that I point out ſome Facts and Circumſtances antecedent to the Commiſſion of the Murder, which I doubt not we ſhall be able to prove, and hope you will be ſatisfied in your Conſciences, that the Priſoner did kill and murder Mr. Elcock, as laid in the Indictment; and if ſo, that you will find him Guilty.

Gentlemen, at the Time this Murder was committed, Mr. Elcock was doing a legal and a commendable Act: He was endeavouring to ſubdue the Priſoner, and to bring him to a juſt Senſe of, and an Obedience to the Laws, which he had but a little while before violated, by an outrageous Contempt of, and Rebellion to thoſe Laws, which have been wiſely (and happily for us) made, for the Preſervation of the Lives, and Security of the Properties of the Subject. The Priſoner, Gentlemen, has been for many Years a Cheeſefactor in this County; but failing in his Credit ſome Years ago, has ſince then taken Sanctuary in his Houſe at Bickerton, and there kept himſelf confined, to prevent the Effect of a Civil Proceſs, and to evade the Payment of his juſt Debts. Common Attempts for Juſtice to the Creditors were vain: The Sheriff's Officers too well known, and indeed Perſons in general (except a few Confidents) too hardly ſuſpected, to gain Admittance: Art and Policy became neceſſary. The unfortunate young Gentleman, whoſe Death you are now to enquire into, was employed as an Attorney, for one of the Priſoner's Creditors, to ſue out a Writ againſt him, which he accordingly did, and obtained the Sheriff's Warrant thereon, and delivered it to one of the Officers named therein, with Directions to arreſt the Priſoner. But the Officer apprehending he ſhould be denied Admittance to the Priſoner, had Recourſe to a Stratagem, not unlikely to prevail. He wrote a Letter to the Priſoner, ſignifying, that the Gentleman who ſent it wanted to buy ſome young Trees from the Priſoner, and deſiring that the Bearer of the Letter might be permitted to view the Trees, or to that Purpoſe. The Officer went to the Priſoner's Houſe with this Letter; and knocking at the Door, a Perſon came to the Window, to whom it was delivered; and as ſoon as the Priſoner had read the Letter, the Officer was admitted to him. After ſome Diſcourſe relating to the Trees, the Bailiff acquainted the Priſoner Stevenſon with the real Errand he came upon, namely, to arreſt him; and accordingly the Bailiff did then and there actually arreſt the Priſoner, by laying his Hand upon him, and telling him that he had the Sheriff's Warrant againſt him, which he produced. What was the Priſoner now to do in this Situation? Muſt he tamely ſubmit to the legal Authority of the Bailiff, and quit his Aſylum, till he had given Security, or rendered to the Plaintiff Satisfaction for his Debt? No.—After a ſhort Pauſe, and taking a Turn or two in his Houſe, he ſuddenly preſented a Piſtol at the Breaſt of the Officer, and ſwore, if he did not immediately leave the Houſe, he would blow his Brains out; and without waiting for an Anſwer, actually ſnapped the Piſtol at him, which miſſed Fire. But he could not reſt here; his Temper was too hot to put up with the Affront of being lawfully arreſted for a juſt Debt: He ſnapped the Piſtol three Times at the Officer's Breaſt, which providentially did not go off.—It was high Time for the Bailiff now to retire; the Preſervation of his Life required it: He had no Chance, unarmed and alone, to maintain his Arreſt againſt a loaded Piſtol, and there was no Time for Words to ſoothe a Man of ſo deſperate and outrageous a Diſpoſition into a peaceable Compliance; and therefore the Officer thought fit (and I think very prudently too) to leave his Priſoner. But after his miraculous Eſcape, he went to Mr. Elcock, who was in the Neighbourhood, and told him that he had arreſted the Priſoner, who reſcued himſelf by ſnapping a Piſtol at him three different Times, and deſired Mr. Elcock to get him Aſſiſtance, for the re-taking the Priſoner; whereupon Mr. Elcock, and the Plaintiff in the Action, with one or two other Perſons, returned with the Officer to the Priſoner's Houſe, which they found locked; and Mr. Elcock going to one of the Doors, demanded Entrance, and deſired the Priſoner to yield to the Arreſt. But the Priſoner's Reſentment could not reliſh a Capitulation of this Sort; he was determined ſtill to oppoſe the Authority of the Law, and to refuſe any Obedience to it. Reſolved upon the Death of Somebody or other, no matter whom, he took up a Gun loaded with Gunpowder and Ball, and diſcharged it through the Door againſt which Mr. Elcock ſtood, and unfortunately killed him. It ſeems unneceſſary for me, Gentlemen, to make any Obſervations with reſpect to the Intention of the Priſoner to commit Murder: His keeping of Fire-arms loaded in his Houſe; his ſnapping a loaded Piſtol three different Times at the Bailiff, in the Execution of his Duty, after he had arreſted the Priſoner; and his diſcharging the Gun, whereby the Deceaſed was killed, too fatally evince, beyond the leaſt Shadow of Doubt, that the Priſoner did intend and deſign an unlawful Killing: And although the Priſoner might not have ſeen Mr. Elcock, when he diſcharged the Gun which killed him, yet his ſhooting at Random was an unlawful ſhooting, for the Purpoſe, and with an Intent to kill Somebody then at the Door; and therefore that ſhooting at Random can be no Juſtification or Excuſe to the Priſoner.---We, who are of Counſel for the Crown, ſhall now proceed to examine the Witneſſes in Support of the Indictment; and doubt not but we ſhall be able to make out the Caſe, as I have ſtated it; and if ſo, you will then find the Priſoner Guilty, that he may receive the Puniſhment juſtly inflicted by Law upon thoſe who ſhall be guilty of the horrid Crime of Murder.

Mr. Falconer, Counſel for the Crown.

Gentlemen, Mr. Attorney has repreſented the Caſe ſo fully, that it is quite unneceſſary for me to enlarge upon it; and therefore ſhall not take up the Time of the Court, but proceed to the Examination of the Witneſſes.

Cryer calls John James, the Bailiff, who arreſted the Priſoner.

John James ſworn.

Counſel for the Crown. Do you know the Priſoner at the Bar?

James. Yes.

Q. Did you know the deceaſed Mr. Francis Elcock?---James. Yes.

Q. Were you, at any Time, employed to arreſt the Priſoner for Debt; and what happened in conſequence of it? Speak up, that the Gentlemen of the Jury may hear you.

James. Yes, I was employed to arreſt the Priſoner for a Debt due to John Atkin.

Q. By whom were you ſo employed?

James. By Mr. Elcock, an Attorney.

Q. You mean, I ſuppoſe, the deceaſed Mr. Elcock,---him that was ſhot?

James. Yes.

Q. Go on.

James. Being ſo employed to arreſt Mr. Stevenſon, I went to his Houſe, and knocked at the Door. Somebody came to the Window, and aſked me, what I wanted? I told the Perſon who came to the Window, that I had a Letter for the Maſter of the Houſe, which ſhe took through the Window; and I ſuppoſe it was delivered to Mr. Stevenſon.

Q. Why do you ſuppoſe ſo?

James. Becauſe, in a little Time after, Mr. Stevenſon opened the Door.

Q. The Priſoner opened the Door, you ſay?

James. Yes, and he aſked me, whether I lived with the Gentleman who ſent the Letter, or from whom the Letter came? I told him I did; and Mr. Stevenſon invited me in.

Q. Well; What happened afterwards?

James. I went into the Houſe with Mr. Stevenſon, and we then went together towards the Back Door; and at the Back Door Mr. Stevenſon ſtood ſtill, to call his Servant.

Q. Whereabouts at the Back Door did the Priſoner ſtand ſtill, to call his Servant? Was it within-ſide of the Door, or at the out-ſide of the Door?

James. He ſtood ſtill upon a Step, at the Back Door, the out-ſide of the Door; and I was within-ſide of the Door.---I then took the Warrant I had againſt Mr. Stevenſon out of my Pocket, and I laid my Hand upon his Shoulder, and ſaid, Sir, I hope you will excuſe me.——

Q. Was the Priſoner then out of the Door?

James. Yes. I ſaid, Sir, I hope you will excuſe me; for the Letter I gave you was to decoy you. I am a Bailiff; this is a Warrant againſt you; and you are my Priſoner in the King's Name.

Q. What did the Priſoner ſay then?

James. He ſhrieked out, and ſaid, I had uſed him ill.

Q. What did you do afterwards?

James. Mr. Stevenſon and I returned into the Houſe; and when we got into the Kitchen, he called to Betty, who I believe was his Houſe-keeper, and ſaid to her, We have done ill in letting this Man into the Houſe; for he has arreſted me.

Q. He told her, you had arreſted him, you ſay?---James. Yes.

Q. Well; What happened then?

James. The Priſoner went then towards the Fire, and turned to the Screen on the right Hand, and ſtood at the further End of the Screen.

Q. What did he do then?

James. He turned all of a ſudden upon me, with a Piſtol in his Hand, and ſaid, he would blow my Brains out, if I did not get immediately out of the Houſe.

Q. Did he preſent the Piſtol at you?---James. He did.

Q. What did you ſay then?

James. I told him, that was not the Way to do Buſineſs.---Mr. Stevenſon then ſnapped the Piſtol at me, but it miſſed Fire.

Q. Are you ſure he ſnapped the Piſtol at you?---James. Yes, very ſure.

Q. Well; What did you then?

James. I went backwards through the Kitchen, and Mr. Stevenſon followed me; and in a narrow Paſſage leading from the Kitchen towards the Door, he ſnapped the Piſtol at me again; and he ſnapped the Piſtol at me a third Time, but I was then out of the Houſe.

Q. When you got out of the Houſe, where did you go then?

James. I went to the next Houſe, I think Mr. Nevill's, where Mr. Elcock promiſed to be. Mr. Elcock ſaw me, and met me, and aſked me, if I had arreſted Stevenſon? I told Mr. Elcock, that I had arreſted him, and that he had ſnapped a Piſtol at me three different Times, which obliged me to come away.

Q. What did Mr. Elcock ſay to that?

James. Mr. Elcock ſaid, I had done enough.

Q. How did you proceed afterwards?

James. I told Mr. Elcock, if I had a Piſtol, I could bring him away; and he ſaid, I ſhould not want that.---Then Mr. Elcock ſent a Man to the Plaintiff John Atkin's, and to bring Arms from his Father's.

Q. Where did Atkin live?

James. At Cholmondley, not very far from Bickerton.

Q. Did the Meſſenger return with Arms?——James. Yes.

Q. What did you then?——James. After the Arms and Aſſiſtance were brought, we went again to Mr. Stevenſon's Houſe.

Q. Who went to the Priſoner's Houſe?

James. I went, and the Plaintiff John Atkin, and a Servant of his, I think. Four or five Perſons, I believe, came with me.

Q. Was there another Sheriff's Officer with you?

James. Yes, a Man tolerated by the Sheriff, one John Jones.

Q. Did Mr. Elcock go to the Priſoner's Houſe with you?—James. Yes.

Q. What happened when you all returned to the Priſoner's Houſe?

James. As we were all running towards the Priſoner's Houſe, I ſaw the Priſoner and another Man out of Doors; I called to Mr. Stevenſon, and ſaid, You may as well ſtay, for we are coming for you.

Q. Did the Priſoner hear you ſay this?

James. I believe he did.

Q. Did the Priſoner ſtay for you?

James. No; he and the other Man with him, ran into the Houſe.

Q. Well; when you came up to the Houſe, pray what followed?

James. When we came up to the Houſe, I ſaid to Mr. Elcock, I know the Way to that Door; go you to the other.

Q. How many Doors were there to the Houſe?——James. Three.

Q. Did you know all the three Doors?

James. Yes, I knew them all.

Q. You bid Mr. Elcock go to one of the Doors, I think, you ſay?

James. I bid Mr. Elcock and the others to take care of two of the Doors, and I would go to the other.

Q. How far was the Door that you ſaid you would go to, from the Door you deſired Mr. Elcock to take care of?

James. It was a good Way diſtant, in going round about.

Q. You ſaid, you would go to the third Door; did you know the Way to it?——James. Yes, very well.

Q. Did Mr. Elcock ſay any Thing to the People in the Houſe, when he came up to the Door?

James. I cannot tell whether he did or not, becauſe I was not preſent, for I ran to the other Side of the Houſe.

Q. Pray, was the Door you went to locked, or made faſt?

James. It was faſt.

Q. When you all came up to the Doors, as you have been mentioning,—pray, what followed?

James. In a very little Time, almoſt immediately after I came up to the Door, I heard a Noiſe—I heard a Gun go off.

Q. Which Way did the Noiſe come? Where did you apprehend the Gun went off? In what Situation were you from the Noiſe, or Report of it?——James. The Noiſe came as betwixt me and them; betwixt me and the People who came with me.

Q. How far diſtant might you be from the Door where the Gun was fired?——James. Nine or ten Yards, it might be, from Mr. Elcock.

Q. When you heard the Noiſe, and the Gun go off, what did you do then? It muſt have alarmed you?

James. When I heard them crying out on the other Side, I went backwards to an Hedge, and looking over it, I ſaw Mr. Elcock held by two Men ſitting on a Block.

Q. You ſaw Mr. Elcock ſitting on a Block, ſupported by two Men; how did he look?——James. Very piteouſly indeed.

Q. Did you hear him ſay any Thing?

James. Yes, I heard him ſay, Oh! I am ſhot, I am ſhot.

Q. Was Mr. Elcock at a great Diſtance from the Gun at the Time he received the Wound, or was he near it?——James. I cannot tell whether he was at a great or a ſmall Diſtance from it.

Q. What did you do, after you had ſeen Mr. Elcock ſitting on the Block?

James. I returned again to my own Door, to prevent the Priſoner's getting out.

Q. Did you ſee Mr. Elcock afterwards?

James. In about ten Minutes afterwards, I ſaw two Men carrying him down the Lane.

Q. Were you with Mr. Elcock at the Houſe he was carried to?

James. No.

Q. Did you ſee him afterwards?——James. No, I did not ſee him after the two Men carried him down the Lane.

Q. Have you the Warrant whereby you arreſted the Priſoner?

James. I have.

Q. Pray produce it.—Is this the very Warrant, under the Authority whereof you arreſted the Priſoner?——James. It is.

Q. Pray, who delivered to you this Warrant to execute?

James. Mr. Elcock himſelf.

Q. Were there any Holes in the Door that the Ball came through which killed Mr. Elcock, beſides the Shot-hole?

James. Yes, there were two Holes in the Door, beſides the Shot-hole.

Q. Was there ever a Slit in the Door?

James. That I do not know.

Q. Were the two Holes in the Door higher than the Shot-hole, or lower, or how?——James. The two Holes were higher than the Hole which the Ball had made.

Q. Could you ſee through the two Holes? Were they large enough to ſee, and know a Perſon through?

James. Yes, I could ſee through them; I did look through, and ſaw into the Kitchen plainly. I and ſeveral others did ſo.

Q. Pray, what Buſineſs did Mr. Elcock go about, when he went with you to the Priſoner's Houſe?

James. To aſſiſt me in re-taking Mr. Stevenſon.

Q. Do you know the Sheriff's Hand-writing?

James. Yes, very well.

Q. Is the Warrant whereby you arreſted the Priſoner, all of the Sheriff's Hand-writing?

James. All is of his Hand-writing, except two Names.

Q. Are you poſitive to the Sheriff's Hand-writing?

James. Yes, to Mr. Baxter's Hand-writing, who acted as Sheriff, and made out the Warrant, and delivered it.

Q. Pray what are the two Names that were not written by Mr. Baxter?

James. My own Name, and the Name of John Jones, another Bailiff.

Q. Who wrote your Name, and the Name of John Jones, in the Warrant?——James. Mr. Elcock.

Q. Are you ſure of that?

James. Yes; for I ſaw him write them.

Q. Are you uſually employed as a Bailiff for the executing of the Sheriff's Warrants?

James. Yes, I get my Bread by it; and am often ſent for, fifteen or twenty Miles round the Country.

Q. Was your Name inſerted in the Warrant, as the Sheriff's own Bailiff, or as a Special Bailiff?

James. I was a Special Bailiff, for that Time, appointed by the Sheriff.

Q. How do you know that?

James. I have been informed ſo: I think it is ſo expreſſed in the Warrant.

Q. Had you executed any Warrants from the Sheriff of the County of Cheſter the Year before?

James. Yes, many; twenty, or more.

Q. Had you executed any Warrants from the preſent Sheriff, under his Authority?

James. Yes, I executed Attachments under that Authority,—under Mr. Baxter. I had four or five Warrants, upon Proceſs out of the Exchequer, at the Time I arreſted Mr. Stevenſon, and have executed ſeveral Warrants ſince Mr. Harriſon became Sheriff.

Q. How long had Mr. Harriſon been Sheriff, before you arreſted the Priſoner?——James. A Week or a Fortnight it might be.

Court. Read the Warrant, whereon the Priſoner was arreſted by the Witneſs.

(The Warrant was then read, and it appeared, that the Words, "Bailiffs "for this Time only," after the Names of John James and John Jones, the Special Bailiffs, were written by Mr. Baxter. The Warrant was dated the 1*ſt of* March, and there was an Indorſement thereon, "Take good Bail for eighteen Pounds eight Shillings and Ten-"pence Half-penny, by Affidavit filed." And under-written, "El-"cock by Lowe, by the ſaid Sheriff.")

Q. Did John Evans, the Sheriff's Bailiff named in the Warrant, go with you, when you attempted to re-take the Priſoner?

James. No; he did not.

Q. When did the Plaintiff John Atkin come to you? Was he with you before, or at the Time you attempted to re-take the Priſoner?

James. John Atkin came when Aſſiſtance was ſent for, but not before. He came with us, when we went to re-take Mr. Stevenſon.

Croſs-Examined.

Counſel for the Priſoner. I think you ſay, you took the Warrant out of your Pocket, and put your Hand upon the Priſoner's Shoulder, and arreſted him?——James. I did.

Q. Pray, where did you firſt ſee that Warrant, whereon you arreſted the Priſoner?

James. I ſaw it firſt at Nantwich.

Q. Who ſhewed it you?——James. The deceaſed Mr. Elcock.

Q. When you firſt ſaw the Warrant, was your Name in it?

James No.

Q. Was the Warrant, when you firſt ſaw it, under the Seal of the Sheriff?——James. I believe it was.

Q. Was the Name of John Jones (the other Special Bailiff) in the Warrant when you firſt ſaw it?

James. I believe it was not.

Q. Was the Name of John Evans, the Sheriff's Officer, in the Warrant then?——James. Yes, it was.

Q. Who wrote Evans's Name in the Warrant?

James. The Sheriff put it in.

Q. Of whoſe Hand-writing is the Warrant?

James. It is all of Mr. Baxter's Writing, except my Name, and the Name of John Jones.

Q. Are you ſure of that?——James. Yes.

Q. Who is Mr. Baxter?

James. Mr. Baxter acts for the Under-Sheriff.

Q. Of whoſe Hand-writing are the Names, John James and John Jones, now appearing in the Warrant?

James. My Name and John Jones's were written in the Warrant by Mr. Elcock.

Q. Are you ſure that the Names John James and John Jones were written in the Warrant by Mr. Elcock?

James. I am very ſure of it; for I ſaw him write them.

Q. Were they written by Mr. Elcock, after you firſt ſaw the Warrant at Nantwich?——James. Yes.

Q. Is the Warrant in the ſame Situation, in every Part of it, as it was when you firſt ſaw it at Nantwich?

James. It is, except the Addition of the Names made ſince.

Q. Where does Mr. Baxter live?

James. In this City (Cheſter).

Q. Do you know Mr. Hollins?——James. Yes.

Q. Who is he?——James. The Under-Sheriff.

Q. Do the Sheriffs always keep their Office in the City?

James. They keep their Office in the City, where they pleaſe to appoint; I believe ſo.

Q. And is that the Place where the Sheriff's Warrants are always made out?

James. That is the Place where they apply for Warrants.

Q. How far does the Under-Sheriff live from this City?

James. Twenty Miles, I believe.

Q. Was Mr. Elcock appointed by the Sheriff to make out Warrants?

James. I do not know that he was.

Q. Had Mr. Baxter Authority to make out Warrants?

James. I don't know.

Q. You ſay, the Under-Sheriff always keeps an Office in the City of Cheſter?

James.

James. Yes; where the Sheriffs, when they come in, are pleaſed to fix it.

Q. You ſay, you went to Mr. Elcock after you had arreſted the Priſoner?

James. Mr. Elcock met me, as I was going to him.

Q. And you then told Mr. Elcock you were forced to retreat?

James. I told him ſo, and ſo it was.

Q. Is it the Practice, for the Names of the Sheriff's own Bailiffs, or thoſe bound to the Sheriff, to be put into Warrants in the Office; and Blanks to be left in the ſame Warrants for the Names of other Bailiffs, to be put in by Attornies, after the Warrants come from the Office?

James. It is the Practice.

Q. Did you give Security to the Sheriff, for being his Bailiff?

James. No, not at that Time.

Q. Where did you ſtay, after you had arreſted the Priſoner, till Aſſiſtance came to you?

James. I and Mr. Elcock ſtayed at a Gentleman's Houſe, the next Houſe to Mr. Stevenſon's, Mr. Robert Nevill's Houſe, till Aſſiſtance came.

Q. Who went for the Aſſiſtance?

James. John Jones, the other Bailiff named with me, I believe.

Q. What Number of People came to your Aſſiſtance?

James. I don't well recollect the Number; but I remember the Plaintiff John Atkin, and his Servant, (whoſe Name I know not) Richard Bowker, John Jones, and myſelf made five.

Q. Did you deſire Mr. Elcock to ſtay where he was, at Mr. Nevill's Houſe, and not go to the Priſoner's Houſe?

James. I did not.

Q. Pray, had not you an Iron Crow with you, when you all went to the Priſoner's Houſe?

James. Yes.

Q. Where had you that Crow?

James. I told Mr. Elcock I wanted a Crow, and he borrowed one from the Woman of the Houſe, Mrs. Nevill.

Q. You ſay, you went to different Doors, when you came to the Houſe; pray, were theſe Doors on one Side of the Houſe,---at the Corners of the Houſe; or how were they ſituated?

James. I ſaid, I went to a Door on one Side of the Houſe, and deſired Mr. Elcock would ſtay at a Door on the other Side of the Houſe.

Q. Did you yourſelf ſpeak to the Priſoner when you came to the Houſe, and demand Entrance from him?

James. I did not.

Q. Did John Jones demand Entrance?

James. I don't know: John Jones was not on the ſame Side of the Houſe with me.

Q. Did you deſire Mr. Elcock to demand Entrance, as you were going to the Houſe, or before you came to the Houſe?

James. No, I did not.---But when we were going to Mr. Stevenſon's, I ſaw Mr. Stevenſon out of Doors, and called to him to ſtay, and told him, we were coming for him.

Q. How far might you be from the Priſoner at that Time?

James. It might be threeſcore Yards.

Q. Were Mr. Elcock and John Jones at one Door of the Houſe?

James. I don't know.

Q. Did you, from the other Side of the Houſe, deſire Mr. Elcock to demand Entrance?

James. I could not ſee Mr. Elcock from the other Side of the Houſe.

Priſoner. Is the Warrant you have ſhewn to the Court, the ſame Warrant you produced to me?

James. Yes, the very ſame.

(Priſoner deſires to ſee the Warrant. He looks at it, and ſays,---It is not the Warrant).

Court to the Priſoner. Leave the Queſtions to be aſked by your Counſel; they know beſt how to act for your Defence. Conſider, you ſtand upon Trial for your Life. Your Condition is a moſt melancholy one, and very perilous; therefore refer yourſelf to the Judgment of your Counſel in Matters of ſo great Importance to you.

James. It is the very Warrant upon which I arreſted the Priſoner.

Then the Witneſs withdrew.

Cryer, call John Atkin.

John Atkin ſworn.

Counſel for the Crown. Do you know the Priſoner at the Bar?

Atkin. Yes, very well.

Q. Did you know Mr. Francis Elcock, deceaſed?——Atkin. Yes.

Q. When were you laſt in Company with the Deceaſed?

Atkin I was in Company with him upon the 21ſt Day of March laſt, at the Houſe of John Stevenſon in Bickerton.

Q. Did you go with the Deceaſed to the Priſoner's Houſe on that Day?

Atkin. Yes.

Q. What was the Occaſion of your going thither with Mr. Elcock?

Atkin. John James ſent for me, to come to aſſiſt the Bailiffs.

Q. To do what?——Atkin. To re-take John Stevenſon.

Q. And did you go accordingly for that Purpoſe?——Atkin. Yes.

Q. Who went with you?

Atkin. Mr. Elcock, and John James and John Jones. We all went to take the Priſoner by Force, John James having ſent for me to aſſiſt him, after the Priſoner had ſnapped a Piſtol at him.—We all went, becauſe John Stevenſon had drove the Bailiff from the Houſe, by ſnapping a Piſtol at him.

Q. Who told you, that the Priſoner had ſnapped a Piſtol at the Bailiff?

Atkin. John James, the Bailiff, told me ſo.

Q. Did you ſee the Priſoner in the Houſe, when you came there?

Atkin. I did not.

Q. Did you go with Mr. Elcock?——Atkin. Yes.

Q. How far were you from Mr. Elcock, when you came to the Houſe?

Atkin. Within three or four Yards of him.

Q. Then you did not ſee the Priſoner?——Atkin. No.

Q. Did you ſee any People in the Houſe, when you came there?

Atkin No; but I imagine People were in the Houſe, when Mr. Elcock and I came to it.

Q. Did you hear any People in the Houſe?

Atkin. Yes, we heard People, but ſaw Nobody.

Q. Were the Doors locked, or made faſt?

Atkin. Yes; the Doors were made faſt.

Q. When you came up to the Houſe, did John James give Mr. Elcock and you any Directions about the Buſineſs you were to do there?

Atkin. Yes; when we came up to the Door, John James ordered Mr. Elcock and me to attend that Door.

Q. Which Door was it?---Atkin. It was the Back Kitchen Door.

Q. When you came to the Door, did Mr. Elcock ſay any thing to the People in the Houſe?

Atkin. As ſoon as we came to the Door, Mr. Elcock ſaid, Open the Door,---open the Door, or we will break it down.---I thought they were making the Door faſt.

Q. Was the Door opened?——Atkin. No.

Q. What was done afterwards, when the People within would not open the Door?

Atkin. As ſoon as Mr. Elcock ſaid ſo, he bid me ſtrike an Iron Crow under the Door, in order to lift it off the Hinges; and I accordingly put the Crow under the Door.

Q. Was it Mr. Elcock, who ordered you to put the Crow under the Door?

Atkin. Yes.

Q. When you put the Crow under the Door, pray, what happened?

Atkin. As ſoon as I had put the Crow or Ringer under the Door, Mr. Elcock ſaid to me, John, run to the other Door, for fear Stevenſon gets out of it; whereupon I left the Crow ſticking under the Door upon the Sill, and went away towards the other Door, and had not gone above three or four Yards from the Door, before I heard a Gun go off.

Q. Did you ſee Mr. Elcock when the Gun went off?---Atkin. Yes.

Q. Did he ſay any thing then?

Atkin. Yes.---I heard him ſay, I am ſhot, I am ſhot: And he fell on one Side of his Back down two Steps.---Richard Bowker and I took him up:---Then Mr. Elcock took up his Shirt, and ſhewed us the Wound.

Q. Who was this Bowker?

Atkin. He was an Aſſiſtant, who came with me to re-take John Stevenſon.

Q. What did you do with Mr. Elcock, after you and Bowker took him up?

Atkin. He hung about our Shoulders, and we carried him to a wooden Block, where he deſired to reſt.

Q. You ſay, he pulled up his Shirt, and ſhewed you his Wound; pray, on what Part of his Body was he wounded?

Atkin. He was wounded on the Side of the Belly, above his Groin.

Q. Were there any Holes in the Door where the Ball came through, beſides that which the Ball made?---Did you ſee the Hole which the Bullet made?

Atkin. I ſaw the Hole which the Bullet came through; and there was alſo a Slit in the Door, which ſeemed big enough for a Perſon to ſee through; and there were two Holes beſides in the Door.

Q. How large were the two Holes that were in the Door, beſides that which the Bullet made?

Atkin. One of the Holes was an Inch-and-half Hole; the other bigger. But the Slit was afterwards lathed on the inner Side of the Door.

Q. Could you have ſeen the Priſoner through thoſe Holes?

Atkin. No Doubt of it, if he had been oppoſite to me when I looked through; but he was not, and therefore I could not ſee him.

Q. Were you preſent when the Priſoner ſurrendered himſelf?

Atkin. I was.

Q. Had he any Fire-arms in the Houſe, when he ſurrendered?

Atkin. He had Fire-arms at that Time. I fired off one of the Piſtols the Day after the Priſoner killed Mr. Elcock.

Q. What Day of the Month was that?

Atkin. The 22d of March. Mr. Elcock received his mortal Wound upon the 21ſt, about Three o'Clock.

Q. What other Fire-arms had the Priſoner when he ſurrendered beſides the Piſtol you fired?

Atkin. There were two Piſtols;---one beſides that which I fired; and a Gun.

Q. Were they loaded?——Atkin. Yes.

Q. How do you know they were loaded?

Atkin. That Piſtol which I fired off, was very heavy loaded: The other Piſtol was diſcharged againſt an Aſh-Tree, and I ſaw the Hole which the Bullet had made in the Tree; and the Gun was fired into the Air.

Q. When the Priſoner ſurrendered himſelf, did he acknowledge that he had Fire-arms in the Houſe?

Atkin. He ſaid, he had but one Piſtol.---But the Woman in the Houſe being aſked, whether there were any more Fire-arms; ſhe told them, there was another Piſtol and a Gun.

Q. You ſay, you diſcharged one of the Piſtols yourſelf; Did you?

Atkin. I did, and fired it into the Air.

Q. Did you ſee the Piſtol diſcharged againſt the Aſh-Tree?

Atkin. I did; and looked at the Hole which the Ball had made.——The Gun was fired into the Air.

Croſs-Examined.

Counſel for the Priſoner. When you came to re-take the Priſoner with Mr. Elcock, what Orders did John James give you?

Atkin. He ordered Mr. Elcock and me to ſtay at the Door; and he ran to the other.

Q. What Orders had John Jones received?---Was he to have no Hand in re-taking the Priſoner?

Atkin. John Jones was ordered by John James to attend a Woman, Stevenſon's Houſe-keeper, I believe, and not let her come near him.

Q. Was neither John James, nor John Jones, with you and Mr. Elcock, at the Door where you were ſtationed, in order to re-take the Priſoner?

Atkin. Neither of them.

Q. Was John Jones within Sight of you?---Atkin. I think he was.

Q. Did you all act as Aſſiſtants to the Bailiff?——Atkin. Yes.

Q. And by his Orders?

Atkin. Yes.

Then the Witneſs withdrew.

Cryer,

Cryer, Call William Griffith.

William Griffith ſworn.

Counſel for the Crown. Do you know the Priſoner at the Bar?

Griffith. Yes, very well.

Q. Do you remember any Thing about the Priſoner's diſcharging or firing a Gun at any Time? Pray, ſpeak up, that the Jury may hear you, and acquaint them with what you know of the Matter.

Grif. Yes, Sir; I was in Mr. Stevenſon's Houſe at Bickerton, when Mr. Elcock was ſhot.

Q. What Part of the Houſe were you in at that Time?

Grif. I was in the Houſe-place, and Mr. Stevenſon was in the Back-Kitchen.

Q. Was any body in the Houſe, beſides the Priſoner and yourſelf?

Grif. Yes; a Woman was in the Houſe,—a Servant-Woman.

Q. Did you ſee the Priſoner fire the Gun?

Grif. The Priſoner did fire the Gun at the Back-door, and brought it in afterwards, and took it into the Parlour.

Q. After the Gun was fired, did you hear no Noiſe out of Doors?---Was there no Alarm made about it?

Grif. Yes; the People without ſhouted, Murder!

Q. From what Place did the Priſoner take the Gun which he fired?

Grif. He took it from the Mantle-piece in the Kitchen.

Q. Was the Priſoner accuſtomed to keep Fire-arms in the Houſe with him?---Grif. I cannot tell.

Q. How long was it after the Gun was fired, that you heard the People ſhout, Murder?

Grif. In about a Minute or two after the Gun was fired.

Q. I ſuppoſe you were curious enough, after the Gun was fired, and you heard the Cry of Murder, to know, whether any body was hurt, or not; were not you?

Grif. I went to a Window, and looked out; and ſaw a Man in blue Cloaths ſupported or held up between two Men.

Q. Did you ſay nothing to the Priſoner upon this Occaſion?

Grif. Yes; I told Mr. Stevenſon, that I believed there was never a Man killed, but there was one hurt, and they called him Mr. Elcock.

Q. And pray, when you told the Priſoner there was never a Man killed, but a Man hurt, and his Name was Mr. Elcock; What did he ſay to you?

Grif. He ſaid, I don't know what Buſineſs a Man of his Coat had among ſuch Men as thoſe. I am glad of it.

Q. What do you apprehend he meant by the Words, "A Man of his Coat?"---Grif. I don't know.

Counſel for the Priſoner. You will pleaſe to obſerve, the Witneſs told the Priſoner there was a Man hurt, but Nobody killed; and that was immediately before the Priſoner ſaid, he was glad of it——Glad that Nobody was killed.

Then the Witneſs withdrew.

Cryer, call Mr. Cooper.

Mr. Cooper ſworn.

Coun. for the Crown. I think you are a Surgeon?

Mr. Cooper. Yes, Sir.

Q. Where do you live?---Mr. Cooper. At Nantwich.

Q. Did you know the deceaſed Mr. Francis Elcock?

Mr. Cooper. Yes, very well.

Q. Were you ſent for at any Time, and when, to attend Mr. Elcock, upon account of his having received a Wound, by the firing of a Gun, or otherwiſe? Pray, acquaint the Court and Jury with what you know of this Matter.

Mr. Cooper. Upon Wedneſday the 21ſt Day of March laſt, a Meſſenger came to me about Three o'Clock in the Afternoon, deſiring me to go to Bickerton, to Mr. Francis Elcock, who, the Meſſenger told me, was ſhot. I went accordingly with the Man, and got to Bickerton about Five o'Clock in the Evening. When I came there, I found that Mr. Rowe, a Surgeon from Malpas, had been ſent for likewiſe, and had been there for ſome Time before. Mr. Rowe and I went up Stairs together, to the Room where Mr. Elcock was, and we found him ill in Bed. Almoſt ſo ſoon as he ſaw me, he pulled up his Shirt, and ſhewed me where the Ball was lodged, and ſeemed impatient to have it taken out: Upon ſeeing the Wound, I took the Ball between my Finger and Thumb, and perceived I could eaſily diſlodge it. I then examined the Wound, where the Ball had entered, and found it cut about two Inches from the Hip on the left Side of his Belly: It paſſed through his Belly, by his Bowels, no doubt, and lodged five or ſix Inches below the right Hip, almoſt through the Skin. As ſoon as I ſaw this, I took Mr. Rowe into another Room, to conſult what was fitteſt to be done; and I told him, it was my Opinion, that Mr. Elcock was a dying Man, and that I did not know whether it would be of any Uſe to take the Ball away, although it could be ſo eaſily effected. But conſidering that it would give him ſome Satisfaction, and perhaps Eaſe too, by taking the Ball from the Place where it did lie, Mr. Rowe and I went into the Room again, and I took out the Ball. After I had taken the Ball out, and dreſſed the Wound, and put a Bandage about it, I aſked Mr. Elcock, how he did? He ſaid, he was eaſier. Doctor Hayes came in afterwards; and when I had told him the Nature of the Wound, he looked upon the Caſe to be extremely dangerous. The Doctor ſtayed with him two or three Hours, and then went away; but Mr. Elcock deſired me and Mrs. Nevill to ſit with him; which we did, and his Father did ſo too, till ten Minutes paſt Three the next Morning, and he then expired. (The Witneſs produces the Ball.)

Q. Do you believe that the Wound which Mr. Elcock received was the Occaſion of his Death?

Mr. Cooper. I firmly believe, that the Wound which he received was the Occaſion of his Death.

Q. Did Mr. Elcock ſay any Thing to you in his Agonies, upon the melancholy Occaſion, and what?

Mr. Cooper. Mr. Elcock told me, that he was ſhot, as he was ſtooping down, with a Crow in his Hand, ſtriving to open the Priſoner's Door.

Q. Did he tell you from what Part of the Houſe he was ſhot?

Mr. Cooper. He ſaid, he received the Wound at the Door of the Priſoner's Houſe.

Q. Pray, how came the Ball to be made ſo flat, in that uncommon Form?

Mr. Cooper. I believe its going through the Door was the Occaſion of its being in that Form.

Then the Witneſs withdrew.

Cryer, call Mr. Baxter.

Mr. Robert Baxter ſworn.

Counſel for the Crown. Pray, Mr. Baxter, are you concerned in any, and what Manner, for Mr. Harriſon, the preſent Sheriff of the County of Cheſter?

Mr. Baxter. Yes, Sir, I am concerned for the Sheriff, and keep his Office.

Q. Do you make out Warrants for the Sheriff?---Mr. Bax. I do.

Q. Did you receive at any Time, and when, a Writ againſt the Priſoner, at the Suit of John Atkin?

Mr. Bax. I received a Writ againſt him upon the 1ſt of March laſt. (Which he produces.)

Q. Look upon that Warrant.---Did you make out that Warrant upon the Writ, in order to arreſt the Priſoner?

Mr. Bax. I did.

Q. And are you ſure that is the ſame Warrant you did make out?

Mr. Bax. Yes; I am ſure it is.

(The Writ was read, and upon the Back of it was written, "Take Bail for "Eighteen Pounds Eight Shillings and Ten-pence Half-penny, by "Affidavit filed."——And another Indorſement, viz. "I promiſe to "indemnify the Sheriff in the Execution of the Writ, as to the "Special Bailiffs. JOHN ATKIN."

Q. Is it uſual for the Sheriff to appoint a Gentleman in this Town to execute the Office, and to act for him?

Mr. Bax. It is uſual. I have been ſeveral Times appointed myſelf.

Q. Do you receive all the Writs that are ſued out, directed to the Sheriff of this County?---Mr. Bax. I do.

Q. And do you make out the Warrants upon ſuch Writs?

Mr. Bax. I do.

Q. And return the Writs?---Mr. Bax. Yes.

Q. Do you execute all other Acts that the Sheriff would do, if he reſided here himſelf?

Mr. Bax. Yes; except attending the Aſſizes and Seſſions.

Q. And has this been the conſtant Practice in this County?

Mr. Bax. Yes, during all my Time.

Q. Has it been uſual, when Plaintiffs would have Special Bailiffs appointed, to leave Blanks in the Warrants for their Names to be inſerted?

Mr. Bax. Yes, upon the Sheriff being indemnified.

Q. Have you done this yourſelf?---Mr. Bax. Yes.

Q. Have you known others to do it?

Mr. Bax. Yes, ſeveral others, to my Knowledge.

Q. Did you ever know it to be refuſed?

Mr. Bax. No, never, upon the Sheriff being indemnified, and the Attorney is known to be a fair Practiſer. I have known it refuſed, where the Practiſer was not liked, or where the Sheriff run any Riſk or Hazard, and the Indemnity was not approved; but when the Attorney, or Practiſer, and the Indemnity are liked, it is uſually done.

Q. Pray, what is the Nature of the Indemnity given to the Sheriff upon this Occaſion?

Mr. Bax. It is, that he ſhould not ſuffer by Eſcapes or Reſcues.

Q. And has this been the conſtant Practice uſed by the Perſons who have acted in the Sheriff's Office in the Capacity you now act?

Mr. Bax. It has been ſo all the Time I have known the Office.

Q. How long, pray, is that?

Mr. Bax. Seven or eight-and-twenty Years.

Q. To leave Blanks in the Warrants for the Names of the Special Bailiffs to be inſerted?---Mr. Bax. Yes.

Q. Pray, whether is ſuch Practice convenient to the Plaintiffs and Suitors in the Court, or inconvenient to them?

Mr. Bax. It is looked upon to be very convenient for the Plaintiffs.

Q. Do you think ſo yourſelf?---Mr. Bax. I look upon it in that Light.

Q. Had Mr. Lowe or Mr. Elcock, or both of them, a Right to inſert the Names of the Special Bailiffs in the Blank left in the Warrant, whereon the Priſoner was arreſted?

Mr. Bax. I apprehend either Mr. Lowe or Mr. Elcock had a Right to do ſo.

Q. Is it uſual for Attornies in the Country to ſend their Directions to their Agents in Cheſter to take out Writs?---Mr. Bax. Yes.

Q. And is the Agent's Name generally put to the Writ, or the Name of the Attorney in the Country only?

Mr. Bax. The Agent's Name is generally added to the Name of the Country Attorney, in the Writ, ſince the late Act of Parliament for that Purpoſe; but before that, the Name of the Attorney was only put to the Writ.

Q. And you ſay that either Mr. Lowe or Mr. Elcock had a Right to inſert the Names of the Special Bailiffs?

Mr. Bax. Yes, I apprehend ſo.

Croſs-Examined.

Counſel for the Priſoner. Do not the Attornies, and other Perſons, uſually ſend the Names of the Special Bailiffs to be inſerted in the Warrants by the Sheriff, or by thoſe who act for him?

Mr. Bax. Sometimes People do ſend the Names of the Special Bailiffs to be inſerted.

Q. Has it not been the moſt uſual Way in your Time to do ſo?

Mr. Bax. It was when I firſt knew the Office the moſt uſual Way, in 1732, and 1733. But Warrants went out with Blanks then.

Q. Did John Evans, the Bailiff named in the Warrant, indemnify the Sheriff?

Mr. Bax. He has given Security to the Sheriff, I believe. But the Indemnity was for the Special Bailiffs.

Q. In the Year 1732, or 1733, were Blank Warrants ſent out, and not the Names of the Special Bailiffs inſerted?

Mr. Bax. When I was concerned for Mr. Page, who was Sheriff in 1732, or 1733, ſeveral Blank Warrants were ſent out, and not the Special Bailiffs inſerted.

Q. How

Q. How many Warrants were ſent out, with Blanks for the Names of the Special Bailiffs, in Mr. Page's Time?—Mr. Baxter. I cannot tell.

Q. Were not Warrants oftener delivered, with the Names of the Special Bailiffs inſerted in the Office, before they were ſent out, than Warrants with Blanks, for the Names of the Special Bailiffs to be afterwards inſerted by the Attornies?

Mr. Baxter. I believe, Warrants were oftener ſent out with the Names of the Special Bailiffs inſerted, than with Blanks.

Q. Is that the Warrant you made out on the Writ the 1ſt of March againſt the Priſoner?

Mr. Baxter. (Looks at the Warrant.) It is the ſame Warrant.

Q. Is it in the ſame Situation it was, when you delivered it out of your Hands?—Mr. Baxter. No.

Q. How has it been altered? How does it differ?

Mr. Baxter. The Names John James and John Jones have been ſince inſerted.

Q. Pray, was the Seal to the Warrant before you delivered it out of your Hands?—Mr. Baxter. Yes.

Q. Are you ſure of that?

Mr. Baxter. Yes, for I put the Seal to it myſelf.

Court. Do you remember, that any Arreſt was ever ſet aſide, or diſputed, on account of a Blank Warrant having been ſent out?

Mr. Baxter. No, never.

Counſel for the Priſoner. Through all the Courſe of your Practice, has it not been moſt uſual to make out Warrants after you received the Names of the Special Bailiffs, than without them;—than making out Blank Warrants?

Mr. Baxter. Yes, it has been moſt uſual, I think.

Q. When the Names of the Special Bailiffs are ſent, do you always inſert them in the Warrants?—Mr. Baxter. Yes, I do.

Q. Pray, how is the Under-Sheriff of Cheſhire appointed?

Mr. Baxter. He is appointed by the Sheriff, by Deed.

Q. Have you any written Authority from the Sheriff?

Mr. Baxter. No further than by Letters ſent me ſometimes about the Buſineſs of the Office.

Q. How were you appointed?

Mr. Baxter. The Night before the Sheriff was ſworn, I ſupped with him, and it was agreed, I ſhould act for him.

Q. Who were preſent, when you were appointed to act for the Sheriff?

Mr. Baxter. The Sheriff and Under-Sheriff were both preſent, and appointed me.

Q. Were you appointed by any Inſtrument in Writing, or not?

Mr. Baxter. I was not.

Q. Is it uſual for the Sheriff and Under-Sheriff both to appoint an Agent to act for the Sheriff?

Mr. Baxter. I believe, the uſual Way is by the Under-Sheriff only.

Q. Is there no other Method of appointing a Perſon to act for the Sheriff, but by Parol?—Mr. Baxter. I don't know of any other Way.

Q. Is the Seal to the Writ the Seal of Office?—Mr. Baxter. It is.

Q. Have the Perſons concerned for the Sheriff of this County uſually that Sort of Seal?—Mr. Baxter. Yes.

Q. Where had you this Seal?

Mr. Baxter. I had this from Mr. Griffith, having loſt my own.

Then the Witneſs withdrew.

Mr. Gaſtrell, Clerk to Mr. Lowe, an Attorney in Cheſter, was then called, to prove that John Atkin ſigned the Indemnity given to the Sheriff, when the Blank Warrant againſt the Priſoner was ſent out. But the Court thought it unneceſſary to examine him.

Mr. Croſs, an Attorney in Cheſter, ſworn.

Counſel for the Crown. Are you acquainted with the Method of ſuing out Proceſs in the Court of Seſſion for this County?—Mr. Croſs. Yes.

Q. Is it uſual to ſend out Warrants from the Sheriff's Office, with Blanks for the Names of the Special Bailiffs to be inſerted?

Mr. Croſs. When Special Bailiffs are deſired, Warrants frequently iſſue with Blanks, for their Names to be inſerted.

Q. Do you know this to be frequently done?—Mr. Croſs. Yes.

Counſel for the Priſoner. But is it not more uſual for the Names of the Special Bailiffs to be put into the Warrants in the Office, before they are ſent out, than for Warrants to iſſue with Blanks, for Bailiffs to be inſerted afterwards?

Mr. Croſs. Sometimes the Names of the Special Bailiffs are inſerted in the Office.

Q. I ſay, is it not oftener done? more frequently?

Mr. Croſs. I don't know but it may.

Counſel for the Crown. Don't you think it prudent, ſometimes, not to ſend the Names of the Special Bailiffs to the Office;—to conceal the Names till they are inſerted by the Attorney?—Mr. Croſs. I do.

Mr. Fluit, an Attorney in Cheſter, ſworn.

Counſel for the Crown. Did your Father ever act as Agent for the Sheriff of this County?—Mr. Fluit. He did.

Q. Was it cuſtomary for your Father to ſend out Warrants with Blanks, for the Names of the Special Bailiffs to be inſerted afterwards?

Mr. Fluit. He did leave Blanks often in the Warrants.

Q. I ſuppoſe you underſtood that your Father had Authority ſo to do?

Mr. Fluit. I always underſtood that he had Authority to do it.

Counſel for the Priſoner. But did your Father never refuſe to ſend out Blank Warrants, to your Knowledge?

Mr. Fluit. Yes; he ſometimes did, when he ſuſpected the Attorney; but never, when he knew the Attorney to be a fair Practiſer.

Here ends the Evidence on Behalf of the Crown.

Court to the Priſoner. Have you any Witneſſes to examine?—This is the Time for making your Defence.

The Priſoner called no Witneſſes, nor ſaid any Thing in his Defence.

Mr. Recorder Townsend, of Counſel for the Priſoner.

The Priſoner, I believe, has no Witneſſes to call to his Defence, except one Woman, and I do not know yet, that it will be neceſſary to examine her.

The Occaſion, my Lord, of my appearing this Day, as Counſel for the Priſoner at the Bar, is, on all Sides, a very lamentable Occaſion indeed, which muſt unavoidably affect every body, who has the leaſt Degree of Tenderneſs and Humanity; and glad I ſhould have been, if the Priſoner had ſubmitted to the Arreſt, how illegal ſoever, rather than to have taken the deſperate Methods he did for delivering himſelf from it; and I could wiſh, that it was now in his Power to ſatisfy the Gentlemen of the Jury, upon the preſent Trial for his Life, that he did not diſcharge the Gun, nor kill the unfortunate young Gentleman Mr. Elcock, rather than to have Recourſe to the Sanction of the Law for a Juſtification of his Raſhneſs: Yet, as the unhappy Condition of the Priſoner at the Bar does require all the Aid and Aſſiſtance which the Law can allow him, for the ſaving of his Life, I hope, I ſhall incur to myſelf no Imputation in the Diſcharge of my Duty, by endeavouring to ſatisfy your Lordſhip, under the Authority of the Law, that, although the Priſoner did diſcharge the Gun whereby Mr. Elcock was killed, yet, that he is, by Law, acquitted from the Crime of Murder; and that, under the Circumſtances of his Caſe, ſuch Killing will not amount to more than Manſlaughter.—My Lord, I humbly conceive, that no Warrant or Proceſs from the Sheriff can be executed by any Perſons, but by thoſe whom the Sheriff appoints to execute them. The High-Sheriff undoubtedly may appoint his Deputy to act for him; and the Appointment of the Under-Sheriff of this County was by Deed, and not a Parol Appointment. Under that Appointment, the Under-Sheriff is armed with a Power of doing the lawful Duty and Buſineſs of the Sheriff himſelf.—But, my Lord, in the preſent Caſe, Mr. Baxter, who made out the Warrant againſt the Priſoner, was a Perſon acting under the Under-Sheriff: He was not appointed by any Deed, or Inſtrument in Writing; but he was appointed by Parol, by Word of Mouth only: And Mr. Baxter, as Aſſiſtant to the Under-Sheriff, under this defective Appointment, made out a Warrant againſt the Priſoner, and ſent it out, after it was ſealed, with a Blank left therein for the Names of the Special Bailiffs to be inſerted in it.—The Names John James and John Jones were not in the Warrant, when Mr. Baxter delivered it out, under the Seal. It was taken twenty Miles, to Nantwich, to have the Names afterwards inſerted in it. This is proved by John James himſelf, who ſwears, that he ſaw Mr. Elcock write his Name, and the Name of John Jones, in the Warrant at Nantwich.—My Lord, I humbly apprehend, that no Warrant whatſoever from the Sheriff, can or ought to receive the leaſt Addition, Diminution, or Alteration, after it paſſes the Seal of Office; and that if any Perſon, in the Execution of a Warrant, which ſhall receive any Addition or Diminution, or any Alteration whatſoever, after it has paſſed the Seal, ſhall be killed, ſuch Killing cannot be Murder.—And if a Perſon not lawfully authoriſed ſhall attempt to deprive a Man of his Liberty, although by a legal Warrant, and is killed in ſuch Attempt, the Killing, in that Caſe alſo, is not Murder. My Lord, I have the Authority of as great a Man, as eminent a Lawyer, as ever lived, which, I humbly apprehend, is directly in Point, Hale's Pleas of the Crown, p. 457. where my Lord Hale lays down the Law in theſe Words: "If a Sheriff's Bailiff comes to execute "a Proceſs, but has not a legal Authority; as if the Name of the Bailiff, "Plaintiff, or Defendant, be interlined, or inſerted, after the Sealing "thereof, by the Bailiff himſelf, or any other; if ſuch Bailiff be killed, "it is but Manſlaughter, and not Murder." And, my Lord, notwithſtanding the Evidence given by Mr. Baxter, and Mr. Fluit, that Warrants have been generally ſent out with Blanks, for the Names of the Special Officers to be afterwards inſerted, I humbly contend, that the Warrant, whereon the Priſoner was arreſted by James, the Special Officer, at the Suit of John Atkin, was an illegal Warrant, inaſmuch as the Names of the Bailiffs were added to, or inſerted in the Warrant, after it had paſſed the Seal; and it was at the Peril of the Party executing that Warrant, whether Death, or any other Miſchief, enſued upon it: And, notwithſtanding Warrants have ſometimes been ſent out by the Perſon acting for the Sheriff, with Blanks left in them for inſerting the Names of the Bailiffs, after the Warrants have been ſealed, yet that Uſage or Practice cannot be conſidered to extend to over-rule or ſet aſide the known Law, ſet down by my Lord Hale.—My Lord, this is a Point of Law, which I hope your Lordſhip will look upon to be worthy of Conſideration, and not be left to the Determination of the Jury.—It has likewiſe appeared in Evidence, that when John Atkin and John Jones came to the Aſſiſtance of John James the Bailiff, all that James ordered Mr. Elcock to do, was to ſtay at the Door: He gave him no Authority, nor Orders to break open the Priſoner's Houſe; all he was to do, was to guard the Door.—But, it appears in Evidence, that Mr. Elcock, in a very extraordinary Degree, exceeded the Limits of the Orders which the Bailiff had given him: For, a Crow or Ringer was thruſt under the Door, (that very Door which he was ordered to ſtay at only) poiſing it open; and Mr. Elcock himſelf, in his Agonies, declared to Mr. Cooper the Surgeon, who attended him, that he was ſtriving to break open the Door with the Crow, when the Gun was fired: And therefore I ſubmit it to your Lordſhip, Whether Mr. Elcock did not exceed the Orders and Authority given him by James, ſuppoſing that James had, in himſelf, any Power at all, (which I humbly conceive he had not) and could have transferred any Power or Authority to Mr. Elcock. Theſe are two Queſtions, my Lord, which appear to me to be in Favour of the Priſoner, and to deſerve Conſideration; and if the Court ſhall be of the ſame Opinion, I humbly hope, you will not ſuffer a General Verdict to go againſt the Priſoner, but reſerve thoſe Points for the Conſideration of the Court.

Then Mr. Perryn, alſo of Counſel for the Priſoner.

The only Queſtion, my Lord, is, Whether the Killing Mr. Elcock, in Manner given in Evidence, ought to be conſidered as Murder, or Manſlaughter.

Manſlaughter. It appears clearly, that the Names of the two Bailiffs were not inſerted in the Warrant, when it iſſued under the Seal of the Sheriff; and therefore it was an illegal Warrant, under which James could not derive any lawful Authority to arreſt the Priſoner: For, according to Lord Hale, the Warrant ſhould have been a full and compleat Warrant, when it paſſed the Seal, and ought not to have been a Blank Warrant, Hale's Pleas of the Crown, 457. (quoted by Mr. Recorder.) And the preſent Fact proved by James and Mr. Baxter, that the two Special Bailiffs were inſerted after the Warrant was ſealed, comes under the Words of this great Authority. My Lord, you will obſerve, that the Sheriff's own Bailiff, named in the Warrant, was not called upon, nor employed to execute it, nor did he attend the Execution of it: But the Arreſting of the Priſoner was intirely left to the Special Bailiffs, who, I humbly apprehend, had not the leaſt Power or Authority to execute it.—My Lord, I ſhall quote other Authorities, which, I humbly apprehend, will make in Favour of the Priſoner, and thoſe are, Hawkins's P. C. 80. Cro. Car. 372. 1 Jones 346, 372. 1 Leo. 91. 12 Coke 49. And I mention thoſe Authorities, to ſhew, that if a Warrant be in the leaſt defective, the Arreſt cannot be juſtified.—With regard to the Power derived to Mr. Elcock from James the Bailiff, I hope it will appear to your Lordſhip's Satisfaction, that James had not the leaſt Power or Authority whatſoever in himſelf, and therefore could not transfer any to Mr. Elcock. But ſuppoſing the Bailiff had any Power to call Aſſiſtance, and to have given his Orders to Mr. Elcock, yet Mr. Elcock ſhould have ſtrictly obſerved the Orders which had been given to him—he ſhould have purſued the Directions, namely, to ſtay at the Door; and not have exceeded the Limits of his Authority, in the Manner he did, in attempting to break down that Door, which he was only directed to guard, or ſtay at, and had not any Orders or Authority to break down. There are other Authorities, which I humbly conceive will be of Uſe to the Priſoner, when they come to be conſidered, 2 Lev. 144. 2 Inſt. 105, 143. and 3 Lev. 146. They treat of Arreſts, and the Authority of the Bailiffs, and their Aſſiſtants. No Requeſt was made from the Bailiff to Mr. Elcock, to break down the Door, which ſhould have been previouſly done, before Mr. Elcock could have had the leaſt Colour or Pretence for attempting to break open the Door of the Priſoner's Houſe. Bretton and Cole. Salk. 409. 1 Ray. 305.—Upon the whole, I hope your Lordſhip will think that thoſe Points deſerve the Conſideration of the Court, and that they ought not to be left to the Determination of the Jury.

Then Mr. MADDOCKS, likewiſe of Counſel for the Priſoner.

I AM alſo of Counſel with Mr. Recorder Townſend, and Mr. Perryn, for the unhappy Priſoner at the Bar, and hope your Lordſhip will be of Opinion, that a good deal of Nicety attends this Caſe, not proper for a Jury to determine upon; and that ſeveral Points of Law have ariſen, well worth the Conſideration of the Court. The Law, my Lord, ariſes out of the Fact. This appears to be an Indictment againſt the Priſoner for the Murder of Mr. Francis Elcock, who, when he was murdered, was aſſiſting to re-take a Perſon making his Eſcape from an Arreſt: And I ſhall conſider the Caſe according to its Nature. Firſt, If Mr. Elcock was a Treſpaſſer, then the Priſoner's killing him could be only Manſlaughter, not Murder.—Secondly, Whether upon the Writ, the Special Bailiff and Mr. Elcock derived an Authority for what they did. And here I ſhall mention one Authority, Hawkins's P. C. 86. which ſhews, (although the Caſe is not exactly the ſame with this) that the general Rule is, if a Party, under Colour of Authority, not having legal Authority, ſhall attempt to take away a Man's Liberty, and is killed in the Attempt, the Killing of that Party is not Murder, but Manſlaughter: And whether Mr. Elcock was a Treſpaſſer or not, will depend upon the Authority he derived under the Writ.——The Writ itſelf does not appear to be void, and therefore I won't ſpeak upon it; but ſhall confine myſelf to the Warrant made out for arreſting the Priſoner, in Obedience to the Writ. As to the Facts given in Evidence, it appears, that the Warrant was iſſued by Mr. Baxter: That Mr. Baxter then acted for the Sheriff, as an Aſſiſtant, by Parol Agreement, and delivered the Warrant under the Seal of the Sheriff's Office: That the Name of John Evans, a Bailiff, was then in it, and none others, and that it was carried ſo to Nantwich: That Mr. Elcock was at Nantwich, and there inſerted the Names of John James and John Jones. Now the General Queſtion is, Whether this Warrant was good in Point of Law? In the firſt Place, The Perſon granting the Warrant muſt have lawful Authority for ſo doing. Mr. Baxter, on his Examination, has ſaid, that the Night before the Sheriff was ſworn, he ſupped with him, and it was then agreed, he ſhould act for the Sheriff: That the Sheriff and Under-Sheriff were both preſent, and appointed him, but that it was by Word of Mouth only. And it fully appears, that Mr. Baxter had no Authority from the High Sheriff in Writing.---An Under-Sheriff, my Lord, may be admitted into his Office by Parol; he is to execute the whole Office: But Mr. Baxter is only to execute a particular Part of it. The Under-Sheriff was appointed by Deed: But Mr. Baxter, who did ſome Things for the Sheriff, but did not execute others, ſuch as attending the Aſſizes and Seſſions, was appointed by Parol. I apprehend, if a Perſon is to act for the Sheriff under a limited Authority, that Authority ought to be in Writing; and where the Sheriff delegates a Part only of his Authority to another, it ſhould be by Writing; and therefore, I humbly conceive, that the Appointment of Mr. Baxter to act for the Sheriff, was not a good Appointment, and that his Authority to make out the Warrant upon the Writ for arreſting the Priſoner, was a very defective Authority.---Now, whether the Warrant was a legal Warrant, or not, is in the next Place to be conſidered. And that will depend upon a Variety of Circumſtances;---upon the Nature of the Inſtrument itſelf, and Matters attending it. A Warrant is always under Seal, and therefore is a Deed:---I ſay, this Warrant was a Deed under Seal: And nothing binds the Parties, but what is contained in a Deed, when executed: No Interlineation, or Addition afterwards made, can affect the Parties who had executed it, unleſs the Deed be re-executed; and there has been no Evidence given, that this Deed, this Warrant, was re-executed. Then, if this be the Caſe in general, at the Time the Sheriff ſealed this Warrant, the Names of the two Bailiffs, James and Jones, were not in it. No Authority was given to any Perſon, but to Evans the Bailiff, who was then named in the Warrant.---Cites Hale's P. C. 457. (quoted before by the other Counſel.) Every Iota of this Caſe is parallel, and is agreeable to Law and Common Senſe. How can this Caſe be diſtinguiſhed from the General Law? Can it by Cuſtom? by Lex Loci? It may. What is then incumbent to be done, to eſtabliſh this Diſtinction? Why,---the Cuſtom muſt be immemorial, muſt be uniform, muſt be certain; and there is no Evidence here of ſuch a Cuſtom. Mr. Baxter ſays, he ſometimes leaves Blanks in the Warrants, and ſometimes he inſerts the Names of the Special Bailiffs, and that he has known it ſo done for ſeven or eight-and-twenty Years. This Cuſtom is not a Cuſtom immemorial, it is not proved to have been an immemorial Cuſtom; neither is it uniform, nor proved to be certain.---On the contrary, it has been proved, that the inſerting the Names of Special Bailiffs in the Warrants at the Office, is more uſual than ſending out Blank Warrants. And therefore, ſuppoſing the Inſtances of Cuſtom to be of any Conſequence, upon the Determination of this Point, the Cuſtom muſt make for the Priſoner at the Bar, becauſe the putting in the Names of the Bailiffs at the Office has been more uſual. The General Law therefore is ſupported; the Cuſtom, or Lex Loci, not being immemorial, nor uniform, but uncertain. We are now to ſtand on the General Law of the Land; and if the Warrant fails, neither the Bailiff, nor Mr. Elcock, nor any of their Aſſiſtants, acted under any legal Authority; and therefore the Killing of Mr. Elcock cannot amount to more than Manſlaughter. The Authority, my Lord, which Mr. Elcock had, was given him by James; John Evans, the proper Bailiff, was not there, but James was the acting Bailiff. If James had a Mind that Mr. Elcock ſhould have attempted the breaking open the Door, ſurely he would have deſired him to have done ſo, and not bid him ſtay at the Door only. The Bailiff acts under a limited Authority, Can he then do what he is not authorized?---James acted under a limited Authority; and whether he had Power to call Aſſiſtance, without an Application to the Sheriff, ſeems to me a great Doubt; but I humbly apprehend, that a Perſon, to whom a limited Power is delegated, cannot depute another to execute any Part of that limited Power.---In Caſes of Reſcous, a Writ of Reſcous may be had.—Upon Complaint made, that the Party is reſcued, a Writ of Reſcous iſſues.---In Criminal Caſes, I allow, an Officer can call another to his Aſſiſtance: But this was a Civil Caſe; the Priſoner was out of Sight; it was not a Criminal Matter, nor an Eſcape from an Execution. If James the Bailiff had an Authority to break open the Priſoner's Houſe, it has not been proved that he gave Mr. Elcock this Authority, but the Reverſe. James bid him only ſtay at the Door: Mr. Elcock himſelf ſent for, or borrowed the Crow, the Plaintiff Atkin put it under the Door, and Mr. Elcock poiſed it with an Intent to take it off the Hinges. No particular Authority was given by James; but Mr. Elcock took the Management upon himſelf. It was his Buſineſs only to watch the Door.---Atkin put the Crow under the Door, and Mr. Elcock poiſed it; neither of them had any Order or Directions to break open the Houſe; and Mr. Elcock, having exceeded the Limits of the Authority given him, became a Treſpaſſer; and the unfortunate Killing of him, in the Commiſſion of that Treſpaſs, can only be Manſlaughter, and not Murder.---My Lord, I apprehend, that upon an Eſcape, or Reſcous from an Arreſt upon Meſne Proceſs, an outward Door cannot be broke open. This was an outward Door: The Reſcous was at an End for two Hours, and there ought to have been a Requeſt to aſſiſt on the Reſcous; and a Requeſt to aſſiſt on a Reſcous is traverſable.

Court. It muſt be left to the Jury, whether there was a Requeſt, or not.

Mr. Maddocks. In ſhort, if Mr. Elcock was a Treſpaſſer, the Killing of him can be only Manſlaughter. I humbly apprehend, that John James had no Authority under the Warrant for the arreſting the Priſoner: His Name was not inſerted in the Warrant, till after it had paſſed the Seal of Office. He delegated only a particular Authority to Mr. Elcock.---Mr. Elcock exceeded that Authority. Mr. Elcock was a Treſpaſſer. The Priſoner fired a Gun, which killed Mr. Elcock in the Commiſſion of the Treſpaſs, when he was breaking open the Priſoner's Door: And therefore I hope your Lordſhip will be of Opinion, that theſe are Points ſo eſſentially in Favour of the Priſoner, that you will not prevent him from having the Benefit of the Law which may reſult from a judicial Determination of them, nor ſuffer the Priſoner's Life to be left at the Hazard of a General Verdict.

Mr. Juſtice Swinnerton. Can you ſhew any Caſe to the Court, where an Arreſt under a Blank Warrant has been ſuperſeded?

Mr. Maddocks. No, my Lord, I know of no Caſe at preſent.---But the Thing ſpeaks for itſelf: It is not likely there ſhould be many Caſes of this Kind.

Mr. Juſtice Swinnerton. Is the Doctrine of my Lord Hale laid down in any Part of Hawkins's Pleas of the Crown?

Mr. Maddocks. I have not looked over Mr. Hawkins for it; but if it is omitted to be inſerted in his Pleas of the Crown, I hope, that Omiſſion cannot be conſidered to repeal or invalidate my Lord Hale's Authority.

Mr. Juſtice White. This Caſe does not ſeem to me to come under the Doctrine of Lord Hale. For here a Bailiff was named, and inſerted in the Warrant, before it was ſealed; and I think it was a good Warrant.

(Court diſtinguiſhes the Warrant from a Deed; for a Deed muſt be delivered, and the Sealing and Delivering make a Deed.)

Mr. Maddocks. The Warrant was directed to the Bailiffs, jointly and ſeverally. The Name of John Evans was then, only, in the Warrant; John Evans never acted in the Execution of it; and therefore the Warrant muſt be illegal, quoad James.

Mr. HALL, of Counſel for the Crown.

I SHOULD have almoſt thought it unneceſſary for me to have troubled the Court further on ſo plain a Caſe, but that the Objections made to the Authority of Mr. Baxter ſeem to require, that ſomething ſhould be ſaid, to prevent a Notion from prevailing, that he had not a Right to make out the Warrant.—By the Common Law, an Under-Sheriff may be appointed by Parol, or Deed; and several Under-Sheriffs for different Purposes.

Court. Shew your Cases.

Mr. Hall proceeds.

One Sheriff in London has two Under-Sheriffs, two Compters, two Prisons: The Business is carried on by different Persons.—And there is a Sheriff's Office in Furnival's-Inn, the Business of which is executed by a Clerk; and those Persons are appointed by Parol. Mr. Baxter has been appointed in the same Manner, and it has been usual to make out Blank Warrants for a great Number of Years. Prescription for thirty Years is good, unless the contrary appears; and here nothing does appear to the contrary. Mr. Baxter swears, it has been the Custom all his Time, which he limits to seven or eight-and-twenty Years, to make out Blank Warrants, for the Names of the Special Bailiffs to be inserted. Mr. Baxter did make out this Warrant against the Prisoner, and directed it to John Evans, a Bailiff, and left a Blank for the Attorney to insert two other Names; Mr. Elcock did put in those two Names, and must be considered as Clerk or Agent to the Sheriff; and if so, John James was lawfully authorized to arrest the Prisoner upon that Warrant, and did actually arrest the Prisoner, who afterwards by Violence rescued himself from the Custody of the Bailiff. The Law, upon a Rescous, gives Authority, for the Purpose of taking a Defendant, to break open Doors, and justifies all Persons aiding and assisting the Officer, whether they be requested or not.—If a Bailiff takes a Man by the Hand out of a Window, it is an Arrest, and he may justify the breaking open of Doors after the Defendant, if he should attempt to escape; and I humbly apprehend, the Reason for breaking open the Door was stronger in this Case.—Cites Peer Williams, The Corporation of Bewdley, relating to Venires.—Though upon Complaint of a Rescous, a Writ of Rescous may be sued out; yet I apprehend, that does not prevent taking other Remedies, such as breaking open Doors. The Sheriff may return a Rescous upon a Mesne Process, but cannot upon an Execution: He must raise a Posse Comitatus; but that does not hinder him from raising the Posse Comitatus for a Rescous from an Arrest upon a Mesne Process, if he thinks fit.—It was the Duty of every Man to aid and assist John James the Bailiff, to re-take the Prisoner, after he had rescued himself from the Hands of Justice, by the Force and Violence given in Evidence by James; and Mr. Elcock did what was right, in endeavouring to suppress the Arrogance and Outrage of the Prisoner, and to bring him under a Subjection to those Laws, which are too authoritative to be trampled upon, and treated with Contempt and Disobedience. The Authority in Lord Hale, cited by the Prisoner's Counsel, is a very old Authority. My Lord Hale, I admit, was a great Man, and I pay the highest Regard to his Reports; but I don't find this Authority named in Serjeant Hawkins's Pleas of the Crown, and therefore I apprehend the Serjeant doubted it.

Then Mr. Falconer, also of Counsel for the Crown.

THE Practice of the Officer, acting for the Under-Sheriff, in granting Blank Warrants, has never been complained of as an irregular or unlawful Practice, nor has any Arrest made upon those Sort of Warrants been ever superseded or set aside: Such Blank Warrants have always been held good, and the acting under them legal; and it would be of most dangerous Consequence to attempt to vitiate Proceedings, under which Justice has, for Time immemorial, been administered to the Suitors of the Court. Cites Hale's P. C. 459.

Prisoner's Counsel. That is upon an Execution.

Then Mr. Hayward, likewise of Counsel for the Crown.

MY Lord, I humbly conceive, that the Arguments made use of by the Prisoner's Counsel, for invalidating the Practice of issuing Blank Warrants, will have little Weight with your Lordship, it having been the Usage for Time immemorial, for Persons acting under the Sheriff of this County, as Mr. Baxter now does, to send out such Warrants, and that Practice was never known to be controverted: And if your Lordship is satisfied, that such has been the allowed Practice, then I humbly contend, that the Special Bailiff, John James, had a legal Authority to arrest the Prisoner, by virtue of the Warrant which he received from Mr. Elcock; and that upon his rescuing himself, as has been given in Evidence, the Officer had a Right to call Assistance, and to break open Doors for the Purpose of re-taking him.—Cites M'Cullogh's Case, 9 Coke.—If a Capias instead of a Distringas be executed by an Officer, and the Officer is killed, it is Murder; surely then, it can be no less a Crime than Murder, to kill an Officer after he has executed a Capias: If then the Authority under which James acted was a good Authority, Mr. Elcock did what was legal, though I heartily wish he had acted with better Caution. Cites Palmer 52. White's Case. And the killing Mr. Elcock, or any of the Persons who assisted in re-taking the Prisoner, after he had rescued himself, was Murder. If a Sheriff can appoint a Deputy generally by Parol, I humbly apprehend he may appoint a Person to act in any particular Part of the Office by Parol: I see no Reason why he may not do it in one Case as well as in the other.—As to a Warrant being the same Thing in Effect as a Deed, with regard to the Execution of it, as the Counsel for the Prisoner contend, surely there is not the least Foundation for the Comparison: A Warrant is only sealed; but Signing, Sealing, and Delivering, are necessary to make a Deed. It has been argued by the Counsel for the Prisoner in his Defence, That James, the Bailiff, had no Right to call Assistance for the re-taking the Prisoner, because, as they say, it was a Civil Case; it was not a Criminal Matter, nor an Escape from an Execution: But, my Lord, I humbly insist, that from the Moment the Prisoner had refused to submit to the Arrest, and had rescued himself from the Officer, by snapping a Pistol at him, it ceased to be a Civil Case; it became a Criminal Matter: The Prisoner was a Transgressor and Violator of the Laws of his Country; he broke his Majesty's Peace, and became a Criminal Offender; and therefore the Bailiff had a Right to call, and every Person ought to give him, Assistance for apprehending him: His House remained no longer an Asylum, or Sanctuary for him; He forfeited the Safety which the Law had given him in the close Retirements of his House before he was arrested: His Doors could be afterwards no Security to him from the Hands of Justice; and therefore his killing Mr. Elcock in the Pursuit of him, for the Purpose of bringing him to a due Submission and Obedience, was (I humbly conceive) Murder, and not Manslaughter. The Life of a Man (says my Lord Coke) is to be favoured, but the Life of the Law more so. The Law was established for the Security, Defence, and Protection of every Individual, and is the Life, Strength, and Support of the Community. Upon the whole, I humbly apprehend, your Lordship will be of Opinion, that the Points insisted upon by the Counsel for the Prisoner cannot entitle him to any Indulgence from the Court; but, on the contrary, that you will think them too weak and insufficient to induce you to direct a Special Verdict to be found; and that therefore your Lordship will now sum up the Evidence to the Jury, that they may consider it, and find a General Verdict.

Mr. Attorney produces a Case, Harris against Ashley, determined by Lord Mansfield, the Sittings after Michaelmas Term 1756, in the King's-Bench, where a Sheriff's Clerk filled up the Assignment of a Bail Bond, and it was held good.

Mr. Townsend, for the Prisoner.

I HUMBLY contend, That the Warrant, by reason of the inserting the Bailiffs after the Sealing of it, is not a legal Warrant *; and if so, my Lord Hale's Doctrine is to the Point, and clearly for the Prisoner. The King's Counsel themselves admit Lord Hale's Reports to be an Authority, and therefore, I hope, the Prisoner is well entitled to the Benefit of this Authority. Though the Sheriff may appoint a Deputy by Parol, and that Deputy depute his Authority to a third Person, yet, if that third Person had not a Right of deputing, Mr. Elcock could not act as Agent or Clerk to the Sheriff; and I humbly insist, Mr. Elcock had not a Right to do so, unless the Sheriff himself gave an Authority appointing him. Mr. Serjeant Hawkins omitting to insert my Lord Hale's Case in his Pleas of the Crown, is no Reason for its not being a Resolution of as great Authority as any extant; and it would be a Pity, as well as cruel, that the Prisoner's Life should be forfeited for that Omission. It was an Omission not probably intended; he might have over-looked it, or it might have been left out by some other Accident: No Authority contradicts it; and therefore I contend, that it is still an Authority, in full Force and Effect, and available to the Prisoner, and not abolished or affected by the Custom, which the Counsel for the Crown have set up in Opposition to it. Custom, my Lord, must be supported by Usage for Time immemorial; Custom must be uniform and certain, before it becomes a Law: This Custom carries with it none of those Qualifications. What Mr. Baxter has said, therefore, cannot overset the Rules of the Common Law. I never knew, during all the Time of my own Clerkship, a Blank Warrant sent out, without an Indemnity by Deed; and the Attornies always sent, with the Names of the Special Bailiffs, Indemnities, either by Deed or Assumpsit, on the Back of the Writ: And I humbly insist, that the Inserting of the Names of the two Bailiffs in the Warrant, which James had to arrest the Prisoner, is directly within the Words and Sense of my Lord Hale's Case, as to those two Bailiffs.

Court. Persons coming to the Assistance of the Constable the Law gives the same Sanction to, as to those called by Name.—One Point occurs, not yet spoken to, Whether the Warrant may not be considered as an Escrow.—Suppose a Person gives a Bond to another, sealed and delivered, with a Blank in it for the Sum, and desires him to insert Two Hundred Pounds, or any Sum in it, and he to whom the Bond is given, fills up the Blank accordingly, it is good. I should be glad you could produce one Instance, where a Person who has been arrested upon a Blank Warrant, has been discharged.

Mr. Justice White. No other Person was concerned in the Transaction, but the Party giving the Warrant, and the Party executing it. No Instrument or Writing is a Deed, until it is delivered; but a Warrant is a Warrant as soon as it is sealed.

If a Court see a Blank Indorsement on a Note, they will afterwards suffer it to be filled up. What a dangerous Confusion would be created in the Country, were the Proceedings upon Arrests made by Blank Warrants to be now set aside? To what a precarious Situation would the Property of the Subject be exposed? And how unsettled the Distribution of Justice, heretofore administered upon the Foundation of such Arrests? As to the Question, Whether the Bailiff's Authority to Mr. Elcock was for a particular Purpose, or general—By the Bailiff's calling out after Stevenson to stay; they were coming for him—I should think, that Mr. Elcock was with the Bailiff to give him general Assistance.—This is Matter of Fact, not Law.

Mr. Townsend again, for the Prisoner.

I HOPE, the Points of Law that have arisen in the Course of this Trial, will induce your Lordship to direct the Jury to find a Special

* "In the Case of Arrests upon Process, whether by Writ or Warrant, if the Officer named in the Process give Notice of his Authority, and Resistance is made, and the Officer killed, it will be Murder; if in Fact such Notification was true, and the Process legal: For, after such Notice, the Parties opposing the Arrest acted at their own Peril.

"I said above, by Way of Caution, if the Process be legal: But I would not be understood to mean any thing more than, Provided the Process, be it by Writ or Warrant, be not defective in the Frame of it, and issue in the ordinary Course of Justice from a Court or Magistrate having Jurisdiction in the Case. There may have been Error or Irregularity in the Proceeding, previous to the issuing of the Process; and if the Sheriff, or other Minister of Justice, be killed in the Execution of it, this will be Murder: For the Officer to whom it is directed, must at his Peril pay Obedience to it; and therefore, if a Capias ad Satisfaciendum, Fieri facias, Writ of Assistance, or any other Writ of the like Kind, issue, directed to the Sheriff, and he or any of his Officers be killed in the Execution of it, it is sufficient, upon an Indictment for this Murder, to produce the Writ and Warrant.

"But, if the Process be defective in the Frame of it; as if there be a Mistake in the Name or Addition of the Person on whom it is to be executed; or if the Name of such Person, or of the Officer, be inserted without Authority, and after the issuing of the Process, or the Officer exceedeth the Limits of his Authority, and is killed, this will amount to no more than Manslaughter in the Person whose Liberty is so invaded." Foster's Reports, p. 311, 312.

Verdict, that the Priſoner may have the Benefit of the Law, and that you will not ſuffer a Matter, which ſo nearly endangers the Priſoner's Life, to be determined by a Jury: The Authority of Lord Hale furniſhes me with an Expectation, that you will grant this Indulgence to the Priſoner.

Mr. Juſtice Swinnerton. I muſt, in Juſtice to you, Mr. Recorder, and the other Counſel for the Priſoner, ſay, that you have diſcharged yourſelves, through the Courſe of this Trial, with great Decency and Judgment, and have done every Thing for the unhappy Man, that could poſſibly be expected from Gentlemen at the Bar. As for my own Part, I have the greateſt Inclination to Mercy, and no Perſon would more readily extend Compaſſion to a proper Object, than I would: But, I could wiſh that it had not been my Province to hear, and be a Judge of ſo ſhocking and melancholy an Event; for this being an Inquiſition for Blood, to delay the Execution of Juſtice, may tend to overſet and deſtroy Juſtice. However, if you, Gentlemen at the Bar, of Counſel for the Priſoner, will give this Court your Honour, that you verily believe the Points of Law, which ſeem to have ariſen upon this Trial, will in the End avail the Priſoner, and that you think Judgment of Murder may be averted from him upon the Deciſion of thoſe Points; and that you do not aſk Indulgence for the Sake of Delay, but from reaſonable Hopes that the Priſoner may be acquitted of Murder, when the Facts come to be argued; I will moſt readily conſent to direct the Jury to find a Special Verdict: But if, on the other Hand, you think that the Priſoner may not be availed by the Determination of the Court upon thoſe Points, I rely upon your Honour, and hope you will not requeſt it.

Mr. Townſend. With great Submiſſion to the Court, we humbly apprehend, that the Priſoner will receive the utmoſt Advantage upon the Determination of the Facts to be ſtated: We have the Authority of Lord Hale on our Side, and ſhall have Time to conſult other Authorities, which may probably give us further Aſſurances, that the Priſoner's Life in the End will be ſaved by the Deciſion of thoſe Points. But if we ſhould fail, I have no doubt upon me, but the Conduct of myſelf, and of the other Counſel for the Priſoner, will be clear from every Imputation, inaſmuch as we requeſt this Indulgence under the Patronage of my Lord Hale, and not to delay or protract Juſtice, but that the Priſoner may receive that Benefit from the Law, which we humbly conceive he is intitled unto; and for theſe Reaſons only we deſire, that the Court will give the Priſoner an Opportunity of having thoſe Points argued.

The Court conſented.

Then the Facts were ſtated, and found by the Jury as follows:

The Jurors find the Capias with the Indorſement of Indemnity.

That the ſaid John Atkin, Plaintiff in the ſaid Capias, ſigned the Indorſement of Indemnity.

That the Sheriffs of the County of Cheſter have always appointed a Perſon, reſiding in the City of Cheſter, to receive Writs, make Warrants thereon, and to return them.

That Mr. Robert Baxter, the Night before Samuel Harriſon, Eſquire, Sheriff of the ſaid County of Cheſter, was ſworn into Office, but after he had received his Appointment as Sheriff, was in Company with the ſaid Samuel Harriſon, then and now Sheriff of the ſaid County, and John Hollins, Gentleman, Under-Sheriff of the ſaid County; and the ſaid Robert Baxter was then appointed for the Purpoſes aforeſaid; under which Appointment the ſaid Robert Baxter has acted ever ſince. That the ſaid Sheriff was ſworn into Office the Day following ſuch Appointment: That the ſaid Robert Baxter after that Time, and in purſuance of ſuch Appointment, did make out a Warrant upon the ſaid Capias, under Seal of the ſaid Sheriff, in the Words following, that is to ſay, [Here the Warrant is to be ſet forth in the Record of the Special Verdict.] But Note,-----In ſetting forth the Warrant in the Special Verdict, the Words, "John James and John Jones," are to be omitted.

That the ſaid Robert Baxter delivered the ſaid Warrant, ſo under Seal as aforeſaid, to Mr. Lowe, then Agent to Francis Elcock ſince deceaſed, which ſaid Francis Elcock was Attorney for the Plaintiff John Atkin.

That the ſame Warrant ſo ſealed, was ſent to the ſaid Francis Elcock, to Nantwich in the ſaid County (a Blank being left in the ſaid Warrant).

That it has been the Practice, in the Sheriff's Office of the ſaid County of Cheſter, to grant Warrants with the Names of the Sheriff's Bailiffs inſerted, and that Blanks have been left therein, for the Purpoſe of inſerting the Names of Special Bailiffs, to be added to ſuch Sheriff's own Bailiffs, to act jointly or ſeverally; and that it has alſo been the Practice for the Sheriff's Agent to inſert the Names of all the Special Bailiffs therein, before the ſame hath been delivered out to the Bailiffs, when ſuch Names have been ſent to the Sheriff's Office; and that the ſaid Francis Elcock afterwards, at Nantwich aforeſaid, by the Permiſſion of the ſaid Robert Baxter, inſerted in the ſaid Warrant, in the Blank left for that Purpoſe, the Words and Names following, to wit, "John James "and John Jones." That the ſaid Warrant was delivered to John James, by virtue whereof he the ſaid John James alone arreſted the ſaid John Stevenſon. That the ſaid John Stevenſon, after he was ſo arreſted, reſcued himſelf, went into his Houſe, and ſhut the Doors. That the ſaid John James applied to the ſaid Francis Elcock for Arms and Aſſiſtance to retake the ſaid John Stevenſon (the ſaid Francis Elcock then being at an Houſe in the Neighbourhood). That the ſaid John James, the ſaid Francis Elcock, and ſeveral other Perſons, as Aſſiſtants to the ſaid John James, made freſh Purſuit, and went to the Houſe of the ſaid John Stevenſon, as ſoon as they could, in order to retake him the ſaid John Stevenſon; but that John Evans, named in the ſaid Warrant, never was there; and that all the Doors of the ſaid Houſe were ſhut. That the ſaid John James, upon his going to retake the ſaid John Stevenſon, and before he the ſaid John James got to the ſaid John Stevenſon's Houſe, ſaw the ſaid John Stevenſon out of Doors, but going towards the ſaid Houſe; and before he the ſaid John Stevenſon got into the ſaid Houſe, he the ſaid John James called out to the ſaid John Stevenſon in theſe Words, "You may as well ſtay, for we "are coming for you." That when the ſaid John James, the ſaid Francis Elcock, and others, as Aſſiſtants to the ſaid John James, came up to the ſaid Houſe, the ſaid John James told the ſaid Francis Elcock to take care of two of the Doors of the ſaid Houſe, and the ſaid John James went to a Door on the other Side of the ſame Houſe, out of the Sight of the ſaid Francis Elcock. That the ſaid Francis Elcock demanded Entrance, while the ſaid John James was at another Door, out of Sight of him the ſaid Francis Elcock. That the ſaid John Atkin, the ſaid Plaintiff, was at the ſame Door with the ſaid Francis Elcock, with an Iron Crow in his Hand. That the ſaid Crow was brought there, together with other Arms, by the Direction of the ſaid John James. That the ſaid Francis Elcock bid the ſaid John Atkin to put the ſaid Iron Crow under the ſame Door, to break it open; whereupon the ſaid John Atkin put the ſaid Crow under the ſame Door for that Purpoſe, and endeavoured to lift the ſame Door off the Hinges; but failing, he the ſaid John Atkin then left the ſaid Crow ſticking under the ſame Door, and went towards another Door of the ſame Houſe, to prevent the ſaid John Stevenſon eſcaping; and left the ſaid Francis Elcock at the ſame Door, where the ſaid Iron Crow was. That there were two Holes in the ſame Door, through which the ſaid John Stevenſon might ſee who was on the Out-ſide of the ſame Door. That the ſaid John Stevenſon took a Gun from the Mantle-piece in his ſaid Houſe, loaded with Gun-powder and a Bullet, and ſhot and diſcharged it, and ſhot the ſaid Francis Elcock, through the ſame Door, in the Part mentioned in the Indictment, of which he the ſaid Francis Elcock died, as in the ſaid Indictment is mentioned.

And if, upon the whole Matter, the Court ſhall be of Opinion, that the ſaid John Stevenſon is Guilty of Murder, the Jury ſay, that the ſaid John Stevenſon is Guilty of Murder.

And if the Court ſhall be of Opinion, that the ſaid John Stevenſon is Guilty of Manſlaughter, the Jury ſay, that the ſaid John Stevenſon is Guilty of Manſlaughter, and not Guilty of Murder.

"Thurſday, Auguſt 6, following, the Special Verdict was argued at "the Aſſizes at Cheſter, before the Hon. Mr. Juſtice Noel, Chief Juſtice "of Cheſter, and Taylor White, Eſq. the other Juſtice, when the Court "took Time till the next Morning for delivering their Opinions; and "accordingly on Friday Morning, Mr. Juſtice Noel, in an ingenious "and pathetic Speech, ſupported by adjudged Caſes, and the Doctrine "of the wiſeſt Sages of the Law, and alſo by Arguments of Reaſon and "Conſcience, declared, That the Priſoner's Crime, found by the Spe-"cial Verdict, could amount at moſt to Manſlaughter only. Where-"upon the Priſoner was burnt in the Hand, and diſcharged from the "Indictment of Murder." London Magazine, for Auguſt 1759.

LVI. The Trial of Lawrence Earl Ferrers, for the Murder of John Johnſon, before the Right Honourable the House of Peers, in Weſtminſter-Hall, in full Parliament, on Wedneſday the 16th, Thurſday the 17th, and Friday the 18th of April, 1760.

Wedneſday, April 16, 1760.

In the Court erected in Westminster-Hall, for the Trial of LAWRENCE Earl FERRERS, for the Murder of John Johnſon.

ABOUT Eleven of the Clock the Lords came from their own Houſe into the Court erected in Weſtminſter-Hall, for the Trial of Lawrence Earl Ferrers, in the Manner following:

The Lord High Steward's Gentlemen Attendants, Two and Two.

The Clerks Aſſiſtant to the Houſe of Lords, and the Clerk of the Parliament.

Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, bearing the King's Commiſſion to the Lord High Steward; and the Clerk of the Crown in the King's Bench.

The Maſters in Chancery, Two and Two.

The Judges, Two and Two.

The Peers eldeſt Sons, Two and Two.

Peers Minors, Two and Two.

York and Windſor Heralds.

Four Serjeants at Arms with their Maces, Two and Two.

The Yeoman Uſher of the Houſe.

Then the Peers, Two and Two, beginning with the youngeſt Baron.

Then Four Serjeants at Arms with their Maces, Two and Two.

The Serjeant at Arms attending the Great Seal, and Purſe-Bearer.

Then Garter King at Arms, and the Gentleman Uſher of the Black Rod, carrying the White Staff before the Lord High Steward.

Robert Lord Henley, Lord Keeper of the Great Seal of Great Britain, Lord High Steward, alone; his Train borne.

When the Lords were placed in their proper Seats, and the Lord High Steward upon the Woolpack;

The Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, having his Majeſty's Commiſſion to the Lord High Steward in his Hand, and the Clerk of the Crown in the King's Bench, ſtanding before the Clerk's Table with their Faces towards the State, made Three Reverences; the firſt at the Table, the Second in the Midway, and the Third near the Woolpack; then kneeled down; and the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, on his Knee, preſented presented the Commission to the Lord High Steward, who delivered the same to the Clerk of the Crown in the King's Bench to read: Then rising, they made Three Reverences, and returned to the Table. And then Proclamation was made for Silence, in this Manner:

Serjeant at Arms. Oyez, Oyez, Oyez! Our Sovereign Lord the King strictly charges and commands all Manner of Persons to keep Silence, upon Pain of Imprisonment.

Then the Lord High Steward stood up, and spoke to the Peers.

Lord High Steward. His Majesty's Commission is about to be read: Your Lordships are desired to attend to it in the usual Manner; and all others are likewise to stand up, uncovered, while the Commission is reading.

All the Peers uncovered themselves; and they, and all others, stood up uncovered, while the Commission was read.

GEORGE R.

GEORGE the Second, by the Grace of God, of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, and so forth. To our Right Trusty and Well-beloved Councellor Robert Lord Henley, Baron of Grainge, in our County of Southampton, Keeper of our Great Seal of Great Britain, Greeting. Know ye, That whereas Lawrence Earl Ferrers, Viscount Tamworth, late of the Parish of Breedon, in Our County of Leicester (before Our Justices, assigned by Our Letters Patent under Our Great Seal of Great Britain, to enquire more fully the Truth, by the Oath of good and lawful Men of Our said County of Leicester, and by other Ways, Means, and Methods, by which they should and might better know (as well within Liberties as without), by whom the Truth of the Matter may be the better known and enquired into, of all Treasons, Misprisions of Treasons, Insurrections, Rebellions, Counterfeitings, Clippings, Washings, false Coinings, and other Falsities of the Money of Great Britain, and of other Kingdoms or Dominions whatsoever, and of all Murders, Felonies, Manslaughters, Killings, Burglaries, Rapes of Women, unlawful Meetings and Conventicles, unlawful Uttering of Words, Assemblies, Misprisions, Confederacies, false Allegations, Trespasses, Riots, Routs, Retentions, Escapes, Contempts, Falsities, Negligences, Concealments, Maintenances, Oppressions, Champarties, Deceits, and all other evil Doings, Offences, and Injuries whatsoever, and also of the Accessaries of them, within the County of Leicester aforesaid (as well within Liberties as without), by whomsoever and in what Manner soever done, committed, or perpetrated, and by whom, or to whom, when, how, and after what Manner; and of all other Articles and Circumstances concerning the Premises, and every or any of them, in any Manner whatsoever; and the said Treasons, and other the Premises, according to the Laws and Customs of England, to hear and determine), stands indicted, by the Oath of good and lawful Men of Our said County of Leicester, of Felony and Murder, by him the said Lawrence Earl Ferrers Viscount Tamworth done and committed: We, considering that Justice is an excellent Virtue, and pleasing to the Most High; and being willing that the said Lawrence Earl Ferrers Viscount Tamworth, of and for the Felony and Murder whereof he is indicted as aforesaid before Us, in Our present Parliament, according to the Law and Custom of Our Kingdom of Great Britain, may be heard, examined, sentenced, and adjudged; and that all other Things which are necessary on this Occasion may be duly exercised and executed; and for that the Office of High Steward of Great Britain (whose Presence, upon this Occasion, is required) is now vacant (as We are informed): We, very much confiding in your Fidelity, Prudence, provident Circumspection, and Industry, have, for this Cause, ordained and constituted you Steward of Great Britain, to bear, execute, and exercise (for this Time) the said Office, with all Things due and belonging to the same Office in this Behalf: And therefore We command you, that you diligently set about the Premises, and (for this Time) do exercise, and execute with Effect, all those Things which belong to the Office of Steward of Great Britain, and which are required in this Behalf. In Witness whereof, We have caused these our Letters to be made Patent. Witness Ourself at Westminster, the Sixteenth Day of April, in the Thirty-third Year of our Reign.

By the King Himself, signed with his own Hand.

Yorke and Yorke.

Serjeant at Arms. God save the King!

Then Garter, and the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, after three Reverences, kneeling jointly presented the White Staff to his Grace the Lord High Steward: And then his Grace, attended by Garter, Black Rod, and the Purse-Bearer (making his proper Reverences towards the Throne), removed from the Woolpack, to an armed Chair, which was placed on the uppermost Step but one of the Throne, as it was prepared for that Purpose, and then seated himself in the Chair, and delivered the Staff to the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod on his Right-Hand, the Purse-Bearer holding the Purse on the left.

Clerk of the Crown. Serjeant at Arms, make Proclamation.

Serjeant at Arms. Oyez, Oyez, Oyez! Our Sovereign Lord the King strictly charges and commands all Manner of Persons to keep Silence, upon Pain of Imprisonment.

Then the Clerk of the Crown, by Direction of the Lord High Steward, read the Certiorari, and the Return thereof, together with the Caption of the Indictment, and the Indictment certified thereupon, against Lawrence Earl Ferrers; in hæc verba:

The Certiorari and Return.

GEORGE the Second, by the Grace of God, of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, and so forth, To Our Justices, assigned by Our Letters Patent under Our Great Seal of Great Britain, to enquire more fully the Truth, by the Oath of good and lawful Men of Our County of Leicester, and by other Ways, Means, and Methods, by which they should and might better know (as well within Liberties as without), by whom the Truth of the Matter may be the better known and enquired into, of all Treasons, Misprisions of Treasons, Insurrections, Rebellions, Counterfeitings, Clippings, Washings, false Coinings, and other Falsities of the Money of Great Britain, and of other Kingdoms or Dominions whatsoever, and of all Murders, Felonies, Manslaughters, Killings, Burglaries, Rapes of Women, unlawful Meetings and Conventicles, unlawful Uttering of Words, Assemblies, Misprisions, Confederacies, false Allegations, Trespasses, Riots, Routs, Retentions, Escapes, Contempts, Falsities, Negligences, Concealments, Maintenances, Oppressions, Champarties, Deceits, and all other evil Doings, Offences, and Injuries whatsoever, and also of the Accessaries of them, within the County aforesaid (as well within Liberties as without), by whomsoever and in what Manner soever done, committed, or perpetrated, and by whom, or to whom, when, how, and after what Manner; and of all other Articles and Circumstances concerning the Premises, and every or any of them, in any Manner whatsoever, and the said Treasons, and other the Premises, according to the Laws and Customs of England, to hear and determine, and to every of them, Greeting: We, being willing, for certain Reasons, that all and singular Indictments and Inquisitions of whatsoever Felonies and Murders whereof Lawrence Earl Ferrers Viscount Tamworth, late of the Parish of Breedon, in the County of Leicester, is indicted before you (as is said), be determined before Us, and not elsewhere, do command you, and every of you, that you, or One of you, do send, under your Seals, or the Seal of One of you, before Us, in our present Parliament, immediately after the Receipt of this Our Writ, all and singular the Indictments and Inquisitions aforesaid, with all Things touching the same, by whatsoever Name the said Lawrence Earl Ferrers Viscount Tamworth is called in the same, together with this Writ, that We may further cause to be done thereon what of Right, and according to the Law and Custom of England, We shall see fit to be done. Witness Ourself at Westminster, the Eighteenth Day of March, in the Thirty-third Year of Our Reign.

Yorke and Yorke.

To the Justices assigned to enquire of all Treasons, Murders, &c. committed within the County of Leicester, a Writ of Certiorari, to certify into the Upper House of Parliament the Indictment found before them against Lawrence Earl Ferrers for Murder, returnable immediately, before the King in Parliament.

Yorke and Yorke.

Return. BY Order of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, in Parliament assembled, by virtue of the within Writ to me, and others, directed, I send to our Sovereign Lord the King, in this present Parliament, under my Seal, the Indictment and Inquisition within mentioned, with all Things touching the same, in certain Schedules hereunto annexed, as I am within commanded.

H. Bathurst.

Leicestershire. BE it remembered, That at the General Session of our Lord the King, of Oyer and Terminer, holden for the County of Leicester, at the Castle of Leicester, in and for the same County, on Friday the Fourteenth Day of March, in the Thirty-third Year of the Reign of our Sovereign Lord George the Second, now King of Great Britain, and so forth, before Henry Bathurst, Esquire, one of the Justices of our said Lord the King, of his Court of Common Bench; James Hewitt, Esquire, one of the Serjeants at Law of our said Lord the King, and others their Fellows, Justices of our said Lord the King, assigned by Letters Patent of our said Lord the King, under his Great Seal of Great Britain, to them and others, and any Two or more of them made, of whom our said Lord the King would have the said Henry Bathurst, Esquire, and James Hewitt, Esquire, to be One, to enquire more fully the Truth, by the Oath of good and lawful Men of the County aforesaid, and by all other Ways, Means, and Methods, by which they should or might better know (as well within Liberties as without) by whom the Truth of the Matter may be the better known and enquired into, of all Treasons, Misprisions of Treasons, Insurrections, Rebellions, Counterfeitings, Clippings, Washings, false Coinings, and other Falsities of the Monies of Great Britain, and of other Kingdoms or Dominions whatsoever; and of all Murders, Felonies, Manslaughters, Killings, Burglaries, Rapes of Women, unlawful Meetings and Conventicles, unlawful Uttering of Words, Assemblies, Misprisions, Confederacies, false Allegations, Trespasses, Riots, Routs, Retentions, Escapes, Contempts, Falsities, Negligences, Concealments, Maintenances, Oppressions, Champarties, Deceits, and all other evil Doings, Offences, and Injuries whatsoever, and also of the Accessaries of them, within the County aforesaid (as well within Liberties as without) by whomsoever, and in what Manner soever, done, committed, or perpetrated, and by whom, or to whom, when, how, and after what Manner; and of all other Articles and Circumstances concerning the Premises, and every or any of them, in any Manner whatsoever; and the said Treasons, and other the Premises, according to the Laws and Customs of England, for this Time, to hear and determine, by the Oath of John Grey, John Palmer, Thomas Boothby the Elder, William Pochin, Nathan Wrighte, Charles Skrymsher Boothby, Thomas Boothby the Younger, Joseph Craddock, Edward Farnham, Rogers Rudding, Charles Morris, Esquires; John Smalley, Richard Walker, John Willows, James Silmey, Thomas Ayre, Gabriel Newton, and Robert Hames, Gentlemen; good and lawful Men of the County aforesaid, then and there sworn, and charged to enquire for our said Lord the King for the Body of the same County.

It is presented, That the Bill of Indictment hereunto annexed is a true Bill.

BLENCOWE.

Leicestershire. THE Jurors for our present Sovereign Lord the King, upon their Oath, present, That the Right Honourable Lawrence Earl Ferrers, Viscount Tamworth, late of the Parish of Breedon, in in the County of Leiceſter, not having the Fear of God before his Eyes, but being moved and ſeduced by the Inſtigation of the Devil, on the Eighteenth Day of January, in the Thirty-third Year of the Reign of our preſent Sovereign Lord George the Second, by the Grace of God, of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, and ſo forth, with Force and Arms, at the Pariſh of Breedon, in the County of Leiceſter aforeſaid, in and upon one John Johnſon, in the Peace of God, and of our ſaid Lord the King, then and there being, felonioufly, wilfully, and of his Malice aforethought, did make an Aſſault, and that He the ſaid Lawrence Earl Ferrers, Viſcount Tamworth, with a certain Piſtol of the Value of Two Shillings, then and there being charged with Gunpowder, and a leaden Bullet, which Piſtol he the ſaid Lawrence Earl Ferrers, Viſcount Tamworth, in his Hand then and there had and held at, againſt, and upon, him the ſaid John Johnſon, then and there felonioufly, wilfully, and of his Malice aforethought, did diſcharge and ſhoot off: And that he the ſaid Lawrence Earl Ferrers, Viſcount Tamworth, with the leaden Bullet aforeſaid, by Force of the Gunpowder aforeſaid out of the ſaid Piſtol, by him the ſaid Lawrence Earl Ferrers, Viſcount Tamworth, ſo as aforeſaid diſcharged and ſhot off, him the ſaid John Johnſon, in and upon the Left Side of the ſaid John Johnſon, a little under the loweſt Rib of the ſaid John Johnſon, then and there felonioufly, wilfully, and of his Malice aforethought, did ſtrike and wound, giving to the ſaid John Johnſon then and there, with the leaden Bullet aforeſaid, out of the ſaid Piſtol ſo as aforeſaid diſcharged and ſhot off, in and upon the ſaid Left Side, a little under the loweſt Rib of the ſaid John Johnſon, One mortal Wound, of the Breadth of One Inch and Depth of Four Inches; of which ſaid mortal Wound the ſaid John Johnſon, at the ſaid Pariſh of Breedon, in the ſaid County of Leiceſter, did languiſh, and languiſhing did live, until the Nineteenth Day of the ſame Month of January, in the Thirty-third Year aforeſaid; on which ſaid Nineteenth Day of January, about the Hour of Nine of the Clock in the Morning, he the ſaid John Johnſon, at the Pariſh of Breedon aforeſaid, in the County of Leiceſter aforeſaid, of the mortal Wound aforeſaid died: And ſo the Jurors aforeſaid, upon their Oaths aforeſaid, do ſay, That the ſaid Lawrence Earl Ferrers, Viſcount Tamworth, the ſaid John Johnſon, in Manner and Form aforeſaid, felonioufly, wilfully, and of his Malice aforethought, did kill and murder, againſt the Peace of our ſaid Lord the King, his Crown and Dignity.

Witneſſes, Elizabeth Burgeland, Sarah Johnſon, Elizabeth Saxon, Thomas Kirkland, Elizabeth Dolman, William Tomlinſon.

A true Bill.

Sworn in Court.

Lord High Steward. Is it your Lordſhips Pleaſure, that the Judges have Leave to be covered?

Lords. Ay, ay.

Clerk of the Crown. Serjeant at Arms, Make Proclamation for the Lieutenant of the Tower to bring his Priſoner to the Bar.

Serjeant at Arms. Oyez, Oyez, Oyez! Lieutenant of the Tower of London, Bring forth Lawrence Earl Ferrers, your Priſoner, to the Bar, purſuant to the Order of the Houſe of Lords.

Then Lawrence Earl Ferrers was brought to the Bar by the Deputy Governor of the Tower, having the Ax carried before him by the Gentleman-Gaoler, who ſtood with it on the Left Hand of the Priſoner, with the Edge turned from him. The Priſoner, when he approached the Bar, made Three Reverences, and then fell upon his Knees at the Bar.

Lord High Steward. Your Lordſhip may riſe.

Then the Priſoner roſe up, and bowed to his Grace the Lord High Steward, and to the Houſe of Peers; which Compliment was returned him by his Grace, and the Lords.

Then Proclamation having been again made for Silence, the Lord High Steward ſpake to the Priſoner, as follows.

Lord High Steward.

Lawrence Earl Ferrers,

YOU are brought to this Bar to receive your Trial, upon a Charge of the Murder of John Johnſon; an Accuſation, with reſpect to the Crime, and the Perſons who make it (the Grand Jury of the County of Leiceſter, the Place of your Lordſhip's Reſidence), of the moſt ſolemn and ſerious Nature.

Yet, my Lord, you may conſider it but as an Accuſation; for the greateſt or meaneſt Subject of this Kingdom (ſuch is the Tenderneſs of our Law) cannot be convicted capitally, but by a Charge made by Twelve good and lawful Men, and a Verdict found by the ſame Number of his Equals at the leaſt.

My Lord, in this Period of the Proceedings, while your Lordſhip ſtands only as accuſed, I touch but gently on the Offence charged upon your Lordſhip; yet, for your own Sake, it behoves me ſtrongly to mark the Nature of the Judicature before which you now appear.

It is a Happineſs reſulting from your Lordſhip's Birth and the Conſtitution of this Country, That your Lordſhip is now to be tried by your Peers in full Parliament. What greater Conſolation can be ſuggeſted to a Perſon in your unhappy Circumſtances, than to be reminded, that you are to be tried by a Sett of Judges, whoſe Sagacity and Penetration no material Circumſtances in Evidence can eſcape, and whoſe Juſtice nothing can influence or pervert?

This Conſideration, if your Lordſhip is conſcious of Innocence, muſt free your Mind from any Perturbations that the Solemnity of ſuch a Trial might excite; it will render the Charge, heavy as it is, unembarraſſing, and leave your Lordſhip firm and compoſed, to avail yourſelf of every Mode of Defence, that the moſt equal and humane Laws admit of.

Your Lordſhip, purſuant to the Courſe of this Judicature, hath been furniſhed with a Copy of the Indictment, and hath had your own Counſel aſſigned; you are therefore enabled to make ſuch Defence as is moſt for your Benefit and Advantage; if your Lordſhip ſhall put yourſelf on Trial, you muſt be aſſured to meet with nothing but Juſtice, Candour, and Impartiality.

Before I conclude, I am, by Command of the Houſe, to acquaint your Lordſhip, and all other Perſons who have Occaſion to ſpeak to the Court, during the Trial, that they are to addreſs themſelves to the Lords in general, and not to any Lord in particular.

Lord High Steward. Lawrence Earl Ferrers, Your Lordſhip will do well to give Attention, while you are arraigned on your Indictment.

Here Earl Ferrers was arraigned, in the Form of the ſaid Indictment againſt him, by the Clerk of the Crown in the King's Bench.

Clerk of the Crown. How ſay you, Lawrence Earl Ferrers, Are you guilty of the Felony and Murder whereof you ſtand indicted, or not guilty?

Earl Ferrers. Not guilty, my Lords.

Clerk of the Crown. Cul': prit, How will your Lordſhip be tried?

Earl Ferrers. By God and my Peers.

Clerk of the Crown. God ſend your Lordſhip a good Deliverance.

Clerk of the Crown. Serjeant at Arms, make Proclamation.

Serjeant at Arms. Oyez, Oyez, Oyez! All Manner of Perſons that will give Evidence, on Behalf of our Sovereign Lord the King, againſt Lawrence Earl Ferrers, the Priſoner at the Bar, let them come forth, and they ſhall be heard; for now he ſtands at the Bar upon his Deliverance.

Lord High Steward. My Lords, the Diſtance of this Place from the Bar is ſo great, that I muſt deſire your Lordſhips Leave to go down to the Table for the Convenience of hearing.

Lords. Ay, Ay.

Then his Grace removed to the Woolpack, and delivered the White Staff to be held by the Gentleman Uſher of the Black Rod; who, during the whole Trial, always received and delivered back the White Staff upon his Knee.

Mr. Perrott.

May it pleaſe your Lordſhips,

THIS Noble Lord Lawrence Earl Ferrers, the Priſoner at the Bar, ſtands indicted for the felonious Killing and Murder of one John Johnſon; and the Indictment ſets forth, That the Right Honourable Lawrence Earl Ferrers, Viſcount Tamworth, on the Eighteenth Day of January, in the Thirty-third Year of his preſent Majeſty's Reign, with Force and Arms, at the Pariſh of Breedon, in the County of Leiceſter, in and upon one John Johnſon, felonioufly, wilfully, and of his Malice aforethought, did make an Aſſault; and that a certain Piſtol then and there being charged with Gunpowder and a leaden Bullet, which Piſtol he the ſaid Lawrence Earl Ferrers then and there held in his Hand, at, againſt, and upon him the ſaid John Johnſon, then and there felonioufly, wilfully, and of his Malice aforethought, did diſcharge and ſhoot off; and with the leaden Bullet aforeſaid, by Force of the Gunpowder aforeſaid, out of the ſaid Piſtol by him ſo diſcharged and ſhot off, the ſaid John Johnſon in and upon the left Side of the ſaid John Johnſon, a little under his loweſt Rib, then and there felonioufly, wilfully, and of his Malice aforethought, did ſtrike and wound, giving to the ſaid John Johnſon then and there with the leaden Bullet aforeſaid, out of the ſaid Piſtol ſo as aforeſaid diſcharged and ſhot off, in and upon the ſaid Left Side a little under the loweſt Rib of the ſaid John Johnſon, one mortal Wound, of the Breadth of one Inch, and Depth of Four Inches; of which ſaid mortal Wound the ſaid John Johnſon did languiſh, and languiſhing did live, until the Nineteenth Day of the ſame Month of January, in the Thirty-third Year aforeſaid; on which Day, about the Hour of Nine of the Clock in the Morning, he, the ſaid John Johnſon, of the mortal Wound aforeſaid, died; and ſo the Jurors, upon their Oath, do find, That the ſaid Lawrence Earl Ferrers, the ſaid John Johnſon, in Manner aforeſaid, felonioufly, wilfully, and of his Malice aforethought, did kill and murder, againſt the Peace of our Lord the King, his Crown and Dignity.

To this Indictment the Noble Lord, the Priſoner at the Bar, hath pleaded Not Guilty, and for his Trial hath put himſelf upon your Lordſhips his Peers here preſent.

We, who have the Honour to ſerve the Crown in this Proſecution, ſhall call our Evidence; and, if we prove the Fact charged by this Indictment, we doubt not but your Lordſhips will find him guilty, and give ſuch Judgment for the ſame as ſhall be juſt.

Mr. Attorney-General *.

May it pleaſe your Lordſhips,

I AM likewiſe of Counſel for the Crown; and it is become my Duty in conſequence of that, to open to your Lordſhips the Facts and Circumſtances of this Caſe, out of which your Lordſhips are to collect and find the Crime that is charged in this Indictment.

The noble Priſoner ſtands here arraigned before your Lordſhips for that odious Offence, malicious and deliberate Murder. There cannot be a Crime in human Society that deſerves more to be puniſhed, or more ſtrictly to be enquired after; and therefore it is, that his Majeſty, the great executive Hand of Juſtice in this Kingdom, has promoted this Inquiry, whereby all Men may ſee, that in the Caſe of Murder his Majeſty makes no Difference between the greateſt and meaneſt of his Subjects.

The Priſoner has a Right, from his Quality, to the Privilege of being tried before this noble Tribunal; if he is innocent, he has the greateſt Reaſon to be comforted, that your Lordſhips are his Judges; for that Nobleneſs and Humanity, which prompt you naturally to incline towards Mercy, will ſtrongly exert themſelves in the Protection of Innocence. But, on the other Hand, if the Priſoner is really guilty of the Charge; his Caſe is truly deplorable; becauſe your Minds cannot be deceived by the falſe Colouring of Rhetorick, nor your Zeal for Juſtice perverted by any unmanly Compaſſion.

This impartial Diſpoſition in your Lordſhips calls upon the Proſecutors to obſerve a Conduct worthy of this noble Aſſembly; not to inlarge or aggravate any Part, or advance a Step beyond their Inſtructions; but barely to ſtate the naked Facts, in order that, by that Means, your Lordſhips may be enabled the better to attend to the Witneſſes when they are called, to examine and croſs-examine, and ſift out the Truth with more Accuracy.

* Charles Pratt, Eſq. now Lord Camden.

My Lords, as I never thought it my Duty in any Caſe to attempt at Eloquence, where a Priſoner ſtood upon Trial for his Life; much leſs ſhall I think myſelf juſtified in doing it before your Lordſhips; give me Leave therefore to proceed to a Narration of the Facts.

My Lords, the deceaſed Perſon Mr. Johnſon, I find to have been employed by the Ferrers Family almoſt during the whole Courſe of his Life: He was taken into their Service in his Youth, and continued in it unfortunately to the Time of his Death.

At the Time a Bill was paſſed by your Lordſhips about Two Years ago, to ſeparate Lord Ferrers from his Lady, Mr. Johnſon was appointed Receiver of his Lordſhip's Eſtates. At that Time his Lordſhip ſeems to have entertained a good Opinion of him, becauſe I am told he was appointed Receiver at his Lordſhip's own Nomination; but, very ſoon after he became inveſted with this Truſt, when the Noble Lord found there was no poſſible Method, by any Temptation whatever, to prevail on Mr. Johnſon to break that Truſt, his Lordſhip's Mind grew to be alienated towards him, and his former Friendſhip was converted into Hatred.

The Firſt Inſtance of his Lordſhip's Malice, that will be produced, will be his giving him Notice to quit a beneficial Farm that Mr. Johnſon had obtained a Promiſe of from the Earl, or his Relations, before he was appointed Receiver; but when it appeared that the Truſtees had made good the Promiſe, and had granted him a Leaſe, my Lord was obliged to deſiſt from that Attempt.

When he found it was impoſſible to remove him from the Farm, his Reſentment againſt Mr. Johnſon increaſed, and he took at laſt a determined Reſolution within himſelf to commit the horrid Fact for which he now ſtands arraigned.

My Lords, I find ſeveral Cauſes aſſigned by the Priſoner for this Indignation expreſſed againſt the Deceaſed; he charged him with having colluded ſecretly with his Adverſaries, with being in the Intereſt of thoſe he was pleaſed to call his Enemies, and inſtrumental in procuring the Act of Parliament: Whether theſe Charges were juſtly founded or not, is totally immaterial; ſuch as they were, he had conceived them. His Lordſhip, who beſt knew the Malice of his own Heart, has confeſſed that he harboured theſe Suſpicions.

Another Thing he ſuſpected was, that, in Confederacy with Mr. Burſlem and Mr. Curzon, he agreed to diſappoint his Lordſhip, in regard to a certain Contract for Coal Mines. Theſe Notions, tho' void of Truth, had ſo poiſoned his Lordſhip's Mind, that he was determined at laſt to gratify his Revenge by Murder.

This Determination being once ſettled and fixed in his Mind, your Lordſhips will ſee, with what Art and Deliberation it was purſued: Notwithſtanding theſe ſeeming Cauſes of Diſguſt, he diſſembled all Appearance of Ill-will or Reſentment; his Countenance towards the Deceaſed for ſome Months ſeemed greatly to be changed, and his Behaviour was affable and good-humoured.

The poor Man, deluded with theſe Appearances, was brought to believe he was in no Danger, and that he might ſafely truſt himſelf alone with his Lordſhip.

Matters being thus prepared, on Sunday the 13th of January, the Priſoner made an Appointment for Mr. Johnſon to come to him on the Friday following.

His Lordſhip, though the Appointment was Five or Six Days before, remembered it perfectly; nay, he remembered the very Hour he was to come, and took his Meaſures accordingly; for your Lordſhips will find, that, in order to clear the Houſe, Mrs. Clifford, a Woman who lives with his Lordſhip, and Four Children, were directed by him, at Three o'Clock preciſely, to abſent themſelves; they were ordered to walk out to Mrs. Clifford's Father, about two Miles from my Lord's Houſe, and not to return till Five, or Half an Hour after Five.

The Two Men-Servants likewiſe, the only Servants of that Sex then reſiding with him, were contrived to be ſent out of the Way; ſo that when Mr. Johnſon repaired to Stanton, my Lord's Houſe, at Three o'Clock, there was no Perſon in the Houſe, except his Lordſhip, and Three Maid-Servants.

Mr. Johnſon, when he came to the Houſe, rapt at the Door, and was received by his Lordſhip, and directed to wait ſome Time in the Still Room; then his Lordſhip ordered him into the Parlour, where they both entered together, and the Door was immediately locked on the Inſide.

What paſſed in that Interval, between the Time of Mr. Johnſon's firſt going in, and the Time of his being ſhot, can only be now known to your Lordſhips by the Noble Earl's Confeſſion, which has been very ample indeed upon the preſent Occaſion.

After Mr. Johnſon had been there the beſt Part of an Hour, one of the Maids in the Kitchen, hearing ſome high Words in the Parlour, went to the Door to ſee if ſhe could diſcover what was doing; ſhe liſtened, and heard my Lord, as ſhe was at the Kitchen Door, ſay, Down upon your Knees; Your Time is come; You muſt die; and preſently after heard a Piſtol go off: Upon that, ſhe removed from the Kitchen, and retired to another Part of the Houſe; for ſhe did not care to venture into his Lordſhip's Preſence.

Though it appeared, afterwards, that Mr. Johnſon had then received that Wound of which he died, he did not then immediately drop; he aroſe, and was able to walk.

Juſt then, my Lord Ferrers, as he confeſſed afterwards, felt a few momentary Touches of Compaſſion: He permitted Mr. Johnſon to be led up Stairs to Bed, till better Aſſiſtance could be called; he ſuffered a Surgeon to be ſent for, nay, the very Surgeon that Mr. Johnſon himſelf had deſired; and Mr. Johnſon's Children, by his Lordſhip's Order, were acquainted with the Accident, and ſent for to ſee him.

Mr. Johnſon's Daughter was the firſt Perſon that came; ſhe met the noble Lord, and the firſt Greeting ſhe had from him was, that he had ſhot her Father; and that he had done it on purpoſe, and deliberately. Mrs. Clifford, who had been apprized of this Accident by the Servants, came not long after; and, in an Hour and an Half, or Two Hours, Mr. Kirkland, the Surgeon, who was from Home when the Servant was diſpatched, and at a neighbouring Village, haſtened with the beſt Expedition he could make, to Stanton. When he came to Stanton he met my Lord in the Paſſage.

Here your Lordſhips will obſerve, that the Noble Lord's Conduct and Behaviour, from this Time to the Time that Mr. Johnſon was removed to his own Houſe, ſeemed all along calculated for his Eſcape; and that the only Anxiety he expreſſed was the Dread of being ſeized, and brought to Puniſhment in caſe Mr. Johnſon ſhould die.

Upon Mr. Kirkland's firſt Appearance, my Lord had told him, that he had ſhot Mr. Johnſon, and that he had done it coolly; he deſired he might not be ſeized till it was known with Certainty, whether Mr. Johnſon would die or not; and threatened, that if any Perſon attempted to ſeize him, he would ſhoot them. Mr. Kirkland told him, he would take Care that Nobody ſhould meddle with him.

Mr. Kirkland was then brought up to Mr. Johnſon, who was upon the Bed; the Surgeon examined the Wound, and found that the Ball had penetrated a little below the Ribs on the Left Side; he took an Inſtrument in his Hand, called a Director, in order to probe the Wound: Here my Lord interrupted him, and ſaid, You need not be at that Trouble; paſs your Inſtrument downwards; I, when I ſhot off the Piſtol, directed it that Way; and Mr. Kirkland found this, upon Examination, to be true; the Ball had not paſſed through the Body, but remained lodged in the Cavities of the Abdomen.

When my Lord found that the Ball was in the Body, he grew uneaſy; for he was apprehenſive that the Ball, if, it remained there, might prove fatal: He aſked Mr. Kirkland if it could be extracted; Mr. Kirkland told him, from what he obſerved, it would be impracticable to extract the Ball: but, to give him better Hopes, he told him, that many Perſons had lived a long while after they had been ſhot, though the Ball had remained within them.

Preſently after this, the Surgeon went down Stairs to prepare a Fomentation, and ſoon after returned: When he came back into the Room, Mr. Johnſon complained of the Strangury, and found a conſiderable Difficulty in making Water. This alramed his Lordſhip again: He then aſked Mr. Kirkland, What would be the Conſequence, if the Bladder or Kidneys were hurt? Mr. Kirkland having laid down his Rule of Conduct, wherein his Prudence deſerves to be commended, anſwered, That, though the Bladder ſhould be wounded, or the Kidneys hurt, there had been many Cures performed upon ſuch like Wounds.

This made his Lordſhip tolerably eaſy: He then began to be in better Spirits, which, I am ſorry to ſay, at that Time were ſomewhat heightened with Liquor; for, although he was cool and freſh when he did the Fact, yet the Moment it was done, he began to drink, and continued drinking, at Times, till Twelve o'Clock at Night: This Liquor, however, only contributed to raiſe his Spirits, without diſordering his Underſtanding; for he appeared to be compleat Maſter of himſelf the whole Day.

After Mr. Kirkland had given him ſo much Encouragement, they together went down to the Still Room; and now, his Lordſhip verily believing that Mr. Johnſon would recover, he grew leſs cautious in avowing the Deliberation with which he did the Fact, and declaring all the Circumſtances that attended it.

And here, becauſe I will not wrong the Noble Lord, by adding a ſingle Letter to my Brief, your Lordſhips ſhall hear his Confeſſion, from thence, in his own Words.

'Kirkland, ſays he, I believe Johnſon is more frightened than hurt; 'my Intention was to have ſhot him dead; but, finding that he did not 'fall at the firſt Shot, I intended to have ſhot him again, but the Pain 'he complained of made me forbear; there Nature did take place, in 'Oppoſition to the Reſolution I had formed. I deſire you will take Care 'of him; for it would be cruel not to give him Eaſe, now I have ſpared 'his Life.

'When you ſpeak of this afterwards, do not ſay (though I deſire he 'may be eaſed of his Pain) that I repented of what I have done: I am 'not ſorry for it; it was not done without Conſideration; I own it was 'premeditated; I had, ſome Time before, charged a Piſtol for the Purpoſe, being determined to kill him, for he is a Villian, and deſerves 'Death; but, as he is not dead, I deſire you will not ſuffer my being 'ſeized; for, if he dies, I will go and ſurrender myſelf to the Houſe of 'Lords; I have enough to juſtify the Action; they may not excuſe me, 'but it will ſatisfy my own Conſcience: but be ſure you don't go in the 'Morning without letting me ſee you, that I may know if he is likely to 'recover or not; I will get up at any Time; at Four o'Clock in the 'Morning.

'To this very ſtrange and horrid Declaration Mr. Kirkland anſwered, 'by promiſing his Lordſhip, that he would certainly give him the firſt 'Intelligence touching Mr. Johnſon's Condition; and, as it was proper, 'for very prudent Reaſons, as well with reſpect to himſelf as Mr. Johnſon, to diſſemble with his Lordſhip, he proceeded further, and told 'him, that he would give a favourable Account of this Matter. The 'Noble Lord then aſked him, what he would ſay if he was called upon; 'he told him he would ſay, that though Johnſon was ſhot, that he was 'in a fair Way of Recovery. His Lordſhip aſked Mr. Kirkland, if he 'would make Oath of that? He ſaid, Yes.

'Mr. Kirkland then went to ſee Mr. Johnſon again, and found him 'better; they then went to Supper, and, during the Time they were at 'Supper, his Lordſhip mentioned ſeveral other Particulars: He ſaid, he 'was aſtoniſhed that the Bullet ſhould remain in his Body; for, ſays he, 'I have made a Trial with this Piſtol, and it pierced through a Board 'an Inch and an Half thick; I am aſtoniſhed it did not paſs through his 'Body; I took good Aim, and I held the Piſtol in this Manner; and 'then he ſhewed Mr. Kirkland the Manner of his holding his Piſtol.'

He alſo declared the Grounds, and Motives for his killing Johnſon; that he had been a Villain; that he was in the Intereſt of his Enemies; that he had joined with thoſe who had injured him, and taken away his Eſtate, by an Act of Parliament; that he had colluded with Mr. Curzon and Mr. Burſlem, with reſpect to the Coal Contract.

Another Thing he mentioned with reſpect to the Farm; ſays he, I have long wanted to drive Johnſon out of the Farm; if he recovers, he will go back to Cheſhire, where he came from. Mr. Kirkland ſaid, No doubt but this Accident would drive him Home again.

After they had ſupped, Mrs. Clifford came into the Room, and ſhe propoſed, that Mr. Johnſon ſhould be removed to the Leunt, which is the Name

Name of Mr. Johnson's House, and lies about a Mile from Stanton; his Lordship refused to consent to that, not because he thought Mr. Johnson might be hurt by the Removal, but, to use his own Words, because he would have him under his own Roof, to plague the Villain.

When Supper was over, they returned back to Mr. Johnson, who was then under the greatest Uneasiness; he was restless, and the Complaint of the Strangury increased: Then my Lord was alarmed again; he enquired of the Surgeon what would be the Consequence, in case the Guts were shot through? Mr. Kirkland gave him a favourable Answer that revived his Spirits; he went out of the Room, and invited Mr. Kirkland to take a Bottle of Port; they then drank together, and during that Time, the same, or the like Expressions were repeated. I will not trouble your Lordships with them again; but he all along declared, he did not do it hastily, but coolly and deliberately; that his Intention was to have killed him: And that the Reason why he did it at that Time was, because he would not sign a Paper of Recantation, acknowledging all the Injuries he had done his Lordship.

They then again returned to Mr. Johnson, after they had drank out the Bottle: Whether the Liquor was prevalent or not, I don't know; your Lordships will observe what followed: His Behaviour to the poor Man, though he lay there under the Surgeon's Hands, was totally changed, and his Resentment grew outrageous; my Lord again attacked him upon the same Charge as before, compelled him to acknowledge before all the Company (of which his Daughter was one) that he was a Villain; nay, he was about to drag him out of Bed upon the Floor, which would hardly have been prevented, if Mr. Johnson, who was tutored by a Wink from Mr. Kirkland, had not said, I do confess I am a Villain: My Lord at last went to Bed; but, before he departed, he said, with great Earnestness to Mr. Kirkland, May I rely upon you? Are you sure there is no Danger? May I go to Bed in Safety? Mr. Kirkland said, Yes, your Lordship may. When his Lordship was gone, poor Johnson begged to be removed to his own House. Mr. Kirkland wished it as much; for, besides that he could not have that free Access to his Patient that was necessary, if he was to remain there, he thought himself in the utmost Peril. My Lord had confessed too much, and Kirkland too little; so that if Mr. Johnson had died there, no Man in Mr. Kirkland's Situation would have wished to have been alone with his Lordship, considering the dangerous Conversation that had passed between them.

Mr. Kirkland, therefore, immediately went to the Lount, procured Six or Seven armed Men, and came back by Two o'Clock in the Morning. They removed Mr. Johnson, put him into a great Chair, and wrapped him up in Blankets, and so conveyed him Home. Towards Morning the poor Man's Symptoms grew worse, and Mr. Kirkland then went away. Mr. Johnson lay languishing till Seven or Eight in the Morning, and then died.

In the mean Time Mr. Kirkland had procured a Number of armed Men to go down to Stanton, and to seize his Lordship. When they came there, my Lord was just out of Bed; he had his Garters in his Hand, and was seen passing towards the Stable. The Horses were all saddled, and every Thing got in Readiness for his Escape.

Mr. Springthorpe advanced towards him; and when his Lordship found he was really to be attacked, he fled back to his House, and there stood a Siege of Four or Five Hours. While he was thus beset, he appeared at the Garret Windows, and, thinking himself secure in that Place, he began to parley, and asked, What they wanted with him? They told him, Mr. Johnson was dead, and that they were come to secure him. He said, he knew that was false; for Mr. Johnson was not dead: That he wished it might be true: That he would not believe it, unless Mr. Kirkland would declare it: That he would pay no Regard to any body else. He did not think fit to surrender; but continued in the House, till he thought he had an Opportunity of escaping through the Garden. He was there discovered by one Cutler, a Collier, who was a bold Man, and determined to take him: He marched up to him; and though his Lordship was armed with a Blunderbuss, Two or Three Pistols, and a Dagger, he submitted to the Collier's taking him, without making the least Resistance: And the Moment he was in Custody, he declared he gloried in the Fact; and again declared, that he intended to kill Johnson. He was then carried to Mr. Kinsey's House, and remained there till after the Coroner sat upon the Body.

I must mention to your Lordships, that upon Mr. Hall, a Clergyman's being introduced to him, he told him, he knew his Duty as well as he or any other Clergyman: That the Fact he had committed was coolly and deliberately done. So that your Lordships see his Declarations were consistent and uniform, from the Beginning to the End.

I shall neither aggravate nor observe.

These are the Circumstances which attended this horrid Murder. I have opened them faithfully from my Instructions. The Case is rather stronger than I have made it.

The Witnesses are to acquaint your Lordships, whether I have opened the Case truly. If the Evidence comes out as I have represented it to your Lordships, then your Lordships Sentence must be agreeable to Law. The noble Earl at the Bar must be found Guilty.

If he has any Defence, God forbid that he should not have a fair Opportunity of making it. Let him be heard with Patience. The Prosecutors will be as glad as your Lordships to find him innocent.

The Evidence is to determine; and upon that Evidence we shall leave it.

Mr. Sollicitor General, The Hon. Charles Yorke, Esq; MY Lords, we will now proceed to call our Witnesses. Call Elizabeth Burgeland.

[Who came to the Bar, and one of the Clerks held the Book to her, upon which she laid her Hand.]

Clerk of the Crown. Hearken to your Oath.

The Evidence that you shall give on Behalf of our Sovereign Lord the King's Majesty, against Lawrence Earl Ferrers, the Prisoner at the Bar, shall be the Truth, the whole Truth, and nothing but the Truth. So help you GOD.

Then she kissed the Book.

Mr. Sollicitor General. My Lords, This Witness was in the House at the Time when the Fact is charged to have been committed.

Lord High Steward. If your Lordships please, the Clerk may go down to the Bar, and repeat to your Lordships what is said by Lord Ferrers or the Witnesses.——Lords. Ay, Ay.

Earl Ferrers. My Lords, There was something said by the Gentleman, Counsel for the Crown, that is a little false, relating to a Lease said to be given by Sir William Meredith to Mr. Johnson; I did not know of that Lease previous to this Fact; there were other Matters mentioned that are not right; I will not take up your Lordships Time to answer them now, but leave that Matter till I come to my Defence.

Mr. Sol. Gen. My Lords, Whatever his Lordship thinks material in his Defence, he will have many Opportunities to offer.

Mr. Sol. Gen. You was a Maid-Servant in Lord Ferrers's House the 11th of January last?——Burgeland. Yes.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you know one Mr. Johnson?——Burge. Yes.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you know any Thing of Mr. Johnson's being employed by Lord Ferrers? Did he use to attend him?

Burge. He sometimes attended my Lord Ferrers.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you know any Thing of his being expected to wait on Lord Ferrers at any Time in January last?——Burge. Yes.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What do you know of it?

Burge. I know he came to the House.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you know what Day in January?

Burge. I don't know what Day.

Mr. Sol. Gen. About what Time of the Day was it?

Burge. About Three o'Clock in the Afternoon.

Mr. Sol. Gen. On what Day of the Week was it?

Burge. On Friday.

Mr. Sol. Gen. When Mr. Johnson came, who let him in?

Burge. I let him in.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What did he say?

Burge. He asked whether his Lordship was within; I told him he was in his Room.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What happened after that? Did my Lord expect him?

Burge. I believe he did.

Mr. Sol. Gen. When he was let in, did you go with him?

Burge. No; he walked up to the Room Door, and knocked at it himself.

Mr. Sol. Gen. At the Door of the Room where Lord Ferrers was sitting?——Burge. Yes.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did he go in then?

Burge. No; he did not go in then.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did Lord Ferrers speak to him?

Burge. Yes; and told him to walk into the other Room.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you know any Thing of what passed between them?

Burge. I cannot say any Thing about it.

Mr. Sol. Gen. You said Lord Ferrers expected Mr. Johnson, how do you know he expected him?

Burge. Mrs. Clifford told me in the Morning, that Mr. Johnson was to come to his Lordship that Day.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you hear, or do you know, any Thing of what passed between Lord Ferrers and Mr. Johnson, when Mr. Johnson went into my Lord's Room?——Burge. No.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Was the Door locked or open, after he went into the Room?——Burge. Locked.

Mr. Sol. Gen. How came you to observe that?

Burge. I heard it locked.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Where did you go after Mr. Johnson was in the Room with Lord Ferrers?——Burge. Into the Kitchen.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Who was with you there?

Burge. The other Maid-Servant.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What was her Name?

Burge. Elizabeth Saxon---There was another Maid-Servant in the Kitchen when he went in.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Who was she?——Burge. Elizabeth Dolman.

Mr Sol. Gen. After that, did you hear any Thing?

Burge. I did not hear any Thing myself.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you afterwards hear any Thing of what happened?---Do you know whether Mr. Johnson came out of the Room?

Burge. I cannot tell any Thing of it.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you go into the Room?

Burge. I did not go into the Room; I was not out of the Kitchen.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you hear any Noise?

Burge. No; I heard no Noise at all.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you hear any Pistol go off, or any Noise?

Burge. I heard a Pistol go off.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What did you do then?

Burge. When I heard the Pistol go, I run into the Yard, and the other Maid-Servant with me.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What happened afterwards?

Burge. We staid in the Yard a while, a few Minutes, and came back to the Wash-House.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Was the Room Door open after you heard that Noise?

Burge. I did not stay till it was open.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you stay till Lord Ferrers came?

Burge. My Lord came when we were in the Wash-House, and called.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What did he say?

Burge. He hooped and hallooed, Where are you all?

Mr. Sol. Gen. What did he say then?

Burge. I went out, and said, We are here, my Lord; he asked me, Where we had been? I said, in the Bleaching-Yard.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did he give you any Order?

Burge. He ordered that we should walk down to the House.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did he give any other Order?

Burge. He sent up a Maid-Servant into the Yard to fetch the Man in.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did he say any Thing of Mr. Johnson?

Burge. Not till I got into the Room.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What did he say then?

Burge. He went up to Mr. Johnson, and asked how he did?

Mr.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What did Mr. Johnson say?

Burgeland. That he was a dying Man, and desired he would send for his Children.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did any Thing else pass?

Burge. That is all I know.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Who else was in the House besides the Servants you have named and yourself?

Burge. There was Nobody in the House but us Three when Mr. Johnson came; and but Two in the Kitchen when it was done.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What other Servants did my Lord use to keep?

Burge. One Man-Servant, an old Man; I don't know whether he was a Servant.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did any other Person live with him?

Burge. Mrs. Clifford, and the four young Ladies.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Were they all out at the Time when this happened?

Burge. Yes; they were all out but the Two Maids.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Were they out by Accident, or by Order?

Burge. I do not know any Thing of any Order.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you give Mr. Johnson any Assistance to carry him up to his Room?

Burge. Yes; I took him up to Bed by the Arm, by his Lordship's Order.

Earl Ferrers. Was not the Door locked before Mr. Johnson came?

Burge. Yes.

E. Fer. Has it been locked before?

Burge. It has several Times, when my Lord has been upon Business.

E. Fer. Was not Mr. Johnson at my House on the Monday?

Burge. Yes, he was there on the Monday.

E. Fer. Did you hear any Dispute or Words between Mr. Johnson and me on the Monday?

Burge. No, I did not hear any at all.

E. Fer. Had not I packed up my Trunks, intending to go to London the Week following?——Burge. Yes.

E. Ferrers. On the Monday while he was there, and sent to the Carriages?——Burge. Yes.

Mr. Gould. Our next Witness is Elizabeth Saxon.

(Who was sworn in like manner).

Mr. Gould. Did you live with Lord Ferrers in January last?

Saxon. Yes.

Mr. Gould. Did you know John Johnson?---Sax. Yes.

Mr. Gould. Do you remember Mr. Johnson's coming to Lord Ferrers in January?---Sax. Yes.

Mr. Gould. Upon what Day?---Sax. The Eighteenth.

Mr. Gould. What Day of the Week was it?---Sax. On Friday.

Mr. Gould. Who was in the House when he came?

Sax. Nobody, only Three Maids and my Lord.

Mr. Gould. What Time of the Day did he come?

Sax. About Three o'Clock.

Mr. Gould. What was become of the rest of my Lord's Family?

Sax. I don't know: Mrs. Clifford and the Misses were gone out.

Mr. Gould. How long were they gone out before Mr. Johnson came?

Sax. About Half an Hour.

Mr. Gould. Do you know the Reason of their going away?

Sax. No; my Lord came into the Still-House, and said, they might go and fetch a Walk.

Mr. Gould. How long was it before they did go upon the Walk?

Sax. They went directly.

Mr. Gould. What Time of Day did my Lord give this Leave?

Sax. It was about Three o'Clock.

Mr. Gould. Was any thing mentioned where they were to go?

Sax. Mrs. Clifford asked him, whether they might go to her Father's? And my Lord said, Yes.

Mr. Gould. Was any thing mentioned how long they might stay?

Sax. He said, they might stay till Five, or Half an Hour after.

Mr. Gould. What Men-Servants belonged to the House?

Sax. There is but One Boy and an old Man.

Mr. Gould. Where were they?——Sax. I cannot tell.

Mr. Gould. Were they in the House?——Sax. No.

Mr. Gould. When Mr. Johnson came in, in what Room was my Lord Ferrers?——Sax. In his own Room.

Mr. Gould. Where did Mr. Johnson go when he came into the House?

Sax. He went up to my Lord's Room.

Mr. Gould. Did my Lord appear?—Sax. My Lord came to the Door.

Mr. Gould. Did you hear any thing said by my Lord to Mr. Johnson?

Sax. No.

Mr. Gould. Where did Mr. Johnson go when my Lord came out?

Sax. My Lord came out, and ordered him to go into the Still-house.

Mr. Gould. What became of my Lord then?

Sax. He went into his Room.

Mr. Gould. How long did he stay there before he came out again?

Sax. I don't know: May-be a few Minutes; Not long; Ten Minutes, or such a Matter.

Mr. Gould. When he came out, did he speak to Mr. Johnson?

Sax. I don't know that he did: I did not hear him.

Mr. Gould. Did you see Mr. Johnson when my Lord came out a second Time?——Sax. No.

Mr. Gould. What became of Mr. Johnson? Did he go into any Room with my Lord Ferrers?——Sax. I know he went into my Lord's Room.

Mr. Gould. Was the Door locked or not?

Sax. He locked to the Door after Mr. Johnson was in.

Mr. Gould. Did you hear the Door locked?

Sax. Yes, I heard it locked.

Mr. Gould. What did you hear pass in that Room?

Sax. Nothing at all; I did not hear any Thing.

Mr. Gould. Did you hear any Expression, any Words used by my Lord to Mr. Johnson?——Sax. No.

Mr Gould. Did you hear any Noise?

Sax. Yes; I heard them very loud; I heard my Lord say, Down on your other Knee, and declare what you have acted against Lord Ferrers; and then the Pistol went off; and I and the other Maid were frightened, and run away.

Mr. Gould. Did you hear my Lord, or Mr. Johnson, say any Thing more in the Room, than what you have mentioned?——Sax. No.

Earl Ferrers. Was it not customary for Mrs. Clifford to speak to me before she went out?

Saxon. She said, My Lord, where must we go to?

Earl Ferrers. Was it customary to speak to me?—Sax. Yes.

Earl Ferrers. How came you to be at my Door at that Time?

Saxon. I was not at my Lord's Door.

Lord Mansfield. Who was the other Maid that was with you when you over-heard what passed in my Lord's Room?

Sax. The other Witness that was here?

Lord Mansfield. Had that other Servant the same Opportunity to hear as you had? Was she as near the Door, listening in the same Way you was?

Sax. No, she was not.

Earl Ferrers. Do you know what Time Mrs. Clifford was to return?

Sax. About Five o'Clock, or Half an Hour after Five.

Earl Ferrers. Did not Mrs. Clifford very often go out about that Time after Dinner, about Three or Four o'Clock?—Sax. Yes.

Earl of Morton. You said in the First Part of your Evidence, that you heard my Lord say to Mr. Johnson, Down on your other Knee. My Lord Ferrers asked you, how you came to be near the Door. You said, that you was not. Where did you hear it?

Sax. I was at the Kitchen Door: I was no nearer than the Kitchen.

Earl of Morton. You say, that Lord Ferrers locked his Door?

Sax. Yes.

Earl of Morton. Was it customary for him to lock it when People were with him, or when he was alone?——Sax. I don't know.

Earl of Morton. Did you ever know Lord Ferrers lock his Door when Mr. Johnson was with him?—Sax. No.

Earl Ferrers. Did you never know that I locked the Door when I had Company with me?

Sax. No; I don't know that his Lordship did it ever since I came.

Earl of Hardwicke. You have said, that Lord Ferrers told Mr. Johnson to kneel on the other Knee; and that you heard it, though you was no nearer than the Kitchen Door: What Distance was there between the Kitchen Door and the Door of the Room where Lord Ferrers was?

Sax. Not a great Way.

Earl of Hardwicke. What Distance was it?

Sax. It might be Ten or a Dozen Yards, may-be.

Earl Ferrers. Was there not a thick Wall between that Room and the Kitchen, and a Chimney?——Sax. Yes.

Elizabeth Dolman sworn in like Manner.

Mr. Norton. Was you Servant to Lord Ferrers in January last?

Dolman. Yes.

Mr. Norton. Did you know Mr. Johnson the Deceased?---Dolman. Yes.

Mr. Norton. Do you remember his coming there in January last?

Dolman. Yes.

Mr. Norton. What Day of the Month was it?

Dolman. The Eighteenth.

Mr. Norton. What Time of the Day?—Dolman. About Three o'Clock.

Mr. Norton. Who was in the House of Lord Ferrers at that Time?

Dolman. Three Maids.

Mr. Norton. Nobody else?——Dolman. No.

Mr. Norton. Was not his Lordship there?——Dolman. Yes.

Mr. Norton. Do you know where the rest of the Family was at that Time?

Dolman. I know nothing of that: I believe Mrs. Clifford and the Children were gone out.

Mr. Norton. Do you know whether Mr. Johnson was expected at Lord Ferrers's that Day?——Dolman. I don't know.

Mr. Norton. Was you in the House when Mr. Johnson came in?

Dolman. I was in the Kitchen.

Mr. Norton. Who let him in?——Dolman. Elizabeth Burgeland.

Mr. Norton. Who did he ask for?——Dolman. Lord Ferrers.

Mr. Norton. Did you or Elizabeth Burgeland shew him to Lord Ferrers?

Dolman. Elizabeth Burgeland.

Mr. Norton. You was there?——Dolman. I was in the Kitchen.

Mr. Norton. Did you hear any thing that passed between Lord Ferrers and Mr. Johnson?——Dolman. No.

Mr. Norton. Did you hear a Pistol go off?——Dolman. Yes.

Mr. Norton. At that Time where were Lord Ferrers and Mr. Johnson?

Dolman. In my Lord's Room.

Mr. Norton. How long had Mr. Johnson been in my Lord's Room before you heard the Report of the Pistol?

Dolman. May-be about half an Hour.

Mr. Norton. Was you there when Mr. Johnson went into the Room?

Dolman. I was in the Kitchen.

Mr. Norton. Did you hear the Door locked?——Dolman. Yes.

Mr. Norton. How did you hear it? Was there a Spring, or was the Key turned?——Dolman. It was turned with the Key.

Mr. Norton. Did you hear the Key turned, and the Door locked?

Dolman. Yes.

Mr. Norton. How soon did you see Mr. Johnson after the Pistol went off?

Dolman. I did not see Mr. Johnson till after he was laid upon the Bed.

Mr. Norton. Did you see Lord Ferrers after Mr. Johnson was laid upon the Bed?——Dolman. Yes.

Mr. Norton. Did you hear any Conversation between my Lord and Mr. Johnson at the Time Mr. Johnson was upon the Bed?

Dolman. Lord Ferrers ordered me to go up and see what Mr. Johnson would have done.

Mr. Norton. Then his Lordship was not in the Room at that Time?

Dolman. Not then; he came in after.

Mr. Norton. What passed then? What did you hear between them?

Dolman. I went up Stairs, and asked Mr. Johnson how he did. He said, he was very poorly.

Mr. Norton. Was Lord Ferrers there then?——Dolman. No.

Mr. Norton. How soon did he come in?

Dolman. He did not come in till after I had fetched a Bed out of the Garret, and laid it on the Bedstead.

Mr. Norton. Did you hear his Lordship say any Thing to Mr. Johnson?

Dolman. Yes; his Lordship told him, that he would shoot him through the Head.

Mr. Norton. Did Mr. Johnson make any Reply to that?

Dolman. He said, No Matter how soon, my Lord.

Mr. Norton. What Time of the Night was this?

Dolman. It might be between Four and Five o'Clock.

Earl Ferrers. Did not I send you for the Bed, and order it to be well aired?——Dolman. Yes.

Lord Ravensworth. How long did you live with my Lord Ferrers before this supposed Accident?

Dolman. It might be Two Months.

Lord Ravens. Did Mr. Johnson ever, during the Time you lived with my Lord Ferrers before the 18th of January, to your Knowledge, come to Lord Ferrers?

Dolman. Yes; I have seen him there.

Lord Ravens. I should be glad to know, whether from your own Knowledge, or from any Conversation with others, you had any Reason to suspect or believe that Lord Ferrers bore Mr. Johnson any Ill-will; or did his Lordship ever make any Complaint, to your Knowledge, in regard to Mr. Johnson?

Dolman. No; I never had.

Lord Ravens. At what Time did Mr. Johnson come to Lord Ferrers?

Dolman. About Three o'Clock.

Lord Ravens. When Lord Ferrers and Mr. Johnson went into the Room, did Lord Ferrers appear to be in Liquor?

Dolman. No, not at all.

Lord Ravens. When you was in the Room, and Mr. Johnson said he was but poorly, did you imagine he was shot?—Dolman. No.

Lord Ravens. Did Lord Ferrers take Mr. Johnson by the Wig, before he said he would shoot him through the Head?—Dolman. Yes.

Lord Ravens. Did you hear the Pistol go off; and where?

Dolman. I was in the Yard; and I heard the Pistol go off.

Lord Mansfield. Did you hear any Part of the Conversation between Lord Ferrers and the Deceased before the Pistol went off?

Dolman. I did not.

Lord Mansfield. Was you near enough to have heard it, if any such Conversation had passed?—Dolman. I was not.

Lord Mansfield. Had Elizabeth Saxon, from the Place where she was, a better Opportunity of hearing what passed?—Dolman. I cannot say.

Lord Mansfield. Where was you at that Time?

Dolman. I was in the Yard.

Lord Mansfield. Where was Elizabeth Saxon?

Dolman. She was in the Kitchen, I believe.

Lord Mansfield. What was the Distance between the Kitchen Door and the Room where Lord Ferrers and the Deceased were?

Dolman. I cannot justly tell.

Lord Mansfield. Might a Person that was at the Kitchen Door hear any Conversation or Words which passed between Two People in that Room?—Dolman. Yes.

Lord Mansfield. Was it as far off as to that Bench?—Dolman. Yes.

Earl Ferrers. Did you ever hear any Conversation that passed in my Room, at any Time when I had Company and you was in the Kitchen?

Dolman. I have heard Talking.

Earl Ferrers. Could you distinguish what was said?

Dolman. I never took Notice.

A Lord. Was you at the Kitchen Door when my Lord Ferrers and Mr. Johnson were in his Room?—Dolman. I was in the Kitchen.

A Lord. Did you hear Lord Ferrers tell Mr. Johnson to kneel on the other Knee?—Dolman. No; I heard no such Thing.

A Lord. Was you with the other Witness at the Time she says she heard these Words?—Dolman. I was not.

Lord Mansfield. I desire to know of this Witness, whether at the Time that the Pistol went off, she was not in the Yard; and the Maid, that heard the Conversation, at the Kitchen Door?

Dolman. I was in the Yard then.

Lord Mansfield. Where was you when you heard the Key lock the Door?—Dolman. I was in the Kitchen.

Lord Ravensworth. You say you was in the Room when Lord Ferrers went up to Mr. Johnson, and he pulled Mr. Johnson by the Wig, and said, he would shoot him; how long was that from the Time that you heard the Pistol go off?—Dolman. I cannot justly say.

Lord Ravens. What Space of Time was there, from the Time that you saw Mr. Johnson in the Room, to the Time that Lord Ferrers came and pulled him by the Wig, and said, he would shoot him through the Head?

Dolman. I cannot say, he had lain upon the Bed some Time.

Sarah Johnson sworn.

Mr. Perrott. You are the Daughter of John Johnson, to whom this Accident happened?—Johnson. Yes.

Mr. Per. Was your Father concerned in Lord Ferrers's Estate?

Johnson. Not that I know of.

Mr. Per. Was he his Steward?

Johnson. He did live with him, but not within these Two Years.

Mr. Per. Did he receive any Rents?

Johnson. For Nobody but Lord Ferrers.

Mr. Per. Did he rent any Farm that was Part of the Estate of Lord Ferrers?—Johnson. Not that I know of.

Mr. Per. Do you remember his going to Lord Ferrers, at any Time in January last?—Johnson. On the 18th of January.

Mr. Per. Do you know whether Lord Ferrers had been with your Father any short Time before that 18th of January?

Johnson. Lord Ferrers was at our House on the Sunday before.

Mr. Per. Did you hear any Conversation that passed between Lord Ferrers and your Father, on that Sunday?

Johnson. I did not; I came home before he was gone.

Mr. Per. Did you hear Lord Ferrers say any Thing to Mr. Johnson?

Johnson. No; I was not in the Room.

Mr. Per. Did not you know before the 18th of January, that your Father was to go on that Day to Lord Ferrers's?

Johnson. I heard my Father say, that he was to go to Lord Ferrers's on the Friday.

Mr. Per. Do you know upon what Occasion he was to go?

Johnson. No.

Mr. Per. Upon whose Appointment?—Johnson. No.

Mr. Per. Was you sent for to Lord Ferrers's on the 18th of January?

Johnson. Yes.

Mr. Per. At what Time?

Johnson. I think it was between Four and Five o'Clock.

Mr. Per. Who sent for you?—Johnson. I believe it was Lord Ferrers.

Mr. Per. Who was it that came for you?

Johnson. A Man that was at Work there.

Mr. Per. What Message was brought to you?

Johnson. That I must come down to the Hall to Lord Ferrers.

Mr. Per. Then was any Thing said about your Father?

Johnson. I asked, what he wanted me for? and he said, my Father was taken very ill.

Mr. Per. When you got there, did you see my Lord Ferrers?

Johnson. Yes.

Mr. Per. What did he say to you?

Johnson. I cannot say: I asked him how my Father was; he ordered one of the Maids to go up Stairs, and shew me where my Father was.

Mr. Per. Was Lord Ferrers in the Room when you was with your Father?—Johnson. He followed me up directly.

Mr. Per. In what Condition did you find your Father?

Johnson. He was in Bed; but he did not say any Thing to me.

Mr. Per. Did Lord Ferrers say any Thing?

Johnson. When Lord Ferrers came up, he said, he thought he had not shot him.

Mr. Per. Was any Thing done upon that?

Johnson. Some Time after that, Lord Ferrers came up again; and I, or he, turned the Cloaths down; and he said, he saw he had shot him; and throwed something out of a Bottle; I don't know what it was; he poured something upon it out of a Bottle.

Mr. Per. Who poured that out of the Bottle?—Johnson. Lord Ferrers.

Mr. Per. Did he tell you how the Accident happened?

Johnson. He did not then say any Thing about that.

Mr. Per. Did he at any Time?

Johnson. He said, he did not know what he had done; he had shot him; he said, it was what he designed.

Mr. Per. Was that the same Day or afterwards?

Johnson. The same Day.

Mr. Per. Did Lord Ferrers say any Thing about your Father's Family?

Johnson. He said he would take Care of his Family, if my Father died.

Mr. Per. Was that all; was there no If?

Johnson. He said he was in hopes I would not let any body come to take him; that he would take Care of the Family; that he would not go out of the House till my Father was buried, if he should die.

Mr. Per. Do you know of any Thing more that passed between Lord Ferrers and you about your Father?

Johnson. My Lord, when Mr. Kirkland was searching the Wound, shewed him which Way he held the Pistol when he let it off.

Mr. Per. Did Lord Ferrers say at that Time it was an Accident?

Johnson. No; he said he designed it.

Mr. Per. Did he give any Reason for it?

Johnson. I did not hear him give any Reason for it.

Mr. Per. Do you know whether your Father was ever served with any Notice to quit a Farm?---Johnson. Yes.

Mr. Per. What Farm was that?——Johnson. The Farm he lived in.

Mr. Per. Whose Estate was it?—Johnson. Lord Ferrers's.

Mr. Per. Who gave him that Notice?

Johnson. Either Lord Ferrers or Mr. Clifford; Mr. Clifford gave it me; they were both together.

Paper produced.

Mr. Per. Is that the Paper?—Johnson. Yes.

Paper read.

"I DO hereby give you Notice to quit your Farm at Lady-Day next ensuing, or Six Months after the Date hereof, November the 7th, 1758, agreeable to your Lease granted to me,

"Richard Clifford."

Mr. Per. Was Lord Ferrers by when that was given to you?

Johnson. Yes.

Mr. Per. Did you hear any Thing said about that Farm?

Johnson. No.

Mr. Per. (Shewing her the Body of the Paper) Whose Hand-writing is that?—Johnson. This is Lord Ferrers's, I believe.

Mr. Per. Did you ever see Lord Ferrers write?—Johnson. No.

Mr. Per. When you was up in the Room with Mr. Johnson, do you remember any body attempting to pull the Cloaths off?

Johnson. Lord Ferrers attempted to pull them off.

Mr. Per. What Time was that?

Johnson. I cannot say; about Ten or Eleven o'Clock.

Mr. Per. Do you know of any Occasion that was given for my Lord's attempting to pull the Cloaths off your Father?

Johnson. I cannot say what was the Reason of it.

Mr. Per. What had passed before that?

Johnſon. I cannot tell: Lord Ferrers ſeemed to be very angry before; but I cannot tell what about.

Mr. Perrott. Did my Lord Ferrers pull off the Cloaths?

Johnſon. He did not pull them off.

Mr. Per. How did that happen?—Johnſon. I catched hold of them.

Mr. Per. Do you remember any Thing that Lord Ferrers ſaid at the Time that he attempted to pull off the Cloaths?

Johnſon. He ſaid, he knew him to be a Villain, and that he had acted Things againſt him, that were not right.

Mr. Per. Did your Father ſay any Thing to you about Lord Ferrers's having ſhot him?

Johnſon. I don't remember he did.

Mr. Per. Did not your Father tell you, that Lord Ferrers had ſhot him; and that he believed he ſhould die?

Johnſon. I heard him ſay he believed he ſhould die; but I did not hear him ſay, that Lord Ferrers had ſhot him. I do not remember it. My Lord ſaid, he knew the Piſtol to be a good one, he had ſhot through a Board with it.

Mr. Per. Was any body by when Lord Ferrers ſaid that he had ſhot him, and that it was what he deſigned?—Johnſon. Mr. Kirkland was by.

Earl Ferrers. Do you think that I was ſober when I came into the Room where your Father was?

Johnſon. At the Time I came in, I think his Lordſhip was.

Mr. Per. At the Time of this Confeſſion?

Johnſon. I cannot tell: I think he was not quite ſober when he ſaid that.

Lord Talbot. I believe the Confuſion of this unhappy Witneſs has occaſioned an apparent, though not an intentional, Variation in her Evidence; therefore I deſire ſhe may be aſked again about the Farm.

Mr. Per. Did you know of your Father's renting a Farm of Lord Ferrers?—Johnſon. He rented no Farm but what he had of Lord Ferrers.

Mr. Per. And did he rent one of him?—Johnſon. Yes.

Mr. Per. You was aſked at firſt about the Leaſe; he might have the Farm, and not the Leaſe.

Johnſon. He had a Leaſe; but I believe he had it but the laſt Year.

Lord Ravenſworth. I agree with the Noble Lord, that there is a particular Tenderneſs in the Situation of this Witneſs; but imagine your Lordſhips are deſirous of knowing as many Particulars as may be relating to this unhappy Affair; therefore I deſire this Witneſs may be aſked, whether ſhe, at any Time near the Time of the Deceaſe of her Father, did hear her Father expreſs any Degree of Uneaſineſs, or Apprehenſion, from his being to wait upon Lord Ferrers?

Johnſon. No, I never heard him ſay, that he was afraid of going to Lord Ferrers's.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lords, we will now call Mr. Curzon to prove the Body of the Notice that has been read, to be all of Lord Ferrers's Handwriting.

Earl Ferrers. I do not deny it. I hope the Witneſſes may be detained by your Lordſhips, in caſe I ſhould think proper to call them again.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, we will take Care that they ſhall be forthcoming.

Thomas Kirkland ſworn.

Mr. Att. Gen. What is your Profeſſion, or Occupation?

Kirkland. A Surgeon.

Mr. Att. Gen. Where do you chiefly practiſe?

Kirk. At Aſhby de la Zouch.

Mr. Att. Gen. How far is that from Lord Ferrers's Houſe at Stanton?

Kirk. Two computed Miles.

Mr. Att. Gen. Do you know the Noble Earl at the Bar?—Kirk. Yes.

Mr. Att. Gen. How long have you known him?

Kirk. I have known him many Years. I have been employed for his Lordſhip about Nine Years.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did you know Mr. Johnſon the deceaſed?

Kirk. Yes

Mr. Att. Gen. How long did you know him?

Kirk. I have known him a great many Years. I have been intimately acquainted with him Ten or Eleven.

Mr. Att. Gen. Had he any Employ under my Lord Ferrers, or any Part of his Family?—Kirk. I believe ſo.

Mr. Att. Gen. What was his Employ?—Kirk. Steward.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did you, in the Month of January laſt, ſee Mr. Johnſon or my Lord Ferrers?—Kirk. I ſaw them together.

Mr. Att. Gen. At what Time in that Month in particular?

Kirk. The Eighteenth of January.

Mr. Att. Gen. What Day of the Week?—Kirk. On Friday.

Mr. Att. Gen. Upon what Occaſion did you ſee the one or the other?

Kirk. I ſaw Mr. Johnſon to take Care of a Wound he had received in his Left Side.

Mr. Att. Gen. Who ſent for you?

Kirk. They told me that Lord Ferrers had ſent for me.

Mr. Att. Gen. Who was ſent for you? What was his Name?

Kirk. I have ſince found that his Name is Henry Wales.

Mr. Att. Gen. At what Time did you receive that Meſſage?

Kirk. About Five o'Clock in the Afternoon.

Mr. Att. Gen. Where was you at that Time?

Kirk. At Caleorton.

Mr. Att. Gen. How far is that from Stanton?

Kirk. A Mile and a Half, or a Mile.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did you go directly to Stanton?

Kirk. I went firſt to the Lount.

Mr. Att. Gen. What Place was that?

Kirk. The Place where Mr. Johnſon lived.

Mr. Att. Gen. How far is that from Stanton?

Kirk. I think Half a Mile, or it may be a little more.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did you hear any Thing there?

Kirk. I firſt heard at the Lount, that Mr. Johnſon was ſhot; the Boy that came for me, told me that he was ſent to me from my Lord.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did you, when you came to the Lount, and had had this Intelligence, proceed to Stanton?——Kirk. Yes.

Mr. Att. Gen. When you came there, who did you ſee?

Kirk. I met one of the Servant Girls in the Cloſe next to the Yard.

Mr. Att. Gen. What was the Girl's Name?

Kirk. I cannot tell; it was dark.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did any thing paſs there?

Kirk. She ſaid my Lord had been charging Guns and Piſtols.

Mr. Att. Gen. What happened next?

Kirk. I heard my Lord calling out in the Yard, Who is there? I immediately ſpoke to his Lordſhip; he ordered me to come along. I went to him; he told me, he had ſhot Johnſon, and deſired I would go and take Care of him. As we went along, his Lordſhip deſired I would not ſuffer him to be ſeized, becauſe Johnſon was not dead; and if any body offered to ſeize him, he would ſhoot them.

Mr. Att. Gen. What Anſwer did you make to that?

Kirk. I told his Lordſhip, that Nobody ſhould meddle with him. I then went up Stairs; and upon ſeeing Mr. Johnſon, and that he had loſt no Blood, I bled him.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did Mr. Johnſon make any Complaint?

Kirk. He complained of a violent Pain in his Bowels.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did he at that Time ſay that he had received any Wound, and where was it?——Kirk. I looked, and found the Wound below the loweſt Rib, on his left Side.

Mr. Att. Gen. How large was that Wound?

Kirk. I put my little Finger into it. I then took a Director to ſearch the Wound. My Lord told me, Mr. Kirkland, you muſt paſs your Inſtrument ſlaunting downwards, I held the Piſtol in this Manner when I ſhot him. After that my Lord aſked me, whether I could find the Ball? I ſaid no, it was lodged in the Abdomen; and after this he again aſked me, if I could not extract it? I told his Lordſhip, I believed it would be better to remain where it was (indeed I looked upon it impracticable to extract it). My Lord aſked me then, what would be the Conſequence of the Ball's lying in the Abdomen? I told him, that Balls often lay there many Years, without giving any Diſturbance: With this my Lord ſeemed ſatisfied, and ſaid, he knew they would.

Mr. Att. Gen. Was there any Surprize expreſſed by any body at the Ball's being lodged, or any Thing ſaid?

Kirk. I cannot ſay there was.

Mr. Att. Gen. Was any Thing ſaid concerning the Goodneſs of the Piſtol?——Kirk. My Lord aſked me, if the Ball had not gone through? I told him no. He ſaid, he wondered it had not; for this Piſtol had carried a Ball through a Board, and broke the Bricks, or Wall, I don't know which.

Mr. Att. Gen. Was Mr. Johnſon by, and did he hear what paſſed?

Kirk. Yes, he did.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did this provoke him to utter any Thing?

Kirk. He did. My Lord went out of the Room at that Time, and Mr. Johnſon ſaid, What a Villain this is!

Mr. Att. Gen. Did you order any Thing to be prepared for the Dreſſing of the Wound?

Kirk. I dreſſed the Wound; it had already been dreſſed. There was a Dreſſing upon it. I ordered a Fomentation, and what other Things I thought proper. I then went down Stairs. My Lord told me, he thought Johnſon was more frighted than hurt.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did you both go down Stairs?

Kirk. No, we did not.

Mr. Att. Gen. You ſaid it had been dreſſed before, what was that Dreſſing?

Kirk. I believe, though I am not certain, it was Arquebuſade.

Mr. Att. Gen. Was there any Plaiſter found upon it?

Kirk. To the beſt of my Remembrance there was not.

Mr. Att. Gen. Was there a Rag upon it?

Kirk. I believe there was; a Rag that had been dipt in Arquebuſade. After my Lord's telling me, that Johnſon was more frighted than hurt, he ſaid, he intended to have ſhot him dead, and that, ſeeing he did not fall at firſt, he intended to ſhoot him again; but the Pain he complained of made him forbear. Says he, There Nature did take Place, in Oppoſition to the Reſolution I had formed. And ſays he, It is cruel not to give him Eaſe, now I have ſpared his Life; therefore I deſire you would do all you can for him. One Thing I omitted to mention, while I was up Stairs. My Lord deſired I would take all the Care imaginable of Mr. Johnſon; that he would ſend one of his Servants for any Thing I wanted. —I forgot to relate to your Lordſhips, that my Lord was in Liquor when I ſaw him. He deſired, when I ſpoke of this Affair, that I would not ſay, though he deſired me to eaſe him of his Pain, that he repented of what he had done. He was not ſorry for it; for he owned it was premeditated; that he intended to ſhoot him, for he ſaid he was a Villain, and deſerved Death. But, ſays he, as he is not dead, I deſire you will not ſuffer my being ſeized; for, if he dies, I will go and ſurrender myſelf to the Houſe of Lords: I have enough to juſtify the Action: Perhaps they may not excuſe me, but it will ſatisfy my own Conſcience.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did he ſay any Thing about his going away, or not going away, the next Morning?

Kirk. He told me thus: Kirkland, be ſure you don't go away in the Morning before I have ſeen you. I will get up at Four o'Clock, or at any Time that you call. I told his Lordſhip I would let him know before I went.

Mr. Att. Gen. What particular Complaint did Mr. Johnſon labour under when you went?——Kirk. A Pain in his Bowels.

Mr. Att. Gen. What other Complaints had he?

Kirk. A Strangury. A Difficulty of making Water.

Mr. Att. Gen. What did my Lord Ferrers ſay upon that?

Kirk. He aſked me: "Kirkland, don't you think that the Bladder or "Kidneys are wounded?" And what would be the Conſequence? I let it in ſuch a Light as to make him believe that they might, and no bad Conſequence enſue.

Mr.

Mr. Att. Gen. Was that, or was it not, your Rule, upon which you repreſented Things in this Light?

Kirk. I, immediately from the Time of my ſeeing Mr. Johnſon, thought he would be dead; but I thought it prudent to deceive my Lord for our Safety.

Mr. Att. Gen. Was my Lord ſatisfied with this flattering Account that you gave?——Kirk. Yes, he ſeemed ſatisfied.

Mr. Att. Gen. Were any Orders given to get Things in Readineſs? any Orders for the Horſes?

Kirk. I don't know any Thing but what the Servants told me.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did any Diſcourſe paſs between you relating to their Seizure of my Lord's Perſon?

Kirk. My Lord did deſire that I would take Care he was not ſeized, and I promiſed him I would.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did you tell him how you meant to repreſent it?

Kirk. My Lord aſked me, what I ſhould ſay upon the Occaſion, if I was called upon? I told his Lordſhip that I ſhould ſay, that, though Mr. Johnſon was ſhot, yet there was a great Probability of his recovering; and that I thought there was no Neceſſity of ſeizing his Lordſhip. His Lordſhip then aſked me, if I would make Oath of that before a Juſtice of the Peace, if I was called upon? I ſaid, Yes.

Mr. Att. Gen. Where was this? and about what Part of the Night did the laſt Converſation paſs?——Kirk. It was in the Parlour.

Mr. Att. Gen. What Time was it? Was it an Hour before Supper?

Kirk. I think this was before Supper; but it was repeated before and after Supper.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did my Lord, in this Diſcourſe, ſay any Thing relating to Mr. Johnſon?

Kirk. He told me, that Mr. Johnſon had long been a Villain to him. He ſaid, he began his Villainy in 1753; that he aſſiſted in procuring the Act of Parliament; that he was in the Intereſt of his Enemies; that, on Mr. Johnſon's firſt coming there in the Afternoon, he ordered him to ſettle an Account. He then told him, Johnſon, you have been a Villain to me; if you don't ſign a Paper, confeſſing all your Villainy, I'll ſhoot you. My Lord told me Johnſon would not ſign one. Therefore, ſays he, I bid him kneel down on his Knees to aſk my Pardon. I ſaid, Johnſon, if you have any thing to ſay, ſpeak quickly. Then, ſays he, I fired at him. I know he did not think I would have ſhot him; but I was determined to do it. I was quite cool. I took Aim; for I always aim with a Piſtol in this Manner.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did any Thing paſs in reference to the Farm?

Kirk. My Lord told me he had long wanted to drive Johnſon out of his Farm; and that he imagined, after he recovered, he would go into Cheſhire, from whence he came, and give him no more Diſturbance. He ſaid he had long intended to ſhoot him: That the chief Reaſon he did it at this Time was, an Affair between Mr. Curzon, Mr. Burſlem, and his Lordſhip. But the greateſt Part of this Diſcourſe was at the Time that my Lord was full of Liquor.

Mr. Att. Gen. Was he ſo full of Liquor as to be deprived of his Underſtanding?

Kirk. I think not; he ſeemed to underſtand very well what he did.

Mr. Att. Gen. Was he in Liquor when you firſt ſaw him?

Kirk. Yes; not much.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did he continue drinking during the Time you ſaw him?

Kirk. He was drinking Porter; they ſaid it was Porter.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did you go to Mr. Johnſon again?

Kirk. Yes; after Supper I went up Stairs to Mr. Johnſon; nothing material paſſed; but my Lord enquired what I thought of Mr. Johnſon; and upon my ſetting Things in the Light I thought I ſhould, my Lord ſeemed very well ſatisfied.

Mr. Att. Gen. Was any Thing ſaid about the Bowels or Guts?

Kirk. My Lord aſked, if the Bowels were wounded, what would be the Conſequence? I ſaid, ſome had had Wounds in their Bowels and recovered.

Mr. Att. Gen. There was an Expreſſion uſed, that the Bullet was lodged in the Abdomen; was that your's or my Lord's Expreſſion?

Kirk. It was my Expreſſion.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did you and my Lord ſit together in the Evening?

Kirk. Yes.

Mr. Att. Gen. Was any Wine brought?

Kirk. Yes; Mrs. Clifford brought a Bottle of Wine, and then his Lordſhip again repeated, that he had ſhot Johnſon, and that he intended it.

Mr. Att. Gen. Was there any Thing paſſed between you relative to my Lord's Circumſtances?

Kirk. A little before he went to Bed, before I went to Mr. Johnſon the laſt Time, my Lord ſaid, Kirkland, I know you can ſet this Affair in ſuch a Light, that I ſhall not be ſeized if you will; I owe you a Bill, you may have ſome of your Money now, and the reſt when you want it; I told his Lordſhip I did not want Money, I ſhould be glad to receive it when it was moſt convenient to him.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did you afterwards ſee my Lord and Mr. Johnſon together?——Kirk. Yes.

Mr. Att. Gen. What paſſed?

Kirk. My Lord went up to the Bedſide, and ſpoke it temperately; Johnſon, you know you have been a Villain to me; Mr. Johnſon made no Anſwer, but deſired my Lord to let him alone at that Time: My Lord kept calling of him Villain; his Paſſion roſe, and he began to pull the Bed-Cloaths, and ſaid, Have you not been a Villain? Mr. Johnſon ſaid, My Lord, I may have been wrong as well as others: Upon this, my Lord run up in a violent Paſſion to the Bedſide, I thought he would have ſtruck him; but upon Mr. Johnſon's declaring he might have been a Villain to his Lordſhip, my Lord went to the Fireſide.

Mr. Att. Gen. How came Mr. Johnſon to make that Anſwer?

Kirk. I winked at him, and he made the Anſwer.

Mr. Att. Gen. Was Miſs Johnſon in the Room?

Kirk. Yes; my Lord went to her, after he had abuſed her Father, and ſaid, Though he has been a Villain to me, I promiſe you before Kirkland, who I deſire to be a Witneſs, that I will take Care of your Family, if you do not proſecute.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did my Lord go out of the Room?

Kirk. Yes; he went down Stairs; he ſent for me, and told me, he was afraid he had made Miſs Johnſon uneaſy; he deſired I would tell her, he would be her Friend: We came up Stairs together; his Lordſhip aſked at the Top of the Stairs, whether I thought Mr. Johnſon would recover: I replied, Yes; he ſaid, Then I may go to Bed in Safety; he went to Bed directly.

Mr. Att. Gen. What paſſed after?

Kirk. The firſt Thing I did I went to Mr. Johnſon, who deſired, for God's Sake, that I would remove him; while we were talking, I heard my Lord open the Door, and call up his Pointer: Mr. Johnſon was a good deal alarmed at it, fearing my Lord ſhould come again; but my Lord ſhut the Door; then he again intreated me to remove him.

Mr. Att. Gen. Was any Propoſal made to remove him before that?

Kirk. Yes; Mrs. Clifford came down before that into the Still-Room, and ſaid, Cannot Johnſon be removed? My Lord replied, No, he ſhall not be removed, till he be either better or dead: And ſome time after that he ſaid, he was glad he had him in the Houſe, that he could plague the Raſcal; or ſome ſuch Words.

Mr. Att. Gen. Why did you propoſe to remove him?

Kirk. I thought it prudent for many Reaſons to remove him; I imagined, Mr. Johnſon would die; and if my Lord came and found him dying, his Reſentment would riſe againſt me; beſides, Mr. Johnſon was in a good deal of Apprehenſion of being again ſhot; I really apprehended he might die through Fear, for he was a Man of a very weak Conſtitution; upon this I went to the Lount and got a Parcel of Fellows, and placed Mr. Johnſon in an eaſy Chair, and carried him upon Poles to the Lount, where he got without being much fatigued.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did you apprehend that the moving would be prejudicial to him, conſidering the Condition he was in?

Kirk. It is impoſſible to ſay it might not; but there was much more Danger in leaving him at Stanton; and he expreſſed Satisfaction on my removing him: When he came there, he deſired he might be removed from one Room where he was, into another; for he ſaid, my Lord might come and ſhoot him there, the Window was facing the Bed; I told him, he might make himſelf eaſy, I would place a Centry at each Door.

Mr. Att. Gen. At what Time was Mr. Johnſon removed?

Kirk. I believe about Two o'Clock in the Morning; I am not quite certain of the Hour.

Mr. Att. Gen. How long did he live after that?

Kirk. He lived, as I was informed, till about Nine; I did not leave him till Seven o'Clock.

Mr. Att. Gen. In what Condition was he when you left him?

Kirk. Weak and low, and cold in the Extremities.

Mr. Att. Gen. What was your Judgment about him?

Kirk. That he would be dead; he thought ſo himſelf.

Mr. Att. Gen. What happened after he was dead?

Kirk. Nothing more than my examining the Body.

Mr. Att. Gen. What did you do upon that?

Kirk. I examined it the next Day when the Coroner's Inqueſt was taken.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did you give an Account of the Wound?

Kirk. The Ball had paſſed juſt under the loweſt Rib, on the Left Side, through One of the Guts, and through a Bone we call the Os Inominatum, and lodged in the Bone called the Os Sacrum.

Mr. Att. Gen. Do you apprehend that Mr. Johnſon died of that Wound?

Kirk. I do; I am clear in it.

Mr. Att. Gen. Was you there when the Earl was ſeized?

Kirk. I was not; I went to aſk Advice what was to be done.

Earl Ferrers. You ſaid that when I aſked you to extract the Ball, that it was lodged in the Abdomen, and that I wondered at it.

Kirk. That Queſtion was aſked before I told your Lordſhip it was lodged; I remember the Queſtion was aſked.

Earl Ferrers. When I told you I had ſhot it through a Deal, was it not mentioned with Surprize?

Kirk. The Surprize ſeemed to be, that it had not alſo gone through the Man.

Earl Ferrers. At the Time that we were talking this over a Bottle of Wine, did you talk with me as a Friend; or did you intend to betray me?

Kirk. I do own, my Lord, that I intended to deceive you; and I thought it abſolutely neceſſary.

Earl Ferrers. Did you intend to give this in Evidence?

Kirk. I knew I ſhould be called upon on this Occaſion.

Earl Ferrers. Did you not take Advantage of my being in Liquor?

Kirk. No, I could not, my Lord; what you ſaid was quite voluntary.

Earl Ferrers. Did I ſay I had come to a Reſolution to do it deliberately?

Kirk. I do not remember.

Earl Ferrers. Did you never hear me ſay, that I did not intend to kill him?---Kirk. Your Lordſhip did.

A Lord. Did you, at any Time, hear Mr. Johnſon ſay, that Lord Ferrers had ſhot him?

Kirk. As ſoon as Mr. Johnſon had got Home, I ſaid to him, Was my Lord in Liquor when he ſhot you? He was, when I firſt ſaw him. Mr. Johnſon ſaid, No, he was not: I imagined he got what Liquor he had afterwards. I did not think he would have ſhot me. I thought he only wanted me to ſign a Paper. I aſked him, Was you down on your Knee when my Lord ſhot you? He ſaid, I think when my Lord ſhot me I was riſing; though I cannot be ſure whether I was or not, being hurried.

Mr. Att. Gen. At the Time of this Relation of Mr. Johnſon's, was any other Perſon preſent?

Kirk. No, there was none; we were by ourſelves in the Room.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did you hear my Lord ſay to Miſs Johnſon, that he would take Care of them?

Kirk. Yes, I heard my Lord ſay ſo to Miſs Johnſon.

Mr. Att. Gen. He ſaid to you, I owe you a Bill?

Kirk. My Lord ſaid, You can ſet this Matter right: If you do, I owe you a Bill; you may have ſome Money now, and the reſt when you want it.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did you ever hear Mr. Johnſon expreſs any Apprehenſion of my Lord Ferrers?

Kirkland. Mr. Johnſon, in Converſation at different Times, has ſaid to me, he did not think my Lord Ferrers would do him any Harm.

Lord Talbot. My Lords, this Witneſs has told you, that in one of his Converſations with Lord Ferrers his Lordſhip declared, that he did not intend to kill Mr. Johnſon; and alſo that Lord Ferrers ſhewed him the Poſition in which he held the Piſtol, when his Lordſhip thought the Inſtrument went wrong, as Mr. Kirkland was probing the Wound; I would aſk, whether the Converſation was previous or ſubſequent to the probing the Wound?

Kirk. He told me, before I entered the Director into the Wound, You muſt paſs it in that Manner. The other Converſation was ſubſequent to this.

Lord Talbot. Do you believe that his Lordſhip's ſhewing the Poſition of the Piſtol, in order to acquaint you with the Direction of the Ball, was with an Intention to facilitate your Operation?

Kirk. I believe it was.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did he appear in Liquor?

Kirk. He was in Liquor at firſt; but it got more upon him.

Mr. Att. Gen. As that unhappy Fury roſe, the more Liquor he had, the more he ſeemed to perſiſt in the Action?---Kirk. Yes.

Mr. Att. Gen. But when he was calmer, in his better Senſes, he ſaid, he did not wiſh to kill him?

Kirk. No; he ſaid at firſt, that he intended to kill him.

A Lord. When he told you the Direction of the Ball, did he not mean that tenderly, to aſſiſt the unfortunate Man?

Kirk. I took it, that he was directing me to enquire into the Nature of the Wound.

A Lord. Could he direct you with any other View than to aſſiſt?

Kirk. I remember when I told my Lord the Ball could not be extracted, he ſaid, I do not intend to direct you; purſue your own Method, and do the beſt you can for him.

A Lord. You mentioned that he ſent to you?---Kirk. Yes.

Lord Mansfield. You have ſaid, that, from the firſt to the laſt, Lord Ferrers told you that he deſigned to kill the Deceaſed; now, in Anſwer to a Queſtion lately aſked, you ſay, he ſaid, he did not intend to kill him; upon what Occaſion did he ſay that?

Kirk. I think we ſat by the Fire in the Still-Room, but I am not quite certain, and his Lordſhip ſaid, that he did not intend to ſhoot him dead; I intended only to make him ſmart, and ſhoot him into the Hip, or Side.

Lord Mansfield. Could ſuch a Wound as this be given to a Man without a certain Hazard of his Life?

Kirk. It was certain Death to ſuch a Conſtitution as Mr. Johnſon's.

Lord Mansfield. How long after this Time was it, that he told you that you could ſet that Matter right?

Kirk. He mentioned it at the very Beginning, and ſeveral Times after, till the End of the Evening.

Lord Mansfield. Did your Fear of Lord Ferrers ariſe from his being in Liquor?

Kirk. I ſhould not have been afraid of Lord Ferrers if he had not been in Liquor; I thought, if he had found Mr. Johnſon had died, that, as I had deceived him, I ſhould have had his Reſentment.

Lord Mansfield. Did you ſee Lord Ferrers in the Morning?

Kirk. No. I did not.

Mr. Springthorpe ſworn.

Mr. Gould. My Lords, we call this Witneſs to give an Account of the Manner of ſeizing Lord Ferrers, and what paſſed upon that Occaſion.

Mr. Gould. Was you preſent at the Time of taking Lord Ferrers?

Springthorpe. I was.

Mr. Gould. What Day was it?---Spring. On Saturday Morning.

Mr. Gould. What Time in the Morning?

Spring. I believe it was between Ten and Eleven o'Clock.

Mr. Gould. Had you a Multitude of People with you?

Spring. The firſt Part of the Time I had not; but before he was taken there were a great many.

Mr. Gould. Was you armed?

Spring. I had a Piſtol I took from Mr. Burſlem's.

Mr. Gould. Where did you go firſt?

Spring. I went to ſee Mr. Johnſon; he was my Friend, and I found he was dead. Mr. Burſlem deſired I would go and help to take Lord Ferrers: I condeſcended to do it. When I came to the Hall Yard, my Lord in a few Minutes came; he ſeemed to be going to the Stable, with his Stockings down, and his Garters in his Hands; his Lordſhip ſeeing me, demanded to know what I wanted. I preſented my Piſtol to his Lordſhip, and I ſaid it was he I wanted, and I would have him; he put his Hand, whether he was going to put his Garters in his Pocket, or to pull out a Piſtol, I cannot ſay; but he ſuddenly run into the Houſe: I never ſaw more of him for two Hours; in about two Hours he came to the Garret Window; I went under the Window; he called; I aſked what he wanted; he ſaid, How is Johnſon? I ſaid he was dead; he ſaid, You are a lying Scoundrel, G- -d d---n you. I told him he was dead; he ſaid, I will not believe it till Kirkland tells me ſo. I ſaid he was dead; he ſaid, Then diſperſe the People, and I will go and ſurrender: Let the People in, and let them have ſome Victuals and Drink. I told him I did not come for Victuals, but for him, and I would have him. He went away from the Window, ſwearing he would not be taken. Two Hours after that, there was a Report that he was upon the Bowling-green; I was at this Part of the Houſe; I run there, and, by the Time I got there, I ſaw two Colliers had hold of his Lordſhip. I ſaid, I would take care Nobody ſhould hurt him. I took from a Man that had hold of him, a Piſtol and a Powder-Horn; I ſhot the Piſtol off, and it made a great Impreſſion againſt the Stones. I heard my Lord ſay, he had ſhot a Villain and a Scoundrel, and, clapping his Hand upon his Boſom, he ſaid, I glory in his Death. That is all I know of the Matter.

Francis Kinſey ſworn.

Mr. Norton. You keep a Public-Houſe at Aſhby de la Zouch?

Kinſey. Yes.

Mr. Norton. Was Lord Ferrers brought to your Houſe when he was apprehended?---Kinſey. Yes.

Mr. Norton. Did you hear him ſay any Thing about killing of Johnſon?---Kinſey. I heard very little of it.

Mr. Norton. Do you remember one Mr. Hall, a Clergyman, coming to your Houſe at that Time?---Kinſey. Yes.

Mr. Norton. Did he deſire to be admitted to Lord Ferrers?---Kinſey. Yes.

Mr. Norton. Did you hear what paſſed between Mr. Hall and my Lord Ferrers?---Kinſey. A great many Words paſſed.

Mr. Norton. What paſſed?

Kinſey. I heard Mr. Hall intimate to his Lordſhip, as a Clergyman, that his Lordſhip ſeemed to be pretty much in Liquor at that Time, and deſired he would not make Uſe of thoſe Expreſſions. He told Mr. Hall he was extremely obliged to him for his good Advice; he apprehended what it was; however, he told Mr. Hall that he knew his Duty, perhaps, as well as a Juſtice of Peace.

Mr. Norton. Was Mr. Hall a Juſtice of Peace?

Kinſey. Yes. I did not hear much more ſaid between Mr. Hall and my Lord Ferrers. Mr. Hall ſtaid with his Lordſhip ſome Time in the ſame Room; then he came down Stairs, and I never ſaw him afterwards.

Mr. Norton. Did he ſay any Thing about killing of Mr. Johnſon?

Kinſey. He aſked, a great many Times, if I had heard that Johnſon was dead; I told him a good many Times, that I heard he was dead: He ſaid, I will not be convinced till I hear it from the Coroner.

Mr. Norton. Dd he ſay any Thing elſe?

Kinſey. His Lordſhip behaved very well with me, and decently, from the Saturday, to the Monday at Ten o'Clock.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lords, we reſt it here for the Crown.

L. H. S. My Lord Ferrers, the Counſel for the Crown have done; now is the Time for your Lordſhip to make your Defence; and if you have any Witneſſes to examine, now is your Time to call them.

Earl Ferrers. My Lords, there have been a great Variety of Circumſtances that have appeared through the Courſe of this Evidence. I really do not recollect any Thing that happened ſince the Time relative to the Affair; and I ſhould hope your Lordſhips would give me a farther Day to make my Defence.

L. H. S. Your Lordſhip hath had a great deal of Time, and you have had Counſel aſſigned you, and Orders for ſummoning your Witneſſes. It is now the Time to proceed to your Defence.

Earl Ferrers. I hope your Lordſhips will be ſo good as to give me till To-morrow, as there are ſome Circumſtances that I could wiſh to conſult my Counſel about.

Lord Mansfield. My Lords, as your Lordſhips cannot debate here upon the Application that has been made by the Noble Lord at the Bar, to adjourn the Trial till To-morrow, I could wiſh he would open to your Lordſhips the Nature of his Defence, or ſome Reaſon why he is not prepared to go on now; otherwiſe, when your Lordſhips adjourn, you will have nothing to debate upon, but barely whether there ſhall be this Delay becauſe it is aſked; and it may be a dangerous Precedent to eſtabliſh, that a Trial ſhall be adjourned, as of courſe, if deſired, juſt when the Evidence in Support of the Proſecution is cloſed. If he ſhould give your Lordſhips a Reaſon for it, then it will be in your Lordſhips Diſcretion, whether that Reaſon is ſufficient to induce your Lordſhips to adjourn 'till To-morrow. I think he ſhould open the Nature of his Defence, and ſtate ſome Ground for the Delay he aſks.

Elizabeth Burgeland called in again.

A Lord. Do you know of any particular Quantity of ſtrong Liquor, of any Kind, that Lord Ferrers had drank that Day?

Burgeland. No. I cannot tell any Thing of it: He drank ſome Brandy in his Tea, in the Morning.

A Lord. Who is the Perſon that kept the Key of the ſtrong Liquor?

Burge. Mrs. Clifford.

A Lord. Do you know of any that he had that Day?

Burge. I cannot tell any Thing about it.

A Lord. Was it uſual for my Lord to drink Brandy in his Tea?

Burge. He did not drink Tea every Morning; but, when he drank Tea, I believe he did put Brandy in it.

A Lord. Was Mrs. Clifford returned to the Hall before the Surgeon, Mr. Kirkland?——Burge. Yes.

A Lord. How long?

Burge. I cannot juſtly ſay; it may be near, or near upon two Hours.

A Lord. Had you, or any Perſon, carried any ſtrong Liquor to my Lord before Mr. Kirkland came?

Burge. I cannot tell any Thing about it.

A Lord. At what Time did Lord Ferrers dine that Day?

Burge. At Two o'Clock.

A Lord. When you ſaw Lord Ferrers, after the Fact, was he drunk, or ſober?

Burge. I did not obſerve he was much in Liquor then; but, ſoon after, he was quite fuddled.

A Lord. The firſt Time you ſaw him after the Piſtol went off, how was he then?

Burge. I did not obſerve that he was much in Liquor at the Time when it was done.

A Lord. Did you ſee him any Part of that Day, before you heard the Piſtol go off, or before Mr. Kirkland came to the Houſe, appear intoxicated with Liquor?

Burge. I ſaw him at Dinner; I never ſaw him after till it was done.

A Lord. How was he at Dinner?

Burge. My Lord was ſober at Dinner.

Earl Ferrers. My Lords, by the Kind of Defence recommended to me, it will be impoſſible to go on at preſent; there are ſeveral Witneſſes to be examined, and really, my Lords, I am quite unprepared.

Earl of Hardwicke. I believe it is expected by your Lordſhips, that the Noble Lord at the Bar ſhould now open to you the Nature of his Defence.

Lord High Steward. My Lord Ferrers, it is required that you ſhould open the Nature of your Defence; my Lords will be able to judge, from that, whether it will be proper to give your Lordſhip Time to make your Defence, agreeable to your Requeſt.

Earl Ferrers. My Lords, I can hardly expreſs myſelf, the very Circumſtance ſhocks me ſo much; but I am informed, from ſeveral Circumſtances, of an Indiſpoſition of Mind.

Then the Lord High Steward returned back to the Chair.

Lord Raveinſworth My Lords, I move your Lordſhips to adjourn to the Chamber of Parliament.

Lord High Steward. Is it your Lordſhips Pleaſure to adjourn to the Chamber of Parliament?——Lords. Ay, ay.

Lord High Steward. This Houſe is adjourned to the Chamber of Parliament.

The Lords, and others, returned to the Chamber of Parliament, in the ſame Order they came down; and, after ſome Time, the Houſe was adjourned again into Weſtminſter Hall, and the Peers being there ſeated, and the Lord High Steward in his Chair, and the Houſe reſumed, the Serjeant at Arms made Proclamation for Silence, as uſual.

Lord High Steward. My Lord Ferrers, you are to proceed to your Defence.

Earl Ferrers. My Lords, the Kind of Defence I mentioned to your Lordſhips before, I really don't know how myſelf to enter upon; it is what my Family have conſidered for me, and they have engaged all the Evidence that are to be examined upon this unhappy Occaſion, who I really have not ſeen; I do not well know what they have to ſay: I ſhould, therefore, hope your Lordſhips will give me all the Aſſiſtance that is poſſible in their Examination.

My Lords, I believe that what I have already mentioned to your Lordſhips, as the Ground of this Defence, has been a Family Complaint; and I have heard that my own Family have, of late, endeavoured to prove me ſuch. The Defence I mean is occaſional Inſanity of Mind; and I am convinced, from recollecting within myſelf, that, at the Time of this Action, I could not know what I was about. I ſay, my Lords, upon reflecting within myſelf, I am convinced, that at that Time I could not know what I was about.

It has been too plainly proved, that, at the Time this Accident happened, I was very ſober, that I was not diſordered with Liquor: Your Lordſhips will obſerve, from the Evidence both of Mr. Kirkland and Miſs Johnſon, that it plainly appeared that this Man never ſuſpected there was any Malice, or that I had any.

Mr. John Bennefold ſworn.

Earl Ferrers. How long have you known me?

Bennefold. Above theſe Twenty Years.

Earl Fer. Was you ever employed by me in any Shape?—Ben. Yes.

Earl Fer. In what Shape?

Ben. In receiving his Lordſhip's Rents, when they were ſent him out of the Country.

Earl Fer. Did you know any of the Family beſides me?—Ben. Yes.

Earl Fer. Do you remember my Uncle, or any other of the Family?

Ben. Yes, the late Lord Ferrers, Henry.

Earl Fer. What Diſorder had he?——Ben. Lunacy.

Earl Fer. How many Years before he died?

Ben. Several Years before he died, at Kenſington Gore.

Earl Fer. Did you know Lady Barbara Shirley?---Ben. No.

Earl Fer. Did you never hear that ſhe was diſordered?

Ben. Yes, I have.

Earl Fer. Pleaſe to obſerve what you know of my Conduct, as to the State of my Mind, without having any particular Queſtions aſked you?

Ben. His Lordſhip has always behaved in a very ſtrange Manner, very ſlighty, very much like a Man out of his Mind, more particularly ſo within theſe Two Years paſt, ſuch as being in Liquor, and ſwearing and curſing, and the like, and talking to himſelf, very much like a Man diſordered in his Senſes; and then he has behaved himſelf as well as any other Gentleman at Times.

Earl Fer. Do you know of any particular Time, or of any particular Action?

Ben. Nothing in particular, more than the particular Circumſtances of my Lady, and expreſſing great Hardſhips, and Diſſatisfaction with the Act of Parliament.

Earl Fer. Have you obſerved irrational Behaviour when I have not been in Liquor?——Ben. Yes, I have.

Earl Fer. Was it frequent or ſeldom?——Ben. It was often.

Earl Fer. Can you recollect any particular irrational Behaviour in me when I have not been in Liquor?

Ben. I cannot ſay that I can recollect any particular Paſſage.

Earl Fer. Did you ever ſee me walking about the Room, talking to myſelf; making Motions with my Head, and talking to myſelf?

Ben. Yes, a great many Times.

Earl Fer. Did you think that I was diſturbed in my Mind?

Ben. Yes.

Mr. Attorney General. My Lords, I ſhould be glad to know what is this Witneſs's Trade and Occupation?

Ben. I am now Clerk of St. James's Pariſh; I was a Peruke-maker by Trade.

Mr. Att. Gen. Was you acquainted with my Lord Ferrers in the Country or in Town?——Ben. In Town.

Mr. Att. Gen. Was you admitted to my Lord's Friendſhip or Familiarity?——Ben. To both.

Mr. Att. Gen. In Converſation at any Time, have you obſerved my Lord to give you irrational or inſenſible Anſwers?

Ben. I cannot ſay he has given me any inſenſible Anſwers.

Mr. Att. Gen. I ſhould be glad to know whether you have any Reaſon to believe, from his Behaviour, that he did not underſtand enough to diſtinguiſh Right from Wrong?

Ben. That is a Queſtion I am in ſome Doubt of anſwering.

Mr. Att. Gen. I have aſked as to your Opinion; if you will recollect what Diſcourſe has paſſed between you, you will be able to give an Anſwer; now, from your Diſcourſe and Converſation, do you think or believe he was in that State of Mind as not to know Right from Wrong at any Time?

Ben. That is a Queſtion I cannot anſwer to.

Mr. Att. Gen. You will be pleaſed to recollect, that you told me, when I aſked you, that my Lord never gave you an irrational Anſwer; why cannot you give your Opinion as to his Sanity?

Ben. My Lord's Behaviour appeared in general in ſuch Manner as I have mentioned.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lords, This Witneſs did not mention any particular Act, only talking to himſelf, and Motions with his Head; I am queſtioning him upon thoſe Kind of Acts that proceed from Words or Speeches: Did you ever, from his Words or Speeches, conceive that he was not himſelf?

Ben. No further than by being diſpleaſed, often talking to himſelf, like a Man that was out of his Mind.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did my Lord manage his Affairs by himſelf?

Ben. He managed them himſelf; he gave me Directions.

Mr. Att. Gen. Were thoſe Directions reaſonable and ſenſible?

Ben. Sometimes they were, though thought unreaſonable and inſenſible by the Perſons he wrote to.

Mr. Att. Gen. Can you recollect any Inſtances, and the Perſons that thought them ſo?

Ben. I cannot recollect any Circumſtance relating to Family Matters; his Mother, when I have carried ſuch Meſſages, has thought him to be in a wrong Mind, in writing to her in the Manner he did.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did Mrs. Shirley ever treat him as an inſane Perſon, or talk of ſending for a Phyſician to him?---Ben. Not that I know of.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did any other Perſon think my Lord ſo inſane as to want that?

Ben. I cannot recollect any Perſon in particular.

Mr. Att. Gen. Was it eaſy to impoſe upon his Lordſhip in his Affairs, or difficult?

Ben. It was not eaſy to impoſe upon his Lordſhip that I know of.

Mr. Att. Gen. As you have known him ſo long, and have been admitted to his Familiarity, I wiſh you would recollect One ſingle irrational Expreſſion that you have ever heard him make uſe of.

Ben. I cannot recollect any in particular.

Mr. Att. Gen. You ſay that he ſeemed diſpleaſed with his Lady, and with the Act of Parliament; pleaſe to recollect, whether, upon that Occaſion, his Behaviour was ſuch as betrayed his Inſanity, or any thing that was irrational?

Ben. My Lord expreſſed a good deal of Diſſatisfaction at the Act of Parliament.

Mr. Att. Gen. What was the Diſſatisfaction? and was it general as well as particular?

Ben. In relation to the Eſtate's being taken away, and Receivers being put upon it.

Mr. Att. Gen. Do you apprehend that that Sort of Expreſſion denoted Inſanity or Sanity?

Ben. That I cannot take upon me to determine.

Mr. Att. Gen. Pleaſe to recollect yourſelf, and give me an Anſwer to the Queſtion: You ſaid that he expreſſed a Diſſatisfaction, becauſe his Eſtate was taken from him, and a Receiver put upon it; I deſire to know whether thoſe Expreſſions beſpeak a Man in his Senſes or out of his Senſes?

Ben. I cannot ſay whether that denoted him to be in his Senſes or out of his Senſes.

Mr. Att. Gen. Are thoſe Expreſſions the Expreſſions of a Fool, or of a Man of Underſtanding upon the Subject?

Ben. I ſhould think, of a Man of Underſtanding.

Mr. Att. Gen. You have not been able to anſwer as to any particular Speeches that denoted him to be inſane; now do you remember any Act of his, of any Kind, that denoted a diſordered Mind?

Ben. I cannot ſay I can; I was not ſo often with him, though I have known him long.

Mr. Att. Gen. Then I deſire to know, whether Lord Ferrers, from the Converſation you had with him, appeared to be rather of better Parts than an ordinary Kind of Man?

Ben. Yes, to be ſure.

Mr. Thomas Gooſtrey ſworn.

Earl Ferrers. How long have you known Lord Ferrers?

Gooſtrey. About Ten Years.

Earl Fer. How long have you been concerned for him?

Gooſ. About that Time.

Earl Fer. Have you ſeen any Inſtances of any thing like Inſanity in me?

Gooſ. I think I have.

Earl Fer. Pleaſe to mention the Inſtances.

Gooſ. I have been called upon very unexpectedly; I ſhould have recollected myſelf, if I had had any Apprehenſion of being called upon.

Earl Fer. Then mention the Inſtances.

Gooſ. I know nothing within this Twelve Months paſt: Lord Ferrers always appeared to me to be of a very remarkable Diſpoſition; and though Lord Ferrers was extremely ſenſible, and thoroughly acquainted with his Affairs, yet I have frequently had Directions from him to do Things that in my Opinion were either fruitleſs, or oppoſite to his Intereſt, and upon thoſe Occaſions I have always found it in vain to endeavour to diſſuade his Lordſhip from it; and as I always found that Lord Ferrers was extremely ſenſible, and thorough Maſter of his Affairs, I have never been capable of accounting for his Behaviour, otherwiſe than by apprehending that he has been at Times out of his Mind.

Earl Fer. Do you remember any Inſtance where I appeared to be out of my Mind, and what?

Gooſ. I remember that all of a ſudden he took it into his Head that he ſhould be capable of impeaching a Family Settlement that he had long acquieſced under, and by which he was only Tenant for Life of his Eſtate; and though he had adviſed with many Lawyers upon the Occaſion, and they were all of Opinion that it was impoſſible he could ſucceed, yet he perſiſted in his Reſolution of bringing a Suit to deſtroy that Settlement; and upon thoſe Occaſions I have always found Lord Ferrers extremely ſtrange; and when he has touched upon that Subject, his Converſation has been very wild, and inconſiſtent with what I have looked upon a Man of Senſe and Underſtanding to be; and I remember One Inſtance, which which was, when Lord Ferrers returned from my Lord Weſtmoreland's, my Lord Ferrers followed me upon that Occaſion into the City, and he came into the Room where I was with a great deal of Company. I perceived, by his Appearance, that ſomething diſturbed him, and therefore haſtily came up to him, and got him out of the Room. When I came up to him, I aſked him what was the Matter; and did at firſt apprehend he had been in Liquor, but I ſoon perceived that he was perfectly ſober. He then told me a ſtrange inconſiſtent Story of his having been down at my Lord Weſtmoreland's, and of his having been ill treated by Sir Thomas Stapleton, and the Intent of his coming to me was, to draw an Advertiſement to be inſerted in all the Papers, tending to challenge Sir Thomas Stapleton, and to poſt him for a Coward if he did not give him Satisfaction. I was extremely uneaſy; and with Difficulty did diſſuade him from it, upon a Promiſe to wait upon him the next Day; but then looking upon him to be out of his Senſes, I did not call upon him the next Day. From thence I declined being concerned for him, as looking upon him to be a Perſon out of his Senſes: That is all; I have never ſeen his Lordſhip from that Time to this, except when I had the Honour to wait upon his Lordſhip in the Tower.

Earl Ferrers. Did you know Mr. Johnſon?

Gooſtrey. Very well.

Earl Fer. Was I in Friendſhip with Mr. Johnſon?

Gooſ. I have often ſeen Lord Ferrers and Mr. Johnſon together, and have likewiſe had Occaſion to talk of Mr. Johnſon with my Lord: I always obſerved that his Lordſhip had the greateſt Regard and Eſteem for Mr. Johnſon; and I have, in the Courſe of my Buſineſs that I have done for Lord Ferrers, always found that Mr. Johnſon was very exact and regular in his Accounts.

Earl Fer. Did you ever hear me at any Time find Fault with Mr. Johnſon, or expreſs any Diſſatisfaction at him?

Gooſ. Never, but always the Reverſe.

Earl Fer. Do you know if Mr. Johnſon would have conſented to have been Receiver under the Act of Parliament, without conſulting me?

Gooſ. I heard Mr. Johnſon declare, that when it was propoſed to him to be Receiver, that he refuſed to be ſo, without firſt conſulting his Lordſhip; and afterwards I ſaw Mr. Johnſon, and he told me that it was at his Lordſhip's particular Requeſt that he conſented to be a Receiver.

Mr. Sollicitor General. My Lords, I muſt beg Leave to aſk this Witneſs a Queſtion or Two.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Mr. Gooſtrey gave your Lordſhips as a Reaſon for his Opinion that Lord Ferrers was inſane, that his Lordſhip would very frequently ſend Directions in the Courſe of his Affairs, which Mr. Gooſtrey thought fruitleſs, or oppoſite to his Intereſt; in particular, he mentioned an Inſtance relative to his impeaching or ſetting aſide a Family Settlement;

Now, I ſhould be glad to aſk Mr. Gooſtrey, Whether he thinks that the Manner of Lord Ferrers's receiving his Advice to diſſuade him from endeavouring to ſet aſide that Settlement, proceeded from a Tenaciouſneſs of his Opinion, or from the Inſanity of his Mind?

Gooſ. To ſay that it might be owing to Inſanity of Mind, might be going too far; but it was from his remarkable Diſpoſition, his obſtinate and improper Behaviour, his remarkable Tenaciouſneſs of his Opinion, which was not conſiſtent with the good Senſe I have known him Maſter of.

Gooſ. If I may explain what I ſaid before, I ſhould rather think it tended to Inſanity than any thing elſe, as it was ſo inconſiſtent with the good Senſe and Underſtanding that I have always met with from his Lordſhip.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Was it from any particular Circumſtance which paſſed between you and Lord Ferrers, that you thought the Manner of receiving your Advice was owing to a Tendency in Lord Ferrers to Inſanity?

Gooſ. My Reaſon is, that his Lordſhip had been adviſed by many Lawyers, that, by his long Acquieſcence under that Settlement, and the many Acts he had done confirming it, that there was no Poſſibility of ſucceeding in it.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Mr. Gooſtrey, You have had a great deal of Buſineſs, and been employed by many Clients, as well as Lord Ferrers; have not you, in the Courſe of your Experience and Tranſactions, met with ſeveral Clients of a Temper to proceed againſt the Advice of Counſel and Friends?

Gooſ. I never did in my ſmall Experience meet with any Perſon that did ſo, that was poſſeſſed of the good Senſe and Underſtanding that I have at other Times found in my Lord Ferrers.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Have you never met with Perſons unſuſpected of Lunacy, who acted in the Manner Lord Ferrers did upon that Occaſion?

Gooſ. I do not know I ever had any other Client that was under ſuch Circumſtances; I do not know that I ever met with any Client that would commence a Suit after Counſel adviſed the contrary.

Mr. Sol. Gen. How did the Suit end?

Gooſ. It never proceeded ſo far as to have an Anſwer; for, in the mean time, the unhappy Diſpute between Lord and Lady Ferrers broke out, and that diverted his Thoughts from it.

Mr. Sol. Gen. You mentioned an Inſtance of attending Lord Ferrers, with regard to the ill Treatment he had received from Sir Thomas Stapleton; upon that Occaſion do you think that my Lord's inſiſting to have a Challenge inſerted in the Papers, by way of Advertiſement, proceeded from Inſanity, or from mere Violence of Temper?

Gooſ. I did then think it Inſanity; he being perfectly ſober, I could impute it to nothing elſe, and from thenceforth I declined being concerned for him.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Might it not be from Violence of Temper?

Gooſ. It was many Hours after the Accident happened that he came to me.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you ever obſerve any thing frantick in my Lord's Behaviour?

Gooſ Many times.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Upon what Occaſion?

Gooſ. Upon Occaſion of his going from the Buſineſs we have been talking upon, I have often found him in Converſation loſe himſelf intirely.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did he loſe himſelf from Paſſion, or for Want of Underſtanding?

Gooſ. He had nothing to ruffle his Temper but that particular Thing; it was from his talking to himſelf; I made it a Rule never to contradict him; and, during the Ten Years I was concerned for him, I never had a Word with him.

Mr. Sol. Gen. You endeavoured to diſſuade him from this Suit which he was going to proſecute as to the Settlement; How did he reaſon upon the Occaſion?

Gooſ. Quite wild and inconſiſtent, and, upon this Occaſion, in my Opinion, ſhewed Want of Reaſon.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you recollect what he ſaid, and how he argued? Mention the Particulars.

Gooſ. He treated it as if he had been impoſed upon, and drawn in improperly to do it.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you think that ſuch a Way of arguing ſhewed his Inſanity and Want of Senſe?

Gooſ. I thought it did, becauſe it appeared to me to be inconſiſtent with the Facts.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Might it not ariſe from a Difference in Opinion between you and him?

Gooſ. I ſhould think not, becauſe I always looked upon his Lordſhip to be a much more ſenſible Man.

Mr. Sol. Gen. How long have you known him?

Gooſ. I ſaid Ten Years; but I believe it may be Eleven.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you know of any Inſtance in which his Friends or Family ever entertained the ſame Opinion of him as you do?

Gooſ. Never, as to taking out a Commiſſion of Lunacy.

Mr. Sol. Gen. As from the Converſation you had with him you think he was inſane, did not you repreſent it to the Family?

Gooſ. Never; his Family knew it as well as I.

Mr. Sol. Gen. As you was of that Opinion, did you adviſe a Commiſſion of Lunacy?

Gooſ. Never.

Mr. Sol. Gen. In the Time of your being concerned for him in his Affairs, did you prepare any Deed, Conveyance, or Leaſe for him?

Gooſ. In ſome Things I have.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you ever prepare any Mortgage upon his Eſtate?

Gooſ. Never that I remember.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you ever attend the Execution of any ſuch Deeds?

Gooſ. I was concerned in ſuffering a Recovery, and cutting off the Entails in the Settlement.

Mr. Sol. Gen. In caſe of a Client's being inſane, would you have ſuffered ſuch Acts to be done?

Gooſ. There was no ſuch Thing happened in my Time; I never knew of any Act that my Lord did to his Prejudice in the Execution of any Deed in my Time.

Mr. Sol. Gen. I aſk you, if you had been deſired to be a Party, or preſent at the Execution of any ſuch Deed, whether you would have ſuffered it under ſuch Circumſtances?

Gooſ. Moſt certainly I ſhould not.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Was you ever a Witneſs to the Execution of any Deed by Lord Ferrers?——Gooſ. I have.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you ever tranſact any Mortgage for him?

Gooſ. I do not recollect.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you never get any Loan of Money for him?

Gooſ. Never. If the Gentlemen will find it out, I will not diſown it.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Has my Lord lately raiſed a conſiderable Sum of Money upon his Eſtate?

Gooſ. No, I never negotiated any ſuch, nor was I privy to it.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Was you employed to procure any Money?

Gooſ. Never, to my Memory.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you never converſe with his Lordſhip upon the Subject?——Gooſ. Never.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you, or did you not, in your Conſcience and Opinion, upon the whole Matter, think my Lord Ferrers inſane, or a proper Object to be under the Care of a Phyſician, or of the Court of Chancery?

Gooſ. I am in great Doubt whether my Lord was ſo inſane as that a Commiſſion of Lunacy could be taken out; I ſhould think a Commiſſion of Lunacy could not be taken out againſt him.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Why? becauſe he was not inſane?

Gooſ. I look upon it that he was inſane only at particular Times, and in particular Inſtances.

Mr. Sol. Gen. If he was inſane only at Times, would he not have been a proper Object of a Commiſſion of Lunacy?

Gooſ. I cannot ſay at the Times I have ſeen. If a Jury had been to inquire touching his Sanity, I am ſure they would have found him a Lunatic.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Mention the Times of which you ſpeak.

Gooſ. I meant that particular Time when his Lordſhip came to me in the City, as I have mentioned.

My Lord Ferrers did propoſe to diſpoſe of his Northamptonſhire Eſtate. I do recollect there was once a Negociation of a Loan of Ten Thouſand Pounds from Sir Thomas Clarges. I was no otherwiſe concerned in it, than only to ſee that the Deed which Lord Ferrers executed was a proper One. Mr. Howell of Lincoln's Inn was the Perſon concerned.

Mr. Sol. Gen. You recollect the Negotiation of a Loan, and your being adviſed with?

Gooſ. I do recollect I was adviſed with, and I believe my Lord was then in Leiceſterſhire.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What Advice did you give?

Gooſ. The Money to be borrowed by my Lord was not to be put into his Pocket, but to pay off another Mortgage.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What Advice did you give?

Gooſ. I do not recollect any particular Advice; I remember there was a Draught of a Deed; I believe it was laid before me.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you, or did you not, adviſe the Execution of it?

Gooſtrey

Gooſtrey. I neither adviſed one way nor the other; I was no otherwiſe concerned than to ſee that the Draught was proper.

Mr. Sol. Gen. You ſay my Lord aſked your Advice; did you give him your Opinion with reſpect to the Propriety of the Deed?

Gooſ. I dare ſay if my Lord aſked it, I did; I don't remember he did; 'tis moſt likely he did.

Lord Hillſborough. Why did you make it a Rule never to contradict my Lord Ferrers?

Gooſ. Becauſe if I had contradicted him, I ſhould have led his Lordſhip into a ſtrange wild Way of Reaſoning, that I had often experienced by his reaſoning with himſelf only.

Earl Fer. Was you ever concerned for any of the Family but me?

Gooſ. For Lady Anna Eleonora Shirley I was concerned.

Earl Fer. Do you know of any Thing elſe?

Gooſ. Not that I recollect.

Lord Ravenſworth. Do you know Lord Ferrers's Mother, or any of his Relations?

Gooſ. I know them all.

Lord Raven. Do you mean that you know them as one that has tranſacted Buſineſs with them, and that you can ſpeak your Opinion touching them?

Gooſ. Yes; I have had Buſineſs with them frequently.

Lord Raven. Did you at any Time, or at different Times, ſpeak to Lord Ferrers's Mother, or any of his Relations, to give them your Opinion of the Management of Lord Ferrers?

Gooſ. I never did; I ſhould have thought it very unneceſſary, becauſe I was thoroughly ſatisfied that the Family knew it as well as myſelf.

Lord Raven. My Lords, I have attended to Mr. Gooſtrey's Evidence, and am deſirous of getting every Thing from him that I can; and therefore deſire he will tell your Lordſhips, whether, during the Time he did Buſineſs for Lord Ferrers, he ever ſignified to any of his Lordſhip's Family his own Sentiments touching his Lordſhip?

Gooſ. If I had been concerned for the Family, I ſhould not have heſitated a Moment to have done it. I believe Mr. Shirley in particular knew that the Reaſon I declined being longer concerned in Lord Ferrers's Affairs, was from an Apprehenſion that he was not in his Senſes.

Lord Raven. You declined being concerned for him upon his Behaviour about the Settlement?

Gooſ. No, upon his returning from Lord Weſtmoreland's.

Lord Raven. Should you have thought that alone ſufficient, if, previous to that, you had not ſeen Marks that induced you to have a Suſpicion of his Sanity, and to take the Reſolution you did?

Gooſ. I don't know whether, if that had been the only Inſtance in which I had found my Lord behave in that odd Manner, I ſhould then have given up his Affairs; but he had ſeveral Times before acted ſo inconſiſtent, as to induce me to think it was out of my Power to be of any Service to him.

Lord Raven. How long is it ſince he was at Lord Weſtmoreland's?

Gooſ. About a Year and an Half.

Lord Raven. You ſay that you have known him between Ten and Eleven Years; during the whole Time was you concerned in his Affairs?

Gooſ. There was ſomething or other moving in his Affairs all the while; it was with the greateſt Difficulty that I kept him within the Bounds I did.

Lord Raven. Do you mean that, from the firſt Time of your being concerned in his Affairs, you looked upon him in that Light, or only in that Inſtance?

Gooſ. Soon after I was concerned in his Affairs, I wiſhed I had not engaged; but as I had got into them, it was difficult to recede, and for that Purpoſe I went on.

Lord Raven. In your Opinion, and from your beſt Recollection, did you obſerve theſe Symptoms in Lord Ferrers the whole Time you attended him, the Major Part of the Time, or more particularly at the latter Part?

Gooſ. Moſt certainly his Lordſhip was greatly affected with the Separation of Lady Ferrers; and at that Time I obſerved it.

Lord Raven. Do you think it proceeded from Liquor?

Gooſ. I very ſeldom ſaw him in Liquor.

Lord Raven. At the Times you recollect, was he ſober?

Gooſ. Perfectly ſober, at the Times I ſpeak of.

Earl of Morton. Did you ever ſee him in ſuch a Condition, that he was incapable of judging between a moral and an immoral Act?

Gooſ. I cannot ſay I ever did.

Then the Lord High Steward returned back to his Chair.

Lord Privy Seal. My Lords, I move your Lordſhips to adjourn to the Chamber of Parliament.

Lord High Steward. Is it your Lordſhips Pleaſure to adjourn to the Chamber of Parliament?

Lords. Ay, ay.

Lord High Steward. This Houſe is adjourned to the Chamber of Parliament.

The Lords, and others, returned to the Chamber of Parliament, in the ſame Order they came down; and, after ſome Time, the Houſe being there reſumed, reſolved to proceed further in the Trial of Lawrence Earl Ferrers, in Weſtminſter-Hall, To-morrow, at Ten of the Clock in the Morning; and ordered that the ſaid Lawrence Earl Ferrers ſhould be remanded Priſoner to his Majeſty's Tower of London, there to be kept in ſafe Cuſtody; and that he be brought again to the Bar of this Houſe in Weſtminſter-Hall, To-morrow, at Ten of the Clock in the Morning.

Thurſday, April 17, 1760. The Second Day.

THE Lords, and others, came from the Chamber of Parliament into Weſtminſter-Hall, in the ſame Order as on Wedneſday laſt; and the Peers were there ſeated, and the Lord High Steward in his Chair.

Lord High Steward. My Lords, The Houſe is reſumed. Is it your Lordſhips Pleaſure, that the Judges may be covered?

Lords. Ay, ay.

Then the Serjeant at Arms made Proclamation for Silence, as uſual; and afterwards the following Proclamation,

Serjeant at Arms. Oyez, Oyez, Oyez! Lieutenant of the Tower, bring forth your Priſoner, Lowrence Earl Ferrers, to the Bar, purſuant to the Order of the Houſe of Lords.

The Deputy-Governor of the Tower brought the Priſoner to the Bar, in the like Form as before; and then he kneeled down.

Lord High Steward. Your Lordſhip may riſe.

Lord High Steward. Earl Ferrers, your Lordſhip will proceed in your Defence.

Thomas Huxley ſworn.

Earl Ferrers. Did you know the late Earl Ferrers?

Huxley. I did.

Earl Fer. How long did you know him?

Hux. About Fourteen Years.

Earl Fer. What was the Matter with him?

Hux. He was a Lunatic.

Earl Fer. Was he under Confinement?

Hux. He was under Confinement.

Earl Fer. Was he a Lunatic all that Time?—Hux. He had Intervals.

Earl Fer. Was he not recovered of his Underſtanding ſometimes, ſo as to return to his Seat in Parliament?

Hux. Not in that Time that I was with his Lordſhip.

Earl Fer. Was he a Lunatic home to the Time of his Death?

Hux. He was.

Earl Fer. Did you know Lady Barbara Shirley?—Hux. I did not.

Earl Fer. Or Lady Betty Shirley?—Hux. I did know Lady Betty Shirley.

Earl Fer. Is ſhe living?—Hux. She is dead.

Earl Fer. How long has ſhe been dead?

Hux. To the beſt of my Knowledge about Seventeen or Eighteen Years.

Earl Fer. Had ſhe any Diſorders that you know of?

Hux. As I have been told by her Servants, ſhe frequently appeared to be very much diſordered.

Mr. Attorney General. My Lords, I ſhould be ſorry to ſtop the Courſe of the Noble Earl's Evidence, but this is Hearſay.

Earl Fer. Did you know any other of the Family that were diſordered in their Senſes?

Hux. Nothing more than by Hearſay.

Earl Fer. How long have you known the preſent Earl Ferrers?

Hux. But a very few Years.

Earl Fer. What Relation was the late Earl Ferrers to the preſent Lord?

Hux. His Uncle.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lords, we will not trouble your Lordſhips to croſs-examine this Witneſs.

Mrs. Wilhelmina Deborah Cotes ſworn.

Earl Ferrers. Did you know Lady Barbara Shirley?

Cotes. Perfectly well.

Earl Fer. What Relation was ſhe to the preſent Earl Ferrers?

Cotes. His Aunt.

Earl Fer. How long did you know Lady Barbara before her Death?

Cotes. She is now living.

Earl Fer. Was ſhe afflicted with any, and what, Diſtemper?

Cotes. Lunacy.

Earl Fer. Is ſhe confined as a Lunatic at this Time?

Cotes. She was always looked upon as a Lunatic, and proper Care has been taken of her.

Earl Fer. Do you know any other of the Family that has been afflicted with Lunacy?—Cotes. Only by Hearſay.

The Honourable and Reverend Mr. Walter Shirley ſworn.

Earl Ferrers. What Relation are you to me?—Shirley. Brother.

Earl Fer. Do you know any, and which, of the Family, that have been afflicted with Lunacy; if you do, pleaſe to mention their Names?

Shir. I believe the Priſoner at the Bar has that Misfortune.

Earl Fer. What is your Reaſon for ſuch Belief?

Shir. I have many Reaſons for it. The firſt is, That I have ſeen him ſeveral Times talking to himſelf, clenching his Fiſts, grinning, and having ſeveral Geſtures of a Madman, without any ſeeming Cauſe leading thereto. I have likewiſe very frequently known him extremely ſuſpicious of Plots and Contrivances againſt him from his own Family; and, when he was deſired to give ſome Account what the Plots were that he meant, he could not make any direct Anſwer.—Another Reaſon I have for thinking him ſo is, his falling into violent Paſſion, without any adequate Cauſe.

Earl Fer. Do you believe that, at ſome Times, I have been hurried into violent Fits, ſo as not to know the Diſtinction between a moral and immoral Act?

Shir. I believe, at thoſe Times when my Lord has been tranſported by this Diſeaſe of Lunacy, that he has not been able to diſtinguiſh properly between moral Good and Evil.

Earl Fer. Has any other of the Family, beſides myſelf, been afflicted with Lunacy?

Shir. I have heard———(ſtopt)

Earl Fer. Pleaſe to inform their Lordſhips, whether, at the Time I have been tranſported with ſuch violent Fits, they have been the Effects of Drink, and whether they have happened when I was ſober?

Shir. Frequently when my Lord has been ſober, much more ſo when he has been a little inflamed with Liquor.

Earl Fer. Do you know of any Intention in the Family to take out a Commiſſion of Lunacy againſt me?

Shir. I heard it talked of.

Earl Fer. How long ago?

Shir. I think I can recollect it was at the Time of his Lordſhip's committing the Outrage at Lord Weſtmoreland's Houſe that it was propoſed to be done; but afterwards they were afraid to go through with it; and the Reaſon given was, leſt, if the Court of Judicature ſhould not be thoroughly ſatisfied of my Lord's Lunacy upon Inſpection, that the Damage would be very great to thoſe that ſhould attempt it.

Earl Fer. Why was the Family afraid that I ſhould appear in the Courts of Judicature to be in my Senſes?

Shir. Becauſe my Lord had frequently ſuch long Intervals of Reaſon, that, we imagined, if he, on the Inſpection, appeared reaſonable, the Court would not grant the Commiſſion againſt him.

Earl

Earl Ferrers. What Damage do you mean that the Family was apprehenfive of, in caſe the Court ſhould refuſe a Commiſſion?

Shirley. We apprehended my Lord would ſue us for Scandalum Magnatum.

Earl Fer. Was the Family apprehenſive of any other Kind of Damage?

Shirley. I know of none.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lords, I did not intend to have troubled this Gentleman; but from what he has ſaid, your Lordſhips will permit me to aſk him Two or Three Queſtions; I ſhall do it very tenderly, and with as much Propriety as I can.---In giving his Account of the Noble Lord's State of Mind, as far as I could collect it, ſaid, That he had more Reaſons than One why he deemed him to be inſane.

Mr. Att. Gen. Mr. Shirley, You ſaid that the Firſt Ground was, that his Lordſhip would, at Times, talk to himſelf, grin, and uſe certain Geſtures, proper only to Madmen---Now, as to this Firſt Mark of Inſanity, Was this frequently the Caſe with his Lordſhip?

Shirley. Very frequently.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did he, at thoſe Times ſpeak loud, or uſe any intelligible Language to himſelf?——Shirley. He did not.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did he, at ſuch Times, offer to commit any Miſchief, or betray any Marks of Diſorder, while in that Situation?

Shirley. I do not recollect any.

Mr. Att. Gen. Then, as far as I can underſtand you, at thoſe Times, his Behaviour in thoſe Intervals was perfectly innocent.——Shirley. Yes.

Mr. Att. Gen. At ſuch Times have you ever entered into Diſcourſe with him?——Shirley. No, I do not remember.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did you never aſk him a ſingle Queſtion when you have ſeen him walking backwards and forwards in the Way you mention?

Shirley. I don't remember I have.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did you never hear him ſpeak at ſuch Times to other Perſons?——Shirley. Not whilſt he continued in thoſe Attitudes.

Mr. Att. Gen. I don't aſk you whether he converſed the Time that he was mute, but within a Quarter or Half an Hour?

Shirley. I am not certain.

Mr. Att. Gen. Your next Ground for ſuppoſing him to be inſane was, That he was accuſtomed to be tranſported into Paſſions without any adequate Cauſe, Were thoſe the Words?

Shirley. Without any ſeeming Cauſe.

Mr. Att. Gen. Was not adequate the Expreſſion you uſed?

Shirley. Yes.

Mr. Att. Gen. I ſhould be glad to know whether you deem every Man that is tranſported with Anger, without an adequate Cauſe, to be a Madman?

Shirley. I deemed it as a Sign of Madneſs in him; but there were other Cauſes.

Mr. Att. Gen. I aſk you a general Queſtion, and I do not expect a particular Anſwer. Whether you deem a Perſon that is tranſported with Fury without Reaſon, to be a Madman?

Shirley. I think a Perſon may be tranſported to Fury without an adequate Cauſe, that is no Madman.

Mr. Att. Gen. Then pleaſe to recollect ſome particular Inſtance of this frantic Paſſion, and ſtate it.

Shirley. I really cannot command my Memory ſo far.---I have not ſeen my Lord theſe Two Years, till the Time of this unhappy Confinement.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Then I am to underſtand you, that you cannot recollect one particular Inſtance---Am I, or not?

Shirley. I cannot recollect any at this Time.

Mr. Att. Gen. Then as to the Suſpicion of Plots without any Foundation---Will you pleaſe to enumerate any of thoſe?

Shirley. He never himſelf would give any particular Account of what he ſuſpected, only that he did ſuſpect that the Family was in ſome Combination againſt him; and when I have aſked him, What it was that he meant? he would never give me a direct Anſwer to that Queſtion.

Mr. Att. Gen. Does that Kind of Behaviour, as you deſcribe it, denote a Man out of his Senſes?

Shirley. I thought ſo.---I was ſo fully poſſeſſed of that Opinion, that I declared to other People long ago, that I thought him a Madman.

Mr. Att. Gen. Pleaſe to inform their Lordſhips, whether the unfortunate Earl lived well or ill with his Family?

Shirley. Indeed, he did not live in Friendſhip with his Family.

Mr. Att. Gen. Were there not Diſputes on both Sides?

Shirley. Yes, there were; his younger Brothers and Siſters were under the unhappy Conſtraint of ſuing for their Fortunes.

Mr. Att. Gen. Then pleaſe to inform their Lordſhips, whether, in Truth, there was not a Combination in the Family againſt him?---I do not mean a Criminal one.

Shirley. I am very certain that was not what my Lord alluded to.

Mr. Att. Gen. If you are certain of that, you can inform their Lordſhips what it was that he alluded to?

Shirley. I will give a Reaſon why I am certain it was not that; becauſe it appeared to be ſome ſecret Combination: That was a Thing publickly known.

Mr. Att. Gen. How did you collect that the Combination was ſecret?

Shirley. By my Lord's Manner of expreſſing himſelf.

Mr. Att. Gen. Can you recollect the Phraſe or the Words he uſed?

Shirley. I cannot.

Mr. Att. Gen. In another Part of your Examination you was aſked, whether the Earl could diſtinguiſh between Good and Evil? You ſaid he could not diſtinguiſh them properly.---Was he at that Time leſs able to diſtinguiſh properly between Good and Evil than any other Man that is tranſported into a violent Paſſion?

Shirley. I never ſaw any Man ſo tranſported.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did he expreſs himſelf in inſenſible Words, ſo as that you could diſcover the State of his Mind; and that it was that of a Madman, and not a Man in Paſſion?

Shirley. I conſidered it as Madneſs.

Mr. Att. Gen. Can you recollect any Expreſſion, in any Fit of Paſſion that my Lord was in, that might not as well have come from the Mouth of any other paſſionate Man?

Shirley. Indeed I cannot.

Mr. Att. Gen. You recollect an old Adage, Ira furor brevis eſt: Do you believe that his was ſuch Madneſs as is there poetically deſcribed?

Shirley. I believe that it really proceeded from Madneſs.

Mr. Att. Gen. Have you ever ſeen him ſo tranſported upon any other Occaſion than that of Anger? Have you ſeen any Appearance of that Kind when he was cool and calm?

Shirley. I have ſeen him break into Paſſions without any ſeeming Cauſe.

Mr. Att. Gen. You ſaid you could not remember any Inſtance, when the Queſtion was aſked you; can you now?

Shirley. I remember once being at a Hunting Seat at Quarendon in Leiceſterſhire, as I choſe to avoid the Bottle, I went up Stairs to the Ladies; Lady Ferrers, at that Time, lived with him; and, without any previous Quarrel, my Lord came up Stairs into the Room; and, after ſtanding for ſome Time with his Back to the Fire, he broke out into the groſſeſt Abuſe of me, inſulting me, and ſwearing at me; and I cannot to this Day or Hour conceive any Reaſon for it.

Mr. Att. Gen. Had you never any Diſpute or Quarrel with your Brother?——Shirley. Not at that Time.

Mr. Att. Gen. Might not you have had ſome Quarrel a few Days before?——Shirley. No.

Mr. Att. Gen. Are you confident of that?——Shirley. I am confident.

Mr. Att. Gen. Had he no Suſpicion at that Time of your intereſting yourſelf with reſpect to my Lady Ferrers?

Shirley. There was then no Quarrel exiſting.

Mr. Att. Gen. Had there never been a Quarrel between my Lord and my Lady?

Shirley. I think not; it was ſoon after his Marriage.

Richard Phillips ſworn.

Earl Ferrers. How long have you known me?

Phillips. About Eighteen Years.

Earl Fer. Are you a Tenant, or what Relation do you ſtand in to me?

Phil. I am a Tenant to your Lordſhip.

Earl Fer. Did you ever ſee me mad?

Phil. Your Lordſhip aſked me one Day, whether I ever ſaw you mad? I ſaid, I hoped not.

Earl Fer. How long ago is that?

Phil. It may be Nine or Ten Years.

Earl Fer. Upon what Occaſion was it that I aſked you that Queſtion; and what did I ſay further?

Phil. Your Lordſhip ſaid that you was a Madman, but could not help it; and when it was off you, you was ſorry for it.

Earl Fer. Did I at any Time lament the Misfortune of my Family, in reſpect of Madneſs?

Phil. Your Lordſhip told me that it was in your Family.

Earl Fer. At the Time that you ſpeak of, Ten or Eleven Years ago, was I upon a Viſit at any Place that might make it neceſſary for me to caution People againſt my own Madneſs, that they might not be affronted at my Behaviour?

Phil. Your Lordſhip came then to live in the Houſe where I live. I thought you ſpoke thoſe Words in a Way to caution me, that I ſhould not be ſurprized, in caſe you had ſuch Fits.

Earl Fer. Did you hear Johnſon the Deceaſed ſay that he thought me mad?——Phil. I have.

Earl Fer. When was it?——Phil. Some time ago.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lords, That is not Evidence, to ſpeak of what he heard Mr. Johnſon ſay.

Earl Fer. I thought, as the Evidence of Declarations of the Deceaſed was admitted againſt me, it would have been admitted for me.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lords, though the Declarations of the Deceaſed, whilſt a dying Man, and after the Stroke is given, are to be admitted as legal Evidence; yet a Depoſition of what he or any other Perſon ſaid before the Accident, is clearly Hearſay Evidence, upon the ſame Foundation with all other Hearſay Evidence; and, with Submiſſion to your Lordſhips, ought not to be admitted.

Mr. Att. Gen. The Queſtion is objected to by me; if my Noble Lord or his Counſel inſiſt upon it, the next Step is to hear his Counſel upon the Objection; then we are to anſwer it, and they are to reply; and then it is for your Lordſhips Judgment.

Earl Fer. I wave the Queſtion.

Gold Clarges, Eſq; ſworn.

Earl Ferrers. How long have you known me?

Clarges. From the Time of your Birth.

Earl Fer. Did you look upon me to be afflicted with any and what Diſtemper?

Clarges. Indeed I have looked upon your Lordſhip as a Lunatick for many Years.

Earl Fer. Has that Diſtemper increas'd of late Years, and how long?

Clarges. I think it has.

Earl Fer. How long?----Clarges. For theſe Two Years or more, ever ſince the unhappy Difference between my Lady and my Lord.

Earl Fer. Have you ſeen me in violent Fits of Lunacy?

Clarges. I cannot ſay I have; and the Reaſon that I have ſeen few extravagant Actions of his Lordſhip was this, as I look'd upon him to be diſordered in his Mind, I avoided being in Company, or having any Converſation with him as much as poſſible.

Earl Fer. Have you particularly remarked that I am of a very jealous or ſuſpicious Nature?----Clarges. That I have often.

Earl Fer. Has it been remarkably ſo in me more than in any other People?----Clarges. Much more ſo.

Earl Fer. Did you know any of my Relations being ſo afflicted?

Clarges. I remember Henry Earl Ferrers was.

Earl Fer. Had he a Commiſſion taken out againſt him?

Clarges. He had.

Earl Fer. Was he after that reſtored to his Senſes for any Time, ſo as to return to Parliament?

Clarges. He was; he returned to Parliament about a Year and an Half, I believe, or thereabouts.

Earl Ferrers. What Relation was he to me?----Clarges. Uncle.

Earl Fer. Was his Return to Parliament after he had been confined for Lunacy?-----Clarges. Yes.

Earl Fer. Had he, after that Year and an Half's being in Parliament, any Relapse?-----Clarges. Yes.

Earl Fer. What became of him then?

Clarges. Another Commission was taken out, and he was confined to the Time of his Death.

Earl Fer. His being in Parliament a Year and a Half was after the first Commission issued against him?---Clarges. Yes.

Earl Fer. Do you know of any other of the Family being afflicted with that Distemper?-- Clarges. I have heard, but do not know it.

Lord Ravensworth. Have you avoided being in Company with Lord Ferrers, or having any Thing to do with him, for some Time past?

Clarges. I did, as much as I could.

Lord Raven. Please to inform their Lordships, whether you, at any Time previous to that, lived in any Degree of constant Correspondence and Intimacy with Lord Ferrers?

Clarges. Not much since he arrived to Manhood.

Lord Raven. Whether previous to his Arrival at Manhood, did you see a great deal of Lord Ferrers?

Clarges. A great deal, almost from his Cradle; for I being a Relation of his Family, was constantly with his Father and with him in the Country, and most Part of my Time I spent with them.

Lord Raven. Whether in that Time, previous to his Manhood, did you observe any Thing in Lord Ferrers from his Behaviour, or any of his Deportment, that was particularly remarkable?

Clarges. I have.

Lord Raven. You have known him during his Infancy and before his Manhood: Did you observe any thing remarkable constitutionally (if I may call it so), and singular in his Behaviour, during the Time you knew him?

Clarges. I have seen great Oddities in him beyond what I have seen in any other Man.

Lord Raven. What Age was this present unfortunate Earl at the Time of the Death of his Father?

Clarges. I believe about Twenty-two or Twenty-three,

Lord Raven. You say you was intimate with his Father: Had you at any Time any Conversation with the Father of the present Earl, relative to that which appeared to you to be singular in his Son?

Clarges. I cannot say I ever had.

Lord Raven. Please to recollect, as far as possible, any Symptoms, be they of what Kind soever, that made you think Lord Ferrers so very singular in his Nature?---Clarges. I cannot specify any particular Thing.

Lord Raven. You say that you have several Times seen that in my Lord, which made you think my Lord to be very singular?---Clarges. Yes.

Lord Raven. Do you recollect any Thing?

Clarges. It is a great while ago; I cannot particularly specify any Thing.

Earl of Morton. This Witness has told your Lordships, that he has known the Noble Lord at the Bar from his Cradle---I desire he may be asked, if he ever observed any Defect of Understanding in the Noble Lord at the Bar?

Clarges. Not to my Knowledge; not whilst he was with me.

Earl of Morton. Upon no Occasion when you saw him?

Clarges. No, I cannot say I have.

Earl of Morton. Did you ever perceive the Noble Lord at the Bar so far deprived of his Senses, as not to know that Robbery or Murder was an Offence against the Law of God and Man?

Clarges. No, to be sure, my Lords; I cannot say that I ever did.

Peter Williams sworn.

Earl Ferrers. How long have you known me?

Williams. I have known your Lordship these Sixteen or Seventeen Years.

Earl Fer. Do you know of any Distemper that I am afflicted with?

Wil. Of late I have.

Earl Fer. What Distemper is that?

Wil. I have often observed your Lordship, when I have been in your Company, to be spitting in the Glass, and biting your Lips, and Stamping about the Room, which induced me to believe your Lordship was not in your right Senses; and further to convince me it was so, there was a Mare that your Lordship sent to me on the 17th January 1749, and remained with me to the first of April following: One Day, being Sunday, your Lordship came to my House, about Four or Five in the Afternoon, with Two Servants; your Lordship armed with a Tuck stuck upon a Stick, the Two Servants with Guns and other offensive Weapons: Upon entering into the Yard, your Lordship jumped off the Horse, and bid one of your Servants, you called Tom, knock the Padlock off the Stable Door.--He did so. My Wife hearing a Noise in the Yard, she came to know the Reason; and without any Ceremony your Lordship felled her to the Ground with your Fist: Upon my seeing this, I went into the Yard, and ask'd your Lordship what you meant by this Behaviour?

Earl Fer. My Lords, I desire to stop this Witness; I only meant to ask him a general Question.

Earl Fer. Have you observed, that That which you call a Distemper in me has increased lately?

Wil. Yes, in my Opinion I think it did: When your Lordship came to me, you, without any further Ceremony ——— —— (Stopp'd by Lord Ferrers).

Lord Ravensworth. My Lords, in Justice to myself and to your Lordships, I hope that the Witness may go on, tho' the Prisoner desires he may be stopp'd.

Lord Mansfield. If any of your Lordships have any Questions to ask the Witness, you will do it: The Prisoner will ask him such as he thinks proper.

Earl Fer. Do you know of any Design in the Family to take out a Commission of Lunacy against me?

Wil. I cannot say I do.

Earl Fer. Did you ever tell me that the Family wanted to prove me mad?---Wil. I don't remember I did.

Earl Fer. Did you yourself consider me as a Madman?

Wil. I considered your Lordship so at this Juncture, and many Times before.

Earl Fer. What Time did you mean by this Juncture?

Wil. I mean the Juncture of his Lordship's coming on Horseback with Guns and other offensive Weapons to take away the Mare.

Earl Fer. What Time was that?

Wil. Sunday the 1st of April 1759; I mistook when I said 1749.

Earl Fer. Was it the general Reputation of the Country that I was mad?

Wil. It was; I have heard several People say, where is the mad Lord that us'd to be at your House?

Earl Fer. How long before this Accident, in regard to Mr. Johnson, was it, that my Lord came to your House arm'd in this Manner?

Wil. I believe it was about a Twelvemonth.

Earl Fer. You said it was 1749 before?---Wil. I meant 1759.

Elizabeth Williams sworn.

Earl Fer. How long have you known Lord Ferrers?

Williams. A great many Years.

Earl Fer. Do you know of any Distemper that Lord Ferrers is afflicted with, and what is it?--Wil. He never appeared like any other Gentleman.

Earl Fer. Wherein did he differ from other People in general?

Wil. He always was a-musing and talking to himself.---He spit in the Looking-glass, tore the Pictures, swearing he would break my Bureau open, and would break all the Glasses in my House, and would throttle me if I would not let him do it.

Earl Fer. Had he any particular Reason for this Conduct?

Wil. None that I ever saw, but like a delirious Man.

Earl Fer. Did you keep a Public-House?---Wil. Yes.

Earl Fer. How near did you live to my Lord?

Wil. My Lord was at my House, and boarded with me.

Earl Fer. Are you the Wife of the last Witness?--Wil. Yes.

Earl Fer. Where did Lord Ferrers live, at the Time he behav'd in that odd Manner you speak of?

Wil. He had Lodgings at Muswell-Hill.

Earl Fer. How far did you live from him?

Wil. Two Miles, to the best of my Knowledge; he frequently used to come; I have made him Coffee and sent up a Dish, he always drank it out of the Spout, which surprized me, that I thought him delirious.

Earl Fer. How long ago is that?

Wil. I believe it is about Twelve Months ago, to the best of my Knowledge.

Earl Fer. Have you often seen Lord Ferrers behave in that Manner?

Wil. I never saw him behave like any other Gentleman in my Life.

Earl Fer. Was the Coffee hot when he drank it out of the Spout?

Wil. Hot.---He always went about the Town like a Madman, throttled me, and threw me down in the Yard, one Day when he took the Horse away.

Earl Fer. Did you think Lord Ferrers a Madman?

Wil. I know he was by all his Appearance.

Earl Fer. Was he generally thought so by other People?

Wil. By all the whole Town.

A Lord. When he threatened to break open your Bureau, and to use you ill if you did not let him do it, was he in Liquor?

Wil. Sober as I am now.

A Lord. Did you ever, upon any Occasion when he committed these Outrages, observe that he had been drinking?

Wil. Never; he never drank in a Morning but a little Tea or Coffee, or some Broth.

Earl Fer. Have you ever seen me commit any other Acts of Outrage besides those you have mentioned?

Wil. A great many more that are worse.

Earl Fer. Name them.

Wil. Swearing, cursing, and damning us; and wishing us all at Hell, and himself at Hell; and threatened to break the Glasses; and talked to himself for Hours together in Bed.

Earl Fer. Was he drunk or sober at those Times?

Wil. Very rarely; but he seemed more to be disturbed in his Mind.

Earl Fer. Mention the Circumstance about my coming for the Mare.

Wil. My Lord came for the Mare, it was at Church-Time, and brought his Servants, and a Hammer in his Hand, and Guns, with a Tuck in his Hand, and broke the Stable Door open by Violence of Arms, and knocked me down with his Arm, and run the Tuck into my Husband, fetched the Blood, I was obliged to have a Surgeon to attend him; and took the Mare away by Force of Arms; and if any body came to hinder him, he said he would blow their Brains out. He always had Pistols Nobody knew of. I never saw any Gentleman that came to my House before, that had those Things about them. I us'd to like to take them out of the Bed-chamber, but was afraid to touch them, for fear of what he should do to me himself, by seeing his Mind so disturbed.

Earl Fer. Were those Outrages committed when he was drunk or sober?

Wil. Sober for the general; and when he took the Mare away, as sober as he is now.

Earl of Hardwicke. Inform their Lordships, whether, before my Lord came in this Manner to get the Mare out of the Stable, he had before sent any Servant to demand the Mare, and had been refus'd?

Wil. Yes, he had, the Boy was gone to Church. We always kept it under Lock, because there was more of his Lordship's Horses; and Nobody was to go into the Stable but his Lordship's Ostler.

The Honourable Mr. Robert Shirley sworn.

Earl Fer. What Relation are you to me?---Shirley. Brother.

Earl Fer. When was the last Time that you and I had any Conversation together?

Shirley. Almoſt Four Years ago, between Three and Four Years.

Earl Fer. At that Time in what Light did you look upon me?

Shir. Rather turn'd in your Head.

Earl Fer. Was there any Diſorder in the Family? and what was that?

Shir. Lord Henry Ferrers had Madneſs.

Earl Fer. Do you know Lady Barbara Shirley?---Shir. I do not.

Earl Fer. Do you know, of your own Knowledge, any other beſides Earl Henry that was a Lunatic?---Shir. No.

Earl Fer. Have you any Reaſon to believe that I have been afflicted with the like Diſorder?---Shir. I have.

Earl Fer. Pleaſe to name your Reaſons.

Shir. My Reaſons are, that when I liv'd at Burton-upon-Trent, your Lordſhip came to my Houſe with concealed Piſtols in your Pockets; Pockets that were made on Purpoſe for that Uſe I apprehend; and that you likewiſe had a Snick-or-ſnee Knife, as it is called; and I apprehended myſelf and all the Family in great Danger at that Time; and I was obliged to ſhut the Doors againſt you; upon that I wrote to my Brother, Captain Waſhington Shirley, that I apprehended you to be a Lunatic, and would join with him in taking out a Commiſſion againſt you.

Earl Fer. Have you any other Reaſons to believe me a Lunatic than my carrying Piſtols?---Shir. Yes.

Earl Fer. Name all your Reaſons.

Shir. Your Lordſhip has frequently aſked my Opinion in relation to your Affairs, which I have told you to the beſt of my Capacity; but you was always ſo unſteady and jealous of me and your Friends, when we were endeavouring to ſerve you, that you would never venture to truſt us in any Thing in which we could be of Service to you. I have likewiſe ſeen you in ſeveral ſtrange Poſtures, walking about with great Confuſion of Mind, and was often very abſent for a conſiderable Time; when I have been aſking you a Queſtion, I could hardly get an Anſwer from you.

Earl Fer. Was it uſual for me to go armed?

Shir. I believe for Four Years paſt, or very near, you have hardly ever gone without concealed Piſtols about you.

Earl Fer. Did I uſe to go arm'd formerly when you knew me?

Shir. I never knew that his Lordſhip went arm'd, till he came to my Houſe at Burton-upon-Trent, which was the laſt Time I ſaw him.

Earl Fer. Do you know any Thing more?

Shir. I have further to ſay, that my Father made a Settlement in 1741, which you ſubjected yourſelf to, and acquieſced under for near Twenty Years; and then preferred a Bill, in order to ſet that Settlement aſide; and, contrary to the Opinion of your Solicitor and Counſel, you ſtill would inſiſt upon doing it, and obliged me to put in an Anſwer for myſelf and my Son.

Earl Fer. Do you know of my being ſubject to Fits of violent Rage?

Shir. I cannot ſay but I have.

Earl Fer. Did you ever ſee me ſo outrageous as not to know the Difference between Good and Evil?

Shir. I really cannot particularize any Thing, 'tis ſo long ago; but upon Occaſions I have ſeen you extremely paſſionate and warm; and ſo much ſo, that I believe you did not know what you did ſometimes.

Earl Fer. Do you think that theſe violent Paſſions you ſpeak of, aroſe from conſtitutional Defects?

Shir. I really believe ſo.

Earl Fer. If you have any Thing more to offer, mention it yourſelf; I have no more Queſtions to aſk you.

Shir. I have nothing more to offer.

Lord Cadogan. How long was it before this Accident, that you wrote to Captain Waſhington Shirley about taking out a Commiſſion of Lunacy againſt my Lord?

Shir. It is upwards of Two Years ago ſince I wrote to him.

Doctor John Monroe ſworn.

Earl Ferrers. Did you know the late Earl Ferrers?---Monroe. I did.

Earl Fer. Did you know him in any and what Diſtemper?

Mon. I attended him as a Phyſician when he was under the unhappy Influence of Lunacy.

Earl Fer. Have you heard all the Evidence that has been given in this Cauſe, on the Charge againſt Earl Ferrers, on both Sides?

Mon. I have.

Earl Fer. You are deſired to mention what are the uſual Symptoms of Lunacy.

Mon. Uncommon Fury, not cauſed by Liquor, but very frequently raiſed by it; many others there are which tend to Violence againſt other Perſons or againſt themſelves: I do not know a ſtronger, a more conſtant, or a more unerring Symptom of Lunacy than Jealouſy, or Suſpicion without Cauſe or Grounds: There are many others too long to enumerate.

Earl Fer. Has the carrying of Arms been generally a Circumſtance of Lunacy?

Mon. I have known it to be ſo, but not generally.

Earl Fer. Pleaſe to inform their Lordſhips whether any, and which of the Circumſtances which have been proved by the Witneſſes are Symptoms of Lunacy.

Mr. Attorney General. My Lords, if the Noble Lord means to inſiſt upon that Queſtion, I object to it.

Lord High Steward. Lord Ferrers, do you deſire your Counſel to be heard upon that?---Earl Ferrers. I do.

Earl of Hardwicke. My Lords, this Queſtion is too general, tending to aſk the Doctor's Opinion upon the Reſult of the Evidence, and is very rightly objected to by the Counſel for the Crown: If the Noble Lord at the Bar will divide the Queſtion, and aſk whether this or that particular Fact is a Symptom of Lunacy, I dare ſay they will not object to it.

Mr. Attorney General. My Lords, I ſhall not.

Earl Fer. My Lords, I ſubmit to have it go on in the Way recommended by Lord Hardwicke.

Earl Fer. Pleaſe to inform their Lordſhips, whether Quarrelling with Friends without Cauſe is a Symptom of Lunacy.

Mon. Very frequently one.

Earl Fer. Whether being naturally ſuſpicious is a Symptom of Lunacy?

Mon. Yes, it is without Cauſe a conſtant one.

Earl Fer. Whether going arm'd where there is no Danger is a Symptom of Lunacy?

Mon. That muſt be according to the Circumſtances.

Earl Fer. Whether going generally arm'd where there is no apparent Danger is a Symptom of Lunacy?---Mon. I ſhould think it was.

Earl Fer. Whether ſpitting in the Looking-glaſs, clenching the Fiſt, and making Mouths, is a Symptom of Lunacy?

Mon. I have frequently ſeen ſuch in Lunatic Perſons.

Earl Fer. Whether walking in the Room, talking to himſelf, and making odd Geſtures, are Symptoms of Lunacy?

Mon. Very common ones.

Earl Fer. Is Quarrelling without Cauſe a Symptom of Lunacy?

Mon. It is a very frequent Attendant upon ſuch unhappy Complaints, and they are generally malicious.

Earl Fer. Whether drinking Coffee hot out of the Spout of the Pot is a Symptom of Lunacy?

Mon. I ſhould think it one in the preſent Caſe; it is not a general one.

Earl Fer. Whether Lunatics, when they are angered with or without Cauſe, know what they are doing?

Mon. Sometimes, as well as I do now.

Earl Fer. Is it common to have ſuch a Diſorder in Families in the Blood?---Mon. Unfortunately too common.

Earl Fer. Whether Lunatics in their Intervals are conſcious of their being Lunatics?

Mon. They are conſcious of it; many, both in and out of their Intervals; very few that are not.

Earl Fer. Whether Lunatics are apt to be ſeized with Fits of Rage on a ſudden?---Mon. Very often.

Earl Fer. Without any apparent Cauſe?

Mon. Without any apparent Cauſe.

Earl Fer. Is there any other Way of diſcovering whether a Man is Lunatic or not, but by the Irregularity of his Behaviour or his Pulſe?

Mon. By the Irregularity of his Behaviour; I know of no other Method; the Pulſe diſcovers nothing in general.

A Lord. Pleaſe to inform their Lordſhips, whether a Perſon under an immediate Viſitation from God of Madneſs, has not commonly a Fever?

Mon. Seldom or never, unleſs it may be at the firſt Attack of the Diſtemper, or in ſome very violent Fit.

Roger Griffith ſworn.

Earl Fer. How long have you known me?

Griffith. About Twelve Months.

Earl Fer. Did you know me when I lived at Muſwell Hill?

Griffith. Yes, very well.

Earl Fer. When was that?--Griffith. It was about Twelve Months ago.

Earl Fer. At that Time was I generally reputed a Madman, or a Man in his Senſes?

Griffith. Generally reputed a Lunatic; ſome ſaid, crack'd in his Head.

Earl Fer. My Lords, I deſire Leave to call Mr. Gooſtrey, to aſk him a Queſtion I forgot Yeſterday.

Mr. Gooſtrey ſworn again.

Earl Fer. Have you obſerv'd me remarkably jealous and ſuſpicious, and for what?

Gooſtrey. Very remarkably ſo all the while I had the Honour to be concerned for him, and much more than any other Perſon. In the courſe of Time that I was concern'd for his Lordſhip, he has been at different Times———

Lord High Steward. You are not to go into a Detail.

Earl Fer. My Lords, I have done with my Evidence; but it is impoſſible for me to ſum up, and what I have to offer to your Lordſhips I have reduced into Writing, and deſire the Clerk may read it.

Lord High Steward. Is it of your Lordſhip's own Writing?

Earl Fer. My Lords, the Attorney got it copied.

Clerk reads.

My Lords,

IT is my Misfortune to be accuſed of a Crime of the moſt horrid Nature.

My Defence is, in general, that I am Not Guilty: The Fact of Homicide is proved againſt me by Witneſſes, who, for aught I can ſay to the contrary, ſpeak truly.

But if I know myſelf at this Time, I can truly affirm, I was ever incapable of it, knowingly: If I have done and ſaid what has been alledged, I muſt have been depriv'd of my Senſes.

I have been driven to the miſerable Neceſſity of proving my own Want of Underſtanding; and am told, the Law will not allow me the Aſſiſtance of Counſel in this Caſe, in which, of all others, I ſhould think it moſt wanted.

The more I ſtand in need of Aſſiſtance, the greater Reaſon I have to hope for it from your Lordſhips.

Witneſſes have been called to prove my Inſanity---To prove an unhappy Diſorder of Mind, and which I am griev'd to be under the Neceſſity of expoſing.

If they have not directly prov'd me ſo Inſane as not to know the Difference between a moral and an immoral Action, they have at leaſt prov'd that I was liable to be driven and hurried into that unhappy Condition upon very ſlight Occaſions.

Your Lordſhips will conſider whether my Paſſion, Rage, Madneſs (or whatever it may be called) was the Effect of a weak or diſtemper'd Mind, or whether it aroſe from my own Wickedneſs, or Inattention to my Duty.

If I could have controul'd my Rage, I am anſwerable for the Conſequences of it.---But if I could not, and if it was the mere Effect of a diſtempered Brain, I am not anſwerable for the Conſequences.

My Lords, I mention theſe Things as Hints-- I need not, indeed I cannot, enlarge upon this Subject: Your Lordſhips will conſider all Circumſtances, and I am ſure you will do me Juſtice.

If

If it be but a Matter of Doubt, your Lordships will run the Hazard of doing me Injustice, if you find me Gilty.

My Lords, If my Insanity had been of my own seeking, as the sudden Effect of Drunkenness, I should be without Excuse. But it is proved, by the Witnesses for the Crown, that I was not in Liquor.

Mr. Kirkland, who drank and conversed with me, in order to betray me, (Mr. Attorney may commend his Caution, but not his Honesty) represents me as the most irrational of all Madmen, at the Time of my doing a Deed which I reflect upon with the utmost Abhorrence.

The Counsel for the Crown will put your Lordships in Mind of every Circumstance against me; I must require of your Lordships' Justice, to recollect every Circumstance on the other Side.

My Life is in your Hands, and I have every Thing to hope, as my Conscience does not condemn me of the Crime I stand accused of; for I had no preconceived Malice; and was hurried into the Perpetration of this fatal Deed by the Fury of a disordered Imagination.

To think of this, my Lords, is an Affliction, which can be aggravated only by the Necessity of making it my Defence.

May God Almighty direct your Judgments, and correct my own!

Earl Fer. My Lords, I will mention One Circumstance, which I did speak of Yesterday; it was said, that I knew of a Lease Johnson had, but it has never been proved; therefore, I imagine, that what I asserted, that I did not know of it, must be admitted as Truth.

Lord High Steward. Earl Ferrers, Hath your Lordship any thing further to offer?

Earl Fer. No.

Mr. Sollicitor General.

My Lords,

IT is now my Duty, to lay before your Lordships some Observations upon the Evidence offered both for the King and the Prisoner, in Reply to the Defence made against the Charge.

The Fact of killing Mr. Johnson (the Person named in the Indictment), is admitted as well as proved. The Noble Lord at the Bar only denies the Consequence; that the Fact is Murder. For, he tells your Lordships, that, upon considering all the Circumstances, he is satisfied, that he was incapable, knowingly, of doing what he did; and therefore insists upon an Incapacity and Insanity of Mind in his Defence.

My Lords, It is certainly true, that the Fact is not Murder without Malice; so natural Justice says; so the Law says, on which the Indictment is framed: And Malice must depend, in every Case, upon the Will and Understanding of the Party. If the Defence is founded in Truth; as the Noble Prisoner at the Bar has seen the Anxiety of your Lordships to give it all due Weight, through the whole Course of his Trial; so now, in the Conclusion, he will receive from you, as his Judges, the full Benefit of that Defence in his Acquittal. If it is not founded in Truth, I am persuaded, that no other Consideration, respecting the Rank and Quality of the Noble Prisoner, and his Relation to your Lordships, will turn your Attention from the Evidence, nor make the least Impression upon the Firmness of your Justice.

Before I observe upon the Evidence, I will presume, with your Lordships Indulgence, to state to you the Legal Notion of that Defence, which has been urged and attempted in Proof.

My Lords, The Law of England, which is wisely adapted to punish Crimes with Severity, for the Protection of Mankind, and for the Honour of Government, provides, at the same Time, with the greatest Equity, for the Imbecillity and Imperfections of Human Nature. Therefore, my Lord Chief Justice Hale (the Weight and Authority of whose Writings are known to your Lordships and to the whole Kingdom) explains the Law upon this Subject, at large, with his usual Clearness and Accuracy. It is in his First Volume of the History of the Pleas of the Crown, (fol. 30), where he traces all the Distinctions, which the Nature of this Question admits, as it concerns the Trial of Criminals for Capital Offences. I will collect the Substance of what he says, and submit it to your Lordships, as founded not only in Law and Practice, but in the most unerring Rules of Reason and Justice.

My Lords, He begins with observing, that "There is, 1st, A Partial "Insanity of Mind, and there is, 2dly, A Total Insanity. 1st, Par- "tial Insanity is, either in respect to Things, when they, who are com- "petent as to some Matters, are not so as to others; or else it is Partial "in respect to the Degree. This is the Condition of many, especially "of Melancholy Persons. As to such, a Partial Insanity will not ex- "cuse them; for (he says) that Persons who are Felons of themselves, "and other Felons, are under a Degree of it, when they offend." It is difficult to draw the Line, which divides Perfect from Partial Insanity; and he refers it to the Discretion of the Judge and Jury, who must duly weigh and consider the Whole; "Left on one Side, there be a Kind of "Inhumanity towards the Defects of Human Nature; or, on the other "Side, too much Indulgence given to great Crimes." Then, my Lords, he speaks of the general Rule, which he would chuse to lay down, as the best Measure of his own Judgment; and it is, "That a Person, who "has ordinarily as great a Share of Understanding, as a Child of Four- "teen Years of Age, is such a Person, as may be guilty of Treason or "Felony. 2dly, As to Total Insanity or Alienation of Mind, which "is perfect Madness, this (Lord Hale agrees) will plainly excuse from "the Guilt of Felony and Treason."

But he distinguishes under the Head of Total Insanity, between "that "Species, which is fixed and permanent; and Lunacy, which comes "by Periods or Fits."

Of this latter Kind he expresses himself thus: "Crimes committed by "Lunaticks, in such their Distempers, are under the same Judgment, "as those committed by Men partially insane. The Person, who is ab- "solutely mad for a Day, killing a Man in that Distemper, is equally "not Guilty, as if he were mad without Intermission. But such Per- "sons, as have their lucid Intervals, have usually, in those Intervals at "least, a competent Use of Reason; and Crimes committed by them "are of the same Nature, and punishable in the same Manner, as if they "had no such Defect."

My Lords, Afterwards, he treats of that Insanity which arises from Drunkenness, and lays it down, that "By the Law of England, such a "Person shall have no Privilege from this voluntary contracted Madness, "but shall have the same Judgment, as if he were in his right Senses". (unless it be occasioned by Medicine unskilfully administred, or Poison accidentally taken). Indeed, if by such Practices an habitual, fixed Frenzy be caused, it puts the Man in the like Condition, with respect to Crimes, as if that Frenzy were at first involuntarily contracted.

My Lords, The Result of the whole Reasoning of this wise Judge and great Lawyer (so far as it is immediately relative to the present Purpose) stands thus. If there be a total permanent Want of Reason, it will acquit the Prisoner. If there be a total temporary Want of it, when the Offence was committed, it will acquit the Prisoner: But if there be only a partial Degree of Insanity, mixed with a partial Degree of Reason; not a full and complete Use of Reason, but (as Lord Hale carefully and emphatically expresses himself) a competent Use of it, sufficient to have restrained those Passions, which produced the Crime; if there be Thought and Design; a Faculty to distinguish the Nature of Actions; to discern the Difference between moral Good and Evil; then, upon the Fact of the Offence proved, the Judgment of the Law must take Place.

My Lords, The Question therefore must be asked; Is the Noble Prisoner at the Bar to be acquitted from the Guilt of Murder, on account of Insanity? It is not pretended to be a constant general Insanity. Was he, under the Power of it, at the Time of the Offence committed? Could he, did he, at that Time, distinguish between Good and Evil?

The same Evidence, which establishes the Fact, proves, at the same Time, the Capacity and Intention of the Noble Prisoner. Did he weigh the Motives? Did he proceed with Deliberation? Did he know the Consequences?

My Lords, He weighed the Motives. The Two Witnesses, who speak most strongly and materially to this Part of the Cause, as well as to every other, are, Sarah Johnson the Daughter of the Deceased, and Mr. Kirkland the Surgeon.

The Circumstances proved by their Evidence shew, that the Malice conceived, on this unfortunate Occasion, was steady, cool, and premeditated. Mr. Johnson had acted, for many Years, as Steward to collect the Rents of such Lands as Lord Ferrers had in Possession; and he was himself Tenant of One of the Farms. At the Time of passing the Act of Parliament, Two Years ago, relative to the Noble Lord's Estate and Affairs, Mr. Johnson stood so well in his Opinion and Favour, as to be recommended by his Lordship to be Receiver, for the various Trusts and Purposes in the Act. Something passed on that Occasion, which disgusted the Noble Lord, and made him jealous, that Johnson had taken Part against him. From that Moment, he entertained Resentment and Hatred in his Heart. More lately still, he took Offence against Johnson, as to a Contract for the Sale of Coals upon Part of the Estate, in which his Lordship thought (as he seems to be knowing and attentive in his private Business) that there had been some Collusion, to impose upon him.

My Lords, The first Instance of his Resentment appeared to you from the Evidence of Sarah Johnson, the Daughter: That, in the November preceding the killing of her Father, Lord Ferrers, accompanied by Mr. Clifford, delivered a Paper to Johnson, the Body of which was voluntarily admitted by my Lord to be of his own Hand-writing. It was a Notice to Johnson to quit the Farm which he rented, and Clifford was the intended Successor. This Step proceeded from Resentment, and it was so explained afterwards by himself to Kirkland, when he said, that he had long wanted to drive Johnson out of the Farm, and make him return to Cheshire, from whence he came. My Lords, It is very plain, that the Noble Lord took his Resolution——

Earl Ferrers. Mr. Sollicitor, you mistake; the Notice was given a Twelvemonth ago last November; it was not given in the last November.

Mr. Sollicitor General. My Lords, I am extremely obliged to the Noble Lord at the Bar, for setting me right in the least Circumstance; and hope that he will always do it, whenever I mistake. I mean to be as exact as I am able. My Lords, The View with which I mention the Notice to turn Johnson out of the Farm, is this: Lord Ferrers, in order to shew the Improbability of his conceiving Malice against Johnson, has relied upon it, that he was always known to entertain the greatest Regard and Friendship for that unfortunate Man. My Lords, I admit the Friendship and Kindness down to the Time of passing the Act of Parliament: And I said, that his Lordship had recommended Johnson to be Receiver. But soon after the passing of that Act, he certainly changed his Opinion. It is sufficient, therefore, that the Notice to quit the Farm (which was the first strong Mark of his Resentment proved in Evidence) was given, subsequent to the Proceedings of the Legislature. Whether the Notice was given last November, or in the Year preceding, the Observation, as applied to this Purpose, remains in its full Force.

My Lords, I was saying, that, it was plain, his Lordship gradually wrought himself up to a Resolution of destroying Mr. Johnson. The Daughter, Sarah Johnson, proves, that his Lordship declared, in her Hearing, when she went to Stanton, in the Evening of the 18th of January, to see her dying Father, that he designed it. He declared to Kirkland, that since the Year 1753, Johnson had been a Villain; that he had done Things not right; that his Lordship fully intended to shoot Johnson dead, as a Villain who deserved Death; and that it was premeditated. He complained farther to Kirkland, that Johnson had colluded with his Enemies to obtain the Act of Parliament; but added, that the chief Reason, which had just then provoked him, was, the Contract with Mr. Curzon, in relation to the Profits of his Coals. He upbraided Johnson that Evening, upon his Death-bed, in like Terms of Reproach. And though the Witness said, that his Lordship might then be raised with Liquor in some Degree, yet he did not lose his Understanding; and the Manner, in which he spoke, was temperate.

My Lords, Can there be a clearer Proof, that the Noble Prisoner weighed the Motives of this Action? Neither these, nor any other Motives, will justify it; but the Evidence shews, that his Conduct was not absurd, but rational and consistent. The same Crime has been committed in all Ages, upon Grounds as slight, by Men who never thought of setting up the Defence of Lunacy. Motives like those suggested, might easily and naturally work upon one, the Course of whose Life (as explained by the Witnesses) betrays so many Marks of ungoverned Passion; sion; though the same Motives would not have inflamed Tempers, less susceptible of Violence than his own.

My Lords, He proceeded with equal Deliberation to commit the Fact. The Attention, Thought, and Care, with which he acted, are remarkable.

It appears, that he had appointed a particular Day for Mr. Johnson to wait upon him. Friday the 18th of January was fixed by the Order of Lord Ferrers; and the Appointment was made some Days beforehand. Elizabeth Burgeland has told your Lordships, that Mr. Johnson was expected at Stanton in the Forenoon of that very Day. Sarah Johnson tells your Lordships, that she heard her Father declare, on the Sunday preceding, that he was to attend Lord Ferrers on Friday. Kirkland proves, that the Noble Prisoner himself said to the Witness at Stanton, that, upon Johnson's coming into the Room, they had a Conversation together, after the Door was locked, by way of warm and violent Expostulation on the Part of my Lord; and that he tendered a Paper to be signed by Johnson, acknowledging his Villainy. Elizabeth Saxon overheard Part of what was said. That Paper must have been the Result of Thought and Consideration, probably prepared before Johnson came. Your Lordships observed, with some Emotion, the Account given of the Impatience with which Confessions of Villainy were expected, and almost extorted afterwards, from the dying Man.

My Lords, when the Wound was given, the Noble Lord at the Bar told Mr. Kirkland, that he was cool at the Time he did it: That he took Aim; but not having killed Johnson, he intended to shoot again: That, however, Nature got the better of Resolution, when he observed the Pain under which Johnson languished. It is proved, that in the Evening, whilst Kirkland and Lord Ferrers sat together in the Still-Room, his Lordship declared, that he did not intend to shoot Johnson dead, but only to make him smart in the Hip and Side. This was taken Notice of by the Noble Prisoner, as a Variation in Kirkland's Account of the Intention with which Johnson was shot, inconsistent with what the Witness had said before. But the Variation probably arose from my Lord's own Manner of discoursing during that Evening. The Observation, therefore, cannot affect the Credit of the Witness; and the Intention declared, of killing or wounding, will not vary the Construction of Law upon the Fact committed. Your Lordships heard too, what Lord Ferrers said in the Hearing of Sarah Johnson; that he had tried the Pistol through a Deal Board, and knew it to be good. He said the same Thing to Kirkland, expressing some Surprize (as the Witness understood it), that the Ball did not go through Johnson.

All these Circumstances shew the Deliberation with which the Noble Prisoner proceeded.

My Lords, let me now ask, when the Motives had been weighed, and the Fact deliberately committed, Did he know the Consequences?

His first Thought was, instantly to send for the Assistance of a Surgeon, and to enquire, whether Johnson would live or die. The Daughter came early in the Afternoon. He said to her, that he was afraid of being prosecuted; adding, that if she would not prosecute him, he would maintain her, and her Family. Does not this Circumstance prove, that he readily understood the Consequences? that he knew himself bound to answer to the Law for his Offence? When Kirkland came, his Lordship tempted him with fair Promises, to prevent the Neighbours from seizing him. He told Kirkland, that a large Bill was owing to him; and my Lord said, that he would pay Part of it then, and the rest in a reasonable Time. In talking over the Circumstances (which he recollected clearly and calmly), he added, that he could justify himself, though, upon his Surrender to your Lordships, he was doubtful whether his Justification would be approved. From what Consciousness in his own Mind did that Doubt arise? He expressed his Fears, during the whole Evening, that he should be seized. He was quieted, in this respect, only by the Conversation of Kirkland, and the Manner of his Behaviour. Upon Kirkland's coming to Stanton, my Lord enquired much into the Probability of Johnson's dying. In the first Visit which my Lord and the Surgeon made to Johnson that Evening, his Lordship gave material Instructions; asked sensible and pertinent Questions, particularly as to the Place of the Wound, and the Effect of the Ball lying in the Abdomen. The Witness thought that Mr. Johnson would die, from the very Moment of his first Visit; but he told your Lordships, that he judged it right to deceive Lord Ferrers. The noble Prisoner was pleased to say, that the Caution of the Witness might be commended, but not his Honesty. My Lords, the Caution proceeded from Honesty: He was unwilling that his Lordship should escape. This was due to Civil Government, to Justice, and Humanity. To prevent Lord Ferrers from taking Alarm, and attempting to escape, Kirkland flattered him with Hopes of Johnson's Recovery, during the whole Evening; and his Lordship was told, that if the People should endeavour to seize him, the Witness would persuade them, that there was no Occasion for it. About Eleven o'Clock at Night, Mr. Kirkland went up again to Johnson: He still continued to amuse Lord Ferrers with Hopes of Johnson's Recovery; and, at taking Leave, when Kirkland gave him Assurances on that Subject, my Lord said, then he might go to Bed in Safety; and retired to his own Chamber. What do all these Circumstances speak, but a correct Knowledge of the Fact, and Apprehension of all its Consequences, either as they concerned Johnson, or himself? When he was seized, did he shew Marks of Insanity? He resisted, for some Time; but appeared, in every Respect, in the Judgment of the Witnesses, to be of sound Mind. Afterwards, when he was led into Kinsey's House, his Behaviour was decent; and he made Answer to a worthy Clergyman in the Commission of the Peace, who visited and admonished him, that he knew his Duty as well as any Justice of the Peace.

This is the Substance of the Evidence, which has been offered for the King; and it not only proves the Fact, but proves it to be Murder.

My Lords, What is the Evidence produced by the Noble Lord to weaken the Force of it? In the First Place, there is none which applies to the Time of committing the Fact. His Sobriety is admitted, and Drunkenness would not excuse; and even supposing it had appeared to your Lordships, that the Noble Prisoner was sometimes, by Fits and Starts, under a Degree of Lunacy or temporary Insanity; yet, if he was of sound Mind at that Hour, he is a Person within all the Rules and Distinctions which Lord Hale explains. But, my Lords, in the next Place, I must observe, that no general Evidence has been offered, which proves his Lunacy or Insanity at any Time; for his own Witnesses fail in their Endeavours to shew it. This appears from their Manner of expressing themselves in their original Examination; but still more in the Answers, which they gave to the Questions asked upon the Cross-Examination.

The Two first Witnesses called were, Mr. Bennefold, and Mr. Goostrey. They describe the Insanity of the Noble Lord at the Bar to consist of Flights. They say, that he would swear; would talk to himself; that he would use strange Gestures; that he had Friends, and suspected them; that he was of a positive Temper, and difficult to be dissuaded from any Opinion or Resolution which he had once formed. But Mr. Bennefold, upon the Cross-Examination, admitted, that he never knew of any Act of Wildness done by his Lordship, nor of any Physician sent for, to take Care of him in that respect. He said, upon the whole, that he thought Lord Ferrers had better Parts and Understanding than ordinary Men. Mr. Goostrey told your Lordships, upon the Cross-Examination, that he had done Business several Years for Lord Ferrers; that he had advised and prepared Deeds for his Lordship to execute; that he had assisted in suffering a Recovery to bar the Entail of the Estate; and admitted his Sense and Capacity in general, but inferred Insanity from Positiveness of Temper and Opinion. However, in Answer to a Question proposed by one of your Lordships, he said, that he thought Lord Ferrers capable of distinguishing between moral and immoral Actions.

Several other Witnesses have been called To-day. I will first mention Mr. Clarges. He describes similar Circumstances with Mr. Bennefold and Mr. Goostrey, from which he collects the Insanity of the Noble Prisoner. He said, that he had observed great Oddities in my Lord, during his Minority, but no Defect of Understanding. He could not specify particular Instances; and added, that his Lordship was jealous and suspicious: But the Witness never saw him in such a Situation, as not to be capable of distinguishing between Good and Evil, and not to know, that Murder was a great Crime.

My Lords, This Account of the State of the Noble Prisoner's Mind is consistent, not only with a considerable Degree of Understanding, but with the highest Degree of it. If the Law were to receive such Excuses, it would put a Sword into the Hand of every savage and licentious Man, to disturb private Life, and public Order.

My Lords, There was another Witness of a different and a much lower Sort than those whom I have named; I mean Elizabeth Williams. She was the only Person who said, that the Noble Earl was always mad. When she came to explain the Instances from which she drew that Conclusion, the principal one insisted upon was ridiculous; the Anger which he shewed against a Servant, who had neglected to take Care of a favourite Mare, intrusted to his Management. This was a Vivacity so natural, that, if it be deemed a Symptom of Madness, few are free from it; and I doubt the Inference will go far in Cases of common Life.

The Two next Witnesses, whom I will mention, are the Brothers of the Noble Earl. My Lords, I own I felt for them. It gave me Pain to see them, in a Cause which touches a Brother's Life, brought to the Bar as Witnesses, to mitigate the Consequences of One Misfortune, by endeavouring to prove another of the most tender and affecting Nature; and if they had spoke stronger to Matters of Conjecture, Opinion, and Belief, for my Part, I could easily have excused them.

My Lords, They both spoke with Caution, and as Men of Honour; but One of them was the only Witness of Weight, who expressed a Belief, that, at particular Times, the Noble Lord might not be able to distinguish between moral Good and Evil. I did not observe, that he spoke of any Instance within his own Recollection. The Circumstances, from which these Gentlemen inferred Insanity, were for the most Part of the same Kind with those which came from the Mouths of the other Witnesses. They did not carry the Marks of it in the least Degree beyond that Evidence. And Mr. Walter Shirley admitted, That the Noble Lord at the Bar had long Intervals of Reason. I endeavour to repeat the Expression, and I think it was so. Mr. Robert Shirley told your Lordships, That he had not seen the Noble Prisoner for Four Years past; that the last Time of seeing Lord Ferrers was, at Burton upon Trent. He mentioned the carrying of Pistols, and Arms, and a large Case-Knife, at that Time. I understood him to say, that the Noble Lord generally did so; the Witness had seen it only once; but from that Circumstance he argued Insanity. Your Lordships will judge, whether this Practice might not be owing to Jealousy and Violence of Temper, as well as to Lunacy and Madness. The Witness added, That he had written formerly to his Brother Captain Washington Shirley, about taking out a Commission of Lunacy against Lord Ferrers; but I could not find, that any Measures were taken in Consequence of that Opinion given by the Witness, nor did he himself ever take any Steps towards it, nor any Branch of his Family.

The last Witness called, on Behalf of the Noble Prisoner, was Doctor Monroe. He was brought here to describe, what Symptoms he considers as Marks of Lunacy or Insanity. He said, that there were many; and on being asked particularly, as to the several Symptoms suggested in this Cause, Doctor Monroe was led to speak principally of Three Marks of Lunacy. The First was uncommon Fury, not caused by Liquor, but raised by it. Surely this Circumstance will not infer Insanity. The Next was, Jealousy and Suspicion, with causeless Quarrelling. Do not many, who are not Lunaticks, suspect or quarrel without Cause, and become dangerous to their Neighbours? The Third was, carrying Arms; which (he said) though less usual, might be a Mark of Lunacy. And it is equally true, that such Behaviour may prove, in many Cases, a bad Heart and a vicious Mind, as well as Lunacy. My Lords, the general Observation, which occurs upon Doctor Monroe's Evidence is this; that he did not describe any of these Things, as absolute Marks of Lunacy, so as to denote every Man a Lunatick, who was subject to them. Indeed he could not have said it, consistently with Common Sense and Experience.

This was the Import of the Evidence for the Noble Prisoner. No Witnesses were offered, on the Part of the King, in Reply to that Evidence. And, my Lords, the Reason why they were not offered was, becauſe the Counſel who attend your Lordſhips for the King, chuſe to ſubmit it to your Opinions, whether the Evidence produced for the Priſoner does not tend to ſtrengthen, rather than weaken, that Proof of Capacity, which ariſes out of all the Circumſtances urged, in Support of the Charge? From thoſe Circumſtances, I have already ſhewn, that the Noble Priſoner was conſcious of what he did, at the Time of the Offence committed; that he weighed the Motives; that he acted with Deliberation; that he knew the Conſequences.

I will only take Notice of one Thing more. Your Lordſhips have attended with great Patience, and the moſt impartial Regard to Juſtice, to all the Evidence, and every Obſervation, which has been laid before you. You have ſeen the Noble Priſoner, for Two Days at your Bar (though labouring under the Weight of this Charge), Croſs-examining the Witneſſes for the King, and Examining his own, in a Manner ſo pertinent, as cannot be imputed merely to the Hints and Advice of thoſe Agents and Counſel, with which you have indulged him. I am perſuaded, from the Appearance and Conduct of the Noble Priſoner, that if the Fact itſelf would have admitted Doubts, and probable Arguments, to repel the Force of any One material Circumſtance, your Lordſhips would have heard him preſs thoſe Arguments, with Senſe and Sagacity.

But, my Lords, The Truth is, That the Fact tried this Day ſtands without Alleviation. There is not a Colour for the Defence, unleſs it ariſes from the Enormity of the Crime, aggravated by the Manner of committing it; an old, faithful Servant of himſelf and his Family, murdered in cold Blood, whilſt he was performing, by expreſs Orders, an Act of dutiful Attendance upon his Maſter; murdered in the moſt deliberate and wilful Manner, deſtructive of all Confidence in human Society. My Lords, in ſome Senſe, every Crime proceeds from Inſanity. All Cruelty, all Brutality, all Revenge, all Injuſtice, is Inſanity. There were Philoſophers, in ancient Times, who held this Opinion, as a ſtrict Maxim of their Sect; and, my Lords, the Opinion is right in Philoſophy, but dangerous in Judicature. It may have a uſeful and a noble Influence, to regulate the Conduct of Men; to controul their impotent Paſſions; to teach them, that Virtue is the Perfection of Reaſon, as Reaſon itſelf is the Perfection of human Nature; but not to extenuate Crimes, nor to excuſe thoſe Puniſhments, which the Law adjudges to be their Due.

My Lords, The Neceſſity of his Majeſty's Juſtice; the Neceſſity of public Example, called for this Proſecution; and the Effect of the whole Evidence is ſubmitted to the Weight and Wiſdom of your Judgment.

Then the Lord High Steward returned back to his Chair.

Lord High Steward. Lieutenant of the Tower, Take my Lord Ferrers from the Bar.

Which was done accordingly.

Lord Privy Seal. My Lords, I move your Lordſhips to adjourn to the Chamber of Parliament.

Lords. Ay, Ay.

L. H. S. This Houſe is adjourned to the Chamber of Parliament.

The Lords, and others, returned to the Chamber of Parliament, in the ſame Order they came down: And, after ſome Time, the Houſe was adjourned again into Weſtminſter-Hall; and the Peers being there ſeated, and the Lord High Steward in his Chair, and the Houſe reſumed, the Serjeant at Arms made Proclamation for Silence, as uſual.

L. H. S. Your Lordſhips have heard the Evidence, and every Thing that has been alledged on both Sides; and the Solemnity of your Proceedings requires, that your Lordſhips Opinions on the Queſtion, Of Guilty or Not Guilty, ſhould be delivered ſeverally, in the Abſence of the Priſoner, beginning with the junior Baron; and that the Priſoner ſhould afterwards be acquainted with the Reſult of thoſe Opinions by me. Is it your Lordſhips Pleaſure to proceed now to give your Opinions on the Queſtion, Of Guilty, or Not Guilty?—Lords. Ay, Ay.

Then the Lord High Steward ſtood up uncovered; and, beginning with the youngeſt Peer, ſaid,

George Lord Lyttelton. What ſays your Lordſhip? Is Lawrence Earl Ferrers Guilty of the Felony and Murder whereof he ſtands indicted, or Not Guilty?

Whereupon George Lord Lyttelton ſtanding up in his Place, uncovered, and laying his Right Hand upon his Breaſt, anſwered, Guilty, upon my Honour.

In like Manner, the ſeveral Lords after-mentioned, being all that were preſent, anſwered as followeth;

Richard Earl Temple, Lord Privy Seal. Guilty, upon my Honour.

Then the Lord High Steward, ſtanding uncovered at the Chair, laying his Hand upon his Breaſt, ſaid;

L. H. S. My Lords, I am of Opinion, that Laurence Earl Ferrers is Guilty of the Felony and Murder whereof he ſtands indicted, upon my Honour.

L. H. S. Your Lordſhips have unanimouſly found, that Lawrence Earl Ferrers is Guilty of the Felony and Murder whereof he ſtands indicted: Is it your Lordſhips Pleaſure that he ſhould be called in, and acquainted therewith?—Lords. Ay, Ay.

Proclamation was then made for the Lieutenant of the Tower to bring the Priſoner to the Bar, which was done in the ſame Order as before; and afterwards Proclamation was made for Silence, as uſual.

L. H. S. Lawrence Earl Ferrers, The Lords have conſidered of the Charge of Felony and Murder which has been brought againſt you; they have likewiſe conſidered the Evidence, and every Thing which your Lordſhip has alledged in your Defence; and, upon the whole Matter, their Lordſhips have unanimouſly found, that you are Guilty of the Felony and Murder whereof you ſtand indicted.

L. H. S. Lieutenant of the Tower, take the Priſoner from the Bar.

Lord Privy Seal. My Lords, I move your Lordſhips to adjourn to the Chamber of Parliament.

L. H. S. Is it your Lordſhips Pleaſure to adjourn to the Chamber of Parliament?—Lords. Ay, Ay.

L. H. S. This Houſe is adjourned to the Chamber of Parliament.

Then the Lords returned, in the Order before mentioned, to the Chamber of Parliament; and, the Houſe being there reſumed, Reſolved to proceed further, in order to the giving Judgment againſt the ſaid Earl Ferrers, To-morrow; and that the ſaid Earl be brought to the Bar of the Houſe in Weſtminſter-Hall, for that Purpoſe, To-morrow, at Eleven of the Clock in the Forenoon.

Friday, April 18th, 1760. The Third Day.

THE Lords, and others, came from the Chamber of Parliament into Weſtminſter-Hall, in the ſame Order as on Wedneſday laſt; and the Peers were there ſeated, and the Lord High Steward in his Chair.

L. H. S. My Lords, The Houſe is reſumed. Is it your Lordſhips Pleaſure that the Judges may be covered?

Lords. Ay, Ay.

Then the Serjeant at Arms made Proclamation for Silence, as uſual; and afterwards the following Proclamation.

Serjeant at Arms. Oyez, Oyez, Oyez! Lieutenant of the Tower, bring forth your Priſoner, Lawrence Earl Ferrers, to the Bar, purſuant to the Order of the Houſe of Lords.

The Deputy Governor of the Tower brought the Priſoner to the Bar in the like Form as before; and then he kneeled down.

L. H. S. Your Lordſhip may riſe.

The Serjeant at Arms made Proclamation for Silence as uſual.

L. H. S. Lawrence Earl Ferrers, when you was laſt at this Bar, I acquainted your Lordſhip, That, upon your Trial, my Lords your Peers had unanimouſly found you Guilty of the Felony and Murder whereof you ſtand indicted: What has your Lordſhip to ſay, Why Judgment of Death ſhould not paſs upon you according to Law?

Earl Ferrers. I deſire that the Clerk may repeat what I ſay—Which he did.

My Lords,

I MUST acknowledge myſelf infinitely obliged for the fair and candid Trial your Lordſhips have indulged me with.

I am extremely ſorry that I have troubled your Lordſhips with a Defence that I was always much averſe to, and has given me the greateſt Uneaſineſs; but was prevailed on by my Family to attempt it, as it was what they themſelves were perſuaded of the Truth of; and had propoſed to prove me under the unhappy Circumſtances that have been ineffectually repreſented to your Lordſhips.

This Defence has put me off from what I propoſed, and what perhaps might have taken off the Malignity of the Accuſation; but, as there has been no Proof made to your Lordſhips, can only be deemed at this Time my own Aſſertion: But that I muſt leave to your Lordſhips.

My Lords, I have been informed of this Intention of the Family before; and your Lordſhips, I hope, will be ſo good to conſider, the Agony of Mind a Man muſt be under, when his Liberty and Property are both attacked: My Lords, under theſe unhappy Circumſtances, though the Plea I have attempted was not ſufficient to acquit me to your Lordſhips, according to the Laws of this Country; yet I hope your Lordſhips will think, that Malice, repreſented by the Counſel for the Crown, could not ſubſiſt; as I was ſo unhappy as to have no Perſon preſent at the Time of the fatal Accident, it was impoſſible for me to ſhew your Lordſhips, that I was not at that Inſtant poſſeſſed of my Reaſon.

As the Circumſtances of my Caſe are freſh in your Lordſhips Memories, I hope your Lordſhips will, in Compaſſion to my Infirmities, be kind enough to recommend me to his Majeſty's Clemency.

My Lords, As I am uncertain whether my unhappy Caſe is within the late Act of Parliament, if your Lordſhips ſhould be of Opinion that it is, I humbly hope the Power of reſpiting the Execution will be extended in my Favour, that I may have an Opportunity of preparing myſelf for the great Event, and that my Friends may be permitted to have Acceſs to me.

If any Thing I have offered ſhould be thought improper, I hope your Lordſhips will impute it to the great Diſtreſs I am under at this Juncture.

L. H. S. Has your Lordſhip any Thing elſe to offer?

Earl Ferrers. No.

L. H. S. Make Proclamation for Silence whilſt Judgment is giving.

Serjeant at Arms. Oyez, Oyez, Oyez! Our Sovereign Lord the King doth ſtrictly charge and command all Manner of Perſons to keep Silence, whilſt Judgment is giving, upon Pain of Impriſonment.

Lord High Steward.

Lawrence Earl Ferrers,

HIS Majeſty, from his Royal and Equal Regard to Juſtice, and his ſteady Attention to our Conſtitution, (which hath endeared him in a wonderful Manner to the univerſal Duty and Affection of his Subjects) hath commanded this Inquiry to be made, upon the Blood of a very ordinary Subject, againſt your Lordſhip, a Peer of this Realm: Your Lordſhip hath been arraigned; hath pleaded, and put yourſelf on your Peers; and they (whoſe Judicature is founded and ſubſiſts in Wiſdom, Honour, and Juſtice) have found your Lordſhip unanimouſly Guilty of the Felony and Murder charged in the Indictment.

It is uſual, my Lord, for Courts of Juſtice, before they pronounce the dreadful Sentence ordained by the Law, to open to the Priſoner the Nature of the Crime of which he is convicted; not in order to aggravate or afflict, but to awaken the Mind to a due Attention to, and Conſideration of, the unhappy Situation into which he hath brought himſelf.

My Lord, the Crime of which your Lordſhip is found Guilty, Murder, is incapable of Aggravation; and it is impoſſible, but that, during your Lordſhip's long Confinement, you muſt have reflected upon it, repreſented to your Mind in its deepeſt Shades, and with all its Train of diſmal and deteſtable Conſequences.

As your Lordſhip hath received no Benefit, ſo you can derive no Conſolation from that Refuge you ſeemed almoſt aſhamed to take, under a pretended Inſanity; ſince it hath appeared to us all, from your Croſs-examination of the King's Witneſſes, that you recollected the minuteſt Circumſtances of Facts and Converſations, to which you and the Witneſſes only could be privy, with the Exactneſs of a Memory more than ordinarily found; it is therefore as unneceſſary as it would be painful to me, to dwell longer on a Subject ſo black and dreadful.

It is with much more Satisfaction, that I can remind your Lordſhip, that though, from the preſent Tribunal, before which you now ſtand, you can receive nothing but ſtrict and equal Juſtice; yet you are ſoon to appear before an Almighty Judge, whoſe unfathomable Wiſdom is able, by Means incomprehenſible to our narrow Capacities, to reconcile Juſtice with Mercy; but your Lordſhip's Education muſt have informed you, and you are now to remember, ſuch Beneficence is only to be obtained by deep Contrition, ſound, unfeigned, and ſubſtantial Repentance.

Confined ſtrictly, as your Lordſhip muſt be, for the very ſhort Remainder of your Life; according to the Proviſion of the late Act; yet, from the Wiſdom of the Legiſlature, which, to prevent as much as poſſible this heinous and horrid Offence of Murder, hath added Infamy to Death; you will be ſtill, if you pleaſe, intitled to converſe and communicate with the ableſt Divines of the Proteſtant Church, to whoſe pious Care and Conſolation, in fervent Prayer and Devotion, I moſt cordially recommend your Lordſhip.

Nothing remains for me, but to pronounce the dreadful Sentence of the Law; and the Judgment of the Law is, and this High Court doth award,

" That You, Lawrence Earl Ferrers, return to the Priſon of the " Tower, from whence you came; from thence you muſt be led " to the Place of Execution, on Monday next, being the 21ſt Day " of this Inſtant April; and when you come there, you muſt be " hanged by the Neck till you are dead, and your Body muſt be " diſſected and anatomized."

" And God Almighty be merciful to your Soul!"

L. H. S. Lieutenant of the Tower, Take the Priſoner from the Bar.

Which being done, Proclamation was made for Silence, as uſual.

L. H. S. My Lords, This Trial being at an End, nothing remains to be done here, but to determine the Commiſſion.—Lords. Ay, Ay.

L. H. S. Let Proclamation be made for diſſolving the Commiſſion of High Steward.

Serjeant at Arms. Oyez, Oyez, Oyez! Our Sovereign Lord the King does ſtrictly charge and command all Manner of Perſons here preſent, and that have here attended, to depart hence in the Peace of God, and of our ſaid Sovereign Lord the King; for his Grace my Lord High Steward of Great Britain intends now to diſſolve his Commiſſion.

Then the White Staff being delivered to the Lord High Steward, by the Gentleman Uſher of the Black Rod, upon his Knee, his Grace ſtood up uncovered; and, holding the Staff in both his Hands, broke it in two, and declared the Commiſſion to be diſſolved; and then leaving the Chair, came down to the Woolpack, and ſaid, Is it your Lordſhips Pleaſure to adjourn to the Chamber of Parliament?—Lords. Ay, Ay.

L. H. S. This Houſe is adjourned to the Chamber of Parliament.

Then the Lords and others returned in the ſame Order they came down.

And the Priſoner was carried back to the Tower of London.

LVII. The Trial of WILLIAM Lord BYRON, Baron BYRON of Rochdale, for the Murder of WILLIAM CHAWORTH, Esq. before the Right Honourable the HOUSE OF PEERS, in Westminster Hall, in full Parliament, on Tuesday the 16th, and Wednesday the 17th of April, 1765.

Tuesday, April the 16th, 1765.

In the Court erected in WESTMINSTER-HALL, for the TRIAL of WILLIAM Lord BYRON, for the Murder of William Chaworth, Esquire.

ABOUT Eleven of the Clock the Lords came from their own House into the Court erected in Westminster-Hall, for the Trial of William Lord Byron, in the Manner following:

The Lord High Steward's Gentlemen Attendants, Two and Two.

The Clerks Assistant to the House of Lords, and the Clerk of the Parliament.

Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, bearing the King's Commission to the Lord High Steward, and the Clerk of the Crown in the King's Bench.

The Masters in Chancery, Two and Two.

The Judges, Two and Two.

The Peers eldest Sons, Two and Two.

Peers Minors, Two and Two.

Chester and Somerset Heralds.

Four Serjeants at Arms with their Maces, Two and Two.

The Yeoman Usher of the House.

The Barons, Two and Two, beginning with the youngest Baron.

The Bishops, Two and Two.

The Viscounts and other Peers, Two and Two.

The Lord Privy Seal and Lord President.

The Archbishop of York and the Archbishop of Canterbury.

Four Serjeants at Arms with their Maces, Two and Two.

The Serjeant at Arms attending the Great Seal, and Purse-Bearer.

Then Garter King at Arms, and the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod carrying the White Staff before the Lord High Steward.

Robert Earl of Northington, Chancellor of Great-Britain, Lord High Steward, alone, his Train borne.

His Royal Highness the Duke of Gloucester, his Train borne.

His Royal Highness the Duke of York, his Train borne.

The Lords being placed in their proper Seats, and the Lord High Steward upon the Woolpack, the House was resumed.

The Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, having his Majesty's Commission to the Lord High Steward in his Hand, and the Clerk of the Crown in the King's Bench, standing before the Clerk's Table with their Faces towards the State, made Three Reverences; the First at the Table, the Second in the Midway, and the Third near the Woolpack; then kneeled down; and the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, on his Knee, presented the Commission to the Lord High Steward, who delivered the same to the Clerk of the Crown in the King's Bench to read: Then rising, they made Three Reverences, and returned to the Table. And then Proclamation was made for Silence, in this Manner:

Serjeant at Arms. Oyez, Oyez, Oyez! Our Sovereign Lord the King strictly charges and commands all Manner of Persons to keep Silence, upon Pain of Imprisonment.

Then the Lord High-Steward stood up, and spoke to the Peers.

Lord High Steward. His Majesty's Commission is about to be read: Your Lordships are desired to attend to it in the usual Manner; and all others are likewise to stand up uncovered, while the Commission is reading.

All the Peers uncovered themselves; and they, and all others, stood up uncovered, while the Commission was read.

GEORGE R.

GEORGE the Third, by the Grace of God, of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, and so forth, To Our Right Trusty and Right Well-beloved Cousin and Councillor Robert Earl of Northington, Our Chancellor of Great Britain, Greeting; Know ye, That whereas William Byron, Baron Byron of Rochdale, late of the Parish of St. James, within the Liberty of Westminster, in our County of Middlesex, in Our Court at Westminster, in the said County of Middlesex, before Our Justices assigned to hold Pleas before Us, stands indicted upon the Oath of Twelve Jurors, good and lawful Men of the said County of Middlesex, then and there sworn and charged to enquire for Us for the Body of the said County, of Felony and Murder, by him the said William Byron, Baron Byron of Rochdale, done and committed; We, considering that Justice is an excellent Virtue, and pleasing to the Most High; and being willing that the said William Byron, Baron Byron of Rochdale, of and for the Felony and Murder whereof he is indicted as aforesaid before Us, in Our present Parliament, according to the Law and Custom of Our Kingdom of Great Britain, may be heard, examined, sentenced, and adjudged; and that all other Things which are necessary on this Occasion may be duly exercised and executed; and for that the Office of High-Steward of Great Britain (whose Presence upon this Occasion is required) is now vacant (as We are informed); We, very much confiding in your Fidelity, Prudence, provident Circumspection, and Industry, have, for this Cause, ordained and constituted you Steward of Great Britain, to bear, execute, and exercise, for this Time, the said Office, with all Things due and belonging to the same Office in this Behalf: And therefore We command you, that you diligently set about the Premises, and, for this Time, do exercise and execute, with Effect, all those Things which belong to the Office of Steward of Great Britain, and which are required in this Behalf. In Witness whereof, We have caused these our Letters to be made Patent. Witness Ourself at Westminster, the Fifteenth Day of April, in the Fifth Year of Our Reign.

By the KING Himself, signed with his own Hand.

Yorke and Yorke.

Serjeant at Arms. God save the King.

Then Garter, and the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, after Three Reverences, kneeling, jointly presented the White Staff to his Grace the Lord High Steward: And then his Grace, attended by Garter, Black Rod, and the Purse-Bearer (making his proper Reverences towards the Throne) removed from the Woolpack to an armed Chair, which was placed on the uppermost Step but one of the Throne, as it was prepared for that Purpose; and then seated himself in the Chair, and delivered the Staff to the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod on his Right Hand, the Purse-Bearer holding the Purse on his Left.

Clerk of the Crown. Serjeant at Arms, make Proclamation.

Serjeant at Arms. Oyez, Oyez, Oyez! Our Sovereign Lord the King strictly charges and commands all Manner of Persons to keep Silence, upon Pain of Imprisonment.

Then the Clerk of the Crown, by Direction of the Lord High Steward, read the Certiorari, and the Return thereof, together with the Caption of the Indictment, and the Indictment certified thereupon, against William Lord Byron; in hæc verba:

GEORGE the Third, by the Grace of God, of Great-Britain, France, and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, and so forth, To Our Right Trusty and Well-beloved William Lord Mansfield, Our Chief Justice appointed to hold Pleas before Us, Greeting; We being willing, for certain Reasons, that all and singular Indictments of whatsoever Felonies and Murders whereof William Byron, Baron Byron of Rochdale, late of the Parish of St. James, within the Liberty of Westminster, in Our County of Middlesex, is indicted before you (as is said) be determined before Us, and not elsewhere; do command you, that you do send under your Seal before Us, in Our Parliament, immediately after the Receipt of this Our Writ, all and singular the Indictments aforesaid, with all Things touching the same, by whatsoever Name the said William Byron, Baron Byron of Rochdale, is called in the same; together with this Writ, that We may cause further to be done thereon, what of Right, and according to the Law and Custom of England We shall see fit to be done. Witness Ourself at Westminster, the Twenty-eighth Day of February, in the Fifth Year of Our Reign.

Yorke and Yorke.

Label. To the Right Honourable William Lord Mansfield, Chief Justice appointed to hold Pleas before the King himself, a Writ of Certiorari, to certify into the Upper House of Parliament the Indictment found against William Byron, Baron Byron of Rochdale, for Murder, returnable immediately before the King in Parliament.

Yorke and Yorke.

Indorsed. BY Order of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, in Parliament assembled, by virtue of the within Writ to me directed, I send to our Sovereign Lord the King, in this present Parliament under my Seal, the Indictment within mentioned, with all Things touching the same, in certain Schedules hereunto annexed, as I am within commanded.

Sworn in Court.

A true Bill.

Lord High Steward. Is it your Lordships Pleasure, that the Judges have Leave to be covered?

Lords. Ay, ay.

Clerk of the Crown. Serjeant at Arms, make Proclamation for the Lieutenant of the Tower to bring his Prisoner to the Bar.

Serj. at Arms. Oyez! Oyez! Oyez! Lieutenant of the Tower of London, bring forth William Lord Byron, your Prisoner, to the Bar, pursuant to the Order of the House of Lords.

Then William Lord Byron was brought to the Bar by the Deputy-Governor of the Tower, having the Ax carried before him by the Gentleman-Goaler, who stood with it on the left Hand of the Prisoner, with the Edge turned from him. The Prisoner when he approached the Bar made three Reverences, and then fell upon his Knees at the Bar.

L. H. S. Your Lordship may rise.

Then the Prisoner rose up, and bowed to his Grace the Lord High Steward, and to the House of Peers; which Compliment was returned him by his Grace, and the Lords.

Then Proclamation having been again made for Silence, the Lord High Steward spake to the Prisoner, as follows:

Lord High Steward.

William Lord Byron,

YOUR Lordship is unhappily brought to this Bar to answer a heavy and dreadful Accusation, for you are charged with the Murder of a Fellow-Subject.

The Solemnity and awful Appearance of this Judicature must naturally embarrass and discompose your Lordship's Spirits, whatever internal Resource you may have in Conscience to support you in your Defence.

It may be therefore not improper for me to remind your Lordship, that you are to be tried by the fixed and settled Laws of a free Country, framed only to protect the Innocent, to distinguish the Degrees of Offence, and vindictive only against Malice and premeditated Mischief.

Homicide, or the Killing of a Fellow-Creature, is by the Wisdom of the Law distinguished into Classes; if it by Accident ariseth from Necessity, or is without Malice, it is not Murder; and of these Distinctions, warranted by Evidence, every Person, though accused by a Grand Jury, standing indifferent, is at full Liberty to avail himself.

As an additional Consolation, your Lordship will reflect that you have the Happiness to be tried by the supreme Judicature of this Nation; that you can receive nothing from your Peers but Justice, distributed with Candor; delivered too under the strongest Obligation upon noble Minds, Honour. These Considerations will, I hope, compose your Lordship's Mind, fortify your Spirits, and leave you free for your Defence.

Before I conclude, I am, by Command of the House, to inform your Lordship, and all others that shall have Occasion to speak to the Court during the Trial, that they are to address themselves to the Lords in general, and not to any Lord in particular.

Lord High Steward. William Lord Byron, your Lordship will do well to give Attention, while you are arraigned on your Indictment.

Then Proclamation was made for Silence.

After which, William Lord Byron was arraigned, in the Form of the said Indictment against him, by the Clerk of the Crown in the King's Bench.

Clerk of the Crown. How say you, William Lord Byron, are you guilty of the Felony and Murder whereof you stand indicted, or not guilty?

William Lord Byron. Not Guilty, my Lords.

Clerk of the Crown. Culprit, how will your Lordship be tried?

William Lord Byron. By God and my Peers.

Cl. of the Crown. God send your Lordship a good Deliverance.

Cl. of the Crown. Serjeant at Arms, make Proclamation.

Serj. at Arms. Oyez! Oyez! Oyez! All Manner of Persons that will give Evidence, on Behalf of our Sovereign Lord the King, against William Lord Byron, the Prisoner at the Bar, let them come forth, and they shall be heard; for now he stands at the Bar upon his Deliverance.

L. H. S. My Lords, the Distance of this Place from the Bar is so great, that I must desire your Lordships Leave to go down to the Table for the Convenience of hearing.

Lords. Ay, ay.

Then his Grace removed to the Table.

Mr. CORNWALL.

May it please your Lordships,

WILLIAM Lord BYRON stands indicted by the Grand Jury of the County of Middlesex, for Murder; and the Indictment sets forth, That William Lord Byron, on the Twenty-sixth Day of January, in the Fifth Year of his present Majesty's Reign, with Force and Arms, at the Parish of Saint James, in the County of Middlesex, feloniously, wilfully, and of his Malice aforethought, did make an Assault in and upon one William Chaworth, Esq. and with a Sword drawn, then in his right Hand, in and upon the left Side of the Belly of the said William Chaworth, did strike and stab, giving to the said William Chaworth a mortal Wound, of the Depth of six Inches, and of the Breadth of half an Inch; of which Wound the said William Chaworth, at the Parish of St. James aforesaid, and also at the Parish of St. George, Hanover-square, languished from the Twenty-sixth Day of January aforesaid, till the Twenty-seventh Day of the same Month, in the Year aforesaid, and then and there of the said mortal Wound died; and the Jurors aforesaid, upon their Oath, say, That the said William Lord Byron, the said William Chaworth, in Manner aforesaid, feloniously, wilfully, and of his Malice aforethought, did kill and murder.

To this Indictment the noble Prisoner at the Bar has pleaded Not Guilty, and hath put himself upon your Lordships his Peers for Trial.

It is our Duty to produce to your Lordships the Evidence we have to offer in Support of this Charge; your Lordships will determine upon that Evidence, and give such Judgment as your Lordships shall think the Justice of the Case requires.

Mr. Attorney-General, Sir FLETCHER NORTON, Knight.

May it please your Lordships,

I AM likewise of Counsel for this Prosecution; and by the Indictment which has been opened, your Lordships have heard that the noble Prisoner at the Bar is charged with one of the highest Offences that human Nature is capable of committing, nothing less than shedding the Blood of a Fellow-Creature.

My Lords, I need not enlarge upon this Subject, the Crime itself is incapable of Aggravation; it is my Province to lay before your Lordships the State of the Evidence which will be produced in Support of the Charge; and as it is not my Duty, so neither is it my Inclination to exaggerate any Thing upon this Occasion; but publick Justice requires, that the whole Proof should be brought fully and fairly before your Lordships.

I hope it will neither be thought impertinent or improper for me to make some general Observations upon the Law, which may respect the Offence now under Consideration; the Utility and Application of which your Lordships will see in the Course of the Evidence.

My Lords, as it will be proved beyond a Doubt, in the Course of these Proceedings, that the Deceased fell by the Hands of the noble Prisoner at the Bar, I shall therefore take that Fact for granted; and if so, every Presumption in Law arises against him; and it will be incumbent upon the Prisoner to exculpate himself in the best Manner he is able; for tho' every Homicide is not Murder, yet every Homicide, prima facie, is so, and it is required of the Prisoner to make out, that the Fact of Killing in this Case was not committed under Circumstances which will make it Murder: And I admit the Law will allow the Prisoner to shew the Homicide justifiable, excuseable, or done under such Circumstances of Extenuation, as to induce your Lordships to think it was not done with Malice aforethought, and then it will be Manslaughter, and not Murder.

It is clear in Point of Law, if there be a Quarrel, and the Parties afterwards have Time to cool, and after that they fight, and one falls, he who survives has been guilty of Murder; or if the Manner in which the Fact was done bespeaks a Depravity of Mind, and a Wickedness of Intention, that will make it Murder.

My Lords, as this Case must depend upon a very nice and strict Enquiry into all the Circumstances that accompanied the Fact, in order to mark the Offence with one or other of these Denominations (for an Offence Manslaughter is in the Eye of the Law), so I am persuaded your Lordships will attend carefully to the Evidence which may be produced; and I am convinced we shall hear such a Judgment from your Lordships, as, under all the Circumstances of the Case, Justice shall require: And this must afford Matter of the greatest Consolation to the noble Prisoner at the Bar (if he is innocent), because your Lordships Understanding cannot be deceived, nor your Judgment biassed: But, on the other Hand, if his Lordship is guilty of the Offence laid to his Charge, he must know that no Art, no Subterfuge, no Management will avail him; Innocence, and Innocence alone can be his Support and Defence.

Having said this, give me Leave to observe to your Lordships the Happiness of this Constitution under so gracious a Prince as his present Majesty, who aims at no other Rule of Government than that which the Law prescribes, and has no other Wish than that in all Cases, and over all Persons indiscriminately, the Law should be impartially administered; and when the Laws are thus administered, and allowed their due Force, such is the Excellency of the English Constitution, that the meanest Subject is not beneath their Protection, nor the highest beyond their Reach; thus to be governed is the full Perfection of Civil Liberty.

On the 26th of January last, the noble Prisoner at the Bar, the Deceased, and many more Gentlemen of Rank and Fortune of the County of Nottingham met, as they usually did once a Week, to dine together at the Star-and-Garter Tavern, in Pall-Mall: In the Course of the Dinner there was nothing but Good-humour. About Seven at Night the Conversation turned upon the Subject of Game: Upon this Occasion Mr. Chaworth had something of a Dispute with the Gentleman who sat next him, about the best Method of preserving the Game. The Prisoner at the Bar interfered upon that Subject, and said, in his Opinion, the Way to have Game was to take no Care of it. Mr. Chaworth happened to be of a different Opinion, and thought the best Way was to be strict with Poachers, and thereby preserve the Game: This drew on some Altercation. Mr. Chaworth added, that he believed there was not a Hare in that Part of the Country, but what was preserved by himself or Sir Charles Sedley; upon which Lord Byron offered a Wager of an Hundred Pounds, that he had more Game in a Manor or Manors of his, than Mr. Chaworth had upon any that belonged to him. Your Lordships will find a little Difference in the Account given by the Witnesses, touching the Terms of the Wager; but you will have them from the Witnesses themselves, who are all Gentlemen of Character, and as they have most of them been already examined before the Coroner, and again before the Grand Jury, they did not choose to be examined by those concerned in the Prosecution; but said, when they were called and examined before your Lordships, they should speak the Truth, as doubtless they will; and I only mention this Circumstance as an Excuse for myself, if I should not happen to open the Evidence exactly as it may come out from the Witnesses.

My Lords, Mr Chaworth having said he was willing to accept the Wager, said it would be proper to make a Memorandum of it, and called for Pen, Ink, and Paper. After that, it happened that Sir Charles Sedley's Manors were mentioned; upon which the noble Prisoner at the Bar said, with some Degree of Heat, Sir Charles Sedley's Manors! where are his Manors?: To which Mr. Chaworth replied, Why, Hucknel and Nuttall: His Lordship then said, I know no Manors of Sir Charles Sedley's; to which Mr. Chaworth replied, Sir Charles Sedley has a Manor, the Manor of Nuttall is his, and one of his Ancestors bought it out of my Family; and if your Lordship wants any further Information about his Manors, Sir Charles Sedley lives in Dean-Street, and your Lordship knows where to find me in Berkley-Row.

My Lords, whether this was a real Dispute between Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth, about Sir Charles Sedley's Manors, or whether it was used only as a Means of affronting and quarrelling with each other, it is impossible for me to say; however, after this Quarrel, the Parties staid in Company together for a considerable Time, I believe near an Hour, during which Time, both the noble Prisoner at the Bar and Mr. Chaworth entered into Conversation with the Company that sat next to them upon indifferent Subjects, and particularly Lord Byron was observed to be in good Humour.

The Company thought there was an End of the Quarrel, and that no more would be heard of it. About Eight, an Hour after the first Quarrel, Mr. Chaworth went first out of the Room, and it happened a Gentleman went after him to the Door, and he asked the Gentleman, whether he had observed the Dispute between him and Lord Byron? He said, he had in Part; upon which Mr. Chaworth asked him, if he thought he had gone far enough? To which Mr. Donston (for that was the Gentleman's Name) said, he thought he had gone too far; it was a silly Business, and neither of them should think of it again.

Mr. Chaworth going down Stairs, Mr. Donston returned into the Room, and, as he opened the Door, he met Lord Byron coming out. I must now state to your Lordships the Evidence as it arose from the Declarations of the Deceased, as well as the Facts, which will be proved; for, both being legal Evidence, they just stand under the same Predicament, and the Evidence being thus put, will come in proper Order in Point of Time. The Prisoner at the Bar saw the Deceased upon the Stairs, and said to him, Sir, I want to speak with you. They then went down one Pair of Stairs, and one or other of them called out, Waiter; which of them it was I am not instructed to say. Upon the Waiter's coming, the noble Prisoner at the Bar asked him, whether either of these two Rooms (pointing to them) were empty? The Waiter opened one of the Doors, and went in, with a poor little Tallow Candle, which was all the Light, except a dull Fire, that was in the Room: The Waiter set the Candle upon the Table, and Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth went into the Room. When they were there, the Prisoner asked Mr. Chaworth, whether he was to have Recourse to Sir Charles Sedley to account for the Business of the Game, or to him? The Deceased said, To me, my Lord; and if you have any Thing to say, it would be best to shut the Door, lest we should be overheard. Mr. Chaworth went to shut the Door, and turning from the Door he saw the noble Prisoner just behind him, with his Sword half-drawn, or nigh drawn, and at that Instant Lord Byron called out—Draw! The Business was soon done. Mr. Chaworth finding his Lordship in such a Situation, had nothing left for it but to draw as quickly as he could: By his own Account he has told, he gave the noble Prisoner the first Thrust, and intangled his Sword in his Waistcoat, and thought he had wounded him; after that, Lord Byron shortened his Sword, and stabbed Mr. Chaworth.

There was another Circumstance, the Bell rung; but by whom it was rung I know not. The Waiter came up, and seeing the Situation of the Two Gentlemen, was not a little frightened. He ran out again, and sent up the Master of the Tavern, who will tell your Lordships how he found them. I think they were grasped in each other's Arms, and Mr. Chaworth had his Sword in his Left-hand, and the noble Prisoner at the Bar had his in his Right-hand. The Deceased delivered his readily, but Lord Byron quitted his with Reluctance. One of them, I believe Lord Byron, ordered him to send for Relief: Upon this Mr. Hawkins the Surgeon was soon sent for, and as soon came; but before this, an Alarm was given in the Room above Stairs. The Company came down; they saw the terrible Situation of the unfortunate Gentleman. He told them, and your Lordships will hear, the Manner in which it happened, pretty nearly as I have stated it, at least I hope substantially so. When Mr. Hawkins came, it did not require a Person of his Skill and Penetration to find out that the Wound was mortal, for the Sword had gone in at one Side and out at the other. Mr. Hawkins ordered, no Doubt, what was proper, and had him conveyed Home. Mr. Chaworth had sent Messengers for the worthy Gentleman, who is the Prosecutor upon this Occasion. When he came, seeing so near a Friend and Relation in the Condition the Deceased then appeared, he immediately inquired what had brought him into that terrible Situation. His Evidence will be material; for Mr. Chaworth told Mr. Levinz the whole Transaction: And when the Deceased related to him the Circumstance, that Lord Byron had drawn, or nigh drawn, his Sword, when the Deceased was shutting the Door, Mr. Levinz asked him, Was that fair, Billy? The Deceased, who was one of the most benevolent, as well as one of the bravest of Men, gave no Answer to that Question. Mr. Levinz followed him with some other Questions, and the Answers (which he will give you an Account of) will amount in Substance to this, That Mr. Chaworth did not think, when Lord Byron carried him into the Room, that he had any Design of fighting him; but afterwards he thought he had got him to an Advantage, and that was the Reason of his fighting him.

My Lords, besides this, the Deceased having made his Will, the Person who attended him upon that Occasion, thought it proper that some Questions should be asked him, even though the Deceased was then in great Agonies (for he died soon afterwards); and the same Person wished, that the Answers might be reduced into Writing, which was accordingly done; and the Paper will be produced to your Lordships, and will speak for itself; and it will need no Comment.

It states, that Mr. Chaworth said, the noble Prisoner's Sword was half-drawn when he turned from the Door; that, knowing his Man, he immediately whipped out his own, and had the first Lunge at his Lordship, when Lord Byron shortened his Sword, and run him through; and then said, with an Oath, I have as much Courage as any Man in England. This is the Nature of the Case in general; and I believe I have stated the Evidence substantially, if not correctly true.

I cannot sit down without mentioning another Circumstance, which further evinces his Majesty's Love of Justice, and his inflexible Resolution to do Right, according to Law, without Favour or Affection, however high and respectable the noble Personage may be, who is concerned in this important Cause. Your Lordships all remember, upon another very solemn and melancholy Occasion, as the Event proved, the then noble Prisoner had killed a Person of very inferior Rank, who left neither a Fortune nor Relations equal to the Expence of a Prosecution of this Sort. His Majesty, from his Love of Justice, sustained the whole Charge, and committed the Care of that Prosecution to his own Servants. But in the present Instance, the Deceased having a large Fortune, and the Inheritor of it being both able and willing to carry on this Prosecution, his Majesty, from the same Love of Justice, and that there might not be the Appearance of Partiality to the noble Prisoner at the Bar, has left the Prosecution, and the intire Management of it, in the Hands of the private Prosecutor, who, actuated with no Motive of Revenge, only hopes, that there will be a fair, but a strict and full Enquiry for the Blood of his deceased Relation; being thoroughly satisfied that your Lordships will hear with Patience, deliberate with Caution, and determine with Wisdom, Justice, and Truth.

Mr. Sollicitor General, William de Grey, Esq. } MY Lords, we will now proceed to call our Witnesses.

Call John Hewett, Esquire.

Who came to the Bar, and one of the Clerks held the Book to him, upon which he laid his Hand.

Clerk of the Crown. Hearken to your Oath.

The Evidence that you shall give on Behalf of our Sovereign Lord the King's Majesty, against William Lord Byron, the Prisoner at the Bar, shall be the Truth, the whole Truth, and nothing but the Truth.

So help you GOD.

Then he kissed the Book.

Mr. Sol. Gen. My Lords, I would ask Mr. Hewett if he was present at the Star and Garter in Pall-mall on the Twenty-sixth of January last?

Mr. Hewett. I was: I dined there, my Lords, the Twenty-sixth of January.

L. H. S. I cannot at this Distance hear One Word of what is said by the Witness.

Then one of the Clerks was sent down to the Bar to repeat the Questions put to the Witnesses, and their Answers.

Mr. Sol. Gen. I desire that Mr. Hewett will tell your Lordships if he was present at the Star and Garter Tavern on the Twenty-sixth of January last?

Mr. Hewett. I was: I dined at the Star and Garter on the Twenty-sixth of January last.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Was it any particular Meeting?

Mr. Hewett. It was: It was a County Club.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Of what County?

Mr. Hewett. The Gentlemen of Nottinghamshire.

Mr. Sol. Gen. I desire you will name the Gentlemen then present.

Mr. Hewett. Lord Byron, Francis Molineux, Esquire, John Sherwin, Esquire, the Honourable Thomas Willoughby, Frederick Montagu, Esquire, William Chaworth, Esquire, George Donston, Esquire, Charles Mellish junior, Esquire, Sir Robert Burdett, and myself.

Mr. Sol. Gen. At what Time did the Company dine?

Mr. Hewett. The Dinner was upon the Table precisely at a Quarter after Four o'Clock.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you recollect any Conversation relative to the Game?

Mr. Hewett. I do; it was some Time after Dinner before any such Conversation arose.

Mr. Sol. Gen. You will please to recollect the Time.

Mr. Hewett. At or about the Time the Drawer brought in the first Reckoning.

Mr. Sol. Gen. About what o'Clock might that be?

Mr. Hewett. It was about, or after Seven o'Clock. The Rule of the Club was to have the Bill and a Bottle brought at Seven o'Clock.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you recollect whether it was about Seven, or long after Seven o'Clock?

Mr. Hewett. I believe it could not be long after Seven o'Clock.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Had the Company at that Time drank much?

Mr. Hewett. I think the Company were all very ſober when we parted.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you mean that all the Company were very ſober when they parted at Seven o'Clock?

Mr. Hewett. I think ſo, my Lords.

Mr. Sol. Gen. I wiſh Mr. Hewett would recollect the Converſation that paſſed about the Game.

Mr. Hewett. What I heard relating to it was, a Diſpute in whoſe Manor, or in what Manor, there was the moſt Game.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you recollect by whom the Converſation was begun?

Mr. Hewett. The Converſation about the Game began from myſelf.

Mr. Sol. Gen. In what Manner?

Mr. Hewett. By ſtarting a Propoſition for preſerving the Game, beſides the preſent Syſtem of the Game Laws, which has very often, where I have been, produced agreeable Converſation.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Who were the Perſons in particular who entered into that Converſation?—Mr. Hewett. I believe all the Company, more or leſs.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you recollect what Mr. Chaworth ſaid on that Occaſion?

Mr. Hewett. I recollect hearing a Bett propoſed of one Hundred Pounds.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Was that the firſt Time Mr. Chaworth had ſaid any Thing upon the Subject?

Mr. Hewett. I cannot take upon me to ſay that: I can deſcribe the Order in which we ſat, and the Perſons I was in Converſation with at the Time the Bett was propoſed. Mr. Mountagu ſat next me on my Right-hand, I ſat at the Head of the Table, Mr. Willoughby ſat next Mr. Mountagu, Mr. Sherwin next him, Mr. Molineux next to him, Lord Byron was the laſt Perſon on the ſame Side the Table, and fartheſt from me on my Right-hand, and on my Left-hand Mr. Chaworth ſat next me, Mr. Donſton next, Mr. Melliſh next, Sir Robert Burdett next on that Side.—I was engaged in ſome Subject with Mr. Sherwin, and the Gentlemen on my Right-hand, at the Time when the Converſation paſſed between Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth.

Lord High Steward. Recollect yourſelf again.

Mr. Hewett. I was converſing with Mr. Sherwin, and the Gentlemen on my Right-hand, when I heard the Converſation about the Bett between Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Pleaſe to repeat exactly the Converſation between Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth, in the Order in which it paſſed.

Mr. Hewett. I cannot recollect any Thing farther of the Converſation than I have done.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Be ſo good as to repeat again what that Converſation was.

Mr. Hewett. It was a Diſpute in whoſe Manor or Manors there was the moſt Game.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Whoſe Manors were underſtood?

Mr. Hewett. I heard none mentioned at all; I imagined, as Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth were Neighbours in the Country, it was their Manors they were ſpeaking of.

Lord Mansfield. Mr. Hewett won't ſpeak as to Imagination; they can only aſk him as to Facts.

Mr. Sol. Gen. After this Bett was propoſed, what paſſed?

Mr. Hewett. I did not perceive any other Converſation between Mr. Chaworth and Lord Byron, but what I have mentioned, during the whole Day.

Mr. Sol. Gen. At what Time did the Converſation cloſe upon that Subject?——Mr. Hewett. Very ſoon, my Lords.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What Converſation followed upon that?

Mr. Hewett. A great Variety, I think.

Mr. Sol Gen. Did Mr. Chaworth join in that Converſation?

Mr. Hewett. He did, my Lords.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did Lord Byron join in any Converſation afterwards?

Mr. Hewett. Lord Byron being the fartheſt from me of any of the Company, I did not hear any Converſation of his afterwards; but I obſerved he was converſing with Mr. Molineux afterwards.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you obſerve whether Lord Byron ſeemed to be in or out of Humour after the Converſation about the Game?

Mr. Hewett. He ſeemed to be converſing with Mr. Molineux in good Humour.

Mr. Sol. Gen. How long did this Converſation laſt before Mr. Chaworth went out of the Room?—Mr. Hewett. It muſt be after Eight o'Clock before Mr. Chaworth went out of the Room.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did Mr. Chaworth, when he left the Room, take any body with him?

Mr. Hewett. Mr. Donſton was out of the Room at the ſame Time; but whether he went with him, or followed him, I do not know.

Mr. Sol. Gen. How long did Mr. Donſton ſtay out of the Room?

Mr. Hewett. A very ſhort Time, I think.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did Lord Byron leave the Room?

Mr. Hewett. Lord Byron left the Room at the very Inſtant Mr. Donſton came in.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Mr. Hewett ſays, that Mr. Donſton ſtayed out of the Room but a very ſhort Time; I ſhould be glad to know what he reckons a ſhort Time?

Mr. Hewett. I am not able to judge of the Time, but from the Hour of paying the Reckoning, and the Time I went into the Room where Mr. Chaworth was wounded.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What was the firſt Account you had of any Thing that paſſed after they quitted the Room?

Mr. Hewett. Almoſt at the Inſtant of Mr. Donſton's ſitting down, a Drawer came into the Room, and told us, that Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth were fighting.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What was the Drawer's Name?

Mr. Hewett. I don't know.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did the Company go down?

Mr. Hewett. They went down as faſt as they could.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you go into the Room where Mr. Chaworth and Lord Byron were?—Mr. Hewett. I did.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Where was the Room?

Mr. Hewett. It was a Back Room, up one Pair of Stairs.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What did you obſerve in that Room?

Mr. Hewett. I was lame at that Time; when I got into the Room, Mr. Chaworth was ſitting in an armed Chair, with his Left Leg on another Chair, and leaning his Head againſt Mr. Donſton.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you obſerve the Condition in which Mr. Chaworth was?—Mr. Hewett. I did. He was wounded in the Belly, and had his Hand upon it, and there was a good deal of Blood under the Chair.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did Mr. Chaworth ſay any Thing to you?

Mr. Hewett. He did.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What was that?

Mr. Hewett. He ſaid he was a dying Man, and gave me an Account of the Tranſaction, and of what had paſſed between my Lord Byron and him: He ſaid, Lord Byron told him he wanted to ſpeak to him; upon which they went into that Room together; that he told Lord Byron it was better to ſhut the Door that they might not be heard; that while he was doing it, Lord Byron bid him draw; that he ſaw his Lordſhip's Sword half-drawn, upon which he whipped out his own as quick as poſſibly he could to give him the Point, and he aſked how Lord Byron was, whether he was mortally wounded, as he thought he was about his Breaſt; when his Lordſhip ſhortened his Sword, and ſtabbed him in the Belly.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Was you in the Room when Mr. Hawkins the Surgeon was ſent for?—Mr. Hewett. I was not in the Room when Mr. Hawkins was ſent for; Mr. Hawkins was in the Room when I was there.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Was Lord Byron in the Room at that Time?

Mr. Hewett. Lord Byron came into the Room, and went up to Mr. Chaworth, and aſked him how he was?

Mr. Sol. Gen. What Anſwer was given by Mr. Chaworth?

Mr. Hewett. I don't recollect any.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Was you afterwards at Mr. Chaworth's Houſe that Night?

Mr. Hewett. I was.

Mr. Sol. Gen. At what Time was it you went, and what paſſed there?

Mr. Hewett. I do not remember exactly. I was one of the ſubſcribing Witneſſes to Mr. Chaworth's Will. It might be about or after Three o'Clock in the Morning.

Mr. Sol. Gen. How was your Time employed, when you left the Star and Garter, till you went to Mr. Chaworth's Houſe?

Mr. Hewett. Mr. Chaworth at different Times expreſſed himſelf as a dying Man: He aſked me twice after Lord Byron and his Wound. When I went from the Star and Garter, I went with Mr. Willoughby, in my own Coach, to fetch Mr. Levinz, for whoſe Coming Mr. Chaworth was extremely impatient.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What Relation was Mr. Levinz to Mr. Chaworth?

Mr. Hewett. His Uncle.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Where did Mr. Levinz live?

Mr. Hewett. At Kenſington Gore.

Duke of Newcaſtle. Did not Mr. Chaworth tell you he had mortally wounded Lord Byron; for I think you ſaid, when you came into the Room Mr. Chaworth aſked how Lord Byron did, for he thought he was wounded about his Breaſt?

Mr. Hewett. Mr. Chaworth aſked me how Lord Byron was, whether mortally wounded or not, for he thought he was about his Breaſt, when Lord Byron ſtabbed him into the Belly.

Earl of Morton. Did Mr. Chaworth mention that he had given Lord Byron a Wound? Or did you imagine it was his own Wound he was ſpeaking of?

Mr. Hewett. He enquired after a Wound he ſuppoſed he had given Lord Byron.

Lord Mansfield. My Lords, I believe it would be much better if your Lordſhips would forbear aſking any Queſtions of the Witneſs till the Counſel for the Crown ſhall have done with the Witneſs; then Lord Byron will aſk ſuch Queſtions as he may think proper, and afterwards your Lordſhips will have an Opportunity of aſking any Queſtions you pleaſe; otherwiſe I am afraid it will very much interrupt the Regularity of your Proceedings.

Mr. Sol. Gen. I was endeavouring to fix the Time when Mr. Hewett came to Mr. Chaworth's Houſe, by aſking him, How he was employed after he left the Star and Garter? Mr. Hewett ſaid, in ſeeking Mr. Levinz, who lived at Kenſington Gore.

Mr. Hewett. I ſent my Coach for Mr. Levinz ſome time before, and it returned without finding him; upon that I ſent to the Duke of Leeds's Houſe, to know if they knew any Thing of him there; they returned for Anſwer, that he dined there, and was gone Home.

Mr. Sol. Gen. I would aſk you, if there was any Converſation between Mr. Chaworth and you after the making his Will, in the Preſence of Mr. Willoughby?—Mr. Hewett. There was.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did Mr. Chaworth make any Declarations of what had paſſed at that Time?—Mr. Hewett. He did.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Were thoſe Declarations reduced into Writing?

Mr. Hewett. They were.

Mr. Sol. Gen. How long was it after they were made before they were reduced into Writing?

Mr. Hewett. We went down from the Bed-chamber into the Parlour.

Mr. Sol. Gen. There Mr. Partington delivered the Will into Mr. Levinz's Hands?

Mr. Hewett. No, I gave the Will into Mr. Levinz's Hands in the Parlour; then Minutes were made, and ſome Alterations made in them, till we were all agreed it was exactly what Mr. Chaworth had ſaid.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Were the Minutes tranſcribed again after thoſe Alterations were made?—Mr. Hewett. I believe they were.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Should you know the Paper Writing again, if you ſaw it?

Mr. Hewett. I ſhould not; but I remember that the Contents appeared to me exactly the ſame with the Account I have given your Lordſhips, except cept the Omission of the particular Term of Mr. Chaworth's whipping out his own Sword, and Lord Byron's shortening his.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Who wrote the Paper?

Mr. Hewett. Mr. Partington, an Attorney.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What became of it after it was written?

Mr. Hewett. I do not know.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you see Mr. Chaworth after that Paper was wrote?

Mr. Hewett. I did not.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did Mr. Chaworth continue in his perfect Understanding till the last Time you saw him?

Mr. Hewett. He did. I understood many of the Questions put to him to be with a View of knowing that.

Mr. Sol. Gen. My Lords, I shall ask this Witness no farther Questions.

Lord High Steward. Lord Byron, would you ask this Witness any Questions?

Lord Byron. Might not a great deal pass in Company that you did not hear?—Mr. Hewett. Certainly there might.

Lord Byron. Was not you Toast-master?—Mr. Hewett. I was.

Lord Byron. Might not your Attention to that Office be the Reason that you did not hear several Things that passed?

Mr. Hewett. It might; but my Ears are not the best at any Time.

Lord Byron. My Lords, I have done with this Witness.

Lord Mansfield. I would ask one single Question of this Witness, if he can answer it precisely.

Mr. Chaworth, as I took it, told him, that Lord Byron asked to speak to him; and when they went into the Room, Mr. Chaworth said, they had better shut the Door. Now I would ask, whether it was, Shut the Door, or Bolt the Door?

Mr. Hewett. I believe the Word was, Shut the Door.

Earl of Denbigh. I desire to know whether the Paper Writing was shewn to Mr. Chaworth after it was copied?

Mr. Hewett. Mr. Chaworth was in his Bed-chamber above Stairs, the Paper was drawn up in the Parlour below Stairs; and I went away very soon after.

Earl Poulet. Were the Alterations in the Paper you mentioned material ones, or not?

Mr. Hewett. I thought it my Duty to the Publick to make an exact Minute of the Circumstances of the Day, which Minute I have now in my Hand, and it corresponds exactly with that Paper, except in the Circumstance I mentioned to your Lordships.

Earl of Buckinghamshire. I desire Mr. Hewett may be asked, if he expected Mr. Chaworth would have come back again?

Mr. Hewett. I did imagine he would have come back.

Earl of Buckinghamshire. I desire to know, whether, when Mr. Chaworth went out of the Room, he took his Hat with him or not?

Mr. Hewett. I don't know; I did imagine he would come back immediately.

Lord High Steward. I do not remember any precise Answer to the Question, who it was that offered the Bett?

Mr. Hewett. Lord Byron proposed the Bett.

L. H. S. Are you sure it was Lord Byron?

Mr. Hewett. I think I am sure it was; and Mr. Chaworth took it up, as I thought, in a Joke, and called for a Pen and Ink.

L. H. S. Do you recollect how the Conversation about the Game finished?

Mr. Hewett. I cannot.

Earl of Dartmouth. Do you remember the particular Discourse on the Game between Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth?

Mr. Hewett. There were various Discourses upon the Subject by different People in Company; I was talking about the best Method for preserving Game, and the Discourse turned upon the Proposition, that it might be a sensible Way of preserving Game to make it the Property of the Owner of the Soil.

Earl of Dart. Was there any general Debate on the Subject of the Game?

Mr. Hewett. It might be as to the probable Ways of preserving the Game.

Earl of Dart. I think you said Lord Byron left the Room at the Instant Mr. Donston returned?

Mr. Hewett. I did.

Earl of Dart. I desire to know whether Lord Byron sat so as to hear what passed between Mr. Chaworth and Mr. Donston on the Stairs?

Mr. Hewett. It was a mighty odd-shaped Room that we were in; the Door opened very inconveniently; Mr. Donston was scarcely set down, when the Waiter came into the Room and told us Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth were fighting.

Duke of Richmond. Where did Mr. Chaworth sit?

Mr. Hewett. Mr. Chaworth sat next to me on my Left-hand.

Duke of Rich. Could any Thing remarkable pass at the Table without your hearing it?

Mr. Hewett. My Ears are but indifferent at best; and at that Instant of Time I was talking to a Gentleman that sat on my Right-hand.

Duke of Rich. When my Lord Byron asked Mr. Chaworth, Where is Sir Charles Sedley's Manor? did you understand it was in a friendly Manner, or what other Kind of Style?

Mr. Hewett. I have given that Part of my Evidence precisely in Mr. Chaworth's Words, and your Lordships will interpret them as you think proper.

Duke of Rich. If I understood you right, when you went into the Room, Mr. Chaworth was then with One Leg upon a Chair, and he enquired how Lord Byron did?

Mr. Hewett. He did, my Lords, twice, and once at another Time.

Lord Le Despencer. I should be glad to know, whether there was any considerable Distance of Time between Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth's going out of the Room?

Mr. Hewett. I cannot resolve that Question precisely.

Lord Ravensworth. You said the Bill was called for about Seven o'Clock?

Mr. Hewett. It is the Order of the Club to the Master of the House to bring a Bill at Seven o'Clock.

Lord Ravensworth. You said you had no fixed Guide to judge as to Point of Time, but by the Bill's being brought at Seven o'Clock; I desire to know by what Circumstances you guided yourself as to the Time in general?

Mr. Hewett. In Things of this Kind, one cannot be precise in every Thing; but I made a Minute, and I will tell you the Time as near as I can. My Watch was rather too fast. When I came into the Room to Mr. Chaworth, the Minute-Hand of my Watch was between Eight and Nine, and the Hour Hand approaching Nine: This was at the First Time I saw Mr. Chaworth in that Condition; the Time of my being a Witness to Mr. Chaworth's Will was a little after Three in the Morning.

L. H. S. So you said before.

L. H. S. Who do you call next, Mr. Sollicitor General?

Mr. Sollicitor General. We desire to call Frederick Mountagu, Esquire.

Frederick Mountagu, Esquire. (Who was sworn in like Manner.)

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. I desire to ask Mr. Mountagu, if he was not present at the Star and Garter on the Twenty-sixth of January last?

Mr. Mountagu. I was.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. I desire to know what Company was there?

Mr. Moun. There were Lord Byron, Mr. Chaworth, Mr. Willoughby, Mr. Hewett, Mr. Molineux, Mr. Donston, Mr. Sherwin, Mr. Mellish, and Sir Robert Burdett.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. Upon what Occasion were they met?

Mr. Moun. At a County Club.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. At what Time might the Company dine?

Mr. Moun. A little after Four.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. Do you remember any Dispute in the Company?

Mr. Moun. There arose a Dispute some time after Dinner.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. At what Hour?

Mr. Moun. As near as I can recollect, at Seven o'Clock.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. Do you remember the Subject of the Dispute?

Mr. Moun. The Dispute was upon Game.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. Who were the Persons that disputed?

Mr. Moun. The Persons that principally disputed were Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. Can you recollect the Conversation upon that Subject?

Mr. Moun. The Dispute was, whether it was better for the Preservation of Game to be remiss, or to be severe.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. Do you recollect particularly what Mr. Chaworth and Lord Byron said?

Mr. Moun. Mr. Chaworth was of Opinion that Severity was best, and Lord Byron that it was better to be remiss.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. I should be glad if Mr. Mountagu would repeat the whole Conversation that followed upon this.

Mr. Moun. The Dispute was upon the respective Manors of Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth, and upon Sir Charles Sedley's Manor; the Conversation ended upon that Point, with Mr. Chaworth's saying, and to the best of my Recollection repeating, If you have any Thing more to say, you will find Sir Charles Sedley in Dean-street, and me in Berkley-Row.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. Repeat what Conversation passed before Mr. Chaworth said those Words?

Mr. Moun. In general, the Conversation was upon Game.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. Do you recollect any Particulars of the Conversation?

Mr. Moun. No more than what I have repeated.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. Was this the Whole? Recollect.

Mr. Moun. I can, upon my own Recollection, speak to nothing more.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. Mr. Mountagu will recollect, if he can, whether there was any Dispute at all about the Ownership of any Manor or Manors?

Mr. Moun. There was some Mention made of a particular Manor, of Hucknell Manor.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. By whom?

Mr. Moun. By Mr. Chaworth, I think.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. Do you remember what was said about that Manor?

Mr. Moun. I think Lord Byron mentioned that Manor being his.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. Do you remember any Answer Mr. Chaworth made to that?——Mr. Moun. No.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. My Question to Mr. Mountagu was, whether he recollects any Conversation between Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth about Manors?

Mr. Moun. Yes, there was a great Deal of Conversation upon that Point.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. Whether Sir Charles Sedley was mentioned or not?

Mr. Moun. His Name was mentioned.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. How was Sir Charles Sedley's Name introduced?

Mr. Moun. I forget how it was first introduced.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. Recollect what was said about Sir Charles Sedley, when his Name was mentioned.

Mr. Moun. It was mentioned that he was severe upon his Manors.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. By whom was that said?

Mr. Moun. Either by Lord Byron or Mr. Chaworth, I forget which.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. How long did the Conversation about Game continue?

Mr. Moun. About Twenty Minutes, I should guess; but I cannot speak positively.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. Did the Company then break up?—Mr. Moun. No.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. How long might they continue afterwards together?

Mr. Moun. An Hour.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. Were the Company, after this Conversation, in good Humour or not?

Mr. Moun. They appeared to be in good Humour.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. Did Mr. Chaworth join in the Conversation?

Mr. Moun. He did.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. Did Lord Byron join in Conversation?

Mr.

Mr. Mountagu. He did, each with thoſe that ſat near.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. Did Lord Byron appear to be in good Humour?

Mr. Moun. I ſaw nothing to the contrary.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. At what Time did Mr. Chaworth leave the Company?

Mr. Moun. About Eight.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. Whether he left the Company alone, or did any Perſon go out with him?

Mr. Moun. I think Mr. Donſton followed him.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. Did Mr. Donſton return to the Company or not?

Mr. Moun. He did.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. How ſoon after his going out with Mr. Chaworth?

Mr. Moun. A few Minutes; I cannot ſpeak exactly to the Number.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. Did Lord Byron go out of the Room at that Time?

Mr. Moun. He did afterwards.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. Did Lord Byron go out of the Room before or after the Return of Mr. Donſton?

Mr. Moun. About that Time.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. At what Time of the Night might that be?

Mr. Moun. A very little after Eight.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. Had the Company drank moderately, or otherwiſe?

Mr. Moun. Moderately.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. When did you firſt hear of Mr. Chaworth after this?

Mr. Moun. I went down Stairs about that Time myſelf, and as I was going out of the Door of the Tavern, the Maſter of the Tavern called me back, and told me that Miſchief had happened; and that Mr. Hawkins was ſent for; I ran up Stairs with one of the Drawers.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. Who was that Drawer?

Mr. Moun. I do not recollect him in particular; I ordered him to fetch the Company from above Stairs, and went into the Room immediately myſelf, where I found Mr. Chaworth in a Chair bleeding, and Lord Byron ſtanding by him.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. Was there any Perſon in the Room when you came except Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth?

Mr. Moun. No, I think not; the Company above Stairs came in ſoon after.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. Give an Account of what paſſed between Mr. Chaworth and the Company, when they came in?

Mr. Moun. Mr. Chaworth firſt told me that he could not live Five Minutes; that he forgave Lord Byron, and hoped the World would forgive him too; that he had rather be in his own Situation than Lord Byron's; he ſaid the Affair paſſed in the Dark: Upon my deſiring an Explanation, he pointed to a very ſmall Tallow Candle, which ſtood upon the Table in the Room we were then in. Mr. Chaworth told me, that when Lord Byron and he came into the Room where they then were, Lord Byron aſked Mr. Chaworth, if he meant the Converſation upon Game to Sir Charles Sedley or to him? Mr. Chaworth ſaid, If you have any Thing to ſay, we had better ſhut the Door. After he had ſhut the Door, he turned, and ſaw Lord Byron drawing his Sword. He drew his, and made the Firſt Paſs, and in his Paſs he entangled his Sword in the Left Side of Lord Byron's Waiſtcoat; upon which Lord Byron ſhortened his Sword, and run him through the Body.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. Was this the Whole of what Mr. Chaworth ſaid?

Mr. Moun. I recollect nothing material beſides.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. Did Mr. Chaworth, from the Manner of relating this Affair, appear to be ſenſible or not?

Mr. Moun. Perfectly ſo.

Lord High Steward. Lord Byron, would your Lordſhip aſk this Witneſs any Queſtions?

Lord Byron declined aſking him any Queſtions.

L. H. S. How ſoon might you leave the Room after Mr. Donſton returned?---Mr. Moun. About a Minute.

L. H. S. You paſſed the Room upon the Firſt Floor as you went down?

Mr. Moun. I did, my Lords.

L. H. S. You heard no fighting?---Mr. Moun. None in the World.

L. H. S. When you went down, did you ſtop?

Mr. Moun. A few Minutes in calling a Chair.

L. H. S. Were you got into the Chair?

Mr. Moun. I was not got into the Chair; I was not out of the Door.

Lord Berkeley. Was any Provocation given by Lord Byron, that might induce Mr. Chaworth to ſay to my Lord, If you have any Thing more to ſay to me or Sir Charles Sedley, you will find Sir Charles Sedley in Dean-ſtreet, and I live in Berkley Row?

Mr. Moun. I do not recollect any particular Provocation.

Lord Berkeley. Do you recollect any Thing more than the general Account you have given?---Mr. Moun. Nothing further, my Lords.

Duke of Richmond. Did you ſit next Lord Byron?

Mr. Moun. No, my Lords, I did not ſit next Lord Byron.

Duke of Richmond. From the Diſcourſe that you heard, and what paſſed, did you expect a Duel?---Mr. Moun. No, my Lords, I did not.

Earl Temple. Did Mr. Chaworth ſay any Thing expreſſing his Imagination of his having wounded Lord Byron about the Breaſt?

Mr. Moun. I do not recollect any Thing that Mr. Chaworth ſaid as to that.

Earl Temple. From Mr. Chaworth's Expreſſions, did any Thing induce you to think he had wounded Lord Byron?---Mr. Moun. No.

Earl Talbot. After Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth went out of the Room, and were in the Room where they fought, Mr. Chaworth ſaid, he ſaw Lord Byron's Sword half-drawn when he turned from faſtening the Door; and the Gentleman who ſpoke before, ſaid Lord Byron called to Mr. Chaworth, and bid him draw; do you recollect whether Mr. Chaworth ſaid Lord Byron bid him draw?

Mr. Moun. In the Converſation that paſſed, I do not recollect that Circumſtance of Lord Byron's bidding him draw.

Earl Poulet. Was you nearer ſeated to the Door than Lord Byron was?

Mr. Moun. No, I was not; I was at the upper End of the Table.

Earl Poulet. Was the Door at the upper or lower End of the Room?

Mr. Moun. It was a very odd-ſhaped Room.

Earl Poulet. Did Lord Byron ſit near the Door?

Mr. Moun. No, he did not.

Earl Poulet. Do you think it was poſſible to hear what Words paſſed between Mr. Donſton and Mr. Chaworth upon the Stairs?

Mr. Moun. I ſhould think it impoſſible; there was a great Skreen before the Door.

Earl of Morton. Did not Mr. Chaworth ſay, the beſt Method of preſerving Game was by Severity, and Lord Byron by Remiſſneſs?

Mr. Moun. Yes, my Lords, it was ſo.

Mr. Stowe. My Lords, I would call George Donſton, Eſquire.

George Donſton, Eſquire. (Who was ſworn in like Manner.)

Mr. Stowe. Was you, on the 26th of January, at Dinner with Lord Byron and other Gentlemen at the Star and Garter?---Mr. Donſton. I was.

Mr. Stowe. Name the Gentlemen that compoſed the Company.

Mr. Don. Lord Byron, Mr. Hewett, Mr. Willoughby, Mr. Chaworth, Mr. Sherwin, Mr. Mountagu, Sir Robert Burdett, Mr. Charles Meliſh, and myſelf.

Mr. Stowe. Was there any Diſcourſe between Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth?---Mr. Don. There was.

Mr. Stowe. What was the Subject of that Diſcourſe?

Mr. Don. It was about their reſpective Manors in the Country, and the Quantity of Game upon them.

Mr. Stowe. Do you recollect the Manner of the Converſation that paſſed between Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth?

Mr. Don. In general it was upon the beſt Method of preſerving Game.

Mr. Stowe. What did Lord Byron give as his Opinion upon that Diſcourſe?---Mr. Don. Lord Byron thought it was beſt not to be too ſtrict.

Mr. Stowe. What was Mr. Chaworth's Opinion?

Mr. Don. Mr. Chaworth was for being ſtrict, and for putting the Game-Laws in Execution.

Mr. Stowe. Did any Thing paſs relating to any other Gentlemen, or the Eſtates of any other Gentlemen?

Mr. Don. Yes, Sir Charles Sedley's Manor was mentioned.

Mr. Stowe. By whom was it mentioned?--Mr. Don. By Mr. Chaworth.

Mr. Stowe. What did Mr. Chaworth ſay upon the mentioning Sir Charles Sedley's Manor?

Mr. Don. He was ſpeaking of the Quantity of Game upon Sir Charles Sedley's Manor.

Mr. Stowe. Was there any Bett mentioned relative to this Diſcourſe concerning the Game?---Mr. Don. Yes, there was a Bett propoſed.

Mr. Stowe. By whom propoſed?

Mr. Don. I am not very ſure by whom it was propoſed.

Mr. Stowe. Was it propoſed either by Lord Byron or Mr. Chaworth?

Mr. Don. Yes, by one of them.

Mr. Stowe. Was any Bett made or not?

Mr. Don. There was no Bett made.

Mr. Stowe. At what Time did this Converſation paſs?

Mr. Don. I believe about Seven o'Clock.

Mr. Stowe. Did Lord Byron or Mr. Chaworth continue in that Company any Time after this Diſcourſe was over?

Mr. Don. Yes, for ſome Time after.

Mr. Stowe. Whether after the Bett propoſed, there was any other Converſation that paſſed between Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth?

Mr. Don. Yes; I remember, upon Sir Charles Sedley's Manor being mentioned, Lord Byron aſked which was Sir Charles Sedley's Manor.

Mr. Stowe. Of whom did Lord Byron aſk that?

Mr. Don. Of Mr. Chaworth.

Mr. Stowe. Did Mr. Chaworth make any Anſwer?

Mr. Don. He anſwered, Nuttall.

Mr. Stowe. Did Mr. Chaworth mention any Thing more upon that Subject to Lord Byron; and what?

Mr. Don. He did, after Lord Byron had repeated the ſame Queſtion.

Mr. Stowe. What was further mentioned by Mr. Chaworth?

Mr. Don. Mr. Chaworth ſaid, upon his Lordſhip's aſking him over again which was Sir Charles Sedley's Manor; Surely, my Lord, you will allow Nuttall to be Sir Charles Sedley's.

Mr. Stowe. Was any Thing more ſaid reſpecting Sir Charles Sedley, or his Manors, or where he lived?

Mr. Don. Yes, Mr. Chaworth went on to ſay, Sir Charles Sedley lives in ſuch a Place, and can beſt inform you relating to his Manors; your Lordſhip knows where to find me in Berkley-Row.

Mr. Stowe. Did this conclude the Converſation on this Subject, or was any Thing more ſaid at that Time?

Mr. Don. The Converſation ended with the Words I have laſt ſaid.

Mr. Stowe. Did you ſtay in the Room till the Time Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth went out?

Mr. Don. I ſtaid till Mr. Chaworth went out.

Mr. Stowe. What Diſtance of Time might that be from the End of the Converſation to Mr. Chaworth's going out of the Room?

Mr. Don. I think it might be about an Hour.

Mr. Stowe. Did Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth, during that Hour, enter into Converſation with one another, or with the reſt of the Company?

Mr. Don. I am not ſure whether they did converſe with each other; they did with the reſt of the Company.

Mr. Stowe. At what Diſtance from one another did they ſit?

Mr. Don. At a pretty conſiderable Diſtance.

Mr. Stowe. Do you recollect any ſubſequent Converſation that Lord Byron entered into, except what you have mentioned?

Mr. Don. I do not; I was at a Diſtance from Lord Byron.

Mr. Stowe. At what Time was it that Mr. Chaworth went out of the Room?

Mr. Don. About Eight o'Clock; I am not quite ſure as to the Time.

Mr. Stowe. Do you know the Purpoſe of his going out of the Room?

Mr. Don. He was going down Stairs; I believe into the Yard.

M. Stowe. Did he take his Hat with him when he went out of the Room?---Mr. Don. I think he did not.

Mr. Stowe. Did any body go along with Mr. Chaworth, or immediately follow him?---Mr. Don. I went out with him.

Mr. Stowe. How far did Mr. Chaworth and you go?

Mr. Donston. A little Way without the Room.

Mr. Stowe. Was there any Converſation between Mr. Chaworth and you, when you were out of the Room?---Mr. Donston. There was.

Mr. Stowe. Was there any other Perſon beſides Mr. Chaworth and you?

Mr. Donston. There was none.

Mr. Stowe. Repeat what that Converſation was that paſſed between Mr. Chaworth and you.

Mr. Donston. Mr. Chaworth aſked me, If I attended to the Diſcourſe between him and Lord Byron? I told him I did in Part: He then aſked me, If he had been ſhort in what he laſt ſaid upon that Subject? I told him, No; I thought he ſaid rather more than what was neceſſary upon ſo trifling an Occaſion, and that I did not believe that either Lord Byron or the reſt of the Company would think any more about it.

Mr. Stowe. Was there any other Converſation between Mr. Chaworth and you at that Time?

Mr. Donston. Yes; he aſked me how long I ſtayed in Town, and hoped we ſhould meet often.

Mr. Stowe. Was there any other Converſation between Mr. Chaworth and you relative to the Subject of the Diſcourſe that had paſſed between my Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth?---Mr. Donston. No.

Mr. Stowe. What became of Mr. Chaworth after this?

Mr. Donston. He turned to go down Stairs.

Mr. Stowe. Where did you go to?---Mr. Donston. Into the Room again.

Mr. Stowe. When you went into the Room, did you ſee Lord Byron, and where?

Mr. Donston. I ſtood with my Back to the Door, and upon turning round to go into the Room I ſaw Lord Byron.

Mr. Stowe. What was he doing at that Time?

Mr. Donston. He was coming out as I was going in.

Mr. Stowe. What Length of Time might it be from your going out to Mr. Chaworth, to the Time of your coming in again?

Mr. Donston. I cannot exactly tell, but I believe a very ſhort Time.

Mr. Stowe. Can you form any Judgment how long it might be?

Mr. Donston. I think it could not be Five Minutes.

Mr. Stowe. When you met Lord Byron going out of the Door, was any Thing ſaid?---Mr. Donston. No.

Mr. Stowe. Do you remember any Thing more that paſſed in the Houſe that gave you any Alarm in Regard to Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth?

Mr. Donston. Yes, when I was in the Room, and ſaw that Lord Byron was not there, I began to reflect that they poſſibly might meet and reſume their Diſcourſe; by that Time the Bell was rung by ſome of the Company, and the Waiter came into the Room. I met the Waiter, and aſked him if he ſaw Mr. Chaworth? and he ſaid he believed he was below Stairs; I deſired he would go and ſee for him immediately, and tell him I muſt ſpeak to him. I was then preparing to go down myſelf, and the Waiter immediately came up with an Account of Mr. Chaworth's being run through the Body.

Mr. Stowe. What did you and the reſt of the Company upon that?

Mr. Donston. We all haſtened down to the Room where Mr. Chaworth was.

Mr. Stowe. Did you ſee Mr. Chaworth in the Room, and who was there, and in what Situation? Deſcribe the Particulars.

Mr. Donston. I ſaw him in a great Chair in the Corner of the Room. Mr. Fynmore, the Maſter of the Tavern, was in the Room.

Mr. Stowe. How did Mr. Chaworth appear?

Mr. Donston. He ſat in the Chair, leaning his Head back. I went to him, and aſked him how he did? He ſaid he was run through the Body, and had not Five Minutes to live. Upon my aſking how it happened? he ſaid, he and Lord Byron went into the Room and fought. I then told him, I hoped his Wound was not ſo bad as he apprehended; he ſaid he was ſure he was run through the Body, for that my Lord was very near him, and had ſhortened his Sword.

Mr. Stowe. Did you enquire any Thing of Mr. Chaworth, how they came to go into that Room and fight?

Mr. Donston. No, I did not particularly.

Mr. Stowe. Did Mr. Chaworth relate any Thing to you about his going into the Room?

Mr. Donston. He did; and ſaid, when he turned round from ſhutting the Door, he ſaw Lord Byron with his Sword half-drawn, and calling upon him to defend himſelf.

Mr. Stowe. What did Mr. Chaworth do when Lord Byron ſo called upon him?

Mr. Donston. He drew, and they immediately engaged.

Mr. Stowe. Who ſaid ſo?

Mr. Donston. Mr. Chaworth himſelf ſaid ſo.

Mr. Stowe. Was any Thing more ſaid by Mr. Chaworth to you at that Time concerning this Matter?

Mr. Donston. No, I do not recollect any Thing elſe material.

L. H. S. Recollect yourſelf, whether any Thing elſe material happened; or did Mr. Chaworth ſay upon what Occaſion they fought?

Mr. Donston. No, he did not to me; for I then got up, and he talked to other People who flocked about him.

Mr. Stowe. Did you hear Mr. Chaworth make any Enquiry concerning Lord Byron?

Mr. Donston. I heard him ſay he thought he had wounded Lord Byron.

Mr. Stowe. Did Mr. Chaworth ſay to you any Thing of the Manner in which he apprehended he had wounded Lord Byron?

Mr. Donston. No, he did not to me.

Mr. Stowe. At the Time you left the Room at the Star and Garter, were all the Company ſober or not?

Mr. Donston. I think, perfectly ſo.

Mr. Stowe. My Lords, this is all I ſhall examine Mr. Donſton to.

L. H. S. Lord Byron, would your Lordſhip aſk this Witneſs any Queſtions?

Lord Byron. What Reaſon had you to imagine, that if I and Mr. Chaworth ſhould meet we ſhould reſume the Diſcourſe?

Mr. Donston. It was very likely that they ſhould come together, as I met my Lord ſo ſoon after I had parted with Mr. Chaworth.

Lord Byron. Was it not on Account of the Words which you heard repeated in the Room, and what paſſed after Mr. Chaworth and you went out of the Room together?

Mr. Donston. It was partly from the Words I heard in the Room, and partly from Mr. Chaworth's having queſtioned me about them.

Lord Montfort. Why did you follow Mr. Chaworth out of the Room?

Mr. Donston. Mr. Chaworth took hold of my Arm, and aſked me to ſpeak with him.

Lord Montfort. How came you not to follow Lord Byron down Stairs?

Mr. Donston. I was returning into the Room, and was not ſure it was Lord Byron till I came into the Room and ſaw that he was not there.

Earl of Buckinghamſhire. Do you imagine Lord Byron could overhear any Part of the Converſation you had with Mr. Chaworth upon the Stairs?

Mr. Donston. I do not imagine Lord Byron could overhear it at that Diſtance.

Lord Berkeley. Do you know of any Words ſpoken by Lord Byron that could induce Mr. Chaworth to ſay, that if he wanted any Thing with Sir Charles Sedley, he lived in ſuch a Place, and that he, Mr. Chaworth, lived in Berkley-Row?

Mr. Donston. It aroſe from Lord Byron's aſking the Queſtion a Second Time about Sir Charles Sedley's Manor.

Lord Berkeley. When Mr. Chaworth ſaid to you, Do you think I have been ſhort in what I ſaid to Lord Byron? do not you apprehend, that That referred to the Words that Mr. Chaworth had ſaid in the Room?

Mr. Donston. I believe it did.

Lord Berkeley. Did Mr. Chaworth leave his Sword in the Room as well as his Hat?

Mr. Donston. I do not believe he did; I think he never took his Sword off.

Lord Mansfield. Whether Lord Byron took his Hat with him when he went out?---Mr. Donston. I do not know at all.

Earl Talbot. When you reproved Mr. Chaworth for having gone too far in what he had ſaid to Lord Byron, by ſaying, I think he ſaid rather more than was neceſſary on ſo trifling an Occaſion, did not you think the Words he had ſaid were of Force enough to a Man of ſtrict Honour, and nice Senſibility, to require an Explanation?

Mr. Donston. I did at firſt; but as they were ſpoke without much Heat or Paſſion, and no apparent Notice taken either by Lord Byron, or the reſt of the Company, I thought they might admit of a different Conſtruction.

Lord Cathcart. Did any Thing paſs between you further than what you have acquainted the Lords with?---Mr. Donston. Nothing more.

Lord Viſcount Weymouth. Did Mr. Chaworth ſay any Thing that led you to imagine that Lord Byron would take Notice of it?

Mr. Donston. Nothing more than his aſking me that Queſtion.

Earl Poulet. Do you apprehend that at the Time thoſe Words were ſpoke about Sir Charles Sedley's Manors, they were ſaid in a Manner reflecting upon Sir Charles Sedley, or Mr. Chaworth?

Mr. Donston. No, I do not: It ſeemed to me to be rather queſtioning the Bounds of their Manors, as I underſtood it.

Mr. Cornwall. My Lords, we deſire Mr. Molyneux may be ſworn.

Francis Molyneux, Eſquire. (Who was ſworn in like Manner.)

Mr. Cornwall. Mr. Molyneux will inform your Lordſhips if he dined at the Star and Garter on the Twenty-ſixth of January laſt.

Lord Mansfield. I ſhould think it unneceſſary to aſk this Queſtion of every Witneſs.

Mr. Corn. Was you in Company with Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth on the 26th of January laſt?---Mr. Molyneux. I was.

Mr. Corn. Do you recollect any Diſcourſe upon the Subject of Game?

Mr. Moly. I do.

Mr. Corn. Was Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth engaged in that Diſcourſe?---Mr. Moly. They were.

Mr. Corn. At what Time of the Day might that Diſcourſe begin?

Mr. Moly. About Seven of the Clock, I think.

Mr. Corn. Was there any Difference of Opinion between Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth upon that Subject?---Mr. Moly. There was.

Mr. Corn. Pleaſe to tell their Lordſhips how that was expreſſed.

Mr. Moly. Mr. Chaworth ſaid, he had always been ſtrict in preſerving his Game, and that That was the beſt Method of preſerving them: Lord Byron ſaid, he had never been ſtrict, and that he had more Game about Newſtead than any body elſe.

Mr. Corn. Was any Bet propoſed by any of the Company?

Mr. Moly. There was.

Mr. Corn. By whom?---Mr. Moly. By Lord Byron.

Mr. Corn. What were the Terms of the Bet?

Mr. Moly. He offered to lay One Hundred Pounds that he had more Game about Newſtead than Sir Charles Sedley or Mr. Chaworth.

Mr. Corn. Did Mr. Chaworth take the Bet?

Mr. Moly. Mr. Chaworth ſaid, if he would call for Pen, Ink, and Paper, he would lay him the Wager.

Mr. Corn. Was nothing more ſaid upon that Subject?

Mr. Moly. Lord Byron ſaid, he ſhould be glad to know where Sir Charles Sedley's Manor was.

Mr. Corn. What Anſwer was made to that Queſtion?

Mr. Moly. Mr. Chaworth ſaid, Nuttall; but if your Lordſhip ſhould have any Thing to ſay to Sir Charles Sedley, he lives at one Mr. Cooper's in Dean-Street.

Mr. Corn. Was any Thing further ſaid by any Perſon, or was that the Whole?

Mr. Moly. Lord Byron aſked again where Sir Charles Sedley's Manor laid.

Mr. Corn. And what Anſwer was given to Lord Byron?

Mr. Moly. Mr. Chaworth ſaid, he had already informed Lord Byron where Sir Charles Sedley lived; and his Lordſhip knew where he lived, if he had any Thing to ſay to him.

Mr. Corn. Was there any more Converſation?

Mr. Moly. No more upon that Subject.

Mr. Corn. How long did Lord Byron continue in Company after this Converſation ceaſed?

Mr. Molyneux. I believe he continued in Company about an Hour.

Mr. Cornwall. Did he join in any Part of that Time in any future Conversation?---Mr. Moly. He converſed with me

Mr. Corn. Was you near him?---Mr. Moly. I ſat next to him.

Mr. Corn. On what Subject did Lord Byron converſe with you?

Mr. Moly. About the Duke of York's Houſe

Mr. Corn. Upon any other Subject?---Mr. Moly. Upon no other.

Mr. Corn. Did he appear to be in good Humour?

Mr. Moly. I thought he did; I did not ſee any Thing to the contrary.

Mr. Corn. Do you recollect at what Time Mr. Chaworth quitted the Room?---Mr. Moly. I think it was about Eight of the Clock.

Mr. Corn. Did any body go out with Mr. Chaworth, and who?

Mr. Moly. Mr. Donſton, I think, went out with him. I do not know whether he went out with him, or followed him.

Mr. Corn. Do you recollect Lord Byron's quitting the Room?

Mr. Moly. I do.

Mr. Corn. At what Time?

Mr. Moly. About Seven or Eight Minutes after Mr. Chaworth.

Mr. Corn. Where did you next ſee Mr. Chaworth?

Mr. Moly. In a Room up One Pair of Stairs.

Mr. Corn. How ſoon after Lord Byron quitted the Room?

Mr. Moly. I cannot juſtly ſay; but I think it might be about Five or Six Minutes.

Mr. Corn. In what Condition did you find Mr. Chaworth?

Mr. Moly. He was ſitting in a great Chair, and Lord Byron ſtanding by him.

Mr. Corn. Did you hear Mr. Chaworth declare any Thing, and what?

Mr. Moly. Mr. Chaworth ſaid, he had very few Hours to live; that Lord Byron had ſhortened his Sword and ſtabbed him into the Belly; that he ſhould be glad to ſay ſomething to a particular Friend before he died; I left the Room ſoon afterwards.

Mr. Corn. Did you hear Mr. Chaworth declare any Thing, and what, after that?

Mr. Moly. I heard him ſay again, that he had but a very few Hours to live.

Mr. Corn. Did you hear Mr. Chaworth declare any Thing elſe at that Time?---Mr. Moly. I did not.

Mr. Corn. My Lords, we have done with this Witneſs.

Lord High Steward. Lord Byron, will your Lordſhip aſk any Queſtions of this Witneſs?

Lord Byron. Was not the Converſation between you and me very ſhort?

Mr. Moly. It was not of long Duration.

Lord Byron. My Lords, I ſhall aſk this Witneſs no more Queſtions.

Earl of Morton. I underſtood that Lord Byron ſaid, he had more Game upon his Manor than any body, and that he would lay One hundred Pounds of that; was that what you ſaid?

Mr. Moly. It was.

Mr. Att. Gen. I underſtand Mr. Hawkins and Mr. Adair, the two Surgeons that are attending here, in all Probability may be wanted, and therefore, if your Lordſhips pleaſe, we will call them.

L. H. S. Yes, certainly the Surgeons may be called, as they may be wanted elſewhere.

Lords. Ay, ay.

Cæſar Hawkins, Eſq. (Who was ſworn in like Manner.)

Mr. Attorney General. Mr. Hawkins, was you ſent for to Mr. Chaworth, on the 26th of January laſt?—Mr. Hawkins. I was.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did you go to him?

Mr. Hawk. I did immediately upon receiving the Meſſage.

Mr. Att. Gen. What Time of the Night might that be?

Mr. Hawk. A little after Eight, as near as I can recollect.

Mr. Att. Gen. In what Condition did you find Mr. Chaworth?

Mr. Hawk. I found him ſitting by the Fire-Side, in the Back-Room, up one Pair of Stairs, with the lower Part of his Waiſtcoat open, his Shirt bloody, and his Hand holding his Belly.

Mr. Att. Gen. Had you any Converſation with him there, how that Misfortune had befallen him?

Mr. Hawk. He ſaid to me, that he believed he had received a mortal Wound; that he felt within himſelf a peculiar Kind of Faintneſs and Sinking; and that he had a Senſation of ſtretching and ſwelling of his Belly, that made him believe he bled internally.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did he ſay any Thing more how this unfortunate Affair happened?

Mr. Hawk. After I had made my proper Enquiries and Examination, he preſſed me earneſtly to tell him what his real Situation was, and, as he expreſſed it, not to flatter him, but to inform him truly, if I thought him in any immediate Danger, for if he was, that he had private Affairs which he wiſhed extremely to ſettle. I told him, I was afraid his Wound was dangerous. He then deſired that Mr. Levinz might be immediately ſent for to him, and deſiring the other Gentlemen, who were in the Room, to ſtep out for a few Minutes, he gave me ſome Directions relative to his private Affairs, which he deſired I would mention to Mr. Levinz, in caſe he died before Mr. Levinz could be brought to him. This Converſation being ended, I think before the other Gentlemen returned into the Room, I aſked him in what Poſition his Body was when he received the Wound? To which Queſtion, as I apprehend, to make his Anſwer more explicit, he gave me the following Detail: That Lord Byron and he came into that Room together, Lord Byron leading the Way, and walking on towards the further End of the Room, ſaid ſomething very rough to him; upon which he ſaid, Then, my Lord, it is right I ſhould faſten the Door (I am not ſure whether he ſaid faſten the Door, or bolt the Door); that he turned to the Door, and did faſten it; that as he turned round again towards Lord Byron, he ſaw his Lordſhip with his Sword either drawn, or nearly drawn, upon which he immediately drew his own, and at the ſame Time that he preſented the Point of his Sword to his Lordſhip, that he made a Thruſt at him, which he thought had hit him, and dangerouſly wounded or killed him; that immediately afterwards he perceived his Lordſhip ſhortening his Arm to make a Thruſt at him, which he thought to have parried with his left Hand, with which he endeavoured to catch the Point of the Sword; and he looked at his Hand once or twice, thinking that he had either ſcratched or wounded his Hand in the Attempt; that he perceived the Sword enter his Body, and imagined it had gone in deep, for that he had felt a Pain quite through to his Back; that immediately after he laid hold of the Gripe of Lord Byron's Sword, and ſtruggling with him for it, and being the ſtronger Man, he diſarmed his Lordſhip, ſaying to him, he hoped he was not dangerouſly wounded; that Lord Byron replied ſomething to the ſame Purpoſe to him; and, I think, added, that Lord Byron ſaid, That he hoped now he would allow or acknowledge (it was either allow or acknowledge, I am not ſure which of the two Words) that he (his Lordſhip) was as brave a Man as any other in the Kingdom; and ſome conſiderable Time paſſed afterwards at the Tavern, before Mr. Chaworth was carried to his own Houſe, partly on Account of Mr. Chaworth's being of Opinion, that he ſtill felt himſelf bleeding inwardly; and as he wiſhed extremely to ſee Mr. Levinz, he deſired to avoid moving, for fear the Bleeding ſhould be increaſed by it, and ſo accelerate his Death. A Part of the Time was likewiſe taken up in our endeavouring to get proper Conveniencies for his Removal. During this Time he recollected ſome other little Circumſtances relative to his private Affairs, on which Account he deſired the Gentlemen, who were then in the Room, to retire again. When he had mentioned what he had to ſay upon that Subject, he repeated to me again with great Earneſtneſs, what I had heard him declare before, two or three Times in different Expreſſions, equally ſtrong, that pained and diſtreſſed as he then was, and in immediate Danger of Death, he had rather be in his preſent Situation, than live under the Misfortune of having killed another Perſon. This ſtrong Expreſſion of Humanity led me to aſk him, if there had been any ſerious Cauſe of Offence between them, meaning between Lord Byron and himſelf, that ſhould have occaſioned the Quarrel? He pauſed for a Moment or two, as one recollecting himſelf, and then anſwered, No, nothing that might not have been explained and made up; I think his Expreſſion was, eaſily made up. After a little Time more he grew ſtronger, and he was removed to his own Houſe, without any great Uneaſineſs or Difficulty. I had deſired the Aſſiſtance of another Surgeon; and then Mr. Adair, and ſoon after Dr. Addington, his Phyſician, met me. We all joined in our beſt Endeavours to give him ſome Relief, but without any Hopes of doing him Good, and the next Morning about nine o'Clock he expired. On the Monday Evening, by the Coroner's Directions, we examined the dead Body: The Sword had entered about an Inch on the left Side of the Navel, and paſſing obliquely upwards, had made its Exit about five or ſix Inches higher, on the left Side of the Back: In its Paſſage, the Sword went through one of the ſmall Inteſtines, and had made a very large Opening at the back Part of the Bottom of the Stomach; ſo that all the Contents of the Stomach, a Part from the Inteſtine, and a Quantity of Blood, were mixed together in the Cavity of the Belly. The Sword had likewiſe paſſed through the lower Part of the Diaphragm, and there was a ſmall Quantity of Blood in the Cavity of the left Breaſt. Upon the whole, there was not the leaſt Doubt but that the Wound we examined was the immediate Cauſe of Mr. Chaworth's Death.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lords, we have done with this Witneſs.

L. H. S. My Lord Byron, would your Lordſhip chuſe to aſk this Witneſs any Queſtions?---Lord Byron. No, my Lords.

Mr. Sollicitor General. The next Witneſs, if your Lordſhips pleaſe, is Mr. Adair, the other Surgeon.

Robert Adair, Eſq. (Who was ſworn in like Manner.)

Mr. Sollicitor General. Do you remember being ſent for to Mr. Chaworth on the 26th of January laſt?---Mr. Adair. I was.

Mr. Sol. Gen. At what Time were you ſent for?

Mr. Adair. About Nine o'Clock.

Mr. Sol. Gen. In what Condition did you find Mr. Chaworth?

Mr. Adair. I found him with a Wound upon the left Side of his Belly, near the Navel, which paſſed upwards, and went through between five and ſix Inches higher than at its Entrance.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did Mr. Chaworth ſay any Thing upon the Subject of the Wound?—Mr. Adair. Nothing to me.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Nor in your Hearing?—Mr. Adair. Nor in my Hearing.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Was you preſent when the Body was opened?

Mr. Adair. I was preſent.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you think this Wound occaſioned his Death?

Mr. Adair. Moſt certainly.

L. H. S. My Lord Byron, does your Lordſhip chuſe to aſk this Witneſs any Queſtions?—Lord Byron. No, my Lords.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. If your Lordſhips pleaſe, we will now call John Sherwin, Eſq.

John Sherwin, Eſq. (Who was ſworn in like Manner.)

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. Were you at the Star-and-Garter, at the Nottinghamſhire Club, on the 26th of January laſt?—Mr. Sherwin. I was.

Mr. Serj. Glynn. Do you remember whether Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth were there?—Mr. Sher. They were.

Mr. Serj. Glynn. Do you remember any Converſation about Game?

Mr. Sher. There had been ſome Converſation by the Company in general about Game.

Mr. Serj. Glynn. Do you remember what Part Lord Byron, and what Part Mr. Chaworth, took in that Converſation?

Mr. Sher. Lord Byron ſpoke upon that Subject.

Mr. Serj. Glynn. What did Lord Byron ſay?

Mr. Sher. He thought that being too ſevere hurt the Game, and that they were preſerved more by the other Method.

Mr. Serj. Glynn. Did Mr. Chaworth expreſs himſelf of a different Opinion?

Mr. Sher. Mr. Chaworth did.

Mr. Serj. Glynn. What did Mr. Chaworth ſay?

Mr. Sher. He ſaid, nothing could be ſo clear as that the Poachers were idle Fellows, and did a great deal of Miſchief in the Country.

Mr. Serj. Glynn. Did Mr. Chaworth ſay any Thing about Game in his own Manors?

Mr. Sherwin. After this Converſation, Lord Byron offered a Bet of One hundred Pounds, that he had more Game upon an Acre on his Manor than Mr. Chaworth had.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn. Did Mr. Chaworth accept the Bet?

Mr. Sher. Mr. Chaworth ſaid he would.

Mr. Serj. Glynn. What did he ſay upon that?

Mr. Sher. He offered to take the Bet, and I believe deſired that Pen, Ink, and Paper might be ſent for.

Mr. Serj. Glynn. Was there any Bet laid?

Mr. Sher. I ſaid, it was a Bet that could never be determined.

Mr. Serj. Glynn. Was any Thing ſaid about Sir Charles Sedley's Manor?

Mr. Sher. After this there aroſe a Diſpute about their Manors.

Mr. Serj. Glynn. Repeat what paſſed upon that Occaſion.

Mr. Sher. Nuttall Manor was mentioned, and another or two that I do not remember.

Mr. Serj. Glynn. By whom was Nuttall mentioned?

Mr. Sher. I remember its being mentioned by Mr. Chaworth; he ſaid, your Lordſhip has nothing to do there, it is Sir Charles Sedley's Manor, it was bought out of my Family.

Mr. Serj. Glynn. Was there any Thing more ſaid upon this Subject?

Mr. Sher. There was more Converſation, which I do not remember.

Mr. Serj. Glynn. How long did the Converſation continue upon this Subject?

Mr. Sher. It might continue a Quarter of an Hour, or twenty Minutes.

Mr. Serj. Glynn. Did the Company then enter upon any other Subject of Converſation?

Mr. Sher. During the Diſpute between Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth, I remember Mr. Chaworth's ſaying, As to Sir Charles Sedley, my Lord, he will give you an Anſwer; as to myſelf, your Lordſhip knows where I live.

Mr. Serj. Glynn. Did Lord Byron take any Part in the future Converſation of the Company?

Mr. Sher. Not that I remember; in general, I believe, he talked with Mr. Molyneux, who ſat next him.

Mr. Serj. Glynn. Did he appear to be in good Humour or not?

Mr. Sher. I did not obſerve that at all, either one Way or the other; there was no further Converſation between Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth.

Mr. Serj. Glynn. When did Mr. Chaworth leave the Room?

Mr. Sher. It might be twenty Minutes after Mr. Chaworth had ſaid, You know where I live, my Lord.

Mr. Serj. Glynn. Did Mr. Chaworth go out alone, or did any Perſon go with him?

Mr. Sher. He aſked Mr. Donſton, who ſat next him, to go out with him, he wanted to ſpeak to him.

Mr. Serj. Glynn. Did Mr. Donſton return again to the Company, and how ſoon?—Mr. Sher. He came into the Room again very ſoon, almoſt in two Minutes.

Mr. Serj. Glynn. Did you obſerve when Lord Byron left the Room?

Mr. Sher. I remember his getting up out of his Chair.

Mr. Serj. Glynn. Before or after the Return of Mr. Donſton?

Mr. Sher. I think it was before.

Mr. Serj. Glynn. Where did you ſee Mr. Chaworth again that Evening?

Mr. Sher. Soon after Mr. Donſton came into the Room again, a Drawer, or Somebody came in, and ſaid, there had been a Quarrel; the Company above Stairs went down Stairs into that Room where Mr. Chaworth was; I went with them.

Mr. Serj. Glynn. In what Condition did you find Mr. Chaworth?

Mr. Sher. He was ſitting in a Chair, holding his Belly with his right Hand, his Waiſtcoat was open, and his Shirt bloody.

Mr. Serj. Glynn. Had you any Converſation with Mr. Chaworth?

Mr. Sher. I do not remember I had.

Mr. Serj. Glynn. Did you hear any Converſation between Mr. Chaworth and any other of the Company?

Mr. Sher. Somebody aſked him how he did? He ſaid, he had not five Minutes, or five Hours, to live, I forget which. Mr. Hawkins came in, who had been ſent for; and in a little Time, the Company left Mr. Hawkins and Mr. Chaworth together, and went up Stairs, where they had dined.

Mr. Serj. Glynn. Did you hear any Declarations from Mr. Chaworth, reſpecting the Accident that had happened to him?—Mr. Sher. I did not.

L. H. S. Would Lord Byron aſk the Witneſs any Queſtions?

Lord Byron. How was Mr. Chaworth employed during the twenty Minutes that he was in the Room, after the Converſation that paſſed?

Mr. Sher. I do not remember in particular, but I imagine he was talking to the Gentlemen on his right Hand, or on his left.

Lord Byron. Was he not employed in ſettling the Reckoning?

Mr. Sher. I believe he was.

Lord Byron. Did you obſerve any Thing particular in his Manner at the Time?

Mr. Sher. I cannot ſay I did.

Lord High Steward. The Witneſs may withdraw.

Mr. Stowe. If your Lordſhips pleaſe, the next Witneſs we will call is Thomas Willoughby, Eſq.

The Honourable Thomas Willoughby. (Who was ſworn in like Manner).

Mr. Stowe. Was you at the Star and Garter on the Twenty-ſixth of January laſt?

Mr. Willoughby. I was.

Mr. Stowe. Was you there between Four o'Clock and Seven in the Afternoon?

Mr. Wil. I dined there a little after Four, and was there at Seven in the Afternoon.

Mr. Stowe. Do you remember any Diſpute between Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth concerning the Preſervation of Game?

Mr. Wil. They were of different Opinions about their preſerving of Game.

Mr. Stowe. What paſſed between Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth upon that Subject?

Mr. Wil. Mr. Chaworth's Argument was, that there was no ſuch Thing as having Game, unleſs Gentlemen were ſevere with the Poachers.

Mr. Stowe. Did Lord Byron differ with Mr. Chaworth upon that Head?

Mr. Wil. He did.

Mr. Stowe. Did any Words of Anger paſs between them?

Mr. Wil. I did not perceive any.

Mr. Stowe. Do you remember any Inquiry made concerning the Manors of Sir Charles Sedley?

Mr. Wil. Nuttall, a Manor of Sir Charles Sedley's, was mentioned.

Mr. Stowe. By whom?

Mr. Wil. I do not know whether it was mentioned by Lord Byron firſt, or Mr. Chaworth; but Mr. Chaworth ſaid, Nuttall belonged to Sir Charles Sedley; he knew it, for it was bought of his Family.

Mr. Stowe. Did any Thing more paſs, and what, about that?

Mr. Wil. No, not that I recollect.

Mr. Stowe. Do you remember any Bet on either Side?

Mr. Wil. Lord Byron offered to bet Mr. Chaworth One hundred Pounds that he had more Game upon his Manor, or Manors, than Mr. Chaworth had.

Mr. Stowe. What followed upon that Offer?

Mr. Wil. Mr. Sherwin ſaid, it would be very difficult to decide that Bet.

Mr. Stowe. Do you know if any Bet was made?—Mr. Wil. I do not.

Mr. Stowe. Were there any Words paſſed afterwards between Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth, reſpecting Sir Charles Sedley, his Manor, or his Eſtate?

Mr. Wil. Not that I heard.

Mr. Stowe. Do you remember Mr. Chaworth afterwards going out of the Room?

Mr Wil. I do.

Mr. Stowe. At what Diſtance of Time might that be from the finiſhing the Converſation?

Mr. Wil. Perhaps Three Quarters of an Hour, or thereabouts, I cannot ſay exactly.

Mr. Stowe. Did Lord Byron, during that Three Quarters of an Hour, diſcourſe with Mr. Chaworth, or any other Gentleman of the Company?

Mr. Wil. I did not hear him.

Mr. Stowe. Do you recollect, when Mr. Chaworth went out of the Room, if any body went with him or followed him?

Mr. Wil. Mr. Donſton went out at the ſame Time.

Mr Stowe. Did Mr. Chaworth, when he went out of the Room, take his Hat with him or not?

Mr. Wil. I did not take Notice of that.

Mr. Stowe. How long was Mr. Chaworth out of the Room, and did he return again?

Mr. Wil. He never returned again.

Mr. Stowe. Did Mr. Donſton return again?——Mr. Wil. He did.

Mr. Stowe. In what Space of Time?---Mr. Wil. In a very ſhort Time.

Mr. Stowe. Can you form any Judgment of the Time?

Mr. Wil. I cannot ſpeak exactly, perhaps Five Minutes.

Mr. Stowe. Where was Lord Byron when Mr. Donſton came into the Room?

Mr. Wil. He was got up, and gone towards the Door, or out of the Door, I do not know which.

Mr. Stowe. Did Lord Byron take his Hat?---Mr. Wil. I do not know.

Mr. Stowe. How long might Lord Byron be gone out of the Room before you heard any Thing more relative to Lord Byron or Mr. Chaworth?

Mr. Wil. A very few Minutes.

Mr. Stowe. Who mentioned any thing to you concerning Lord Byron or Mr. Chaworth?

Mr. Wil. The Waiter came up and told us what had happened.

Mr. Stowe. Did you go to the Place, and ſee Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth, or either of them there?

Mr. Wil. I did.

Mr. Stowe. Did you ſee Mr. Chaworth?---Mr. Wil. I did.

Mr. Stowe. In what Condition and Situation was Mr. Chaworth?

Mr. Wil. He was ſitting in a Chair, with his Hand on his Belly, and his Shirt was bloody.

Mr. Stowe. Did Mr. Chaworth ſay any Thing how he came by that Wound?

Mr. Wil. He did not; only he ſaid he was a dying Man, and that Lord Byron had run him through.

Mr. Stowe. Did he ſay any Thing more that you recollect?

Mr. Wil. He ſaid ſeveral Times over that he was a dying Man, and had but a few Minutes to live.

Mr. Stowe. My Lords, we have done with this Witneſs.

Lord High Steward. Lord Byron, would you aſk this Witneſs any Queſtions?

Lord Byron. Was not you converſing with Mr. Hewett, during the latter Part of the Converſation between Mr. Chaworth and me, ſo as you might not hear it?

Mr. Wil. The laſt Word I heard, was, that Nuttall belonged to Sir Charles Sedley, that it was bought of his Family, and he knew it.

Lord Byron. Was not you converſing with Mr. Hewett ſo as to prevent you from hearing any more?

Mr. Wil. That was the laſt I heard.

L. H. S. Has Lord Byron any Thing more to aſk this Witneſs?

Lord Byron. No, my Lord.

L. H. S. The Witneſs may withdraw.

Mr. Cornwall. If your Lordſhips pleaſe, the next Witneſs we ſhall call is John Edwards.

John Edwards. (Who was ſworn in like Manner.)

Mr. Cornwall. Was not you a Waiter at the Star and Garter, on the Twenty-ſixth of January laſt?

John Edwards. I was.

Mr. Corn. Did you attend the Gentlemen of the Nottinghamſhire Club, who met there that Day, between Eight and Nine in the Evening?

J. Edw. I did.

Mr.

Mr. Cornwall. What was the Purpoſe of your Attendance between Eight and Nine?

J. Edwards. To anſwer the Bell, and to carry any Thing into the Room.

Mr. Corn. What Commands had the Company laid upon you at that Time?

J. Edw. To bring up a Bottle of Claret.

Mr. Corn. Did you go down?

J. Edw. I did, to the Bar, but not into the Cellar.

Mr. Corn. What did you do then?

J. Edw. I called to my Maſter to get ſome Wine, who, when I called him firſt, I thought he was in the Kitchen, and I called him twice or thrice, and then I found him in the Larder. I told him the Gentlemen wanted a ſingle Bottle of Claret at the Nottinghamſhire Club.

Mr. Corn. Whilſt you were ſtanding at the Bar waiting for the Bottle of Claret, did you hear the Bell ring?---J. Edw. I did not.

Mr. Corn. Did you hear any body call?

J. Edw. I heard Somebody call Waiter, up Stairs.

Mr. Corn. Did you know the Voice?—J. Edw. I did not.

Mr. Corn. Did you obey?

J. Edw. I did not the firſt Time, I thought to have taken the Wine up Stairs with me.

Mr. Corn. Was it repeated?

J. Edw. It was once or twice.

Mr. Corn. Did you go up?——J. Edw. I did.

Mr. Corn. Who did you meet?

J. Edw. When I came up the firſt Pair of Stairs, I ſaw Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth coming down, or rather waiting upon the Stairs for Somebody to come up. Lord Byron aſked me, if either of theſe Rooms were empty (there being Two Rooms in his View)? I anſwered in the Affirmative, and ſaid, This; being the Door which was on the Right-hand.

Mr. Corn. What then did you do?

J. Edw. I had a Candle in my Right-Hand; I opened a green Bays Door, with a Braſs Lock, with my Left-Hand, and ſhewed Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth into the Room; I ſet the Candle upon the Table in the Room; I quitted the Room, and pulled the inner Door after me; the outer Door ſhuts with a Pully. I went down Stairs immediately for the Bottle of Wine, which I had deſired my Maſter to get; I met him by the Bar or the Cellar Door (which are together) with the Wine in his Hand. I took it from him, and went up Stairs to the Nottinghamſhire Club, up Two-Pair-of-Stairs. I drew the Cork, and heard the Bell ring into the Room into which I had ſhewed Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth, twice, whilſt I was decanting the Wine. When I had decanted the Wine, I came down Stairs, and found I was too late to anſwer the Bell, as is common for a Waiter that ſhews the Room. I heard Somebody had been in. When I came to the Ground Floor, the firſt Perſon I ſpoke to (to the beſt of my Knowledge) was my Maſter. He clapp'd his Hands together, and ſaid, Mr. Chaworth is wounded, or Lord Byron has wounded Mr. Chaworth; the Expreſſion I cannot exactly tell.

Mr. Corn. Did you go into the Room?

J. Edw. Not till after I had been in the Nottinghamſhire Club-Room, and had informed the Gentlemen that Mr. Chaworth was wounded.

Mr. Corn. Did you ſtay long?——J. Edw. I did not ſtay long.

Mr. Corn. Did you hear Mr. Chaworth ſay any Thing?

J. Edw. He ſeemed extremely deſirous of ſeeing Two or Three Friends, particularly Mr. Levinz.

Mr. Corn. What was the Size of the Room you ſhewed Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth into?

J. Edw. In ſome Parts of the Room, I have meaſured it, it is Sixteen Feet long and Sixteen Feet broad in ſome Parts; the Chimney is taken out of the Corner of the Room.

Mr. Corn. What kind of a Candle did you leave in the Room?

J. Edw. A common Tallow Candle, about Eight in the Pound.

Mr. Corn. Was there any other Candle in the Room?

J. Edw. There was no other Candle, in the Room, nor no other Light, to my Knowledge.

Mr. Corn. Was there a Fire in the Room?

J. Edw. There was a Fire in the Room, but it was rather down.

Mr. Corn. We have done with this Witneſs.

Lord High Steward. Lord Byron, would your Lordſhip aſk this Witneſs any Queſtions?

Lord Byron. Was there any Table in the Room.

J. Edw. There was a Table in the Room.

Lord Byron. Did you ſet the Candle upon it?—J. Edw. I did.

Lord Byron. How large a Space might the Chairs and Furniture of the Room take up from the Length of it?

J. Edw. I cannot tell, indeed.

Lord Byron. In what Part of the Room did you leave Mr. Chaworth and me ſtanding?

J. Edw. Both walked towards the Fire-place.

Lord Mansfield. I would aſk this Witneſs, whether he is ſure that he ſhut the inner Door, on Mr. Chaworth and Lord Byron's going into the Room?

J. Edw. I pulled it after me, but cannot tell certainly whether it ſhut or not.

Lord Mansfield. Was there any Bolt to the inner Door?

J. Edw. There is, it is a Braſs Lock, and there is a little Bolt at the Bottom.

Mr. Att. Gen. If your Lordſhips pleaſe, we will call Mr. Fynmore.

Mr. James Fynmore. (Who was ſworn in like Manner.)

Mr. Attorney General. My Lords, this is the Maſter of the Tavern. Do you remember going up Stairs on the Twenty-ſixth of January laſt, into the Room where Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth were?

Mr. Fynmore. I do.

Mr. Att. Gen. What induced you to go thither?

Mr. Fyn. A Waiter came and told me that Two Gentlemen were come out of the Nottinghamſhire Club, into the Room Number Seven, and deſired to ſpeak to me.

Mr. Att. Gen. What is the Waiter's Name?

Mr. Fyn. John Gothorp.

Mr. Att. Gen. In what Situation did you find Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth?

Mr. Fyn. I found them ſtanding cloſe together; Mr. Chaworth had his Sword in his Left-Hand, and Lord Byron had his in his Right-Hand. Mr. Chaworth ſaid, Here, James, take my Sword, for I am diſarmed, or I have diſarmed him, I do not know which. I turned to Lord Byron, and ſaid, Pray, my Lord, give me your Sword; on which Lord Byron gave me his Sword, and I took it and went down Stairs with it. As I was going out of the Room, either one or both called after me, and deſired me to get Help immediately; I went down the Stairs with the two Swords, and laid them upon the Table, in a Room at the Bottom of the Stairs, and then called Mr. Hawkins.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did you hear Mr. Chaworth ſay any Thing how this Accident had befallen him?----Mr. Fyn. No.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lords, we have done with this Witneſs.

Lord High Steward. Lord Byron, will you aſk this Witneſs any Queſtions?

Lord Byron. Did not you carry up the Club-Book into the Room where we dined?

Mr. Fyn. I went up at Seven o'Clock, as is the Cuſtom, with the Book and a Bill.

Lord Byron. Did you wait the Settling of the Bill?---Mr. Fyn. I did.

Lord Byron. Did not Mr. Chaworth Settle it?

Mr. Fyn. Mr. Chaworth ſettled the Book that Day.

Lord Byron. What Time might it take up in Settling it?

Mr. Fyn. It was done in Five or Six Minutes.

Lord Byron. Did you make any Obſervation upon Mr. Chaworth's Manner of Settling it, or obſerve any Thing particular?

Mr. Fyn. No, I think not any Thing particular.

Lord Byron. Did you obſerve him to be ruffled or confuſed?

Mr. Fyn. In one Particular only; the Book is marked with Lines ruled in Checks, each Gentleman's Name is upon a Line, and againſt each Name, if the Gentleman be preſent, there is a o; if abſent 5*s.* The only Remark I maade of any Flurry in Mr. Chaworth, was, h put 5*s.* againſt Lord Byron's Name inſtead of a o; upon which I ſaid, Sir, my Lord is preſent; upon which he altered it, and made a o.

Lord Byron. What was the Size of the Room where we were?

Mr. Fyn. It was ſixteen Feet in the Clear both Ways, except that the Chimney was taken out of one of the Corners.

Lord Byron. What Space might the Chairs take up from the Dimenſions?

Mr. Fyn. The Chairs are pretty large, they might take two Feet each Chair into the Room.

Lord Byron. Is there any inner Faſtening, and what, to the Door?

Mr. Fyn. The Door has a Braſs Lock, and there is a little Catch underneath, as there uſually are to theſe Doors.

Lord Byron. Is it not a Bolt?---Mr. Fyn. It is a little ſliding Bolt.

Lord Byron. When you went into the Room, in what Part did you find me and Mr. Chaworth ſtanding?

Mr. Fyn. I ſaw Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth ſtanding Shoulder to Shoulder, cloſe by the Fire.

A Lord. Was the Door bolted when you firſt came to the Room?

Mr. Fyn. No, it was not.

Lord Viſcount Folkſtone. Did Lord Byron deliver up his Sword readily?

Mr. Fyn. When Mr. Chaworth gave me his Sword, I turned to Lord Byron for his.

Lord Viſcount Folkſtone. Did he give you his Sword directly?

Mr. Fyn. I took hold of it, and his Lordſhip made no Objection.

Lord Viſcount Folkſtone. The Reaſon I mention this is, becauſe the Counſel, in Opening, ſaid, that Lord Byron delivered up his Sword with Reluctance. Was not Lord Byron at this Time employed in ſupporting Mr. Chaworth?

Mr. Fyn. Lord Byron's Left-Hand was round Mr. Chaworth, as Mr. Chaworth's Right-Hand was round Lord Byron's Neck, and over his Shoulder.

Lord Viſcount Folkſtone. Did not Lord Byron deſire you to call Aſſiſtance?

Mr. Fyn. I had the Swords in my Hand, and my Back was towards them, when one of them ſaid, (I do not know which) Get ſome Help immediately.

Mr. Sollicitor Geneneral. If your Lordſhips pleaſe, we will call John Gothorp, another of the Waiters.

John Gothorp. (Who was ſworn in like Manner.)

Mr. Sollicitor General. You are a Waiter at the Star and Garter?

John Gothorp. Yes, my Lords.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Was you on the Twenty-ſixth of January laſt?

John Gothorp. I was.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you remember the Bell ringing in Number Seven?

John Gothorp. I do.

Mr. Sol. Gen. About what Time?

John Gothorp. About a Quarter paſt Eight.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you go up into the Room?---John Gothorp. I did.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Was the Door faſtened?---John Gothorp. It was not.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Where did you ſee Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth?

John Gothorp. Standing with their Backs to the Fire.

Mr. Sol. Gn. How near the Door?

John Gothorp. About Ten Feet, as near as I can recollect.

Mr. Sol. Gen. In what Situation did you ſee Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth?

John Gothorp. They were both ſtanding together; Lord Byron had his Left-Arm round Mr. Chaworth's Waiſt, with his Sword in his Right-Hand, with the Point to the Ground; Mr. Chaworth was ſtanding, with his Right-Arm reſting upon Lord Byron's Shoulder, with his Sword in his Left-Hand extended up.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did they ſay any Thing?

John Gothorp. Lord Byron bid me take this Sword (meaning which I cannot ſay), and call up Fynmore immediately.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What did your do?

John Gotherp. I immediately left the Room, without taking any Sword, to call my Master up.

L. H. S. Lord Byron, will your Lordship ask this Witness any Questions?---Lord Byron. No, my Lords.

Lord Mansfield. Was the Door open when you came to it, or was it fastened with a Bolt?

John Gotherp. It was fastened, but not with the Bolt.

Mr. Serj. Glynn. If your Lordships please, the next Witness we will call is Mr. William Man.

Mr. William Man. (Who was sworn in like Manner.)

Mr. Serj. Glynn. Did you attend Mr. Chaworth, as an Apothecary, on the Twenty-sixth of January last?---Mr. Man. I did.

Mr. Serj. Glynn. Who did you find in the Room with Mr. Chaworth?

Mr. Man. His Servant.

Mr. Serj. Glynn. Was there any other Person besides his Servant?

Mr. Man. Not in the Room where he was.

Mr. Serj. Glynn. Did any other Person come in during the Time you were there?---Mr. Man. Mr. Hawkins and Mr. Levinz did.

Mr. Serj. Glynn. Was there any Conversation between Mr. Chaworth and Mr. Levinz concerning the Accident that had happened?

Mr. Man. There was.

Mr. Serj. Glynn. Relate that Conversation.

Mr. Man. Mr. Chaworth said some few Words arose at Dinner concerning who had the most Game upon their Estates: About two Hours after Mr. Chaworth had Occasion to go down Stairs: Upon his returning back he was met by Lord Byron, who said, Chaworth, I want to speak to you; a Waiter passing by at the same Time, Lord Byron said, Waiter, shew us a Room. They went into the Room, and first Mr. Chaworth said, My Lord, we will shut the Door, or else some Person will hear what we say. Mr. Chaworth, when he turned round from shutting the Door, saw Lord Byron with his Sword half-drawn, who said, Chaworth, draw! Mr. Chaworth drew immediately, and made the first Pass, and intangled his Sword in my Lord's Waistcoat; he then endeavoured to disarm Lord Byron, and my Lord gave him a Push or Blow, and then run him through.

Mr. Serj. Glynn. Was this the Whole of what Mr. Chaworth declared at that Time?---Mr. Man. No.

Mr. Serj. Glynn. Relate the Whole.

Mr. Man. Mr. Chaworth said, when he was first desired to walk into the Room by Lord Byron, he did not in the least imagine that he was going to be offered a Challenge.

Mr. Serj. Glynn. Was that the Whole?---Mr. Man. No.

Mr. Serj. Glynn. Go on.

Mr. Man. Some Time after Mr. Chaworth said, This will not in the least be to my Lord Byron's Credit.

Mr. Serj. Glynn. Is that the Whole of what was said?

Mr. Man. Yes, my Lords.

Mr. Serj. Glynn. My Lords, we will ask no more of this Witness.

L. H. S. My Lord Byron, would your Lordship ask this Witness any Questions?

Lord Byron. Was any body present besides Mr. Levinz?

Mr. Man. Mr. Chaworth's Servant.

Lord Byron. What is his Name?----Mr. Man. Michael Cullum.

Lord Byron. At what Time was this Declaration made?

Mr. Man. I cannot positively say, but I think it was between the Hours of Two and Four.

Lord Byron. Was it before he signed his Will?

Mr. Man. I think it was, but I am not certain.

Mr. Cornwall. If your Lordships please, we will Michael Cullum,

Michael Cullum was called, but did not appear.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lords, I find that this Witness is not here. If your Lordships please, we will call Mr. Levinz.

L. H. S. How many more Witnesses do you intend to call?

Mr. Att. Gen. We will only call Mr. Levinz, and one more.

Lord Mansfield. From the Opening of the Prosecutor's Case, it seems to me, they are very near the End of their Evidence, and there is nothing else left but the Paper; it is now past Five o'Clock, and, I should think, it would be more for the Ease of the Prisoner and your Lordships, to adjourn to the Chamber of Parliament.

Then the Lord High Steward returned back to the Chair.

Lord President of the Council. My Lords, I move your Lordships to adjourn to the Chamber of Parliament.

Lords. Ay, Ay.

L. H. S. This House is adjourned to the Chamber of Parliament.

The Lords and others returned to the Chamber of Parliament in the same Order they came down, except the Lord High Steward, who walked after his Royal Highness the Duke of York; and, the House being there resumed; Resolved to proceed further in the Trial of William Lord Byron, in Westminster-Hall, To-morrow, at Ten of the Clock in the Morning; and ordered, That the said William Lord Byron should be remanded Prisoner to his Majesty's Tower of London, there to be kept in safe Custody; and that he be brought again to the Bar of this House in Westminster-Hall, To-morrow, at Ten of the Clock in the Morning.

Wednesday, April 17, 1765. The Second Day.

THE Lords and others came from the Chamber of Parliament in the same Order as on Tuesday last, except the Lord High Steward, who walked after His Royal Highness the Duke of York; and the Peers were there seated, and the Lord High Steward in his Chair.

Lord High Steward. My Lords, the House is resumed. Is it your Lordships Pleasure that the Judges may be covered?

Lords. Ay, Ay.

Then the Serjeant at Arms made Proclamation for Silence as usual; and afterwards the following Proclamation.

Serjeant at Arms. Oyez, Oyez, Oyez! Lieutenant of the Tower, bring forth your Prisoner, William Lord Byron, to the Bar, pursuant to the Order of the House of Lords.

The Deputy Governor of the Tower brought the Prisoner to the Bar, in the like Form as before; and then he kneeled down.

L. H. S. Your Lordship may rise.

The Lord High Steward, by Leave of the Lords, went down to the Table for the Convenience of hearing.

L. H. S. Mr. Attorney General, you will proceed in your Evidence.

Mr. Attorney General. My Lords, the first Witness we call is Mr. Levinz.

William Levinz, Esquire. (Who was sworn in like Manner.)

Mr. Attorney General. Mr. Levinz is Uncle to the deceased Mr. Chaworth. Did you see Mr. Chaworth on the Twenty-sixth of January last?

Mr. Levinz. I did, about Ten at Night, or thereabouts.

Mr. Att. Gen. Where did you first see him?

Mr. Lev. I first saw him at his own House.

Mr. Att. Gen. That was after the Misfortune?

Mr. Lev. It was after the Misfortune.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did he give you any Account how that Misfortune had happened?---Mr. Lev. He did.

Mr. Att. Gen. What was that Account?

Mr. Lev. As soon as I got into the House I went into his Bedchamber. He took me by the Hand, and told me Lord Byron had given him a mortal Wound; desired I would send for a Lawyer as soon as possible to make a new Will, saying he believed he should be dead before Morning; upon which I came out into the outward Room. There were Mr. Serjeant Hawkins, Mr. Adair, Mr. Willoughby, and Mr. Hewett. I told them that Mr. Chaworth had desired me to send for a Lawyer, but I was so totally deprived of Recollection, I could not remember where any one lived; upon which Mr. Hawkins told me, there was one Mr. Partington, who lived in that Neighbourhood, that was a Man of Character, and that, if I pleased, he would send for him. Mr. Partington came, I believe, in a Quarter of an Hour. As soon as he came, I introduced him to Mr. Chaworth, and I left him in the Room to take his Instructions. When the Gentlemen were gone down Stairs, and Mr. Partington had begun making the Will in the next Room, I went to Mr. Chaworth, and asked him how this unfortunate Affair had happened? He told me, that Lord Byron took him into a Room; upon which Mr. Chaworth said, If we are to talk I had better shut the Door, or else they may overhear what we say. Upon his shutting the Door, the first Thing he saw when he turned his Head about, was Lord Byron's Sword half-drawn; upon which he drew his as quick as possible, and got the first Pass at him; and finding his Sword engaged in something, he thought it was my Lord's Body, and therefore wished to disarm him, and in endeavouring to close in for that Purpose, my Lord shortened his Sword, or Arm, I am not positive which, and gave him that mortal Wound. From that Time till the Time the Will was executed, which was about Three in the Morning, Mr. Chaworth's Head was so full of his private Affairs, that I cannot say I heard him mention the unfortunate Affair till after the Will was executed, when I asked him, Has this been fair? But he made no Answer that I could hear, but said he saw my Lord's Sword half out, and, knowing his Man, he drew his Sword as quick as he could; that he had the first Pass at him, and then my Lord wounded him; and after that, he disarmed his Lordship, when my Lord swore he was as brave a Man as any in England. He said twice to me, Good God! that I should be such a Fool as to fight in the Dark; for indeed there was very little Light. He said he did not believe Lord Byron intended fighting when they went into the Room; but seeing him up by the Door, he believed he thought he had him at an Advantage; and the first Thing he saw, upon turning his Head, was his Lordship's Sword half-drawn. He said he died as a Man of Honour, but he thought Lord Byron had done himself no Good by it. I asked him several Times in the Night, how this Affair begun above Stairs? He always answered, It is a long Story, and it is troublesome to me to talk. They will tell you; Mr. Donston will tell you. That is all I know of this unfortunate Affair.

Mr. Att. Gen. I shall ask Mr. Levinz no more Questions.

Lord High Steward. Lord Byron, will your Lordship ask this Witness any Questions?

Lord Byron. My Lords, I shall ask no Questions of this Witness.

A Lord. Did you understand that Mr. Chaworth went to shut the Door, that they might not be overheard, or to bolt the Door?

Mr. Lev. He expresly said, that he went to shut the Door, that they might not over-hear what they said.

A Lord. Was it before or after the making the Will that Mr. Chaworth gave that Account to you?

Mr. Lev. The first Account was about Eleven at Night, I believe, when the Will was first begun: The last Time he spoke to me about this unfortunate Affair was, I believe, within the Hour after the Will was executed.

Earl of Morton. Before the Will was made, when he gave the Account to the Gentlemen in the Room, did he seem to have most Attention to the making of his Will?

Mr. Lev. To the making of the Will; he seemed to have it prodigiously at Heart.

Earl of Morton. Did he seem to you in bodily Pain?

Mr. Lev. He was more or less so the whole Night; for about an Hour after the Will was executed, he was amazingly composed; about Four he fell into vast Tortures. I sent for Mr. Adair, who came to him, and by applying warm Fomentations relieved him very much; but from that Time I cannot say he talked about the unfortunate Affair; he sent for me up to desire that something might be done as soon as ever he was dead.

Earl of Morton. The last Time he spoke to you, was he seemingly in Pain?

Mr. Lev. My Lords, he never was free from Pain.

Earl of Denbigh. Did Mr. Chaworth tell you what paſt upon the Stairs, previous to his going into the Room?

Mr. Levinz. He never ſaid any Thing to me about what paſſed upon the Stairs; I wiſhed to know it, but never could learn it.

Lord High Steward. The Witneſs may withdraw.

Mr. Sollicitor General. The next Witneſs, my Lords, is Mr. Partington.

Thomas Walley Partington, Eſquire. (Who was ſworn in like Manner.)

Mr. Sollicitor General. Did you attend Mr. Chaworth on the Twenty-ſixth of January laſt?

Mr. Partington. I did.

Mr. Sol. Gen. At what Time did you attend him?

Mr. Par. A little after Ten o'Clock.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Who did you find with Mr. Chaworth?

Mr. Par. When I firſt came into the Houſe, I was taken into a Parlour, where there were Mr. Levinz, Mr. Hawkins, Mr. Adair, Mr. Hewett, and Mr. Willoughby. I ſtaid there a very few Minutes. I firſt aſked what I was ſent for? I was told, to make Mr. Chaworth's Will; and by the Converſation that paſſed between the Gentlemen there, I underſtood that Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth had fought in a Room by themſelves, and, according to an Expreſſion of one of the Gentlemen, by a Farthing Candle. After the Will was executed, Mr. Chaworth begun to talk of his Situation as of a dying Man. He expreſſed a Satisfaction that he was in that Situation, rather than to have lived and to have had the Life of any Man to anſwer for. After ſuch Converſation, Mr. Levinz, in ſeeming great Diſtreſs, ſaid to him, Dear Billy, for God's Sake, how was this? was it fair? Mr. Chaworth's Head was turned towards the Gentlemen on his Left Hand, Mr. Levinz ſtood on his Right. Upon that Queſtion being aſked, he turned his Head to Mr. Levinz, ſinking upon the Pillow. He ſaid ſomething which I could not diſtinguiſh, for I ſtood at the Bottom of the Bed, and immediately went round to where Mr. Levinz ſtood, and as I opened the Curtain, I heard him ſay ſomething of Lord Byron's Sword being drawn; upon which, and from what I underſtood had paſſed, I was led to aſk him this Queſtion, Mr. Chaworth, was my Lord Byron's Sword drawn when you came into the Room? He then anſwered what I afterwards wrote down.

Mr. Sol. Gen. How ſoon after did you write it down?

Mr. Par. Upon coming down into the Parlour, after I had ſealed up and delivered the Will to Mr. Levinz, as I had adviſed ſome Queſtion might be aſked when the Will was executed, ſo I thought it prudent, whilſt we were together, that we ſhould ſet down the Anſwer that Mr. Chaworth gave: The Gentlemen aſſented. I took a Pen and Ink and wrote, "When he came into the Room, Mr. Chaworth ſaid," and went on a little further: When I read what I had wrote, and I think Mr. Hewett in particular excepted to thoſe Words "When he came into the Room," I tore the Paper, and threw it into the Fire, and wrote the Words which I now have in my Hands.

Mr. Sol. Gen. How long after the finiſhing the Will were the Declarations contained in this Paper made?

Mr. Par. It muſt be but a very few Minutes.

Mr. Sol. Gen. We deſire the Paper may be read.

The Witneſs produced the Paper, and read it as follows:

"Sunday Morning, the Twenty-ſeventh of January, about Three of "the Clock, Mr. Chaworth ſaid, That my Lord's Sword was half-drawn, "and that he, knowing the Man, immediately, or as quick as he could, "whipt out his Sword, and had the firſt Thruſt; that then my Lord "wounded him, and he diſarmed my Lord, who then ſaid, By God, I "have as much Courage as any Man in England."

Lord High Steward. Lord Byron, will your Lordſhip aſk this Witneſs any Queſtions?

Lord Byron. Did not you underſtand this Declaration of the Facts to be an Anſwer to the Queſtion, whether it was fair or not?

Mr. Par. I underſtood the Declaration to be an Anſwer to Mr. Levinz and myſelf, and to the Inquiry in general, which was making by the Gentlemen.

Lord Byron. Did not you underſtand from thoſe Declarations that what had paſſed was fair?

Lord Mansfield. They will not aſk the Witneſs as to his Underſtanding, but to the Facts only. Your Lordſhips will draw the Concluſion.

L. H. S. You had this Paper to refreſh your own Memory?

Mr. Par. I had, my Lords.

Lord Ravenſworth. I deſire to know whether this Paper in Mr. Partington's Hand was not read, and allowed to be what Mr. Chaworth ſaid before every one in the Room. I do not look upon it as a Paper to refreſh his Memory, but as a Paper taken from the Mouth of Mr. Chaworth as a Declaration from him; and therefore deſire to know, if it was read to the Gentlemen in the Room, and who thoſe Gentlemen were?

L. H. S. Your Lordſhips will obſerve, that the Witneſs has been examined upon Oath with reſpect to the Declaration he has in his Hand, which was reduced into Writing; you may therefore aſk this Witneſs, whether he took that Paper in order to refreſh his Memory, or for what other Purpoſe?

Mr. Par. I took it for our general Recollection of the Words that Mr. Chaworth ſaid.

L. H. S. Were thoſe Declarations made to you?

Mr. Par. To all of us. They are the very Words I heard.

L. H. S. Then you may refreſh your Memory from the Paper.

Lord Ravenſworth. Was this Paper read to the Gentlemen who were below Stairs; and who were in the Room when Mr. Chaworth made the Declaration?

Mr. Par. Mr. Levinz, Mr. Hewett, Mr. Hawkins, Mr. Willoughby, and Mr. Adair, I think no other Gentleman was preſent, except myſelf, in the Room; after I had wrote this, I read it over, and they agreed it was the Subſtance of what Mr. Chaworth ſaid.

Lord Ravenſworth. Were they the Perſons preſent in the Bed-chamber when the Declaration was made?

Mr. Par. They were the Perſons preſent in the Bed-chamber when the Words were ſpoke; they were the Perſons preſent in the Parlour when I read it over; and it was agreed by all, that they were the Words Mr. Chaworth ſaid.

Lords. Read the Paper over again.

(Which was done by the Witneſs.)

Earl of Denbigh. Did you ever hear Mr. Chaworth ſay any Thing of any Converſation which paſſed previous to Lord Byron's drawing his Sword in the Room?

Mr. Par. I was with Mr. Chaworth, backwards and forwards, from Half an Hour paſt Ten till Three, and he ſaid nothing more to me than what I have repeated to your Lordſhips, concerning what had paſſed between him and my Lord Byron.

Duke of Mancheſter. Did you ever ſhew this Paper, of which you now ſpeak, to Mr. Chaworth before his Death?

Mr. Par. No, my Lords; I never ſaw Mr. Chaworth after I came down from him, after he had executed his Will.

Lord Viſcount Townſhend. Was it ever read by any of the Gentlemen to Mr. Chaworth?

Mr. Par. Not to my Knowledge; it has never been in my Cuſtody ſince.

Lord Viſcount Townſhend. Where was it?

Mr. Par. I delivered it to Mr. Levinz that Night; and I never ſaw it ſince, but once in Mr. Joynes's, Mr. Levinz Solicitor's, Hands.

Duke of Mancheſter. The Paper that you firſt began to write, I think, you ſaid was thrown into the Fire?

Mr. Par. It was, my Lords.

Duke of Mancheſter. Was it not compleated when thrown into the Fire?

Mr. Par. I had wrote as far of the Paper as where the Expreſſion half-drawn is mentioned.

Lord Cathcart. Did the Paper you burnt, and the other Paper you now have, differ?——Mr. Par. No.

Earl Gower. I deſire to know whether you threw the Paper into the Fire, becauſe it differed from the Account Mr. Chaworth gave, or becauſe it differed from your own Account?

Mr. Par. The Reaſon it was thrown into the Fire was, I thought it was better to write it over again, than to have it appear with an Alteration in it. I had ſtruck out ſome Words Mr. Hewett objected to, and for that Reaſon I wrote it over again fair.

Lord High Steward. The Witneſs may withdraw.

Earl of Denbigh. I deſire Mr. Levinz may be called in again.

Mr. Attorney General. I think it my Duty to inform your Lordſhips, that from a Miſapprehenſion on our Part, that the Witneſſes might differ in ſome little Matters, we were extremely tender of examining any of them to what was contained in the Writing, conceiving the legal Evidence to be the Paper-Writing itſelf; and if your Lordſhips think that the Paper cannot be admitted, I am in your Lordſhips Breaſts, if it is not proper for us to call the Witneſſes to ſpeak to theſe Declarations. We were extremely tender in examining to any Thing that ſhould lead to the Converſation contained in this Paper.

Lord Mansfield. By my Notes it appears, that Mr. Hewett ſpoke preciſely to the Declarations of Mr. Chaworth; for after he had been examined to the Writing, he ſaid, there was an Exception taken to ſome Words in it, and it was deſtroyed, and a new one was wrote.

Duke of Richmond. My Lords, a Queſtion was ſome Time ſince aſked by the Priſoner of Mr. Partington, the Anſwer to which I did not at this Diſtance hear.

Lord High Steward. That Queſtion was objected to by a noble Lord as improper, and therefore it was not anſwered.

Earl of Denbigh. I deſire that Mr. Levinz may be called to the Bar again, to be further examined.

Lord Harwich. Your Lordſhips cannot enter into any Debate here: If there be any Difference of Opinion, it will be neceſſary to go back to the Chamber of Parliament.

The Lords were then moved to adjourn to the Chamber of Parliament.

Lords. Ay, Ay.

Lord High Steward. This Houſe is adjourned to the Chamber of Parliament.

The Lords and others returned to the Chamber of Parliament in the ſame Order as they went from thence this Morning, and the Houſe was there Reſumed; and, after ſome Time, again adjourned to Weſtminſter-Hall; and the Peers and others went down in the ſame Order as before; and the Peers being there ſeated, and the Lord High Steward in his Chair,

Lord High Steward. My Lords, the Houſe is Reſumed: Is it your Lordſhips Pleaſure that the Judges may be covered?

Lords. Ay, Ay.

Then the Serjeant at Arms made Proclamation for Silence as uſual, and afterwards the following Proclamation.

Serjeant at Arms. Oyez, Oyez, Oyez! Lieutenant of the Tower, bring forth your Priſoner, William Lord Byron, to the Bar, purſuant to the Order of the Houſe of Lords.

The Deputy Governor of the Tower brought the Priſoner to the Bar in the like Form as before, and then he kneeled down.

Lord High Steward. Your Lordſhip may riſe.

Then the Lord High Steward, by Leave of the Lords, went down to the Table,

Lord High Steward. Mr. Attorney General, you will proceed in your Evidence.

Mr. Attorney General. My Lords, if I could have conceived that there remained a Doubt in the Minds of any one of your Lordſhips, that the Contents of this Paper were not true, I ſhould have thought it my Duty to have called all the Witneſſes to have ſubſtantiated the Contents: But as I cannot now treſpaſs upon your Lordſhips Patience, the Evidence on Behalf of the Crown is cloſed; and we leave it here.

Earl

Earl of Denbigh. I desire that Mr. Levinz may be called to the Bar.

Mr. Levinz was called again.

Earl of Denbigh. There was a Converſation paſſed between Mr. Chaworth and the noble Priſoner at the Bar, previous to Mr. Chaworth's ſhutting the Door; now I ſhould be glad to know whether Mr. Chaworth ſaid any Thing to you, relative to the Converſation which paſſed between him and Lord Byron upon the Stairs, previous to their going into the Room where they fought?

Mr. Levinz. No, my Lords; what he told me was, that Lord Byron aſked him into the Room; that when he came into the Room, he ſaid, My Lord, if we are to talk we had better ſhut the Door, or elſe they may overhear what we ſay: And I never heard Mr. Chaworth ſay any Thing elſe about it.

Duke of Newcaſtle. When you aſked Mr. Chaworth whether it was fair, you were on one Side of the Bed, and Mr. Chaworth turned his Head, and ſaid ſomething which Mr. Partington did not hear; I deſire to know whether, upon that Occaſion, you heard any Anſwer to that Queſtion?

Mr. Levinz. At that Time I did not: I aſked him the ſame Queſtion once afterwards, and he gave me no Anſwer; but ſeemed to me to ſhrink his Head into the Pillow.

Lord Viſcount Folkeſtone. When Mr. Chaworth told you what paſſed in the Room where they fought, did he ſay that Lord Byron bid him defend himſelf, or any Thing to that Purpoſe?

Mr. Levinz. Mr. Chaworth told me, that, on his turning his Head from the Door, he ſaw Lord Byron's Sword half-drawn. My Lord ſaid, Draw, Draw! I am ſure Mr. Chaworth ſaid the Word, Draw, twice.

Lord Viſcount Folkeſtone. Did Mr. Chaworth explain to you in what Manner he received the Wound?

Mr. Levinz. He told me he felt the Point of his Sword engaged in ſomething, and that he took it to be my Lord's Body; that, therefore, he wiſhed to diſarm him; and in endeavouring to cloſe in for that Purpoſe, my Lord ſhortened his Sword, or his Arm (I am not certain which Word he made uſe of), and gave him that Wound. This was all that he ſaid to me on that Subject.

Lord High Steward. The Witneſs may withdraw.

Mr. Attorney General. My Lords, as the Witneſſes have fully proved the Evidence and Facts which I ſtated to your Lordſhips in the Opening, I will not trouble your Lordſhips to call any more Witneſſes, but will reſt our Evidence, in Support of the Proſecution, here.

Mr. Solliciter General.

My Lords,

THE Evidence on the Part of the Proſecution being cloſed, it remains for me, according to the uſual Courſe of Proceeding, to collect, as far as it may be neceſſary, into one View, the Proofs that have been made, and to apply them to the preſent Charge: A very painful Taſk! but yet Juſtice to the public Peace, to the Memory of the Deceaſed, and to the Solicitude of his ſurviving Friends, authorizes and requires it. I ſhould wiſh to diſcharge this Part of my Duty with that Benevolence and Humanity which poſſeſſed the Mind of the Deceaſed in the laſt Hours of his Life.

The noble Priſoner at the Bar is charged with having killed Mr. Chaworth deliberately and maliciouſly: or, in the Terms of the Indictment, with Malice aforethought. That he killed him, is a Truth beyond Diſpute; and he who takes away the Life of another, is preſumed to have taken it away deliberately and maliciouſly, till it ſhall appear to have been the Effect of Neceſſity, of Accident, or of ſudden Paſſion; for as Neceſſity will juſtify, and Accident excuſe the Fact, an ungovernable Tranſport of Paſſion will ſo far alleviate the Crime, as to make that, which would otherwiſe have been Murder and a capital Offence, Manſlaughter only, which ſaves the Life of the Offender.

This is a Condeſcenſion the Law ſhews to the Frailties of the human Mind, which upon great and ſudden Provocations cannot command itſelf, nor maintain its Reaſon; but whilſt the Law ſhews this Condeſcenſion, it guards the Life of the Subject, with all poſſible Caution and Reſerve, againſt the Exceſs and Abuſe of the Benignity. It ſhelters no Man whoſe Mind is not free, perfectly free, from the Guilt of Malice, expreſſed in Words, or implied in Action. To be free from Malice, he muſt have acted from the Impulſe of a preſent Paſſion, without Deliberation or meditated Miſchief. If it ſhould ſo have happened that the Provocation did not irritate, or irritating did not overcome the Reaſon, or overcoming the Reaſon, the Mind cooled and deliberated, or had Time to cool and deliberate, and then he fought and killed, he has incurred the Guilt of malicious Murder; he did not act from the Impulſe of a preſent Paſſion; and whatever Motive actuated him, whether ſome ſecret Grudge, or an imaginary Neceſſity of vindicating his Honour, or of ſatisfying the World of his Courage, or any other latent Cauſe, he is no Object of this Benignity of the Law.

The Law Books do not make it Murder, only where the Paſſion has actually cooled; but where, in the Time that has paſſed, it ought in Reaſon to have cooled. And in Major Oneby's Caſe, no more than an Hour had paſſed, and the Judges thought that ſufficient for the Purpoſe.

There is no ſpecific Evidence required to ſhew that the Mind has cooled, it muſt depend upon the particular Circumſtances of the Caſe; but all the Books, from the Time of Lord Morley's Caſe, in the Reign of Charles II. down to the Treatiſe of a late learned Judge, agree, that the Party engaging in different Converſation, or in Amuſements, affords a convincing Proof that he labours under no Tranſport of Paſſion, but has cooled and recovered his Reaſon.

I will not abuſe your Lordſhips Patience with going through the Detail of the Evidence. Your Lordſhips ſerious and unwearied Attention, during the Courſe of this Trial, have made it unneceſſary. I ſhall only point out ſome Obſervations ariſing from what paſſed at the Three moſt material Periods of Time, that is, during the Converſation in the Room where the Company dined; upon the Stairs; and in the Room below.

Nothing could be more innocent than the Converſation of the Company about the beſt Method of preſerving of the Game; there could be no Offence in Mr. Chaworth's ſaying, that he had more Game upon his Eſtate, than Lord Byron had upon his; nor was there any in Lord Byron's ſaying, that he had the moſt. The firſt Offence, that ſeems to have been taken, was my Lord Byron's repeating the Queſtion relative to Sir Charles Sedley's Manors; Mr. Donſton underſtood it to be ſo. But it does not preciſely appear, whether the Offence was given by the bare Repetition of the Queſtion, or that it imported a Reflection upon an abſent Friend; or that it contained too flat a Contradiction of what he had aſſerted; or that there was any Thing particularly affronting in the Tone of Voice, or in the Countenance, or in the Geſture; but it is very plain, Mr. Chaworth thought himſelf offended, and Mr. Chaworth's Expreſſions upon the Stairs, in aſking Mr. Donſton if he had been wanting in "his Reply," imports it. It is clear too, from the Queſtions Lord Byron aſked Mr. Chaworth, that Lord Byron ſaw Mr. Chaworth had taken Offence. But whatever Effect Lord Byron's Behaviour had upon Mr. Chaworth, Mr. Chaworth's had no viſible Effect upon Lord Byron: no Action or Expreſſion of Anger eſcaped him; there was no Change of Countenance; the Matter ended there. Other Converſation engaged the Company; Lord Byron appeared to Mr. Hewett to be converſing in good Humour with Mr. Molyneux; and Mr. Molyneux confirms the Reality of it. A full Hour paſſed in general Converſation. Mr. Chaworth does not ſeem to have been much diſcompoſed, though Fynmore ſays he was a little ruffled; which he collects from a Miſtake he made in Settling the Book; a trifling Circumſtance! from which no juſt Inference can be drawn. But the Queſtion is not, Whether Mr. Chaworth was ruffled, but whether Lord Byron was agitated with any Violence of Paſſion? It is for your Lordſhips to determine whether this Period affords any Proof of a ſudden Quarrel, or of a heated Temper; without Time to cool, or Leiſure to deliberate; and whether any Thing can be collected from hence, that will intitle the noble Priſoner to this Benignity of the Law, which is extended only to the Impetuoſity of a ſudden Paſſion.

In this Situation Lord Byron left the Room, in Appearance cool and deliberate; if he had then a Purpoſe to fight, I am afraid it muſt have been deliberate; if he had not, it imports Lord Byron to prove ſome new Occaſion of Quarrel. What paſſed upon the Stairs affords only one Obſervation, Lord Byron told Mr. Chaworth he wanted to ſpeak to him. If the Purpoſe for which he wanted to ſpeak to him is to be explained by what paſſed below, that Purpoſe was deliberate and without Provocation; if he had not ſuch Purpoſe in his Mind at that Time, will it not warrant Mr. Chaworth's Suſpicions? Your Lordſhips will recollect what Mr. Chaworth ſaid, and what he thought was the Reaſon for calling him to an Account in that Place and in that Manner. Your Lordſhips will recollect likewiſe what Diſadvantages the Place gave to Mr. Chaworth. If Mr. Chaworth underſtood the Sword, he underſtood it as the Accompliſhment of a Gentleman. It never hurt his Innocence, he abhorred to ſhed the Blood of any Man. The Darkneſs of the Room, and Confinement of the Place, probably prevented him from giving a ſignal Proof of it in diſarming his Adverſary. There is Reaſon to believe it. How conſpicuous in his laſt Hours was his Benevolence to all Mankind, his Humanity to the Author of his Death, his ſerious and earneſt Attention to the Diſcharge of the remaining Duties of his Life, and the Magnanimity with which he beheld the approaching Minute of his Death!

I ſhall lay no Weight upon the Manner in which the Wound was given. Till Mr. Partington was examined, an Inference aroſe to the Diſadvantage of Lord Byron from the ſuppoſed Silence of Mr. Chaworth, when he was aſked, Whether the Wound was fairly given? Mr. Partington's Evidence may have left it now in ſome Doubt, what Opinion Mr. Chaworth had of that Circumſtance. I will not allow myſelf to obſerve upon it; nor will I repeat that unguarded Expreſſion your Lordſhips have heard, that my Lord Byron uſed after the Wound was given, and after Mr. Chaworth had cloſed in, and was endeavouring to prevent further Miſchief. It muſt give Pain to the noble Priſoner to hear it repeated; it muſt have made its Impreſſion on your Lordſhips Minds; it is fitter to remain there than to be the Subject of public Diſcuſſion. It is for your Lordſhips to determine whether this Miſchief has happened from the Impulſe of a ſudden Paſſion, or reſulted from a deliberate and premeditated Purpoſe.

Lord High Steward. My Lord Byron, the Counſel for the Crown have done: Now is the Time for your Lordſhip to make your Defence; and if you have any Witneſſes to examine, now is your Time to call them.

Lord Byron. My Lords, I ſhall not call any Witneſſes. I have reduced into Writing what I have to offer to your Lordſhips; which, as my Voice is very low, I am apprehenſive of my not being heard by your Lordſhips, and therefore deſire it may be read by the Clerk.

Lords. Read, Read.

Clerk reads.

My Lords,

YOUR Lordſhips are now in full Poſſeſſion of the Evidence againſt me, and, I am convinced, will weigh it with the Wiſdom and Impartiality which have ever diſtinguiſhed the Court of the Peers of Great-Britain.

This Conſideration, my Lords, affords me Comfort and Support, though oppreſſed under the heavy Load of an Accuſation of Murder, againſt which I am now required to ſpeak in my own Defence.

My Inexperience in the nice Diſtinctions of Law, and in Proceedings of this Nature, but ill qualify me for this Taſk; and will furniſh very ample Occaſion for the Goodneſs and Indulgence of your Lordſhips.

The Witneſſes (as far as their Knowledge and Obſervation could lead them) have already ſufficiently proved the accidental Manner in which the greateſt Part of the Tranſaction happened; and the Innocence of my own Intentions, through the Whole of it, makes it difficult for me to ſelect any particular Paſſages which may more immediately demand your Lordſhips Attention.

Let me preſume, however, to lay before you my own Narrative of the Fact, according to the beſt of my Recollection. It agrees in Subſtance with great Part of what has fallen from the Witneſſes, but it ſupplies ſome Particulars which may poſſibly deſerve Weight and Credit. In doing this, the Reſpect which I owe to your Lordſhips, as well as a tender Concern for my own Honour, will not ſuffer me to prevaricate, neither will I conceal or deny what is true.

After we had dined at the Club, about Seven o'Clock, a Diſcourſe began concerning Game, and Mr. Chaworth inſiſted, that Strictneſs and Severity were the only effectual Methods with the Country People.

I muſt confeſs that I was of a different Opinion, being for gentler Meaſures; and therefore obſerved, that ſuch Severity might only prompt them to do more Miſchief; and added ſuch Circumſtances as I thought ſupported what I ſaid.

This Diſcourſe laſted ſome Time; and, during the Whole of it, I was concerned to obſerve that the deceaſed Gentleman, without any Cauſe, treated me in a ſlighting and contemptuous Manner.

Towards the Concluſion of it, he, with ſome Heat, ſaid, There would be no Game in the Country; and that I ſhould not have a ſingle Hare on my Eſtate, if it was not for the Care taken by himſelf and Sir Charles Sedley, to preſerve the Game on their Manors; and added, that he had more Game on five Acres than I had in all my Manors. The Propoſal of a Bet followed, but ſome of the Gentlemen interfered, and no Bet was made.

Mr. Chaworth again mentioned Sir Charles Sedley's Manors, and his Care of the Game; upon which I happened to aſk what Manors of Sir Charles Sedley he meant; when he anſwered, Nuttall and Bulwell; to which I replied, I did not underſtand how that could be, for though I knew Nuttall was Sir Charles Sedley's, yet Bulwell Park was mine.

Mr. Chaworth anſwered, that beſides Bulwell Park, there was the Lordſhip of Bulwell Town (a Point, which I believe may formerly have been in Diſpute between Mr. Wentworth's Family and mine, but has long lain dormant), and that Sir Charles Sedley had a Deputation for that Lordſhip.

Upon which I made ſome inſignificant Obſervation on the Uncertainty of Deputations, as they are liable to be recalled at any Time, or ſomething to that Purpoſe.

Whereupon, to the beſt of my Recollection, Mr. Chaworth replied in the following Words: "Sir Charles Sedley, my Lord, lives at Mr. "Cooper's, in ſuch a Place, and I doubt not, will be ready to give your "Lordſhip Satisfaction about his Manors, if you have any Thing to "ſay concerning them; and as to myſelf, you know where I live, and "I ſhall be ready to anſwer your Lordſhip whenever you will call upon "me, if you have any Thing to ſay to me."

Theſe Words, ſo unexpected, of ſuch an Import, uttered, and repeated in the Manner they were, would not admit of any Reply, but put an End to the Diſcourſe; ſo that nothing further paſſed between the deceaſed Gentleman and myſelf, at that Time; but during the ſhort Stay I made afterwards, I might poſſibly have ſome very ſhort Converſation, on indifferent Matters, with Mr. Molyneux, who was next me.

And here, I muſt obſerve, that as I ſat at the lower Corner on the one Side, and Mr. Chaworth at the upper Corner on the other Side of a long Table, at which Ten People had dined, no private Intimations for a future Meeting, or other Signs, could be given by either of us, without being perceived by all the reſt of the Company, to whoſe Evidence I muſt refer, obſerving only that no ſuch Thing is pretended, or even ſuſpected by any of the Gentlemen who have been called upon.

Soon after this Diſcourſe was finiſhed in the abrupt Manner I have mentioned, the Club Book was brought to Mr. Chaworth, who uſually ſettled it, and did ſo on this Occaſion, though with ſome Hurry and Confuſion, as Fynmore, the Maſter of the Tavern, has told your Lordſhips.

The Book being ſettled, and the Reckoning paid by Mr. Chaworth, and ſeveral of the Company, I ſaw him go behind a Screen in the Room which intirely conceals the Door, and I had every Reaſon to conclude that he was gone.

I ſtaid ſome Time to ſettle and diſcharge my Reckoning, which might detain me near Ten Minutes, and then I took my Hat, and left the Company.

As I was going out of the Room, I remember that Somebody paſſed me behind the Screen near the Door, and believe it might be Mr. Donſton, who (I think) ſays, he met me, but being in the Shade, I could not well diſtinguiſh him, ſo as to take particular Notice, or ſay any Thing to him.

When I opened the Door, I ſaw Mr. Chaworth on the Landing-Place, near the upper Step of the Stairs, with his Face towards the Door, and his Back to the Stairs, not moving (as he appeared to me), but rather as if he waited for Somebody coming out.

The Landing-Place is ſo narrow, that to go without the Door of the Room was unavoidably to paſs near Mr. Chaworth, who immediately ſaid, "Has your Lordſhip any Commands for me?" which he ſpake in a very particular and ſignificant Manner, and not (to my Apprehenſion) as a Queſtion either of Civility or Reſpect.

I only anſwered, "I ſhould be glad of an Opportunity of ſpeaking a "few Words to him." Mr. Chaworth replied, "That the Stairs were "not a proper Place, and, if I pleaſed, we would go into a Room."

We then went down together to the Landing-Place of the One Pair of Stairs (for we dined up Two Pair of Stairs), and there the Waiter was called, and as it was repeated Three or Four Times, it is moſt probable we both called him.

The Waiter ſoon came with a Candle, and being aſked (I am ſorry I cannot recollect who put the Queſtion) which of thoſe Rooms (meaning the Two Rooms on that Floor) was empty, he threw open the Door of One of them, and going in firſt, ſet his Candle upon the Table, which ſtood towards the Middle of the Room, whilſt we went to the Fire.

He retired immediately, and ſhut the Door after him.

I then ſaid to Mr. Chaworth, as we ſtill continued ſtanding by the Fire, "How am I to take thoſe Words you uſed above, as an intended Affront "from Sir Charles Sedley, or yourſelf?" Mr. Chaworth replied, "Your "Lordſhip may take them as you pleaſe, either as an Affront or not, and "I imagine this Room is as fit a Place as any other to decide the Affair "in."

Then turning round, he ſaid, He would bolt the Door to prevent any Interruption, or any Body interfering, or Words to that Effect. Accordingly, he went to the Door and faſtened it. In the mean time, his Intention being but too manifeſt, by this Action and his laſt Expreſſion, I went round on the further Side of the Table, towards the moſt open Part of the Room, which your Lordſhips have been informed by Fynmore is about Sixteen Feet Square, and the Furniture did not leave a vacant Space of more than Twelve Feet in Length, and, as I believe, Five Feet in Breadth, where it was my unhappy Lot to be obliged to engage.

Mr. Chaworth was now turned round from bolting the Door, and as I could not any longer continue in Doubt of his Intention, it was impoſſible for me in ſuch a Situation to avoid putting my Hand to my Sword, and I believe I might at the ſame Time bid him Draw, or uſe ſome other Words of the like Import, though I cannot now be certain of the Expreſſion.

Mr. Chaworth immediately drew his Sword, and made a Thruſt at me, which I parried; he made a ſecond, which alſo miſſed of its Effect: And then finding myſelf with my Back againſt the Table, with great Diſadvantage of the Light, I endeavoured to ſhift a little more to the Right Hand, which unavoidably brought us nearer to each other, and gave me an Opportunity to perceive that the deceaſed Gentleman was making a third Paſs at me. We both thruſt at the ſame Time, when I found Mr. Chaworth's Sword againſt my Ribs, having cut my Waiſtcoat and Shirt for upwards of eight Inches; and I ſuppoſe it was then, that he received the unlucky Wound, which I ſhall ever reflect upon with the utmoſt Regret.

Mr. Chaworth pauſed, and ſaid, "I am afraid I have killed you;" at the ſame Time putting his Left-Hand to his Belly, which, on withdrawing it again, I could perceive was bloody.

I expreſſed the like Apprehenſion on his Account; and, Mr. Chaworth telling me that he was wounded, I ſaid that I was ſorry for it, and went to the Bell, near the Fire, to ring it, in order to call for Aſſiſtance, whilſt the unfortunate Gentleman, being ſtill near the Door, unbolted it.

I then returned to him; and as I was ſupporting him to an Elbow-chair which ſtood near the Fire, I could not help obſerving, that, He might thank himſelf for what had happened, as he had been the Aggreſſor; that I ſuppoſed he took me for a Coward, but I hoped I had as much Courage as another Man. Mr. Chaworth replied, My Lord, all I have to ſay is, you have behaved like a Gentleman.

During this Diſcourſe Fynmore came into the Room, took our Swords, whilſt I was employed, to the beſt of my Power, in ſupporting Mr. Chaworth, and at my Requeſt went for the Surgeon. The reſt of the Gentlemen alſo, who were above Stairs, being now alarmed, came down into the Room; where I continued for ſome Time, being deſirous to give every Kind of Aſſiſtance to the Deceaſed; and afterwards I waited in a Room below, till he was removed to his own Houſe.

My Lords, This is my melancholy Story. I cannot pretend to call any Witneſſes in Support of thoſe Parts of it, which relate to what paſſed during the few Minutes whilſt we were in private; but as the Declarations of the Deceaſed are admitted as Evidence, your Lordſhips will compare the broken Accounts collected by thoſe Gentlemen who diſcourſed with him, with ſuch Circumſtances as my Memory and Knowledge tell me are exactly true.

There are ſeveral Perſons now attending, and ready to atteſt various Inſtances of friendly Intercourſe and Civility from me to the Deceaſed; but as nothing has been offered to induce your Lordſhips to believe the contrary, I will not enter into that Evidence, nor offer any other on my Part, relying upon your Lordſhips Juſtice, and my own Innocence; not only as that Innocence may be preſumed from the Inſufficiency of Proof on the Part of the Proſecutors, to ſhew either Malice or Premeditation in me, but as moſt of the Witneſſes unanimouſly agree in declaring the Provocation, Challenge, and Inſult offered me; and your Lordſhips will not imagine that I felt them with leſs Emotion, becauſe my Manner and my Words were decent.

My Lords, As the Provocation was great, ſo the Time was very ſhort, between the Converſation and my meeting with Mr. Chaworth upon the Stairs, which was quite unexpected to me.

After that accidental Meeting, the Time of our continuing together (which was ſcarce Four Minutes), the Light, the Unfitneſs of the Place, and every other Circumſtance prove, in the ſtrongeſt Manner, that nothing could be more ſudden and unpremeditated than the Conflict that ended ſo unfortunately, and in which I received the Firſt Thruſt, at the Peril of my own Life.

Our Fighting could not be very regular, circumſtanced as it was; but notwithſtanding ſome Inſinuations, my own Mind does not charge me with the leaſt Unfairneſs. The Facts declared by Mr. Chaworth, import the contrary; and Mr. Partington has acquainted your Lordſhips, that the laſt Declarations, reduced into Writing, were underſtood by him, and by the other Gentlemen preſent, as an Anſwer to every Queſtion which had been aſked.

My Lords, It is very plain from the Evidence, that Mr. Chaworth had not cooled; and if the Infirmity of his Temper was ſuch, as not to have recovered itſelf in ſo ſhort an Interval, though he had done the Injury; your Lordſhips, I hope, will at leaſt make that Allowance (which the Law permits) to the like Infirmity of Nature in him who had been injured.

Grieved and affected as I am on this Occaſion, and willing to ſpare any Reflection on the Dead, the Neceſſity of my Defence obliges me to take Notice, that according to the Evidence of Mr. Donſton, whom he deſired to ſpeak with on the Stairs, he but too clearly explained the Senſe in which his Words were intended, by aſking that Gentleman, Whether he had obſerved what paſſed between himſelf and me, and whether he had left the Matter ſhort?

Such a Behaviour, my Lords, needs no Comment, eſpecially if conſidered with the Sequel of it; after we came into the Room below, where he declined giving me any reaſonable Explanation; though ſuch an one might eaſily have been given as would have been conſiſtent with my Honour and Character.

In ſuch a Caſe your Lordſhips will, no doubt, have ſome Conſideration for

for human Weakneſs and Paſſion, always influenced and inflamed in ſome Degree by the Cuſtoms of the World.

And though I am perſuaded that Compaſſion can never obſtruct your impartial Juſtice, yet I truſt that you will incline to mitigate the Rigour of it, and adminiſter it, according to Law, in Mercy.

I am told, my Lords, that it has been held by the greateſt Authorities in the Law, that if contumelious Words (and ſtill more, I preſume, if contemptuous Words of Challenge) have been given by one Man to another, and, before they are cooled, either bids the other draw his Sword, and Death enſues, after mutual Paſſes, the Fact in that Caſe will not amount to Murder.

Therefore I am willing to hope, that your Lordſhips, in weighing theſe Circumſtances, may find ſufficient Cauſe to acquit me of all Malice, and to conſider me as an unhappy Man, innocent in Intention, conſcious only of Miſfortune.

My Lords, I will detain you no longer. I am in your Lordſhips Judgment, and ſhall expect your Sentence, whether for Life or Death, with all the Submiſſion that is due to the nobleſt and moſt equitable Court of Judicature in the World.

Then the Lord High Steward returned back to his Chair.

Lord High Steward. Lieutenant of the Tower, take William Lord Byron from the Bar.

Which was done accordingly.

Lord Preſident. My Lords, I move your Lordſhips to adjourn to the Chamber of Parliament.—Lords. Ay, Ay.

L. H. S. This Houſe is adjourned to the Chamber of Parliament.

The Lords and others returned to the Chamber of Parliament in the ſame Order they came down: And, after ſome Time, the Houſe was adjourned again into Weſtminſter-Hall; and the Peers being there ſeated, and the Lord High Steward in his Chair, and the Houſe reſumed, the Serjeant at Arms made Proclamation for ſilence as uſual.

L. H. S. Your Lordſhips have heard the Evidence, and every Thing that has been alledged on both Sides; and the Solemnity of your Proceedings requires that your Lordſhips Opinions on the Queſtion, of Guilty, or Not Guilty, ſhould be delivered ſeverally in the Abſence of the Priſoner, beginning with the junior Baron; and that the Priſoner ſhould afterwards be acquainted with the Reſult of thoſe Opinions by me. Is it your Lordſhips Pleaſure to proceed now to give your Opinions on the Queſtion, of Guilty, or Not Guilty?—Lords. Ay, Ay.

Then the Lord High Steward ſtood up uncovered; and, beginning with the youngeſt Peer, ſaid,

George Lord Vernon, What ſays your Lordſhip? Is William Lord Byron Guilty of the Felony and Murder whereof he ſtands indicted, or Not Guilty?

Whereupon George Lord Vernon, ſtanding up in his Place, uncovered, and laying his Right Hand upon his Breaſt, anſwered,

Not Guilty of Murder, but Guilty of Manſlaughter, upon my Honour.

In like Manner the ſeveral Lords after-mentioned, being all that were preſent, anſwered as followeth:

Then the Lord High Steward, ſtanding uncovered at the Chair, laying his Hand upon his Breaſt, ſaid;

Lord High Steward. My Lords, I am of Opinion that William Lord Byron is not Guilty of Murder, but Guilty of Manſlaughter, upon my Honour.

Lord High Steward. Your Lordſhips have found that William Lord Byron is not Guilty of the Felony and Murder whereof he ſtands indicted; but have found him Guilty of Manſlaughter; One Hundred and Nineteen of your Lordſhips having voted him Guilty of Manſlaughter, and the remaining Four having declared him to be Not Guilty generally: Is it your Lordſhips Pleaſure that he ſhould be called in, and acquainted therewith?

Lords. Ay, Ay.

Proclamation was then made for the Lieutenant of the Tower to bring the Priſoner to the Bar, which was done in the ſame Order as before; and afterwards Proclamation was made for Silence, as uſual.

Lord High Steward. William Lord Byron, The Lords have conſidered of the Charge and Evidence brought againſt you, and have likewiſe conſidered of every Thing which you have alledged in your Defence, and upon the whole Matter, their Lordſhips have found you Not Guilty of the Murder whereof you ſtand indicted, but Guilty of Manſlaughter. What has your Lordſhip to alledge againſt Judgment being pronounced upon you?

Upon which his Lordſhip claimed the Benefit of the Statute of Edward the Sixth.

Whereupon the Lord High Steward acquainted him, that he was allowed the Benefit of that Statute, and was diſcharged, paying his Fees.

Proclamation was then made for Silence in the uſual Manner.

Lord High Steward. My Lords, this Trial being at an End, nothing remains to be done here, but to determine the Commiſſion.

Lords. Ay, Ay.

Lord High Steward. Let Proclamation be made for diſſolving the Commiſſion of High Steward.

Serjeant at Arms. Oyez, Oyez, Oyez! Our Sovereign Lord the King does ſtrictly charge and command all Manner of Perſons here preſent, and that have here attended, to depart hence in the Peace of God, and of our ſaid Sovereign Lord the King, for his Grace my Lord High Steward of Great-Britain intends now to diſſolve his Commiſſion.

Then the White Staff being delivered to the Lord High Steward by the Gentleman-Uſher of the Black Rod upon his Knee, his Grace ſtood up uncovered, and holding the Staff in both his Hands, broke it in Two, and declared the Commiſſion to be diſſolved; and then leaving the Chair, came down to the Woolpack, and ſaid, Is it your Lordſhips Pleaſure to adjourn to the Chamber of Parliament?

Lords. Ay, Ay.

Lord High Steward. This Houſe is adjourned to the Chamber of Parliament.

Then the Peers and others returned back to the Chamber of Parliament, in the ſame Order they came down, except that their Royal Highneſſes the Duke of Glouceſter and Duke of York, walked after the Lord Chancellor.

LVIII. The Trial of KATHARINE NAIRN and PATRICK OGILVIE, for the Crimes of Inceſt and Murder, before the High Court of Juſticiary in Scotland, upon the 5th, 12th, 13th, 14th, 15th, and 16th Days of Auguſt, 1765.

KATHARINE NAIRN, Widow of the deceaſed Thomas Ogilvie of Eaſtmiln, in the County of Forfar;

AND

PATRICK OGILVIE, Lieutenant of the eighty-ninth Regiment of Foot, Brother-German of the ſaid deceaſed Thomas Ogilvie;

Both now Priſoners in the Tolbooth of Edinburgh;

PANNELS.

Indicted and accuſed at the Inſtance of Thomas Miller of Barſkimming, Eſq. his Majeſty's Advocate, for his Majeſty's Intereſt, for the Crimes of Inceſt and Murder, in Manner mentioned in the Criminal Indictment raiſed thereanent, Bearing, THAT WHEREAS, by the Law of God, and the Laws of this and all other well-governed Realms, the Crime of Inceſt, committed betwixt a Man and the Wife of his Brother-German, eſpecially when ſuch Crime is committed within the Dwelling-houſe of the injured Huſband, where the Offenders were cheriſhed and entertained by him with Confidence and Truſt, is a heinous Crime, and moſt ſeverely puniſhable; and particularly by an Act paſſed in the Parliament of Scotland, in the Year One thouſand five hundred and ſixty-ſeven, being the firſt Parliament of King James the Sixth, chap. 14. intituled, "Anent "them that commit Inceſt," it is ſtatuted and ordained, "That quhat-"ſumever Perſon or Perſones that committes the ſaid abhominable Cryme "of Inceſt, that is to ſay, quhatſumever Perſon or Perſones they be "that abuſes their Bodie with ſik Perſones in Degrie, as God in his "Word has expreſslie forbidden, in ony Time cumming, as is con-"tained in the xviii. Chapter of Leviticus, ſall be puniſhed to the Death:" And alſo whereas, by the ſame holy Law of God, and by the Laws of this and every other well-governed Realm, all wilful Homicide or Murder, eſpecially when perpetrated by Poiſon, and above all, when ſuch Murder is committed under Truſt, or upon a Perſon to whom Fidelity and Affection are due by the moſt ſacred Ties, is alſo a Crime of moſt heinous and atrocious Nature, and ſeverely puniſhable: Yet true it is, and of Verity, that the ſaid Katharine Nairn and Patrick Ogilvie, ſhaking off all Fear of God and Regard to the Laws, have preſumed to commit, and are guilty, Actors, Art and Part, of both, or one or other of the ſaid heinous Crimes of Inceſt and Murder, aggravated as aforeſaid: In ſo far as, the ſaid Katharine Nairn having been married to the ſaid deceaſed Thomas Ogilvie in the Month of January laſt, in this preſent Year One thouſand ſeven hundred and ſixty-five; and the ſaid Patrick Ogilvie having about that Time returned from abroad, and taken up his Reſidence at the Houſe of Eaſtmiln, belonging to the ſaid deceaſed Thomas Ogilvie his Brother, in the Pariſh of Glenylla and County of Forfar, the ſaid Katharine Nairn did, ſoon after her ſaid Marriage, alienate her Affections from her ſaid Huſband, and fall into a Courſe of indecent Familiarities with the ſaid Patrick Ogilvie, which ſoon became the Subject of Obſervation and Regret to her unhappy Huſband, and to her Friends and Family; and notwithſtanding repeated Admonitions given to the ſaid Katharine Nairn, and to the ſaid Patrick Ogilvie, by the ſaid Thomas Ogilvie and their other Relations, to abſtain from ſuch indecent Familiarities, they obſtinately perſiſted therein, frequently retired together, and continued in private for a conſiderable Time, as well in the Fields as within the Houſe of Eaſtmiln, and in other Houſes and Places of that Neighbourhood; and the ſaid Katharine Nairn and Patrick Ogilvie, yielding to their inordinate Deſires, did, after the ſaid Marriage, viz. in the Months of January, February, March, April, May, and June, all laſt paſt, and before the twelfth Day of that laſt Month, at different Times, and in one or other of the Rooms of the Houſe of Eaſtmiln, and in the Out-houſes adjacent thereto, lie together, and abuſe their Bodies with one another; and thereby they, and each of them, committed the abominable Crime of Inceſt; and their indecent Conduct having at laſt become the Subject of Obſervation and juſt Cenſure, not only to the ſaid deceaſed Thomas Ogilvie and his Family, but to the Neighbourhood, the ſaid Patrick Ogilvie was, on that Account, diſmiſſed by the ſaid Thomas Ogilvie from his Houſe, on or about the twenty-third Day of May laſt; and the ſaid Katharine Nairn did, upon that Occaſion, and thereafter, expreſs her Reſentment againſt her Huſband, and by the moſt outrageous Behaviour; and before the ſaid Patrick Ogilvie left the ſaid Houſe, or ſoon after, he and the ſaid Katharine Nairn did treacherouſly and wickedly conſpire to murder the ſaid Thomas Ogilvie by Poiſon; and, upon different Occaſions, the ſaid Katharine Nairn ſignified this her wicked Purpoſe to Anne Clark, Daughter of the deceaſed Allan Clark, Officer of Exciſe, who then lived in Family with her, and informed her, that the ſaid Patrick Ogilvie had undertaken to provide the Poiſon, which ſhe did not then believe either of them capable of, and endeavoured to divert the ſaid Katharine Nairn from ſuch wicked Thoughts; but, inſtigated by the Temptations of the Devil and of their own wicked Hearts, the ſaid Katharine Nairn and Patrick Ogilvie perſiſted in their wicked Conſpiracy; and from the Time the ſaid Patrick Ogilvie was diſmiſſed from his Brother's Houſe, he and the ſaid Katharine Nairn carried on a ſecret Correſpondence by Letters, and had private Meetings together for the Purpoſe of concerting the Perpetration of their wicked Deſign; one of which Letters, without a Date, and unſigned, but of the Hand-writing of the ſaid Katharine Nairn, will be produced in Evidence againſt them, and will be lodged in the Hands of the Clerk of the High Court of Juſticiary, before which they are to be tried, that they may ſee the ſame: And, for accompliſhing the Murder ſo concerted betwixt them as aforeſaid, the ſaid Patrick Ogilvie did, about the latter End of May laſt, repair to the Burgh of Brechin, in the County aforeſaid, and there bought and received from James Carnegie, Surgeon in that Burgh, a ſmall Phial Glaſs of Laudanum, which he pretended was for his own Health, and about Half an Ounce or more of Arſenick pulverized, and put up in three or four different Doſes, in ſeparate Paper-Covers, pretending that he had Occaſion for that Poiſon, in order to kill ſome Dogs, which deſtroyed the Game in that Part of the Country where he reſided. And the ſaid Patrick Ogilvie brought the ſaid Poiſon to Alyth, within a few Miles of Eaſtmiln, where he arrived upon or about Monday the third Day of June laſt, at the Houſe of Andrew Stewart, Merchant there, his Brother-in-law; and, upon the Day following, he did there receive a Letter from the ſaid Katharine Nairn, which, by her Orders, was delivered to him in Private, by Elizabeth Sturrock her Servant; to which he returned an Anſwer that ſame Day, with the ſaid Elizabeth Sturrock, by a Letter, with Injunctions to deliver it privately to the ſaid Katharine Nairn; which was done accordingly: And, upon the Day following, being the fifth Day of June, the ſaid Andrew Stewart having had Occaſion to go to the Houſe of Eaſtmiln, he, the ſaid Patrick Ogilvie, did ſend with him two ſmall Phial Glaſſes, one of which he ſaid contained Laudanum, and a Paper with Directions about the Manner of uſing it; and alſo a Packet, which he ſaid contained Salts, and a Letter cloſed with a Wafer, and likewiſe ſealed with Wax, addreſſed to the ſaid Katharine Nairn at Eaſtmiln; and he informed the ſaid Andrew Stewart that theſe were Medicines for the Uſe of the ſaid Katharine Nairn herſelf, and deſired him to deliver them and the Letter privately into her own Hands: And the ſaid Katharine Nairn, having been previouſly adviſed by the ſaid Patrick Ogilvie, that he was to ſend the Poiſon by the ſaid Andrew Stewart, watched his Arrival at the Houſe of Eaſtmiln, and, upon his coming there, conducted him into a private Room, and received from him the above Particulars, which ſhe preſently locked up in a Drawer alongſt with the Letter, without reading the ſame; and, in this Manner, or by ſome other Conveyance to the Proſecutor unknown, the Arſenick bought by the ſaid Patrick Ogilvie as aforeſaid, was conveyed by him to, and received by the ſaid Katharine Nairn at the Houſe of Eaſtmiln: And the ſaid Andrew Stewart having, ſome Time after his Arrival there, diſcovered to the ſaid Anne Clark, that he had brought ſome Medicines from the ſaid Patrick Ogilvie, which he had delivered to the ſaid Katharine Nairn, Anne Clark did thereupon diſcloſe to the ſaid Andrew Stewart, and to Iſobel M'Kenzie, the Mother of the ſaid Thomas Ogilvie, her Apprehenſions of Danger to the ſaid Thomas Ogilvie's Life; and all theſe Perſons, or ſome of them, did that Night adviſe and caution the ſaid Thomas Ogilvie, to take no Meat or Drink from his Wife, except what he ſaw others taking; and ſome Time that ſame Night, the ſaid Katharine Nairn ſaid to the ſaid Andrew Stewart, ſhe wiſhed her Huſband was dead; and the ſaid Thomas Ogilvie did that ſame Night ſup with the ſaid Katharine Nairn, his Wife, and the other Perſons above named, in his ordinary State of Health, and went to Bed at the uſual Time of Night, having been abroad the preceding Day: That next Morning, the ſixth Day of June, or one or other of the Days in the Beginning of that Month, Breakfaſt was ſet in the Parlour earlier than uſual, and the ſaid Thomas Ogilvie not having then got out of Bed, the ſaid Katharine Nairn filled out the firſt of the Tea in a Bowl, which ſhe ſaid ſhe was going to carry up to the Laird, meaning her Huſband; and accordingly left the Parlour with the ſaid Bowl in her Hand; but inſtead of carrying it ſtraight to her Huſband, ſhe went into a Cloſet adjoining to his Bed-room, where ſhe remained for ſome Time, and there wickedly and felonioufly mixed the Arſenick which ſhe had received as aforeſaid, or ſome other deadly Poiſon, into the ſaid Bowl of Tea, which ſhe afterwards carried to her Huſband, and preſſed him to drink the ſame, which he accordingly did: And ſoon after he roſe from Bed, went abroad, converſed with ſome of his Tenants and Servants, and then appeared to be in his ordinary State of Health; but before he got back to the Houſe, and within the Space of an Hour or thereby after he had drunk the ſaid Bowl of Tea, he was ſeized with a violent Reaching and Vomiting, and having got into the Kitchen, he continued there for ſome Time in great Diſtreſs, upon which he was helped up to his own Room, and laid in Bed, where he remained reaching, vomiting, and purging with ſuch Violence, that he ſometimes appeared convulſed; and, in the Intervals of his Diſtreſs, he did ſay to his Friends, and others about him, that he had been poiſoned by the ſaid Bowl of Tea which he had got from his Wife; and he having called for Water to drink, which was brought up to the Room by Anne Sampſon his Servant-maid, in the ſame Bowl, or one like to that out of which he had drank the Tea, he ſaid, "Damn that Bowl, for I have got my Death out of it already," and ordered her to bring up the Water in the Tea-kettle, for he would drink out of nothing elſe; and having continued in the Situation above deſcribed for ſeveral Hours, his Tongue ſwelled, and his Mouth became ſo parched and dry, that he could ſcarcely ſpeak; and, during his Illneſs, though from the Beginning very alarming, the ſaid Katharine Nairn not only endeavoured to hinder his Friends and Neighbours to have Acceſs to him; but when ſhe was preſſed, by the ſaid Andrew Stewart, to ſend for a Surgeon, ſhe obſtinately reſiſted that Propoſal till near Sun-ſet, when the ſaid Thomas Ogilvie her Huſband appearing to be then very low and near his End, ſhe ſent a Servant on Horſeback to bring Peter Meik, Surgeon at Alyth, who accordingly came with all Diſpatch; but, before his Arrival, her Huſband was dead, having died in the Night betwixt the ſixth and ſeventh Days of June laſt, or upon one or other of the Days or Nights in the Beginning of that Month: And from the Symptoms of his Diſorder, and whole Circumſtances of the Caſe above-recited, it evidently appears that he died of the Poiſon which was mixed and given to him, by the ſaid Katharine Nairn, in the Bowl of Tea as above-mentioned. And ſome Days thereafter, when it was propoſed to inſpect the dead Body, ſhe, Katharine Nairn, appeared like one diſtracted, and cried out, What will I do! And the ſaid Patrick Ogilvie being adviſed of the Death of the ſaid Thomas Ogilvie his Brother, to whom he is Heir, in caſe the ſaid Katharine Nairn be not with Child, he immediately came to Eaſtmiln, took up his Reſidence there, and gave the neceſſary Orders for the Interment. And the ſaid Katharine Nairn and Patrick Ogilvie, having been apprehended there, and committed to the Priſon of Forfar, by George Campbell, Eſq; Sheriff-Subſtitute of that County, as guilty of the Murder of the ſaid Thomas Ogilvie, and examined by the ſaid Sheriff Subſtitute upon the fourteenth and fifteenth Days of June laſt, did each emit two ſeveral Declarations, which were ſubſcribed by each of them, and by the ſaid Sheriff-Subſtitute; which Declarations are to be uſed in Evidence againſt them upon their Trial, and ſhall be lodged in the Hands of the Clerk of the ſaid Court of Juſticiary, that they may have Acceſs to ſee the ſame: And another Examination of the ſaid Patrick Ogilvie, taken before James Balfour, Eſq; Sheriff-Subſtitute of the County of Edinburgh, upon the twenty-ſecond Day of the ſaid Month of June laſt, and ſubſcribed by him and the ſaid James Balfour; and alſo an Examination of the ſaid Katharine Nairn, taken before the ſaid James Balfour, upon the twenty-fourth Day of the ſaid Month of June laſt, and ſubſcribed by him, will likewiſe be produced in Evidence againſt them in the Courſe of their Trial, and will in like Manner be lodged in the Hands of the Clerk of the ſaid Court of Juſticiary, that they may have Acceſs to ſee the ſame. At leaſt, at the Time and Place aforeſaid, the ſaid Thomas Ogilvie was murdered or died by Poiſon, wilfully adminiſtered to him; and of which Murder or Poiſoning the ſaid Katharine Nairn and Patrick Ogilvie, and each of them, or one or other of them, are guilty, Actors, or Art and Part. All which, or Part thereof, or that they were guilty of the Crime of Inceſt above charged againſt them, being found proven by the Verdict of an Aſſize before the Lords Juſtice-General, Juſtice-Clerk, and Commiſſioners of Juſticiary, they, and each of them, ought to be puniſhed with the Pains of Law, to the Terror of others from committing the like in Time coming.

DUNDAS, for Katharine Nairn the Pannel, repeated the ſigned Defences; and repreſented, That, in 1764, the now deceaſed Thomas Ogilvie of Eaſtmiln, a Gentleman rather advanced in Years, of a tender Conſtitution, and poſſeſſed of a very ſmall Fortune, made his Addreſſes to this unfortunate Pannel, (then ſcarce nineteen Years of Age) in Propoſals of Marriage: Which, contrary to the Opinion of her Friends, by reaſon of the Smallneſs of his Fortune, ſhe accepted of from Principles of pure Love and Affection: And the Marriage being accordingly celebrated in the Beginning of January laſt, 1765, was diſſolved, by Mr. Ogilvie's Death, upon the 6th of June laſt; when the Affections ſhe had conceived for her Huſband can ſcarce be ſuppoſed to have had Time to cool or ſubſide.

Notwithſtanding of which, it is her now very ſingular Misfortune to be indicted and accuſed, at the Inſtance of his Majeſty's Advocate, upon the Information of Alexander Ogilvie, her Huſband's youngeſt Brother, as guilty of two of the moſt enormous Crimes known in the Law: 1ſt, The Crime of Inceſt, which ſhe is charged to have committed with Lieutenant Patrick Ogilvie, her Huſband's immediate younger Brother; 2dly, The Crime of Murder, committed upon the Perſon of her ſaid Huſband, by Poiſon adminiſtered to him.

Her Parentage, Education, Age, Sex, Character, and Behaviour, in that Stage of Life previous to her Marriage, when Female Paſſions are are moſt powerful and predominant; which ſhe flatters herſelf will be atteſted by Perſons of the greateſt Honour and Probity, render it highly incredible, that any Perſon not hardened and inured to every Species of Wickedneſs, loſt and abandoned to every Principle of Virtue, ſhould at once plunge into Crimes of ſo deep a Dye.

Conſcious of her Innocence, ſhe wiſhes for nothing more ardently than a fair and impartial Trial, as the only Means of Reparation that can be made to her injured Character, ſo much traduced; and which, in the Event, ſhe is hopeful, will appear to be the Reſult of the moſt inveterate Rancour, Hatred, and deadly Malice, conceived againſt her by one of her own Sex, a Perſon of moſt flagitious Life, and abandoned Character, and who, ſhe is now told, is the principal Evidence meant to be uſed againſt her.

Since her Impriſonment, no Endeavours have been ſpared to impreſs the Public with Sentiments of her Guilt, by Publication of many falſe, malicious, and wicked Reports, induſtriouſly propagated to the Prejudice of her general Character.

But ſhe rejoices in the Appeal ſhe will ſoon be able to make to the World, to her Judges and Jury, to vindicate her from the Charge of thoſe horrid Crimes with which ſhe ſtands now arraigned. At the ſame Time ſhe cannot know what falſe Evidence may be produced againſt her, Self-Preſervation requires, that ſhe ſhould not paſs over any material Objection to the Form of this Indictment.

And in that View, ſhe objects to that Article of the Indictment which charges the Crime of Inceſt, ſaid to have been committed in one or other of the Rooms of the Houſe of Eaſtmiln, and Out-houſes adjacent thereto, at different Times, in January, February, March, April, May, and June, all laſt paſt, and before the 12th Day of that laſt Month; that is, in other Words, from the Day of her Marriage, till the 6th Day after her Huſband's Death.

She takes no Exception to the Generality of the Places charged, where this Crime ſhould have been committed, viz. "In one or other of the "Rooms of the Houſe of Eaſtmiln, and Out-houſes adjacent thereto;" though ſhe is adviſed, that after ſo full a Precognition as ſhe is told has been taken, by Examination upon Oath of every Perſon that could be ſuppoſed to have the leaſt Knowledge in theſe Matters, at which none were allowed to be preſent upon her Part, the Places where this ſuppoſed Crime is ſaid to have been ſo frequently repeated, ſhould have been ſpecially condeſcended upon, and deſcribed. But ſhe is adviſed, and humbly ſubmits it to the Conſideration of her honourable Judges, and the impartial World, that a moſt unbecoming and improper Latitude has been taken, in charging the Time of the Commiſſion of this ſuppoſed Offence, comprehending the whole Space, every Hour, Day, Week, and Month, from the Period of her Marriage, to her Huſband's Death, and even while he was lying a Corpſe, before his Interment on the 12th of June.

The Diſadvantages to which ſhe muſt neceſſarily be expoſed, in making her Defences againſt ſo general a Charge, are too obvious to need Illuſtration; and therefore ſhe does humbly inſiſt, that this Branch of the Indictment cannot be ſuſtained, or admitted to Proof.

But if, contrary to Expectation, the ſame ſhall be ſuſtained, ſhe propoſes, by undeniable Evidence, to traverſe and redargue every material Circumſtance charged in the Indictment, as well with regard to this as the other Crime with which ſhe is accuſed; and without departing from any other Defences which may occur to her Counſel, the great Lines of theſe Facts which ſhe propoſes to prove, will be theſe following:

1*ſt*, That ſhe accepted of Mr. Ogilvie for her Huſband, contrary to the Opinion of her Friends, out of pure Love and Affection: That Mr. Ogilvie, before his Marriage, was, and continued thereafter, ſo long as he lived, to be of a tender Conſtitution: That he had repeated and violent Attacks of internal Diſorders, Colic Pains, Convulſions in his Bowels, &c. inſomuch that he was not only looked upon to be in a dangerous Way, but having had ſome violent Attacks recently before his actual Death, gave himſelf up for loſt; and both the Day and the Night before he actually died, had ſuch violent Returns of theſe Diſorders, that he thought himſelf dying, and reſolved to have ſent for a Phyſician at many Miles Diſtance.

2*d*, That the Pannel herſelf, ſoon after her Marriage, did likewiſe fall into a bad State of Health, coſtive in her Body, and reſtleſs in the Night, which obliged her frequently to take ſmall Doſes of Salts and Laudanum.

3*d*, That Lieutenant Patrick Ogilvie, her Huſband's younger Brother, the ſuppoſed Aſſociate in the Crimes charged, having returned from the Eaſt-Indies, broken and ſhattered in his Conſtitution, much about the Time of the Pannel's Marriage, came to pay his firſt Viſit to his Brother, and for ſome Time had his principal Reſidence in his Brother's Houſe; whereby, and by Means of his near Relation, he diſtinguiſhed a becoming Friendſhip and Intimacy with the Pannel, his Siſter-in-Law.

4*th*, That the Pannel having inadvertently allowed herſelf to run ſhort of the Salts and Laudanum ſhe uſed to take, and having occaſionally mentioned this in the Hearing of Lieutenant Ogilvie, he told her, that as theſe were Medicines which he himſelf had been adviſed to uſe, he had brought Home in his Cheſt a ſmall Quantity of Laudanum, and a Parcel of Salts, of the very beſt Quality; and that if ſhe pleaſed, he would ſend her a ſmall Phial of the Laudanum, and a few Doſes of the Salts, how ſoon his Cheſt, in which they were, ſhould arrive from Dundee. She accepted of the Offer; and did accordingly ſome Time after receive from him, by the Hands of Andrew Stewart, Brother-in-Law to Eaſtmiln, who came to Eaſtmiln on an occaſional Viſit, a ſmall Phial of Laudanum, and two Doſes of Salts; and which are ſuppoſed to be the Particulars alluded to in this Indictment, as the Doſes of Poiſon ſaid to be ſecretly conveyed to the Pannel.

5*th*, That Alexander Ogilvie, the younger Brother of her Huſband, had, about the Beginning of this Year 1765, intermarried with a Woman of the loweſt Rank, the Daughter of a common Porter in Edinburgh, which gave great Offence to his two Brothers; and the Pannel does not doubt, but ſhe might, upon Occaſion thereof, have expreſſed her Senſe and Feeling of the Reproach thereby brought upon their Family. Of which the ſaid Alexander Ogilvie having got Intelligence, this, joined with the Diſappointment in the Expectation he had conceived of the Succeſſion to his Brother's Eſtate, he from thenceforward entertained a moſt groundleſs Reſentment againſt the Pannel, the innocent Cauſe of that Diſappointment; and took every Occaſion to publiſh the moſt ſcandalous Falſehoods, calculated to create a Miſunderſtanding between her and her Huſband.

6*th*, That for ſome Time before the ſaid Alexander Ogilvie's Marriage, he had cohabited, in a moſt unbecoming Manner, with Anne Clark, a Couſin-German of the Family; a Woman of the moſt infamous Character, and who, for a Courſe of Years, had lived as a common Servant-Maid, in one of the moſt notorious Stews or lewd Houſes in Edinburgh, and other Houſes of bad Fame, till at length ſhe took up her Reſidence with the ſaid Alexander Ogilvie.

7*th*, Anne Clark's Relation to Mr. Ogilvie's Family furniſhed Alexander Ogilvie with a Pretence of ſending her over to Eaſtmiln, to paſs ſome Weeks there, and to endeavour, by every poſſible Means, to bring about a Reconcilement between Mr. Ogilvie and his Brother Alexander. In this View, ſhe attached herſelf at firſt to the Pannel, thinking by her Means to have ſome Influence with Mr. Ogilvie, himſelf; till at length, finding they were both equally averſe to have any further Correſpondence, either with Alexander or his Wife, ſhe fell to work in another Way; quarrelled with the Pannel; made her Court to Mr. Ogilvie; and firſt, by dark Inſinuations, thereafter more explicitly, endeavoured to inſtil into Mr. Ogilvie's Mind, Suſpicions of the Pannel's Virtue, and of a criminal Intimacy between his Brother the Lieutenant and her; and that they had even gone the Length to form a Scheme to deprive him of his Life, by Poiſon or otherwiſe; and theſe her pretended Suſpicions ſhe communicated to the good old Lady Mr. Ogilvie's Mother: The Tendency of all which was, to operate a Miſunderſtanding and Separation betwixt Mr. Ogilvie and the Pannel.

8*th*, This diabolical Contrivance happened unluckily, in Point of Time, to co-incide with ſome Differences that had ariſen between Mr. Ogilvie and his Brother the Lieutenant, in ſettling Accounts about Money-matters; which having at length produced high Words, and put both Brothers in a Paſſion, Lieutenant Ogilvie declared, he would ſtay no longer in a Houſe where he had been ſo uſed; and was preparing to leave it directly, when Mr. Ogilvie, giving Way to his Paſſion, gave the parting Blow, by acquainting the Lieutenant of the Information he had received of his Familiarity with the Pannel, his Siſter-in-law; by which Lieutenant Ogilvie, juſtly enraged, having peremptorily inſiſted to know his Author, Anne Clark came at laſt to be ſuſpected as the Author and Propagator of this wicked and malicious Story; and what afterwards happened, too fully juſtified the Suſpicion.

9*th*, Lieutenant Ogilvie immediately left the Houſe. Mr. Ogilvie ſoon cooled, and became ſenſible of the Folly of his Proceedings, and of the Injury he had done, both to his Wife and Brother; as ſo abrupt a Separation could not fail to put them in the Mouth of the World. He therefore wrote to his Brother the Lieutenant, preſſing him moſt anxiouſly to return to the Family: The Pannel, as far as Decency would permit, joined in the ſame Requeſt.

10*th*, At this unlucky Period was Mr. Ogilvie ſeized with a Return of one of thoſe violent Diſorders in his Bowels and Stomach. He had been almoſt dead the Day before; he relapſed at Night, complained much, thought himſelf a-dying, continued ill all Night; finding himſelf eaſier, aroſe in the Morning as uſual; again turning bad, returned to Bed, where he took a Bowl of warm Tea and Biſcuit; after which he made another Effort, got up, put on his Cloaths, went abroad to take the Air, relapſed, fell a-vomiting, threw up a deal of Bile, and expired about Twelve that Night.

11*th*, The Pannel's Behaviour upon that melancholy Occaſion was decent and becoming, expreſſive of the real Sorrow and Grief ſhe felt. The Tale that is told of her having adminiſtered the Poiſon in a Bowl of Tea that Morning, will be diſproved in the ſtrongeſt Manner. She had none to adminiſter; and every Circumſtance, as it is expected to come out on Proof, will ſhew, that ſhe had it not in her Power ſo to have done, had ſhe intended it; and that de facto none was adminiſtered.

12*th*, Mr. Ogilvie's Corpſe remained uninterred until the 11th. It was viewed by Phyſicians and Surgeons of Character and Skill: The Appearances were nothing but what is uſual in natural Diſtempers proceeding from various internal Cauſes. A Diſſection of the Body would eaſily have ſhewn whether there had been Poiſon in the Caſe or not; and it was the Duty of Alexander Ogilvie, the Informer, who had come to the Houſe, and ſtopped Interment for one Day upon this very Suſpicion, to have cauſed the Body to be laid open. This was not done; whereby the infallible Means were loſt of detecting the Crime, if any was committed, and this unhappy Pannel was deprived of the only infallible Means of proving her Innocence.

Theſe are the great Lines of principal Facts which the Pannel propoſes to prove: Many others to the ſame Tendency, will, it is expected, come out in leading the Proof; and ſhe flatters herſelf, that theſe, with an intelligent Jury, will be effectual to detect the Falſehood of this Accuſation, and to vindicate the Character and Innocence of an unfortunate young Woman, whoſe preſent State, ſeveral Months gone with Child, renders her a very improper Object to undergo a Trial of this Nature; which, from the Accumulation of two Capital Crimes in one Indictment, and the great Number of Witneſſes given out in Liſt, beſides thoſe to be adduced for her Exculpation, muſt draw out to an immoderate Length.

Crosbie, for Lieutenant Patrick Ogilvie, Pannel, repeated his ſigned Defences; and repreſented, That the ſaid Lieutenant, Patrick Ogilvie, having obtained a Commiſſion in the Regiment, he behaved in the Execution thereof in a proper and inoffenſive Manner; and being ordered along with his Regiment to the Eaſt-Indies, he remained there till his Health obliged him to return Home; when he came to the Houſe of Eaſtmiln, where his Brother reſided, who was then about to be married to Catherine Nairn, the other Pannel, and where he continued for ſome Time with an inoffenſive Character, ſuitable to that which he had maintained in in the Regiment in which he had ſerved, of which there are many Officers ready to atteſt the Character he held.

About the Time that the Pannel Patrick Ogilvie returned Home, and about the ſame Time that the Defunct Thomas Ogilvie of Eaſtmiln was married to Katharine Nairn, Alexander Ogilvie, the third and youngeſt Brother of the Family, married the Daughter of one Rattray a Porter, a Perſon greatly inferior in Rank to himſelf; and his Relations, and immediate Connections, highly diſapproved of the Match, and alienated themſelves from him on that Account. This Marriage happened near about the Time that the deceaſed Thomas Ogilvie was married to the Pannel Katharine Nairn.

There was one Anne Clark, who was related to the Family of Eaſtmiln by the Mother's Side. This Woman had for ſeveral Years reſided as a Servant in a Houſe of diſſolute Reputation in Edinburgh, and which, as a Houſe of bad Fame, had regularly been viſited by the Conſtables. Some Months, at leaſt Weeks, however, before the Marriage of Alexander Ogilvie, ſhe had cohabited with him in the ſame Room, and the ſame Houſe; and after his Marriage ſhe had lived in his Father-in-Law's Houſe. In conſequence of all which it may be preſumed a very particular Intimacy had ariſen between her and the ſaid Alexander Ogilvie.

The Friends of the Family of Eaſtmiln had taken Umbrage at the Marriage of Alexander Ogilvie with the Daughter of a common Porter; he thought it neceſſary, therefore, to ſend ſome Perſon to interpoſe as a Mediator with that Family; and the Perſon he made Choice of was Anne Clark.

Anne Clark was accordingly diſpatched to the Houſe of Eaſtmiln. She was received, without Suſpicion, as a Relation of the Family; and, in that Character, without Inquiry into her former Life and Converſation, ſhe was treated as an Equal, and a Gentlewoman.

Such was the Pretext of ſending Anne Clark to the Houſe of Eaſtmiln: Something deeper, however, ſeems to have been intended. The deceaſed Thomas Ogilvie of Eaſtmiln had for many Years been ſubject to conſumptive Symptoms; he had been afflicted with Ulcers in his Bowels, which had been diſcovered at the Diſtance of about five Years before his Death; ever after he had been in a valetudinary State: and there was Reaſon to apprehend he would not be long-lived. The Relations of Mrs. Ogilvie in particular had ſhewn ſome Apprehenſions, that by his premature Death the Proviſions in her Favour might be rendered ineffectual. The Pannel Patrick Ogilvie was alſo in a bad State of Health: He had been obliged to return from the Eaſt-Indies, where he had been in Service with his Regiment, on Account of his valetudinary Habit: And from the Situation which the two elder Brothers were then in, there is the greateſt Reaſon to believe, that Alexander Ogilvie had entertained the moſt ſanguine Hopes of Succeſſion to the Eſtate; which, by the Marriage of Thomas, and the Return of Patrick for the Recovery of his Health, ſeemed likely to be diſappointed.

That Iſſue ſhould not be procreated between Thomas Ogilvie and Katharine Nairn his Wife, and that Patrick Ogilvie ſhould be obliged to betake himſelf to thoſe inhoſpitable Climates which he had left, and whoſe Inclemencies had well nigh already put an End to his Life, ſeemed deſirable Objects in the Eyes of Alexander Ogilvie. To promote Diſſention, therefore, between Thomas Ogilvie and his Wife, and to alienate the Mind of Patrick Ogilvie the Pannel, from this Country, ſeemed to have been the Purpoſe for which Anne Clark was diſpatched from Edinburgh. As a Relation of the Family, ſhe was received with implicit Confidence at Eaſtmiln, particularly by the Pannels, who were little aware what a Snare was prepared for their unguarded Confidence.

Miſs Clark had but a ſhort Time reſided at the Houſe of Eaſtmiln, when ſhe made it her Buſineſs to ſow Diſſenſion and Animoſity among all the Members of the Family. She endeavoured to inſpire Mr. Ogilvie with Jealouſy towards his Wife, and Diſtruſt towards his Brother: And ſhe was but too ſucceſsful in her Endeavours; Mr. Ogilvie, a ſickly Man, and too ſuſceptible of ſuch Impreſſions, was ſoon miſled by the artful Miſs Clark into a Belief of what, if he had truſted his own Judgment, he could never have ſuppoſed.

The Period which was choſen to inſinuate theſe Jealouſies was remarkable. The Pannel, Lieutenant Patrick Ogilvie, had ſome Differences with his elder Brother, concerning his Patrimony; for a Diſpute had occurred about the Balance of a Bond of Proviſion reſting owing to Patrick Ogilvie. Miſs Clark laid hold of that Opportunity to propagate her malicious Alledgeances; and in the Heat of a Converſation which aroſe concerning the Balance of this Bond of Proviſion, and what Thomas had done with it after he took it up from the Cuſtodier, the Deceaſed firſt inſinuated his Apprehenſion of an improper Intercourſe between the two Pannels.

To Minds already heated by a Diſpute concerning Money-matters, this Incident ſerved to add greater Warmth. The two Brothers parted with ſome Animoſity, the Pannel Patrick declaring his Intention never to return to the Houſe of Eaſtmiln.

The Intention of the Pannel was, after viſiting his Friends in the Country, as he had now tolerably recovered his Health, to return to his military Service in the Eaſt-Indies; hoping, by Means of this, to avoid both the Jealouſy of his Brother, and the Envy of his other Relations. Though often ſolicited, therefore, to return to his Brother's Houſe, he kept always at a Diſtance, from that Day when he diſcovered the firſt Symptom of Jealouſy.

Mrs. Ogilvie, the other Pannel, had for ſome Time before this complained of bad Health; and particularly ſhe complained of Want of Sleep: On Account of her Complaints, ſhe had been in uſe to take Salts and Laudanum as Medicines. In the Hearing of the Pannel ſhe had expreſſed her Deſire to have ſome of theſe Medicines; and as he, while at Sea, had been in uſe to take both on Account of his bad State of Health, and in a ſhort Time expected one of his Sea-cheſts would arrive, in which he had a Quantity of both, he proffered to her to ſend her ſome Laudanum and Salts, as ſoon as the Trunk or Cheſt they were in ſhould be brought to the Country: And ſhe told him ſhe would be obliged to him for them, as they were ſo ill to be had of a proper Kind in that remote Part of the Country.

After the Pannel had left the Houſe of Eaſtmiln in the Manner abovementioned, his Trunk or Cheſt came to Hand; it was brought from Dundee by Andrew Stewart, Merchant in Alyth, to his Houſe; and was, in his Preſence, in the publick Shop, opened by the Pannel; who has Reaſon to believe, that the ſaid Andrew Stewart obſerved both the Salts and Laudanum that were therein. But the Quantity of Laudanum proving very ſmall, as a great Part of it had been uſed during the Voyage, the Pannel found himſelf under the Neceſſity of purchaſing a ſmall Quantity of Laudanum, in order to ſend as much as was requiſite to Mrs. Ogilvie. He did accordingly buy a ſmall Quantity of Laudanum for this Purpoſe; which, together with what he already had, he put into a Phial, and with two Doſes of Salts, which, in the Preſence of Andrew Stewart, he took out of the Cheſt or Trunk aforeſaid, put up, and ſent by the ſaid Andrew Stewart, who was going on an occaſional Viſit to ſee Eaſtmiln and Mrs. Ogilvie.

What Symptoms attended the deceaſed Mr. Ogilvie's laſt Illneſs, the Pannel, not having been at the Houſe of Eaſtmiln, cannot, from his perſonal Knowledge, pretend to ſay. As far as he has been able to inform himſelf, however, he cannot diſcover, that there is the leaſt Evidence that he died by Poiſon. Nor did the Pannel, on any Occaſion, pretend to hinder a Diſſection of the Body, or any other Means of Diſcovery, whether the Defunct had died of Poiſon or not. On the contrary, he urged and inſiſted, that ſuch Trial ſhould be made. And he having ſent for a Surgeon to inſpect and open the Body, the Perſon whom he had diſpatched Expreſs for that Purpoſe, was privately ſtopped by Alexander Ogilvie, the younger Brother, who is the Perſon on whoſe ſigned Information he was originally committed to Priſon.

Such are the material Facts which the Pannel apprehends he is called on to explain, in Vindication of his good Fame: And to theſe Facts he ſubjoins the following Defence, in Terms of the Statute.

1*ſt*, That the Libel contains a Cumulatio actionum in criminalibus; which is reprobated in Law.

2*dly*, That ſo far as relates to the Inceſt, the Libel is utterly vague and inconcluſive, being deſtitute of all Circumſtances of Time or Place, or other Requiſites that can enable the Pannel to make a pointed Defence; and therefore ought not to paſs to the Knowledge of an Aſſize.

3*dly*, The Libel, as far as reſpects the Crime of Poiſoning, is utterly irrelevant quoad this Pannel.

Lockhart, for Katharine Nairn, } Adhering to the Defences ſeveral-
Rae, for Patrick Ogilvie, } ly proponed for them, repreſented, That the Indictment charges the Pannels with Inceſt committed betwixt them, in the Months of January and June, and intervening Months, and before the 12th Day of the ſaid Month of June: That the ſaid Katharine Nairn and the deceaſed Thomas Ogilvie were not married till the 30th Day of the ſaid Month of January; and to inſtruct that, produces and oppones their Contract of Marriage, dated the 29th of January, and they were married the ſubſequent Day. And therefore contended, That as to the Month of January, the Indictment could not go to Proof, farther than as to the laſt Day of that Month.

2*dly*, As the deceaſed Thomas Ogilvie died on the 5th of June, the Time intervening betwixt that and the 12th, were equally irrelevant, as Inceſt could not be committed with the Widow after the Death of the Huſband, at leaſt to infer the Pains of Law, by which, in our Practice, are generally meant the Pains of Death.

Sir David Dalrymple, for the Proſecutor, anſwered, That cumulatio actionum criminalium, is eſtabliſhed in the Practice of the Juſticiary Court; and in this Caſe is particularly neceſſary and proper. That it is eſtabliſhed in the Practice of the Juſticiary Court, is evident by the following Examples, ſelected from many of the ſame Nature which occur in the Books of Adjournal.

16th February, 1580. Andrew Glencorſe indicted for poiſoning his Wife, and for Inceſt with his Wife's Mother.

6th September, 1610. William Douglas of Lincluden, Slaughter and treaſonable Theft, being a landed Man.

30th March, 1638. Iſobel Kailtie, notour Adultery, and murdering two Children born of the adulterous Intercourſe.

30th March, 1638. Andrew Harvie, Art and Part of the Murder of Iſobel Dalgleiſh, and of Adultery with Helen Stevenſon.

27th July, 1642. Margaret Cunningham, Adultery, and Murder of the Child born in the Adultery.

12th March, 1645. John Gordon, Bigamy, Adultery, and Theft.

28th March, 1646. Margaret Thomſon, Adultery and Forgery.

20th December, 1649. James Wilſon, Inceſt with his Wife's Daughter, and Adultery with another Woman.

21ſt April, 1664. John Swinton and Janet Brown, notour Adultery, and Murder of Swinton's Wife.

27th May, 1665. Margaret Hamilton, Adultery, and Murder of her Huſband.

9th April, 1670. Major Thomas Weir, Fornication, Adultery, Inceſt, and Beſtiality.

12th September, 1678. Iſobel Hay, Adultery, and Murder of her adulterous Child.

15th January, 1694. Doctor John Elliot, Daniel Nicolſon, and Marion Maxwell, Murder, Falſehood, Forgery, and notour Adultery.

9th November, 1702. Margaret and David Myles, Inceſt and Child-Murder.

9th November, 1703. Mary Graham, Inceſt with her Father, and Child-Murder.

21ſt February, 1706. Elizabeth Hunter, Inceſt and Adultery.

As this Cumulatio actionum criminalium is fully eſtabliſhed by Practice, ſo in this Caſe it is particularly proper and neceſſary: The two Crimes charged, Inceſt and Murder, are, from the Circumſtances of the Charge, intimately connected; and it is propoſed in general to prove both by the ſame Witneſſes. To make ſeparate Trials for each Crime would be oppreſſive to the Witneſſes, the Jury, and the Parties. It is true, that Accuſations for different Crimes may be thrown into one Libel, in in ſuch Manner as to prove oppreſſive. Whenever this is attempted, the Court will interpoſe; but not in order to prevent the Trial of different Crimes in one Libel, where nothing oppreſſive is meant, and where the Expediency of the Cumulatio actionum is obvious. As to what is ſaid, that the Charge for Inceſt is unintelligible or vague, it is anſwered, That it is laid in Terms the moſt unexceptionable, in the expreſs Words of an Act of Parliament; and ſurely the Legiſlature muſt be preſumed capable of conveying, by Words, a juſt Idea of the Crime which it meant to puniſh.---As to what is ſaid, that the Libel for Inceſt is vague, charging the Crime as committed in January and June 1765, and the intervening Months, it is anſwered, That in all Criminal Indictments a Latitude of this Kind is allowed in Practice; for Witneſſes may be diſtinct as to the Circumſtances of the Crime charged, and yet may not be certain as to a Day, or even as to a Month. Indictments do generally comprehend the Term of three Months. In the Caſe, the King's Advocate againſt Oliphant, 4th February 1736, a Libel for a ſingle Act of Sodomy, bearing two Months in one Year, and two in another, was held ſufficiently articulated; and in that Form was remitted to the Knowledge of an Aſſize. When an Indictment contains the Charge of a Crime, which in its own Nature is capable of frequent Repetition, as Inceſt is, a ſtill greater Latitude is allowed. Thus in the Caſe of Forbes 1758, tried for corrupting young Girls, an Indictment was remitted to the Knowledge of an Aſſize, although it bore that the Crime was committed in ſome one or other of the Months from May 1757, to April 1758, incluſive.---If the Pannel Mrs. Ogilvie was not married till the 30th of January 1765, the Charge of Inceſt preceding that Date, will ceaſe of courſe. If it ſhall be proved that ſhe and Lieutenant Ogilvie defiled their Bodies after the Death of Eaſtmiln, it may not perhaps be Capital Inceſt by the Act 1567, which refers to the xviiith Chapter of Leviticus; but it will nevertheleſs be Inceſt puniſhable in Law: And if no Inceſt but what was committed after the Death of Eaſtmiln ſhould be proved, then the Jury will find accordingly, and the Court will adapt the Puniſhment to the Offence. As to what is ſaid, that the Murder by Poiſoning is not properly laid againſt Lieutenant Ogilvie, it is anſwered, That the contrary appears from the Tenor of the Indictment. But although this were not the Caſe, yet he is charged as guilty Art and Part of that Crime, which is in Law a relevant Indictment, and as ſuch muſt be remitted to the Knowledge of an Aſſize.

"The Lord Juſtice-Clerk and Commiſſioners of Juſticiary, having "conſidered the Criminal Indictment raiſed and purſued at the Inſtance "of Thomas Miller of Barſkimming, Eſq. his Majeſty's Advocate, for "his Majeſty's Intereſt, againſt Katharine Nairn, Widow of the deceaſed "Thomas Ogilvie of Eaſtmiln in the County of Forfar, and Patrick Ogilvie, "Lieutenant of the 89th Regiment of Foot, Brother-german of the "ſaid deceaſed Thomas Ogilvie, Pannels, with the foregoing Debate, "repell the haill Objections made to the Form of the Indictment; and "find the ſaid Indictment relevant to infer the Pains of Law: But allow "the Pannels and each of them to prove all Facts and Circumſtances "that may tend to their Exculpation, or Alleviation of their Guilt; and "remit the Pannels, with the Indictment as found relevant, to the Know-"ledge of an Aſſize."

The which Day, there was a Petition preſented to the ſaid Lords in the Names of Katharine Nairn, Relict of the deceaſed Thomas Ogilvie of Eaſtmiln, and Lieutenant Patrick Ogilvie, Brother to the ſaid Thomas Ogilvie; humbly ſhewing,

That the Petitioners ſtood indicted before their Lordſhips, at the Inſtance of his Majeſty's Advocate, for the alledged Crimes of Inceſt, and Acceſſion to the ſuppoſed Murder of the ſaid Thomas Ogilvie.

That the Petitioners had pleaded Not Guilty to this grievous Accuſation; and were confident, that in the Courſe of the Trial their Innocence would be fully vindicated to the Satisfaction of the Court and Jury.

That as the Petitioners did aſſert, and had good Reaſon to believe, that that Proſecution took its Riſe from Malice, and moſt falſe and injurious Calumnies raiſed and propagated by Perſons, who, from moſt unjuſt Views, have been deſirous of ruining the Petitioners; it was therefore highly neceſſary and juſt, that the Petitioners, who were then to undergo that ſolemn Trial for their Lives, ſhould be ſecured as far as poſſible againſt every Kind of Influence and undue Practice, that might, or could be uſed, upon Witneſſes to be adduced in that Cauſe.

That, among other Misfortunes under which the Petitioners laboured, they had been accuſed, by Report, of Endeavours to ſecrete material Witneſſes in that Matter; and though conſcious of their Innocence in that, as well as in other Reſpects, yet ſeveral of the Witneſſes have, on that or ſome other Account, been ſecured as Priſoners in the Caſtle of Edinburgh.

That, among theſe Witneſſes, was Anne Clark, deſigned Daughter of the deceaſed Allan Clark, Officer of Exciſe, who is now confined in the ſame Room with two or more Maid-Servants, who were in the Houſe of Eaſtmiln at the Time of Thomas Ogilvie's Death, and who would be moſt material Witneſſes for the Petitioners in that Cauſe.

That the Petitioners would make it appear, by unconteſtible Evidence, that the ſaid Anne Clark was not only a Perſon of the worſt Character and Diſpoſition, ſuch as rendered her improper and inhabile to be received as a Witneſs; but alſo, that ſhe had entertained and expreſſed deadly Malice and Hatred againſt both the Petitioners; and that, in purſuance thereof, ſhe had been the Author and Propagator of the falſe and malicious Stories which had given Riſe to the preſent Proſecution. And, in fine, that ſhe was in a Combination to ruin the Pannels, and, as far as ſhe could, to deprive them of their Lives, as well as their Reputation.

That it would occur to their Lordſhips, that the Petitioners were expoſed to imminent Danger by the ſaid Anne Clark's being conſtantly confined in the ſame Room with other material Witneſſes, whoſe Sex, Station, and Inexperience, though otherwiſe honeſt and well-inclined, might expoſe them to be influenced and prejudiced by the malicious Endeavours of that artful Woman. For theſe Reaſons, the Petitioners were confident, that their Lordſhips would forthwith give Orders for ſeparating the ſaid Anne Clark from the ſaid other Witneſſes. Therefore praying, That it might pleaſe their Lordſhips forthwith to grant Warrant to the Deputy-Governor of the Caſtle of Edinburgh, or any other proper Officer, to remove the Perſon of the ſaid Anne Clark from the Room in which ſhe was preſently confined; or otherwiſe to ſeparate her from the ſaid Maid-Servants, and to keep her ſeparate from them, or any other Witneſſes to be adduced againſt the Petitioners in that preſent Proſecution. According to Juſtice, &c.

Edinburgh, 6th Auguſt, 1765.

I THOMAS MILLER, Eſq. his Majeſty's Advocate, conſent, That the Prayer of the within Petition be granted; but upon this expreſs Condition, that no Perſon whatever be admitted or have Acceſs to any of the ſaid three Witneſſes, except in Preſence of one or other of the Officers of the Court of Juſticiary, which their Lordſhips ſhall think proper to appoint.

(Signed) THO. MILLER.

"The Lord Juſtice-Clerk and Commiſſioners of Juſticiary having ſeen "and conſidered the foregoing Petition, with the Conſent of his Ma-"jeſty's Advocate ſubjoined thereto, recommend to the Depute-Gover-"nor of the Caſtle of Edinburgh, or other proper Officers, to cauſe re-"move the ſaid Anne Clark from the Room where ſhe and the other two "Women before-named are preſently ſtaying, into ſome other Room in "the ſaid Caſtle, until Monday next the twelfth Day of Auguſt current; "and alſo recommend as above, that Care be taken that no Perſon get "Acceſs to any of the ſaid three Women, betwixt and that Time, "except in Preſence of Robert Auld, Writer, or Andrew Muriſon, Macer "of this Court, or either of them.

Intran.

KATHARINE NAIRN, Widow of the deceaſed Thomas Ogilvie of Eaſtmiln,

AND

PATRICK OGILVIE, Lieutenant of the eighty-ninth Regiment of Foot, Brother-German of the ſaid deceaſed Thomas Ogilvie;

Both preſent Priſoners in the Tolbooth of Edinburgh;

PANNELS.

Indicted and accuſed as in the former Sederunt.

The Interlocutor on the Relevancy being read over to the Pannels in open Court,

The Lords proceeded to make Choice of the following Perſons to paſs upon the Aſſize of the ſaid Pannels:

Sir James Clark of Pennycuik.
John Howieſon of Braehead.
John Chriſtie of Baberton.
Adam Cuningham of Bonnytoun.
Alexander Sheriff of Craigleith.
David Dundas younger, of Newhalls.
Sir George Suttie of Balgonie.
Charles Hay of Hopes.
William Ramſay of Preſton.
John Forreſt ſenior, Merchant in Edinburgh.
George Chalmers, Merchant in Edinburgh.
Gavin Hamilton, Bookſeller in Edinburgh.
Archibald Wallace, Merchant in Edinburgh.
John Borthwick of Cruikſton.
Thomas Brown of Braid.

The above Aſſize being all lawfully ſworn, and no Objection to the contrary,

His Majeſty's Advocate proceeded to call the following Witneſſes:

DAVID RATTRAY younger, in Cammock, in the Pariſh of Glenylla, aged forty-two, married, purged of Malice and partial Counſel, ſworn, and interrogate, depones, That he lives in the Neighbourhood of Eaſtmiln, and did hear it talked in the Country, that Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel, and Lieutenant Ogilvie the other Pannel, lived in too familiar a Way, and walked out together without others in their Company: That the Deponent himſelf once ſaw them at their Walk, when there was Nobody with them, when they were leading other Arm and Arm, and at that Time he ſaw the Pannel, Lieutenant Ogilvie, kiſs Mrs. Ogilvie, the other Pannel, once: That this happened after the late Thomas Ogilvie of Eaſtmiln's Marriage with the Pannel, and before his Death; cannot remember the preciſe Time, but there was a Storm on the Ground then: That at the above-mentioned mentioned Time the Pannels were walking near the Houſe of Eaſtmiln, croſſing the King's Highway, when the Witneſs ſaw as above, when he was no farther from them than the fourth Part of a Quarter of a Mile; and that the Pannels were in a hollow Way when he ſaw Lieutenant Ogilvie give the other Pannel one Kiſs as above. Cauſa ſcientiæ patet. And this is Truth, as he ſhall anſwer to God.

(Signed) DAVID RATTRAY. GILB. ELLIOT.

JOHN LAMAR in Craigendeach, in the Pariſh of Glenylla, aged forty-ſeven, married, purged of Malice and partial Counſel, ſworn and interrogate, depones, That he lives very near Eaſtmiln, and has heard the claſhing People of the Country commonly report, that the Pannel Mr. Ogilvie liked Mrs. Ogilvie the other Pannel too well; and that a Diſpute in the Family of Eaſtmiln about that Time aroſe, which took its Riſe, as was ſaid, from a Suſpicion, that the two Pannels liked other too well: That upon this Mr. Ogilvie the Pannel left the Houſe of Eaſtmiln, as was reported, upon the above Suſpicion; and it was even ſaid in the Country, that the two Pannels loved one another too well: That the Deponent himſelf knows, that Mr. Ogilvie the Pannel went away from the Houſe of Eaſtmiln about a Fortnight, as he thinks, before Eaſtmiln's Death, and the Deponent ſaw him return to the Houſe of Eaſtmiln the Morning after Eaſtmiln's Death: That before Mr. Ogilvie the Pannel left Eaſtmiln's Houſe, the Deponent has often ſeen the two Pannels walking Arm in Arm, and their Arms about each other's Neck: That he has ſeen them in that Poſture at their Walk, even when Miſs Clark and the Laird of Eaſtmiln himſelf were in Company, as well as when there was Nobody elſe with them. Depones, That the Report of the Love between the two Pannels he did not hear in the Country till after Lieutenant Ogilvie had left the Houſe of Eaſtmiln as above; and that he never ſaw the Pannel Mrs. Ogilvie till after her Marriage: That ſince the Marriage he has ſeen Dr. Alexander Ogilvie, a Brother of Eaſtmiln's, at the Houſe of Eaſtmiln; and that Anne Clark, a Witneſs cited in this Trial, was there before him, and at the ſame Time: That the Deponent's Houſe lies at about a Quarter of a Mile's Diſtance from Eaſtmiln's Houſe, on the other Side of the River, from whence it is eaſy to ſee any Perſon who comes out or goes into the Houſe of Eaſtmiln. Cauſa ſcientiæ patet. And this is Truth, as he ſhall anſwer to God. And depones he cannot write.

(Signed) GILB. ELLIOT.

JAMES BARNET, Son to Alexander Barnet in Cammock, in the Pariſh of Glenylla, aged fifteen Years, unmarried, purged of Malice and partial Counſel, ſworn and interrogate. Diſmiſſed.

JOHN GILLOCH, Wright in Dalnakebock, aged twenty-ſix Years, married, purged of Malice and partial Counſel, ſworn, and interrogate, depones, That, about a Fortnight after Eaſtmiln's Marriage, the Deponent was ſent for to the Houſe of Eaſtmiln to put on ſome Locks and Braſs-Work upon a Drawer: That accordingly the Deponent went to the Room where the Drawers ſtood, in which Room he ſaw the Pannel Mr. Ogilvie lying in Bed: That when he was ſo employed, Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel came to the Room Door where the Deponent was at Work, ſhe having heard him, as he ſuppoſed, at Work. Upon Mr. Ogilvie the Pannel obſerving her, he deſired her to come in: That after having ſaid to the Deponent, John, are you begun? ſhe went in and aſked Mr. Ogilvie the Pannel, What! are not you up yet? and then ſhe went towards the Bed-ſide, where ſtood a little Cheſt, upon which ſhe ſat down, and then they eat ſome Sweet-Bread together, which had been got at a Market. Depones, That he obſerved her Hand about the Bed-cloaths, juſt upon Lieutenant Ogilvie's Breaſt; at which Time ſhe ſaid to him, You are not poor, but pretty fat; but did not obſerve whether her Hand was below the Bed-cloaths, or above. Depones, That when Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel was going out of the Room, Lieutenant Ogilvie kicked up the Bed-cloaths with his Feet, and threw them up upon his Body; upon which Mrs. Ogilvie ſaid, Ah! you daſt Dog! and the Deponent at that Time ſaw ſo much of the ſaid Lieutenant Ogilvie's Body, that he the Deponent could judge whether he was a Man or a Woman: That after Breakfaſt, Mrs. Ogilvie came to where the Deponent was at Work, and gave him a Dram; and Lieutenant Ogilvie being preſent, ſhe gave him alſo a Dram, for he was by that Time dreſs'd. Depones, That the Week before Eaſtmiln's Death, the Deponent went to Eaſtmiln to do ſome Work: That when he was ſawing, Elizabeth Sturrock, then a Servant in that Family, came to the Deponent, and aſked him, If he knew which Way the Laird had gone? He ſaid, He could not tell. Upon aſking her why ſhe put ſuch a Queſtion, ſhe anſwered, That as Lieutenant Ogilvie was expected at Eaſtmiln that Day, ſhe could wiſh the Laird and he might not meet. And depones, That he the Deponent ſaw Eaſtmiln walk away from the Houſe ſome Time before. Depones, That on the Evening of the Day laſt mentioned, as the Deponent was returning from his Work, he ſaw Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel returning to Eaſtmiln, upon the Road that leads from the Kirkton to that Place, and obſerved Mrs. Ogilvie and Anne Clark meet upon that Road; and that ſame Night he ſaw Mr. Ogilvie the Pannel ſtanding at the Kirkton, which is not a Quarter of a Mile from Eaſtmiln: That, at the Time above-mentioned, when Lieutenant Ogilvie kicked up the Cloaths, and the Lady ſaid to him, Ah! you daſt Dog! the Deponent does not think ſhe ſaw the Condition the Lieutenant's Body was in, as ſhe was then going out of the Room. Depones, That while Mrs. Ogilvie was ſitting upon the Cheſt by Lieutenant Ogilvie's Bed, as above deponed to, the Deponent could ſee Mr. Ogilvie's Breaſt from the Poſture he was then in. Being interrogate for the Pannel, depones, That when he ſaw Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel upon the Road from the Kirkton returning to Eaſtmiln, as above deponed on, and Anne Clark upon the ſame Road, that they were both walking towards Eaſtmiln, and Anne Clark foremoſt. Cauſa ſcientiæ patet. And this is Truth, as he ſhall anſwer to God.

KATHARINE CAMPBELL, late Servant to the deceaſed Thomas Ogilvie of Eaſtmiln, being called; againſt adducing of whom it was objected, That ſhe ought not to be received as a Witneſs, no Execution being returned againſt her twenty-four Hours before the Diet of Compearance, conform to the Forms of Court eſtabliſhed. 2*do*, That ſhe bears Ill-will and Malice againſt the Pannel Mrs. Ogilvie, having been diſmiſſed her Service for Theft; on which Occaſion ſhe expreſſed Reſentment in ſtrong Terms, and ſwore Revenge, which is offered to be proved inſtanter.

Sir DAVID DALRYMPLE anſwered, on the Part of his Majeſty's Advocate, That the firſt Objection ought to be repelled. The Fact is, that this Witneſs was given out in Liſt with others; but as ſhe had gone into a diſtant Part of Scotland, could not be cited by the Meſſenger ſo ſoon as the other Witneſſes were. She was cited on the Saturday before the firſt Diet of Compearance; but the Execution did not come up to Edinburgh till after that Diet. Upon its being received, it was on Wedneſday laſt in the Forenoon given out to the Agents for the Pannels. The Act 1672 ordains, That the Liſt of Witneſſes be given out with the Indictment, and this was done here; but no Law requires that the Executions ſhould be returned into Court twenty-four Hours before the firſt Diet of Compearance: In the preſent Caſe, it was impoſſible that the Execution could be ſooner produced, and the Pannels can ſuffer nothing by this; for they ſaw the Name of the Witneſs in Liſt, and they have had more Time for this Purpoſe than they would have had, if the Execution had been given out twenty-four Hours before the firſt Diet of Court, and then the Relevancy had been determined and the Proof taken at the ſame Diet.

As to the ſecond Objection, it ought alſo to be repelled. No particular Condeſcendence has been made of Malice or Cauſe of Malice at this Time, and the Witneſs will be purged of Malice in the Initials of her Oath in common Form; and therefore the Objections ought to be repelled, agreeable to the univerſal Practice of the Court.

"The Lord Juſtice-Clerk and Commiſſioners of Juſticiary, having "conſidered the foregoing Objections and Anſwers thereto, repell the "Objections, and allow the Witneſs to be received; reſerving to this "Conſideration of the Court, whether or not any ſpecial Expreſſions of "Malice and the Cauſe thereof, that may be condeſcended on by the "Pannels in their Exculpation, ſhall be admitted or not.

(Signed) GILB. ELLIOT, I. P. D."

On pronouncing of which Interlocutor, Mr. Alexander Lockhart Advocate, Procurator for the Pannels, proteſted for Remeid of Law; and that any Interrogatories he ſhall put afterwards to this or other Witneſſes, during the Trial, ſhall not be deemed a paſſing from this Proteſtation.

It being repreſented to the Court, That Katharine Campbell, the Witneſs before-named, could ſpeak the Engliſh Language but very ill; and that an Interpreter or Interpreters would be neceſſary to interpret what ſhe ſaid in the Iriſh or Erſe Language into the Engliſh; and Robert Gray, Writer in Edinburgh, and James Frazer, Writer to the Signet, having appeared, they were appointed to be Interpreters, and gave their Oaths as ſuch de fideli.

And the ſaid KATHARINE CAMPBELL, aged twenty-ſeven Years, unmarried, ſolemnly ſworn, purged of Malice and partial Counſel, and examined, depones, That twenty Days after the deceaſed Mr. Ogilvie of Eaſtmiln's Marriage with Katharine Nairn one of the Pannels, ſhe was ſent by the Lady Glenkilrie, her Siſter, to ſerve as Waſher-woman at Eaſtmiln: That the Deponent ſtaid in that Service for ten Weeks: That about fourteen Days, to the beſt of her Remembrance, after ſhe went there, the ſaid deceaſed Mr. Ogilvie went from Home, and, as ſhe heard, to Dunſinnan: That before Mr. Ogilvie went to Dunſinnan, ſhe obſerved Lieutenant Ogilvie the Pannel frequently kiſſing Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel, and ſhewing a great Fondneſs for her: That the Deponent having ſaid to Lieutenant Ogilvie the Pannel, that ſhe thought he ſhewed too great Fondneſs for his Siſter-in-Law, and that it would not be worſe if he ſhewed leſs, the Lieutenant anſwered, that his Brother deſired him to be fond of her, to keep her chearful in the Beginning. Depones, That ſhe ſaw the Lieutenant frequently holding the Pannel Mrs. Ogilvie in his Arms when he was kiſſing her. Depones, That when the deceaſed Mr. Ogilvie went to Dunſinnan, the two Pannels continued at Eaſtmiln: That the Deponent made up Beds for them in two ſeparate Rooms: That the Room ſhe made up for Mrs. Ogilvie was immediately above the Kitchen, where the Deponent ſlept: That before the Deponent went to Bed, her Miſtreſs called down to her, if ſhe was not yet to Bed; and that ſhe thought, ſhe ſaw the Deponent have a Light; the Deponent anſwered, ſhe was not yet gone to Bed, but was going ſoon: That after the Deponent had gone to Bed, ſhe heard the Pannel Mrs. Ogilvie utter theſe Words, O fy! fy! and that ſhe heard the Bed moving as if Somebody had been ſtirring in it: That the Deponent upon this became under great Terror, but thereafter fell aſleep. That next Morning when ſhe went up Stairs, ſhe found the Lieutenant's Bed in the ſame State that ſhe had made it up the Night before, and the Bed no Way diſcompoſed as if one had lain into it. Depones, That ſome Time before ſhe went to Bed, ſhe went up to Mrs. Ogilvie's Room, where ſhe ſaw the Lieutenant ſitting with her: That the Deponent propoſed to mend the Fire in the Lady's Room, and to make a Shake-down there, for the Deponent's lying there all Night by her: That Mrs. Ogilvie deſired the Deponent to go to her own Bed, for that ſhe had no Difficulty to ſleep in a Houſe by herſelf. Depones, That the Cauſe of her being under the Terror as above, was, that ſhe thought the two Pannels were then in Bed together. Depones, That ſhe made up Mrs. Ogilvie's Bed next Morning, which was much toſſed and tumbled; but as Mrs. Ogilvie might have done this herſelf, the Deponent did not, from the Appearance of that Bed, form her Conjecture. Depones, That the Kitchen where the Deponent ſlept had no plaſtered Ceiling, ſo that the ſmalleſt Noiſe in the Room above could be heard there. Depones, That there were two other Servant-maids at Eaſtmiln at that Time, to wit, Anne Sampſon and Elizabeth Sturrock. Depones, That ſhe never heard, while ſhe continued in Eaſtmiln, any Circumſtances happening between the two Pannels, ſuch as has been above deſcribed, except one Night as before mentioned; and remembers particularly, that the other Nights that Eaſtmiln was at Dunſinnan, the Lieutenant's Bed in the Morning had the Appearance as if it had had been slept in; and so had Mrs. Ogilvie's. Depones, That she never spoke of what she heard the Night above-mentioned, to the best of her Remembrance, till after she had left the House of Eastmiln, when she communicated the same to Lady Glenkilrie, the Pannel Mrs. Ogilvie's Sister. Depones, That the Deponent constantly slept in the Kitchen alone, while Eastmiln was at Dunsinnan, and all the Time she was in the Service. Depones, That, while the Deponent was in the Service at Eastmiln, there was a Sister of the Laird's married in his House; after which the whole Family went to Dunsinnan, and when they returned, all of them, except Eastmiln and his Mother, expressed Dissatisfaction with the Deponent, but upon what Occasion they never explained to her. And being further interrogate, depones, That the Motion she heard in the Room above her, deponed to above, she then thought was the Motion of a Man and Woman in Bed together, and such as a Husband and Wife have together; and that she would have been of this Opinion, though she had not seen the Lieutenant's Bed unruffled next Morning. And being interrogate by one of the Jury, depones, That she always considered that it was Anne Clark who stirred up her Mistress against her the Deponent. And being specially interrogate, depones, That the Night aforesaid, when she heard the Noise in the Bed above described, she slept none till towards the Morning; then fell asleep, awakened again in a Fright, and told the old Lady Eastmiln that she was under Terror, but did not explain the Cause. Depones, That Anne Clark was not come to the Family at the Time the Laird went to Dunsinnan, and she heard the Noise as above in the Bed. And being interrogate for the Pannels, depones, That Anne Clark came to Eastmiln about a Fortnight, to the best of the Deponent's Remembrance, after the Deponent came there. And further depones, upon the Pannels Interrogatory, That she did not hear the Motion above-mentioned, but at the Time above deponed to, and did not hear these Motions repeated at any other Period that Night. Further depones, That while she staid in the House, she made all the Beds without the Assistance of any of the other Servants. And, upon Recollection, depones, That she slept in the Kitchen by herself ever till Anne Clark came to the House; but after she came, Elizabeth Sturrock slept in the Kitchen with her the Deponent. Depones, That Anne Clark met the Laird as he was going to Dunsinnan, and came to Eastmiln two Nights before he returned. Further depones, That when she found Lieutenant Ogilvie's Bed in the State above described in the Morning, as if no Person had laid in it, it was about Sun-rising: That she saw the Lieutenant come down Stairs, and Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel was still in Bed: That she made up Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel's Bed that same Day, but after Dinner: That when Eastmiln went to Dunsinnan, to the best of her Remembrance, he staid away three Nights, and came home the fourth. And upon the Oath being read over to her, desired that it might be marked, That what is said of her having made up Mrs. Ogilvie's Bed in the Morning, is a Mistake, and improperly taken down, for that it was after Dinner she made it up. Depones, That she never got any Wages but a Pair of Shoes from Eastmiln; and that when she asked her Wages, she was told by Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel, in Presence of Anne Clark, Lieutenant Ogilvie, and the deceased Eastmiln, that she was well off that she got Leave to go without Wages; and that the deceased Eastmiln followed her, and desired her to return, which she did, and staid for a Day; but that Mrs. Ogilvie next Morning turned her off. Causa scientiæ patet. And this is Truth, as she shall answer to God. And depones she cannot write.

Anne Clark, Daughter to the deceased Allan Clark, Officer of Excise, being called,

Mr. Henry Dundas, for the Pannels, made the following Objections to her being received:

1*mo*, That she is a Person of an infamous Character, being held and reputed to be a notorious Liar and Dissembler, a Disturber of the Peace of Families and Sower of Dissension, and also a common Whore and Prostitute.

2*do*, That she has not only been held and reputed such as above described, but it will be clearly proved, that she lived and resided for no less than three Years and a half in a noted Bawdy-house within the City of Edinburgh, as a common Prostitute, notwithstanding that at the same Time the said House was frequently visited by the Constables as a House of bad Fame, and that frequent Disturbances happened therein, to the great Offence and Scandal of the Neighbourhood.

3*tio*, The said Anne Clark did, in Confederacy with Alexander Ogilvie, Brother to the deceased Thomas Ogilvie last of Eastmiln, publish and propagate false, scandalous, and malicious Aspersions upon the Characters of the Pannels, relative to the Matters libelled, and did endeavour to make Dissension and Differences between the Pannel Mrs. Ogilvie and her deceased Husband. And,

4*to*, The said Anne Clark does, and has entertained and expressed, on sundry Occasions before and since the Decease of the said Thomas Ogilvie, deadly Malice and inveterate Ill-will against both the Pannels, and has threatened repeatedly to do all she could to bereave them of their Lives.

Sir David Dalrymple, on the Part of his Majesty's Advocate, answered, That all and every one of the Objections ought to be repelled; and that for the Reasons following:

With respect to the first, it is obviously irrelevant. No such Thing is ever allowed in the Practice of the Justiciary Court, as a general Proof of Character; and indeed, were it allowed, criminal Trials in Scotland would become inextricable; were the Character of each Witness to be thus inquired into, there would be as many separate Trials as there are Witnesses produced. Besides, were this new Form to be introduced, Witnesses would be deterred from appearing upon Citation given. Instead of being called to give Evidence, they would in Effect be called to stand an Inquiry upon the whole Conduct of their Lives. If they were to appear and undergo such a Scrutiny, they would come much worse prepared for their Defence than the Parties themselves when tried for the greatest Crimes. For the Parties know what is charged against them, and by what Evidence it is proposed to prove such Charge; they are therefore enabled to prepare for their Defence. But Witnesses neither know what may be charged against them; nor by what Evidence it is proposed to prove such Charge; they are therefore incapable of preparing for their Defence. Indeed, by the Forms established in Scotland, the public Prosecutor himself has no Means of confuting such a Charge brought against a Witness. He may be possessed, as he is actually in the present Case, of Certificates from credible Persons to prove the Character of the Witness to be unblemished; but he is not at Liberty to produce them; because he must confine himself to the Examination of the Witnesses whose Names are given out with the Libel, and to the Evidence therein mentioned.

With respect to the second Objection, That the Witness is a common Prostitute, &c. it cannot be received in this Case; for the Crimes charged are occult Crimes, said to have been committed infra Familiam; and they can only be proved by Witnesses who resided in the Family, be their Character what it will. The Witness against whom the Objection is moved, did reside in the Family at the Period when the Crimes charged are said to have been committed. She was a near Relation of the Family of Eastmiln, was received and entertained as such, and had Occasion to have daily Intercourse with the Pannels. If such necessary Witnesses were to be rejected, it follows, that the Crimes charged could not be proved at all. Against the last Witness, Katharine Campbell, it was objected, That she had been turned out of the Family for some small Thefts, had vowed Revenge, and entertained Malice against Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel. Against this Witness it is objected, That she is of an abandoned Character and a common Prostitute. Like Objections might be moved against every other Person of the Family called as Witnesses; and thus it would follow, that in the House of Eastmiln, the greatest Crimes might be committed with certain Impunity, because there were in the Family no Witnesses of irreproachable Characters, who might give Evidence of such Crimes.

With respect to the third Objection, it is no less irrelevant. If the Witness did spread such Reports as are mentioned in the Objection, from her proper Knowledge or just Suspicion of the Truth of the Matters libelled, she did nothing unlawful; and until the closing of the Evidence, it cannot be known whether the Reports, if spread by her, were true or false. It is therefore premature in the Pannels to offer to prove the Falsehood of Reports while the Inquiry subsists, whether the Facts reported were true.

With respect to the fourth Objection of deadly Malice, it is a Charge in itself most improbable, That a Witness would deliberately resolve to perjure herself out of Malice. The Pannels ought to condescend, not only on the particular Expressions used, but also on the Cause of such deadly Malice. Were a general Proof of Malice expressed in Words to be permitted, then it would be in the Power of every Witness favouring the Pannel, to incapacitate himself from bearing Evidence to Facts which might be hurtful to the Pannel; and hence it is, that the Practice of the Court requires, that not only the Expressions importing Malice be proved, but that the probable Cause of such deadly Malice be also proved.

" The Lord Justice-Clerk and Commissioners of Justiciary, having " considered the foregoing Objections and Answers thereto, repell the " Objections; and allow the said Anne Clark to be examined, reserv-
" ing the Consideration of the Alledgeance, as to the said Anne Clark's
" being the Author of the Report of the Pannels Guilt, till their Excul-
" pation; and also reserving to the Consideration of the Court, whether " or not any special Expressions of Malice, that may be condescended on
" by the Pannels in their Exculpation, shall be admitted or not.
(Signed) Gilb. Elliot, I. P. D."

On pronouncing of which Interlocutor, Mr. Alexander Lockhart Advocate, Procurator for the Pannels, protested for Remeid of Law.

The said Anne Clark, Daughter to the deceased Allan Clark, Officer of Excise, aged thirty and upwards, unmarried, purged of Malice and partial Counsel, sworn, and interrogate, depones, That she was Cousin-german to the deceased Mr. Ogilvie of Eastmiln, and went to Eastmiln upon the first Day of March last: That her Reasons for going there were, not only to see Eastmiln and Mrs. Ogilvie who were then recently married, and Lieutenant Ogilvie who was then come from abroad, but also to endeavour to make up the Peace betwixt that Family and their Brother Alexander, who had entered into a very mean Marriage below the Rank of his Family: That after the Deponent had been some little Time at Eastmiln, she came to be informed, that Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel was censured for being too familiar with the other Pannel, Lieutenant Ogilvie: That the Deponent informed Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel of what she had thus heard; and desired Mrs. Ogilvie to be upon her Guard as to her Conduct, and to abstain from the Lieutenant's Company: That notwithstanding this, Mrs. Ogilvie was frequently in a Room by herself with the Lieutenant. Depones, That upon Sunday the nineteenth Day of May last, all the Family went to Church, excepting the two Pannels and the Deponent; and that they three staid together conversing in the lower Part of the House; but thereafter the two Pannels left the Deponent in the lower Room, and went up Stairs together to the East Room above Stairs, which was the Lieutenant's Room, and immediately over Head of the Room where the Deponent was left: That she heard, by the Motion of the Feet, that both of them had entered the Room above, and, as she judged, they went towards the Bed; and thereafter the Noise of the Feet ceased: That upon this the Deponent, in order to discover what was passing, went up the Stair; and as the Bed in the Lieutenant's Room was an Alcove Bed, the Back of which came to the Side of the Stair, and there was nothing betwixt the Bed and the Stair, but a Piece of Plaster and the Timber of the Bed, so that a Person standing in the Stair could hear distinctly what passed in the Bed, she stood and listened; and from the Motions that she heard, is positive that they were in Bed together, and abusing their Bodies together; by which she means, they were lying carnally together. Depones, That immediately after this she came up to the Room where the Pannels were, and walked to the End of the Room, without looking into the Bed: That she then turned and ſaw the Lieutenant, one of the Pannels, ſtanding cloſe by the Side of the Bed buttoning his Breeches; and ſhe obſerved his Shirt at firſt out: That at this Time ſhe obſerved Mrs. Ogilvie was in the ſame Bed; and that ſhe ſaw her Cloaths which ſhe had then on, which were a red and white Callico Bed-gown and Skirt. Depones, That the ſame Evening ſhe told Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel what ſhe had ſeen and heard: That Mrs Ogilvie made no Anſwer. Depones, That upon the Monday the Pannels repeated the ſame Thing, which the Deponent is poſitive of, becauſe ſhe ſaw them go out of the low Room, and heard them enter the Lieutenant's Room, move towards the Bed; and then the Deponent liſtened at the Stair, and heard the ſame Motions repeated: That, upon the Tueſday and the Wedneſday, ſhe heard them again retire together to that Room, and move towards the Bed; but ſhe did not any of theſe two Days go to the Stair. Depones, That ſhe told the deceaſed Mr. Ogilvie of Eaſtmiln's Mother, the Deponent's Aunt, what ſhe had heard and ſeen; this ſhe told her Sunday Night, Monday and Tueſday. Depones, That ſhe heard afterwards from the deceaſed Eaſtmiln, that his Mother had ſaid to him, that the Pannel, Mrs. Ogilvie, was troubleſome to the other Pannel the Lieutenant: That, on Occaſion of this Information, there was ill Blood and high Words between the two Brothers, and at length Eaſtmiln, deceaſed, ordered the Lieutenant out of his Houſe; and that this happened upon the Thurſday immediately ſubſequent to the Sunday aforeſaid. And further depones, That upon the Sunday, Eaſtmiln, as ſhe believes, was at Glenkilrie: That the other Days he was at Home; but as he went to viſit his Workmen every Morning, when the Pannels went together to the Lieutenant's Room as aforeſaid, it was at the Times that Eaſtmiln was out with his Workmen. Depones, That Lieutenant Ogilvie left the Houſe of Eaſtmiln about Three o'Clock Afternoon of the Thurſday aforeſaid: That, upon his leaving it, the other Pannel, Mrs. Ogilvie, went up to the Room which had been his, and threw herſelf down upon a Bed in that Room, different from the Alcove Bed above-mentioned; and there fell a-tearing and crying; and that, when her Huſband came to the Room, ſhe ordered him to go out of it: That Eaſtmiln, upon that Occaſion, told his Wife, that her Conduct was improper, and that ſhe would ruin her Reputation, by intermeddling in the Differences betwixt him and his Brother. And being further interrogate, depones, That before the Sunday above-mentioned, the Deponent has frequently ſeen improper Familiarities between the two Pannels; particularly ſhe has ſeen them kiſſing one another, and him having his Hand down her Breaſt. Depones, That when the Lieutenant went off, as above-mentioned, and Mrs. Ogilvie was in the above Diſpoſition, Eaſtmiln, as he had frequently upon former Occaſions, when he and his Wife differed about the Lieutenant, expreſſed his Deſire to go and leave his own Houſe; and the Deponent, who at that Time ſaw little Proſpect of Harmony between them, propoſed to Mrs. Ogilvie, that ſhe ſhould agree to this Scheme, which ſhe ſeemed very well pleaſed with; but that next Day both ſeemed to have changed their Mind. And being further interrogate, depones, That about a Fortnight or Three Weeks after the Deponent went to Eaſtmiln, the two Pannels and the deceaſed Mr. Ogilvie of Eaſtmiln having gone to pay a Viſit at Glenkilrie, they all of them returned, as the Deponent thought, in very bad Humour; and, in particular, Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel was ſo, and expreſſed her Diſſatisfaction with her Huſband, and ſaid, If ſhe had a Doſe, ſhe would give it him; but the Deponent at that Time did not think Mrs. Ogilvie ſerious in what ſhe ſaid: That thereafter, but ſhe cannot preciſely ſpecify the Times, Mrs. Ogilvie did frequently ſignify to the Deponent, that ſhe was reſolved to poiſon her Huſband; and told the Deponent, ſhe intended to get Poiſon either from Mr. Robertſon a Merchant in Perth, or Mrs. Eagle who keeps a Seed-ſhop in Edinburgh, upon Pretence of poiſoning Rats: That the Deponent, ſeeing Mrs. Ogilvie intent at that Time upon that Project, endeavoured to divert her from it by gaining Time, and ſignified, that if ſhe applied to theſe People for the Poiſon, ſhe would be brought to an untimely End; but that ſhe the Deponent would go to Edinburgh, and get a Brother of the Deponent's who lived there to buy the Poiſon: That Mrs. Ogilvie approved of the Deponent's Propoſal; but complained, that the Deponent was long in putting it in Execution, and therefore propoſed to the Deponent to ſpeak of it to Lieutenant Ogilvie the Pannel, as he could get it more expeditiouſly; and this the Deponent declined to do. Depones, That upon the Day that the Lieutenant was put from the Houſe, ſhe, Mrs. Ogilvie, told the Deponent, that with much Difficulty, ſhe had prevailed upon Lieutenant Ogilvie the Pannel to undertake to furniſh her with Poiſon. Depones, That upon a Wedneſday, which was the Day immediately before Eaſtmiln's Death, Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel told the Deponent, that ſhe had received a Letter the Day before from the Lieutenant, which was brought to her Hand by Elizabeth Sturrock; and in this Letter he had acquainted her, that he had got the Poiſon the length of Alyth, but did not chuſe to truſt Elizabeth Sturrock with it; and that he would ſend it by Andrew Stewart his Brother-in-Law, whom he was to ſend with it next Day; ſo that ſhe expected it there that Night. Depones, That, upon this Occaſion, ſhe told Mrs. Ogilvie, ſhe never believed it would come to that Pitch, and exhorted her moſt earneſtly againſt the Propoſal, ſaying, It would not only bring her to Miſery, both in this World and the next, but would be bringing a Diſgrace upon the Family ſhe was come of, and upon that into which ſhe was married: That upon this Occaſion, Mrs. Ogilvie ſaid to the Deponent, to let her alone, for the Converſation was diſagreeable to her, as the Deponent knew, and ſhe was determined to put her Reſolution in Execution, whatever might be the Event. Depones, That the Reaſons given by Mrs. Ogilvie for coming to this ſtrange Reſolution, and for rejecting all the Propoſals the Deponent made for her living in Friendſhip with her Huſband, were, that ſhe did not love her Huſband, and never could love him; and that he had uſed Lieutenant Ogilvie ill upon her Account; and ſaid, How happy could they live at Eaſtmiln, if there were none there but the Lieutenant, ſhe, and the Deponent! That, upon one Occaſion the Deponent, in remonſtrating againſt theſe wicked Propoſals, told Mrs. Ogilvie, that, although her Huband were dead, ſhe and the Lieutenant could not enjoy one another. Mrs. Ogilvie anſwered, That they could go and live in ſome of the Countries where he had been. And being further interrogate, depones, That when ſhe was remonſtrating to Mrs. Ogilvie againſt poiſoning her Huſband, ſhe ſpecially mentioned to her, that as ſhe had been guilty of Adultery and Inceſt, it was a dreadful Thing to crown all with Murder. Depones, That upon the Wedneſday's Night aforeſaid, immediately preceding Eaſtmiln's Death, Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel, and the Deponent went out together, Mrs. Ogilvie having expreſſed her Impatience for Andrew Stewart's Arrival: That they did not meet with Andrew Stewart; but when they returned to the Houſe, found him ſitting with the old Lady Eaſtmiln, he having come in another Way: That Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel immediately carried Andrew Stewart up Stairs with her, who ſtaid with her about half an Hour, and then came down Stairs by himſelf: That the Deponent aſked him, if he had brought any thing with him? He anſwered, Nothing, at firſt; but, upon her preſſing, and ſaying, She was ſure he had brought Something with him, he then ſaid he had brought ſome Drugs for Mrs. Ogilvie, which, at that Time, he deſcribed as being in two Phial Glaſſes: That the Deponent, on this Occaſion, ſaid, they were black Drugs: That Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel having come down Stairs very ſoon after, the Deponent did not get an Opportunity at that Time to explain to Andrew Stewart what ſhe meant by calling them black Drugs: But Mrs. Ogilvie and Andrew Stewart having gone out towards the Kirkton, and left the Deponent and her Aunt Lady Eaſtmiln by themſelves, the Deponent told her Aunt, that ſhe believed what Andrew Stewart had brought was Poiſon; for that Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel had told her, the Deponent, that Andrew Stewart was to bring the Poiſon. Depones, That the old Lady Eaſtmiln was preſent when the Deponent ſaid to Andrew Stewart, they were black Drugs, as above-mentioned: That the Deponent, after acquainting the old Lady as above, aſked her, If ſhe ſhould inform the deceaſed Mr. Ogilvie of Eaſtmiln of the Particulars? That the old Lady ſaid it would be improper; for that Mrs. Ogilvie would perſuade her Huſband, that it was but Laudanum for her own Uſe, and would reſent it againſt the Deponent: and that the only Method that occurred to her proper was, that both ſhe and the Deponent ſhould caution Eaſtmiln againſt taking any thing from his Wife in private. Depones, That after this ſhe went to the Kirkton with a View of being adviſed by the Miniſter, what was fit to be done in ſuch a Caſe; but had the Misfortune to miſs him, he not being at Home, the Door locked, but the Key in it: That Eaſtmiln, and his Wife the Pannel, and Andrew Stewart, were all in the Kirkton at that Time, in the Houſe of Fergus Ferguſon, a Tenant of Eaſtmiln's, who keeps a Public Houſe: That they having come away from the Kirkton, Mrs. Ogilvie and Andrew Stewart walked on like a Piſtol-ſhot before Eaſtmiln; and the Deponent joined Eaſtmiln, and ſignified to him, that it would be very proper and neceſſary for him to leave his own Houſe, for that ſhe believed his Life was in Danger; but did not tell him. That ſhe ſuſpected the Danger was from his own Wife: That Eaſtmiln ſaid, He could not leave Home at that Time, becauſe of his Labourers. She having ſignified, that there was Danger in a Delay, Eaſtmiln anſwered, He underſtood what ſhe meant; but that he was determined he would take nothing ſhe gave him, and ſo would put it out of her Power. Depones, That her Aunt, that ſame Night, both before and after Supper, told her, that ſhe likewiſe had cautioned Eaſtmiln to take nothing from his Wife. Depones, That the ſame Evening ſhe informed Andrew Stewart, that ſhe believed it was Poiſon he had brought, and told him her Reaſons for believing ſo; that Andrew Stewart appeared to give Credit to what the Deponent ſaid. After Eaſtmiln and his Wife had gone up Stairs to Bed, Andrew Stewart, the Old Lady the Deponent's Aunt, and the Deponent, had a long Converſation how to diſappoint Mrs. Ogilvie's Deſign; and particularly, ſhe remembers, that Andrew Stewart propoſed, that as he knew the Drawer wherein ſhe had put the Things that he had brought her, Means ſhould be uſed in the Night-time to get Mrs. Ogilvie's Keys to open the Drawer, and take out the Things; or, if that would not anſwer, that they might get a Tradeſman next Day, or as ſoon as they could get an Opportunity, to open the Back of the Cheſt of Drawers, and ſo get into the particular Drawer to get out the Things. Depones, That Mrs. Ogilvie, as Andrew Stewart told that Night, received a Letter from Lieutenant Ogilvie, which he Andrew Stewart brought along with him; and that the Lieutenant had deſired him to deliver that Letter with the Drugs privately to Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel. Depones, That ſhe never inſinuated to Eaſtmiln any Suſpicions ſhe had of his Life being in Danger, till that Night above-mentioned, which was the one immediately preceding his Death; but that ſhe frequently told the old Lady his Mother of the Danger ſhe apprehended Eaſtmiln was in, from the Diſpoſition his Wife appeared to be in; and the old Lady ſaid, that ſhe likewiſe was ſuſpicious, becauſe ſhe thought her Daughter-in-law would ſtick at nothing: But that the Deponent did not explain to the old Lady the Affair of the Poiſon, till after the Lieutenant was turned away from Eaſtmiln, when ſhe adviſed her to warn her Son of his Danger. And being further interrogate, depones, That from the Time that the Deponent went to his Houſe in March laſt, Eaſtmiln appeared to be under great Diſtreſs of Mind on account of the Difference between him and his Wife; but ſhe did not hear him complain of any bodily Indiſpoſition, excepting ſometimes of a Pain in his Breaſt, which ſhe thinks happened twice; but he never kept his Bed one Day, nor even an Hour extraordinary. That the Day immediately before his Death, there had been a Quarrel between him and his Wife; and the Quarrel was, that Mrs. Ogilvie had given the Deponent ſome Cambrick to make into Ruffles for the Lieutenant, who, ſhe ſaid, had ſent the Cambrick to her, Mrs. Ogilvie; whereas Eaſtmiln ſaid, a Chapman had come that Day to the Houſe, and craved him for the Price of it, and that he had refuſed to pay it: That upon this Quarrel Eaſtmiln had gone out in bad Humour, and, as the Deponent thinks, without his Breakfaſt; and the Deponent heard, that he ſpent the Day among his Tenants over the Hill: That he returned in the Evening, and ſaid he was not well, and went to Bed without Supper. Depones, That Eaſtmiln never never had at this Time, or at any Time, ſo far as ſhe knows, any violent Vomitings, Purging, or Convulſions; and, ſo far as ſhe knows, Nobody elſe ever heard of any ſuch Thing. Depones, That next Morning Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel made the Tea for Breakfaſt ſomewhat earlier than uſual: That the Deponent having come into the Breakfaſting Room, heard Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel ſay, that the Laird and Elizabeth Sturrock were well off that Morning, for they had got the firſt of the Tea: That the Deponent before this had been ſitting with her Face to the Window, and her Back to the Table, but did not take any Notice what Mrs. Ogilvie had been doing; but upon Mrs. Ogilvie's expreſſing herſelf as above, turned about and aſked, What! has the Laird got Tea? And Mrs. Ogilvie anſwered, He had; upon which the Deponent ſaid nothing. Depones, That ſhe does not know the Reaſon why Mr. Ogilvie had not come down to Breakfaſt that Morning. Depones, That ſhe ſaid to the old Lady, as ſhe thinks, that ſhe was frightened about the Tea the Laird had got; but ſaid nothing to Andrew Stewart of it, and this ſhe means of the Time before the Laird was taken ill. Depones, That Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel, during the Time of Breakfaſt, went out of the Room twice or thrice, and at length came in, and told the Laird was taken very ill: That the Deponent overheard a Report among the Servants, that he was troubled with a Purging and a Vomiting: That the old Lady deſired the Deponent to go up and ſee Eaſtmiln, which ſhe did in about half an Hour after Breakfaſt: That ſhe continued very ſhort while in the Room, ſhe looked to him, and he appeared to her to be in a dying Condition: That ſhe came off very ſoon, crying; Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel met her, and aſked her if ſhe was daft? That the Deponent anſwered, in way of Surprize or Deriſion, O! ay! and Mr. Ogilvie is dying. Depones, That after ſhe had come down Stairs, and ſtaid half an Hour or ſo, the old Lady deſired her to go up Stairs to her Son Eaſtmiln, to keep him from theſe two Women; by which the Deponent underſtood ſhe meant Mrs. Ogilvie and Elizabeth Sturrock, who were then ſitting with him: That the Deponent accordingly went up Stairs before Mid-day, as ſhe thinks, and continued with him till his Death, which happened betwixt Eleven and Twelve o'Clock that Night: That Eaſtmiln, as the Deponent has above expreſſed, was ſeized, as ſhe heard, with a Purging and Vomiting: That after ſhe went up Stairs to him, he had for ſome Time ſome Purging, but not near ſo violent as ſhe had been informed it was before: That he had a moſt ſevere Vomiting, and called always to give him a cold Drink: That he drank great Quantities of cold Water: That the Deponent having mixed it with Milk, he complained of that, and inſiſted to have cold Water by itſelf, and then drank ſome ſmall Ale; but upon his Brother-in-law Glenkilrie's coming there, which was in the Evening when it was almoſt dark, he diſſuaded him from taking more Ale; That the Deponent tried him once with a Glaſs of Wine and a Piece of Sugar in it, which he drunk, and for about an Hour after taking it vomited none: That the Deponent got the Glaſs of Wine from Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel: That Eaſtmiln immediately after taking the Water or the Ale threw it up again; but after he had drunk the Glaſs of Wine, as aforeſaid, there was an Intermiſſion of the Vomiting for about an Hour; and though he drank both Water and Ale after that, he kept it longer than before. Depones, That Eaſtmiln complained of a Burning at his Heart, as he called it; and complained bitterly of Pains in the Brawns of his Legs, and ſaid they would rent, and deſired the Deponent to bind them up for him, which the Deponent accordingly did: That there was a ſevere Heaving at his Breaſt, and a ſtrong Caw, and he cried to keep open the Windows to give him Breath: That he was conſtantly in Motion, moving his Head, his Legs, and his Arms: That ſhe obſerved in the Afternoon he did not ſpeak plain, which ſhe ſuppoſed was owing to his Tongue having ſwelled; but ſhe did not ſee his Tongue: That about an Hour, or an Hour and a half before his Death, he had an Intermiſſion of the Vomiting; but that at length he was again attacked with a moſt ſevere Preſs of Vomiting, after which he fell back upon the Deponent, who was ſitting behind him in the Bed ſupporting him, and expired. Depones, That ſhe heard Eaſtmiln during his Diſtreſs ſay to James Millam his Tenant in the Mill, who was attending him, that it was either ſtrong Poiſon, or rank Poiſon, that was killing him. Depones, That before One o'Clock ſhe heard the old Lady Eaſtmiln ſay to Eaſtmiln, that he had broke his Promiſe to her in taking any Thing from his Wife: That he anſwered, It is too late now, Mother; but ſhe forced it on me: That at this Converſation there were none preſent but the old Lady and the Deponent. Depones, That ſhe knows nothing about ſending for any Surgeon to attend upon Eaſtmiln, further than that ſhe herſelf ſent Annie Robertſon, one of the Servants of the Houſe, to tell Andrew Stewart, who ſhe underſtood had then gone off for Alyth, to deſire Mr. Meik the Surgeon at that Place to come to Eaſtmiln; and that this happened the Forenoon of the Day on which Eaſtmiln died: That ſhe thinks, before ſhe ſent off Annie Robertſon herſelf, ſhe heard ſome Converſation about ſending for a Surgeon; and thinks that it was Andrew Stewart and the old Lady who were talking of it. Depones, That after Eaſtmiln's Death, ſhe was told by James Millam, that he had got Orders from Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel, to take a Horſe and go and acquaint Lieutenant Ogilvie of his Brother's Death; but that thereafter it was concerted, that as Glenkilrie, in whoſe Houſe the Lieutenant then ſtaid, was going Home from Eaſtmiln, that he ſhould acquaint the Lieutenant: That next Morning the Lieutenant arrived about Six o'Clock, as ſhe thinks. Depones, That the Day on which Eaſtmiln died, Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel came in for a very little to him in the Forenoon: That thereafter ſhe frequently propoſed to come back to him, if the Deponent were diſmiſſed; but Eaſtmiln would not agree to this, and ſhe came no more near him. And being further interrogate, depones, That the Morning after Eaſtmiln's Death, ſhe told the Lieutenant the Pannel, that ſhe knew the whole Affair of the Poiſon, and aſked him how he could ſend it to Mrs. Ogilvie? That the Lieutenant appeared to be under great Concern and Confuſion, and told, That ſuppoſe he had ſent it to her, he did not think ſhe had ſo barbarous a Heart as to give it. And three miſſive Letters, marked by the Deponent and the Lord Examinator's Subſcription, being ſhewn to her, depones, That the Letter which begins Dr Captain, and is not ſubſcribed, and has no Date, and another Letter which begins Dr Sr, and is dated Glenkilry, Weenſday, and ſigned Ketty Nairn, are both very like Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel's Writing, but the firſt ſhe is ſure is her Writing; and the third Letter, which bears Date at Glenkilry, and addreſſed To Thomas Ogilvie, Eſq. of Eaſtmiln, depones, That ſhe does not know whoſe Hand-writing it is. Depones, That ſhe did not, either the Day of Eaſtmiln's Death, or the Day after, acquaint any body, by Letters or otherwiſe, of her Suſpicions and Belief that Eaſtmiln died by Poiſon. And being interrogate for the Pannels, depones, That upon the Monday, Tueſday, and Wedneſday above-mentioned, when ſhe has deponed, That the two Pannels were together, in Manner above deſcribed, the Old Lady and the Deponent were in the Houſe, and ſome Servants, who were at the other End of the Houſe. And being interrogate, From what Place the Pannels went when they went to the Room above Stairs for the ſaid three Days? depones, They went from the low Room in which the Deponent was all theſe Days: That ſhe is poſitive the old Lady Eaſtmiln was in the low Room with them upon the Monday; but has been informed from her, that ſhe obſerved nothing: That ſhe deſired the old Lady, on the Wedneſday, to obſerve the Motion of their Feet in the Room above; but the old Lady ſaid ſhe did not hear it, which the Deponent imputed to her being dull of Hearing: That when the Deponent heard as above, theſe laſt three Days, it was after Breakfaſt, and, as ſhe thinks, about Eleven o'Clock before Noon. Depones, That when ſhe went into the Room where the two Pannels were upon the Sunday, the Door of the Room was open. Depones, That ſhe did not meet Eaſtmiln upon the Road that Day ſhe came to his Houſe; but ſhe ſaw him the Day before at the Boat of Bermeny, but did not ſpeak to him, he having paſſed before ſhe knew it was him: That when ſhe came to Eaſtmiln, ſhe found none in the Room that ſhe came into but Eaſtmiln and his Mother; That after ſhe came to Eaſtmiln, ſhe ſlept with her Aunt the old Lady. Depones, That ſhe does not know where the Servants lay; but has a Notion, that Katharine Campbell and Elizabeth Sturrock lay in the Kitchen. Depones, That ſhe has ſeen Elizabeth Sturrock ſeveral Times in her Bed in the Kitchen; and that ſhe does not remember to have ſeen Katharine Campbell in her Bed, though ſhe ſlept in the Kitchen: That the Servant-maids had no Place to ſleep in, in the Houſe, but the Kitchen; but the third Maid ſlept out of the Houſe. Depones, That Lieutenant Ogilvie ſlept in the Room ſhe has formerly mentioned; but ſhe never knew him ſleep in any of the Beds, but the Alcove Bed, except when his Brother was lying a Corpſe. Depones, That ſhe had once a Converſation with one Mr. Dougal a Surgeon, upon the Nature of Laudanum, which Mr. Dougal had been ſpeaking of the Day that Lieutenant Ogilvie was put from Eaſtmiln: That Mr. Dougal had been telling that he took it for the Gout; and ſhe aſked, If it was not dangerous? He told her, that there had been Inſtances of fatal Effects that it had; but ſaid, if it was cautiouſly taken, there was no Danger: That ſhe aſked, how much one might take with Safety? which he told her; but that ſhe did not aſk, how much of it would do a Man's Buſineſs. Depones, That from her own Knowledge ſhe cannot ſay whether Eaſtmiln was abroad on the Morning of that Day on which he died; but that ſhe heard it reported by others, particularly by Anne Sampſon, that he had been out that Morning; and heard it reported, that it was after he had got the Bowl of Tea; and that he was ſeized with a Vomiting before he got in again. Depones, That ſhe knows there was once a Doſe of Salts ſent from Edinburgh to Eaſtmiln for Mrs. Ogilvie's Uſe; but never heard of any more Salts coming into the Family. Depones, There was Nobody preſent when the old Lady deſired her to go up Stairs and attend Eaſtmiln, and keep theſe two Women from him. Depones, That Alexander Ogilvie, one of Eaſtmiln's Brothers, came to Eaſtmiln upon the Tueſday Forenoon after his Death. Depones, That when the Deponent once aſked Eaſtmiln when he was dying, If he did not chuſe that his Wife ſhould be with him? his Anſwer was, Miſs Clark, I chuſe a Drink; and that either Glenkilrie, or James Millam, or both, was preſent at this Time: That what Eaſtmiln vomited was much of the Colour of ſqueezed Eggs, or greeniſh-yellow: That Alexander Ogilvie aforeſaid came to Eaſtmiln upon the Monday eight Days after ſhe came there; and that ſhe came on a Friday; and that he ſtaid there till his Siſter was married: That ſhe never heard of any Report of the indecent Familiarities between the Pannels before ſhe came to Eaſtmiln: That ſhe never knew Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel, till the Deponent went to Eaſtmiln as aforeſaid. Depones, That ſhe never had any Difference with any of the Family of Eaſtmiln while ſhe ſtaid there; That ſhe never heard that Eaſtmiln had employed James Millam to turn her away from Eaſtmiln, or borrow Money from him to give her to go away from the Houſe: That after Eaſtmiln's Death, ſhe got a Meſſage from Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel, by Martha Ogilvie, Eaſtmiln's Siſter, to diſmiſs from the Houſe. Depones, That the Converſation ſhe had with Lieutenant Ogilvie the Pannel, about his ſending the Poiſon to the other Pannel, was at the Burn-ſide, upon the Eaſt Side of Eaſtmiln. And, upon the Proſecutor's Interrogatory, depones, That ſhe does not know that Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel took any Salts after her Huſband's Death. Depones, That when ſhe ſaw Eaſtmiln, in coming to his Houſe, at the Boat mentioned above, ſhe was informed he was then returning from Dunſinnan. And being further interrogate, upon the Part of the Pannels, depones, That ſhe was informed, the Drawers into which the Things were put that Andrew Stewart brought, ſtood in the Lieutenant's Room. Depones, That after the Pannels were committed to Priſon at Forfar, ſhe the Deponent went back to Eaſtmiln, and ſtaid for a few Nights: That at this Time, Alexander Ogilvie, Eaſtmiln's Brother, had a Roup of the Cattle at Eaſtmiln. Cauſa ſcientiæ patet. And this is Truth, as ſhe ſhall anſwer to God. And being further interrogate, upon the Part of the Proſecutor, depones, That when Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel was carried Priſoner from Eaſtmiln, Alexander Ogilvie took up ſome ſmall Keys of hers, and aſked her, If he ſhould take care of them? And that ſhe anſwered, She did not care who took care of them. Depones, upon Recollection, That Alexander Ogilvie had the Keys in his Hands when he aſked the above Queſtion: That Alexander Ogilvie locked all the Rooms in the Houſe, except the laigh Room; and put the Keys in a Drawer of that laigh Room, which he locked, and took the Key with him. And this is alſo Truth, as ſhe ſhall anſwer to God.

(Signed) ANNE CLARK. ALEX. BOSWELL.

ELIZABETH STURROCK, late Servant to the deceaſed Thomas Ogilvie of Eaſtmiln, aged Twenty-three Years, unmarried, purged of Malice and partial Counſel, and interrogate, depones, being ſolemnly ſworn, That about the End of laſt Harveſt, ſhe entered as a Servant to the deceaſed Thomas Ogilvie of Eaſtmiln, and continued in that Service till the ſaid Thomas Ogilvie's Death: That about Candlemas laſt, the ſaid Thomas Ogilvie was married to Mrs. Ogilvie, at which Time the ſaid Mrs. Ogilvie came Home to Eaſtmiln: That much about the ſame Time Lieutenant Ogilvie the Pannel came likewiſe to reſide at Eaſtmiln, where he continued till about a Fortnight before the ſaid Thomas Ogilvie's Death: That during Lieutenant Ogilvie's Reſidence at Eaſtmiln, ſhe had Occaſion to obſerve too great a Fondneſs betwixt the ſaid Lieutenant and Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannels, which proceeded even to Indecencies, ſhe having frequently ſeen them kiſſing and hugging each other in and about the Houſe of Eaſtmiln: That the late Thomas Ogilvie uſed frequently to be from Home, particularly about his Workmen: That during his Abſence, ſhe has frequently obſerved the two Pannels retire by themſelves to the upper Rooms of the Houſe, both the Eaſter and Weſter Room, when ſhe believed there was Nobody in theſe Rooms but themſelves. Depones, That one Night about Sun-ſet, during the Time aforeſaid, the Deponent having Occaſion to ſpeak to Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel, about what Ale the Deponent ſhould bring from Kirkton, the Deponent went up Stairs to the Eaſt Room, where the Lieutenant uſed to lie, to ſee for her Miſtreſs: That ſhe found the Door of the Room open; and upon looking into the Room, ſhe obſerved the two Pannels lying in the Bed in which Lieutenant Ogilvie uſually lay: That ſhe ſuſpected them to be there, by hearing them breathing: That upon diſcovering them, ſhe immediately turned back without ſpeaking to them, and run down to the firſt Flat of the Stair, where ſhe ſtopt, and called up to her Miſtreſs to ſee if ſhe was in the foreſaid Room; upon which her Miſtreſs anſwered her from that Room, as ſhe apprehended it, that ſhe was there: That Lieutenant Ogilvie the Pannel likewiſe ſpoke to her from the ſame Place at that Time. Depones, That at another Time, and before the Time above-mentioned, and ſoon after Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel's Marriage with the late Eaſtmiln, and while the late Eaſtmiln was at Dunſinnan, ſhe was told pretty early in a Morning by Anne Sampſon, a Neighbour-ſervant, that ſhe, Anne, believed Lieutenant Ogilvie the Pannel was gone into her Miſtreſs's Room: That upon this the Deponent went up to her Miſtreſs's Room to ſee into the Truth of it; and when ſhe went into the Room, ſhe obſerved Lieutenant Ogilvie the Pannel going from the Bed-ſide towards the Window, in his Night-gown: That ſhe is ſure her Miſtreſs was then in Bed in that Room, as ſhe was not got up by that Time in the Morning, nor had ſhe come down Stairs, nor was ſhe in the only other Room above Stairs, which the Deponent immediately went and looked into. Depones, That at ſeveral other Times, when the Deponent had Occaſion to be ſitting at her Wheel in the Kitchen, which is immediately under Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel's Room, and where one can eaſily hear any Noiſe, even to a laigh Word, that is made in Mrs. Ogilvie's Room, the Deponent heard the Feet of the two Pannels in the Room, and ſhuffling at the Side of the Bed: That the Reaſon why ſhe believed it to be the Feet of the Pannels which ſhe heard there, was, that ſhe ſaw them go up together to that Room juſt before ſhe heard the Noiſe as aforeſaid. Depones, That ſhe believes Lieutenant Ogilvie the Pannel was put away by the late Eaſtmiln from the Houſe, upon Eaſtmiln's Suſpicion, that the Lieutenant was too great with Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel: That her Reaſon for believing ſo is, that about the Time Lieutenant Ogilvie went away, the Deponent, as ſhe was going to her Bed in the Kitchen, overheard the late Eaſtmiln, when he was going to Bed with his Wife in the Room above, ſay to his Wife, That ſhe was too great with Lieutenant Ogilvie the Pannel; and that they were as frequent together as the Bell was to ring on Sunday. Depones, That Anne Sampſon was in the Kitchen at the ſame Time; and the Deponent believes ſhe heard what paſſed betwixt Eaſtmiln and his Wife, as aforeſaid, and the Deponent challenged her for liſtening. Depones, That after Lieutenant Ogilvie the Pannel had left the Houſe of Eaſtmiln, the Deponent obſerved the other Pannel Mrs. Ogilvie in Tears and crying; upon which Occaſion Mrs. Ogilvie ſaid to the Deponent, That ſhe was ſorry, or grieved, Lieutenant Ogilvie had left the Houſe. Depones, That upon the Night of the Day that Lieutenant Ogilvie left the Houſe, as aforeſaid, Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel gave the Deponent a Letter to be carried to Lieutenant Ogilvie at Little Forther, about three Miles from Eaſtmiln: That Mrs. Ogilvie deſired the Deponent to let Nobody know ſhe had got ſuch Letter: That the Deponent did not know what were the Contents of the Letter: That Mrs. Ogilvie deſired the Deponent to tell Lieutenant Ogilvie, that ſhe had been bad ſince he went away; and that her Huſband was not owning her: That ſhe delivered the Letter accordingly to Lieutenant Ogilvie at the Water-ſide near Little Forther: That the Lieutenant, in Anſwer, bid the Deponent tell Mrs. Ogilvie, that he was very well, and that ſhe ſhould keep up a good Heart; and that he was to go to Baron Reid's. Depones, That afterwards Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel gave her another Letter to carry to Lieutenant Ogilvie at Glenkilrie, and to deliver it privately, which the Deponent carried accordingly; and ſhe received an Anſwer in Writing from the Lieutenant to Mrs. Ogilvie, which the Lieutenant likewiſe deſired her to deliver privately; and ſhe did ſo. Depones, That upon another Time, being the Tueſday immediately before the late Eaſtmiln's Death, Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel ſent the Deponent with another Letter to Lieutenant Ogilvie at Alyth, likewiſe with Orders to deliver it privately. Depones, That ſhe delivered the Letter to Lieutenant Ogilvie accordingly, and then went and did ſome other Buſineſs in the Town of Alyth, and returned and received an Anſwer from Lieutenant Ogilvie to the laſt-mentioned Letter, which he deſired her to take care of, and deliver privately; when he likewiſe told her, that he had a Packet of Linens lying at a Houſe near by; and a Letter with them, which the Lieutenant deſired the Deponent to call for, and take to Eaſtmiln with her: That the Deponent returned ſtraight to Eaſtmiln with the Lieutenant's Anſwer; and Mrs. Ogilvie not being then at Home, the Deponent went and fetched a Bundle of Linens, and the other Letter, all which ſhe delivered to Mrs. Ogilvie at the ſame Time. Depones, That the Anſwer ſhe received laſt from the Lieutenant, as aforeſaid, was a large thick Letter, bigger than a Sheet of Paper; but ſhe did not think there was any thing in it but Paper. Depones, That Eaſtmiln appeared to be in his ordinary Health upon the Tueſday before he died, and that he uſually had very good Health, the Deponent having never known him to be in bad Health while ſhe was in his Service: That upon the Wedneſday before his Death, he was likewiſe in good Health: That upon the Thurſday Morning upon which he died, the Deponent knew little about Eaſtmiln, as ſhe herſelf was confined to Bed by Sickneſs, except that ſhe heard that Eaſtmiln had been taken ill: That Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel came into the Kitchen where the Deponent was lying, and told the Deponent in a low Voice, or a Whiſper, that ſhe, Mrs. Ogilvie, had given the Laird his Breakfaſt that Morning, and ſhe deſired the Deponent to ſay, that ſhe had likewiſe got her Breakfaſt, although the Deponent had then got none: That ſome Time thereafter Mrs. Ogilvie ſent Anne Sampſon with ſome Tea to the Deponent in a Bowl, which the Deponent drunk: That the Deponent commonly got Tea in the Morning when ſhe was indiſpoſed. Depones, That after the Deponent had got out of Bed on the ſaid Thurſday Morning, and before ſhe got the Tea as aforeſaid, ſhe obſerved the late Eaſtmiln come in at the outer Door, and come forward to the Kitchen where the Deponent was: That he was then very ill, and vomited much: That at this Time ſhe believes the reſt of the Family were at their Breakfaſt, Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel having come into the Kitchen for ſome Cream to the Tea. Depones, That Mrs. Ogilvie, ſeeing Eaſtmiln ſo ill, deſired him to go up to his Bed; which he did, and the Deponent helped him to go up Stairs, and to throw off his Cloaths: That after he had been a little while in Bed, he ſaid, he thought himſelf ſome eaſier. But depones, That in a ſhort Time he turned very ill again, fell a-vomiting and purging, and complained of every Part of his Body; ſaid his Heart was broken or riven, and he toſſed very much. Depones, That Eaſtmiln, during his Illneſs, called frequently for cold Water, and drank often of it. Depones, That about Ten or Eleven o'Clock that Forenoon, when old Lady Eaſtmiln, Andrew Stewart, and the Deponent, were in the Room together attending the late Eaſtmiln, Eaſtmiln ſaid, in the Deponent's hearing, That he was poiſoned, and that Woman had done it. Depones, That by that Woman, the Deponent underſtood Eaſtmiln meant his Wife: That the old Lady ſeemed to underſtand it in the ſame Way, and reproved her Son Eaſtmiln for ſaying ſo. To which Eaſtmiln anſwered, That it was very true, and his Death lay at her Door. Depones, That upon the Day Eaſtmiln was ill, as aforeſaid, Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel came pretty often up to his Room to ſee him in the Forenoon; but ſhe did not come near him at all in the Afternoon; and that, in the Afternoon, Mrs. Anne Clark, who ſat cloſe by Eaſtmiln, deſired the Deponent to go down and tell Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel to come up and ſee her Huſband: Upon which Eaſtmiln himſelf ſaid, No! no! I do not want her: That Anne Clark told the Deponent, ſhe might go down and bid her come up for all that: That the Deponent accordingly went and told Mrs. Ogilvie; but Mrs. Ogilvie refuſed to come up, ſaying, She did not like to ſee dying People. Depones, That, during her Huſband's Illneſs, Mrs. Ogilvie did not chuſe that the People in the Neighbourhood that came to ſee him, ſhould get Acceſs to his Room, for fear of diſturbing him: That the Deponent went and brought the Precentor in the Afternoon, or rather about Dinner-time, when the Precentor went and prayed by Eaſtmiln; Mrs. Ogilvie, who had ſent the Deponent for the Precentor, went up Stairs with him to Eaſtmiln's Room. Depones, That Mrs. Ogilvie was not very dull, or ſhewed great Marks of Grief upon her Huſband's Death, till Alexander Ogilvie, Eaſtmiln's Brother, the Doctor, came to the Houſe upon the Tueſday thereafter; when Mrs. Ogilvie having ordered the Deponent to deſire Alexander Ogilvie to ſpeak with her, and he having refuſed to do ſo, Mrs. Ogilvie fell a-crying, and wringing her Hands, throwing herſelf back upon the Bed, and ſaying, What could be the Meaning of this? Depones, That Alexander Ogilvie ſtopped the Burial, and ſent for Doctor Ogilvie of Forfar, and Doctor Ramſay, and Doctor Meik of Alyth, to inſpect the dead Body of his Brother: That, at this Time, Mrs. Ogilvie behaved very ill, weeping and crying, and wringing her Hands, and tearing herſelf; but the Deponent does not know the Cauſe of this Behaviour. Depones, That Lieutenant Ogilvie, at the Time of his Brother Eaſtmiln's Death, lived at Glenkilrie's Houſe; and Glenkilrie having been at Eaſtmiln when Thomas Ogilvie died, he went Home and deſired Lieutenant Ogilvie to go to Eaſtmiln upon that Event: That Lieutenant Ogilvie came to Eaſtmiln next Morning, and the Deponent ſeeing him approach the Houſe, told Mrs. Ogilvie that he was coming: Upon which Mrs. Ogilvie went out, and deſired the Deponent to tell Lieutenant Ogilvie to ſpeak to her in the Stable: That the Deponent went accordingly and delivered the Meſſage to Lieutenant Ogilvie, who was then walking with Doctor Meik, and the Lieutenant went to Mrs. Ogilvie in the Stable, as deſired. Depones, That after the late Eaſtmiln's Death, and after Mrs. Ogilvie heard the Sheriff of Forfar was coming to examine them at Eaſtmiln, Mrs. Ogilvie deſired the Deponent to ſay to the Sheriff, That the Deponent had ſeen Mrs. Ogilvie mix up the Bowl of Tea, which ſhe, Mrs. Ogilvie, had given her Huſband the Morning of the Day on which he died; and that the Deponent had drunk ſome of it before Eaſtmiln taſted it; and that ſhe likewiſe drank off what Eaſtmiln left of it; ſhe likewiſe particularly deſired the Deponent to ſay, That the Deponent was in the Cloſet with her, Mrs. Ogilvie, when ſhe mixed up the Bowl of Tea; and that ſhe, Mrs. Ogilvie, gave her Huſband ſome ſhort Bread with it: That Mrs. Ogilvie told the Deponent, that if the Deponent would ſay as thus directed, ſhe would ſtand by the Deponent, that no Harm ſhould happen to her; that the Deponent ſhould go with her where-ever ſhe went; and while ſhe, Mrs. Ogilvie, had a Halfpenny, ſhe ſhould have the Half of it. Depones, That Mrs. Ogilvie ſpoke to the Deponent in this Manner ſeveral Times: That Lieutenant Ogilvie was preſent upon theſe Occaſions, heard what Mrs. Ogilvie deſired the Deponent to ſay, and he himſelf deſired the Deponent to ſay as Mrs. Ogilvie directed her. Depones, That ſome Time before Eaſtmiln's Death, the Deponent knows Mrs. Ogilvie took a Doſe of Salts, the Deponent having got a Part of them: That ſhe never knew Mrs. Ogilvie taking Salts but that Time. Depones, That before Eaſtmiln's Marriage, ſhe lay in the laigh Room with old Mrs. Ogilvie and her Daughter: That after the Marriage, ſhe continued to lie with the old Lady, till Anne Clark came to Eaſtmiln: That after that Anne Clark lay with the old Lady, and the Deponent lay in the Kitchen with Katharine Campbell: That at this Time, Anne Sampſon lay in an Out-houſe till Katherine Campbell went away. Depones, being interrogate for the Pannels, That what ſhe has above deponed, concerning the Pannels kiſſing and hugging one another, happened at different Times, ſometimes when they were by themſelves, and at other Times when they were in Company with others. Depones, That when ſhe ſaw the Captain in Mrs. Ogilvie's Room in his Night-Gown as above, the Door was in Part open, ſo that ſhe could ſee into it, and that ſhe did not go into the Room. And being interrogate for the Pannels, what Number of Perſons, not of the Family, got Acceſs to the Room in which Eaſtmiln was, after his being taken ill as above? depones, That, to the beſt of her Remembrance, the Perſons who got Acceſs, were, Mr. Spalding of Glenkilrie, William Froſter, Anne Froſter, James Millam, and David Watſon: That James Millam, William Froſter, and Anne Froſter, were brought in by the Deponent, without the Knowledge of Mrs. Ogilvie. Depones, That ſhe did not hear Alexander Ogilvie give Orders to the Perſons who were ſent for the Doctors, to inſpect Eaſtmiln's Body; but ſhe afterwards heard of it from the Perſons who had been ſent, and who on that Account had come to get Meat in the Family; but that ſhe the Deponent was forbid by Mrs. Ogilvie to give them Meat. Depones, That when the Deponent was firſt brought to Town, ſhe was lodged, for about the Space of twenty Days, in the Houſe of one Mr. Gardiner at the Head of the Cowgate, by Mr. Muriſon the Macer: That from thence ſhe was carried to the Caſtle of Edinburgh, where ſhe has remained ſince that Time: That the Deponent, Anne Clark, Anne Sampſon, and Katharine Campbell, were lodged in the ſame Room till Thurſday or Friday laſt, when Anne Clark was put into another Room in the Caſtle, where ſhe remained a Day and a Night, and was thereafter put into the Room with the Deponent, and the other Perſons above-mentioned. Depones, That while the Deponent, and the other Perſons above-mentioned, were at the Houſe of one Gardiner, and in the Caſtle, they had ſome, though not much, Converſation upon the Subject of this Trial; but that in theſe Converſations, all of them declared, that they conſidered it as their Duty to tell nothing but the Truth. Depones, That upon the Morning of the Day after Eaſtmiln's Death, Anne Sampſon told Mrs. Stewart, Eaſtmiln's Siſter, in Preſence of the Deponent, that the Bowl out of which Eaſtmiln was ſaid to have drunk the Poiſon the Day before, was below in a Preſs in the Kitchen: That the Deponent having taken out the Bowl, obſerved ſomething greaſy in the Bottom of it; and intending to try if there was any Thing poiſonous in the Greaſe, ſhe put ſome Broth into the Bowl, and gave it to a Dog, who eat it up; but was nothing the worſe of it: That the Deponent made this Experiment of her own Accord, and not on the Suggeſtion or Deſire of any other Perſon whatſomever. And depones, That Anne Sampſon has often told the Deponent, that ſhe had filled the ſaid Bowl with Water, and offered it to Eaſtmiln, that Day on which he died; but that he had refuſed to drink out of it, damning the Bowl, and ſaying, he had already got his Death out of it. Cauſa ſcientiæ patet. And this is Truth, as ſhe ſhall anſwer to God. And being further interrogate, depones, That while the Deponent was in Eaſtmiln's Service, ſhe never heard of his being troubled with Vomitings, Purgings, or Colicks, before that Day on which he died; and that ſhe never knew of his being indiſpoſed, except by ſlight Colds. Depones, That when Lieutenant Ogilvie went into the Stable where Mrs. Ogilvie was, as has been above deponed, he did not remain there above four or five Minutes. And this is alſo Truth, as ſhe ſhall anſwer to God: And depones ſhe cannot write.

ANNE SAMPSON, late Servant to the deceaſed Thomas Ogilvie of Eaſtmiln, aged nineteen Years, unmarried, purged of Malice and partial Counſel, ſworn and interrogate, depones, That ſhe entered Servant to the Family of Eaſtmiln Whitſunday was a Year: That after being ſome Time abſent, ſhe returned a few Days before Miſs Clark came to the Houſe: That after her Return, ſhe had more than once Occaſion to obſerve Mrs. Ogilvie and Lieutenant Ogilvie kiſſing one another; particularly once in the Kitchen before the Deponent and another Servant-Maid: That ſhe has ſeen them embrace and hug one another: That when the Laird was out of the Houſe, ſhe has known them retire to a Room by themſelves, but not ſtaying above an Hour at a Time. Depones, That one Morning when the Laird was at Dunſinnan, ſhe heard the two Pannels ſpeaking together in Bed in the Room above: That ſhe was in the Kitchen, the Ceiling of which is not plaſtered, and where ſhe could hear the loweſt Voice in the Room above: That upon this, ſhe deſired her Fellow-Servant, Elizabeth Sturrock, to go up Stairs and ſee what was going on; and that Elizabeth, upon her Return, told the Deponent, that the Lieutenant had got out of the Bed before ſhe was got to the Door; and that ſhe ſaw him going from the Bed towards the Window in his Night-gown. Depones, That this was about Sun-riſing. Depones, That the Lieutenant left the Houſe a Fortnight before his Brother's Death; and before that Time, the Deponent being in the Kitchen with her Fellow-ſervants, Elizabeth Sturrock and Annie Robertſon, they all heard the Laird and Lady talking together in Bed in the Room above: That the Talking begun with the Lady's ſcolding her Huſband; upon which the Laird bade her hold her Tongue, for that ſhe and the Lieutenant were as common as the Bell that rings on Sabbath. Depones, That the Morning the Lieutenant left the Houſe, ſhe ſaw Mrs. Ogilvie weeping: That this was before he went away; and that ſhe ſaw her alſo weep after he went away. Depones, That Eaſtmiln was a healthy Man; and that, before the Day he died, ſhe never heard him complain, if it was not ſometimes of an Head-ach; and that the Night before he died, he was in Health, ſo far as ſhe knows. Depones, That the Night before her Maſter died, ſhe ſaw Andrew Stewart in the Houſe of Eaſtmiln; and that ſhe was told by Elizabeth Sturrock and Miſs Clark, the Night thereafter, that the ſaid Andrew Stewart had retired with Mrs. Ogilvie into a private Room. Depones, That the Morning of the Day her Maſter died, Breakfaſt was ready betwixt Eight and Nine, a little ſooner than ordinary: That ſhe ſaw her Miſtreſs make up the Bowl of Tea in Preſence of her Mother-in-Law and Miſs Clark, for Andrew Stewart was not then up: That ſhe followed her Miſtreſs up Stairs, wanting ſome Beef out of the Beef-ſtand, and ſaw her go into a Cloſet adjoining her Maſter's Room: That the Deponent followed her into the Cloſet, demanding the Beef; but that her Miſtreſs bade her go down Stairs, as ſhe was not ready yet; and that ſhe was always wanting ſomething; and that Mrs. Ogilvie appeared to be in a Paſſion at her: That her Maſter was at that Time in Bed; and that, when the Deponent was in the Cloſet, ſhe ſaw Mrs. Ogilvie ſtirring about the Tea, with her Face to the Door; and that, upon what her Miſtreſs ſaid to her above, ſhe went out of the Cloſet down to the Kitchen; but that ſhe did not ſee her Miſtreſs, when in the Cloſet, put any Thing into the Tea. Depones, That at this Time ſhe ſaw Alexander Lindſay, a Servant-lad in the Houſe, ſtanding upon the Stair-head, near the Cloſet-door, at the Time her Miſtreſs was in the Cloſet. Depones, That her Maſter got up between Nine and Ten, and firſt went to the Stables to ſee his Horſes fed, and then to the Shilling-Hill, where he converſed with ſome of his Tenants: That, in his returning towards the Houſe, ſhe ſaw him vomiting, and ſtill more when he came into the Kitchen; and that, when he was there, Mrs. Ogilvie came into the Kitchen, and ordered Elizabeth Sturrock to help him up Stairs, and followed him herſelf. Depones, That ſome Time thereafter, ſhe was ordered to carry up ſome clean Water for her Maſter for drinking, which ſhe did in the ſame Bowl that he got his Tea in from Mrs. Ogilvie; but that ſhe firſt ſynded the Bowl with ſome Water: That ſhe went up Stairs with the Bowl into her Maſter's Room, and found him in Bed; but that upon ſeeing the Bowl, he cried, Damn that Bowl, for I have got my Death in it already; and bid her at the ſame Time, carry it down Stairs out of his Sight; and that ſhe carried up Water to him in the Tea-Kettle, which he drunk of. Depones, That the Reaſon for her ſynding the Bowl was, that it appeared to be greaſy and white; and that ſhe knew the Bowl to be the ſame as above, becauſe Mrs. Ogilvie, after giving her Maſter his Tea, came down Stairs with it, and ſet it down in the Kitchen, on the Fore-ſide of the Preſs. Depones, That, after ſynding the Bowl, as aforeſaid, the Greaſe did not come wholly out of it. Depones, That the Day her Maſter died, about Mid-day, ſhe was ſent by Mrs. Ogilvie two Miles to clip ſome Sheep. Depones, That Mrs. Ogilvie frequently went to ſee how her Huſband was in the Forenoon, but not once in the Afternoon; and that, when the Deponent was going up Stairs to ſee him between Twelve and One o'Clock, ſhe was turned back by Mrs. Ogilvie. Being interrogate on Behalf of the Pannels, depones, That when Mrs. Ogilvie made up the Bowl of Tea in the Breakfaſting-Room as aforeſaid, the Deponent ſaw her put in Milk and Sugar; but whether ſhe put in any Honey, the Deponent does not perfectly remember, nor whether ſhe ſaw any Honey upon the Table. Depones, That the Family ſeldom breakfaſted without Honey; but that the Day deponed upon, ſhe rather thinks there was none; becauſe, ſhe believes, at that Time the Houſe was out of Honey. And being further interrogate in Behalf of the Pannels, depones, That, at the Time deponed upon, when ſhe carried up the freſh Water to her Maſter to drink, ſhe ſynded the Bowl with Water, and not with Broth out of the Pot. Depones, That the next Day thereafter, the Bowl was ſynded with Broth out of the Pot, and given to a Dog; and that it was the Deponent that did ſo by the Direction of Elizabeth Sturrock; and that Elizabeth Sturrock gave her no Reaſon for doing ſo. Further depones, That ſhe took the Bowl for carrying Water to her Maſter, becauſe it was at Hand; and that ſhe had no Notion at that Time of her Maſter being poiſoned, nor till after his Death. Being interrogate in Behalf of the Pannels, when ſhe returned from the Sheep-clipping? depones, That it was about Nine at Night. Upon which being again interrogate, how ſhe came to depone as above, that Mrs. Ogilvie did not once viſit her Huſband in the Afternoon? anſwers, That was, becauſe ſhe was told ſo by the other Servants, who added, That her Maſter did not want Mrs. Ogilvie up, for fear of doing her Harm. Depones, That after ſhe ſaw her Miſtreſs make up the Bowl of Tea in the Breakfaſting Parlour, as aforeſaid, ſhe went into the Kitchen, and made up the Fire, before ſhe followed her Miſtreſs to the Cloſet, as above deponed to. Cauſa ſcientiæ patet. And this is Truth, as ſhe ſhall anſwer to God.

ANDREW STEWART, Merchant in Alyth, aged Thirty, married, purged of Malice and partial Counſel, ſworn and interrogate, depones, That upon the Evening before Mr. Ogilvie of Eaſtmiln died, being a Wedneſday, the Deponent was at the Houſe of Eaſtmiln, when, upon his coming into the Houſe, Mr. Ogilvie told him, that he had forbid his Brother the Captain the Houſe, on Account of Suſpicions he had, that his Wife was too much taken up in doing Things for his Brother the Captain, and not for himſelf; and that at the ſame Time he mentioned ſome Differences he had with his Brother concerning Money-matters. Depones, That on the Monday before Eaſtmiln, the Deponent's Brother-in-law, died, Lieutenant Ogilvie (who is above deſigned Captain) came to the Deponent's Houſe in Alyth on Horſeback; and that the Horſe he rode belonged to Mr. Ogilvie of Eaſtmiln. Depones, That on the Day thereafter, being the Tueſday, Elizabeth Sturrock, a former Witneſs, came to the Deponent's Houſe, and bought ſome Things for the Family of Eaſtmiln: That he does not know that ſhe brought with her any Letter for Lieutenant Ogilvie; nor does he know if Lieutenant Ogilvie gave her any Letter for Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel. But depones, That he did that Day inform Lieutenant Ogilvie, that he the Deponent was to be at Eaſtmiln next Day. Depones, That upon the Day thereafter, he accordingly went to Eaſtmiln, Eaſtmiln, and before he went off, Lieutenant Ogilvie delivered to the Deponent a ſmall Phial Glaſs containing ſomething liquid, which he ſaid was Laudanum; and alſo a ſmall Paper Packet, which he ſaid contained Salts; and that the Morning of the Day preceding, the Deponent ſaw the Lieutenant working among ſome Salts, at leaſt which appeared to the Deponent to be Salts, which were in a Cheſt belonging to the Lieutenant: That the Phial Glaſs was round, and knows that there was another Phial Glaſs in his own Houſe which was ſquare: That he is poſitive, as he has already deponed, that one Phial Glaſs was delivered to him by the Lieutenant; and cannot ſay, with Certainty, that two might not have been delivered to him by the Lieutenant; but rather thinks he got only one; and that at the Time when the above Particulars were delivered to the Deponent, the Lieutenant deſired him to deliver them privately into Mrs. Ogilvie's own Hand: That he did not ſee the Packet made up, nor did he open it to ſee what it contained. Depones, That on the aforeſaid Packet, there was a Letter directed for Mrs. Ogilvie of Eaſtmiln, which Letter was ſealed both with Wax and a Wafer; and that round the Packet there was a looſe Paper of Directions, in what Manner the Laudanum was to be uſed. Depones, That when he came to Eaſtmiln in the Wedneſday Afternoon, he was carried into a Room where old Lady Eaſtmiln was; and that, within a ſhort Time thereafter, Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel, and Miſs Clark came into the Room: That, at the Deſire of Mrs. Ogilvie, he followed her up to the Eaſtern Room, where Mrs. Ogilvie having aſked him, If he had brought any Word to her from the Lieutenant? he delivered to her the ſeveral Particulars above-mentioned, which the Deponent ſaw her immediately put into a Drawer in the Room: That he did not ſee her read the Letter at that Time; but that ſhe put the whole together into the Drawer: That ſoon thereafter Miſs Clark aſked the Deponent, What he had brought with him from the Lieutenant to Mrs. Ogilvie? Or if he had brought any Thing with him? He at firſt ſaid he had brought nothing; but, upon Miſs Clark's preſſing him with great Earneſtneſs, he at laſt informed her of the Particulars he had brought: That, upon this, Miſs Clark ſaid, that ſhe was afraid Mrs. Ogilvie might poiſon her Huſband. Depones, That ſoon thereafter Miſs Clark, in Preſence of the Deponent and the old Lady, deſired Eaſtmiln not to take any Thing out of his Wife's Hand, except at the Table; to which he anſwered, That he would not: That the old Lady joined with Miſs Clark in deſiring Eaſtmiln to take nothing out of his Wife's Hand; but that the Deponent was at that Time very much diſpleaſed with both, as he then had no Suſpicion that Mrs. Ogilvie had any Deſign againſt the Life of her Huſband. Depones, That that ſame Night he heard Mrs. Ogilvie ſay, that ſhe lived a moſt unhappy Life with her Huſband; that ſhe wiſhed him dead; or, if that could not be, ſhe wiſhed herſelf dead. Depones, That the Deponent ſupped with Eaſtmiln and the reſt of the Family that Night: That he then appeared to be in his ordinary State of Health; but that ſome times before, that ſame Night, he told the Deponent and the reſt of the Company then at Kirkton, that he had ſwarfed or fainted on the Hill: that, for that Reaſon, he could drink no Ale: That, upon this, they called for a Dram, which he took, and thereafter ſeemed hearty, and in good Spirits; and Eaſtmiln then ſaid, that the Swarf had happened to him on the Hill that ſame Day. Depones, That that Night the Deponent told, that he intended to go off from Eaſtmiln early next Day, which occaſioned their getting Breakfaſt more early than uſual: That Eaſtmiln did not breakfaſt along with the Family, the only Perſons preſent at Breakfaſt being Mrs. Ogilvies elder and younger, Miſs Clark and the Deponent being then only preſent: That the Deponent ſaw Mrs. Ogilvie making a Bowl of Tea, by filling it out of the Tea-pot, and putting Sugar and Milk in it; and that ſhe ſaid, in Preſence of the Company, that ſhe was to give it to her Huſband, who was then in Bed; and that the Deponent ſaw her go out of the Room with the Bowl in her Hand: That, about an Hour and a Half after they had begun to breakfaſt, they were told that Eaſtmiln had been ſuddenly taken ill; upon which Miſs Clark immediately run up to the Room in which he was, and ſoon thereafter returned weeping, and told them, that Eaſtmiln had got a bad Breakfaſt. Depones, That the Deponent immediately run up Stairs, where he found Eaſtmiln vomiting and purging violently: That he heard him ſay that he was all wrong within; and that he had got what would do his Turn: That Eaſtmiln called very much for Drink: That they offered him Milk; but that he would drink nothing but Water: That he complained much that he was burning within. Depones, That he propoſed to Mrs. Ogilvie that a Surgeon ſhould be called to his Aſſiſtance, to which ſhe would not agree, ſaying, That he would be better: And upon the Deponent's renewing this Propoſal, ſhe ſaid, She would not for any Money that a Surgeon ſhould be called, as the Conſequence of this would be, to give her a bad Name, from what Miſs Clark had ſaid of her: That, upon this, the Deponent told Mrs. Ogilvie, That Mr. Meik, Surgeon in Alyth, whom the Deponent had recommended, was a diſcreet Perſon: That he would come; and that he would tell none but her what he thought of him: That, upon this, the Deponent left her, ſhe having previouſly agreed that Mr. Meik ſhould come: That the Deponent thereafter ſet out on his Journey; but, before he had got far from the Houſe, one of the Girls, whoſe Name he thinks was Robertſon, came up to him, and deſired that Mr. Meik might be ſent with all Haſte: That after Supper, the Deponent had a Converſation with Miſs Clark concerning the Suſpicions ſhe had of Mrs. Ogilvie's Intentions againſt her Huſband, in which the Deponent propoſed, that they ſhould either take Mrs. Ogilvie's Keys out of her Pocket, or break open her Drawers at the Back, in order that they might ſatisfy themſelves, if the Particulars brought by the Deponent were Poiſon or not; and that this was the only Method by which Miſchief would be prevented: That Miſs Clark did not ſeem to agree to either of theſe Propoſals, and the Deponent himſelf had at that Time no Suſpicion, that there was any Foundation for Miſs Clark's Fears; and the Deponent was confirmed in this Opinion from his having been told, by the old Lady, that ſhe had gone up to the Room-door, after her Son and Daughter-in-law were in Bed; and that there was then more Kindneſs between them than uſual. Depones, That his Wife had frequently told him, before the Death of Eaſtmiln, that he was a tender Man; but that he never heard of his having been troubled with violent Vomitings, or Purgings, before the Day on which he died: That he had the Appearance of a tender Man; and that the Deponent has heard his Wife ſay, That he would not be a Long-liver. Depones, That at the Converſation above-mentioned at Kirkton, he heard Eaſtmiln ſay, that he had been ill of a Cough and ſore Breaſt; and that for ſome Time paſt, he had been thinking of writing to Doctor Ogilvie at Forfar, to ſend him ſome Things: That the Deponent laughed at him for talking in that Manner, and bid him take a Dram. Depones, That the Drawer into which Mrs. Ogilvie put the Particulars delivered to her by the Deponent, ſtood in that Room in which the Deponent ſlept that Night. Depones, That at the Time when Alexander Ogilvie the Deponent's Brother-in-law arreſted the Corpſe, the Deponent adviſed Lieutenant Ogilvie to make his Eſcape, if guilty; to which he anſwered, That God and his own Conſcience knew that he was innocent. Depones, That the two Pannels lived at the Houſe of Eaſtmiln, from the Time of Eaſtmiln's Burial to the Time that Mrs. Ogilvie was apprehended; and that for ſome Time after the Pannels continued to live there; but how long he cannot ſay. Depones, That Mrs. Ogilvie had been blooded the Day before Eaſtmiln's Death, or the Day before that; and that ſhe had been ill, and taking Drugs for ſome Time before, as the Deponent had heard. Cauſa ſcientiæ patet. And this is Truth, as he ſhall anſwer to God. And at reading over the Oath, depones, That at the Time when Lieutenant Ogilvie delivered the Particulars above-mentioned to the Deponent, he deſired him to put them into Mrs. Ogilvie's own Hand: But did not mention the Words privately, or by herſelf; and that his Reaſon for denying at firſt to Anne Clark, that he had brought any Parcel from Lieutenant Ogilvie, was, becauſe he conſidered Miſs Clark as a Perſon given to raiſe Diſſenſion in Families; and becauſe that he had been deſired by the Lieutenant to put the Particulars into Mrs. Ogilvie's own Hand. And this is alſo Truth.

(Signed) And. Stewart. Geo. Brown.

James Carnegie, Surgeon in Brechin, married, aged about forty and upwards, being ſolemnly ſworn, purged of Malice and partial Counſel, depones, That in the End of May laſt, he got a Meſſage from Lieutenant Ogilvie the Pannel, with whom he is acquainted, deſiring him to meet him at Colin Smith's, Vintner in Brechin: That the Deponent having gone there, found him in Company with one Lieutenant Campbell of the ſame Regiment, and one Mr. Dickſon: That Lieutenant Ogilvie took the Deponent aſide, and told him, that he was troubled with Gripes, and wanted to buy ſome Laudanum from him, and at the ſame Time told him he wanted to buy ſome Arſenick, in order to deſtroy ſome Dogs that ſpoiled the Game: That the Deponent told him, that he was uncertain whether he could furniſh him with theſe Things or not; but that he ſhould look when he went Home: That the Deponent, when he went Home, found he had ſome of both, and put up a ſmall Phial Glaſs of Laudanum, and betwixt half an Ounce and an Ounce of Arſenick, both which he delivered next Day to the Lieutenant, after the Deponent had dined with him and Lieutenant Campbell next Day in Smith's: That Lieutenant Ogilvie took the Deponent into another Room, away from Lieutenant Campbell, when he was to receive the Laudanum and the Arſenick, and there the Deponent delivered them to him: That the Price of both was a Shilling: That the Arſenick was pulverized; and Lieutenant Ogilvie having aſked how to prepare it, the Deponent gave him Directions. Depones, That he had ſold of the ſame Arſenick formerly to People for poiſoning of Rats, and heard that it had the deſired Effect. Depones, That he has been accuſtomed, when he ſold Arſenick, to take Receipts from low People who bought it, but never from Gentlemen; and as the Deponent knew Lieutenant Ogilvie, and had a good Opinion of him, the Deponent did not aſk a Receipt from him, although, when the Lieutenant ſpoke about it firſt, the Deponent ſaid to him, We uſe to take a Receipt for Arſenick: That the Lieutenant anſwered, See firſt if you have it; adding at the ſame Time, Very good. Depones, That he got his Arſenick from a Druggiſt in Dundee; but how long ago he cannot ſay, there being a ſmall Demand for Arſenick at any Time. Cauſa ſcientiæ patet. And all this is Truth, as he ſhall anſwer to God. Depones, That he wrapped it up in the Form of a Pennyworth of Snuff under three Paper Covers. Depones, That the Arſenick which he ſold as above was white Arſenick. Depones, That he cannot take upon him to ſay, from looking at Arſenick, whether it be Arſenick or not; nor can he ſay from the Taſte, for he never taſted it; but that he bought this as Arſenick, had the Name marked upon it upon the Package, and heard from thoſe he ſold it to that it had killed Rats, as above-mentioned. Depones, upon a further Interrogatory, That he heard of Mr. Ogilvie of Eaſtmiln's Death after the Time that he ſold the Arſenick to the Lieutenant. Cauſa ſcientiæ patet. And this is alſo Truth, as he ſhall anſwer to God.

Lieutenant George Campbell, of the late eighty-ninth Regiment, unmarried, aged about twenty-two, being ſolemnly ſworn, purged of Malice, partial Counſel, and interrogate, depones, That he has known Lieutenant Ogilvie the Pannel theſe five Years paſt: That in the Beginning of June laſt, as he thinks, the Pannel called for the Deponent at Phinhaven, and deſired him to go along with him to Brechin, becauſe he wanted to ſee his old Landlord William Finlay, Vintner there: That they accordingly went to Brechin, and put up at Colin Smith's, Vintner, and the Pannel called for James Carnegie, Surgeon there, but had no Converſation at that Time apart from the Deponent; the Pannel invited Mr. Carnegie to Dinner, after he and the Deponent ſhould return from the Fiſhing, which they were going to next Day. And accordingly he came to Dinner, and the Pannel and Mr. Carnegie went out after Dinner to another Room, and had ſome private Converſation for ſome few Minutes, and then returned back to the Deponent; and the Deponent and the Pannel went to Phinhaven that Night, it being Friday's Night, and he ſtaid with the Deponent Saturday and Sunday Nights, and left him on Monday; and on the Saturday after the Deponent heard of Mr.

Ogilvie of Eaſtmiln's Death. Cauſa ſcientiæ patet. And this is Truth, as he ſhall anſwer to God.

(Signed) Geo. Campbell. James Ferguson.

Patrick Dickson, Merchant in Brechin, married, aged ſixty and upwards, being ſolemnly ſworn, purged of Malice and partial Counſel, examined, and interrogate, depones, That when the Pannel Mr. Ogilvie was in Priſon at Forfar, the Deponent went to viſit him; and he deſired the Deponent to go to James Carnegie, Surgeon in Brechin, and talk to him, that he might not be impoſed on by any body; and the Deponent accordingly went and converſed with Mr. Carnegie, who informed him that he had ſold the Pannel ſome Laudanum and ſome Arſenick, for both which he received a Shilling; and the Deponent returned to Forfar, and communicated to the Pannel what Mr. Carnegie had ſaid; upon which the Pannel ſeemed to be under ſome Concern, and ſeemed deſirous to ſpeak with Mr. Carnegie, without either confeſſing or denying to the Deponent that he had bought the Arſenick, for he had only acknowledged buying the Laudanum on the Saturday before, when the Deponent had been with him in Priſon; and the Deponent told him that he had ſome Buſineſs on hand which hindered him to ſend Mr. Carnegie to him; and the Pannel deſired the Deponent to tell the Sheriff that he wanted to ſee him, to amend ſomething in his Declaration with regard to the Laudanum which the Pannel received from Mr. Carnegie. Cauſa ſcientiæ patet. And all this is Truth, as he ſhall anſwer to God.

(Signed) Pat. Dickson. And. Pringle.

Peter Meik, Surgeon in Alyth, unmarried, aged about twenty-ſeven, being ſolemnly ſworn, purged of Malice and partial Counſel, examined, and interrogate, depones, That upon the Day that Mr. Ogilvie of Eaſtmiln died, the Deponent was ſent for as a Surgeon to him: That he was dead before he came, as the Deponent was informed, about two Hours: That immediately upon the Deponent's Arrival, he was carried up by a Servant to Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel's Room, where ſhe was ſitting, and ſhe appeared to be in great Grief and Concern for her Huſband's Death, and deſired the Deponent, that whatever he might think he diſcovered to be the Cauſe of her Huſband's Death, that he would conceal it from the World. And depones, There was Nobody elſe preſent with the Deponent and the Pannel at that Time: That, upon going to the Room where the Corpſe lay, and afterwards going out of the Houſe, he met with Mr. Ogilvie the Pannel, who went up with him to the Room where the Corpſe lay, and appeared to be in great Grief and Concern for his Brother: That five or ſix Days after, he was called upon to inſpect the Body of Eaſtmiln; and, upon inſpecting it, he obſerved the Nails and a Part of the Breaſt diſcoloured, and his Tongue ſwelled beyond its natural Size, and cleaving to the Roof of his Mouth, and no Part of his Tongue was beyond his Lips, though it did come out beyond his Teeth: That he has obſerved the Symptoms of the Nails and the Breaſt to occur after a natural Death, but never that of the Tongue at the ſame Time, though he has obſerved the Tongue ſwelled without the other Symptoms. And being interrogate, Whether he underſtood theſe Symptoms to be the Effect of Poiſon? depones, That he is not ſo much acquainted with the Effects of Poiſon as to have formed a Judgment whether that was the Cauſe in this Caſe; but he was led to make that Conjecture from the Notice given him by Andrew Stewart, who had told him that the Defunct was thought to be poiſoned, and from the Caution given him by Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel, to conceal any Thing that might diſcover the Manner of her Huſband's Death. Depones, That Alexander Ogilvie, the Defunct's youngeſt Brother, told the Deponent, that he was ſent for to open his Brother's Body; and Gilbert Ramſay, Surgeon in Coupar, being alſo there, the Deponent and he agreed to open the Body; but Alexander would not agree to it, unleſs Doctor Ogilvie at Forfar was there; and as the Deponent and Mr. Ramſay could not ſtay till he came, it was laid aſide. Depones, That neither of the Pannels made any Objection to it; and that Alexander deſired them to take a ſuperficial View of the Body; which they did, and diſcovered the Symptoms aforeſaid. Cauſa ſcientiæ patet. And all this is Truth, as he ſhall anſwer to God.

(Signed) Peter Meik. And. Pringle.

Gilbert Ramsay, Surgeon in Coupar of Angus, married, aged about thirty-eight Years, being ſolemnly ſworn, purged of Malice and partial Counſel, and interrogate, depones, That he was ſent for to Eaſtmiln about five or ſix Days after the Laird's Death, and was deſired by Alexander Ogilvie, his youngeſt Brother, to inſpect his Body along with the preceding Witneſs; and, upon looking at it, they obſerved the Nails and Part of the Breaſt diſcoloured, and his Tongue ſwelled: That he has obſerved the firſt two Symptoms to happen in a natural Death, in conſequence of Putrefaction; but has not obſerved the laſt Symptom: That theſe Symptoms are owing to ſomething very acrid, and made the Deponent ſuſpect that he died of Poiſon: That his Lips were very little ſwelled, but more diſcolcured than by a natural Death: That the Deponent had heard Suſpicions of Poiſon before he came there. And being interrogate for the Pannels, depones, That he had obſerved the Tongue ſwelled even in a natural Death, but not to that Degree it was in this Caſe. And depones, That if he ſaw a dead Body with theſe Symptoms, though he had got no Notice of any Suſpicion of Poiſon, he would ſuſpect it from theſe Appearances. And being interrogate, Whether all theſe Symptoms might not happen in a bilious Colick? depones, That the great Swelling in the Tongue, and Diſcolouring in the Lips, would not happen. And being interrogate for the Pannels, Whether all the uſual Symptoms of Poiſon happened in this Caſe? depones, That he cannot anſwer that Queſtion with any Certainty, never having ſeen the Body of any other Perſon who died of Poiſon. And being further interrogate, depones, That the uſual Symptoms that occur in Poiſon by Arſenick, are Vomiting, and Evacuating downwards, and a great Swelling in the Tongue, and the Blackneſs in the Breaſt. And being further interrogate, depones, That there was no Appearance of Ulcers, in this Caſe, either in the Tongue or the Lips. Depones, That the Deponent propoſed to open the Body; but he was oppoſed by Alexander Ogilvie, on Account that Doctor Ogilvie from Forfar was not there; but, as far as the Deponent knows, it was not oppoſed by either of the Pannels. And further depones, That he believes every Thing in the Body would, after being ſo long dead, be in a State of Putrefaction; ſo that he doubts if the Poiſon would have been certainly diſcovered, though the Body had been opened. Cauſa ſcientiæ patet. And this is Truth, as he ſhall anſwer to God.

(Signed) Gilbert Ramsay. James Ferguson.

Doctor John Ogilvie, Phyſician in Forfar, aged forty-eight Years, married, being ſolemnly ſworn, purged of Malice and partial Counſel, and interrogate, depones, That he heard, that the late Eaſtmiln died upon the ſixth of June laſt; and that a few Days after that, the Deponent was deſired by the Sheriff-Subſtitute of Forfarſhire, to go to Eaſtmiln to inſpect the Corpſe of the Defunct: That the Deponent forthwith obeyed their Order, and arrived at Eaſtmiln upon the twelfth of June laſt, about Noon: That upon his Arrival, Alexander Ogilvie, the Defunct's Brother, deſired the Deponent to go and inſpect the Corpſe, which were then lying in an Outhouſe: That he found the Corpſe in its Grave-cloaths, and in a Coffin; and having inſpected the Body, he obſerved, that the Face, the Arms, and ſeveral other Parts of the Body, were black and livid, and that the Nails were remarkably black; and as to the Tongue, it was locked faſt by the Jaws, ſo that he could only obſerve a ſmall Part of it, which projected beyond the Teeth, which Part being the Tip of the Tongue, he obſerved to be white and rough, and of a very unuſual Appearance: That the Breaſt was white, and the Lips pretty much of a natural Colour: That from the Appearances above deſcribed, he could draw no Concluſion as to the Cauſe of the Defunct's Death; as almoſt all theſe Appearances might have ariſen from the putrid State the Body was then in; and that the only Thing that appeared extraordinary to him, was the Appearance of the Tongue above deſcribed: That the Deponent had ſome Inclination to have opened the Body, and if the two Surgeons, who he heard had left Eaſtmiln that Morning, had been there, he believes he might have done ſo; but as they were gone, and as the Deponent, in his own Opinion, thought the Body too much putrefied, to be opened with Safety to the Operator; and as he was likewiſe of Opinion, that in ſuch a State of Putrefaction, no certain Signs could have been diſcovered of the Cauſe of the Death by opening the Body, the Deponent declined to do it. Depones, That the Appearance of the Tongue before deſcribed, was not ſuch as happens in common Deaths, but ſuch as occurs from Convulſions, or other ſtrong Cauſes. Depones, That Lieutenant Ogilvie, the Pannel, neither deſired nor forbid the Deponent to inſpect the Corpſe; but he was preſent with the Deponent when he inſpected them as aforeſaid. Cauſa ſcientiæ patet. And this is the Truth, as he ſhall anſwer to God.

(Signed) John Ogilvie. And. Pringle.

Robert Smith, Surgeon in Edinburgh, aged fifty Years and upwards, a Widower, who being ſolemnly ſworn, purged of Malice and partial Counſel, and examined, depones, That he had once Occaſion to attend a Patient, being a Woman, near Ormiſton, who had got Arſenick and died of it, as the Deponent verily believes: That the Deponent went and ſaw the Woman about two Hours after ſhe had taken the Arſenick in ſome Pottage, as ſhe told him: That the Deponent, when he came, found her ſeized with a violent Vomiting and a Purging: That ſhe complained of a burning Heat in her Stomach and Bowels, and had a great Thirſt, and drank frequently of Milk and Water: That the Deponent, after ſtaying ſome Time with her, went away, and after a few Hours, returned to her again, when he was informed, the before-mentioned Symptoms had continued upon her, that is to ſay, the Vomiting, Purging, Pain, and Drought: That ſhe ſoon thereafter died, having lived, as the Deponent thinks, about nine Hours after ſhe took the Arſenick. Depones, That the Deponent next Day inſpected the dead Body of the foreſaid Woman, and could diſcover nothing externally upon the Body different from the Appearances after a natural Death; but that, upon opening the Body, he diſcovered the Stomach and Guts to be red and inflamed, and the Stomach appeared to be gangrened, and in Parts of the Stomach he diſcovered ſome Arſenick. Depones, That at the Time the Woman had received the Arſenick, as above deponed, a Child had likewiſe taken a Spoonful or two of the Pottage, which occaſioned the Child to vomit, and thereby throw up the Arſenick, as he believes, ſo that the Child recovered. Being interrogate for the Pannels, depones, That a Perſon may be ſeized with a Vomiting, internal Pain and Drought, without having received Arſenick; as theſe Symptoms may occur in a bilious Colick and other Caſes. Cauſa ſcientiæ patet. And this is the Truth, as he ſhall anſwer to God.

(Signed) Robert Smith. And. Pringle.

George Campbell, Sheriff-Subſtitute of Forfar, aged ſeventy and upwards, ſolutus, who being ſolemnly ſworn, purged of Malice and partial Counſel, and examined, depones, That upon looking at the two Declarations now exhibited to him, emitted before him by Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel, and other two by Patrick Ogilvie Pannel, that all theſe were emitted freely before him, and faithfully taken down from their own Mouths, and ſubſcribed by them before the Deponent. And alſo, that the Deponent's Name adjected thereto, is his Subſcription. Depones, That he, as Sheriff-Subſtitute of the County of Forfar, went to Eaſtmiln upon the firſt of July laſt, in order to ſearch for Papers or Letters belonging to any of the Pannels: He the Deponent did find in a Trunk, or Drawer, he cannot ſay which, the Letter now exhibited to him, marked by his Hand, and that of John Ure his Clerk, on the Day aforeſaid. And another Letter being exhibited to him, without Date or Subſcription by the Writer thereof, and with a Docquet on the Back, ſigned George Spalding, and another Docquet below, ſigned Anne Clark and Alexander Boſwell, depones, That to the beſt of his Memory, he thinks he received the ſaid Letter incloſed in one wrote by Alexander Ogilvie, the Pannel's Brother, addreſſed to the Deponent. And a third Letter being exhibit to him, ſigned Ketty Nairn, with a Docquet on the Back, ſigned

Anne

Anne Clark, Alexander Boſwell, depones, That he found the ſaid Letter in one of the Repoſitories at Eaſtmiln, when he made the Search above-mentioned. Cauſa ſcientiæ patet. And this is Truth, as he ſhall anſwer to God.

(Signed) GEO. CAMPBELL. GILB. ELLIOT.

JOHN URE, Sheriff-Clerk of Forfar, aged forty Years, married, being ſolemnly ſworn, purged of Malice and partial Counſel, and interrogate, depones, That the four Declarations now exhibited to him, two by Mrs. Ogilvie Pannel, and two by Patrick Ogilvie Pannel, were all freely emitted before the preceding Witneſs, and in Preſence of the Deponent, and all ſigned by him the Deponent, by the Sheriff-Subſtitute George Campbell, and the Pannels. Cauſa ſcientiæ patet. And this is the Truth, as he ſhall anſwer to God.

(Signed) JOHN URE. GILB. ELLIOT.

The three Letters and four Declarations before deponed to were read to the Court and Jury, and of which the Tenor follows:

FIRST LETTER.

Dr Captain

I was ſorrie I miſſed you this Day. I ſat at the Water-Side a long Time this Forenoon; I thought you would have comed up here; if you had as much Mind of me as I have of you, you would have comed up, tho' you had but ſtayd out-by as there was no Uſe for that, there is more Rooms in the Houſe then one. God knows the Heart that I have this Day and inſtead of being better its worſe, and not in my Power to help it. You are not minding the Thing that I ſaid to you, or you went out here and what I wrote for. Meat I have not taſted ſince Yeſterday Dinner, nor wont or you com here, tho' I ſhould never eat any it lyes at your Door. Your Brother would give any thing you would come, for God's ſake come.

SECOND LETTER.

Dr Sr

I received yours juſt now; I am very glead to hear that you went ſafe home, no thing could give me greater Pleaſure then to here of you being well; Mrs. Spaden was ſafley delivert of a Daughter laſt Night, and is in a very good Way; Mr. Spaden thought it needles to write you as I have wrote you: As for that you write me about any body clattring any Noncens you need not be afraid of that about any thing, for I am determind not to mind any thing; We ſhall ſend to you when Willie and Chairtle comes up, but in the mean time I think you may ſend one Sunday to ſee and to let us here how you are; the Pain will not write for me: I have no more Time to write, but my beſt Reſpects to your Mother is all from Dr Sr

yours while

Addreſſed on the Back, To Thomas Ogilvy Eſq. of Eaſtmiln.

FIRST DECLARATION by KATHARINE NAIRN.

Forfar, 14 June, 1765. In Preſence of George Campbell, Eſq. Sheriff-Subſtitute, Compeared KATHARINE NAIRN, lawful Daughter of the deceaſed Sir Thomas Nairn of Dunſinnan, Baronet, and Relict of the deceaſed Thomas Ogilvie of Eaſtmiln, who being examined, declares, That Lieutenant Patrick Ogilvie was at Eaſtmiln when ſhe was married to his Brother, and continued there as his proper Reſidence till within theſe three or four Weeks, when he left ſame, as his Brother and he did not agree. That the Evening Patrick Ogilvie left Eaſtmiln, the Declarant wrote him a Letter, which ſhe ſent by Elizabeth Sturrock, one of the Maid-ſervants, to Little Forther, as ſhe was going there, at leaſt about a Gun-ſhot from Little Forther, for ſome Whiſky from one Robert Eaſſon. Declares, That ſhe did not write any Letter to ſaid Patrick Ogilvie when at Glenkilrie, nor to be ſent him to one John Spalding's, nor to Glenkilrie. Declares, That on Tueſday before her Huſband's Death ſhe was ſending ſaid Elizabeth Sturrock to Alyth with ſome Yarn, when ſhe wrote a Letter by her to deliver to ſaid Patrick Ogilvie relative to ſome of his Shirts ſhe had been mending to him, and the Letter was directed to the Care of Andrew Stewart, and that ſhe got no Return by Elizabeth Sturrock; but that next Day ſhe got a Return to her Letter by ſaid Andrew Stewart, a Merchant in Alyth, who was coming to Eaſtmiln however, and that it was the Afternoon of the Day before her Huſband died. That Andrew Stewart, beſide the Letter, brought her two Doſes of Salts, and a ſmall Phial Glaſs with a little Laudanum; and that the Letter was but a Quarter of a Sheet of Paper, containing moſtly Directions about the Salts, and how much of the Laudanum to take; but whether the Letter was open or ſealed ſhe does not remember. That before Patrick Ogilvie left his Brother's Houſe, ſhe aſked him, any Time he was at Alyth, to buy for her and ſend to Eaſtmiln two Doſes of Salts and a little Laudanum, as ſhe ſlept very ill: That when Andrew Stewart delivered the Letter, ſhe read ſame, being only a Direction as above, and after laid the Salts and Laudanum into a Drawer, till ſhe ſhould uſe ſame; and that ſhe took one of the Doſes of Salts on the Friday after her Huſband's Death, and the other on the Saturday; and on the Sunday and the Monday Nights ſhe took Laudanum each Night, and as ſhe did not uſe the whole Laudanum, ſhe delivered back the Glaſs, and the Remainder of Laudanum, to the ſaid Patrick Ogilvie on his Return to Eaſtmiln, after his Brother's Death. That on Thurſday Morning the ſixth of June, her Huſband being diſtreſſed the Night before, and many Days preceding; and that Morning he complained of a Shortneſs of Breath, and that through the Night he had been diſtreſſed with it; ſhe therefore gave him his Tea in his Bed; and that when the reſt of the Family were at their Tea, ſhe filled up a Bowlful for her Huſband, which, with a Bit of hard Biſket from Dundee, ſhe carried ſtraight from the low Room, where they were at Breakfaſt, up Stairs to her Huſband's Room, and gave him; and that ſhe took the Biſket out of a Baſket ſtanding on a By-table in the Room, aſide the Family then ſitting at Breakfaſt; but that ſhe did not go into any Cloſet with the Tea, before giving it to her Huſband: That ſhe never heard from her Huſband, nor any Perſon elſe, that he blamed the Tea for his Illneſs. Declares, That Elizabeth Sturrock got ſo much of the Tea Mr. Ogilvie left, as he did not drink it out, and alſo got another Bowl of Tea after, both which ſhe gave her out of her own Hands. And this ſhe declares to be Truth.

KETTY OGILVIE. GEO. CAMPBELL. JOHN URE, Clk.

SECOND DECLARATION by KATHARINE NAIRN.

Forfar, 15 June, 1765. In Preſence of the ſaid George Campbell, Eſq. Sheriff-Subſtitute,

Compeared the ſaid KATHARINE NAIRN, alias OGILVIE, who being re-examined, declares, That before the Lieutenant left Eaſtmiln, ſhe heard him ſay that he had both Salts and Laudanum in a Cheſt that he brought from the Eaſt-Indies, and that ſhe ſaid ſhe would be obliged to him for a little of the Salts and Laudanum, as ſhe had much Need thereof.

KETTY OGILVIE. GEO. CAMPBELL. JOHN URE, Clk.

FIRST DECLARATION by PATRICK OGILVIE.

Forfar, 14 June, 1765. By George Campbell, Eſq. Sheriff-Subſtitute of Forfarſhire.

Compeared Lieutenant PATRICK OGILVIE, of the Eighty-ninth Regiment of Foot, who being examined, declares, That ſo far as he remembers, he came to this Country from Abroad in January laſt, and that his principal Reſidence was at the Eaſtmiln of Glenyila, his Brother Thomas Ogilvie's Houſe, and that he left that Place about three Weeks ago. That the Reaſon he left it, was on account of ſome Dryneſs betwixt his Brother and him, occaſioned by ſome Surmiſes or Reports in the Country; but though theſe had not happened, he was determined not to ſtay longer about his Brother's. That ſince leaving ſame he has had no fixed Reſidence, but has been going about ſeeing his Friends and old Acquaintances. Declares, That Evening he left his Brother's Houſe, he went to Mr. Shaw's Houſe at Little Forther, and when walking by the Water-ſide there with George Shaw, Elizabeth Sturrock, a Servant of his Brother Thomas Ogilvie's, brought him a Letter from Mrs. Ogilvie his Brother's Lady, the Contents of which were deſiring him to return to his Brother's Houſe; and that he ſent a verbal Meſſage, he was not to return at that Time, as he then intended going the Length of Baron Reid's on a Viſit. Declares, That the next Day, when at Little Forther, he received another Letter from his Brother by James Millam, the Contents of which were to the ſame Purpoſe as Mrs. Ogilvie's, which James Millam knew. That ſome Days after, when at Glenkilrie, he received another Letter from ſaid Mrs. Ogilvie; but who was the Bearer of it he does not remember, nor does he remember if he wrote any Anſwer to that Letter. Declares, That he was in Alyth the Tueſday before his Brother's Death, when he received a third Letter from Mrs. Ogilvie by the aforeſaid Elizabeth Sturrock, but to which he returned no Anſwer in Writing. That the ſaid Evening of Tueſday, he gave to Andrew Stewart, Merchant in Alyth, his Brother-in-Law, a ſmall open Note, by way of Wrapper or Direction round a ſmall Phial Glaſs in which were ſome Drops of Laudanum, and in the Wrapper two Doſes of Salts folded cloſe by the Glaſs; and that the Write in the Note or Wrapper properly contained Directions for Mrs. Ogilvie how to uſe the Laudanum, and, ſo far as he remembers, was to take fourteen or fifteen Drops at a Time. That all this he told to Andrew Stewart, and that it was for Mrs. Ogilvie's own proper Uſe, and to deliver it to Nobody elſe; but did not deſire him to do it privately, or to let Nobody ſee him deliver it, only deſired him to be ſure to deliver it to herſelf. Neither did he deliver a ſealed Letter to Andrew Stewart at the Time for Mrs. Ogilvie. That the ſaid Laudanum and Salts he brought from the Eaſt-Indies with him, as a Remainder of what he uſed when his Health was bad there, and on his Paſſage home, having done the ſame by his Surgeon's Directions both at Land and Sea. And this he declares to be Truth.

GEO. CAMPBELL. JOHN URE, Witneſs.

SECOND DECLARATION by PATRICK OGILVIE.

Forfar, 15th June, 1765. By George Campbell, Eſq. Sheriff-Subſtitute.

Compeared the ſaid Lieutenant PATRICK OGILVIE, who, being re-examined, declares, That it conſiſts with his Knowledge, that of the Laudanum he ſent as mentioned in his laſt Declaration, there was not above thirty Drops or Gutts of it uſed, ſo far as he can recollect, from the Quantity he ſent, and what remained in the Phial Glaſs the Day after his Brother's Death. That the Declarant came to Eaſtmiln, when Mrs. Ogilvie returned him the Glaſs, and the Remainder of Laudanum therein, and which he inſtantly produces, and is immediately ſealed up with the Declarant's own Seal, and lodged in the Sheriff-Clerk's Office. And that when the Declarant delivered the Glaſs to Andrew Stewart, he ſhook the ſame to him, and ſhewed him betwixt him and the Light the Quantity of Laudanum therein, who, upon looking at the ſame juſt now, muſt be ſenſible that there is no more out thereof than about the Quantity of thirty Gutts as above; and that Mrs. Ogilvie told him ſhe had uſed about that Quantity, and alſo made uſe of the Salts. Declares, That within theſe two Weeks he was at the Town of Brechin, and in Company with James Carnegie, Surgeon of that Place, but that he received from him no Laudanum or any other Medicine whatever. That when he was at Alyth, in the Courſe of Converſation verſation with Mrs. Ogilvie, he happened to ſay that he had ſome Salts and Laudanum, that he uſed when at the Eaſt-Indies, in his Cheſt at Dundee, which would be very ſoon at Alyth; when Mrs. Ogilvie deſired to have ſome of both Salts and Laudanum, as it might give her Reſt when uneaſy, and could not procure Sleep. And this he declares to be Truth.

Mr. JAMES BALFOUR of Pilrig, Sheriff-Subſtitute of the Shire of Edinburgh, aged fifty and upwards, married, who being ſolemnly ſworn, purged of Malice and partial Counſel, examined, and interrogate; and two Declarations or Examinations being now exhibited to the Deponent, depones, That, at the Deſire of the Lord Advocate, the Deponent, upon the twenty-ſecond of June laſt, went to the Laigh Council-houſe of Edinburgh, where Patrick Ogilvie Pannel being brought before him for Examination, depones, That the Declaration now exhibited to him, ſigned by the Deponent and the ſaid Patrick Ogilvie Pannel, is what was emitted by the Pannel before the Deponent at that Time: That, on the Monday thereafter, the Deponent, at my Lord Advocate's Deſire, went to the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, in order to examine Katharine Ogilvie the other Pannel. The Paper now exhibited to him, and ſigned by him before William Dunbar and John Stewart, both Writers in Edinburgh, Witneſſes ſubſcribing thereto, contains a faithful Narrative of what paſſed on that Occaſion. Cauſa ſcientiæ patet. And this is Truth, as he ſhall anſwer to God.

WILLIAM DUNBAR, Writer in Edinburgh, aged twenty-four, unmarried, who being ſolemnly ſworn, purged of Malice, partial Counſel, examined, and interrogate, depones, That the Examination of Patrick Ogilvie Pannel, mentioned in the Depoſition of the preceding Witneſs, was emitted in the Deponent's Preſence, and he ſaw the ſaid Pannel and the Sheriff-Subſtitute ſubſcribe the ſame. Another Paper being exhibited to him, containing what paſſed on the Examination of Mrs. Ogilvie Pannel, by Mr. James Balfour, Sheriff-Subſtitute of the Shire of Edinburgh, in the Tolbooth thereof, depones, That the ſaid Paper contains a faithful Account of what paſſed on that Occaſion; and that the Deponent is a ſigning Witneſs to the ſaid James Balfour's Subſcription thereto annexed. Cauſa ſcientiæ patet. And this is Truth, as he ſhall anſwer to God.

WILL. DUNBAR. GILB. ELLIOT.

The two Papers before deponed to were read to the Court and Jury, and the Tenor thereof follows:

Edinburgh, the twenty-ſecond Day of June, One thouſand ſeven hundred and ſixty-five Years.

In preſence of Mr. James Balfour of Pilrig, Sheriff-Subſtitute of the Shire of Edinburgh, Compeared PATRICK OGILVIE, late of Colonel Morris's Regiment; and being interrogate, Whether he ſent any Salts to Mrs. Ogilvie of Eaſtmiln, his Siſter, or any Medicine, or any Thing wrapt up in a Paper? Refuſes to anſwer this Queſtion.

Being interrogated, Whether he was in uſe to take Laudanum and purging Salts in one and the ſame Day for his Health? Anſwers, That he was not.

Being interrogated, Whether he had in his Poſſeſſion a Bottle of Laudanum during his Voyage Home from the Eaſt-Indies? He refuſes to anſwer this Queſtion.

Being interrogated, How many Gutts or Drops of Laudanum he was in uſe to take at a Doſe? He refuſes to anſwer this Queſtion.

Being interrogated, Whether Laudanum was in uſe to bind or looſe him while at Sea? He refuſes to anſwer this Queſtion.

Being interrogated, What was the Bulk of each Doſe of Salts he took? Refuſes to anſwer this Queſtion.

Being interrogate, Whether he ſent a Bottle to the ſaid Mrs. Ogilvie by the Hands of Andrew Stewart? and whether he told Andrew Stewart that there were Salts along with the Bottle? Refuſes to anſwer this Queſtion.

Being interrogated, What was the Nature of the Surmiſes and Reports, which occaſioned a Dryneſs betwixt him and his Brother Eaſtmiln? He refuſes to anſwer this Queſtion.

Being interrogated, What were the Contents of any Letters ſent to him by the ſaid Mrs. Ogilvie, after that the Declarant had left his Brother's Houſe this Summer? and what were the Contents of the Anſwers he made to them? Refuſes to anſwer this Queſtion.

Being interrogated, When he firſt heard of his Brother's Illneſs, and from whom? Refuſes to anſwer this Queſtion.

Being interrogated, Whether he had any Converſation with his Mother, or any of the Family, or in the Family, as to the Nature of his Brother's Diſtemper, or Cauſe of his Death? Refuſes to anſwer this Queſtion.

Being interrogated, Whether he ſlept in the Houſe of Eaſtmiln after his Brother's Death? for how many Nights, in what Room, and who ſlept in the Room with him? He refuſes to anſwer any of theſe Queſtions.

Being interrogated, In what Room the ſaid Mrs. Ogilvie ſlept during the Nights between the Death and Burial of her Huſband? He refuſes to anſwer this Queſtion.

Being interrogated, Whether he did ever ſend for any Medicines from one Dougal, a Surgeon in Kerriemuir? or did ever hear any body ſend for any Medicines from him? He refuſes to anſwer this Queſtion.

Being interrogated, Whether he has had any Converſation with any of his Brother's Servants concerning the Circumſtances which happened on the Day of his Brother's Death? He declines anſwering this Queſtion.

Being interrogate, Whether, while he was in the Priſon of Forfar, he ſent any Meſſages by Word or Writing to the ſaid Mrs. Ogilvie? He refuſes to anſwer this Queſtion.

Being interrogated, Whether he is acquainted with one Mr. Carnegie, a Surgeon in Brechin? or whether he ever bought any Medicines or Poiſon from the ſaid Mr. Carnegie? He refuſes to anſwer this Queſtion.

Being interrogate, Whether he recollects what Time his deceaſed Brother was married? Anſwers, He does not recollect juſt now.

Being interrogated, Whether he the Declarant was preſent at the Marriage? Anſwers, That he was.

Being interrogated, Whether he was acquainted with the ſaid Mrs. Ogilvie before her Marriage with his Brother? Anſwers, That he was not.

Being interrogated, Whether he abſolutely refuſes to anſwer the above Queſtions, which it is ſaid above he refuſes, or declines to anſwer? or whether he declines at preſent to anſwer them? He now anſwers, That he abſolutely refuſes to anſwer them To-night; but he does not know, whether he may hereafter anſwer ſome of them or not.

And being interrogated, Whether he inclines to give any Reaſon for this Refuſal? Anſwers, That he does not think it neceſſary to give any Reaſons.

This Declaration and Anſwers were emitted in Preſence of William Dunbar and William Campbell, Writers in Edinburgh.

PAT. OGILVIE. JA. BALFOUR.

At Edinburgh, the twenty-fourth Day of June, One thouſand ſeven hundred and ſixty-five Years.

In Preſence of Mr. James Balfour of Pilrig, Advocate, Sheriff-Subſtitute of this Sheriffdom of Edinburgh, Compeared Mrs. KATHARINE NAIRN, Widow of the deceaſed Thomas Ogilvie of Eaſtmiln; and a Copy of two ſeveral Declarations emitted by her, upon the fourteenth of June inſtant, before George Campbell, Eſq; Sheriff-Subſtitute of Forfar, and ſubſcribed of this Date by the ſaid Mr. James Balfour, being read over to her, ſhe was aſked, If there was any Thing in the ſaid Declarations which ſhe now deſired to correct or alter? She refuſed to anſwer this or any other Queſtion put to her, having been ſo adviſed by her Friends and Counſel: And the following Queſtions were ſeparately put to her.

In what Drawer and in what Room in the Houſe did ſhe put the Medicines and Letter which were delivered to her by Andrew Stewart, the Day before her Huſband's Death?

Did ſhe read the Letter? What were the Contents? Has ſhe the Letter? or how has ſhe diſpoſed of it?

By whoſe Advice did ſhe order the above Medicines to be ſent to her?

What was her Ailment? Did ſhe mention ſuch Ailment to any in the Family? Did ſhe mention her Ailment to Lieutenant Ogilvie? If ſhe did, how came ſhe to take his Advice about her Health?

Did ſhe ſleep with her Huſband the Night before his Death? When did ſhe firſt ſee and ſpeak to him next Morning, the ſixth of June?

Was ſhe in uſe to give him Tea in his Bed? Did he deſire Tea that Morning? Did any body ſee her make the Tea and fill the Bowl for her Huſband? Did ſhe carry up the Tea from the Place where it was made ſtraight to his Room? Did he refuſe or ſhew any Unwillingneſs to take it? Did ſhe give any of the Tea which her Huſband had drank to any other Perſon?

Did any body propoſe ſending for a Surgeon when her Huſband was taken ill? Did ſhe oppoſe the Surgeon being ſent for? And what was the Reaſon for ſo doing?

Where did ſhe ſleep from the Time of her Huſband's Death, till the Time of her Commitment to the Priſon of Forfar?

Where did Lieutenant Ogilvie ſleep during that Time?

How many Letters did ſhe write to Lieutenant Ogilvie from the Time he was diſmiſſed from her Huſband's Family? If ſhe ſent any Letters, mention how many, by whom ſent, and to what Places ſent, and what were the Contents, and what Anſwers ſhe received. Does ſhe know what is become of theſe Letters and Anſwers?

To all and each of which Queſtions, put ſeparately to her, ſhe refuſed to give any Anſwer. And further refuſes to adhibite her Subſcription hereto.

In Witneſs whereof, the ſaid Mr. James Balfour, William Dunbar, Writer in Edinburgh, and John Stewart, Writer there and hereof, have adhibited their Subſcriptions, Time and Place foreſaid.

JOHN STEWART, Witneſs.

JAMES M'KENZIE, Seſſion-Clerk of Glenylla, aged forty Years, married, who being ſolemnly ſworn, purged of Malice and partial Counſel, examined, and interrogate, depones, That ſome Time after the late Eaſtmiln's Death, the Deponent was in the Houſe of Eaſtmiln, where Alexander Ogilvie, Brother of the late Eaſtmiln, likewiſe was: That he ſaw the ſaid Alexander Ogilvie have ſeveral Papers in his Hand, one of which, he ſaid, he was to ſend to Forfar, as it might be Evidence againſt Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel; and that the Deponent looked at that Paper, and ſaw that it was in the Form of a Letter without a Subſcription; but the Deponent did not read it, nor hear it read: And a Letter libelled upon, beginning Dr Captain, and indorſed on the Back by the Names of George Spalding and George Campbell, being now exhibited to the Deponent, he depones, That he cannot now ſay poſitively whether or not that is the Letter ſhewn to him by Alexander Ogilvie as aforeſaid; but thinks it is like it. Cauſa ſcientiæ patet. And this is Truth, as he ſhall anſwer to God. (Signed) JA. M'KENZIE. AND. PRINGLE.

JAMES MILLAM, Tackſman of the Eaſtmiln of Glenylla, aged thirty-ſix Years, married, and being ſolemnly ſworn, purged of Malice and partial Counſel, examined, and interrogate, depones, That, during the late Eaſtmiln's Illneſs, upon that Day on which he died, the Deponent was ſometimes in the Room with him, particularly about Two o'Clock in the Afternoon, when the Deponent aſked the late Eaſtmiln, How he was? To which Eaſtmiln anſwered, That he was very ill: And the Deponent further aſked him, What he thought was the Matter with him? To which Eaſtmiln anſwered, I am gone, James, with no leſs than rank Poiſon! Cauſa ſcientiæ patet. And this is the Truth, as he ſhall anſwer to God. (Signed) JAMES MILLAM. AND. PRINGLE.

GEORGE SPALDING of Glenkilrie, aged thirty and upwards, who being ſolemnly ſworn, purged of Malice and partial Counſel, examined, and interrogate, interrogate, depones, That he is married to a Sister of Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel, and has had frequent Occasion of seeing Mrs. Ogilvie's Hand-writing; and a Letter, without a Subscription, beginning D^r Captain, and indorsed on the Back by the Subscriptions of George Spalding and George Campbell, being exhibited to the Deponent, he depones, That he thinks that Letter is of the Hand-writing of Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel; but cannot be quite positive, as he has seen her write sometimes better, and sometimes worse, according as her Pen was. Causa scientiæ patet. And this is Truth, as he shall answer to God.

(Signed) GEO. SPALDING. AND. PRINGLE.

ALEXANDER LINDSAY, late Servant to the deceased Thomas Ogilvie of Eastmiln, aged twenty-one, unmarried, who being solemnly sworn, purged of Malice and partial Counsel, examined, and interrogate, depones, That he came to be a Servant at Eastmiln about Six o'Clock of the Morning of that Day on which Eastmiln died: That, about Nine o'Clock that Morning, he saw Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel standing in a Closet up Stairs between the two Bed-rooms: That the Deponent was going up to the Garret to take down a Wheel: That the Door of the Closet was open; but the Deponent did not go into the Closet; and that he did not then observe any Thing that Mrs. Ogilvie was doing, nor that she had any thing in her Hand; and that, when the Deponent went up to the Garret, Mrs. Ogilvie called up to him not to walk over the Closet for fear of shaking down something. Depones, That when he was in the Garret, he saw Anne Sampson standing at the Stair-head, near the Closet where Mrs. Ogilvie was. Causa scientiæ patet. And this is Truth, as he shall answer to God.

(Signed) ALEX. LINDSAY. AND. PRINGLE.

N. B. The List of Witnesses summoned for the Prosecutor, the List of Assize given out in the Indictment, and the List of Witnesses summoned for the Pannels, are not engrossed in the Record.

GEORGE SPALDING of Glenkilrie, aged thirty and upwards, married, who being solemnly sworn, purged of Malice and partial Council, examined, and interrogate, depones, That in February last, he wrote a Letter to the Lady Nairn, pressing her Ladyship that Infeftment should be taken in Favour of Mrs. Ogilvie of Eastmiln, upon her Contract of Marriage, because her Husband Eastmiln appeared to be in a bad State of Health. Depones, That, for some Years past, Eastmiln appeared to him to be in an indifferent State of Health, complaining often of a Heart-Colick, or a Pain in his Stomach, attended with a short Cough, which was not continual, but which seldom left him. Depones, That he wore a plaiden Jacket, and a Belt round his Middle, much broader than ever he saw another wear, with Lappets of Leather hanging down his Haunches: That, upon his Marriage, he took off these Happings. Depones, That before he got the said broad Belt, he wore a striped woollen Night-Cape upon his Breast, the lower End of which reached near his Breeches; but never observed him wear it after he got the Belt. Depones, That about six Years ago, the Deponent was told, that Mr. Ogilvie of Eastmiln had an ulcerous Fever; after which the Deponent saw him frequently, but never saw him look so well as formerly. Depones, That the old Lady Eastmiln told the Deponent, that her Son Eastmiln was about forty Years of Age when he died. Depones, That Eastmiln was married the thirtieth Day of January last. Depones, That when Eastmiln was complaining of the said Pain of his Stomach, in the Deponent's House, he the Deponent has frequently given him a Dram to comfort him; and particularly a little before Eastmiln's Marriage, Eastmiln being ill of the said Disease in the Deponent's House, he got hot Ale and Whiskey, with a Scrape of Nutmeg in it, and was put to Bed without any Supper. Depones, That he does not certainly know how old Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel is, but believes her to be about twenty-one. Causa scientiæ patet. And this is Truth, as he shall answer to God.

(Signed) GEORGE SPALDING. HENRY HOME.

JAMES MILLAM, Tacksman of the Eastmiln of Glenylla, formerly sworn this Day on the Part of the Prosecutor, and now examined on his said Oath on the Part of the Pannels, depones, That the very next Day after Lieutenant Ogilvie had left the House of Eastmiln, Eastmiln employed the Deponent to carry a Letter to his Brother, and he read this Letter to the Deponent, the Contents of which the Deponent has forgot, further than that it contained a Request to the Lieutenant to return to Eastmiln: That upon this Occasion the Deponent was informed by Eastmiln of indecent Familiarities which his Mother told him had passed betwixt the Lieutenant and his Wife Mrs. Ogilvie; but that for his Part he did not believe them: That the Deponent delivered the Letter according to his Instructions, and received an Answer from the Lieutenant, which was also read to him by the Lieutenant, importing the Lieutenant's declining to return to the House of Eastmiln, because of the Reports that were raised against him. Depones, That Reports were in the Country of indecent Familiarities betwixt the two Pannels: That he knows not what gave Rise to theſe Reports; but that for his Part he never ſaw any Indecencies betwixt them. Depones, That his Dwelling-houſe is within a Penny-ſtone Caſt of the Houſe of Eaſtmiln, and that he has been frequently in that Houſe. Depones, That he was very well with Eaſtmiln; and that if any thing concerned Eaſtmiln, he would have imparted it to the Deponent as ſoon as to any other. Depones, That Eaſtmiln, four Days before his Death, complained to the Deponent of a Gravel, and a Colick; and that he could not live, if he got not the better of it: That on the Evening of the Tueſday before his Death, he went into the Deponent's Houſe, ſaying he was cold, and ordered ſome Shilling Seeds to be ſet on Fire for warming him: That he complained of his being ill, refuſing to eat, and ſaying he would have no other Supper but the Fire; and that he was fading as faſt as Dew goes off the Graſs. Depones, That the ſame Night was not cold. Depones, That Eaſtmiln, the Night before he died, was again in the Deponent's Houſe, and ſaid he was no better. Depones, That the Day after Eaſtmiln died, he ſaw the Lieutenant ſitting on a Bed-ſide of the Houſe of Eaſtmiln, with his Mother on the one Hand, and Dr. Meik on the other; and that he could not be pacified: That Mrs. Ogilvie was in another Room, and did not ſee her: That the Lieutenant, in the Situation above-deſcribed, was guſhing out of Tears. Depones, That he does not know whether there was any Quarrel betwixt Mrs. Ogilvie and Anne Clark before Eaſtmiln's Death; but that Eaſtmiln complained to him, that he could not get peaceable Poſſeſſion of his own Houſe for Anne Clark: That he wiſhed her away; and that he got from the Deponent a Ten-ſhilling Note for the Expence of her Journey. Depones, That upon the Monday after Eaſtmiln's Death, Anne Clark left the Houſe of Eaſtmiln; and that the Deponent ſaw her get Money from Mrs. Ogilvie the Pannel immediately before her Departure. Depones, That when the Mournings came Home upon Occaſion of Eaſtmiln's Death, Anne Clark complained to the Deponent for Want of a mourning Apron, adding, that ſhe ſhould make it as dear to them as if it was a Gown, meaning the Pannels, as he underſtood; and his Reaſon for underſtanding ſo, was, that it was the Lieutenant who ſent for the Mournings. Depones, That the Day Eaſtmiln died, he was ſent for to ſee him; and that he came about Twelve o'Clock, at which Time there was no Perſon with him but Anne Clark: That upon that Occaſion he ſtaid but a very ſhort Time: That he returned about an Hour thereafter, and ſeveral other Times, till Glenkilrie came: That he ſaw ſeveral Perſons in the Room beſides Glenkilrie, who came to ſee Eaſtmiln; but that he does not remember their Names. And being interrogate for the Proſecutor, depones, with reſpect to the Letter which he got from Eaſtmiln to deliver to his Brother the Lieutenant, That he now recollects a Paſſage in it, importing, that Eaſtmiln was to go to Edinburgh, to ſtay there a Fortnight, perhaps a Month, or ſix Weeks. Depones, That the ſaid Letter, which the Deponent carried from Eaſtmiln to his Brother the Lieutenant, was incloſed by the Lieutenant in the ſaid Letter which the Lieutenant wrote in Return, and which Letter the Deponent put in his Pocket without looking at the Direction: That he offered the ſaid Letter to Eaſtmiln, which Eaſtmiln, without opening it, bade the Deponent give to his Wife—becauſe it was directed to her; and which he did accordingly. And being further interrogate for the Proſecutor, How it came, that when the Lieutenant's Letter was read over to him, that he did not know it was addreſſed to a Woman? depones, That he took no Notice of this, but only of the Lieutenant's refuſing to return to the Houſe, becauſe of the Reports raiſed againſt him. Depones, That before the Day on which Eaſtmiln died, the Deponent never heard that he was ever troubled with any violent Vomitings or Purgings. Being interrogate, Whether, to the Deponent's Knowledge, Eaſtmiln did not continue in the ſame State of Health after his Marriage that he was for a Year before? depones, That he never heard him complain before his Marriage; but has heard him often complain after it, though he was as intimate with Eaſtmiln before his Marriage as after it. Cauſa ſcientiæ patet. And this is Truth, as he ſhall anſwer to God. And being further interrogate, depones, That the Monday after the Pannels were put in Forfar Gaol, Alexander Ogilvie, youngeſt Brother to Eaſtmiln, rouped the Stocking upon the Farm of Eaſtmiln that belonged to his deceaſed Brother: That he gave it out, that he did this by Authority of a Letter from his Brother the Lieutenant: That he received the ready Money got at the Roup; and that the Bills were taken payable to him at Martinmas next. And this is alſo Truth, as he ſhall anſwer to God.

HENRY HOME.

JEAN WALLACE, Servant to George Spalding of Glenkilrie, unmarried, aged thirty and upwards, being ſolemnly ſworn, purged of Malice and partial Counſel, examined, and interrogate, depones, That ſhe was Servant in the deceaſed Eaſtmiln's Family for three Years, and left it, as ſhe thinks, about ſix Years ago: That the laſt Year ſhe was in his Service, as ſhe thinks, Eaſtmiln had an Ulcer, and was attended by Dr. Ogilvie: That ſince that Time the Deponent had little Occaſion to ſee Eaſtmiln, and did not hear him make any Complaints of his Health; but that the Deponent from his Looks did not think he was in good Health. Depones, That while he was bad of the Ulcer, he was confined, as ſhe thinks, for ſix Weeks, and ſhe herſelf ſat up frequently with him. Cauſa ſcientiæ patet. And all this is Truth, as ſhe ſhall anſwer to God. And depones, ſhe cannot write.

ISOBEL DOUGLAS at Wardhead, diſmiſſed of Content of the Pannels.

THOMAS JACK in Kirkton of Glenylla, married, aged forty and upwards, being ſolemnly ſworn, purged of Malice and partial Counſel, examined, and interrogate, depones, That about Ten o'Clock of the Day upon which Eaſtmiln died, the deceaſed Eaſtmiln told him, that he had been out the Day before viſiting ſome of his Tenants Biggings; and that he was very bad that Day, and had been obliged to reſt himſelf three Times; but told the Deponent, that he was better that Morning; and that he told the Deponent, that he had been a Mile, or a Mile and a Half, from Home the Day before. Cauſa ſcientiæ patet. And all is Truth, as he ſhall anſwer to God.

(Signed) THOMAS JACK.
ALEX. BOSWELL.

ELIZABETH FERGUSSON, Spouſe to John Breſack, Portioner of Invercarity, aged thirty-five, or thereby, being ſolemnly ſworn, purged of Malice, examined, and interrogate, depones, That the Day before Thomas Ogilvie of Eaſtmiln died, the Deponent ſaw him in her own Houſe, which is, as ſhe thinks, about three Miles from Eaſtmiln: That he was on Foot: That he told her he was not very well; and that he had been taken ill, as he ſaid, when he was going Home ſome Time before that, and had not got the better of it, or was not much better yet. Cauſa ſcientiæ patet. And all is Truth, as ſhe ſhall anſwer to God. And depones ſhe cannot write.

(Signed) ALEX. BOSWELL.

JOHN PATERSON, Son of James Paterſon in Clocknocater of Glenylla, married, aged twenty-two Years and upwards, being ſolemnly ſworn and interrogate, depones, That he ſaw Eaſtmiln the Day before he died about a Mile from his own Houſe: That he was going Weſt to ſee ſome of his Tenants Biggings: That Eaſtmiln complained to the Deponent that he was ſick: That he ſaid his Bowels were all ſore; and that he had not been ſo ill for ſix Years: That he lay down and took a Sleep upon the Ground: That the Deponent's Siſter, Margaret Paterſon, was with the Deponent at this Time, and none other. Cauſa ſcientiæ patet. And all is Truth, as he ſhall anſwer to God.

(Signed) JOHN PATERSON.
ALEX. BOSWELL.

MARGARET PATERSON, Daughter of James Paterſon in Clocknocater of Glenylla, unmarried, aged thirty or upwards, being ſolemnly ſworn, purged, and interrogate, ut antea, depones and concurs with her Brother the preceding Witneſs in all Things; with this Addition, That Eaſtmiln likewiſe complained of ſore Bones. Cauſa ſcientiæ patet. And being further interrogate, depones, That Eaſtmiln after this went further Weſt, and did not return Home that ſhe ſaw. And depones, All this is Truth, as ſhe ſhall anſwer to God.

(Signed) ALEX. BOSWELL.

MARGARET RAIT, Spouſe to Fergus Ferguſſon in Kirkton of Glenylla, aged about threeſcore Years, being ſolemnly ſworn, purged, and interrogate, depones, That ſhe ſaw the deceaſed Eaſtmiln in her own Houſe, which is about a Quarter of a Mile diſtant from his, the Day before he died: That Eaſtmiln told her that he was not well, and he behoved to get Dr. Ogilvie to give him ſomething to do him good: That Eaſtmiln was then walking, and had come from the Hill. Cauſa ſcientiæ patet. And all is Truth, as ſhe ſhall anſwer to God. And depones ſhe cannot write.

(Signed) ALEX. BOSWELL.

Doctor JAMES SCOTT, Phyſician in Edinburgh, married, aged about forty, being ſolemnly ſworn, purged of Malice and partial Counſel, examined, and interrogate, depones, That he has made ſundry Experiments upon Arſenick: That he knows it will not diſſolve in warm Water; and that the common Arſenick that is to be met with in the Shops, although pretty fine pounded, falls to the Bottom of a Veſſel with Water almoſt inſtantaneouſly: That it never puts on a greaſy Appearance. But being further interrogate upon the Part of the Proſecutor, depones, That if Arſenick be put into a Bowl of Tea with Milk and Sugar, that, if it was ſtirred round, the Arſenick would be ſuſpended ſo long, that it would kill a Perſon that had drunk it; and if there was Honey in the Bowl, the Arſenick would be ſtill more ſuſpended thereby. Cauſa ſcientiæ patet. And all this is Truth, as he ſhall anſwer to God.

GEORGE CAMPBELL, of Carſegownie, Sheriff-Subſtitute of Forfarſhire, a Witneſs formerly ſolemnly ſworn, and examined on the Part of the Proſecutor, depones, That ſome Time after the late Eaſtmiln's Death, the Deponent went to the Houſe of Eaſtmiln to make a Search for any Thing that might appear there to clear up the Cauſe of Eaſtmiln's Death: That the Deponent not having the Keys of the Drawers in the Houſe, broke up ſeveral of them, and particularly the Drawers of what was ſaid to be the late Eaſtmiln's Cabinet: That in one of theſe Drawers he found ſome browniſh white Powder, wrapped up in two or three ſmall Parcels: That the Deponent not knowing what that Powder was, carried it away with him, and afterwards ſhewed it to James Carnegie, Surgeon in Brechin, and aſked him, What Kind of Powder he took it to be? and particularly, Whether or not he thought it was Arſenick? That James Carnegie, after looking attentively upon the Powder, declared, That he did not know Arſenick but by the Effects of it; and could not ſay, upon Sight, whether that Powder was, or was not Arſenick. Depones, That Alexander Ogilvie, Brother to the late Eaſtmiln, was not preſent with the Deponent either at the foreſaid Search at the Houſe of Eaſtmiln, or when he ſhewed the Powder to James Carnegie, as aforeſaid. Depones and produces ſome of the Powder foreſaid which he found at Eaſtmiln; which Powder, upon the Opinion of Dr. Cullen, Phyſician in Edinburgh, and Mr. James Ruſſel, Surgeon there, who tried it before the Court and the Jury, he believes to be Saltpetre. Cauſa ſcientiæ patet. And this is the Truth, as he ſhall anſwer to God.

The Perſons who paſſed upon the Aſſize of the ſaid Pannels returned the following Verdict:

" At Edinburgh, the fourteenth Day of Auguſt, One thouſand ſeven " hundred and ſixty-five Years,

" The above Aſſize having incloſed, did make Choice of the ſaid Sir " George Suttie of Balgonie, Baronet, to be their Chancellor, and the ſaid " Alexander Sheriff of Craigleith to be their Clerk; and having conſidered " the Criminal Indictment raiſed and purſued at the Inſtance of THOMAS " MILLER of Barſkimming, Eſq. his Majeſty's Advocate, for his Ma- " jeſty's Intereſt, againſt KATHARINE NAIRN, Widow to the deceaſed " Thomas Ogilvie of Eaſtmiln in the County of Forfar, and PATRICK " OGILVIE, Lieutenant of the Eighty-ninth Regiment of Foot, Brother- " german to the ſaid deceaſed Thomas Ogilvie, Pannels, with the Lords Juſtice- " Clerk and Commiſſioners of Juſticiary their Interlocutor pronounced " upon the Relevancy thereof, together with the Depoſitions of the Witneſſes " adduced by the Proſecutor for proving the ſame, and the Depoſitions " of the Witneſſes adduced for the Pannels in Exculpation, they, by a great " Plurality of Voices, find the Pannels guilty of INCEST, as libelled, " during the Life of the now deceaſed Thomas Ogilvie of Eaſtmiln: And " they further find, by a great Plurality of Voices, the ſaid Pannel KA- " THARINE NAIRN guilty of MURDER, by poiſoning the ſaid Thomas " Ogilvie her Huſband; and the ſaid Lieutenant PATRICK OGILVIE " Pannel guilty Art and Part thereof. In Witneſs whereof the ſaid Chan- " cellor and Clerk have ſubſcribed theſe Preſents upon this and the pre- " ceding Page, Place and Date foreſaid, in their Name and by their " Appointment.

Immediately upon the reading of the above Verdict, his Majeſty's Advocate judicially appeared in Court, and craved that the Lords might proceed to pronounce a Sentence Condemnator upon the ſaid Verdict.

Mr. ALEXANDER LOCKHART, as Procurator for both Pannels, repreſented, That, during the ſhort Space of Time that he and the other Counſel for the Pannels have had to recollect the Proceedings in the Courſe of this Trial, and upon hearing the Verdict itſelf, as now read in Court, ſundry Particulars have occurred to the Counſel for the Pannels, which they are humbly to inſiſt upon as jointly and ſeverally relevant why no Judgment can paſs againſt them upon this Verdict; and as, in Support of ſome of theſe, there will be Occaſion to refer to the Records of the Proceedings themſelves, which till now have been in the Hands of the Jury; and as it is their earneſt Deſire to ſtate theſe in the moſt proper and becoming Manner, he therefore moved the Court, in Behalf of both Pannels, That they be allowed a reaſonable Time to prepare, ſtate, and ſupport the Particulars, of the Heads of which they ſhall furniſh a Note to his Majeſty's Advocate this very Night.

ADVOCATUS anſwered, That the Record of the Trial has been open, and ſubject to the Conſideration of the Counſel for the Pannels, during the whole Courſe of the Trial: That, if any Objection is to be taken againſt the Courſe of Procedure during the Trial, it is neceſſary that ſuch Objection ſhould be taken and tried before the Jury is diſcharged: But as the Counſel for the Pannels have moved no Objection or Plea in Arreſt of Judgment, and have only moved for a Delay, in order that they may have further Time to find out and move ſuch Plea, he inſiſted, That this is no Plea; and therefore craved Judgment upon the Verdict, unleſs the Counſel for the Priſoners ſhall ſtate a ſpecial and legal Plea, why ſuch Judgment ſhould not paſs.

" The Lord Juſtice-Clerk and Commiſſioners of Juſticiary, having " conſidered the foregoing Debate, declare, That they will proceed to " give Judgment upon the Verdict, unleſs the Procurators for the Pan- " nels will forthwith ſtate ſpecial Reaſons in Arreſt of Judgment.

" The Lord Juſtice-Clerk and Commiſſioners of Juſticiary, having " heard the Procurators for both Parties, upon the Reaſons for Arreſt " of Judgment, they appoint a Minute of Debate to be made up and " ingroſſed in the Record of Court; and ſuperſede adviſing the ſaid " Verdict and Debate till To-morrow at Eleven o'Clock before Noon; " and continue the Diet till that Time; and ordain the Pannels to be " carried back to Priſon."

AND PATRICK OGILVIE,
Preſent Priſoners in the Tolbooth of Edinburgh;
PANNELS:

Indicted and accuſed as in the preceding Sederunts.

LOCKHART, RAE, CROSBIE, and DUNDAS, for the Pannels, by this Minute, repreſented, That no Judgment ought to paſs on this Verdict, in reſpect that, ſo far as any Thing is found againſt the Pannels, the ſame is void and null; the Proceedings in the Courſe of this Trial having been moſt informal and irregular. Particularly, between the Hours of Three and Four of the Afternoon of Monday the 12th Inſtant, the Jury aroſe from their Seats, and diſperſed into different Corners of the Houſe; ſome of them, on that Occaſion, even going out of the Room where the Court ſat; and continued ſo diſperſed, eating and drinking, and converſing in private with different Perſons, and particularly, with the Counſel for the Proſecutor, for the Space of half an Hour and better, a Witneſs being then under Examination, and a Part of her Depoſition reduced into Writing before they had ſo diſperſed; till at laſt the Clerk, at the Deſire of one of the Judges, called over the Liſt of Aſſize, when they again aſſembled and took their Seats, one or more Perſons having converſed in private with the Witneſs then under Examination, during the Time the Jury had been diſperſed; the ſaid Witneſs being Anne Clark, againſt whom Objections had been proponed by the Pannels, but overruled, and a Proteſt for Remeid of Law taken thereon. This, it is apprehended, was an actual Adjournment of the Trial; at leaſt, it had all the bad Effects of an Adjournment, an Opportunity being given to converſe with the Jurymen in private, to ſollicit them, and to offer Evidence, which the Pannels and their Counſel had no Opportunity to ſee or hear; an Event which the Law of this Country has been particularly careful to avoid; and has conſidered the preventing ſuch Things, and giving abſolute Security againſt them, to be a fundamental Point in a Trial by Jury, as appears by the Act 1587. chap. 91. whereby, " Our " Soveraine Lord, conſidering the Wranges alledged ſuſtained by diverſe " Noblemen and others, Lieges of this Realme, being accuſed of Treaſon, " be ſolleſiting, boaſting, and menacing of the Aſſize, after they were " incloſed, the Accuſers and others Perſones, their Favourers, having " Liberty to paſs to the ſaid Aſſize, and to produce to them ſick Writs " and Witneſſes, and uther Probation, as they pleaſed, to verify the " Crime outwith the Preſence of the Partys accuſed; quhairby the juſt " Defence of their Lives, Lands, and Honours, was taken away; there- " fore our ſaid Sovereign Lord, with Advice and Conſent of the Eſtates " of this preſent Parliament, has ſtatuted, declared, and ordained, That " in all Times coming, the haill Accuſation, Reaſoning, Writes, Wit- " neſſes, and uther Probation, and Inſtruction whatſomever of the Crime, " ſall be alledged, reaſoned, and deduced to the Aſſize in Preſence of " the Party accuſed, in Face of Judgment, and no otherways."

From which Statute it is plain, the Legiſlature meant effectually to guard againſt every Opportunity of making any Impreſſion upon the Minds of Jurymen, excepting by what was ſaid and done in open Court, and in Preſence of the Pannels; and all the ſalutary Effects of this Statute muſt be eluded, if Opportunity is given for the Counſel for the Proſecutors, or others, to ſollicite, practiſe upon, or argue with the Jurymen, during the Courſe of the Trial, in private, by permitting them to leave their Seats, diſperſe through the Houſe, and converſe privately with whatever Perſon they think proper: That, in like Manner, about Four of the Clock in the Morning of Tueſday the 13th of Auguſt, at leaſt, between the Hours of Three and Five of the Morning of that Day, the Jury diſperſed again in the ſame Manner; and, in their Abſence, Part of the Depoſition of Elizabeth Sturrock, one of the Witneſſes, was taken down: That, about that Time, the Court likewiſe broke up, no Quorum of the Judges continuing on the Bench, the Lord Kaims only remaining there, the reſt retiring and converſing in private with ſundry of the Jury and others; and, upon that Occaſion likewiſe, the Jury eat, drank, and converſed in private with different Perſons, and in particular, with the Counſel for the Proſecutor; whereby the Trial was again interrupted: That no Roll was called; nor was it any ways aſcertained that they re-aſſembled, the Lord Kaims only calling out, Gentlemen of the Jury, Are you all there? and the Depute Clerk of Juſticiary anſwering, I ſee fifteen; but no Anſwer was returned by the Jurymen themſelves. That, in this Caſe, the Court was moſt unqueſtionably adjourned, as no Quorum of the Judges remained ſitting on the Bench; and, though no Act of Adjournment appears in the Record, yet, it is humbly apprehended, That that, inſtead of mending Matters, renders them worſe; for an Adjournment vim facti, is unqueſtionably as much an Adjournment as one made by an Order of Court, having all the bad Conſequences of it, and many more. That it is an adjudged Point, that, after a Jury is charged with a Pannel, the Court cannot be adjourned till the Jury is incloſed. This was ſolemnly determined in the Caſe of Janet Ronald, who was tried, in May 1763, at the Circuit-Court of Perth, for the Crime of giving Poiſon to her Siſter; in which Caſe, after the Proof was concluded, and while his Majeſty's Advocate was addreſſing the Jury, one of the Jurymen happened ſuddenly to be taken ill, and appeared incapable of doing his Duty at that Time; for which Reaſon the Court was adjourned till next Morning, when that Juryman being recovered, the Jury again re-aſſembled, were incloſed, and returned a Verdict againſt the Priſoner, finding her guilty Art and Part of the Crime libelled. It was moved in Arreſt of Judgment, That the Court having been adjourned before incloſing the Jury, and the Jurymen diſperſed, and an Opportunity given to ſollicite and practiſe on them in private, the Verdict was void and null, and no Sentence could follow in Conſequence thereof. The Matter, on Account of its Importance, was referred to the Court of Juſticiary at Edinburgh, where it was ſolemnly debated in Preſence of the whole Judges; and, after Informations had been given in on this Point, and recorded in the Books of Adjournal, the Court being of Opinion, that this Adjournment vitiated the whole Proceedings, did not pronounce any Sentence on this Verdict, but abſoilzied the Pannel, and diſmiſſed her from the Bar: That the Adjournment of the Court in the preſent Caſe ought to have the ſame Effect to vitiate all the ſubſequent Proceedings, and to procure an Abſolvitor to the Pannels; ſince every bad Conſequence that can be figured or imagined to reſult from an Adjournment by Act of the Court, muſt reſult alſo from an Adjournment, via facti. That about Three o'Clock of the Afternoon of Tueſday the 13th of Auguſt, at leaſt, ſome Time between the Hours of Two and Four of the Afternoon of that Day, the Jury again diſperſed, and converſed in private private with ſundry Perſons in different Parts of the Houſe, and continued diſperſed for the Space of Half an Hour or upwards; after which they again returned to their Seats: That all theſe various Adjournments and Diſperſing of the Jury, it was out of the Power of the Pannels, or their Counſel, to prevent; the Jury being actually diſperſed, on all theſe ſeveral Occaſions, before they were aware, no Motion having been made publickly for Leave of the Court to diſperſe, and the Pannels and their Counſel being intent upon the Buſineſs that was going on, and that Attention firſt interrupted by the Noiſe the Jurymen made when actually diſperſing: That it is in vain, in the preſent Caſe, for his Majeſty's Advocate to plead the Neceſſity of the Jury being refreſhed in ſuch a Caſe; for they were refreſhed on ſeveral other Occaſions beſides thoſe above-mentioned, at which Times the Refreſhments were always given them in their Seats; and it is apprehended that ought always to be the Caſe, as it is a material Point, that the Quality and Quantity of the Refreſhments they take, particularly the Wine, and other ſtrong Liquors, ſhould be regulate by the Court, under whoſe immediate Inſpection every Thing of that Nature ſhould be given them; but by Jurymen diſperſing, and drinking Liquors, in what Quantity and of what Quality they pleaſe, in private, and while removed from the Inſpection of the Court, there is a Hazard of their becoming intoxicated with the Liquors they drink, which may be of the moſt dangerous Conſequences to the Security of thoſe who are tried, and conſequently to the Lives and Liberties of the Subjects in this Country in general. That the bad Effects of all theſe ſeveral Adjournments were ſeverely felt by the Pannels in this Caſe; they ſerved to protract the Trial, and what Impreſſions were communicated to the Jurymen, when diſperſed, or what Quantities of Liquors they ſwallowed, are Circumſtances which cannot be known to the Pannels or their Counſel: But after the laſt Time the Jurymen were diſperſed, and when the Evidence on the Part of the Pannels began to be adduced, ſeveral of the Jury ſhewed a very great Impatience, and inſiſted, that that Evidence which the Pannels thought material for them ſhould be cut ſhort. And ſome of them particularly diſputed the Relevancy and Propriety of the Queſtions put by the Counſel for the Pannels with great Heat, inſomuch that ſome of the Judges, and other Juryinen, were obliged to interpoſe, in order that the exculpatory Proof might go on; and the Counſel for the Pannels were obliged to paſs from many Witneſſes, in order to procure Attention from thoſe Aſſizers. Hence, though thirty-three Hours were ſpent in hearing calmly the Proof adduced for the Proſecutors; yet the Proof for the Pannels, after being heard by thoſe Jurymen with great Impatience, was put an End to in about three Hours. By this means the whole Proof relative to the Conduct of Alexander Ogilvie, which the Pannels had inſiſted much upon in their Defences, was prevented; ſome of the Jurymen ſaying, that they had nothing to do with Alexander. That at one Period of the Trial, one of the Jury retired from his Place, and continued abſent a conſiderable Time; yet the Proof went on in the mean Time, the Witneſſes were examined, and their Depoſitions taken down in Writing in the mean Time, he paying no Attention thereto, nor was he capable of doing ſo at the Time; ſo that he could no more judge of what was ſaid or done at that Time, than if he had been twenty Miles abſent: That on ſundry Occaſions Jurymen did retire without Leave aſked or given, and went out of the Room where the Court was ſitting: That it is in vain for his Majeſty's Advocate to plead the Neceſſities of Nature as an Excuſe in ſuch Caſes; for there is a Remedy known and commonly practiſed, when thoſe Neceſſities oblige the Jurymen to withdraw, viz. Leave is aſked of the Court, which orders a Macer to attend the Juryman, that no Perſon may have any private Intercourſe with him during the Time he withdraws, and the Trial is ſtopt till he returns.

That, by the Act concerning the Regulation of the Judicatories, paſſed in the third Seſſion of the ſecond Parliament of King Charles the Second, in the 10th Article concerning the Juſtice-Court, it is enacted, "That, "in all Criminal Purſuits, the Defender, or his Advocates, be always "the laſt Speaker, except in Caſe of Treaſon and Rebellion againſt the "King." Which Act, though altered as to Proſecutions not extending to the Loſs of Life, or to Demembration, before the Court of Juſticiary, or in Circuit-Courts, and where the Evidence is not taken down in Writing, by the Act 21*mo Geo.* II. chap. 19. §. 18. yet remains in full Force as to all other Criminal Courts, and as to all Trials brought in this Court, which may extend to the Loſs of Life or Limb, and when the Evidence is taken down in Writing. That this Statute notwithſtanding, after the Advocates for the Pannels had concluded their Speeches to the Jury, and nothing remained, by the Forms of Court, but to incloſe that Jury for the Purpoſe of returning their Verdict, one of the Judges did addreſs himſelf to the Jury, in a Speech concerning this Trial, and the Credibility of particular Witneſſes, whereby the Pannels were deprived of a legal and moſt material Privilege, viz. The Impreſſion that muſt be left by the laſt Pleader upon the Minds of the Jury in their Behalf.

That, beſides all theſe Informalities committed during the Courſe of Procedure, the Record is very defective, though the Defects cannot at preſent be ſo particularly pointed out, as the Counſel for the Pannels have not yet had an Opportunity of inſpecting it. However, they do condeſcend on the following Defects: That ſundry Admiſſions made by his Majeſty's Advocate, in Point of Evidence, favourable for the Pannels, are not taken down; ſo that the Record paſſed to the Knowledge of the Aſſize, without bearing theſe Admiſſions. One of theſe Admiſſions was, paſſing from the Crime of Inceſt during a Part of the Time libelled; another was relative to the Conduct of Alexander Ogilvie: That the Proteſts for Remeid of Law taken for the Pannels at different Parts of the Trial are not engroſſed in the Record, though that was ſpecially inſiſted for at the Time they were taken, and Precedents pleaded on and produced; neither is the Condeſcendence relative to the Malice of Anne Clark, which was made for the Pannels, but found not relevant by the Court, mentioned in the Record; and this is the more material, that the Omiſſion of this Condeſcendence was uſed as an Argument with the Jury for the Credit of Anne Clark's Teſtimony, by the Judge who was he laſt Speaker on this Trial; though it will be remembered, that when the Counſel for the Proſecutor had concluded the reſt of his Proof, he gave Notice to the Court, That as the Counſel for the Pannels had charged Malice againſt Anne Clark, one of the moſt material Witneſſes for the Proſecutor, and meant to adduce Witneſſes for proving that Malice, he judged it neceſſary, on his Part, to adduce ſome Witneſſes in order to obviate that Objection, and to ſhew that this Witneſs was ſo far from bearing Malice againſt the Pannels, that, after ſhe had been once precognoſced, ſhe had withdrawn and ſecreted her Perſon, when a Warrant by this Court was out againſt her, in order to avoid her being brought as a Witneſs in this Cauſe.

That the Verdict appears to be informal; and the Counſel for the Pannels apprehend it will be found a ſpecial one, when applied to the Interlocutor of Relevancy: That it does not bear that the Jury conſidered the Writs produced, but only the Depoſitions of the Witneſſes, though Writings were produced both by Proſecutor and Pannel; particularly, the Declarations of the Pannels when examined; the Queſtions put to them by the Sheriff of Edinburgh, which they are ſaid to have refuſed to anſwer; Anne Clark's Letter to the Lord Advocate; the alledged Letters from one of the Pannels; a Letter from Lord George Beauclerk; a Letter from Colonel Morris, in whoſe Regiment the Pannel Patrick Ogilvie ſerved, atteſting his good Character. Therefore the Verdict has proceeded on a partial Conſideration of the Evidence. And the Inattention of the Jury to the whole Evidence, appears from another Particular, viz. in their finding the Pannels guilty of the Inceſt as libelled, which includes the whole Month of January; though it is in Proof, that the late Thomas Ogilvie was not married till the 30th Day of that Month. That if Time were allowed to the Counſel for the Pannels, to conſider the Verdict, and inſpect the Records, and prepare Arguments in Support of the Poſitions they have now laid down, they apprehend there is a good Cauſe why Judgment ſhould not paſs on this Verdict. They have ſet forth theſe Objections in Obedience to the Court's deſiring them to condeſcend, and craved, that more Time may be allowed them to ſtate theſe Objections more fully, or any other which may occur, and Liberty given them to inſpect the Record, and have Copies of the Verdict; which has been refuſed them by the Clerk. And this Demand, they apprehend, is the more reaſonable, that they have only had a Receſs of fourteen Hours, from the Time that the Jury were incloſed, after enduring the Fatigues of a Trial which laſted for forty-three Hours; ſo that they are not in a Condition at preſent to argue their Objections ſo properly, as they will be when more Time is allowed them. All and each of the Facts ſet forth they offer to prove, and they crave that a Proof may be allowed accordingly.

His Majesty's Advocate and Solicitor General anſwered, That the Conduct of the Defence for the Pannels in this Trial has been extraordinary from firſt to laſt, as appears from the Defences compared with the Proof in Exculpation. That after a Trial of forty-three Hours Continuance, before a Jury of the moſt reſpectable Character, and after a Verdict returned finding the Pannels guilty, an Attempt is now made to diſappoint publick Juſtice, by a Plea in Arreſt of Judgment, unknown in the Law, unſupported by any Precedent, and in itſelf irrelevant and frivolous. That this Plea has been introduced with a Declamation upon the Liberty of the Subject, and of the Importance of preſerving a Jury Trial; and yet the Plea itſelf tends, if it has any Meaning, to prove, that no Trial of a Capital Crime in this Country can be taken by a Jury; becauſe the Length of ſuch Trials muſt, in moſt Caſes, make it neceſſary for Jurymen to refreſh themſelves, and to retire for anſwering the Neceſſities of Nature; and if theſe Things cannot be permitted by the Court, the neceſſary Conſequence is, that no ſuch Trial can proceed by Jury; and in order to bring ſuch Criminals to Juſtice, a new Form of Trial muſt be invented. That when a Plea ſo groundleſs and frivolous is, for the firſt Time, taken up in Behalf of two Pannels, whoſe Rank and Situation in Life enable them to bring many learned Counſel to argue and give Countenance to ſuch a Plea, in Behalf of two Pannels convicted by their Country of the moſt atrocious and dangerous Crimes, it becomes the Dignity of the Court to hear fully, and then to give ſuch a Judgment as will ſhew that the Law knows no Diſtinction of Perſons; and that the Criminal Law in this Country, upon which the Security of the Government, and the Safety of the People depends, muſt have its Courſe with equal Effect againſt the greateſt as well as the meaneſt of the Subjects. That this Trial has been conducted with more Attention and Favour for the Defence of the Pannels, than any Trial that has occurred in the Memory of any of the Members of the Court. That the ſtricteſt Orders were given that no Juryman ſhould retire, even for relieving the Neceſſities of Nature, without Leave of the Court, and being atteneed by a Macer of the Court; which was accordingly punctually executed throughout the whole Courſe of the Trial. That when it became neceſſary for the Jury to refreſh themſelves from Time to Time, for greater Diſpatch, and to prevent Confuſion, they left their Bench, and were refreſhed at a Table immediately below, at, and under the Eye of the Court; and the Inſinuation, that ſome of the Jury may have taken too much Liquor, is falſe and injurious, to the Knowledge of the Court, and was not ſo much as inſinuated in the Debate when the Jury was preſent, and is now, for the firſt Time, thrown into this Minute. One of the Jurymen being indiſpoſed, roſe from his Seat, and walked for ſome Time behind the Seat, but heard the whole Evidence. That no Criminal Trial, where ſuch Refreſhment of the Jury has been neceſſary, was ever carried on in a Manner ſo little exceptionable as the preſent; and the Tendency of the Pannels Plea is to ſhew, that no Criminal has been legally condemned in Scotland, in any Caſe, where the Trial has continued for ſuch a Time as to require Refreſhment to the Jury, or the Retiring of any Jurymen, or the Relieving the Neceſſities of Nature. That during the Time the Jury were refreſhing themſelves the firſt Day, Anne Clark was under Examination, which laſted eight Hours, and remained in her Place, under the immediate Eye of the Court, till her Examination was reſumed upon the Return of the Jury to their Places; and no Perſon ſpoke to her, except the Macer of Court, when he gave her ſome Bread and Wine. And during the whole Courſe of the Trial, upon Notice given, that any of the Jury had retired to eaſe Nature, the Proceedings ſtopped till his Return; ſo that though, from the Neceſſity of the Thing the Court did, for ſome ſhort Intervals, ſtop Proceeding in the Proof, yet there was no Adjournment of the Court; and this appears from the Record of the Court, which the Pannels cannot disprove; and the Court remained full, without one Moment's Interval, during the whole Course of the Trial; and as all the Facts stated in the Plea offered for the Pannels passed in Presence of the Court, and as it is not pretended that any Wrong was done, or any Exception taken, in Behalf of the Pannels, to any Part of the Procedure during the whole Trial, far less after the Jury was inclosed, no Proof can be allowed of the Facts upon which the Plea is founded, and the Court must take them upon their own Knowledge. The late Case of Janet Ronald has no Relation to the present Case; for there the Court was adjourned, and the Jury dismissed after they were charged with the Pannel, which was found to be contrary to Law: That the Insinuation thrown out against the Jury, That they were impatient to hear the Evidence for the Pannels, is likewise false and injurious to the Knowledge of the Court: That after the Prosecutor concluded his Evidence, which he abridged as much as possible, the Counsel for the Pannels proceeded to open their Defence by a Proof, That, after the Pannels were committed to Prison, the Cattle at the House at Eastmiln were sold by Alexander Ogilvie; and it appearing clearly from their own Evidence, that this Roup proceeded from an Order of the Pannel Patrick Ogilvie, it was observed by one of the Jury, that this Fact did not appear to be material to the Issue; and as they found themselves much exhausted by Fatigue and Want of Rest, they would not be able to attend to such Evidence as might be material for the Pannel's Defence; which was submitted to the Consideration of the Pannels own Counsel: And they did accordingly declare, That they gave up that Article of their Proof.

The Protest taken by the Pannels for Remeid in Law, is extant in Process, and makes a Part of the Record of this Trial. The Objection to the Evidence of Anne Clark, founded upon Malice, was clearly disproved before the Jury by Evidence: That she was so far from harbouring Malice against the Pannels, that, on the contrary, after she was precognosced before the Sheriff, she withdrew herself from the Place of her Abode, and concealed herself in different Places about this City under a false Name, in order to prevent her being adduced as an Evidence in this Trial; and although his Majesty's Advocate, perceiving the Danger of protracting this Trial to an unnecessary Length, did not insist to have this Part of the Evidence taken down; yet it appeared so strong to the Pannels own Counsel, that, when they came to state the Grounds of their Allegation of Malice, and to adduce their Witnesses in Support thereof, the Judge Examinator gave his Opinion, that the Condescendence, as stated by them, was not relevant; and they did not insist for the Opinion of the Court; which was plainly giving up and passing from this Objection of Malice, or any Proof thereof.

That the Verdict is accurate and formal in all Respects.----There is no Necessity that the Verdict should mention the Evidence upon which the Jury proceeded: That all the written Evidence adduced before the Jury was in Behalf of the Prosecutor, and no written Evidence whatever was proved or adduced before the Jury in Behalf of the Pannels; and if it can be supposed, that the Jury did not take under their Consideration this Part of the Prosecutor's Evidence, it was so far favourable for the Pannels; and he appeals to their Lordships Knowledge, that, in most Trials before this Court, the Declarations of the Pannels, and other written Evidence, are referred to in the Libel, and produced before the Jury; and many Verdicts have been returned, upon which Execution passed, wherein no Mention is made of their having considered such written Evidence; for it is in their Power to take that Evidence under their Consideration, as a Ground of their Verdict or not, as they please.

That it is the undoubted Right of the Counsel for the Pannel to be the last Speaker upon the Import of the Evidence, and the Prosecutor has no Reply; but it is the inherent Right of the Court, and essential to public Justice, to correct Mistakes in Law or in Fact, by which false Impressions upon the Jury may be made by the Counsel on either Side: That the Verdict, with respect to the Incest, is unexceptionable, and properly applies to the Charge in the Libel.

That no Admission was made by his Majesty's Advocate, that is not properly entered upon the Record: That he passed from the Incest charged to have been committed after the sixth of June, in Presence of the Court and Jury, and the Verdict properly applies to the Libel as so restricted: That the Counsel for the Prisoners had Access to the Record during the whole Course of the Trial, and since that Time; and it is improper to move the Court for an Arrest of Judgment till they have further Time to consider the Record, in order to discover what Objections they can there find in Support of their Plea. In respect of all which, Judgment ought to be pronounced.

After reading over the foregoing Minutes judicially, in Presence of the Pannels and Court, the Lords proceeded to advise the same, and pronounced the following Interlocutor:

" The Lord Justice-Clerk and Commissioners of Justiciary, having " considered the foregoing Debate, and knowing that the Whole of this " Trial, from first to last, was carried on under the Eye, and in Pre- " sence of the Court; and that the Whole of it was conducted with as " much Regularity and Accuracy as ever was done in any Trial before " the Court, they find the Reasons pleaded in Arrest of Judgment not " relevant, and repell the same; and they also repell the Objections " made to the Form or Substance of the Verdict.

(Signed) Gilb. Elliot, I. P. D."

On pronouncing of which Interlocutor, Mr. Alexander Lockhart, Advocate, Procurator for the Pannels, protested for Remeid of Law; and thereupon took Instruments in the Hands of the Clerk of Court.

Then there was a Petition given in and presented to the Court by the said Katharine Nairn Pannel, signed by Mr. Alexander Lockhart, and Mr. Henry Dundas, her Lawyers, bearing, That the Petitioner has the Misfortune, in the criminal Prosecution now depending against her in this Court at the Instance of his Majesty's Advocate, to have a Verdict returned against her by a Plurality of Voices, finding her guilty of the Crimes of which she was charged: Whereupon his Majesty's Advocate having moved for Judgment, sundry Objections were stated upon her Part, why no Judgment can pass against her upon that Verdict: That, abstracting from these, she now begs to represent to the Court, That she is pregnant; and though she cannot take upon her, from her Inexperience in these Matters, positively to say how far she is advanced in her Pregnancy, according to her best Opinion, she judges she may be about three Months gone with Child.

Therefore praying, it might please their Lordships, to direct the proper Inquiry to be made into her present State and Condition as to her alledged Pregnancy: and upon the same being properly certified, to supersede Judgment against her, if any Judgment can pass upon the Verdict, till after Delivery.

Which Petition being read in Court, and judicially adhered to by her,

" The Lord Justice-Clerk and Commissioners of Justiciary, having " heard this Petition, they grant Warrant for Letters of Diligence, at " the Instance of his Majesty's Advocate, for citing three or more skilful " Midwives to compear before their Lordships against To-morrow, being " Friday the sixteenth Day of August current, at Nine o'Clock in the " Forenoon, to inspect the Petitioner Katharine Nairn Pannel, and make " Trial whether or not she the Petitioner be pregnant or with Child; " and accordingly to give their Opinion or Judgment to the Court therein; " and continue the Diet against the Petitioner until the said Time; and " appoint her in the mean Time to be carried back to Prison; and, for " the Purpose aforesaid, the said Lords appoint the Persons following, to " wit, Mrs. Johnston, Mrs. Hamilton, Mrs. Duncan, and Mrs. Hill, " known Midwives, to be cited as above.

* The Proceedings in this Trial being transmitted to London, for the Consideration of his Majesty and his Privy-Council, the following signed Opinion of Mr. M'Carty, an eminent English Counsellor, was presented with them:

" I have read a great deal of the Proceedings in the Affair of the unhappy Prisoners, Katharine Nairn and Lieutenant Patrick Ogilvie, under Sentence of Death, for the " heinous Crimes of Incest and Murder. Crimes of so black a Dye, charged on Persons who, until that Time, had preserved unblemished Characters, should be attended " with the most evident Proofs to gain Credit in the Opinion of Mankind, at least of the most judicious Part of it. Among the Vulgar, it is much to be lamented, every " Calumny, however ill-supported, finds an easy Admittance.

" It seems to me extremely hard on the Prisoners, that they should be tried at the same Time for Crimes of very different Natures. The Indictment charges, That they " have presumed to commit, and are guilty Art and Part of both, or one or other of the said Crimes of Incest and Murder, &c. Adding the two Crimes in one Indictment, " makes the Prisoners be exposed to a greater Odium, and creates a stronger Prejudice against them. I think, in the Law of England, a Charge, that the Prisoner at the " Bar was guilty of one or other of two Crimes, would have vitiated the Indictment. It is laid down as a Rule in Co. Entr. 278. that the Fact is never laid in the disjunc- " tive. And in 5 Mod. 137. Rex against Stocker, it was ruled, that an Indictment, setting forth, that the Defendant murderavit, vel murderari causavit, is not good; for " these are different Crimes.

" In the present Case there is a further Disadvantage; for, as I am informed, the Trial for Incest, and the Trial for Murder, are to be had in a quite different Manner. " In the first, the Trial is Januis clausis; and in the other it is Januis apertis; the last Method being more public, is less exceptionable. In the Case of these unfortunate " Prisoners, the whole was carried on Januis clausis; every Allegation and Deposition in Support of one Branch of the Indictment had an Effect on both; but this, I " think, was rather Prejudice than real Conviction.

" I am of Opinion, that, if the Crimes charged are considered severally, and the Evidence produced to support one Crime is taken singly, without the Assistance of the " other, no Jury in England would have found the Prisoners guilty.

" If the Facts alledged as a Proof of the Incest were given as a Proof of the carnal Knowledge on an Indictment for a Rape, it is impossible a Jury could find the Defen- " dant guilty. I think they would not be admitted as a Proof of criminal Conversation, to intitle a Husband to Damage on an Action of Trespass. There is not one Fact " attempted to be proved, that may not be literally true; and yet the Defendants be innocent of the Crime of carnal Knowledge. The Conjectures of Women of very " indifferent Characters, and of very malicious Dispositions, may naturally lead to the worst Things; but these Conjectures are not Evidence, when there is a Possibility " that the Parties may be innocent. I do not know that in our Law any Presumption of a criminal Conversation operates in any Circumstance, but that of being soli " cum sola, et nudus cum nuda; in all other Circumstances a positive Proof is required. It often happens, that a Man is indicted for a Rape, and acquitted; and yet the

My Lord,

BY a Letter I have juſt received from the Lord Advocate, I find Notice has been taken in Court, that notwithſtanding of the Order of the Court for confining of Anne Clark in a ſeparate Room in the Caſtle; yet, after being ſeparated, ſhe was again remanded back to the ſame Confinement: It is very true; and I have the Honour to acquaint your Lordſhip, that it was done by my Orders; as it was repreſented to me, that the Room in the Gunner's Houſe ſhe was by Deſire put into, was by no means a Place to keep a Priſoner in Safety; and I am determined, that all Priſoners intruſted to the Care of the Military under my Command, ſhall always be put in Places of Security. I have the Honour to be, my Lord, Your Lordſhip's moſt obedient humble Servant,

To the Right Honourable the Lord Juſtice-Clerk.

LETTER from Staats Long Morris, Eſq. to Mr. James Smith, Writer to the Signet.

SIR, Huntley-Lodge, Aug. 3, 1765.

THIS Day I received your Letter of the 31ſt of July, requeſting an Atteſtation of Lieutenant Ogilvie's Behaviour while he was under my Command. His Conduct as an Officer was unexceptionable; and he was always thought by myſelf, and the other Officers of the Regiment, to be an inoffenſive, harmleſs Man. I am, Sir,

Your moſt obedient, and very humble Servant,

STAATS L. MORRIS.

To Mr. James Smith, Writer to the Signet, Edinburgh.

" Court directs a Proſecution for an Aſſault with an Intent to commit a Rape. In Caſes of that Nature, I doubt not but the Witneſſes in the preſent Caſe would have " boldly aſſerted, that a Rape had been actually committed: The Mind of the principal Witneſs was ſtrangely prepoſſeſſed; ſhe could hear diſtinctly what the good " Lady Eaſtmiln could neither hear nor ſee.

" If they were to be tried on the Murder ſingly, the Proof there will appear as defective. There is not one poſitive Proof, that Thomas Ogilvie died of Poiſon. The " Surgeons who attended, declare, that the Symptoms might ariſe from natural Cauſes, a violent bilious Colick. It was proved, that Thomas Ogilvie, the Day before his " Death, and ſome Days before that, had complained of Pains in his Bowels, and had called for, and taken Drams in ſeveral Places, to procure Eaſe. Theſe moſt " certainly were not the Effects of Poiſon taken on the Morning of the Day on which he died. Why might not theſe Pains have increaſed the Day on which he died, with- " out the Interpoſition of any Poiſon? The Matter might have been cleared up by opening the Body. Surgeons were preſent, and ready to perform the Operation, but " were prevented by the Perſon who has ſpirited up the Proſecution, and who is to be the only Gainer by the Death of the Priſoners.

" The great Rule of Evidence is, to have the beſt Proof the Nature of the Caſe can admit: That certainly has not been produced in this Caſe: It was not oppoſed by " the Priſoners, but it was oppoſed by the Man who wiſhes their Deſtruction. The Inceſt is ſuppoſed to be certain, becauſe the Huſband is ſuppoſed to have been poiſon- " ed; and, on the other Hand, the Man is believed to be poiſoned, becauſe there is a ſuppoſed Proof of Inceſt.

" Under theſe Circumſtances, it is difficult to find any Means to prove the Innocence of the Priſoners, after a Verdict and Judgment. The 19th Article of the Union " confirms the Juriſdiction of the Court of Seſſion; and in the ſame Terms it confirms the Juriſdiction of the Court of Juſticiary. It mentions nothing of an Appeal from " the Court of Seſſion to the Houſe of Lords, yet thoſe Appeals are frequent. It mentions nothing for or againſt Appeals from the Courts of Juſticiary: It certainly does " not exclude them. There lies an Appeal from the Court of Exchequer in Scotland to the Houſe of Lords. To admit an Appeal from the Two Supreme Courts in " Scotland, where Property only is concerned, and not to admit an Appeal from the third Supreme Court, where Life, Honour, Property, and Poſterity are concerned, " appears ſomewhat extraordinary. By the ſame Article of the Union, it is enacted, that no Cauſes in Scotland be cognoſcible, or any Judgment from thence be recog- " noſced, received, or altered, by the Court of Chancery, Queen's-Bench, or Common-Pleas, or any other Court in Weſtminſter-Hall. This negative Clauſe as to Weſt- " minſter-Hall, and the Courts there, ſeems to imply a Power of recognoſcing and altering Cauſes and Judgments in the Houſe of Lords. I think it is the common Rule " of Conſtruction.

" I believe there are few Inſtances of Appeals from the Court of Juſticiary; but that is not a Proof that ſuch Appeals cannot lie. I remember a Petition of Appeal was " ſent from Scotland in the Affair of Barriſdale: There was ſome Difficulty made about preſenting the Appeal. Lord Bath was applied to; but he ſaid, it was a Branch of " Buſineſs he never meddled in, nor was he diſpoſed to meddle for the future in any public Affair, unleſs it was ſuch as was of the higheſt Importance to the Nation; " however, he would go to the Houſe, and mention it to the Chancellor: And in ſome Days after, being called upon, he ſaid, he mentioned the Affair to the Chancellor, " but that it was unneceſſary to ſtruggle as to the Petition, as the King, out of his gracious Diſpoſition, would give the ſame Relief that was aimed at by the Petition.

" If there is no Way open from the Court of Juſticiary to the Houſe of Lords, it is the only Court in Great-Britain which is not ſubject to that Juriſdiction; for Writs " of Error go from the King's-Bench to the Houſe of Lords, even in Caſes of High-Treaſon. It is not a common Practice, I confeſs; but yet it has been done. I ſee nei- " ther Reaſon nor Law why the Proceedings of the Court of Juſticiary might not fall under the Review of the Supreme Court, as well as thoſe of the Court of Seſſion.

Sept. 14, 1765. (Signed) " A. M'CARTY."

In Conſequence of this, Lieutenant Ogilvie was reſpited from Time to Time till the 13th of November, 1765, when (his Majeſty's fourth Reprieve being expired) he was carried from the Tolbooth in Edinburgh, and was executed in the Graſs-Market, amidſt an innumerable Concourſe of People. The Day before his Execution he ſigned and delivered a Paper, in order to be made public, of which the following is an authentic Copy:

" I Lieutenant Patrick Ogilvie, Brother-German to the Deceaſed Thomas Ogilvie of Eaſtmiln, conſidering myſelf upon the Brink of this mortal Life into Eternity; and as " I have but few Hours to live, would chuſe to employ them in the Way that would moſt conduce to my eternal Happineſs: And though my Years be few, and my Sins " many, yet I hope, through God's Grace, and the Interpoſition of my bleſſed Redeemer, that the Gates of Heaven will not be ſhut upon me, in whatever View I, as a " Criminal, may be looked on by the Generality of Mankind; and I hope, thoſe who beſt knew me, will do me Juſtice when I am gone. As to the Crimes I am accuſed of, " the Trial itſelf will ſhew the Propenſity of the Witneſſes, where Civility, and poſſibly Folly, are explained into actual Guilt; and which poſſibly had the greater Effect in " making them believed; and of both Crimes for which I am now doomed to ſuffer, I declare my Innocence; and that no Perſuaſion could ever have made me conde- " ſcend to them.

" I freely forgive every Perſon concerned in this melancholy Affair; and wherein any of them have been faulty to me, I pray God to forgive them.

" My Counſel and Doers have done their Duty for me, for which I thank them ſincerely, conſidering the Care they have taken of me, and am ſorry it is not in my Power " to give them a better Reward.

" The Miniſters of this City have been at great Trouble about my eternal State, which I have always gratefully acknowledged, and will do to my laſt Breath, for the " Care they have been pleaſed to take of me: I am ſorry, Time being ſo precious now, I have it not in my power to expreſs my Gratitude more ſo, for their Goodneſs " and Attendance towards me; and I hope their Labours in my Behalf will not be in vain.

" Captain James Robb, and the other Keepers of the Priſon under him, have alſo ſhewn me great Kindneſs ſince my Confinement, for which I thank them, and thought " it my Duty to declare the ſame.

" I deſire to die in Peace with all Men, even my greateſt Enemies, begging Forgiveneſs to them, as I hope for it from that God, in whoſe Preſence I am ſoon to ap- " pear; hoping for the Pardon of my Sins, and Entrance into eternal Bliſs, through the Merits and Interceſſion of my Redeemer, to whom I recommend my Spirit: Come, " ſweet Jeſus, come quickly, and receive it! (Signed) PATRICK OGILVIE.

" P. S. Mean Time I beg Leave to clear Mr. John Fenton of an Affair laid to his Charge; ſuch as his being guilty of keeping me from making a Confeſſion to the " World before I died; this, I hope, will be a Warning for the future from ſuch like Miſtakes to the World, and hope they will be ſorry for their falſe Suſpicion now.

Edinburgh, Tolbooth, Nov. 12, 1765. (Signed) " PATRICK OGILVIE."

* On the 18th of November 1765, the High Court of Juſticiary met, agreeable to their Adjournment of the 16th of Auguſt; when the Conſideration of the Caſe of Mrs. Ogilvie was reſumed, and the Midwives appointed by the Court to viſit her, having emitted their Declaration upon Oath, that they adjudged her to be in the ſixth Month of her Pregnancy, the Court, in Conſequence thereof, again ſuperſeded the pronouncing of Sentence until the ſecond Monday in March.

Mrs. Ogilvie was delivered of a Daughter, February 27th, 1766, in the Tolbooth; from whence ſhe found Means to eſcape on the 15th of March; the Court of Juſticiary, who met on the 10th, having, on Account of her being ſo lately brought to Bed, further adjourned to the 17th; on which Day ſhe was to have received Sentence.

NUMBER I.

The CASE of ROBERT Earl of ESSEX, and the Lady FRANCES HOWARD.

Some MEMORIALS touching the Nullity between the Earl of Essex and his Lady, pronounced September 25, 1613, at Lambeth (and the Difficulties endured in the same), by George, Archbishop of Canterbury *.

BEING at the Court at White-Hall, on the 12th of May, 1613, or thereabouts, his Majesty moved me, that I would be a Commissioner in a Controversy to be begun between the Earl of Essex and his Lady, for the separating of them; and when his Majesty had ended those few Words with me, my Lord Chamberlain, who was then in the Gallery, spake also unto me to that Purpose. It was unto me a Matter very strange, having heard before of some Discontentments between that Noble Couple; but never imagining that Matters were come to that Head. My Answer was alike to both, "That I did not know the "Ground whereupon they intended to move; but that, if I were to be a "Judge in any such Question, I would pray, that other Bishops, being "near the Town and Court, might be joined with me." The Persons that were named then, were, my Lord of London, my Lord of Ely, and my Lord of Litchfield (for at that Time was my Lord of Bath with the Queen's Majesty at Bath). Besides, I prayed both the King's Majesty, and my Lord Chamberlain, "That before any such Thing were entered into, I "might speak privately with my Lord of Essex, for the satisfying of mine "own Mind;" which by both was permitted unto me. The Day after I sent for the Earl; and having private Speech with him, only about the Ability of his Body, and nothing else, I found him generally much reserved in Talk, but only avowing the Ability of himself for Generation; and that he was resolved never to lay any Blemish upon himself that Way. I knew not well what to make of this; for I did not then understand, that some Lords had met before at White-Hall on both Parts, (the Lord Privy-Seal, the Lord Chamberlain, the Earl of Southampton, and the Lord Knowles, as afterwards I heard) to settle an Order by Consent, how this Prosecution should be; that is to say, That a Separation should be made, and my Lord's Honour every Way preserved.

Within a Day or two, coming to White-Hall, I had Speech with the Lord Chamberlain, in the Gallery going towards St. James's Park. I might not reveal all Particulars of that which passed in private; but yet I told his Lordship, "That I had spoken with the Earl of Essex, and I per-"ceived it was like to be a Matter of great Difficulty, and therefore wish-"ed his Lordship to be well advised, before any thing was brought into "Publick." I told him, "That he must proceed either upon Confession "or Proof: That it was probable, the Earl would not confess his own "Impotency, for then he blemished himself: That my Lady's Oath in "that Case was not sufficient; and how other Proofs might be had, I "could not conceive: That the Earl in open Estimation was to be "thought an able Man: That his Father was not thought in that Kind "unsufficient." The Lord Chamberlain replied, "That, perhaps, the "Father's Sin was punished upon the Son: That it was Truth, that the "Earl had no Ink in his Pen: That himself had confessed, that he could "not know a Woman, and that before divers Noblemen, and some of "them his own Friends, naming, as I remember, the Earls of Northampton "and Worcester, and the Lord Knowles." All this while I never dreamed of Impotentia versus hanc, but conceived, that they would charge the Earl simply with Disability. The Lord Chamberlain then seemed unto me fully resolved to proceed, and told me whom he would have in the Commission, the Bishops of London, Ely, and Litchfield, the two Chancellors of the Exchequer and Dutchy, my Judges; (for so he called them) Sir Daniel Dun, Sir John Bennet, Dr. James, and Dr. Edwards. I told his Lordship, "That I liked the Persons very well." The next News I heard was about a Day or two after, "That the Commission was out under the "Great Seal; which I wondered at, by reason that I thought, that my Words to the Lord Chamberlain being well weighed, would have moved some longer Consideration. Well: The Commission is brought; it is accepted, and Proceeding decreed; the Earl of Essex is called; the Libel is put in. When we saw it, and that it contained Impotentia versus hanc, most of us, who were not acquainted with the Project before, were much amazed at it. I told the Counsel for my Lady, "That they had laid a "very narrow Bridge for themselves to go over:" So said my Lord of London, and divers of the rest; only my Lord of Ely was still silent. My Lord of Litchfield, two several Times, uttered Speeches, as much grieving and repining at this Controversy: "That he was Ordinary to the Earl of "Essex, and had been in his House at Chartley, which he saw to be well "governed; and the Earl did bear himself most religiously therein, to his "great Comfort: That his Wife had the Honour to be Cousin-German "to the Countess of Suffolk; and therefore he had no Reason but to wish "well to the Earl of Essex and his Lady both. Yet, if he had been worthy "to be consulted withal, he should have thought that seven Years had "been little enough to have deliberated, whether it were fit to bring such "a Business into Question before the World." Another Time he told us, "That it was very good, that we should proceed with great Wariness "in this Cause; for," saith he, "the World looketh on us what we do; "and there were not more Eyes upon the Earl's Father losing his Head, "than there be upon the Earl now losing his Wife." He told me afterwards, "That he had Ill-will for those Speeches, and complained that "some among us did tell Tales of all that was said and done." (And so it appeared afterwards, that Sir J. Cæsar and Sir Daniel Dun did.) Sir Thomas Parry, in all his Speeches, privately murmured against this Nullity, till he came to Windsor; where, the Day that the King heard us, the Lord Chamberlain, in my Presence, spake privately with him and Sir Julius Cæsar about this Matter; and from that Time forward, Mr. Chancellor of the Dutchy was altered. My Lord of Ely, also, for a great while, was in Dislike of the Separation, (as I have credibly heard he opened himself to Sir Henry Savile) until such Time as the King spake with him, and then his Judgment was reformed. But Truth it is, that among us he said nothing.

Now the Earl's Answer is taken, which appeareth. In it there were divers Things very observable. He used no ill Speech of his Lady, for which we all much commended him. I gave him so strict a Charge to speak the Truth, requiring him, as he would answer me before God at the last Day, to deliver nothing for Favour or Affection, but to inform us in the Verity, that it wrung from him something which I supposed he intended not to speak so plainly. He gave the Reason of his having no Motions to know his Lady Carnally, and of his thinking that he never should. "When I came out of France, I loved her; I do not so now, neither ever "shall I." When he was to answer to the Article, that she was Virgo incorrupta; he smiled, and said, "She saith so, and she is so for me." Sir Daniel Dun catched these Words, and bid the Register set down then, Credit articulum esse verum. These Things gave me no great Encouragement to the Business; but yet being at very little Leisure, I let Matters go on, and in mine own Part resolved nothing. Then the Witnesses were deposed, but not published. The Inspectresses were chosen, who came most unwillingly unto it; and howsoever Sir Julius Cæsar and Sir Daniel Dun (whom we never suspected to be as Parties in the Cause, as afterwards they appeared to be) made all clear and fair Weather; yet my Lord of London told us openly, "That he being with them, found that the Ladies "knew not well what to make of it; that they had no Skill, nor knew not "what was the Truth; but what they said, was upon the Credit of the "Midwives, which were but two, and I knew not how tampered with." Then came the Lady Frances to take her Oath, with the seven Compurgators. I noted therein some Things. A Paper was brought, containing, Verbis præcisis, what her Ladyship would swear. We saw it, and considered it, and found it too bare and slight to enforce any thing. The Commissioners advised, that it should be more full. Dr. Steward accordingly drew it; but he must go forth to the Lady, to know whether she would swear it. At last it was agreed unto. When she came to subscribe it, after the Oath taken, one or two of her Brothers standing at her Back, put her in Mind that she must not write her Name Frances Essex, which she most willingly remembered, and subscribed Frances Howard. We saw my Lord of Litchfield's Wife to be one of the Seven. We were afterwards informed very credibly, That the Lady Knevet had declared her Sorrow, that she was used in such an Action, and said, "That she wept all the "Day about it." These Things pleased me little, that Nobody took Comfort in the Business.

Things go on in a Course till Midsummer-Day. Then did the King deal with me privately, as if he had received divers Complaints against me. The first was, "That we delayed the Proceeding, inasmuch as the Meet-"ing was put off, from the 18th of June, till the 2d or 3d of July." My Answer was, "We had rather gone too fast: We had sat Forenoon "and Afternoon. The Term now grew to an End, and we had many "Businesses to dispatch of the King's: That the Commission-Day for "Causes Ecclesiastical was put off for a Week, by reason of Midsummer-"Day falling on a Thursday; and consequently, that our Proceeding in "this Cause, which commonly attended the other Commission, was of "Necessity to be deferred." But my principal Answer was, "That we "could not shorten it; for the Counsel on both Parts had agreed upon "that Day in July, and so it was upon the Acts: However, therefore, "the Counsel for my Lady moved openly in Court to abbreviate the "Time, yet the Counsel for my Lord would not renounce nor alter their "Term probatory, but kept them close unto it." Another Objection was, "That I acquainted not the King, from Time to Time, how Matters did "go." I answered, "That I knew not myself; for as yet there was no "Publication of Witnesses; when any thing came to my Knowledge, his "Majesty should understand it." It was added, "That divers Persons "repaired unto me, who wished not well to the Business." "Belike," said I, "they mean the Earl of Southampton, who came in the other Day, "when we were all sitting together: But his Coming was about John "Cotton's Cause; and I never had a Word with him in all my Life, "touching this Business." "No," said the King, and smiled, "it is "Sir Henry Neville." "Indeed," quoth I, "he was with me the other "Day, and this very Morning: But your Majesty well knows what was "the Reason. It was touching that Cause, which your Majesty com-"manded me to send for him about. I delivered him your Mind the one "Day, and he gave me an Answer the other." At this Time, his Majesty cast out some Words, as if he wished well to the Nullity; but it was so obscurely, that I did not conceive that earnestly he desired it. After this Day, the Complaints were many which were made to the King against me, and many Threats were used, and divers

* The Proceedings between the Earl of Essex and Lady Frances Howard, in State Trials, Vol. I. p. 317, being but short and very imperfect, wanting the Arguments of the Civilians, &c. this Account, wrote by Dr. George Abbot, Archbishop of Canterbury, with the Speech he intended to have made, and King James's Letter to him, will give great Light into that Affair, and help greatly to explain it; and should be read with those Proceedings in Vol. I.

Tricks

Tricks were played, to urge me to yield to the Nullity. One was, "That I ſhould ſuffer the Earl of Eſſex to go out of Town." I anſwered, "He had made his Anſwer, and had his Proctor, and it was our "Cuſtom then not to ſtay Men." His Majeſty commanded me to inquire, if his Preſence were not neceſſary; and if it were, then I ſhould ſtay him. I ſent to Sir Daniel Dun, to Sir John Bennet, and to Dr. Steward; and they all agreed, that there was no Need of his Lordſhip's being in Town. And of this I ſent Word to the Lord Chamberlain; and my Lord of Eſſex was permitted to depart. One while it was given out, that I was moved by the Queen to croſs them; when, in Truth, I had not ſpoke with her thereabout: Another while, that I had ſpoke with the Earl of Eſſex at firſt, and hence his Lordſhip grew leſs pliable; when they knew about what it was, and were told of it before. And it was not forgotten, that when I gave Charge to the Earl of Eſſex, to anſwer truly to the Poſitions in the Libel, I named the Caſe of my Lord of Devonſhire and the Lady Rich, as if I had compared this Cauſe unto theirs. When afterwards the Earl's Counſel took Exception to the Libel, it was given out, that they were animated by me to oppoſe; whereas I never ſpake with them, nor knew any thing of their Purpoſe. And ever that was one, that there were Delays uſed. Yea, it was to my Face delivered as a Threat, that Archbiſhop Grindal had been overthrown for not giving Conſent to the Divorce of Dr. Julio, as implying, that the ſame would be my Caſe.

About this Time, the Lords, and the reſt of the Feoffees, were to meet at Mr. Sutton's Hoſpital, about the ſettling of it. The Day that we were to come thither, my Lord Chamberlain, in the Privy Gallery at Whitehall, ſhewed his Anger towards me, that we had not ſent for the Keys to his Lordſhip, and that he might deliver over the Cauſe. But when I came to the Charter-Houſe, there was delivered me a Letter, written all with my Lord's own Hand, and directed to the Lord Archbiſhop, the Lord Chancellor, and the Lord Privy-Seal; wherein he did twice take Exception to me by Name, and, in a ſort, braved me, that ſo he might pick a Quarrel to me; whereunto I replied not, but bore it with Patience.

A little before Whitſuntide, his Lordſhip was very kind to me, and of his own Accord proffered me a Chamber at Greenwich, which my Lord, my Predeceſſor, had; but after twice proffering of it, and my accepting of the ſame, his Lordſhip fell off ſtrangely, and I never ſpake of it more. Theſe Complaints and Threats made me to ſuſpect all was not well; for what needed theſe Things to me, in a Matter of Juſtice?

The Time now grew on, that his Majeſty was to go abroad in Progreſs on a Sunday, which was the Day before the Counſel for my Lord were to put in their Anſwers and Exceptions to the Libel. The Lord Privy-Seal ſhewed me a Letter of the King's to his Lordſhip, wherein he was to expoſtulate with me for delaying the Buſineſs. I gave his Lordſhip Anſwer what was done, and his Lordſhip profeſſed that he was ſatisfied, and that no Man could do more than I did. On the Monday, the Counſel for my Lord put in their Anſwer, which was round and picquant. The Lord Chamberlain had Notice of it, and complained thereof to the King. I ſent his Majeſty the Copy thereof, and received from the King a Letter, written all with his Majeſty's own Hand, ſhewing Diſlike thereof. At that Time, Sir William Button threatened Sir Daniel's Servant hard for that Anſwer, as the ſaid Sir Daniel divers Weeks after told me. The Commiſſioners conſidered of the Anſwer, and diſallowed it, giving Order, that no Record ſhould remain of it, but that it ſhould be utterly defaced. This was very well accepted, and now my Lord of Canterbury was a very honeſt Man. But till this was done, their Followers gave out, that the King had in two Letters ſo ſchooled the Archbiſhop, as he was never ſchooled in all his Life.

Things now being quiet, I called Sir William Button one Commiſſion-Day unto me, and ſpake thus to him: "Sir William Button, you have fol-"lowed this Buſineſs from the firſt, and have been preſent at the acting "of all Things. Have you ever ſeen me, in Word or Deed, do any "Matter that doth not become me?" (for indeed hitherto I had no Way declared myſelf, becauſe we were not come to conſider of the Proofs.) "What is then the Cauſe that I am thus complained upon, that I cannot "one Day be quiet?" His Anſwer unto me was, "That the Lord Cham-"berlain was every Way a kind Father to his Children; but in this of "his Daughter, he was ſo paſſionate till it had an End, that he lay as "on a Grid-iron, broiling till the Matter were accompliſhed." Quoth I, "It ſhall not be delayed by me." Now, the Counſel on both Sides drew on to inform us, wherein I noted, that whereas the Libel was laid in Nature of Maleficium verſus hanc, my Lady's Counſel, upon the ſhutting up of the Cauſe, would not apply themſelves thereunto, neither would they willingly hear of it; which ſeemed ſtrange, ſince all the Books which they brought, particularly to the Cauſe, did mention that; and Doctor Steward had publickly and expreſſively ſaid, "That it was that "which they did mean." This troubled me ſomewhat, becauſe I perceived that they themſelves could not tell what to make of it. But afterwards fell out another Matter, which very much alienated my Judgment from the Cauſe: It appeared, that Sentence could not be given, till the Time that the King entering his Progreſs, was gone as far as Windſor, and then his Majeſty was ſoon to depart to Farnham. Sir Daniel Dun told us, "That he was to attend the King in Progreſs; that he muſt be "at Farnham; that he was old and lame; that it would be too great a "Trouble for him to come back again at the Day of Sentence." He therefore prayed, "That we would hear him deliver his Judgment of "the whole Matter." This Proffer ſeemed wondrous ſtrange to moſt of us; and putting it by handſomely, we reſolved not to trouble him therewith: And in this Opinion we aroſe. But afterwards, my Lord of Litchfield cometh to my Study Door, where I and my Lord of London were about another Buſineſs, and telleth us, That my Lord of Ely, and Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer, were very deſirous to hear Sir Daniel ſpeak; and that he, for his Part, was of the Mind that it would do very well, and therefore he importuned us both to give Conſent unto it. We imagining no great Harm could come thereby, aſſented, and the next Day is appointed for that Purpoſe. There Sir Daniel cometh with a formal Declaration, divided into ſix Parts; to every one of which he ſpake ſo largely, that with a little replying of ours, it ſpent a whole Afternoon. Matters which I moſt obſerved therein, were theſe: He told us, "That "by our Commiſſion we might hear this Cauſe ſummarily." He brought a Book, "That he who hath Power to hear a Matter ſummarily, is in "Nature of an Arbiter choſen by both Parties, and therefore may judge in "Diſcretion, as he ſhall think fit;" and more to that Purpoſe. I thought with myſelf, that this was ſtrange Doctrine in a Matter of Marriage; that as Arbitrators, we might adjudge a Wife to her Huſband, or not adjudge her, according to our Diſcretion. In his diſcourſing of my Lord's Impotency verſus hanc, he beat upon the Matter of Maleficium, and yet by no Means he would have it to be that apparently. He inſiſted much, "That "the Sentence was to be given in general Terms, not naming any parti-"cular Impotency." I told him, "In ſuch a Sentence, the World look "that we ſhould yield a Reaſon of that which we did." He replied, "That it was fit to give no Reaſon." "And here," ſaid Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer, "a Judge is not to give a Reaſon of his Sentence, but "only to God. I would give no Reaſon to any Prince in the World." I was once called before Queen Elizabeth, about a Sentence which I gave, and ſhe demanded of me the Reaſon thereof; I told her, "A Judge was "bound to give no Reaſon of that which he pronounced, but only to God." I marvelled much at theſe Things, and at laſt replied, "Well, let it be "we acquaint not the World with the Reaſon of that which we do; yet "is it not fit, that I who am the Judge, and muſt pronounce the Sentence, "know the Ground of that which I am to pronounce?" Here, after a little pauſing, one of them ſaid, "Yes, for you may ſee that in the Books "and Depoſitions." Quoth I, "But I cannot ſee that there which may "ſatisfy me. But Mr. Chancellor," ſaid I, "and Sir Daniel Dun, Com-"miſſioners, you perhaps be not driven to it, yet I ſhall be forced of Ne-"ceſſity to tell Men the Reaſon of the Sentence: For as ſoon as this "Cauſe is ſentenced, every Man who is diſcontented with his Wife, and "every Woman diſcontented with her Huſband, which can have any rea-"ſonable Pretence, will repair to me for ſuch Nullities. If I yield unto "them, here will be ſtrange Violations of Marriages; if I do not, I muſt "not tell them, that it was fit for my Lord of Eſſex, but it is not ſo for "you; for the Law knoweth no Perſons, but is indifferent to all. If I "then repel them, I muſt ſhew a Reaſon: Your Caſe is not like that of "my Lord of Eſſex; for his Caſe was thus, yours is thus. And ſo muſt I "deliver the Reaſon, or Men will not be anſwered." In this Time of debating, I aſked Sir Daniel Dun, "I pray you, Maſter of the Requeſts, "what Examples have we of any Nullity in England, pronounced in this "Kind? Might a Man ſee any Precedent of it? For I would be loath to "do any Thing that never was done before." "Yes," ſaith he, "there be "Precedents thereof. In Anne of Cleve's Caſe we have an Example, and "another in one Bury, which I have here in my Book;" and thereupon out of a Note-Book of his own, he read now a Line or two, and then two or three other Lines in another Place, and ſo forward. My Anſwer was, "I did not think that King Henry's Separation from Anne of Cleve, was "for any ſuch Matter, but upon a Precontract." I ſaid, "King Henry "the VIIIth was a ſtrange Prince in that Kind: He put himſelf into many "Marriages; and when he began that with Anne of Cleve, he feared leſt "the Emperor, and King of France, ſhould combine with the Pope againſt "him, and therefore he was deſirous to ſtrengthen himſelf with the Pro-"teſtant Princes in Germany; and for that he thought this Marriage was "much behoveful. But afterwards growing into Peace with one or both "of thoſe Princes, he grew ſoon weary of the Marriage, becauſe he liked "not the Woman." But then I promiſed to conſider further of theſe two Caſes. This was the End of that Day's Labour, which when at Night I had recounted with myſelf, I thought it was an audacious Part, for ſuch a one as Sir Daniel was, to teach us out of ſuch poor Grounds, both what to do, and how to do. I found by my Obſervation, that it was a ſet Match, that thus he ſhould be heard; that he was prepared for the Purpoſe; for no Man upon the ſudden, or one Day's Warning, could deliver ſo much, and ſo digeſted. And now I began to aſſure myſelf, that he did not ſhew himſelf a Judge, but was a Stickler for the Nullity. I much ſuſpected the Conſcience of the Man, knowing him reaſonably well before, both out of mine own Eſtimation of him, and out of the Judgment of my two Predeceſſors, the Lords Whitgift and Bancroft, who held him for a Man moſt corrupt. Yet the next Day I ſent unto him for his Note-Book, and I cauſed the Record of Anne of Cleve to be brought unto me. Reading over all the latter, I found not one Word tending to the preſent Caſe. Good Lord! thought I, how doth this Man deceive me! Peruſing his own Book for that of Bury, I found it to be nothing but the Pleadings of Advocates on both Sides, when about the 40th of Eliz. there was ſome Queſtion in the Common Law Courts about Bury's Land, Bury himſelf being dead many Years before. But, I ſaw more in this Book againſt the Cauſe now in his Hand, than for it; and by ſome other Writings in my Houſe, I diſcovered that Bury's Divorce, Anno 1561, was for want of his S—s; which Dr. Steward alſo, being now of Counſel for my Lady, and who formerly ſtood for Bury's Brother againſt the ſuppoſed Son, publickly acknowledged. Theſe Things made me in my Heart much diſlike the Cauſe, and procured in me a hard Opinion touching Sir Daniel Dun, who ſhould not have wronged me, being my Officer, as Dean of the Arches.

Within few Days after, the Meſſage cometh to us, that we were all to attend the King at Windſor. This accordingly was done. The Morning before the Hearing, the Lord Chamberlain in my Preſence ſpoke firſt earneſtly with the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and afterward with the Chancellor of the Dutchy, who that Day fell from us, as appeared by the few Words that he had before the King. Some few Days before that, had Sir John Bennet, by Sir William Button and Dr. Edwards been otherwiſe dealt withal, earneſtly to give Conſent to the Nullity; but that Day we dealt in it more than three Hours. His Majeſty propounding the Matter, aſked, "How Things did ſtand?" Sir Julius Cæſar ſaid, "That Sir Daniel Dun "was beſt able to ſpeak unto it." And then, ex compoſito, Sir Daniel begins, and tells a great Tale, and eſpecially inſiſteth upon Non potuit. When he had done, I anſwered him, and ſhewed the Want of Ground for that Concluſion, out of other the Earl's evident Anſwers, "That the "Non potuit was for Lack of Love, and not for Want of Ability." I challenged Sir Daniel for abuſing the King with a falſe Report, and eſpecially for his two Precedents of Bury's Caſe, and that of Anne of Cleve. Amongſt us, was divers Ways ſhewed the Inſufficiency of the Proofs;

Proofs; that the Libel was laid ſhort to the Cauſe, and the Proofs were ſhort of the Libel; that we had very many Times called upon the Counſel for my Lady, that they ſhould look that they rightly laid their Matter, and made their Proof ſtrong; that, in the End, they complained not of the Judges, when the Fault was in themſelves: (Where my Lord of Litchfield added, "That himſelf fearing the worſt, had gone to Doctors-Commons, and warned the Counſel for my Lady, that they ſhould look to it.") Among other Things there uttered, Sir Daniel Dun ſaid, "What a Diſgrace will this be to my Lord Chamberlain and his Daughter, if it ſhould not now go forward!" My Anſwer was, "They ſhould have looked to that before they did begin it: We were not the Men that ſet the Matter on Foot; if it were a Diſgrace, they put it on themſelves. But," quoth I, "muſt I, to ſave any Man from Diſgrace, ſend my Soul unto Hell, to give a Sentence whereof I ſaw no Ground? I will never do it." My Lord of London, Sir John Bennet, and Dr. Edwards, did carry themſelves well that Day, although Sir John Bennet had much Oppoſition from the King himſelf. When we ſaw the King earneſt, I fell down on my Knee, and with Tears in mine Eyes, I ſaid, "I beſeech your Majeſty, if ever I have done you any Service, whom I do ſerve with a faithful Heart, or may do you any S-rvice, rid me of this Buſineſs." I had ſaid before, "That I was the unfitteſt Man that might be, to judge of ſuch a Cauſe; I was no married Man, I was no Lawyer, and I had not had the Time, by reaſon of my infinite Buſineſſes, to read ſo much of that Matter, as other Men had." I obſerved that Day many Things in his Majeſty's Carriage of the Matter: He was earneſt, but gracious and moderate. He found Fault with the Libel, and ſaid, "That Complaints were made that we went too ſlow, but he perçeived we went too faſt." He marvelled that my Lord of Worceſter, and the Lord Knowles, were not examined as Witneſſes. He conſtantly profeſſed, "That he believed that my Lord of Eſſex was impotent for a Woman." He told us, "That ſome of the Earl's Friends had put a Woman to him, and he would not touch her." His Majeſty ſaid, "That the Earl was once purpoſed to have gone to Poland, to have tried whether he might be unwitched." To which Things my Reply was, "I would to God we might ſee theſe Things legally proved. That his Majeſty much diſliked that Courſe, and therefore he ſet the Courſe now in Proſecution; and therefore if there were any Error in it, he had done the Lord Chamberlain Wrong, and he muſt take it upon him." In Sum, I found his Majeſty much troubled what to do, as I gathered, eſpecially by theſe Words, "If my Lord of Canterbury, and my Lord of London, have a Negative Voice, we muſt either begin all again, and have a new Libel, or we muſt have a new Commiſſion, and put other Adjuncts." The Concluſion from his Majeſty was, That we ſhould all meet at Lambeth on the Morrow, and if we could unanimouſly conſent, then go to the Sentence; if not, we ſhould put it off unto another Day, and certify him of it, and ſo farther underſtand his Pleaſure. When the King was riſen from his Chair, he fell to inveighing againſt theſe Marryings of young Couples, before they be acquainted one with another. He told us the Inconvenience of it, how he knew in Scotland a Father who married his only Child to a Man againſt her Will: That ſhe withſtood it; yet her Father forced her to marry him: That being gone Home with her Huſband, after a very few Days ſhe run away from him: That her Father jerked her, and ſent her Home again: That not long after, ſhe poiſoned her Huſband, and was burnt for it, while the King was in Scotland. After his Majeſty's going out, I followed him, and told him, I evidently perceived, that it was in the Earl of Eſſex, Vitium Animi non Corporis. His Majeſty ſwore he thought ſo. There paſſed ſome other Speech from the King to me, touching his own lying with the Queen the firſt Night that he married her. But at the laſt, I kiſſed his Hand and departed. After I was gone, the Lord Chamberlain ſpeaking ſomewhat againſt me, the King replied, "The Archbiſhop hath ſo adjured me to be rid of this Matter, that I cannot tell what to ſay to him." This did Sir Julius Cæſar tell me that Day at Dinner, at Eaton-College, letting me know, that the King found no Fault with me. But afterward, the King coming to Dinner, after his Meat had ſtayed for him on the Table more than a Quarter of an Hour, he ſate him down in his Chair, and caſting his Leg over one Side of it, he eat no Meat for a great Space of Time, neither ſaid he any Word, but ſat muſing to himſelf; which every Man obſerved. And it was given out by ſome in the Court, that I was gone away in the King's Diſpleaſure. Within ſome few Days after, it was alſo more Ways than one brought credibly to my Ears, That the Archbiſhop and my Lord of London ſhould be hereafter kept to their Spiritualities, and ſhould meddle no more in Temporal Matters: And within a while it came ſo far, as that they ſhould have their Temporalities taken from them. Sir John Bennet was at Windſor moved by Sir Thomas Lake in the Lord Fenton's Name, and afterwards by the Lord Fenton himſelf, That he ſhould alter his Opinion, and make his Peace with the King, for his Majeſty was not well pleaſed with him.

As I came Homeward from Windſor in my Coach, and all that ſame Night, two Things did run much in my Mind; the one of them was, What a ſtrange and fearful Thing it was, that his Majeſty ſhould be ſo far engaged in that Buſineſs: That he ſhould profeſs, that himſelf had ſet the Matter in that Courſe of Judgment: That the Judges ſhould be dealt withal beforehand, and, in a ſort, directed what they ſhould determine: That the like Example had not been ſeen: That his Majeſty did win himſelf much Honour in the Caſe of Sutton's Hoſpital; that notwithſtanding all Importunity, he had ſuffered the Judges to do their Conſcience. This ſtrange Moving to the contrary, did make me marvellouſly ſuſpect, that it was no direct Matter; and, as a dutiful Servant to my moſt gracious Maſter, I wiſhed in my Heart, that his Majeſty's Hand might be taken off the Buſineſs. The other Point was, that we had all this while, in our Debatings, never, or very little meddled with Points of Divinity. And I thought with myſelf, that much might be ſaid therein againſt Maleficium, and the Nullity to be pronounced thereupon verſus hanc; for out of this we could never get in all our Talking, though they would never cleave faſt to it. I therefore, having formerly revolved ſome ſuch Things in my Mind, roſe early on the Day that we were to debate Things at large, and ſet down my Mind in Writing out of ſomething in Divinity. The Copy of this appeareth. The Day after we came from Windſor, (being Tueſday) we met, and all the Forenoon we inſiſted on that which I had briefly written: But to deliver my Conſcience freely before God, I received no Kind or Shew of Satisfaction. My Lord of Ely ſat little leſs than dumb, as if he had never dreamed of any ſuch Matter. Divers of the Commiſſioners wondered at him; that he, who had ſpent ſo much Time in reading of the Canoniſts touching this Queſtion, ſhould not think upon Divinity. Briefly up and down by others ſomewhat was ſaid, but nothing to Contentment. After Dinner, Sir John Bennet propounded Reaſons out of the Law, but without any Satisfaction. I obſerved two ſpecial Points that Afternoon: The one was, that we all thought my Lord of Eſſex his Anſwer to the Libel was neither plain nor ſufficient. And now it was remembered, that my Lord of Litchfield had put to him certain Queſtions, that four Things were neceſſary to Generation; Membrum virile, Erection, Penetration, and Ejaculatio Seminis; which, although they were then ſmiled at, and ſince that Time much Sport had been made at the Court and in London about them; yet now our married Men on all Hands wiſhed that punctually his Lordſhip might have been held to give his Anſwer unto them. This inſtructed me, that the Proofs were not full. A ſecond Thing was, that when towards the Evening, I wiſhed that a Reconciliation might be laboured between my Lord and my Lady, that it ſhould beſt become us; my Lord of Ely, who from the firſt Beginning of the Proceſs had been always very ſilent, ſpake home about that, much diſliking that any ſuch thing ſhould now be ſought; that it was too late; that it might be the Cauſe of poiſoning and deſtroying one of another, to bring them together again. Well, when we could not agree upon our Concluſion, we were inforced to put all off unto a longer Day; and as the King commanded, I was to certify his Majeſty of it. I wrote a Letter to the King, praying humbly that I might be freed from the Trouble of this Cauſe, or, at leaſt, give no Sentence in it till I were a married Man, and ſo might better underſtand the Buſineſs. I incloſed alſo ſix Reaſons of Sir John Bennet's, taking Exceptions in Law againſt the Nullity. And withal I joined mine own Reaſons in Divinity, of which I ſaid in my Letter, that I knew not where to ſeek an Anſwer to them; meaning, that the Commiſſioners had given me none. Theſe Reaſons afterwards coſt me a great deal of Trouble.

The next Progreſs in this Controverſy was, that I was advertiſed, that it was his Majeſty's Pleaſure that the Cauſe ſhould be put off until the 18th of September; and withal there was brought a new Commiſſion of Adjuncts, whereinto my Lords of Winchеſter and Rocheſter were put. The Day that I perceived this, acquainting the two Chancellors of the Exchequer and Dutchy therewith, in the Gallery at Lambeth, I told them, "That I hoped now, that for my Part, I ſhould be freed from any Trouble therein farther, for I did deſire to be rid of it." They both anſwered me, "That they deſired in like Sort to be quit of the Matter." A good Buſineſs, thought I, that Nobody taketh Comfort of it, unleſs it be Sir Daniel Dun; of whom I forgot before to note, that on the Day of meeting, next after our coming from Windſor, he, with a great deal of Inſolency, challenged me for my Speech before his Majeſty the Day before. "Do not abuſe the King, Sir Daniel Dun." I remembered it was in mine own Houſe, and if I had rattled him according to his Deſerts, my Lord Chamberlain would have ſaid it had been done for his Sake; and in the Progreſs, Sir Daniel having the King's Ear, would have made Things worſe than they were; and I therefore forbore him with ſuch Patience, that ſome of the Commiſſioners told me afterwards, that they wondered how I could endure thoſe Behaviours, at the Hands of a Man of his Quality: But yet they commended me for it. Now grew I to conſider what were the Reaſons why theſe two Commiſſioners were joined to us; and therein I had many Advertiſements from divers Friends, divers Ways. We reſolved for my Lord of Winton, That it was ſuppoſed, that there was no great Amity between him and me: That when I was Dean there, there was ſome Diſagreement between us, which they ſuppoſed yet continued: That he had an old Grudge to me, for having the Archbiſhoprick, which his Lordſhip ſo much deſired. Beſides, it was ſome Tickling unto him, that his Gravity and Learning ſhould either win in the Archbiſhop, or lay ſome Blemiſh upon him, if he ſtood out. Certain it is, that Sir William Button was with him; and, doubtleſs, would tell him how acceptable this Service would be to his Majeſty. I heard of good Credit, and ſecretly, That he was put in Hope to be made a Privy Councillor; and the Fame was general, That for the Father's Labour the Son ſhould be made a Knight. It ſeemeth, at the firſt, that he had no great Fancy unto it; but being wrought upon, he conſented; ſo that he might be required by his Majeſty to be preſent. This was done by a Letter from Saliſbury, which, at his being at Lambeth, he ſhewed me; that I ſhould take Notice, that he had not come, unleſs he had been commanded. I leave him for the Time, only ſignifying, that in the Vacation, he ſent for divers Books from London, and had Dr. Steward much with him, to inform him in all Particulars. Yet I may not forget, that while he held off his Conſent, ſome hard Opinions were raiſed of him at Court; as I found by a Letter from my Lord of Litchfield to me. For there he was found Fault with, that he attended not the King at Farnham, or at Andover. And there Blame was laid, that Mr. Love, who was ſo great with my Lord of Winton, was like to get the Warden's Place at Winchеſter, Dr. Harmer being reported to be dead. Concerning the Biſhop of Rocheſter, it was well known that he had opened himſelf before the King's going in Progreſs, that he liked well of the Nullity. Coming once or twice while we were about it, he, with ſome in my Houſe, diſputed earneſtly for it. He was a great Dependant of my Lord of Litchfield. This was a Way to make him well eſteemed, and to ariſe high in Preferment. But, in Truth, he ſhould not have verified the Report which Archbiſhop Bancroft on his Death-bed gave of him, together with Butler and Carrier, to the King by a Meſſage, unleſs he did ſome ſuch Thing. When he was put into the Commiſſion, he in divers Places ſeemed to be much offended that he was made one. His Grief was, that he was ſet in Oppoſition againſt me: He would never give his Voice to it, unleſs I conſented. Theſe, and the like Things he ſpake, as elſewhere, ſo to ſome of my Servants in my Houſe at Croydon: For, under another Colour, he came three Times in the Vacation to me; but I never ſpake a Word with him about that Matter, as knowing it would be an Argument againſt me, that I laboured to draw away the King's Commiſſioners; and the End ſhewed, that I had no great Reaſon to truſt him. Beſides theſe two Adjuncts, the new Commiſſion itſelf ſeemed very ſtrange unto me. There were Eight made of the Quorum; and it was ſo laid, that if three of them, with two other, conſented, the Sentence might be given; ſo that, by the Words thereof, if ſeven had denied, five might have pronounced and prevailed. A Matter ſo uncouth, that, as I credibly heard, my Lord of Winton himſelf found much Fault therewith. Again, there was a Clauſe, Legibus, Statutis, Ordinationibus, Conſtitutionibus quibuſcunque non obſtantibus; ſo reſolved they were to have it diſpatched. Every Thing now ſtood at a Pauſe; and my Lord of Ely (who, at firſt, delivered his Judgment againſt it to Sir Henry Savile, as I heard it avowed upon good Credit; but afterwards ſaid, he was better inſtructed by the King) began to hearken what Men ſaid of the Matter, as appeared by Speech which he had with Sir John Peyton; to whom, notwithſtanding, he told ſome Things of the Inſufficiency of my Lord of Eſſex. The Weather grew fair; he hoped the Overflowing of the Iſle of Ely would ceaſe; he would go down in his Viſitation; he came and took his Leave of me, but not one Word of the Nullity.

Now was his Majeſty abroad, and I had more Leiſure to conſider of this Queſtion. I read what I could; I conferred with many Men about divers Circumſtances, ſo to inform myſelf the better. I prayed frequently to God to direct me aright. I often peruſed the Depoſitions, but I found little Satisfaction. I perceived moſt of the Lords had a great Diſlike of this Proceeding; that the better Sort of Men had generally a Deteſtation of it; that the Judges and Lawyers much condemned it. I heard many ſtrange Stories of the Lady's Carriage. Something was freely ſpoken of a Woman arraigned at Bury; and how to ſhut that up, and ſo to free the Earl, this Courſe was conſented upon.

These Things, though out of Charity I entertained not as abſolutely true, yet the Concurrence of them from ſo many, made me that I could not contemn them. Beſides, now grew the Rumour ſtrong, that a new Huſband was readily provided for her: Whereof I called to Mind the Opinion of Sir Henry Nevile, delivered to me at Windſor; and I did not forget a Speech of Overbury's, once to me in that Kind. I underſtood, that at Chriſtmas laſt, there was a Reconciliation wrought between the Earl and his Lady, howſoever it fell out. Yea, that when the Lords met at Whitehall about the Matter of Separation, there was three Times that Day a Likelihood to make them Friends; which we thought implied no Diſability of my Lord of Eſſex, even in their own Opinion. I farther underſtood, that whereas it was whiſpered among us, the Commiſſioners, That at Chriſtmas laſt, my Lord of Eſſex being in Bed with his Lady, ſhould labour a Quarter of an Hour carnally to know her, and in the End ſhould ſay, "Frankey, it will not be," and ſo kiſſed her, and bid her good Night; That this was not true; but that the Earl, the Night before his going from London, at the End of Trinity Term, ſaid, with Tears in his Eyes, "That when he went to Bed to her at Chriſtmas laſt, he had for-"given all Things as clearly as he wiſhed that God ſhould forgive him "his Sins; but when they were alone, ſhe reviled him, and miſcalled "him, terming him Cow, and Coward, and Beaſt:" And he added, "That ſhe was as bitter a Woman as any was in the World: Which "Things ſo cooled his Courage, that he was far from knowing, or "endeavouring to know her." These Matters, together with the ſmall Joy which the Commiſſioners had to deal in the Buſineſs, made me have no great Fancy unto it. On the other Side, I heard that my Lord Chamberlain, or his Followers, gave out, that what was done, was performed by the King's Direction, otherwiſe it had not been begun; and therefore, they expected that his Majeſty ſhould ſee it effected; that they reſted themſelves on him. I was much grieved that they had this Advantage on my Maſter, who being ſo engaged, as I thought, could not well go backward or forward: And, to increaſe my Sorrow, I was privately adverтiſed from Court, that his Majeſty did mean himſelf to give an Anſwer to my Reaſons above-mentioned. I heard another Way, that his Majeſty in the Progreſs wrote much with his own Hands. From another Friend I was told, That the King, with his Anſwer to the Reaſons, had written to me a ſharp Letter. Yea, by another I learned the Contents of the Letter, which was full of Sharpneſs.

These Things in the Summer kept me full of Expectation of ſome great Diſcontentment. Yet my Heart ſtill aſſured me, that I was guilty of no Wickedneſs. I found all Perſons with whom I ſpake, of my Mind, for the Diſlike of the Nullity. In many Buſineſſes to and from the King by Letters, I found nothing but well. His Majeſty ſent me Warrants for three Bucks, as formerly he had done, and with ſome Kindneſs joined.

Thus I was toſſed in my Thoughts; and in all my Troubles I had Recourſe to God in Prayer.

By this Time, the 18th of September draweth nigh, and I am informed, That my Lord of Wincheſter, the Tueſday before, was come to Town; and that beſides my Lady's Counſel, Sir Julius Cæſar, and Sir Daniel Dun, did, at St. Mary Overy's Houſe, daily attend his Lordſhip. I expected no great Good of this; only from the King I heard nothing but well. For ſome few Days before, his Majeſty had been at Whitehall, where I kiſſed his Hand, and he did not only look merrily upon me, but he gave me Promiſe of the Biſhoprick of Lincoln for my Brother, as I underſtood it. Some other Matters alſo paſſed quietly in Speech, and I found no Diſturbance. But on the 17th of September, the Day before our new Meeting at Lambeth, my Lord of Litchfield being ſent from the King, bringeth divers Papers unto me ſealed up. I opened them, and found there my Reaſons firſt; ſecondly, an Anſwer to them *; and, thirdly, a Letter, all written with the King's Hand unto me. I read them all preſently, without any Abatement, whereunto I was helped by my Foreknowledge, that ſuch Things would come. I ſaid little unto it; only I aſked my Lord of Litchfield, "Whether he knew what thoſe Papers con-"tained?" He told me, "That the King had read unto him the An-"ſwers to the Reaſons, and had given him the Letter to ſeal up into a "Paper; but in Reverence to his Majeſty, he held it not his Duty to "look into it." Growing afterward in ſome Speech of our next Day's Buſineſs, I told him plainly, "That having ſpent much Time in this "Vacation, in peruſing the Books, I could not find any where, but "eſpecially in the Anſwer of my Lord of Eſſex, that which would give "me Contentment." I read the Places, and my Lord confeſſed with me, "That there was not enough." He told me alſo, "That unleſs I "gave my Conſent to the Separation, that he would never give his." So much Reverence in him did I find both then, and divers Times before, againſt this Divorcement. At laſt he mentioned one Thing which pleaſed me wondrous well, and that was, That he ſhould call for my Lord of Eſſex again, and new examine him, upon ſome Points to be farther declared, ad informandum animum Judicis. For hence, either we ſhould know ſo much as might perſuade us to decree a Separation, or the World might be ſatisfied that we had no Reaſon for it. These Things thus ſettled, his Lordſhip ſeparateth. Then I withdrew myſelf to my Study, and read over again and again the Papers from the King. I found them very ſharp, and perceived by the Time that they arrived unto me, that they were detained till that Day, that I might be overwhelmed with them on the ſudden, and have no Time to deliberate, before we were to come the ſecond Time to ſit in Judgment. These Things did much trouble me, ſo that I did ſleep but a little that Night. I revolved many Things, and much Tumbling I had in my Mind. It grieved me infinitely, that the King ſhould make himſelf a Party therein; that ſome Unthankfulneſs, and other Matters, were little leſs than Reproaches unto me: Methought, my faithful Heart to my Maſter deſerved no ſuch Sharpneſs. I deviſed how I might give the King Contentment, and it was ſome Comfort to me, that we thought upon a Courſe of new examining my Lord of Eſſex. But as Things ſtood, I could not force my Conſcience, which cried upon me, "That it was an odious Thing to GOD and Men, to give ſuch a "Sentence, without better Warrant." I here caſt what might befal to the Church in my Diſgrace; how Papiſts would ſcorn at it; how it might be my own Ruin, and that divers Ways; a Hazard to my Friends, and to the Commiſſioners which were of my Mind; how my Lord of London had a Wife and Children, which might all be overthrown at one Blow. But after Midnight Sleeping, towards the Morning, I conſidered on the other Side, That my Conſcience was more to me than all the World; that it was a fearful Thing, in Place of Judgment, to give a Sentence againſt mine own Heart; that Olivarius, the Chancellor of France, upon ſuch an Occaſion, grew mad, and died in it; that the Manner of our Sentence muſt be, Solum Deum præ oculis habentes, à rei veritate inſpecta: All which, and the like Meditations, did much preponderate with me. Then I ſlept again, and now riſing, I found my Heart much ſettled, to perſiſt in that which I held to be Truth. I poured out earneſtly my Prayers to God, and was now ſtrongly reſolved to leave all to God, remembering, That he had preſerved me from my Mother's Womb; that he had from Time to Time rid me out of all my Troubles; that his Power was the ſame ſtill; that he would never forſake me, if I turned not from him. I forgot not, "That the Hearts of Kings were "in the Hand of the Lord;" that I had Experience of the Graciouſneſs, both of GOD and the King, the Year before; when ſtanding earneſtly in a good Cauſe, that Prince Henry ſhould not marry a Papiſt, I received ſome ſharp Words from the King for my Labour; but the next Day his Majeſty uſed me very kindly again. To this I added, That Poverty, Impriſonment, Death itſelf, were Things contemptible to a reſolved Mind: That ſome of my Predeceſſors, as Archbiſhop Cranmer, and my Lord Grindal, had given good Examples of theſe Sufferings, and they were recorded in the Catalogue of the Righteous. These Thoughts thus revolved, I read again the Letter from the King, and drawing out into a Paper all the ſharp Words, I conſidered them again and again, and methought they were not altogether ſo bitter as I apprehended them; that they were wrung from his Majeſty by my Lord Chamberlain's Importunity; that my Maſter had deſerved at my Hands, that I ſhould bear patiently twenty Times more, and that all was nothing, ſo the Cleanneſs of my Conſcience might be preſerved. With theſe Reſolutions on the Saturday I came to Lambeth, where I met with the News of Overbury's Death, and the Sound of ſome fearful Apprehenſions thereupon bruited about the City. I made Trial of my Lord of London's Conſtancy, telling him ante tidendum, ante tadendum. I found him moſt reſolved, avowing unto me, "That if he ſhould pronounce for the Diſſolution of the Marriage, he "thought the Devil would that Night fetch away his Soul." Yea, he was earneſt on me to perſiſt where I began, telling me, "That the Eyes "of the whole Church of England were upon me, and expected of me, "that I ſhould ſhew myſelf a worthy Man." At laſt we came to ſit, where my Lords of Wincheſter and Rocheſter took their Places. The Commiſſion was read, the Fact, and Manner of the Proceſs was opened; and nothing notable done, ſaving that my Lord of London propoſing, that it was fit that my Lord of Eſſex ſhould be called to explain himſelf farther, for the fiſhing out of the Truth. All the Commiſſioners moſt willingly aſſented thereunto (yea, my Lords of Wincheſter and Rocheſter expreſsly); ſaving Sir Julius Cæſar, who ſoftly declared his Diſlike thereof, in my Hearing. When the Court was riſen, I ſpake with my Lord of Litchfield, and not thinking fit to return any thing to the King in Writing, I prayed him to acquaint his Majeſty how Things ſtood; and to tell him, that upon this Courſe of new calling my Lord of Eſſex, I hoped in the End, we ſhould give his Majeſty Satisfaction. The Sunday I ſpent at Croydon, and preached on that Text of Chriſt's raiſing the Widow's Son of Naim, to the great Comfort of my own Heart. That Day I conferred with a Friend, and ſettled ſome Courſes, if any Trouble ſhould befal unto me. I was alſo by a good Friend informed, that my Lord of Eſſex, on that Sunday Morning, having five or ſix Captains and Gentlemen of Worth in his Chamber, and Speech being made of his Inability, roſe out of his Bed, and taking up his Shirt,

* See State Trials, Vol. I. p. 319, 331, for the Archbiſhop's Reaſons, and the King's Anſwer to them: But the King's Letter to the Archbiſhop is there omitted; but here inſerted, after the Archbiſhop's intended Speech, at the End of this Caſe.

Shirt, did shew to them all so able and extraordinarily sufficient Matter, that they all cried out Shame of his Lady, and said, That if the Ladies of the Court knew as much as they knew, they would tread her to Death.

On the Monday we met at Lambeth again, and Information was given on the Part of my Lady. These Things passed quietly. When the Court was risen, my Lord of Litchfield told me, That he had made his Majesty acquainted with our Proposition on Saturday; but that his Majesty was strongly against it, my Lord of Essex should any more be called, and that by no Means he would endure it, for that peradventure the said Earl, either being provoked by the late Challenge between him and Mr. Henry Howard, or otherwise instigated by the Earl of Southampton, might speak somewhat which might marr the Business. This made me still suspect that all was not right; and I replied to my Lord, "If that be denied us, and we have no "farther Proof, I shall never give Sentence for the Nullity: As good de- "clare my Mind at first, as at last, and I pray you so acquaint his Majesty." When I went homeward, I much revolved this in my Heart, thinking, Good Lord! What a Case is this? Shall any Truth be kept from us? Are they afraid to have all out? Do they only look to attain their own Ends, and care not how our Consciences be entangled and ensnared? On the Wednesday we met again, and now Dr. James is come to us, and by and bye cometh in my Lord of Ely, who, as it seemed, had meant to have kept him away, but the King sent an express Messenger for him, requiring him, by Letter, to be there on the Tuesday Night. Now are we plena Curia. Before we sate down, Sir Thomas Lake delivereth a Message unto me from the King, that his Majesty desired a speedy End of this Business; that it had hung long, and the World was in Expectation of it; that the Term grew on, which would be full of Businesses: That his Majesty on Monday was to go to Windsor to meet the Queen, and my Lord Chamberlain with him; that therefore he would have us to fall close to our Work, not to trouble ourselves on the Morrow to come see the King, who would come late to Whitehall, because some Ceremonies were to be performed, as upon the last Day of Hunting; that we should not attend his Majesty till Friday, but that the Sentence must be given on Saturday. My Answer was publickly, "That there should be no Stay in me, and that therefore on the Morrow "we would sit Forenoon and Afternoon, if the Commissioners so pleased; "and if they thought good, I would not refuse to sit until Midnight." But in mine own Heart I perceived, that all the Care was, that the Matter might be dispatched before the Queen spake with the King, whom they supposed not to wish well to the Business. We go to our Court, and Sir Thomas Lake stayed to hear the Information on my Lord's Part. It was strange to see how my Lord of Winchester carried himself that Day, partly to play his Prizes before Sir Thomas Lake, who might make Report of it to his Fame, and partly to shew his Ludimagisterial Disposition. He snapped up my Lord's Counsel, that they could not speak a Word, but he catched it before it was out. "I know what "you will say," when indeed he knew not, neither was it any such Matter as he imagined. God Almighty will tell you a Tale for that; "I tell you, Doctor Bennet; I have as much Law as you, I "am as good a Lawyer as you are." He fell divers Times on my Lord of London personally, and would needs know of him openly, "How many "Times in a Year a Man was bound carnally to know his Wife?" In a Word, with Scoffs, and imperious Behaviour, he played the Advocate all that Day, to the great Offence of the Standers-by, so that it was publickly spoke of in London, which, I think, came to his Ears; so that ever afterward he carried himself more tractable. I was forced to bear it, because of avoiding new Complaints.

The Point most observable that Day, was, that both my Lord of Winchester, and my Lord of Ely, did deny Maleficiation, so that by no Means they would have this Question to proceed in that Nature, which I openly did thank them for, and bound it upon them, before all the Commissioners and Standers-by, telling them, "That the same was my Opinion." But I asked my Lord of Winchester, who sat by me, "What he then held it to be?" He told me privately, "That he held it to be a natural Impotency, which "was before the Marriage." I asked him, "What that might be, and "whence he gathered it?" He answered, "I have heard divers Parti- "culars, which are enough to persuade me, if they be true." "Yea, my "Lord," said I, "if they be true, I have heard as many to the contrary. "I wish that we might examine whether they be true or no; that were fair "Proceeding. It is my Grief that it is not permitted unto us, to try "whether all these Matters be so or not. This might satisfy a Man's "Conscience." So we parted that Night.

On the Thursday at Ten of the Clock, we met in Lambeth-Hall, where my Lady's Counsel took on them to answer some Scruples objected by Dr. Ferrand. But Dr. Martin, when Nobody spake of it, fell to wipe away that Objection, that my Lord had not sworn, cum septima manu. Upon his Speech, the Commissioners took hold of it, and it then being urged strongly, my Lady's Counsel stood at first, as if they had been blasted with Lightning. Afterward they grew extreme angry with Dr. Martin, that he had proposed it; but the Issue was, there could no Answer be given unto it; but in the Sight of all the Standers-by, this was broke off with Shame and Confusion of Faces. We dined not that Day; but about One or Two of the Clock we withdrew ourselves privately into the Parlour, I had thought there to have had Dr. Edwards, and the rest who liked not of the Nullity, to propound their Doubts, and so in Order; and last of all, I would have spoken. But there I found a contrary Course resolved, which my Lord of Winchester seemed much to dislike. But my Lord of Litchfield, Sir Julius Cæsar, and Sir Daniel Dun, had set the Clock, and they must have their Will. The six Reasons are produced, which Sir John Bennet had delivered the Day after we came from Windsor, and the Copy whereof was by me sent to the King. All these must in their Order be debated. One was about the Unperfectness of the Libel, in which we all received Satisfaction, that the Libel was well to so much Purpose as now they declared they would have it. The other five, my Lord of London, Sir John Bennet, Dr. James, and Dr. Edwards, maintained: I allowed of three of them absolutely; and the other two, that was Inspection of my Lord's Body, and a Time to be assigned by the Judge, to try whether they might carnally know one another, I held to be fit, when those Reasons were proposed; but now such Flames and Quarrels were arisen, I thought not amiss now to be forborne. My Lord of Litchfield, with a Pen, did note what every Man resolved, but principally my Words, with a Purpose to shew them to the King, as I conceived, and afterwards I found it to be so. I was desirous therefore, that his Majesty might see I was not obstinate, but settled to yield to Reason. And again, I supposed that this Candour of mine would make some of them yield to us, where they saw there was unevitable Truth. But I found it far otherwise; for our Afternoon's Work was, that they gave shuffling and shifting Answers to the Objections, such as themselves had studied all the Vacation; but no Care was, whether they were true and satisfactory, or not. And to what Sir Daniel proposed, all seven of them consented, without Sticking or Scruple, so that I might imagine it was a set Play. Upon the first Scruple debating, Sir Julius Cæsar finding the Difference of Opinions, and that our Lawyers stuck strongly unto it, "Let us," saith he, "put it to the Question, and let the major Part of "Voices determine it." When I saw this to be the Proceeding, the Lord, thought I, deliver me from such Judges! But yet, observing their Manner, I possessed my Soul in Patience. When it grew to be dark, that the King might understand that I was willing to allow Time to all that might be said, I remembered Sir John Bennet to read the Sentence of the Rota Romana, where, in the Pope's own Consistory, about the Year 1585, a Judgment was reversed which an Archbishop in Spain had given for a Nullity, in a Case being ours altogether, because, after the triennial Cohabitation, he had not assigned a Time for the married Couple to make Trial again, and to use Fasting and Prayer. This Repeal was read at large, and so was another of the Rota, in the same Kind. But both these were slighted, as Matters of nothing, and so I think had St. Paul been, if he had been there. I urged that of Alexander III. That even in France itself, no Nullity had been allowed; but that it was Consuetudo generalis Ecclesiæ Gallicanæ; and that Ecclesia Romana did know or practise no such Thing. This was slighted like the former, and I perceived it was but in vain to speak to them, for they were resolved, and be it good, or be it bad, the Matter should be done.

On the Friday Morning I went to Whitehall, and looking somewhat heavily, the King cometh to me, and to my Lord Chancellor, and offereth us both his Hand to kiss. He might perceive by my Countenance that I was not a little troubled, and that was perceived by divers of the Lords, who privately let me know their Minds, that we had a foul and strange Matter in Hand at Lambeth. At last, the King takes me aside, and after propounding three or four Businesses, walking, he took me to the Window, and asked me, "How that great Cause did go forward?" I told his Majesty, "That I had no Liking of it; that I had received a Letter and Writ- "ing from him which very much troubled me, for I knew myself to be "his dutiful Servant, and had not deserved ill of him; that it was nothing "to me whether she remained Wife to the Earl of Essex, or were married "to another Man; but that I might not give Sentence where I saw no "Proof; that I had lived fifty-one Years, almost, and had my Conscience "uncorrupted in Judgment; that I knew not how soon I was to be call- "ed before God, and I was loath, against that Time, to give a Wound "to mine own Soul; that all my Grief was, that his Majesty's Hand was "in it; that for other Men I cared not; that I chose rather to die an ho- "nest Man than a wise Man; that he must never afterward expect true "Service of me, for how could I be true to him, who was false unto God? "That if he marked it well, this was no Time to disgrace his good Ser- "vants:" I told him, "That if his Majesty pleased to let the Matter "alone, as he did all other Causes, I would make good my Part against "all England, on the Peril of my Head." The King answered, "That I "would have no Lawyers." I replied, "Yes, enough, there is not an "honest Lawyer in England that would not be on my Side." His Majesty asked me, "Whether the rest of the Commissioners, Yesterday, did not "persuade me?" I told him, "No; but their Dealing rather drove me "the contrary Way. For (said I) I came thither ingenuously to yield to "any Truth that should be shewed me; but they, on the contrary Part, "in a factious Course went wholly together, and what one said, another "said, be it well, or be it ill, without any Scruple." To my Speech, "That it was an Example that never had been in England;" the King said, "Yes, Bury's Case." I beseeched his Majesty, "That he would not "believe that Cause to be any such Matter; for if he would pardon me, it "should not be long before that I would shew, that his Separation was "for lack of his S---s." In this debating, the King was very desirous to know, what should be the Reasons whereupon I stood, that I might have Satisfaction. My Answer was, "That when I was in Place of Judg- "ment, I would not conceal the Reasons of my Sentence, but it was to "no Purpose to speak them now; it would but put his Majesty to a new "Trouble to hear them, and then some Man must answer them, who "looked to his own End, and to make a plausible Answer, which would "not content me, without Ground of Truth." A great Part of the Time, that I had this Speech with the King, my Eyes were full of Tears, which I saw much moved my gracious Master, and especially my earnest Desire, "That I might do my Conscience." I perceived the King was much overcome by this my honest Dealing: And then, whilst his Majesty went to speak with my Lord Privy-Seal, and my Lord Chamberlain, who stood all this while at the farther End of the Gallery; and to whom, I conceived, the King told much of that which I had spoken; I went my ways to Lambeth, to Dinner. Now grew I confident to do my Conscience right, whatsoever came of it. That Day I dined privately; but yet my Lord Bishop of Bath was with me, whom when I had acquainted with so much of the Cause as I thought fit, I received no Discouragement from him. My Heart was much eased, and now I thought I should no more be troubled. Yet between Three and Four o'Clock, after Dinner, my Lord of Litchfield cometh to me from the King, and bringeth a written Treatise upon the present Argument, which was the Work of a Scotchman, I know not who. I received it, and promised that Night to read it; as indeed I did, riding in my Coach to Croydon; for thither I thought fit to withdraw myself, though it were late, for avoiding of more Perturbation. This Treatise no way pleased me; but I thought it the Work of some hungry Fellow, who lacked twenty Shillings to buy Food to his Belly. Here, finding it the Day of the End of my Quarter, I settled much of my domestic Business. I forgot not to commend myself, and the whole Cause, to

God,

God by Prayer. I meditated many Things in my Bed: In the Morning I roſe early, and before Day, in my Study, I ſet down ſome Heads, what I would ſpeak unto. Then went I early to Lambeth, and there ſupplied my brief Notes, digeſting my Matter of Sentence into Order; being reſolved to ſpeak large, and Home to the Cauſe, without Touch of any Perſon more than I muſt needs. By this Time moſt of the Commiſſioners were come. I ſent for my Lord of London, Sir John Bennet, Dr. James, and Dr. Edwards, ſingly and ſeverally into my Study: I required them, before God, not to ſpeak any Thing for Reſpect to me, but to do that, which in their Learning and Conſcience they thought to be juſt, and to ſpeak that intrepid, without Blemiſh to any Man, but ſoundly to the Matter. I found them all avowing, That in their Souls, they found no Warrant for the Nullity. I then wiſhed ſeverally, Dr. James and Dr. Edwards, to deliver their Sentence, with ſome Reaſons adjoined, not many, but of the ſtrongeſt. I told Sir John Bennet, that this Day I expected he ſhould ſhew himſelf a worthy Man, that he ſhould deliver his Judgment per extenſum; that they had laboured to blemiſh his Skill, and to ſlight his Learning eſpecially; therefore, both for his Conſcience and his Credit, he ſhould ſhew what was in him, to maintain an honeſt Cauſe. If Sir Daniel Dun, and Sir Julius Cæſar, who came after him, ſhould beſpatter him in their Choler, or lay any Imputation upon him, he ſhould find that ſome of us would take it off him. To my Lord of London, I ſaid, "We have three that ſpeak firſt, who, I truſt, will lay ſuch a Foundation in the Hearts of the Hearers, as ſhall not be removed. But the other Side have this Advantage over us, they are ſeven of them, Lawyers and Biſhops, to anſwer what our three have ſaid; and, perhaps, with weak Men, ſuch a Stream of ſuch Perſons may much prevail: But let not that diſmay you, my Lord, only take this Courſe: Deliver, firſt, your own Meditations; and then, having taken with your Pen ſome of the Abſurdities, which, in the Sentence, ſome of them will deliver, blaſt thoſe, and let the Auditors ſee, that by you the Stream is turned. Then leave it to me, and I doubt not, in Almighty God, but to batter their Nullity to Duſt: That though they have it by the major Part of Voices, yet the World ſhall ſee what the Cauſe is, and they ſhall have little Comfort by it. I am very well provided; I am no way afraid; and you ſhall ſee I will not be Tongue-tied." So confident was I in the Honeſty of the Cauſe, and in the Helps of Almighty God, that I was not now afraid of ten thouſands of People; but did long to be at the Buſineſs, as the Lord truly knoweth.

When now I was alone, revolving my Meditations, Sir Julius Cæſar cometh into my Study to me, telleth me, "That he wondered that my Lord of Wincheſter was not come; that it was even Ten o'Clock; that therefore it was fit, that the Hour ſhould be continued from Ten to Twelve." I aſſented thereto; and by ſome of the Commiſſioners the Time was prorogued. Then cometh in Sir Thomas Lake, with a Meſſage from the King, which he muſt not deliver till all the Commiſſioners were come together. So he was forced to ſtay. Between Ten and Eleven cometh in my Lord of Wincheſter; who, as afterwards found, had been all the Morning at the Court. I told him, "We had ſtayed for him two Hours and a Half." His Lordſhip ſlightly excuſed it. Then, in the Gallery, Sir Thomas Lake told us, "That his Majeſty had ſent him unto us, to deliver two Things." The one was, "That in our Sentence we ſhould take heed of gauling of any Perſon." My Anſwer was, "That from the Beginning of this Proceſs, we had ever been wary not to offend in that Kind; and that he ſhould be much to blame, who, in the Concluſion, would tranſgreſs that Way." And ſo ſaid the reſt. The other was, "That we ſhould not in any long Manner, but compendiouſly, deliver what we had to ſay." I prayed Sir Thomas Lake to explain that farther, whether we were only to ſay Yea or No, and no more: For I would obey the King's Commandment.

Tu, Regina, jube, mihi juſſa capeſſere fas eſt.

He anſwered, "That he could not ſay ſo, but that we were to ſpeak briefly." "Yea, but ſaid Sir Julius Cæſar, I know the King's Mind; for I was Yeſterday with him, and he told me, that he expected we ſhould go no farther than Yea or Nay, for of Reaſons there would be no End. Yea, ſaith he, the King told me he was promiſed ſo much." "By whom?" ſaid I. "I think, quoth he, by your Grace." "Not ſo," ſaid I: But I ſaid, indeed, "Let every Man deliver his own Conſcience, I will not perturb the Sentence. No more indeed will I." Then he replied, "I know the King expecteth we ſhould ſay no more, than I do like this Sentence, or, I do not like it. And that you know, Sir Daniel Dun, is the Manner of the Delegates, and not to go farther." "It is ſo," ſaith Sir Daniel. Upon this the Biſhops all ſaid, "We were beſt to proceed in that Faſhion." To which I replied, "I will not be wilful; but if it be agreed upon, and it be the King's Pleaſure, I will obey. But look you to it; for if any Man give a Reaſon, I am no more bound than he, but that I will return the Reaſon of my Opinion and Judgment." They all ſaid, they would be obſervant of it. Thus Sir Thomas Lake was diſmiſſed. Then we called for the Sentences on both Sides, which the Counſel had ready. They diſliked that which was abſolutory of the Earl of Eſſex, and we approved it. We found Fault with the other Sentence, Annullatory, both for the whole, and becauſe ſome Parts in it, in our Judgment, were apparently falſe. But they perſiſted in their Intention. So we went into the Hall, where myſelf, my Lord of London, Sir John Bennet, Dr. James, and Dr. Edwards, freed my Lord of Eſſex. The Biſhops of Winton, Ely, Litchfield, and Rocheſter, together with the two Chancellors, and Sir Daniel Dun, pronounced for the Nullity, and ſubſcribed the Sentence, my Lord of Winton pronouncing it. We perceived that they were afraid we ſhould at large ſpeak our Reaſons openly, being the laſt who were to ſpeak.

The three Biſhops of Winton, Ely, and Litchfield, went immediately to the Court, hoping to receive great Thanks for their Service, but they waited a full Hour ere they could ſpeak with the King; however, they ſped afterward. And we were glad that we were freed of the Trouble. And now, I, who would not have given the Sentence for all the Gold in India, do expect God's Pleaſure, what will become of this Buſineſs hereafter, and ſubmit myſelf to God's Providence, who ever preſerveth thoſe that truſt in him.

"THIS Narration is wholly written with mine own Hand, and was finiſhed the ſecond of October, 1613, being the eighth Day after the giving of the Sentence. And I proteſt before Almighty God, that I have not willingly written any Untruth therein: But have delivered all Things fairly, to the beſt of my Underſtanding; helping myſelf with ſuch Memorials and Notes as I took from Time to Time, that if there were Occaſion, I might thus at large ſet down the Truth to Poſterity, when this Caſe ſhall be rung from Rome Gates, or the Fact hereafter be queſtioned."

GEORGE Canterbury.

Some obſervable Things, ſince September 25, 1613, when the Sentence was given in the Cauſe of the EARL of ESSEX, continued unto the Day of the Marriage, December 26, 1613.

THE Sentence being given for the Nullity, the Minds of Men in their ſeveral Places were wonderfully diſtracted, and every one ſpake according to their Fancies. But for the moſt Part there was a Deteſtation of the Thing, and a great Diſlike of thoſe that gave the Sentence, which was expreſſed by all Courſes that Men durſt adventure upon. On the other Side, there was a ſtrange Applauding and Commending of thoſe who withſtood the Separation; and from all Parts a Teſtimony came unto them, that they had done like honeſt Men, albeit the only Scope which they aimed at, was the Diſcharge of their Conſcience, and not vain popular Applauſe. The Archbiſhop, the Day after the Sentence, went to the Court, to Whitehall, and waited on the King to Chapel, ſtanding alſo by him in the Cloſet, where he was ſtrangely looked on by the King, as he was alſo by ſome of the Lords; but nothing being ſaid unto him, he took no Notice of it, but bore all patiently. This Strangeneſs of the King held on at Hampton Court, and elſewhere; and it came to the Archbiſhop's Ear, that the King ſpake divers Times hardly of him, but much magnified them of the Affirmative Part, and eſpecially my Lord of Wincheſter, as the worthieſt Man in the Kingdom. Some Things were done alſo in Recompence to divers of them; as Sir Julius Cæſar's Son was made a Knight, my Lord of Winton's Son alſo had the ſame Reward, which ſome merry Fellow blighted with the Name of Sir Nullity Bilſon; and the Biſhop of Litchfield muſt remove to Lincoln; and as for Litchfield, it muſt be beſtowed on Mr. Dean of St. Paul's, that ſo Doctor Cary might be preferred to the Deanery of Paul's, for which it was generally ſuppoſed he ſhould pay well. But now it run current, that the Archbiſhop muſt no more have to do with naming any to Church-Livings, but ſome Lords in Court ſhould diſpoſe of all; and principally it muſt be provided, that Dr. Abbot muſt never be preferred, no, not ſo much as to Litchfield, ſo far was he from Lincoln, which was formerly promiſed unto him. Theſe Things grew deteſtable to the People, who feared that even Religion would ſmart for it; but the Parties moſt maligned were ſilent and patient, expecting God's Leiſure, and Malice enough from ſome other Men. The firſt Thing of Bitterneſs that appeared, was a Letter from Royſton, under the King's Hand and Signet, directed to the Commiſſioners in the former Sentence, but brought to the Archbiſhop about three Weeks after the Sentence. This was a moſt ſharp Letter, complaining that they of the Negative Part, for ſo they were ſtiled, had hindered the Act to be made upon the Sentence; had ſolemnly proteſted againſt that which was done; had given unto themſelves other Titles than were in the King's Commiſſion; had glorified themſelves in that which was done; by which they laid an Imputation upon the King's Conſcience, who had declared himſelf for the Divorce, and other Things of the like Nature. This Letter being read to the Commiſſioners, the Archbiſhop ſaid, That he knew not what it meant; for he underſtood of no Man that proteſted, nor knew nothing of any Man's arrogating of Titles to him, or glorifying himſelf: And as for the Act, he ſuppoſed it to be made up in common Form, and never heard aught to the contrary, neither meddled with any Thing therein, but left it to the Regiſter, and what he had done with it, he could not tell. Furthermore, he aſked all the Commiſſioners particularly, if they knew what this meant, or if any of them were able to charge thoſe of the Negative with the Points quarrelled at; who all, with one Conſent, denied that they could, and expreſsly averred, that there was no ſuch Thing done at the Time of the Sentence as had been complained upon. When ſtanding thus in Admiration, Sir Daniel Dun took upon him to underſtand the Matter, and ſaid, That if the Regiſter were called, it would appear there was ſomething in it. Barker, the Regiſter, is ſent for, and being demanded whether he had made up the Act, he ſaid, that he had drawn it up in a Form that he liked, but ſome other of the Commiſſioners did diſlike it. And thereupon he ſhewed two Forms, the one more large, the other more brief; but both of them having in it, that the Archbiſhop, and the reſt of the Negative Party, proteſted againſt the Sentence. Here every Man wondered at him, out of what Ground he ſhould do this; and all the Commiſſioners, with one Conſent, very much rebuked him, profeſſing that there was no ſuch Proteſtation uſed. For the reſt of the Charge in the King's Letter, Barker freed all in all Things, ſave only Dr. Edwards, who was abſent by reaſon of his ſore Eyes. The Archbiſhop, upon this, deſired the Commiſſioners to ſuſpend their Judgment touching Dr. Edwards, till he might anſwer for himſelf; ſaying, That Honour, Juſtice, and Charity, required ſo much in his Behalf; and adding withal, That he doubted not but it would prove ſome miſtaking of the Regiſter's Part, to whom it was apparent that ſmall Credit was to be given, ſince he had ſo groſsly ſet down of them, that they proteſted, when all the Commiſſioners could witneſs the contrary. Moreover, he deſired Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Sir Daniel Dun, to certify the Lord Chamberlain, how free and innocent from thoſe Aſperſions the reſt were found, and that from Top to Toe it was nothing but Miſpriſion. Before this Truth was diſcovered, it was known that a Gentleman of the Earl of Northampton's had ſaid to Sir John Leviſon, and that, as from his Lordſhip, "That there was ſomething deſcried, which would break the Archbiſhop's Back:" Such Account was made of this Buſineſs.

Thus Things paſſed ſilently until the next Week, when, upon the Thurſday, being High Commiſſion Day, Dr. Edwards being amended, repaired to Lambeth. His Coming was watched; and then was delivered to the Archbiſhop a ſecond Letter from the King, commending the Concurrence

rence of all to the Act, to be made up in common Form; but requiring the Commiſſioners to convene Dr. Edwards and the Regiſter before them, and to charge them with all the fore-remembered Matters, and to learn where the Fault did lie. It was alſo commanded, that they ſhould require the ſaid Doctor and Regiſter, to ſet down in Writing what had paſſed between them; and if it were found that Dr. Edwards were to blame, he ſhould be ſuſpended till the King's Pleaſure were farther known.

Theſe Things are fallen upon; and Dr. Edwards ſhewed that the Regiſter had wronged him, and that no Part of the Accuſation was true, in modo et forma, appealing to the Commiſſioners, what Faith might be given to Barker conteſting againſt him; when it had been manifeſtly proved, that he had forged the Matter of Proteſtation againſt my Lord of Canterbury, my Lord of London, and the reſt. Time is aſſigned to them to deliver in their Writings; and accordingly, about two Days after, Dr. Edwards bringeth to the Archbiſhop his Anſwer, denying the Points whereon he was accuſed. But Barker brought nothing till a Fortnight after; and then, by Candle-light, when the High Commiſſion was riſen, and the Commiſſioners were departed, he delivereth a long Writing to the Archbiſhop, who could not read it that Night; but reproved him for detaining it ſo long.

On the Morrow, my Lord of Canterbury peruſed this Declaration; and as he found it to be uncertainly and diffidently ſet down for ſome other Circumſtances, ſo he diſcovered there one Thing much to be obſerved, and that was, that Barker delivered, That ſome few Days after the Sentence, the Lord Chamberlain ſent for him, finding Fault that the Act was not made up. And there Speech was, That ſome deſired to have their Titles put in, as well as the Titles of others; and for that, Barker named Sir John Bennet. Whereunto the Lord Chamberlain ſaid, "I know no "Title that he hath:" "Yes, ſaid Barker, he is Judge of the Prerogative Court of Canterbury." But Barker concludeth the Narration, That himſelf finding that he had named Sir John Bennet unjuſtly, therefore was in Mind to excuſe him, and was about to ſay, that he had done him Wrong; but the Lord Chamberlain was ſo angry, that he could not bring it forth; but went his Way, leaving the Lord in that Opinion.

By this it was deſcried, that in the firſt Letter Sir John Bennet was aimed at, as well as Dr. Edwards, to put ſome Diſgrace upon him, which made Men wondrouſly marvel at the vindicative Mind of ſome Men, who ſought for an Occaſion to do other Men Diſgrace. The End of the Matter was, That no Man could be touched; and therefore the Archbiſhop, taking Sir Julius Cæſar with him, acquainted the King (who was now returned from Royſton) with the State of the whole Matter; informing his Majeſty, that Fault fell on no Man ſave the Regiſter; and therefore, if his Highneſs were pleaſed to have him puniſhed, it might be ſo: But for the Thing itſelf, ſince the Report was more than there was Cauſe, Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer ſaid, It was better to let it die, and ſtir in it no further. To this the King aſſented, being not willing that any Puniſhment ſhould be laid on the Regiſter; whereby it appeared, that the Intendment was, in the ſtirring of theſe Coals, to have burnt ſome greater Perſons than Barker, the Regiſter.

All this while it was confidently given out, That becauſe the Sentence had been oppoſed, there ſhould a Book be written in the Defence of it; and one while it ſhould be by a Divine, and that ſometimes was my Lord of Winton, and ſometimes my Lord of Ely; and it was ſaid, they were earneſtly about it: Another while, it ſhould be by a Civilian, and then Sir Daniel Dun muſt do it: But at other Times it muſt be by a Scotchman, who had written ſomewhat of that Argument before the Sentence; and other while, two Scotchmen muſt join together about it: And to make the Thing the more probable, the Lord Felton ſent to the Archbiſhop for the Copy of the Scotchman's Writing, which was ſent unto him; and after copying of it out, it was returned to my Lord of Canterbury again. This Speech of a Book continued about nine Weeks in all; but at laſt Dr. Stuart, and Dr. Bird, were ſent for to the Lord Chamberlain, and their Judgment was aſked concerning that Point. Their Advice was, That it ſhould by no means be meddled withal, but that Things ſhould die of themſelves: But no Queſtioning by Writing; for ſo it might go on to the World's End: For one Book might breed another; and ſo, they whom it concerned ſhould never be in reſt. This was reſolved on; and afterwards there was no more Speech of Writing, ſaving only faintingly and whiſperingly, but nothing to the Purpoſe. It ſeemed that the Commiſſioners who were for the Nullity had enough of it, and deſired no more to bring themſelves on the Stage, being ſo by all Men exclaimed upon for that which they had done.

The Biſhop of Winton, after the Sentence, went down with great Jollity, full of Hope and Glory; but within a while after, he grew much daunted, as ſome about him, and namely his own Daughter, reported; for he heard many Ways of the ſtrange Deteſtation which the World had of the Deed; and the Nick-naming of his Son much affected him: But his Advertiſements from Sir Richard Norton, his Son-in-Law, did much trouble him: For Sir Richard wrote divers Times from London to his Wife, That he could come in no Place, but his Father-in-Law was railed upon: That Men told him, that he thought he had a Wife, but it was no longer than my Lord of Winton pleaſed; for whenſoever he offended him, he could make a Nullity between them. Beſides, the ſaid Sir Richard told Mr. John More, of Lincoln's-Inn, divers Times, "That "it was ſuch a Diſgrace unto him to hear how the World talked of "that Sentence, that although my Lord of Winton promiſed to give him, "his Wife, and Family, their Diet and Entertainment ſo long as he "lived, yet he would get him to his own Houſe, and live there, where "he had Means ſufficient, and not be ſubject to that perpetual Scorn, "which would follow him ſo long as he remained in his Father-in-Law's "Company."

By theſe, and the like Paſſages, it was gueſſed, that the reſt of the Commiſſioners, who were for the Sentence, had little Comfort in themſelves of that which they had done. On the other Part, the Archbiſhop, and thoſe who ſtood with him, had their Honeſty and Juſtice founded out every Day more and more; and many Meſſages were brought them, and divers Letters written unto them, or ſhewed them by ſome Friends, from ſundry of the Biſhops in the Land, from the Univerſities, from many godly Preachers out of all Parts, which was an exceeding Conſolation unto them, among the many Frowns which they did bear, That there was an univerſal Concurrence of all honeſt Men to approve that which they had done. And the Archbiſhop had privately, from many great Ones in Court, and Nobles, and worthy Perſonages elſewhere, ſuch Significations of their good Acceptance which he did, that it cheered him much inwardly, and he was nothing diſmayed.

Now, about the Middle of November, the Wheel was turned about: For ſince nothing could be gained by ſpeaking hardly of the Negative Part, they thought they would make Uſe of them another Way, and that ſhould be by making the World believe, that they had now given Approbation of the Fact. And thereupon it was, in Court and London, aſſeverantly given out, and the Fame of it went far and near, That the Archbiſhop, and the reſt, after more mature Deliberation, had teſtified their Concurrence with the reſt of the Commiſſioners, and all now were of one Mind. Men did not haſtily believe this; but yet divers of good Rank came and ſent to the Archbiſhop and the reſt, to know whether thoſe Things were ſo or no. And when it was found to be but a Jargon, it gave a great deal of Contentment, and removed away much Scandal which formerly was taken. Yet again afterward it was bruited, the ſecond Time, That my Lord of Canterbury had given the King Satisfaction in the Matter; and my Lord of London, on ſuch a Sunday, had come and ſubmitted himſelf to my Lord Chamberlain, and the reſt had relented. Nay, it went ſo far, that Yelverton, the King's Sollicitor, and a great Dependent upon the Houſe of Suffolk, told Mr. Pye, the Counſellor, and Mr. Cholmely, the Earl of Eſſex's Sollicitor, coming unto him about Books to be drawn up, for paſſing back the Jointure of the Lady Frances's Part, and the Portion of the Earl of Eſſex's Part, "That the "gainſaying Commiſſioners were now conſenting, and the Great Man "beyond the Water was come over; which he knew ſo aſſuredly, that "he had ſeen it ratified by the Subſcription of the Archbiſhop and the "reſt." Yea, farther, he added, "That there was great Reaſon, at "the firſt, wherefore my Lord of Canterbury, and the others, ſhould "ſtand againſt the Separation; for they had juſt Cauſe, at the firſt, to "fear that this Fact might be drawn into Example, and ſo Marriages "ordinarily be violated; but now it was reſolved that no more ſuch "ſhould be permitted, and thereupon they aſſented." Theſe Things were inforced to be endured with Silence, for the avoiding of Clamour, and making of Trouble.

But now behold an admirable Device of the Biſhop of Litchfield, which ſheweth what his own Opinion was of the Validity of the Sentence. I will ſet it down as it came to be acted.

On the 26th of November, Searle the Proctor cometh to my Lord of Canterbury at Lambeth, and bringeth with him a Writ of Certiorari out of the Chancery, directed to the Commiſſioners in the Cauſe between the Lady Frances and the Earl of Eſſex. The Archbiſhop was prayed to open it; and ſo he did, and there found that four of them, ſub ſigillis veſtris, were required to certify Recordum Sententiæ into the Chancery. The Archbiſhop aſked Searle, "If this were an uſual Thing?" Who anſwered, "No, he had not known any ſuch Thing before:" It is replied, "What "then ſhould be the Reaſon thereof?" Anſwer was made, "That ſince "the Matter was controverted in the Sentence, leſt there ſhould be "Queſtion of the Marriage afterwards, the Earl of Somerſet would have "the Sentence lying by him under the Great Seal of England ratified." The Archbiſhop thought that to be but a weak Hold, yet charged Searle to ſee ſuch an Inſtrument drawn, and a Certificate ſhould accordingly be made. On the Wedneſday after, Barker, the Regiſter, cometh to Lambeth, and ſheweth a Form of a Draught in Paper, how the Certificate ſhould be returned in the Names of all the Commiſſioners ſpecially put down. The Archbiſhop, in the reading of it, found five or ſix Lines having a black Line drawn under them; and thereupon the more marking the Words contained in them, found that which he liked not. Thereupon he aſked Barker, "Who lined thoſe Words?" Barker ſaid, "He himſelf did." The other aſked, "What was the Reaſon of it?" And it was anſwered, "Becauſe Sir John Bennet, and ſome other of the Doctors with him, had "diſliked that Sentence." Quoth the Archbiſhop, "And they had "Reaſon for it: Who put them firſt in?" Barker ſaid, "None but "himſelf." Quoth the Archbiſhop then, "May not the Certificate ſtand "as well without thoſe Words as with them?" To which Barker anſwered, "Yes." Then ſaid the Archbiſhop, "Let them be ſtricken out." Here the Regiſter, with ſomewhat ado, faintly made Anſwer, "That the Com"miſſioners on the other Side would by no means have them out." The Archbiſhop ſaid, "Then I perceive it is a Device to entangle us: I am "ready to certify the Sentence as the Writ requireth, but I will none of "this. Barker, I am firſt in the Commiſſion, and for my Place ſake, I "would have looked, that I ſhould have been conferred withal, what had "been fit to return, and not to have had this Trick put upon me, that "either I muſt certify that which croſſeth my Judgment at the Time of "giving the Sentence, or I muſt be forced not to certify at all." So Barker departed, and all was quiet until the Monday after; at which Time the Archbiſhop was early at Whitehall, the Council ſitting that Morning. There, in the Waiting-Chamber, at the End of the Privy-Gallery, the Biſhop of Litchfield cometh to him, and ſaith, "My Lord, "we have received a Writ of Certiorari out of the Chancery, to certify "the Sentence for the Nullity." "Yea," ſaith the Archbiſhop, "and "I am ready to certify it." But," ſaith the Biſhop, "He who framed "the Writ hath made it ſub ſigillis veſtris, and doth not know that there "is a Seal of Office for the Delegates; it ſhould have been ſub ſigillo "communi." Before the Archbiſhop could reply, in cometh the Lord Chancellor, and to him cometh out of the next Chamber the Lord Chamberlain; and then thoſe two Lords, together with the Biſhop of Litchfield, drew themſelves to a Window, and there had they ſecret Communication about the altering of the Form of the Writ, as the Effect declared; for that Afternoon, a Cauſe being to be heard touching Alimony, from Sir Pexal Brocas to his Lady; and the Committees in it being the Biſhop of Litchfield, and Mr. Chancellor of the Dutchy, and my Lord of Canterbury being Umpire; before Mr. Chancellor was come, Bembo, Deputy to the Clerk of the Crown, came into the Parlour at Lambeth, and had private Speech with the Biſhop of Litchfield. The Archbiſhop going out into the Garden, Litchfield followed him, and told him, "That Mr. Bembo had brought another Form "of a Writ;" and thereupon ſhewed him the Words ſub communi ſigillo. The Archbiſhop bid him do as he thought good, and withdrew himſelf into into the low Stone Gallery, whither Litchfield followed him, and used these Words: "My Lord, here is a Form of a Certificate, which hath "been thought fit to use in the Business of my Lord Chamberlain; and "I hear your Grace taketh Exception to some Things in it." Then he pulled out the very Paper which Barker formerly had shewed. The Archbishop answered, "My Lord, have I not Reason to take Exception "to these Words, that post omnimodam veritatis disquisitionem, post probationes idoneas et de jure requisitas, we gave such a Sentence? For to "subscribe this, were to proclaim myself a dishonest Man upon Record: "For if these Things be true, why did I deny to join in the Sentence?" Quoth Litchfield, "This here is true; for it cannot be denied, but some "probationes idoneæ et de jure requisitæ were used; and we do not say that "all were." The Archbishop answered, "You shall do well, there- "fore, to certify post probationes aliquas, and I will join with you; but "as it standeth now indefinitely, it will be taken as if all had been used; "I pray you therefore to alter the Certificate, and make Things plain." "My Lord, quoth Litchfield, I will deal plainly with you: Because the "Words were in, and Doubt was made, whether they should pass or no; "the King's Majesty hath been acquainted with the Business; and he, "by a Letter from Sir Thomas Lake, hath sent Word expressly that he "will have them in." The Archbishop said, "Let them then certify, "who will avow those Words, for I cannot condescend unto them. "And hath not that Person done a good Office, who hath informed the "King hereof; that Distraction may still be among the Commissioners, "and there may never be an End of Difference?" The Bishop said, "My Lord, I could wish that you would yield unto the King, and so "give him Satisfaction." The Archbishop answered, "What would you "have me do? I gave the Sentence as I was persuaded in Conscience, "and since that Time I have been silent, and meddle no way in the "Matter: I did what I did upon long Deliberation; and I may not in "Private, upon no Ground since appearing to me, cross that which I "have done in Publick." It was farther added, "That there was Reason "to suspect that they did ill Offices who held those Things still on Foot: "That there never was any Man, who sought to grace himself by dis- "gracing others, but it met him at the Lane's End, at one Time or "another." These Things passed then; and after the Cause heard between Sir Pexal Brocas and his Wife, the Bishop of Litchfield said to the Archbishop at his Parting, "My Lord, you will give us Leave to cer- "tify then as we purpose?" To which the Archbishop answered, "Yea, with all my Heart."

The next Morning the Archbishop remembered, that by the Carriage of Things in such Fashion as was pretended, he might be tricked: For if the Names of all the Commissioners were put into the Certificate, and four of them might certify under a Common Seal, it should not be known hereafter, but that he and his Fellows concurred therein, and that, with the Words which were excepted against: He therefore sent for Barker, and in the Presence of Sir John Bennet, and two Servants, being Publick Notaries, he expostulated with Barker, as serving Men's Turns, rather than caring for Peace; and then punctually he delivered these Things.

First, "The Writ requireth me to certify the Sentence, and I am ready "to do it."

Secondly, "If the whole Process be desired, I am willing to certify "that also."

Thirdly, "For the Words in Question, because they were put in "without my Privity, and they may as well be left out as put in, by "your own Saying, I pray to be forborn for returning of them."

Fourthly, "I require you to conceal these Things as much as you "may, that the World take no new Alarm of any Difference between "the Commissioners."

The Archbishop spake of returning the whole Process, because he had heard, that at the first it was meant it should be so; but Dr. Stuart, and perhaps some other of the Civilians, dissuaded that by all Means; lest, if the whole were on Record in the Chancery, every Man that list, hereafter might censure that Sentence, and sift the Grounds whereon the Commissioners proceeded; it was good, therefore, to take away that Occasion.

When Matters were thus resolved, the Bishop of Litchfield, who meant to play his Prizes in this Service, speaketh to Bembo, to draw some Preface or Conclusion to add to the Certificate; that it might not only be signed with the Great Seal, as after the Form of an Inspeximus; but that his Majesty might add a Confirmation to it: And when Mr. Bembo, as unacquainted with this Fashion, did not fit the Bishop's Humour, his Lordship took on him to do it himself. He drew up, therefore, a strange Writing, as was informed by a credible Person that saw it, containing barbarous Latin, and no good Congruity of Sense. But the Matter of it was, that his Majesty having the Authority of the Pope now in himself, and in scrinio pectoris, having Power to ratify, did, ex plenitudine potestatis, confirm that Divorce to all Intents and Purposes. In an Evening Dr. Martin was sent for to the Lord Chamberlain, and there was the Bishop with his Papers. The Doctor, as it hath been credibly delivered, being shewed that Writing, and his Opinion thereupon being asked, did utterly dislike it, and said, "That the King claimed nothing of the "Pope's Power; but took that as his own, which the Pope had usurped: "That the King had spoke before by his Judges Delegate, and had no- "thing more to do: That if the Sentence were not good already, no "Confirmation could make it good." And when the Bishop was earnest in Defence of his Device, there was a little Heat stricken between the Doctor and him, so that these Words passed from the said Doctor: "You do, as much as in you lieth, spit in the Face of the King our Master "by laying on him all the Matter; whereas the Scandal that hath al- "ready been is this, that his Majesty is said to deal so much in the "Matter. My Lord, you are to blame to enter into these Things "without Advice of Men skilful in the Law: Hath Dr. Stuart or Dr. "Bird been acquainted herewithal?" The Bishop said, "No; but "for this Matter, I know as much Law as the best of you all." Dr. Martin replied, "No: Your Lordship thinketh, that because you have "read two or three Chapters of the Canon Law about this late Busi- "ness, you know as much as we do, who have spent all our Lives in "that Profession: I tell your Lordship, I have studied the Law these "two-and-thirty Years; and therefore, you shall give me Leave to be- "lieve, that I know more therein than you can. I am the King's "Advocate; and therefore may suffer nothing with my Consent to pass "dishonourable to my Master."

Upon these Contestations, the Lord Chamberlain was much troubled, saying, "What a Matter is this, that Men should be of such contrary "Opinions! What shall we do?" When the Bishop murmured much that his Counsel was not followed, Dr. Martin said thus: "My Lord, "in a Business of this Importance, I will not wish your Lordship to "follow my single Advice, but let this be done; To-morrow let Sir "William Button, in your Lordship's Name, come to Doctor's-Commons; "and let him get together Sir Daniel Dun, Dr. Stuart, and Dr. Bird, "and I will attend them; and then we will consult jointly what is fit "to be done."

This Advice was much liked; and on the Morrow, being Friday, they all assembled, and for two Hours all Points were debated; but the Conclusion was, "That there should be no farther Confirmation: For this "was to proclaim, that the Sentence was defective in itself, which would "make a great Buzz in the World:" And therefore, the Counsel was in general, "That too much had been done, and for the Time to come, "the Care must be, how to lay it asleep fairly."

This Resolution being taken, the next Knack was, that so many of the Commissioners as were for the Sentence, should be called together; and they should be made acquainted with this, that the Bishop might be fairly put off. On the Saturday Night, therefore, in the Dark, at Sir Julius Cæsar's House in the Strand, met the Bishops of Ely, Litchfield, Rochester, the two Chancellors of the Exchequer and Dutchy, and Sir Daniel Dun, and well near for an Hour, they privately debated what they thought fit; but, as it seemeth, resolved as before, and so departed.

A Friend being the next Day with the Lady Cæsar, and knowing of the Meeting, asked her, "What about it was?" She answered, "It is "something about the late Nullity; but what it is, I do not know. It "seemeth, that they who were the Doers in it, think somewhat is amiss. "They suppose all is not well about it, and I for my Part think so also."

A Man would have supposed, that all these Things should have contented the Bishop of Litchfield; but he was so far in Love with his own Invention, that yet he would not be beat off; and therefore, to merit the more, he once again moveth the Lord Chamberlain to send to Sir Francis Bacon, and to Mr. Yelverton, being of the King's learned Counsel, to know their Opinion: Which being done; and they two, for the Reasons above-named, concurring with the Civilians, the Bishop, as it hath been credibly related, said of them, together with the rest, "They are all "Fools." And so ended this Stratagem; but the Worker thereof was not yet for an End.

From the Beginning of this whole Question of the Nullity, the Bishop of Litchfield had carried himself variously, sometimes being vehement in Words, publickly against the Separation, and other Times in Deed, giving Furtherance to it. Many Speeches he had privately with the Archbishop, making Shew of much Honesty and Respect to him, which the Archbishop ever warily observed; thinking, notwithstanding that these had been Testimonies of the Working of his Conscience, conflicting in itself, but not resolved what to do. In the mean time, from the Court, from London, and out of the Country, the Archbishop was still called upon by divers worthy Friends, "That he should take heed of "that Bishop: That he was ever, and in all Things naught: That he "did all the worst Offices that possibly he could, and was still stirring "the Coals, to procure to himself a Reputation; that he was zealous "of the House of Suffolk." The Archbishop forgot not those many Warnings, but carried himself very warily towards him: Yet out of Charity it still came in his Mind, "He is a Bishop, I know no Evil of "him; I ought not to condemn a Man upon a Generality; I have no "particular Proof of his Misbehaviour in this Behalf: Although he "dealt ill with the late Lord Treasurer, and most falsely with the Arch- "bishop Bancroft in his Life-time, and after his Death; and for that "Cause was detested by both of them; yet an honest Man may think, that "Experience hath reformed him, and now he is amended." Yet it much affected the Archbishop, that all Men spake so ill of him; and one Speech of an old Courtier, a very honest Knight, entered far with him. For about a Fortnight before the Marriage, the said Courtier speaking privately with the Archbishop, among other Words, he used this: "I know "not what the Bishop of Litchfield doth among you; but he hath made "a Shift to be taken for a Knave generally with us in the Court." Now, whether the next Prank will verify so much or no, let the Reader judge. Eight Days before the Marriage, on a Saturday Morning, that Bishop cometh to Lambeth, and in private Conference with the Archbishop, he telleth him, "That out of his Love and Respect to his "Grace, he was come voluntarily, as of himself, to know his Mind "about one Matter, and it was this. On St. Stephen's Day, said he, "the Lord Chamberlain meaneth to have this great Marriage go for- "ward: Now, it may, perhaps, be desired, that a Licence should be "given by you, that the Banes may not be asked; which if you like not "to grant, I may be the Means to free you from being moved to it." The Archbishop said, "What have I to do with granting of a Licence? "It belongeth not to me: But wherefore should there be any Need of a "Licence? The Marriage is intended to be publick; Masks and Shews "are made for the same; all England taketh Notice of it, and therefore "it were good that the Banes were openly asked, as the Manner is of "such Marriages as are made in the King's Chapel. Yea, the Lady "Elizabeth herself had her Banes asked." "My Lord, saith Litchfield, "there is some Cause why it should be done without publishing the "Banes: For, peradventure, Somebody may step up, and make a Disturbance. You know what a mad, naked Fellow came into St. James's, "after the Death of the Prince; if such a one should come in now, what "a Work would it make?" The Archbishop wondered within himself, to hear such a Reply, and thought surely, that it was no mad Body that they should need to stand in fear of, but they suspected somewhat else. But his Answer was, "My Lord, there come no such into the King's "Chapel; there be Doors and Officers to keep such out. But if it "should be suspected that any would oppose, it is best the Banes be "asked, for then there will be some Warning of the Gain-saying; where- "as, otherwise, if at the Time of the Marriage one should suddenly start "up, it would make a greater Trouble." Notwithstanding the Bishop went on, "That a Licence would cut off all the Doubt." The Archbishop answered, "But what have I to do with granting a Licence "in the King's Chapel? It belongeth to the Ordinary of the Place, and "that is my Lord of Bath, as Dean of the Chapel." Litchfield replied, "He

"He never granted any, and he hath no Seal for that Office." It was answered, "He never granted any, because Nobody ever desired it; but "the Manner was, that the Banes were published. But as for the Seal "of the Office, who doth not know that any Seal will serve? And none "better than his Bishop's Seal, it being said, Datum sub sigillo nostro Episcopali, quo in hoc casu, or hoc tempore, utimur. King James, at the first, "did use the Seal of Queen Elizabeth, till a new one was made." The Bishop proceedeth, "Yet it would be fit that you granted the Licence, if "it be requested." To this the Archbishop said, "I shall do that which "never any of my Predecessors did." "Yes," quoth Litchfield, "if you "would seek your Records, you should find some so granted." The Archbishop answered, "I have inquired of my Officers, and they tell me, "That no such Thing was heard of, in omni Hominum Memoria. But, "my Lord, I know that my Lord of Bath hath it under the Great Seal "of England exclusively to the Archbishop; so that in direct Words "there is a Restraint, that he may not meddle there." "Yea, but," quoth Litchfield, "you have an Act of Parliament, enabling you to grant "Dispensations to the King and his Children; and therefore it belongeth to you." Said the Archbishop, "Do not you think that I understand the Act of Parliament as well as you? My Lord, Do you think "that that Statute was made for these ordinary Graces and Dispensations? Why, is not your Lordship able, within your Diocese, to "grant a Licence, that a Marriage may be solemnized, and not the Banes "asked?" "Yes," saith he, "I may: Nay, every Archdeacon may do "it within his Jurisdiction." "Then, my Lord," quoth the Archbishop, "must an Act of Parliament be made to grant the Archbishop "Power to do that which every Archdeacon may do within his Precinct? "There is surely some other Matter in it. But I marvel, my Lord, "that you are now so earnest for the Archbishop's Licences, when, as I "have heard, in the Days of my Predecessor, when you were Bishop of "Rochester, you would not suffer the Archbishop's Licences to pass within your Diocese." "No," saith he, "it was for Westminster that I did "strive, not for the Diocese of Rochester. And it is true, that there be Records in that Church, that the Monks did contend with the King about "divers Questions. I had reason, therefore, to stand for the Privileges "of my Church." It was answered, "So hath my Lord of Bath to "stand for the Right of the King's Chapel." The Archbishop seeing how earnest the Man was, in so unreasonable a Thing, said farther, "My Lord, you have mine Answer; but let me now tell you one Thing, "It is six Weeks agone, that I heard from the Court, and many Times "since I have had it reiterated, that such a Trick should be put upon me: "That although it needed not, yet I should be moved for granting this "Licence, because thereby I should be constrained, either to grant it, "and so cross my former Sentence, and involvedly give my Consent to "the Nullity, or I should deny it, and so grate once again upon the "King's Displeasure. You see now I have given you a fair Answer, "which may free me from both. But, my Lord, I pray God you do "good Offices in this Business. I fear you put yourself into many Things, "which may be better forborn. But let me tell you, there was never "any Man, who sought to raise himself by wronging another, but at "one Time or other he had enough of it. It is now almost three Months "since this Sentence was given, and since that Time, I have not meddled with the Matter, for offending the King. I am silent, and no "way oppose, and Men have their End; yet cannot I be quiet. I would "have you know, that God beholdeth these Things, and remembereth "them. And for my Part, I am not blind, I see well what is done; "and I shall not always be silent. The Time will come, that I must "speak; and it shall appear I am not Tongue-tied." This made the Bishop not so forward as before; but Occasion of a farther Speech being offered, the Archbishop went on, and said, "The Sentence which I "gave, was in the Fear of God, and according to my Conscience; And "if that had been done, which was convenient, and we called for, there "needed not to have been any Division in Judgment. For, my Lord, "you may remember when you came to me at Croydon, and brought these "Papers from the King, after the reading whereof I slept little that "Night, how desirous I was to give his Majesty Satisfaction; and therefore prayed you, fetching out the Process unto you, to tell me whereupon I should ground my Sentence. You shewed me one Article, "That he had not known her, nor he thought that he never should. I told you "then, Yea, that was for Want of Love, for he said, When I came out "of France, I loved her; I do not so now, neither ever shall I. It is want "of Love." To this the Bishop said, "Yea, and the Earl added, That "he had done his best oftentimes, carnally to know her, but he found "an Imperfection in himself." The Archbishop replied to this, "Oh, "my Lord! never say so; for his Lordship's Answers, upon his Oath, "are to the contrary: He found no Defect, or Impediment in himself. And "if I shall speak my private Opinion, although I would not have you "believe it, I think the Earl as able a Man for a Woman, as any is in "England." "And I think to the contrary," quoth Litchfield. The Archbishop went on: "But, my Lord, when your Lordship and I had "these Difficulties in our Mind at Croydon, you told me of one Thing, "which I embraced as an Oracle from Heaven. And that was, that "to rid ourselves of these Distractions, we had no other Way but to call "the Earl of Essex again upon his Oath, that so giving us a fuller Answer, we might either have good Ground to pronounce for the Nullity, "or Matter to give Reason why we might not condescend unto it. I "approved this; and you know how the next Day, in publick Court, it "was moved, and my Lords of Winchester, Ely, Rochester, and yourself, "gave very good Liking to it; and no Man said any thing against it, except Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer, who softly spake, I know not "whether that will be permitted. But you may remember, you were intreated to deliver this to the King at Theobalds, from whom you brought "Word, That it should not be granted, because the Earl of Essex, being partly provoked by his falling out with Mr. Henry Howard, and "partly being counselled by the Earl of Southampton, would speak all "Things to hinder the Nullity. My Answer then was, That he was "to speak upon his Oath, and we would most strictly examine him. When "that was denied, which should have led us to the Truth, I must confess I had never any Mind to pronounce for the Separation." The Bishop seemed to take no great Pleasure to hear these Things thus repeated, but fared, as if he could have wished, that they all had been forgotten. The Conclusion of all was, that the Bishop seemed to be well satisfied that no Licence was given, and promised the Archbishop to take care that he should no farther be troubled with it; assuring him, "That he "did ever good Offices to him, whereof the King could give Witness, "and would; and he would ever make the best of Things." To which the Archbishop said, "If he did, he would take it for a Kindness at his "Hands;" and so he departed.

Accordingly, the next Day the Banes were asked in the Chapel, and there was nothing but fair Weather; the Archbishop attended the King in the Closet. On the Monday the King went to Hampton-Court; and that Day the Bishop of Bath and Wells came to Lambeth; He told the Archbishop, that he had a direct Message unto him from the King, and that was, That his Majesty did much marvel, that he spake not with him about the Sentence: That the King expected Satisfaction and Submission. His Lordship added, That he perceived that the King had some Scruple in his Mind, which he wished should be removed before his going to the Communion on Christmas-Day. The Archbishop knew not that the Bishop of Litchfield had dealt any way treacherously with him, and therefore was constrained to answer, in general, That he knew not what to say to his Highness. He persuaded himself, that in giving of the Sentence he had done his Duty, and therefore could not tell how to make a Submission where he conceived no Fault. If in any Circumstance he had erred, he was ready to testify his Sorrow for it; but he knew no such Thing; yet if his Majesty was displeased at him, to signify his Obedience to his King and Sovereign, to whom he was so much bound, he would not refuse, if the King were pleased to restrain him of his Liberty, and lay him in the Tower all the Days of his Life, to submit himself unto it patiently, without murmuring.

Furthermore, he prayed the Bishop of Bath (who, on the Morrow, was to go to Hampton-Court) to signify humbly to his Majesty, That he had nothing in this World more precious than his Life; and that he wished, that he had given that Life as a Redemption, that the King's Hand had never been in that Business. And withal he said, that at the coming of the King, he would attend his Majesty.

On Wednesday Night, the King came to Whitehall; and on the Thursday, after Dinner, my Lord of Canterbury went to the Court, where they were all busy about Plate and Jewels against the Marriage. Notwithstanding, he had hastily Speech of divers Matters with the King; and in the End, he said privately unto his Highness, "May it please your "Majesty, I understand by my Lord of Bath and Wells, That your Ma"jesty expects that I should give you an Account about the Matter of "the Lord of Essex and the Lady Frances: I can say nothing more than "this, That I was put into the Commission as a Judge, and at the Time "of Sentence I did my Conscience; and since I have not meddled with "the Matter." "Yes," saith the King, "I hear you denied a Licence "to be granted, for not asking of the Banes; which I wonder you would "do, since the Sentence was passed." No," said the Archbishop, "I denied no Licence; but I advised, that the best Course was, that "the Banes should be asked, according to the Custom used in the "Chapel."

Secondly, I said, "That if any Licence should be granted, it be"longed not to me to give it, but to the Ordinary of the Place, the "Dean of the Chapel, who hath it under your Majesty's Great Seal, ex"clusive to the Archbishoprick." "Yea," said the King, "My Lord "of Bath said so; but I am told it is otherwise." The Archbishop replied, "Nay, it is so indeed."

And Thirdly, said he, "My Answer was, That never any of my Pre"decessors granted a Licence for any thing done in the King's Chapel; "I have received Information so, from my Officers. It had then been "Presumption in me to attempt that which belonged not unto me." "This is another Matter," saith the King. "Were these your Answers? "I was told otherwise. But I will take some other Time to speak with "you." The Archbishop, after this, attended half an Hour, and nothing being said, he departed.

The same Night, a Friend coming to Lambeth, told my Lord, "That "he had been that Day with the Lord Knowles, where he found, that the "Bishop of Litchfield had exceedingly wronged my Lord of Canterbury: "For he had reported all the Speech about the Licence, in a spiteful "Manner; said, it was absolutely denied; That the Archbishop gave "out, That the Earl of Essex was very potent for a Woman; and that he "intended to question this new Marriage, at one Time or other, that it "should never take Effect."

This, said the Gentleman, made a great Stir among them; and the Archbishop was much blamed, that he would never make an End: But they were much troubled at it, as fearing themselves, that all was not sure. "But," quoth he, "when I had told them, that this was some ill "Office of the Bishop of Litchfield, who had every Day new Inventions "to puzzle them, that he might so much the more indear himself unto "them, by signifying his Zeal for them; and that I knew how fairly my "Lord of Canterbury had answered him, (for so indeed he did) and that "he was so far from disturbing the Marriage, that he intended to be present at it; they were not only appeased, but seemed much content that "his Grace would be there: And this I assure you to be true."

When the Archbishop heard this, he was now satisfied, that the Man who had done him all the Wrong, was the Bishop of Litchfield; from whom he resolved afterward to be very wary how he trusted him. Yet, professing that he forgave him with all his Heart, on the Christmas-Day he attended the King, and received the Communion with his Majesty; and so, coming Home to Dinner, Sir Charles Cornwallis came along with him. This Gentleman is one, to whom, for his Love, the Archbishop was much beholden; and after Dinner they grew privately into Speech of all these fore-remembered Stirs; where the Knight found much Fault that so many Tricks were put upon the Archbishop; blamed infinitely the Bishop of Litchfield; promised to acquaint some of his great Friends with his Qualities, and assured to make Things be rightly understood; and took away with him that Report, wherein he seemed much to joy, that the Archbishop would be at the Marriage.

On the Morrow, being St. Stephen's Day, the Archbishop went to the Court, attended the King to Chapel, went down to the Marriage, (where, not the King, but the Lord Chamberlain gave the Bride) had a Pair of Wedding-Gloves, and so came Home to Dinner; where he sat with much Comfort, as being glad, that since Things must be so, they were come to an End: And so prayed God to bless his Church, the King and Kingdom, and himself; that he might be free from so many Vexations, as for a long Space undeservedly had followed him.

The SPEECH intended to be ſpoken at Lambeth, September 25, 1613, by George, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, when it came to his Turn to declare his Mind concerning the Nullity of Marriage between the Earl of Eſſex and the Lady Frances Howard.

[Seven of the Commiſſioners having before declared themſelves that they would give Sentence for a Nullity, and great Reaſon being to think, that the Biſhop of London, Sir John Bennet, Dr. James, and Dr. Edwards, would give Voices againſt the Nullity.]

MY Lords, and you the reſt of the Commiſſioners, I have had a great Contention and Deliberation within myſelf, in what Manner I ſhould utter my Judgment in this preſent Cauſe, ſince, after the Speech of thoſe three who firſt began, ſo great a Stream and Concurrence together of the reſt, (my Lord excepted, who ſpoke laſt) have given their Opinions for the annulling of the Marriage. But yet I hold not myſelf concluded thereby, but that I may declare my Judgment, having learned that Suffragia among wiſe Men are as well appendenda and ponderanda, as numeranda: And it was no Shame for Phocion in Athens, upon good Ground, to contradict the whole City; neither was Paphnuſius in the Council of Nice the leſs reſpected, when he ſtood againſt the whole Synod; nay, it was his Honour, that by delivering of his Sentence, he altered the Reſolution which that whole Aſſembly had intended to take, which I freely acknowledge I have no Hope to effect at this Time. And yet, though I have not that Hope, but might very well ſpare this Labour, yet my Conſcience telleth me, that it becometh me to ſpeak in a Matter of this Importance, becauſe, not only, Deum timeo, I fear God, which I doubt not but all of this Company doth; but I am afraid of God, leſt he ſhould be angry with me, if in this Caſe I be ſilent. And I think it is expected of me, ſince I am here preſent, that I ſhould not ſit as an Idol, and only fill a Room; for that were to lay an Imputation on myſelf, that I had undertaken a Cauſe, which in publick I durſt not offer to maintain.

I muſt acknowledge, that in delivering of my Mind in this Buſineſs of ſo great Weight, I do find two Defects, that I cannot ſo pertinently ſpeak unto the Purpoſe as divers of the Judges here: The one is, That I am no Lawyer; and the other is, That I am no married Man; by both which I am diſabled, that I cannot ſpeak with that Confidence concerning ſome Particulars, as moſt of you, the Commiſſioners, are able to do; but in lieu thereof, I have endeavoured to furniſh myſelf ſome other Way concurrent to this Purpoſe: As by reading, by conferring with ſome whom I do truſt, with pondering thereupon, ſo that it hath loſt me much Sleep at ſeveral Times, with frequent Prayer unto God, that he would direct me aright; which I have more begged of God in this Cauſe, than ever in any that was before me in Judgment. And beſides, I bring with me animum candidum, a Mind devoid of Paſſion, or any Perturbation, which inclineth to no Part for Fear or for Favour, for Spleen or for Hatred: From which, I thank God, in pronouncing of Sentence, I ever have been free, remembering that Judges are in the Place of God; and as Jehoſaphat ſaid, 2 Chron. XIX. Non hominis judicia exercetis ſed Domini, et quicquid judicaveritis in vos redundavit. He then who ſitteth in the Place of God, and in pronouncing of Sentence will vary from Juſtice, he leaveth God, and ſheweth himſelf worthy to lie in the Flames of Hell, for abuſing of the Truſt which is committed unto him, which I hope I ſhall not do. And cui bono? To what End ſhould I tranſgreſs in Judgment for either Side, when I have no Reaſon to be partial for either, ſince it is indifferent to me, in any Particular, whether this Queſtion receive one or other Determination?

Where, leſt I ſhould be miſtaken, I think it not amiſs, as publickly I have done divers Times before, to let the World know what my Judgment is concerning the Impotency of a Huſband towards his Wife: That ſince Marriage in young Couples is for carnal Copulation and Procreation thereupon, and that it is the Intendment of thoſe which contract Matrimony to receive Satisfaction in that Kind, that if this Nobleman be not able to perform thoſe marital Rights unto his Lady, he doth unto her a very great Injuſtice to retain her as his Wife; and we ſhall perform a great Part of Injury and Cruelty towards her, if we do not free her from this Burthen and Yoke. We are bound in Conſcience to do it, ſince it is in Truth no Marriage, but a pretended Matrimony, that Conſummation being wanting, which was one of the firſt Things in Intention when they two came together: For impoſſibilitas officii, by a received Maxim, ſolvit vinculum Conjugii. But the Point is, that before the Separation be pronounced, it muſt appear unto the Church, that there is good Cauſe for the ſame; which muſt not be upon light Surmiſes, or queſtionable Suggeſtions, but upon evident Declarations and Proofs, which may give full Contentment to the Conſcience of the Judge. The Marriage was overt and in the Face of the Church, whereby they were joined into one; let the Reaſon of Separation be as clear as that was, if it poſſibly may be; or let it be ſo apparent, that the Church may well know, that there is Ground to ſtand upon for pronouncing of a Nullity. Now this is it which I doubt will not fall out in this Caſe of my Lord of Eſſex; there is not Proof ſufficient to inform the Minds of the Judges that this Knot ſhould be diſſolved, and themſelves ſet at Liberty the one from the other. And then you underſtand what the general Rule is, Quod dubitas, ne feceris. And in this Controverſy there ſeem in my Judgment many Reaſons of doubting, that the Separation deſired ought not to be granted. You ſhall hear ſome few of them.

1. The firſt Scruple which ariſeth in my Mind, is from the Uncertainty of that Proceeding, which we have had in this Buſineſs. For in the handling of it formerly, we had it propounded, that there muſt be a Nullity propter maleficium verſus hanc. That was it which we debated, and for the which we turned our Books; that the Counſel for my Lady did ſtill inſiſt upon, not naming the Words indeed, but by a Periphraſis, or Circumlocution, deſcribing the ſame. And it cannot be forgotten, how Dr. Stuart, being told by one or more of the Commiſſioners ſitting then in Court, that his whole Speech did ſtill point out maleficium; he anſwered, It is true, that is it which we intend. The Authorities always brought out of the Canoniſts were in direct Terms upon maleficium, the Proofs intended nothing elſe. And we all underſtand, that to have an Impotency unto a Man's own Wife, and an Ability unto other, and that incurably, and that for ſome latent Reaſon, which cannot be known, is the Caſe of maleficium; and that is the Matter alledged in the Libel, and whereupon my Lord is examined. And yet, now ſince we ſit upon the ſecond Commiſſion, maleficium is diſclaimed. One of my Lords (my Lord of Winchester) hath avowed it, that he diſlikes that maleficium; that he hath read Del-Rio, the Jeſuit, writing upon that Argument, and doth hold him an idle and fabulous Fellow; that he rather ſuppoſeth it to be God's own Handy-Work, than any thing from the Devil. Another of my Lords (my Lord of Ely) hath aſſented thereunto, and maleficium muſt be gone. Now I for my Part will not abſolutely deny, that Witches by God's Permiſſion may have a Power over Men, to hurt all, or Part in them, as by God they ſhall be limited; but how ſhall it appear that this is ſuch a Thing in the Perſon of a Man? The Queſtion is, An factum ſit, and how it ſhall be diſcovered? But to make it a Thing ordinary, as the Romiſh Writers do beyond the Seas, I take it to be a Fable, acknowledging that for Truth, which a Biſhop well verſed in that Argument did lately write, that Maleficiation is the very Garbage of Popery; a Thing ſo baſe, that we who have learnt Chriſt aright, ſhould deſpiſe and contemn, allowing it no Place amongſt us. Which Courſe it were a Shame if we ſhould not obſerve, ſince the Papiſts themſelves grow very weary of it; and that even in France, where there hath been more ado with this Maleficiation than in any other Country; for there the common Sort, at the Time of their Marriages, were wont to be afraid to have the Words of Conjunction in Matrimony to be ſpoken aloud, Quos Deus conjunxit, nemo ſeparet; or the Benediction to be publickly given, leſt ſome Witch or Sorcerer in the ſame Inſtant ſhould tie a Knot upon a Point, or play ſome other ſorcering Trick, whereby the new Bridegroom, ſo long as that Knot laſted, ſhould be diſabled from actual Copulation with her whom he had married. And for avoiding of that Hazard, they had therefore their Matrimonies celebrated in the Night-time, and in ſome private Place, where none came but ſuch Friends as they dared to truſt. This Superſtition grew ſo common, and Men were ſo abuſed by the Fright that came thereof, that the Prelates of France, about thirty Years ſince, in a Council at Rheims, made this Decree againſt it. * Peccare graviter admonemus eos, qui noctu vel clanculum benedictionem nuptialem ſibi dari procurant propter metum maleficii: Maleficium enim ſe vitare poſſe, credere debent, ſi eo pietatis affectu ad conjugium accedant, qui præſcribitur in ſacris literis, videlicet, ut cum timore Domini, et amore filiorum, magis quam libidine impulſi copulentur, devotè ſuſceptis pœnitentiæ et Euchariſtiæ Sacramentis. And the Year after that, another Council in that Kingdom doth ſpeak yet more plainly. † Et quia Chriſtiano nomine indignus error noſtro ſeculo inolevit, ut ſignationibus, conſignationibus, vinculis et nexibus Matrimonia impediantur:—Hæc Synodus communione Eccleſiæ interdicit omnes eos, qui hujuſmodi ſuperſtitionibus utuntur: monetque fideles, ne hujuſmodi commentis fidem habeant, ſed in Deo fiduciam certam conſtituant, nec idcirco matrimonia noctu fiant, ſed in luce et frequentia hominum. If it be rotten ripe in France; if it be Error indignus Chriſtiano nomine; if Men muſt not fidem habere hujuſmodi commentis; what do we with it here in England? Let it be caſt away as a rotten Rag of Popery. And yet I do now find, that in the very Sentence which is this Day to be given, it falleth directly upon the Deſcription of Maleficium verſus hanc. So that what ſhould I think of this Caſe of my Lord's which is built on ſuch a Foundation as no Man will ſtand to? We are on it, and off it, and avow it we dare not, yet fly from it we will not. This moveth Scruple in me, how I ſhould aſſent to that whereof I can learn no Certainty from the Counſel of my Lady, nor from you that be the Judges, who ſpeak for this Nullity: I dare not reſt my Building on ſuch a ſandy Foundation.

2. Another Matter which troubleth my Mind, is the Novelty of that which is now ſet on foot; a Thing unheard of in our Church, and unknown in our Kingdom. We have many Stories, old and new, of Things done in this Land; we have Regiſters extant in every Dioceſe; we have Acts and Records which ſpecify thoſe Accidents which have fallen out in the Days of our Forefathers. I have cauſed Search in many Places to be made, and ſo I know have ſome of you, the Commiſſioners; and I have called upon you for the ſame, but I can have no Precedent of any ſuch Example that hath paſſed in our Kingdom. No Memory of Man can expreſs unto me the Name of that Perſon, whoſe Marriage was annulled for Impotency towards his Wife, when he found an Ability of carnal Copulation with any other Woman. It is this Year, 1613, that hath ſet abroad this preſent Imagination, for the former Ages knew it not. It is ſafe walking in the Ways which are treaded out unto us. We have great Reaſon for our Doings in theſe human Actions, when we do theſe Deeds which formerly were done by our Predeceſſors. I have had many worthy Men, which have gone before me in the Place which I now hold, Men learned, Men judicious, great Diſcoverers of Impoſtures; Men that have done great Services for the Nation where we live; but of them never any had ſuch a Caſe before them, they never gave Sentence for a Nullity of Marriage upon ſuch an Inability. I know not whether it be a Happineſs or Unhappineſs, that I muſt be the firſt to ſit in a Commiſſion for determining ſuch a Controverſy.

I know, to meet with this Objection, it is whiſpered ſometimes, that there is an Example, and that is Bury's Caſe, which is urged as a Precedent unto this now in Queſtion. But indeed, that is no Pattern of this; the Diſſimilitude is great between the one Caſe and the other; for Bury had his S—s ſtricken off with an Horſe, that nothing but a little of one of them remained. I will read you the very Caſe, which if any Man doubt of, ſhall be avowed unto him. Thus then it doth follow.

John Bury, Eſquire, was lawfully ſeized in his Demeſnes as of Fee, of, and in divers Manors, Lands and Tenements within the County of

* Bochellus in Decret. Eccleſ. Gallic. lib. 3. tit. 5. cap. 176. anno 1583.

† Idem, lib. 1. tit 14. cap. 7. ex Concilio Bituricenſi, anno 1584.

Devon. The ſaid John Bury did, the 20th Day of November, in the firſt Year of Queen Mary, marry one Willimot Gifford, and they lived together three Years; and the ſaid Bury could not carnaliter cognoſcere dictam Willimotam.

Afterwards, viz. the 17th of May, 1561, the ſaid Willimot called the ſaid Bury before the Eccleſiaſtical Judge, and charged him to be impotentem ad coeundum cum dicta Willimota, propter vitium perpetuum, et incurabile impedimentum ad generationem, et ejus inhabilitatem, &c. and thereupon deſired to be divorced. In the Proceeding before the Judge, it was proved by divers Witneſſes, of which two were Phyſicians, that the ſaid Bury had but one little S---e, and That no bigger than a Bean. It was alſo depoſed by divers Matrons, that the ſaid Willimot Gifford remained a Virgin, and incorrupt; and the ſaid Bury confeſſed no leſs: Upon which Proof, and Confeſſion of John Bury, the Eccleſiaſtical Judge pronounced Sentence of Divorce, and did thereby ſeparate them.

Afterward the ſaid John Bury took to Wife one Philippa Monjoy, his firſt Wife, Willimot Gifford, being then alive; and the ſaid Philippa had a Son in the Time of their continuing together, John Bury's firſt Wife being alive.

Afterwards, the ſaid Willimot being ſtill living, the ſaid Monjoy, of her own Accord, without any Sentence of Divorce, forſook the ſaid John Bury, and married one Langeden, with whom ſhe continued. The ſaid John Bury, and his firſt Wife, Willimot, died; the ſaid Monjoy and Langeden then living, married together.

The Queſtion is, Whether, John Bury being divorced from Willimot Gifford for Impotency, the ſecond Marriage, ſolemnized between the ſaid John Bury and Monjoy, during which Time the Iſſue Male was born, be in Law a Marriage or not.

It appeareth by the Proceſs made in the Cauſe, and the Words of the Sentence grounded upon the ſame Proceſs, that the firſt Marriage was pronounced to be void, propter defectum et vitium teſticulorum, which made the ſaid John Bury impotentem et ineptum ad actum generandi, et coitum conjugalem. And ſo in all Reſpects this ſecond Marriage with Monjoy is void, and of no Effect: For either this Cauſe of the Diſſolution of the firſt Matrimony is true, which is always to be preſumed, until the contrary do appear, and then the ſame Cauſe doth make the ſecond Marriage void alſo; or elſe, if it any ways appear, this Cauſe of the Diſſolution of the firſt Marriage to be falſe; Et Eccleſia erat decepta, quia ſatis potens ad generandum, et quod in ipſa generavit. And in that Caſe the firſt Marriage is good in Law, et debet redire ad priora connubia: And ſo the ſecond Marriage is utterly void.

We are of the Opinion above laid down.

John Loyde, Edward Crompton,
Henry Jones, Robert Fourth,
John Hone, *William Farrand,
Nicholas Stuart,

Whether this be true or no, I appeal to Dr. Stuart, who is here in Preſence, and of Counſel for my Lady, who, I know, will affirm it, becauſe, not long ſince, being aſked by me of it, he confeſſed the ſame. And here is Dr. Farrand, now of Counſel for my Lord, who was uſed for his Advice in this Caſe of Bury; and Dr. Hone is yet living, who can teſtify the ſame. For I will ſuppoſe, that a Man cannot forget ſuch a famous Caſe as that was wherein himſelf was employed: But if all theſe were dead, I know where Records be, which ſtill will continue. If this then were the Matter in Queſtion touching Bury defectus teſticulorum, what is this to the great Controverſy now depending before us? And if this be the only Precedent, that ſhould be the Inducement, that the Sentence to be given in this Cauſe is not new, but the like hath been heard of before; I am where I was: We are now to act a Novelty, a Thing ſtrange, and unheard of in the Church of England, whereof let other Men be the Managers, I may have no Hand in it.

But perhaps it will be ſaid, that in ſome other Countries, and eſpecially in France, theſe Things are well known; and the Examples of one Kingdom, eſpecially, being ſo near unto us, may be an Inducement for us to do the like, ſince the Reaſon is the ſame. My Anſwer thereunto is, That I that live in England, am to frame myſelf to thoſe Things, which I find in the Church of England, whereof I ſee no Reaſon but there ſhould be as great Eſteem, as of any Church in the World. In the Days of our Forefathers, as our Nation was held a very noble Nation, ſo was the Church of England held a very famous Church. Eccleſia Anglicana, as might eaſily be ſhewed out of Matthew Paris, and by divers Things in ſome later General Councils, did carry a greater Sway. And why ſhould we at this Time, in any Thing, yield unto any Church in the World, ſince it is a Thing well known, that the Knowledge of Divinity doth abound here beyond all other Nations? And Men of this Land have beat down the Power of the Pope, and made evident divers Queſtions in Matters of Theology, beyond all the Parts of Chriſtendom: But beyond this, I do know, that the Cuſtoms of Churches, even by the Determination of the Pope himſelf, ought to be the Rule of Judgment in this Nature. We have a famous Place interſerted into the Body of the Law, written by Pope Alexander the IIId, unto the Biſhop of Amiens in France. It is worth your hearing: †Quod ſedem Apoſtolicam conſuluiſti ſuper his, quæ tibi dubia exiſtunt, gratum gerimus et acceptum, et tua exinde fraternitas non parum commendanda videtur. Ex tua ſiquidem parte nobis eſt intimatum, quod quædam mulier tui Epiſcopatus cuidam viro nupſerit, aſſerens quod ob utriuſque inguinis rupturam, genitalia ejus abſciſſa fuiſſent, necdum ab eo cognita fuiſſet, qui utique factus leproſus, ſe pariter et ſua domui reddidit infirmorum. Mulier vero ad domum patris reverſa ſicut aſſeris invenis, alio viro nubere deſiderat, et conjugali affectu conjungi. Unde licet Romana Eccleſia non conſueverit propter talem infirmitatem, vel propter alia maleficia, legitimè conjunctos dividere, ſi tamen conſuetudo generalis Gallicanæ Eccleſiæ habet, ut hujuſmodi matrimonium diſſolvatur; nos patienter toleravimus, ſi ſecundum eandem conſuetudinem, eidem mulieri cui voluerit nubendi in Domino conceſſeris facultatem. By this we do find, that the Church of Rome itſelf doth grant no Separations in Matters of Matrimony, where the Church of France doth; and if the Pope permit, in France itſelf, that a Divorce ſhould be made, it is but a Toleration, and not this neither, but where it is conſuetudo generalis Eccleſiæ Gallicanæ; which if you will apply unto this Cauſe in Queſtion, you muſt ſhew me, that in England it hath been a general Cuſtom, that a Nullity in Marriage may be pronounced propter impotentiam verſus hanc; which if you cannot ſhew, as indeed you cannot, nor give any true Example that ever hath been of any ſuch Separation within this Church, I may both in Law and Conſcience conclude, that I dare not introduce any Novelty, and ſo conſequently pronounce for the Nullity of this Marriage. Many Things are done in France, whereof if we in England had the Examination, we ſhould, peradventure, find the Fact different from that which they conceived; or if we agree in the Fact, we ſhould give another Sentence. It is not unknown how, within the Space of one Year, there hath been much ado in France about two Women, Magdalen and Louyſe, pretended to be poſſeſſed with a great many Devils, and how Verrine, a principal Spirit in one of them, hath avowed and maintained the Maſs, Invocation of Saints, Adoration of Images, and a great many other Points of the Groſſneſs of Popery; and a Book hereof hath been printed and reprinted in Paris, with the Approbation of the State, and Allowance of learned Men; in which the Church of England would certainly diſſent, and proclaim the whole Buſineſs to be but an Impoſture; as the very like was in the Days of Queen Elizabeth, when the Devils of Denham were ſaid to poſſeſs Sarah Williams and her Siſter, and ſome other Perſons; and much ado was made of it, and divers fond People believing thoſe Knacks, turned Papiſts thereupon; yet the Iſſue of all was, that it proved no better than a ſhameful Deluſion, and a great abuſing of credulous and light-believing Perſons.

3. But now to proceed farther: If it ſhall be ſaid, It is not the Novelty, nor the Want of Cuſtom here in England, which ſhould prejudice the Truth; valeat veritas, whereſoever or whenſoever it appears: The Proofs are evident whereupon we do ſtand, and that will enforce the Sentence. My Anſwer thereunto is, Let that be made manifeſt, and clear, and perſpicuous unto the Conſcience of an underſtanding Man, and I ſhall concur with you: But how ſhall I find this in a Matter of this Quality? Becauſe it is nothing elſe but Truth which we do aim at, it were fit that all Probations, if not which are poſſibly, yet at the leaſt which reaſonably may be had, ſhould be got together to enforce a Concluſion of this Conſequence. My Books tell me, In valore matrimonii inveſtigando quæcunque probationes poſſibiles adhibendæ ſunt, et potius debent eſſe ſuperfluæ quàm diminutæ. It is Solomon's Saying, Prov. xxv. It is the Honour of a King to find out a Thing. And wherein can Judges beſtow their Time better in a Point of Difficulty, than to ſearch and ſearch again, by all honeſt and good Means, to know what is the Bottom of that which lieth ſecret, that they may ſatisfy their own Conſcience, and the Conſcience of others, in the Sentence which they give, and leave no Kind of Scruple, which may trouble their own Thoughts? Whether theſe Things have been done in this preſent Caſe, I appeal to your own Conſciences; whether the Writers do not mention divers Things; whether the Counſel for my Lord have not ſpoke of ſundry Matters; whether we that be the Judges, have not thought of divers Courſes convenient to be held; of all which no Piece or Parcel hath been permitted unto us. The Proofs then which we have had, do ariſe only out of the Depoſitions, and if there be not Proof ſufficient, where ſhall we ſeek for it? Let us then conſider them. I will tell you my Opinion of them. I find nothing in them all, which is not in Subſtance contained in the Anſwers of my Lord of Eſſex: A Noble Perſonage ſaith, That in the Hearing of divers Things, the Earl hath ſaid, that he was not able to know his Lady carnally; the Earl thinking this to be true. But this is but a Relation of Wonder ſpoken extrajudicially; and therefore, for the underſtanding of the Truth therein, we are to have Recourſe unto that, which by the ſaid Earl is judicially depoſed. Divers Witneſſes do ſpeak, that the Earl and the Lady have lived and lain together for divers Years; my Lord doth acknowledge it in his Anſwer; the Matrons and Midwives do declare, that in their Judgment my Lady is a Virgin, and therefore, that ſhe was never known carnally by the Earl; himſelf confeſſeth that he did never know her. So that now, all in Subſtance depending upon his Lordſhip's Anſwer, it ought to be our Labour to ſcan that

* In the ſhort Caſe of Mrs. Catharine Weld, (Daughter to Lord Aſton) and Edward Weld, Eſq. her Huſband, printed in 1733, the Caſes of Bury and Eſſex are thus quoted in p. 42, 43: "The famous Caſe of John Bury, Eſq. of the County of Devon, in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, is a proper Caution in reſpect to ſuch Demands for annulling Contracts of Marriage, ſince ſuch Nullities often occaſion much Noiſe and Confuſion; and inſtead of hurting none, as has been aſſerted on the other Side, almoſt always have ſtirred up implacable Malice in the Party declared incapable, and the Conſequences have not ſeldom brought a Diſreputation on the Court who pronounced it.

"In order to which, let us return a little to the Hiſtory of Bury's Caſe. His firſt Wife Willimot libelled him for Inſufficiency as to carnal Encounters, and upon Inſpection it appeared he had but one little Teſticle, of the Size of a ſmall Bean. The Eccleſiaſtical Court, on this and other corroborating Evidence, gave Sentence with the Libel, and, ſo far as they were able, annulled the Marriage.

"Willimot quickly took the Advantage of this Sentence, and married again. Bury was, it ſeems, not at all ſatisfied with this juridical Sentiment of his Incapacity, but married alſo a ſecond Wife, Philippa, by whom he had a Son. This afterwards drew the Succeſſion to Bury's Eſtate into Queſtion, on the Legitimacy of this Son. The Common Lawyers were unanimouſly of Opinion, that the Church Authority exerted in pronouncing the Nullity being plainly deceived in the very Ground upon which it went, that Sentence was in itſelf void, and the firſt Marriage between Bury and Willimot remained, notwithſtanding it, good.

"It is with ſome Reluctance I mention the Caſe of the Earl of Eſſex and Lady Frances Howard, the moſt famous Inſtance in our Kingdom of a Sentence of this Kind, which was given by the Majority of a Court of Delegates, compoſed of the greateſt Biſhops and Men who were ſkilled in the Civil Law; yet, notwithſtanding, the Solemnity of Interrogatories, the Earl of Eſſex's direct Anſwer that ſhe was a Virgin for him, the Verdict of Inſpectreſſes, the Pomp of Compurgators, and all the other Colours which could be invented to gloſs their Proceeding; yet ſo ſcandalous was this Deciſion in the Eyes of the World, that it loſt the Characters of all thoſe Judges who concurred in pronouncing Sentence, and faſtened the Nick-name of Sir Nullity on one of the Sons of a Biſhop concerned in it, when he was ſoon after knighted."

And Page 47. "Bury's Caſe was indeed an odd one, but it had no Effect when quoted to the Biſhops and Doctors in my Lady Eſſex's Caſe; and though ſo many hard Cenſures have fallen on thoſe who decided it againſt the Validity of the Marriage, yet the Event did in ſome Meaſure juſtify their Opinions; ſince the Lord Eſſex, though he ventured on a ſecond Marriage, yet had not Iſſue by the Lady."

† De frigidis et maleficiatis, cap. 2. in Supplemento.

exactly, and to judge of it circumspectly. Doth not he then say, in responsione ad quartum, That though divers Times, in the first Year of their Cohabitation, he did attempt to know her, (which divers Times may be twice or thrice, and no more) yet in the two latter Years he did never attempt it? But doth he not say plainly, responsione ad tertium, That since the Time of his Marriage, he had not, nor hath any Sickness or Impediment to hinder him, but that he might have had, and may have carnal Knowledge with a Woman? This is for the general, that he hath no Impediment: But, in responsione ad quintum, doth he not descend more particularly unto his own Lady; that it is true that he did never carnally know the said Lady Frances? Mark now what followeth; but that to the Act of carnal Copulation he did not find any Defect in himself. Indeed he was not able to penetrate into her Body; but he layeth the Fault of that upon her, as may be seen in his Answer unto the 7th Article. And it may not be forgotten, that in the End of the Answer to the 4th Article, he saith, That sometimes she refused him. These Things are evident, and cannot be denied. The only Matter which maketh Shew against this, is, that he acknowledgeth that he hath lain by her, and hath had no Motion to have carnal Knowledge of her; but especially, that in the End of his Answer unto the 6th Article, "And believeth he never shall." These Words are the Shield and Buckler of the contrary Part; but how easily do they vanish away, or fall to the Ground! For I appeal unto you all, who were present at the Examinations, (and those were ten of us in Number, who now sit here present) whether the Earl did not openly subjoin that to his Answer; "When I came out of France, I did love her; but "I do not so now, neither ever shall I." I appeal unto the Conscience of you all, except my Lord of Winton, and my Lord of Rochester, who were not then Commissioners, whether this be so or no: Here then is the Matter, it is the Want of Love, which restraineth all Motions of carnal Concupiscence, and not any Impotency; it is defectus voluntatis, and not defectus potestatis. Let Discontentment be removed, and there will be an End of all the Inability: Married Men best know these Things; but out of common Reason, there can be no great Longing, where there is no great Liking; many Things they say fall out between Man and Wife, that for some good Space of Time there is no carnal Conjunction, and yet no Impotency concluded thereby may be. The Case is famous of Pulcheria, Sister unto the Emperor Theodosius the younger, who having vowed Virginity, was notwithstanding afterward, for great Reason of State, thought fit to be married unto Martianus, who thereupon was chosen Emperor; she would not condescend thereunto, till she had Promise from him, that her Virginity should be preserved, and with such a Promise he did marry her; so that they lived together in Shew as Man and Wife, but indeed as a Brother and a Sister. Our Stories do make Mention, that he who was called Saint Edward in England, I mean King Edward the Confessor, did marry a Lady, the Knowledge of whose Body he never had, neither did this wedded Couple ever endeavour to break their Virginity. The Writers do declare no other Reason hereof, but that they had an Opinion, that to live in Virginity, was the more meritorious, according to the Superstition of those Times. Now were it not a strange Argument, to conclude in this Manner, that because Martianus had not conjugal Copulation with Pulcheria, therefore he was a Man impotent; or, because King Edward had not carnal Knowledge of his Wife, therefore he could not know her? I know the Circumstances of this present Question do differ from those, but the Ground of the Argument is the same. Want of Act, upon private Reason, will never enforce a Want of Power. And this is our Case, as I understand it, which maketh me unwilling to consent to this Nullity.

4. There followeth now another Argument, which I shall deliver briefly. We have always agreed, that the Chapter in the Law, which containeth our Case, is the Chapter Litera de frigidis et maleficiatis; for if it be not there, it is no where to be found. When we have delivered many Things appertaining to this Cause out of the best Writers of the former Ages, or of our own Time; as that my Lord should be inspected, or that Physicians should use their Art to discern and remove Impotency, if any were to be found, or that Fasting, Prayer, and Alms, should be exercised to overcome this Evil, and divers other Points of like Nature; it hath still been answered to us, So say the Interpreters, but it is not in the Law; or it is in the Decrees which bind not, but it is not in the Decretals; or it is a Counsel and Exhortation, but it is no Mandate or Injunction. I now therefore mention something, which is in the Law, and in the very Body of this Law, and it is the Pope's Mandate; and that is, that my Lord should have given his juramentum cum septima manu, as well as my Lady; for Want whereof, the whole Proceeding is annullated. This is the Pope's Commandment, Quocirca mandamus; and it requireth the Oath of both, ipsis cum septima propinquorum manu firmantibus juramenta, se commisceri carnaliter nequivisse, then preferatis divortii sententiam inter eos. This is a Thing so clear, that when on Thursday last, by Chance, there fell Mention of it; the Counsel for my Lady (Dr. Stuart and Dr. Bird) were so far from giving Answer to it, that, to speak plainly, they stood as Men blasted or blighted with Lightning, and knew not which Way to turn them; as was manifest not only unto us, but to all the Standers-by; which I do not utter to do them any Wrong, for they are worthy Men, both learned and faithful to the Cause which they undertake; but the Note is, that this Objection can receive no true Answer. I know, that since that Time there hath been Labour made, to give a Salve to this Sore, but no Man's Wit can do it. I said, and say still, that no Man's Loquence, neither any Man's Eloquence, can persuade me, that ipsis firmantibus juramento is of the singular Number. I know there hath been tumbling and turning of Books, to find some Shew to meet with this Objection; but nothing can be found which will hold out this Water. The Proceeding therefore doth appear to be unperfect and defective in that, which is mainly required by the Law, which makes me to conclude in this Fashion against some unperfect Speech touching my Lord of Essex his affirming or denying of his own Inability towards my Lady; that either he doth confess it, or deny it: If he do acknowledge it, where is then his Oath cum septima manu, which the Law imposeth? If he do deny it, where is then your Proof of his Inability, since you ground the whole Substance of the Nullity upon his Lordship's Answer, "That he could not know her car-"nally?"

I must yet crave Patience to go a little farther. One other Exception which I take unto this Nullity, is the Manner of the Sentence, which by us is to be given, which hath ever been resolved should be in general, not expressing any Reason particular wherefore we do give it. To say that my Lord is impotens in genere versus hanc, and not to tell wherein, is to propound a Riddle to the World, which no Man understandeth. It were a strange Thing in Learning to say, that such a Creature is Animal, and not to tell whether it be a Man, or a Horse, or a Fish, or a Bird. And although it hath been said, and strongly maintained (by Sir Julius Cæsar and Sir Daniel Dun), "That it is enough in a Sentence to pro-"nounce a Thing in general, and that the Judge is bound to give no "Reason of it;" yet I would be glad to know whether, howsoever I will conceal the particular Reason from the Hearers or Standers-by, yet were it not fit, that I who am the Judge, and must give the Sentence, or at least consent unto it, should know the Ground whereupon I do give it? Give me leave to speak my Conscience; I think a Sentence, propter latens aliquod impedimentum, which is perpetuum et incurabile versus hanc, is nothing but a Device to serve a present Turn, which we must deliver in such obscure Words, to blind Posterity that comes after, and to amuse those which will enquire into it, as if we had known something which we held not fit to utter, when in Truth we know nothing. I find the Texts of the Law do still set down the Reason, and give a Case particular, as Frigidity, or Section, or Unfitness of the generative Part, or some such other Matter; but for an Inability, propter latens impedimentum, my Dullness is such, that in the whole Book I cannot discover: And it is a Mystery that cannot enter into me, how a Man should be potent unto other Women, and impotent to his Wife, if it be not in case of Phrensy, which is not latens impedimentum, and which also findeth lucida intervalla. It was the Assertion of him in the Law, (Cap. Literæ) "That he did not know "his Wife, but that he had a Power to know other Women." But what wise Man doth believe him? Or what is there in the Text which doth declare it to be true? I will end this Point with that of our Saviour in the xxixth of St. Matthew, That there are three Sorts of Eunuchs, or Men unfit to marry; the one is of God's making, the second is of Men's making, and the third is of their own making. The first are they that are past from their Mother's Belly, who either are frigidi, or such as have not Members fit for Generation, or some apparent Debility. The second are those who are castrated by Men, or by some Violence have that hindred in them, whereunto by Nature they are fit in respect of Procreation. I will not here dispute that idle Maleficium, because yourselves are flown from it. The third hath no Coherence with this Nobleman. Let me know then, in which of the former two you do place it. Is he past from his Mother's Womb? Why then do you give him Leave to marry again, that he who hath deluded and frustrated one, may also delude another? If he be in the second Rank, why do you not tell us what the Violence is which he hath sustained from Men, or from any other Creature? Let us have, I pray you, some kind of Satisfaction, and let not this Ænigma in general blind us, lest the World should say, that wilfully we shut our Eyes against the Truth.

6. One Reason I have more, why I yield not to this Nullity, and then I have done. It is drawn from the Inconveniencies which will follow thereupon, if we dissolve the Matrimony in such Case as is now desired. I look first on the Detriment and Harm which will follow, if the Marriage do continue in Force and in Vigour, and I do find, that all the Inconvenience doth redound but to one Person. Between a Lady and her Husband there is some Discontentment, which Time and God's Grace may easily remove: There is then an End of that Controversy. Or, if the Disagreement shall never be appeased, it is no more but one Lady doth want that Solace which marital Conjunction would afford unto her; which many a good Woman is inforced to endure, and yet commits no Sin, neither labours to violate the Laws of the Church: For suppose the Husband be sick of some long Disease, or languishing Weakness, must not the Wife sustain it with Patience and Quietness? Suppose the Husband be Captive in some foreign Nation, or Prisoner in his own Country, whereby Occasion of marital Connexion is taken from the Wife, no Divine will pronounce, that a Separation is in this Case to be sought. Let a Woman do that in Modesty, which others are enforced to do out of Necessity; and let her expect God's Leisure, in Fasting and in Prayer, and in other Humiliation. This is all the Inconvenience which ariseth to one Person, if she have not the Performance of conjugal Duty.

But look on the other Side, what are the Incongruities, or other Absurdities, which will easily follow, if such Dissolutions of Marriages be permitted. I will name only two. The first is the Hazard of violating and annulling of Marriage by an ordinary Practice; for if the Gap be open, who will not run in? And the Judge must dispense the Law indifferently to all, if the Proofs be accordingly; for we may not say, that it is for noble Personages, and great Peers in the State, and not for others of inferior Rank. Whatsoever Couple therefore have no Children, and live discontented, come presently to take Part of this general Jubilee: And albeit they know in their Consciences, that it which they attempt is unlawful; yet, to satisfy their Fancy, they will collude the one with the other, and enter a Prosecution secretly agreed upon, howsoever in open Shew they seem to differ the one from the other: And who can doubt, but for Money or Favour, they may procure Witnesses, and others who are to be used by the Formality of the Law, to testify and depose so much as serves the Turn? By which Means we are at a fair Pass, when not only the Marriage-Bed shall be defiled, and Adulteries made frequent, which is against the second Table of the Law, but Perjury shall be committed, and God's Name taken in vain, which is repugnant unto the first Table.

A second Inconvenience is the Danger, lest both Parties which are freed from their Matrimony, should divers Years after be returned to it again, when perhaps the Husband by a second Wife hath Children, and the Wife by a second Husband hath Store of Issue also; for there is no Doubt in the Law, but if a Man supposed to be frigidus, and therefore divorced, shall afterwards marry, and by begetting of Children shew himself not to be impotent, but apt for Generation, this Man is to be taken from his second Woman, and returned to his first Wife; and the Woman for whose Marriage a Nullity was pronounced in respect of the Insufficiency of her Mate, must be now taken from her second Companion, and returned to the first. Of this the Reason is apparent, quia decepta est Ecclesia; they adjudged him to be impotent upon wrong Information, whom Experience and Truth hath declared to be potent. And what Man can foretel, how Variety of Times may produce other Judgments? There may be Question of Land or Inheritance, of Legitimation or Illegitimation; and a wise Man would be unwilling to bring it on the Stage when he is dead and gone, and to make it the Fable of the World, whether his Children be born lawfully, or to be reputed in the Rank of Bastards. The World is subject to much Mutability, and Judges of future Times may peradventure be led with the Power of some great Persons, and perhaps may think upon other Considerations, that it is but a Conceit, that a Man should be potent unto another Woman, and impotent to his Wife; or that the Common Law doth not know any Maleficium; or that they do not believe, that there may be latens impedimentum, perpetuum et incurabile versus hanc, when they see that the Husband is, in Shew of the World, a lusty able Man, and hath well proved his Potency, by begetting three, or five, or seven, or ten Children upon another Woman. These are pretty Things, if a Man do well consider them, and will serve to make Distraction between Kinsman and Kinsman, and make Work for the Lawyers, and keep the Courts at Westminster that they shall not be idle; which if we could not learn otherwise, yet Bury's Case before remembered doth teach us, who was divorced from his Wife in the third or fourth Year of Queen Elizabeth; and when his Brother had enjoyed his Land until the fortieth Year of the said Queen, then was he thrust out of it, and the questioned Son, or his Heir, was put into Possession of it by Trial of Law; a great deal of Money being spent in that Contention, and both Civilians and Common Lawyers in great Numbers were entertained of both Sides; and yet the Controversy was not so appeased, but that of my certain Knowledge, within these three Years it had been raised again, and a strong Device was laid how to bring this about again; only myself withstood it, and would not give way unto it, when I was divers Times consulted thereabout; conceiving very well that it would not be long before some Prohibition would come out of some of the King's Courts, because the Common Law disliked, that Men's Inheritance, especially after Judgments, should be disturbed, when the Parties whom most of all it concerned, are dead long before, and cannot answer for themselves; whereas, peradventure, if themselves had been living, they could have answered that for themselves which other Men knew not. And there ought to be a settled Course in all Things appertaining to Inheritance.

By this Time, I hope you see, that it is not out of Wilfulness, or prejudicate Conceit, that I have impugned this Nullity, but out of Ground of Reason, and out of Scruple of Conscience, which is it that must accuse me, or excuse me before the ever-living God. I know you have heard what other Men have said, and they have answered for themselves. Upon all which Grounds I make this Conclusion, That howsoever this Matter of Separation with great Earnestness hath been pursued, yet it is the surer and the safer Way to leave it as we find it, and in no Case to dissolve it. I oft remember that Saying, which is frequent among the Canonists, Tolerabilius est aliquos contra statuta hominum dimittere copulatos, quam conjunctos legitimè contra statuta Domini separare. That concerneth us who be the Judges; and for the Parties themselves, who perhaps can be content to be severed, and to marry elsewhere, let them know this from me, that they may best expect a Blessing from God when they live in that State where fewest Scruples shall arise in their Mind: From which whether they shall be free in leaving their old Conjunction, and betaking themselves unto a new, I refer to their wiser Thoughts, when in all Probability, if any Cross or Thwart shall arise in their new-intended Matrimony, this Perplexity and Anguish will still follow their Souls, that they have done that whereof in their truest Meditations they have no Ground of Conscience, and therefore that it is the Hand of God upon them, who giveth not a Blessing unto that which was unduly sought.

You have thus at large heard my Opinion against the Annullation of this Marriage. Now, if you ask me, What would you then have done concerning this Couple of Noble Personages? my Answer is, That I would have a Reconciliation by all Means to be laboured; and although that be difficult to bring about, yet it is the more Honour when it is effected. Charity will forgive and forget the highest Offences. It is St. Augustine's Judgment, "That in the greatest Breaches between Man and Wife, Reconciliation is the best; and the worthiest Pains that can be bestowed, "is to bring that about." There wanteth only one or more good Mediators, and then great Things will be compassed. The Disagreement was inconceivable between God and Man, yet Christ, that great Mediator, did take it away. The Breach was very bitter between England and Spain, yet our most blessed Sovereign, as a gracious Intercessor, did give an End unto it. Let Divines be used now, as much as Lawyers have been used heretofore. Take the godly Counsel of the one, which will be given freely, as you have taken the Advice of the other with much Expence of Money. This I wish for, this I pray for; and if my Counsel had been used, before Things grew to this Height, I would have used my best Means to have wrought an Atonement, But because there is no Hope thereof, and this doth expect a legal Decision, proceed you that please unto this Separation. Give your Sentence in scriptis, as you have declared your Opinion in verbis. Five might have served the Turn by the Words of the Commission, if seven had dissented; but you have seven Suffrages, and therefore proceed; only this I crave of the Register, that he do make his Act, that this Sentence is given, Joanne Episcopo London. D. Joanne Bennet milite, D. Francisco James, D. Thoma Edwards, dissentientibus, potissimum verò Georgio Archiepiscopo Cantaurienſi renitente.

This is the Substance of that Matter which the Archbishop of Canterbury, out of certain Notes which he had drawn up, was ready to have uttered, and no one material Point is added thereunto, as appeareth unto me, the Writer hereof, comparing it with the Notes at such Time as I ended the writing of this, which was on the 28th of September, 1613, three Days after the Time when it should have been spoken.

The KING's Letter to the Archbishop of Canterbury.

My Lord,

AFTER I had received, and read your Papers, which the Bishop of Litchfield brought me, I found it very necessary that I should make Answer thereunto at my first Leisure: For whereas, before, at my last Meeting with you, ye seemed to me to be only as yet unresolved what Sentence to give in this Business, till you had heard it thoroughly disputed, that by that Means ye might be fully informed of the State of the Cause; it appears now by these Papers, that you have, after your last Day's Consultation, put on a negative Resolution, grounded upon Fundaments of Divinity and Conscience, as you think, which hath moved me to send you herewith my Judgment upon your Arguments, in regard that I did ever hold it necessary, that in a Matter of this Weight all my Commissioners should be as near of one Mind, as might be; and therefore I would be sorry that your private Conceits should so blind your Judgment, as to make you and your Followers draw the Catharrows (Perplex or Torment) against your Yoke-fellows; for, that I may now open plainly my Heart unto you, at my first reading of your Papers from the Bishop, I chanced to cast mine Eye first upon the Paper of your Arguments, before I had looked upon your Letter, and lighting upon your first Words, "Inasmuch "as we do firmly believe, &c." I protest I thought it had been some strange Confession of Faith, that you had intercepted amongst some of the Sectaries; but when I had read out the rest of that first Article, God is my Judge, I thought that Paper had been some Pasquil made against this Divorce, which coming to your Hands ye had sent me, and therefore without reading any farther therein, I looked upon your Letter, which resolved me of all these Doubts; but after that I had fully perused, and rightly considered of all your Papers, I found your Principles so strange, and your Doubts so far sought that I thought it necessary, as I have already said, to set down unto you my Observations upon them. But to conclude my Letter with that Plainness that becometh one of my Quality, I must freely confess, that I find the Grounds of your Opposition so weak; as I have Reason to apprehend, that the Prejudice you have of the Persons, is the greatest Motive of breeding these Doubts into you; which Prejudice is the most dangerous Thing that can fall in a Judge for misleading of his Mind. And the Reason moving me to this Apprehension, is partly grounded upon your last Words to me at your parting from Windsor, and partly upon a Line scraped out in your Paper of Doubts: for I am sure you think me not so blunt a Secretary, but that I can read a Line so scraped out. In your last Speeches with me, you remember you told me what Assurance you had of the Earl's Ability out of his own Mouth, which you said you could not but trust, because he was so religious a Nobleman. But when I told you of the other Party's contrary Affirmation, you remember how you used the Word of Iniquity; and how far your interlined Line seems to have a Harmony with this Word, yourself can best judge. Now then, if I would ask you what Proof you have of the one's Religion more than the other's, you must answer me, by judging upon the Exterior; and how deceivable that Guess is, daily Experience teaches us—But with a holy Protestation that I never knew any thing but good in the young Earl. Was not this the Ground of Master Robert Bruse's Incredulity, because he knew the Earl of Gowry to be truly religious; and did not beg a Register. See Bothwell in his Preface of his Book De viris illustribus. And as for your Judgment of the other Party, Christ's Precept is the best Answer unto you, Nolite judicare. But if the Question were to judge of the Earl's Inclination, whether is it likely that you or I could best judge of it; I, he having been bred with my late Son, and served him so long; or you, that never spoke with him but once or twice in your Life, and never knew either Good or Evil of him but out of his own Mouth? I will conclude, therefore, with inverting the Argument; that if a Judge should have a Prejudice in respect of Persons, it should become you rather to have a kind of Faith implicit in my Judgment, as well in respect of some Skill I have in Divinity, as also that I hope no honest Man doubts of the Uprightness of my Conscience; and the best Thankfulness that you that are so far my Creature, can use towards me, is, to reverence and follow my Judgment, and not to contradict it, except where you may demonstrate unto me that I am mistaken, or wrong informed; and so farewel.

NUMBER II.

The CASE of a MURDER in HERTFORDSHIRE, found amongſt the Papers of that eminent Lawyer, Sir JOHN MAYNARD, Serjeant at Law, and ſome Time one of the Lords Commiſſioners of the Great Seal of ENGLAND, viz *.

The Caſe, or rather Hiſtory of a Caſe, that happened in the County of Hertford, I thought good to report here, though it happened in the fourth Year of King Charles the Firſt; that the Memory of it may not be loſt by the Miſcarriage of my Papers or otherwiſe. I wrote the Evidence that was given, which I and many others did hear; and I wrote it exactly according to what was depoſed at the Trial at the Bar of the King's Bench.

Jane Norkott, the Wife of Arthur Norkott, being murdered, the Queſtion was, How ſhe came by her Death?

THE Coroner's Inqueſt, on View of the Body, and Depoſitions of Mary Norkott, John Okeman, and Agnes his Wife, were inclined to find Jane Norkott a Felo de ſe; for they informed the Coroner and the Jury, "that ſhe was found dead in her Bed; the Knife ſticking "in the Floor, and her Throat cut.---That the Night before ſhe went to "Bed with her Child (Plaintiff in this Appeal), her Huſband being abſent, "and that no other Perſon, after ſuch Time as ſhe was gone to Bed, "came into the Houſe, the Examinants lying in the outer Room, and "they muſt needs have ſeen or known if any Stranger had come in:" Whereupon the Jury gave up to the Coroner a Verdict that ſhe was Felo de ſe. But afterwards upon Rumour amongſt the Neighbourhood, and their Obſervation of divers Circumſtances, which manifeſted that ſhe did not, nor could poſſibly (according to thoſe Circumſtances) murder herſelf; thereupon the Jury, whoſe Verdict was not yet drawn into Form by the Coroner, aſſented, and deſired the Coroner, that the Body which was buried might be taken up out of the Grave, which the Coroner aſſented unto; and thirty Days after her Death ſhe was taken up, in the Preſence of the Jury and a great Number of People: Whereupon the Jury changed their Verdict; and the Perſons being tried at Hertford Aſſizes, were acquitted; but ſo much againſt the Evidence, that Judge Hervey let fall his Opinion, that it were better an Appeal were brought, than ſo foul a Murder eſcape unpuniſhed. And, Paſchæ quarto Caroli, they were tried on the Appeal, which was brought by the young Child againſt his Father, Grandmother, and Aunt, and her Huſband Okeman; and becauſe the Evidence was ſo ſtrange, I took exact and particular Notice. And it was as follows:

After the Matters above-mentioned related, an ancient and grave Perſon, Miniſter to the Pariſh where the Fact was committed, being ſworn to give Evidence, according to Cuſtom, depoſed, "That the Body being "taken up out of the Grave, thirty Days after the Party's Death, and "lying on the Graſs, and the four Defendants being preſent, were requir-"ed each of them to touch the dead Body. Okeman's Wife fell upon her "Knees, and prayed God to ſhew Tokens of her Innocency. The Ap-"pellant did touch the dead Body; whereupon the Brow of the Dead, "which before was of a livid and carrion Colour, (in Terminis, the verbal "Expreſſion of the Witneſs) began to have a Dew, or gentle Sweat, ariſe "on it, which increaſed by Degrees till the Sweat ran down in Drops on "the Face; the Brow turned to a lively and freſh Colour, and the De-"ceaſed opened one of her Eyes, and ſhut it again; and this opening the "Eye was done three ſeveral Times; ſhe likewiſe thruſt out the Ring or "Marriage Finger three Times, and pulled it in again; and the Finger "dropped Blood from it on the Graſs." Sir Nicholas Hyde, Chief Juſtice, ſeeming to doubt the Evidence, aſked the Witneſs, Who ſaw this beſides you?

Witneſs. I cannot ſwear what others ſaw: But, my Lord, (ſaid he) I do believe the whole Company ſaw it; and if it had been thought a Doubt, Proof would have been made of it, and many would have atteſted with me. Then the Witneſs, obſerving ſome Admiration in the Auditors, ſpake farther: "My Lord, I am Miniſter of the Pariſh, and have long "known all the Parties, but never had Occaſion of Diſpleaſure againſt "any of them, nor had to do with them, or they with me; but, as I was "Miniſter, the Thing was wonderful to me: But I have no Intereſt in "the Matter, but as called upon to teſtify the Truth, and that I have "done." (This Witneſs was a very reverend Perſon, as I gueſſed, of about ſeventy Years of Age; his Teſtimony was delivered gravely and temperately, but to the great Admiration of the Auditory.) Whereupon, applying himſelf to the Chief Juſtice, he ſaid, "My Lord, my Bro-"ther here preſent is Miniſter of the next Pariſh adjacent, and I am ſure "ſaw all done that I have affirmed:" Therefore that Perſon was alſo ſworn to give Evidence, and did depoſe in every Point—"the ſweating of "the Brow—the Change of the Colour—thrice opening the Eye—and "the thrice Motion of the Finger, and drawing it in again;" only the firſt Witneſs added, that he himſelf dipped his Finger in the Blood which came from the dead Body to examine it, and he ſwore he believed it was Blood.

I conferred afterwards with Sir Edward Powell, Barriſter at Law, and others, who all concurred in the Obſervation: And for myſelf, if I were upon Oath, can depoſe, That theſe Depoſitions (eſpecially the firſt Witneſs) are truly reported in Subſtance.

The other Evidence given againſt the Priſoners, viz. the Grandmother of the Plaintiff, and againſt Okeman and his Wife, That they confeſſed they lay in the next Room to the dead Body that Night; and that none came into the Houſe till they found her dead the next Morning; therefore if ſhe did not murder herſelf, they muſt be the Murderers. To that End further Proof was made,

Firſt, That ſhe lay in a "compoſed Manner in her Bed, the Bedcloaths "not at all diſturbed, and her Child by her in Bed."

Secondly, "Her Throat cut from Ear to Ear, and her Neck broke." So that if ſhe firſt cut her Throat, ſhe could not poſſibly break her Neck in the Bed. Non Contra.

Thirdly, "There was no Blood in the Bed, ſaving a Tincture of Blood "on the Bolſter whereon her Head lay, but no Subſtance of Blood at all."

Fourthly, "From the Bed's Head there was a Stream of Blood on the "Floor, which ran along until it ponded in the Bendings of the Floor to "a very great Quantity; and there was alſo another Stream of Blood on "the Floor at the Bed's Foot, which ponded alſo on the Floor to a very "great Quantity; but no Continuance or Communication of Blood of "either of thoſe two Places, from one to the other, neither upon the Bed," ſo that ſhe bled in two ſeveral Places; and it was depoſed, turning up the Matt of the Bed, "that there were Clots of congealed Blood in the "Straw of the Matt underneath."

Fifthly, "The bloody Knife was found in the Morning ſticking in the "Floor, a good Diſtance from the Bed; but the Point of the Knife, as it "ſtuck, was towards the Bed, and the Haft from the Bed."

Laſtly, "There was the Print of a Thumb and four Fingers of a Left "Hand."

* Communicated (many Years ago) to the Editor, by Dr. Rawlinſon, F. R. S.

This Account being from the MS. Notes of ſo great a Man, we here inſert, though rather a Narrative than a Trial. We have received ſeveral Narratives and Hiſtorical Accounts of Murder, which are not proper for this Work; however, one of the moſt remarkable of them we ſhall give an Account of.

The Caſe of JOAN PERRY, and her two Sons, JOHN and RICHARD PERRY, for the ſuppoſed Murder of WILLIAM HARRISON, Gent.

William Harriſon, Steward to Lady Campden, at Campden in Glouceſterſhire, about ſeventy Years of Age, went Auguſt 16, 1660, to receive my Lady's Rents, which he did, and not returning Home that Night, gave Cauſe to ſuſpect he was murdered. After ſome Time, John Perry, his Servant, gave Information before a Juſtice of Peace, That his Brother Richard had robbed and murdered him, and his Mother ſtood by whilſt it was done; and that Richard had once before broke open his Maſter's Houſe; and robbed him.—At the following Aſſizes, Joan, John and Richard Perry had two Indictments preferred againſt them, one for breaking open the Houſe of Mr. Harriſon, and robbing him of 140*l.* in the Year 1659; and the other for robbing and murdering him, Aug. 16, 1660. Upon the laſt Indictment, the then Judge of Aſſize, Sir Chriſtopher Turner, Knt. would not try them, becauſe the Body was not found: On the former Indictment for the Robbery, they pleaded not Guilty; but on People's perſuading them, they retracted their Plea, and pleaded Guilty; begging the Benefit of his Majeſty's moſt gracious Pardon and Act of Oblivion, which was granted them: And tho' they pleaded Guilty to this Indictment, being prompted thereto, yet they all at their Deaths denied it. Yet at this Aſſize, John Perry perſiſted in his Story, That his Mother and Brother had murdered his Maſter, and that they had attempted to poiſon him in Gaol for diſcovering it, ſo that he durſt not eat or drink with them. And,

At the next Aſſizes following, Joan, John and Richard Perry, were, by the Judge of Aſſize, Sir Robert Hyde, Knt. tried upon the Indictment of Murder, and pleaded Not Guilty; when John's Confeſſion before the Juſtice was proved vivâ voce, by ſeveral Witneſſes who heard the ſame. He then told the Court, He was mad, and did not know what he had ſaid. The other two, Richard and Joan Perry, declared they were wholly innocent of what they were accuſed; that they knew nothing of Mr. Harriſon's Death, nor what was become of him; and Richard ſaid, his Brother had accuſed others as well as him, to have murdered his Maſter; which the Judge bidding him prove, he ſaid, That moſt of them that had given Evidence againſt him, knew it; but naming nobody, nor any body ſpeaking to it, the Jury found them all Guilty.

Some Days after, being brought to the Place of Execution, which was on Broadway-Hill, within Sight of Campden, the Mother (being reputed a Witch, and to have ſo bewitched her Sons, they could confeſs nothing while ſhe lived) was firſt executed: (Strange Ignorance and Superſtition!) After which, Richard, being on the Ladder, profeſſed, as he had done all along, That he was wholly innocent of the Fact for which he was to die, and that he knew nothing of Mr. Harriſon's Death, nor what was become of him; and did, with great Earneſtneſs, beg and beſeech his Brother (for the Satisfaction of the whole World and his own Conſcience) to declare what he knew concerning it. But he, with a dogged and ſurly Carriage, told the People, he was not obliged to confeſs to them; yet, immediately before his Death, ſaid, He knew nothing of his Maſter's Death, nor what was become of him, but they might hereafter poſſibly hear.——It is ſtrange that a Judge would order the Execution of three Perſons, for the ſuppoſed Murder of a Man whoſe Body was not found, or heard of at the Time of Trial, upon the Confeſſion of a Madman or an Enthuſiaſt!——However, Mr. Harriſon, ſome Years after, appeared alive; and in a Letter to Sir Thomas Overbury, of Burton in Glouceſterſhire, gave an Account, how that very Night, Auguſt 16, returning Home, after receiving the Rents, he was ſet upon, and forced by ſeveral Stages to the Sea-Side, put on board a Ship, and carried into Turkey, where he was ſold for a Slave to a Phyſician, and continued with him for about a Year and three Quarters, when his Maſter died; then he made the beſt of his Way to a Sea-Port, and with great Difficulty got on board a Hamburgh Ship bound for Portugal, and arrived ſafe at Liſbon; from whence, by the Means of an Engliſh Merchant, he got on board an Engliſh Veſſel, and arrived ſafe at Dover, and from thence to his own Home, to the Surprize of all the Country. This Account was ſent with the following Letter from Sir Thomas Overbury, to Dr. Shirley, who publiſhed it.

"SIR,

"I Herewith ſend you a ſhort Narrative of that no leſs ſtrange than unhappy Buſineſs, which ſome Years ſince happened in my Neighbourhood; the Truth of every Parti-"cular whereof I am able to atteſt: And I think it may very well be reckoned among the moſt remarkable Occurrences of this Age. You may diſpoſe of it as you pleaſe; "and in whatever I can ſerve you, you may freely command me, as

"Your moſt affectionate Kinſman and humble Servant,

Burton, Aug. 2, 1676. "THOMAS OVERBURY."

This was licenſed (to be printed) September 8, 1676, by Sir Robert L'Eſtrange.

Sir,

Sir Nicholas Hyde, Chief-Juſtice. How can you know the Print of a left Hand from the Print of a right Hand in ſuch a Caſe?

Witneſs. My Lord, it is hard to deſcribe; but if it pleaſe that Honourable Judge to put his left Hand upon your left Hand, you cannot poſſibly place your right Hand in the ſame Poſture; which being done, and appearing ſo, the Defendants had Time to make their Defence, but gave no Evidence to any Purpoſe. The Jury departed from the Bar; and returning, acquitted Okeman, and found the other three Guilty; who being ſeverally demanded, why Judgment ſhould not be pronounced, ſaid nothing, but ſeverally, "I did not do it, I did not do it."——Judgment was given, and the Grandmother and Huſband executed; but the Aunt had the Privilege to be ſpared Execution, being with Child. I inquired if they confeſſed any Thing at their Execution, but they did not, as I was told.

NUMBER III.

The Proceedings againſt Mr. BENJAMIN LEECH, Bricklayer, at the Old-Bailey, October 14, 1682, for a Contempt, in offering a frivolous Plea to the Court.

THE Poll for Election of Mayor for the Year enſuing being continued by Adjournments from Michaelmas-Day to the 2d of October, one Benjamin Leech, Bricklayer, being a Freeman and Liveryman of the City of London, came to Guildhall to poll, wherein in Diſcourſe he was charged to have ſaid to this Effect, "That Sir William Prichard "ſhould never be Lord-Mayor, unleſs he came in by Stealth, as North "and Rich were Sheriffs;" for which he was, without any Conſtable or other legal Officer, carried before Sir John Moor, Lord-Mayor, before whom he owned the Words, or Words to that Effect; whereupon he was, by the Lord-Mayor, committed immediately to the Compter, from whence he was bailed next Day, giving his Recognizance, with Sureties, to appear at the next Seſſions at Guildhall; which Seſſions of the Peace being adjourned to the 13th of October to the Old-Bailey, there was a Bill of Indictment preferred and found againſt the ſaid Mr. Leech, the Tenor of which followeth, viz.

London. ſſ. THE Jurors for our Lord the King, upon their Oaths do preſent, That Benjamin Leech, late of London, Bricklayer, being a Perſon of an evil and perverſe Diſpoſition, the ſecond Day of October, in the thirty-fourth Year of the Reign of our Lord Charles the Second, by the Grace of God of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, &c. deviſing, and falſely and maliciouſly intending the Peace of our ſaid Lord the King, within the City of London, to diſquiet and diſturb, and divers Differences and Diſſentions amongſt the Citizens of the City aforeſaid, and other the Liege People and Subjects of our ſaid Lord the King, within this Kingdom of England, of and concerning the Election of a Mayor and Sheriffs of the City aforeſaid, and County of Middleſex, to ſtir up, move and procure; and one Sir William Prichard, Knight, then, and yet one of the Aldermen of the City aforeſaid, then in Election of Mayor of the City aforeſaid, being for one Year then and yet to come; and alſo one Dudley North, Eſq. and one Peter Rich, Eſq. which Dudley North and Peter Rich, lately before that Time, in a due and lawful Manner, according to the ancient Privileges and Cuſtoms of the City aforeſaid, were elected and ſworn Sheriffs of the City of London, and County of Middleſex; and the Election of the aforeſaid Sheriffs by the Citizens of the City aforeſaid made, into the greateſt Hatred, Contempt, and Scandal, to bring the aforeſaid Benjamin Leech afterwards, that is to ſay, the ſaid ſecond Day of October, in the Year above-ſaid, at London, viz. in the Pariſh of St. Michael Baſſiſhaw, in the Ward of Baſſiſhaw, London, aforeſaid, in the Guildhall of the City aforeſaid, there his aforeſaid Contrivances and Intentions the better to perform, having Diſcourſe with one Thomas Smyth, in Guildhall aforeſaid, then and there falſely, unlawfully, unjuſtly, and maliciouſly did ſay, relate, and in the Hearing of divers the Liege People and Subjects of our ſaid Lord the King, Citizens of the City aforeſaid, publiſh, That Prichard (the aforeſaid Sir William Prichard, Knight, meaning) ſhould not be Lord-Mayor, (Lord-Mayor of the City aforeſaid, meaning) unleſs he would be Lord-Mayor unlawfully, and by Stealth, as the Sheriffs (the aforeſaid Dudley North and Peter Rich, Sheriffs of the City and County aforeſaid, meaning) were Sheriffs of the City and County aforeſaid: To the great Diſturbance of the Peace of our ſaid Lord the King, to the great Diſparagement of the Governors and Government of the City aforeſaid, and alſo the Scandal, Diſparagement and Defamation of the aforeſaid Sir William Prichard, and the aforeſaid Dudley North, and Peter Rich, in due Manner elected Sheriffs of the City and County aforeſaid, to the evil Example of all others in the like Caſe offending, and againſt the Peace of our ſaid Lord the King that now is, his Crown and Dignity, &c.

Whereunto the Defendant offered the Plea following.

Leech at the Suit of our Lord the King. } AND the aforeſaid Benjamin Leech, in his proper Perſon, doth come and defend the Force and Injury, when, &c. and all Contempt and whatſoever, &c. and prays Judgment of the Indictment aforeſaid, becauſe he ſaith the Jurors for our Lord the King aforeſaid, who that Indictment made and preſented, were thereunto returned and impannelled by one Dudley North, Eſq. and one Peter Rich, Eſq. as Sheriffs of the City of London, which Dudley and Peter at that Time of the Pannel, and the Return thereof by them ſo made, were not, nor either of them was Sheriffs of the ſaid City of London, by which the ſaid Indictment ſo made and preſented by ſuch Jurors ſo as aforeſaid impannelled, and returned by Perſons then not being Sheriffs of the City aforeſaid, by Force of the Statute in the like Caſe made and provided, is void in Law and of none Effect, and this he is ready to verify; whereupon he prays Judgment of that Indictment, and that that Indictment might be quaſhed, &c.

W. THOMPSON.

Which ſaid Plea being ingroſſed in Parchment, and ſigned by William Thompſon, of the Middle-Temple, Counſellor at Law, was on Saturday Morning delivered into Court by the Defendant, who preſſed that the Plea might be received, and he and his Bail diſmiſſed from further Attendance for that Time: Whereunto it was anſwered, That the Court would conſider thereof till the Afternoon. In the Afternoon, the Defendant attended with Mr. Thompſon his Counſel; and Mr. Oſborn of the Inner Temple, Counſellor at Law, attended for the King: The Court being ſat, the Plea was read, and then Mr. Oſborn moved, that the Plea ought not to be received, for that it was a new Plea without a Precedent, and that it could not be tried or determined there; that it was a frivolous Plea, and ought not to be received, and ſo left it to the Judgment of the Bench. Upon which Mr. Thompſon allowed, that ſuch a Plea had rarely been made uſe of, becauſe the like Caſe had rarely or never happened, but the Reaſon thereof did juſtify its Legality, and therefore preſſed that the Plea might be accepted; that it never was hitherto denied to any Man to plead to an Indictment of this Nature, what he thought fit in his own Defence, eſpecially when he offers the ſame under Counſel's Hand; that this was a ready Way to determine who were legally Sheriffs; if the Plea was not good in Law, the Attorney-General or the King's-Counſel might demur to it; that if the Matter alledged in the Plea was falſe, Iſſue might be taken thereon, which might ſoon be tried by a Jury; but if the Matter ſhould appear to be true, there was not ſo much as any Colour in Law for thoſe worthy Gentlemen, Mr. North and Mr. Rich, to take upon them to return Juries; and therefore, in the Behalf of his Client, demanded again that the Plea might be received; the Truth or Validity thereof being not to be determined, till ſome Anſwer ſhould be made thereunto by Replication or Demurring in Writing.

In Anſwer thereunto Mr. Juſtice Levinz (being the only Judge then preſent) was pleaſed to expreſs himſelf to this Effect: That he deſired to ſee the Statute mentioned in the Plea; whereupon it was read, viz. the 11 H. IV. c. 9. Then Mr. Juſtice Levinz ſpake to this Effect: That this Statute was made to prevent the Nomination of Juries to the Sheriffs; and though it be thereby provided that Pannels ſhould be returned by the Sheriffs without Denomination of any, yet he was of Opinion that it could not extend to the Caſe in Hand, ſeeing the worthy Perſons that attended there, were owned as Sheriffs by Lord-Mayor, Mr. Recorder, and ſeveral Aldermen there preſent, and that he made no Difference between Sheriffs de facto and de jure; and that theſe Perſons being there ſo allowed, he muſt look upon them as Sheriffs de jure: That a Goal-delivery had been held, wherein above forty Priſoners had been tried; and that if this Plea ſhould be allowed, all the Proceedings againſt them would come in Queſtion: And then aſked Mr. Thompſon, What if all the Felons at an Aſſizes ſhould inſiſt upon the like Plea, muſt all further Proceedings ſtop, till the Sheriff goes Home and fetch his Letters Patents?

Whereupon Mr. Thompſon ſaid, That he thought in that Caſe ſuch Stop could not be prevented, the Law being plain.

Then Mr. Juſtice Levinz ſaid further to this Effect, That he had conſidered of this Matter; and that in his Judgment the Plea was a frivolous Plea, and ought not to be received; but yet he being the only Judge then preſent, he ſhould adviſe my Lord-Mayor and the reſt of the Bench to take Advice of all the Judges, before an abſolute Determination whether the Plea ought to be refuſed or not.

Upon this Sir John Peak ſaid, We will not receive the Plea; with whom agreed Sir James Edwards, Sir James Smith, Sir Thomas Beckford, and Sir Robert Jefferies, and the Lord-Mayor alſo.

Sir George Treby the Recorder ſaid, That he was of Opinion with Mr. Juſtice Levinz.

Upon this Leech was preſſed to plead Not Guilty: Which he refuſed, ſaying ſeveral Times, He would plead no other Plea than what he had offered. Then the Court gave him half an Hour's Time to adviſe with his Counſel; who withdrew and adviſed accordingly, and returned with the ſame Reſolution not to alter his Plea, and tendered his Plea again to the Court, who again rejected it: And becauſe he would plead no other Plea, he (being firſt aſked, whether he would ſubmit to the Court and aſk Pardon; and refuſing ſo to do, having as he apprehended done no Wrong) was fined Twenty Marks, and committed to Newgate till he ſhould pay the ſame; which was done that Night, and Leech thereby diſcharged.

Oh, my Eye! Forbear to make a Noiſe.* A Phyſician being brought to give his Advice, whether it was requiſite to bleed him, he found him deſperately ill, and vomiting extremely. * Though we have not been able to procure Dangerfield's Trial for a Libel; yet ſhall inſert the Trial of Mr. Frances for killing him, from the Seſſions-Paper of that Time, with his Speech at Tyburn, as it will give ſome Light to the Hiſtory of that Time.

† Biſhop Burnet, in his Hiſtory of his Own Times, Vol. I. p. 537, ſays, "Dangerfield, another of the Witneſſes in the Popiſh Plot, was alſo found Guilty of Perjury, and had "the ſame Puniſhment (as Oates); but it had a more terrible Concluſion; for a brutal Student of the Law, who had no private Quarrel with him, but was only tranſported "with the Zeal of that Time, ſtruck him over the Head with his Cane, as he got his laſt Laſh: This hit him ſo fatally, that he died of it immediately. The Perſon was "apprehended, and the King left him to the Law; and though great Interceſſion was made for him, the King would not interpoſe, ſo he was hanged for it."——The Biſhop here ſeems miſtaken; for I do not find Dangerfield was convicted of Perjury; or that he got his Death on the laſt Laſh.—Rapin, Vol. II. 744, ſays thus, "The next "Victim to the Catholicks, not long after Oates, was Thomas Dangerfield, who diſcovered the pretended Meal-Tub Plot, which he had laid to the Charge of the Proteſtants. "But afterwards not being able to maintain before the Council what he had depoſed, he confeſſed, he was perſuaded to invent it by the Counteſs of Powis, and the Popiſh "Lords in the Tower. Moreover, he had publiſhed a Narrative of all the ſecret Practices uſed as well to corrupt him, as to render the Plot probable. As he owned he had "received Money from the late King and the Duke of York, the laſt would never ſuffer ſuch an Offence to go unpuniſhed, when he came to be King. Dangerfield therefore "was committed to Priſon, and indicted for publiſhing a ſcandalous LIBEL. He was tried, and brought in Guilty by the Jury; after which he received Judgment at the "King's-Bench Bar, That he ſhould ſtand twice in the Pillory; that he ſhould be whipt from Aldgate to Newgate on one Day, and from Newgate to Tyburn on another; "and ſhould pay a Fine of five hundred Pounds. The Scourging was executed with Rigour, though with leſs Cruelty than on Oates. The ſecond Day, Dangerfield, after "the Whipping was over, being in a Coach againſt Hatton-Garden, Robert Frances, a Barriſter of Gray's-Inn, came to the Coach-ſide; and uſing ſome inſulting Expreſſions, "Dangerfield returned a reproachful Anſwer. [Frances ſaid, How now, Friend, have you had your Heat this Morning? Upon which the other, with two or three Curſes, "called him Son of a Whore.] Frances, having a ſmall Cane in his Hand, thruſt it into his Eye with all his Force, which in two Hours put an End to his Life. Frances was "condemned to be hanged, and was executed accordingly; the King, though ſtrongly ſollicited for a Pardon, not thinking proper to leave ſuch a Crime unpuniſhed."

"Sir William Williams, who had been Speaker of the Houſe of Commons, for publiſhing an infamous Libel, (as Speaker, by Order of the Houſe of Commons) called "Dangerfield's Narrative, was fined by the Court of King's-Bench 10,000 l. but, upon paying 8000 l. of it, Satisfaction was acknowledged upon Record, Eaſter Term, "1 Jac. II. K. B. Shower 471.

"Upon an Information againſt the Defendant, (Sir William Williams) for publiſhing a Libel called Dangerfield's Narrative, he pleaded that he was at the Time of Publication Speaker of the Houſe of Commons; and, as ſuch, had a Right to publiſh the Votes and Acts of the Houſe; and that the Narrative was printed and publiſhed "as Parcel of the Proceedings. The Court would not debate the Formality of ſuch an idle inſignificant Plea (as they were pleaſed to call it), but gave Judgment for the "King, Eaſter Term, 2 Jac. II. 1686, K. B. Shower Rep. 471. pl. 436. Comb. 18. See Atkins's Power of Parliaments, &c. The King againſt Williams.——It is obſervable, "that Sir William Williams was not Speaker of the Houſe of Commons at the Time this Caſe was adjudged, though he was when the Offence, of which he was accuſed, was "committed.—The Lord Chief Juſtice Wright aſked the Defendant's Counſel Whether an Order of the Houſe of Commons could juſtify a ſcandalous, infamous and "flagitious Libel? 2 Shower 471." A Digeſt of the Laws concerning Libels, 4to. p. 75.

"As the Proceedings againſt Sir William Williams were very extraordinary, ſo was the Puniſhment: The Fine was the heavieſt that ever was impoſed in any Court for "the like Crime. Sir Bar. Tolomew Shower, one of the Reporters of this Caſe, ſays, Sir William Williams, being fined 10,000 l. paid 8000 l. of the Money, and thereupon "Satisfaction was acknowledged on Record. I own, when I find Sir William Williams in this ſame Reign moſt violently perſecuting the Seven Biſhops for a Libel, in the "Character of Solicitor-General, I am apt to think, that the Fine was impoſed in Terrorem to others; and that the only Purpoſe of ſuing Sir William Williams, was to "make a Precedent of an Inſult upon the Commons, whoſe Privileges, if the Deſigns then on Foot had prevailed, muſt ſoon have fallen to nothing." Digeſt of the Laws "concerning Libels, p. 118, 119.

for, probing the Wound, found it to be mortal; and he, with others, did verily believe, that it occasioned his Death. Mr. Frances, in his own Defence, alledged, That coming to the Coach, he asked Dangerfield, If he had not been heated? Upon which Mr. Dangerfield calling him Son of a Whore, he, in his Passion, gave him a slight Blow with his Cane, which he verily believed could not kill him; and that he did it out of no Malice or Hatred. He called several Witnesses, who gave him a very good Character, but spoke very little to the Fact; whereupon he was found Guilty.—The Reverend Mr. Samuel Smith, the Ordinary of Newgate, gives this Account of him:

"I went to Mr. Robert Frances his Chamber, because he desired me "to take a particular Care of him; and found him in a serious, good "Frame and Composure of Mind; willing to resign himself to the all-"wise Ducture of God's Spirit, and his Determination for Life or Death. "First I prayed with him, and then entered upon an Inquiry into his "Life and Conversation, precedent to the Crime of killing Mr. Dan-"gerfield. He was very free to give an Account of himself. He said, "that he was born of Protestant Parents, and bred up in good Litera-"ture; that twenty Years since he was a Student in Christ-Church Col-"lege in Oxford; that afterward he went over Sea with Sir Joseph Wil-"liamson, his late Majesty's Ambassador, as an Attendant on him; that "for fourteen Years last past he hath been of the Society of Gray's-Inn, "and practised in the Law; that he did not lead any extravagant Life "till this unhappy Crime. He acknowledged that he saw Dangerfield in "the Pillory at Westminster; and that on the Day in which he was "whipped to Tyburn, Mr. Frances was with a Friend at a Coffee-house "near to St. Andrew's Church in Holborn; and thought not to have "stayed there, because he was to dine that Day with his Friend, and "was, in the Afternoon, to have managed a Cause for a Client at Guild-"hall, so that he was going Home from the said Coffee-house: But a "Report coming thither that Dangerfield was in his Return from Tyburn, "and very near, he left his Wife in his Friend's Hand, and went to "meet the Coach in which Dangerfield was, only out of Curiosity (as he "saith) to observe how he looked after his being whipped. He said, "that the Coach did not stop, but he went to the Side of it, and "said, Have you had your Heat To-day? How is it now with you? "Dangerfield, upon those Words, (he says) called him Son of a Whore, "and said, What have you to do with me? Mr. Frances being asked by the "Ordinary, what moved him to kill Dangerfield, he replied, that his "Passion was stirred up at Dangerfield's reviling Language, and said, that "he only intended to beat him with a Bamboo Cane, which was furzed "and worn out at the End of it: But the Coach moving onward, the "Cane wounded Dangerfield in the Eye; but he intended only to have "thrust it at his Breast. He also said, that he had a short Sword, and "yet used it not, because he did not design to kill Dangerfield.

"Mr. Frances being told by the Ordinary, that the very Thrust proved "fatal, and was a very inhuman Act toward a Person in his Distress; "to this Mr. Frances replied, That he never bore any Malice nor Grudge "to Mr. Dangerfield, nor was he moved to that Act by any Person what-"soever; only God left him to himself, for the Punishment of his for-"mer Sins, to run into this sudden Effort of Passion. Mr. Frances was "much affected with my Discourse, and wept in praying with him: He "was very attentive to the Sermons and Prayers on the Lord's Day, "more than the other Criminals; so he seemed very penitent, and I hope "that this Sentence of Death on him did awaken him to a serious re-"calling to Mind whatsoever former Sins he might be guilty of, in or-"der to make his Peace with God, who is the Searcher of all Hearts, "and only knows who are truly penitent."

The Dying Speech of ROBERT FRANCES, of Gray's-Inn, Esq. July 24, 1685. Delivered by his own Hand to the Ordinary, at the Place of Execution, desiring the same might be published.

I AM here by the Divine Permission and Providence of God become a Spectacle to God, Angels and Men, for a rash, extravagant and imprudent Act, wherein I do confess, I have not only offended against the Government and Courts of Justice, but against Christianity, and even the Rules of Morality itself: Nevertheless, (I hope) not only the Court, but all unbiassed Men, from the several Circumstances of the Fact, are satisfied that I had no malicious Intent of doing what fell out, nor had any Grudge or personal Prejudice to him upon any Account whatsoever, more than what all honest and good Men could not but have, that love the King and the Government. The solemn Truth of all which I have declared, not only upon the Holy Sacrament I received from Mr. Master, but also that I never knew nor saw him before that unhappy Moment, save once at a Distance in the Pillory at Westminster; and do now, as a dying Man, solemnly avow and protest the same: And therefore I hope I may boldly say I am not conscious of any Guilt before God as to the Malice: However, God in his great Wisdom has been pleased to suffer this great Calamity to fall upon me: And I hope this his severe Chastisement is in order to bring me to himself, when softer Means had not sufficiently done it. All them that know me (I am sure) will do me that Justice as to believe I am far from having done it either wilfully or mercenarily (as most untruly is reported). And that these Honourable Persons are above the Thoughts of such unworthy Things, for which they have been as maliciously as falsely traduced upon my Score; I beg their Pardon for the Scandal I have unhappily been the Occasion of, and desire this Acknowledgement may be by them accepted as a Reparation, since to disown it at this Time of my Death, is all the Satisfaction I am able to make them.

As to my Religion, (however I have been represented) there are People that knew me at the University, and since that can be my Witnesses, how obedient and zealous a Son of the Church of England (by Law established) I have been.

And these worthy Divines that did me the Favour to visit me in Affliction, will give the World an Account (as Occasion serves) of my Integrity therein: And if I had been as zealous in the Service of God, as my Prince, he would not have left me so much to myself, as to have permitted me to have fallen into this unexpected Extremity.

And as for my Morals, the Honourable Society of Gray's-Inn will answer for me, that in above these twelve Years Time, I have had the Honour of being admitted a Member of that Society, I never had any Quarrel or Controversy with any Member thereof; and all Persons with whom I have had Conversation, I question not, will give a good Character of my innocent and peaceable Behaviour.

I pray God Almighty preserve and bless his most Sacred Majesty, his Royal Consort Queen Mary, Catherine the Queen Dowager, their Royal Highnesses, and all the Royal Family; and grant that there may never want one of that Royal Line to sway the Scepters of these Kingdoms as long as Sun and Moon endure. In the Union and Love of his Subjects, strengthen him that he may vanquish and overcome all his Enemies, which I am glad to have seen so much Prospect of, and am only sorry I am cut off from seeing my so much desired Satisfaction of those happy Days all his good Subjects will enjoy under his auspicious Government. I pray God forgive me my Sins, that have made me unworthy of that Blessing.

Blessed be the Lord, that I have lived so as not to be ashamed to live, or afraid to die; though I cannot but regret my being made a Sacrifice to the Faction, who I am satisfied are the only People that will rejoice in my Ruin; for there is no Man that loves his Prince, but will lament that nothing less than the Blood of an inoffensive Man (save in this single Extravagance) can satisfy them for the sudden intemperate Transport of Zeal and Passion against one so notoriously wicked and infamous; for I do protest before Almighty God, (before whom I shall immediately appear) that when I went to the Coach-side, I did not intend so much as to speak to him, or believe I could have had Opportunity of so doing, much less of doing him any Harm. Neither is it probable I should with a small Bamboo Cane, no bigger than a Man's little Finger, without any Iron upon it, much less a Dart in it, as it was most industriously spread abroad to prejudice me in the Opinion of the World: For, if I had had such a wicked Design intentionally, I had a little short Sword by my Side much more proper for such a Purpose. And further, if I had believed or known that I had done any Harm to him, I had Opportunity enough of escaping afterwards, which I never endeavoured. Now all these Things being duly weighed with their several Circumstances, I leave my sad Case to the Consideration of all sober and charitable Men. However, I would not have this to be interpreted as a Reflection upon the Court, who I doubt not are by this Time satisfied, (and Mr. Recorder did in open Court declare) that in their Consciences they did not believe I maliciously designed him the Mischief that happened, but that it was purely accidental. But in the strict Construction of Law I was found guilty of Murder.

But that which most sensibly afflicts me, and is worse to me than Death, that I cannot suffer alone, but that they have not only raised Scandals upon me in particular preparatory to it, but upon my poor innocent Wife, as if my Jealousy of her had been the Reason of my Animosity to Dangerfield; when I am morally certain she never saw him in her whole Life, save that fatal Moment; and no Couple (as Hundreds can witness) have lived in better Correspondence. And besides that, she is as virtuous a Woman as lives, and born of so good and loyal a Family, that if she had been so inclined, she would have scorned to have prostituted herself to such a profligate Person: But, on the contrary, (God is my Witness) I never had any such Thoughts of her, and do as verily believe, as there is a God in Heaven, I never had any Reason; she having always been the most indulgent, kind, and loving Wife that ever Man had, and in my Conscience one of the best of Women; nay, I am so far from suspecting her Virtue, that she is the only Loss I regret on Earth, and can freely part with every Thing else here below without repining, which in all my Trouble I have owned before all People, and particularly Mr. Master, Mr. Ordinary, and Mr. Smithies of Cripplegate, who can all testify those Tears and endeared Expressions that have passed between us, when any of them did me the Kindness to visit me in my Distress.

And I do from the Bottom of my Heart freely forgive the Witnesses that swore against me those Words I never spoke; for, as I shall answer at the Great Tribunal, I said no other or more Words than these; How now, Friend, have you had your Heat this Morning? For all the Ill they have done me, give them Repentance, good God! Even for these that have contributed to the shedding of my Blood, I pray thee shed thy Bowels of Mercy.

I do heartily thank those Noble and Honourable Persons, and all other my Friends, that have so charitably interposed with his Majesty on my Behalf (though it hath proved unsuccessful). I pray God nevertheless to return their kind Endeavours a thousand-fold into their own Bosoms: Lord, return it to them and theirs!

Lord Jesus, receive my Soul! Thy Will be done on Earth as it is in Heaven, Amen, Amen, Amen.

ON the 28th of February, 1684-5, Mr. Baxter was committed to the King's-Bench Priſon by the Lord Chief Juſtice Jeffreys's Warrant, for his Paraphraſe on the New-Teſtament, printed a little before, which was called a ſcandalous and ſeditious Book againſt the Government. On the 6th of May, which was the firſt Day of Term, he appeared in Weſtminſter-Hall, and an Information was ordered to be drawn up againſt him. May 14th, he pleaded Not Guilty to the Information. May 15th, he being much indiſpoſed, moved by his Counſel, That he might have farther Time given him for his Trial; but it was denied him; and Jeffreys cries out in a Paſſion, "I will not give him a Minute's Time more to ſave "his Life. We have had (ſays he) to do with other Sort of Perſons, but now we have a Saint to deal with; and I know how to "deal with Saints as well as Sinners. Yonder (ſays he) ſtands Oates in "the Pillory, (as he actually did at that very Time in the New Palace-"Yard,) and he ſays he ſuffers for the Truth, and ſo ſays Baxter; but if "Baxter did but ſtand on the other Side of the Pillory with him, I would "ſay, two of the greateſt Rogues and Raſcals in the Kingdom ſtood "there." On May 30th, in the Afternoon, he was brought to his Trial before the Lord Chief Juſtice Jeffreys at Guildhall. Sir Henry Aſhhurſt, who could not forſake his own and his Father's Friends, ſtood by him all the while. Mr. Baxter came firſt into Court, and with all the Marks of Serenity and Compoſure, waited for the Coming of the Lord Chief Juſtice, who appeared quickly after with great Indignation in his Face. He no ſooner ſat down than a ſhort Cauſe was called and tried; after which the Clerk began to read the Title of another Cauſe: You Blockhead you, (ſays Jeffreys) the next Cauſe is between Richard Baxter and the King; upon which Mr. Baxter's Cauſe was called. The Paſſages mentioned in the Information, were his Paraphraſe on Matth. v. 19. Mark ix. 39. Mark xi. 31. Mark xii. 38, 39, 40. Luke x. 2. John xi. 57. and Acts xv. 2. Theſe Paſſages were picked out by Sir Roger L'Eſtrange, and ſome of his Companions: And a certain noted Clergyman (who ſhall be nameleſs) put into the Hands of his Enemies ſome Accuſations out of Rom. xiii. &c. as againſt the King, to touch his Life; but no Uſe was made of them. The great Charge was, "That in theſe ſeveral Paſſages he reflected on "the Prelates of the Church of England, and ſo was guilty of Sedition, "&c." The King's Counſel opened the Information at large with its Aggravations. Mr. Wallop, Mr. Williams, Mr. Rotheram, Mr. Atwood, and Mr. Phipps, were Mr. Baxter's Counſel, and had been feed by Sir Henry Aſhhurſt.

† Mr. Wallop ſaid, "That he conceived, the Matter depending be-"ing a Point of Doctrine, it ought to be referred to the Biſhop his

* Tremaine's Pleas of the Crown, p. 45.

† We could never find (though great Inquiry has been made among the Diſſenters) that this Trial was ever taken in Short-Hand, which is a great Pity, becauſe it muſt have been very curious; ſo have inſerted this ſhort Account, which ſhews the Temper of the Chief Juſtice, and the cruel Uſage of the Priſoner, taken from Calamy's Life of Baxter.

" Ordinary; but if not, he humbly conceived the Doctrine was inno-
" cent and juſtifiable, ſetting aſide the Innuendos, for which there was
" no Colour, there being no Antecedent to refer them to (that is, no
" Biſhop or Clergy of the Church of England named). He ſaid the Book
" accuſed, i. e. the Comment on the New Teſtament, contained many eternal
" Truths: But they who drew the Information, were the Libellers, in " applying to the Prelates of the Church of England thoſe ſevere Things
" which were written concerning ſome Prelates, who deſerved the " Character he gave. My Lord (ſays he), I humbly conceive the Biſhops
" Mr. Baxter ſpeaks of, as your Lordſhip, if you have read Church-
" Hiſtory, muſt confeſs, were the Plagues of the Church and the World."
—" Mr. Wallop, (ſays the Lord Chief Juſtice) I obſerve you are in
" all theſe dirty Cauſes; and were it not for you Gentlemen of the Long
" Robe, who ſhould have more Wit and Honeſty than to ſupport and
" hold up theſe factious Knaves by the Chin, we ſhould not be at the " Paſs we are at."——" My Lord, (ſays Mr. Wallop) I humbly con-
" ceive, that the Paſſages accuſed are natural Deductions from the " Text."—" You humbly conceive, (ſays Jeffreys) and I humbly con-
" ceive; ſwear him, ſwear him."—" My Lord, (ſaith he) under Fa-
" vour, I am Counſel for the Defendant; and if I underſtand either
" Latin or Engliſh, the Information now brought againſt Mr. Baxter
" upon ſo ſlight a Ground, is a greater Reflection upon the Church of " England, than any Thing contained in the Book he is accuſed for."
Says Jeffreys to him, " Sometimes you humbly conceive, and ſometimes
" you are very poſitive: You talk of your Skill in Church-Hiſtory, and
" of your underſtanding Latin and Engliſh; I think I underſtand ſome-
" thing of them as well as you; but in ſhort muſt tell you, that if you " do not underſtand your Duty better, I ſhall teach it you." Upon which Mr. Wallop ſat down.

Mr. Rotheram urged, " That if Mr. Baxter's Book had ſharp Re-
" flections upon the Church of Rome by Name, but ſpake well of the " Prelates of the Church of England, it was to be preſumed, that the
" ſharp Reflections were intended only againſt the Prelates of the Church
" of Rome." The Lord Chief Juſtice ſaid, " Baxter was an Enemy to
" the Name and Thing, the Office and Perſons of Biſhops."—Rotheram added, " That Mr. Baxter frequently attended Divine Service, went to
" the Sacrament, and perſuaded others to do ſo too, as was certainly
" and publickly known; and had, in the very Book ſo charged, ſpoken
" very moderately and honourably of the Biſhops of the Church of " England."——Mr. Baxter added, " My Lord, I have been ſo mo" derate with reſpect to the Church of England, that I have incurred
" the Cenſure of many of the Diſſenters upon that Account."——
" Baxter for Biſhops! (ſaith Jeffreys) that's a merry Conceit indeed!
" turn to it, turn to it."——Upon this Rotheram turned to a Place, where 'tis ſaid, That great Reſpect is due to thoſe truly called to be Biſhops among us; or to that Purpoſe.——" Ay, (ſays Jeffreys) this is your *Preſ-
" byterian* Cant, truly called to be Biſhops; that is himſelf, and ſuch
" Raſcals called to be Biſhops of Kidderminſter, and other ſuch like Places;
" Biſhops ſet apart by ſuch factious, ſnivelling Preſbyterians as himſelf;
" a Kidderminſter Biſhop he means, according to the Saying of a late
" learned Author; *And every Pariſh ſhall maintain a Tythe-Pig Metropo-
" litan*." Mr. Baxter beginning to ſpeak again, ſaith Jeffreys to him,
" Richard, Richard, doſt thou think we'll hear thee poiſon the Court?
" Richard, thou art an old Fellow, an old Knave; thou haſt written " Books enough to load a Cart; every one is as full of Sedition (I " might ſay Treaſon) as an Egg is full of Meat: Hadſt thou been
" whipt out of thy writing Trade forty Years ago, it had been happy.
" Thou pretendeſt to be a Preacher of the Goſpel of Peace, and thou
" haſt one Foot in the Grave; 'tis Time for thee to begin to think what
" Account thou intendeſt to give: But leave thee to thyſelf, and I ſee
" thou wilt go on as thou haſt began; but by the Grace of God I'll look
" after thee. I know thou haſt a mighty Party, and I ſee a great many of " the Brotherhood in Corners, waiting to ſee what will become of their " mighty Don; and a Doctor of the Party (looking to Doctor Bates) at
" your Elbow; but by the Grace of Almighty God, I will cruſh you all."

Mr. Rotheram ſitting down, Mr. Atwood began to ſhew, That not one of the Paſſages mentioned in the Information ought to be ſtrained to that Senſe, which was put upon them by the Innuendos, they being more natural when taken in a milder Senſe; nor could any one of them be applied to the Prelates of the Church of England, without a very forced Conſtruction: To evidence this, he would have read ſome of the Text; but Jeffreys cried out, " You ſha'n't draw me into a Conventicle with " your Annotations, nor your ſnivelling Parſon neither."——

" My Lord, (ſays Mr. Atwood) I conceive this to be expreſly within
" Roſewel's Caſe, lately before your Lordſhip." (Vide Vol. III. p. 1053.)
—— " You conceive, (ſaith Jeffreys) you conceive amiſs; it is not."—
" My Lord, (ſaith Atwood) that I may uſe the beſt Authority, permit
" me to repeat your Lordſhip's own Words in that Caſe."——" No,
" you ſha'n't, (ſays he) you need not ſpeak, for you are an Author al-
" ready, though you ſpeak and write impertinently."——Says Atwood,
" I cannot help that, my Lord, if my Talent be no better; but it is my " Duty to do my beſt for my Client."——Jeffreys thereupon went on, inveighing againſt what Atwood had publiſhed; and Atwood juſtified it to be in Defence of the Engliſh Conſtitution, declaring that he never diſ-owned any Thing he had written. Jeffreys ſeveral Times ordered him to ſit down, but he ſtill went on. " My Lord (ſays he), I have Matters of " Law to offer for my Client;" and he proceeded to cite ſeveral Caſes, wherein it had been adjudged, that Words ought to be taken in the milder Senſe, and not in the ſtrained, by Innuendos. " Well, (ſays
" Jeffreys when he had done) you have had your Say."

Mr. Williams and Mr. Phipps ſaid nothing; for they ſaw it was to no Purpoſe. At length ſays Mr. Baxter himſelf, " My Lord, I think I
" can clearly anſwer all that is laid to my Charge, and I ſhall do it
" briefly; the Sum is contained in theſe few Papers, to which I ſhall add
" a little by Teſtimony."—But he would not hear a Word:—At length the Chief Juſtice ſummed up the Matter in a long and fulſome Harangue.

" 'Tis notoriouſly known (ſays he) there has been a Deſign to ruin
" the King and Nation; the old Game has been renewed, and this has " been the main Incendiary: He is as modeſt now as can be; but Time
" was, when no Man was ſo ready at, Bind your Kings in Chains, and " your Nobles in Fetters of Iron; and, To your Tents, O Iſrael! Gentlemen,
" for God's ſake, don't let us be gulled twice in an Age, &c."——And when he concluded, he told the Jury, " That if they in their Con-
" ſcience believed he meant the Biſhops and Clergy of the Church of " England, in the Paſſages which the Information referred to, they muſt
" find him Guilty; and he could mean no Men elſe; if not, they muſt
" find him Not Guilty."——

When he had done, ſays Mr. Baxter to him; " Does your Lordſhip
" think any Jury will pretend to paſs a Verdict upon me upon ſuch a
" Trial?"——" I'll warrant you, Mr. Baxter, (ſays he) don't you
" trouble yourſelf about that."

The Jury immediately laid their Heads together at the Bar, and found him Guilty.

As Mr. Baxter was going from the Bar, he told the Lord Chief Juſtice, who had ſo loaded him with Reproaches, and yet continued them, That a Predeceſſor of his (meaning Sir Matthew Hale) had other Thoughts of him. Upon which the Judge replied, " That there was " not an honeſt Man in England, but what took him for a great Knave."

He had ſubpœna'd ſeveral Clergymen, who had appeared in Court, but were of no Uſe to him, through the Violence of the Chief Juſtice.

The Trial being over, Sir Henry Aſhhurſt led Mr. Baxter through the Crowd, (I mention it to his Honour, ſays Biſhop Kennet) and conveyed him away in his Coach. On June 29 following, he had Judgment given againſt him; he was fined five hundred Marks; to lie in Priſon till he paid it, and be bound to his good Behaviour for ſeven Years.

Mr. Baxter afterwards obtained the King's Pardon, by the Mediation of the Lord Powis: His Fine was remitted; and on Wedneſday, November 24, Sir Samuel Aſtry ſent his Warrant to the Keeper of the King's-Bench Priſon to diſcharge him; but he gave Sureties for his good Behaviour; his Majeſty declaring (for his Satisfaction) that it ſhould not in him be interpreted a Breach of the good Behaviour for him to reſide in London, which was not allowable according to the Oxford Act: And this was entered upon his Bail-Bond. Notwithſtanding this, he continued ſome Time after in the Rules; and on February 28 following, removed to a Houſe he took in Charter-Houſe-Yard, where he preached to a ſeparate Congregation without Interruption as long as he lived; his Death happening after the Revolution, viz. December 8, 1691.

The Defendant was found Guilty on this Information, and after Exceptions taken in Arreſt of Judgment and over-ruled, the Court gave Judgment and fined him 500l. and ordered him to give Security for his good Behaviour for Seven Years.—The Caſe is reported, 3 Mod. 68. Tremaine, p. 47.

NUMBER VI.

Proceedings againſt Mr. CRONE, May, 19, 1690.

[This Caſe of CRONE is taken from Lord Clarendon's Diary 16$\frac{88}{89}$ and 1690, printed at the End of his Letters, publiſhed 1763.]

" MARCH 6, 16$\frac{88}{89}$. Thurſday. One Mrs. Clifford's Houſe was
" ſearched laſt Night, about Midnight, for one Crone; who,
" they ſay, came lately out of France. He was betrayed by one
" Fowler, who came over with him. But Crone not being found, the " Meſſenger ſeized Mrs. Clifford, and carried her away this Morning to " his Houſe. About Noon, Crone was taken upon the Exchange, and " brought before my Lord Shrewſbury, who committed him cloſe Priſoner
" to the Tower for High Treaſon, in levying War againſt their Majeſties.

" May 19, 1690. Monday. Crone's Trial, which had been put off once
" before; and it being alledged, that one of the Witneſſes was not to " be found, it was put off till Friday Fortnight.

" June 6. Friday. Crone was brought to his Trial; in which were " many remarkable Paſſages. The Judges were very ſevere, eſpecially
" the Chief Baron. The Jury ſat up all Night.

" June 7. Saturday. About Noon the Jury brought in their Verdict,
" that Crone was Guilty; though one of them declared, he was not ſatis-
" fied that the Evidence ſpoke Truth; and he urged Sir Robert Atkyns's
" Book in Defence of Lord Ruſſel's Innocency; (See Vol. III. p. 537.)
" but it ſignified nothing. The Priſoner being then aſked, why Sentence
" ſhould not be awarded againſt him, he ſaid, There was an Error in
" the Indictment before the Grand Jury; that the Bill was indorſed *Billa
" Verra* inſtead of Vera. The King's Counſel not being there, it was " put off till Five in the Afternoon; and then the Priſoner inſiſted to " be heard; the Court appointed to hear it argued on Thurſday next,
" and aſſigned Counſel to the Priſoner: In the mean time Sentence was
" reſpited.

" June 8. Whitſunday. In the Morning Mrs. Clifford was with me.
" She told me, ſhe had been to ſee Crone; that he was in a Rage to think " of Death; that he said, he was too young to be a Martyr; and that " she did believe, rather than die, he would tell all he knew.

" June 9. Monday. Mrs. Clifford told me, she had been again with " Crone; that he was in a better Humour, and talked courageously.

" June 12. Thursday. In the Morning Crone's Plea was argued and over- " ruled. The three Chief Judges and Eyres were in Court.

" June 19. Thursday. In the Morning Lord Nottingham went to Crone " in Newgate, upon a Letter (as was said) he had from him last Night. " My Lord (as it is given out) urged him much to confess, that he might " deserve his Life; but the Fellow said, he had told all at his Trial, and " that he knew nothing more. Upon which his Lordship said, he doubt- " ed he should see him no more, for he would certainly die To-morrow, " if he did not confess; but he would acquaint the Queen with what he " had said. In the Evening Lord Monmouth and Lord Lincoln were at " Newgate, pressing Crone to make a full Confession, making him many " fair Promises, in case he would be ingenuous: But he still said, he " could say nothing. At Ten at Night Mr. Finch brought him a Re- " prieve till Wednesday next.

" June 25. Wednesday. Crone was this Day to have been executed; the " Sledge was at Newgate, and all the People thronged together, as usual " upon those Occasions; but he was again reprieved, in Hopes he would " deserve his Life by the Confession he might make."

[Thus far from Lord Clarendon.]

The next Day, June 26, he was sent for, as appears by the following Warrant*:

" These are, in his Majesty's Name, to require you to bring Mr. Mat- " thew Crone, a Prisoner in your Custody, attainted of High-Trea- " son, to my Office in Whitehall this Afternoon; for which this shall " be your Warrant. Given at the Court at Whitehall, the 26th Day " of June, 1690.

NOTTINGHAM."

To Major Richardson, Keeper of Newgate.

By the following List of Persons excepted out of the Act of Indemnity, which passed 1690, one would think this Mr. Crone was a Person of some Consequence. Their Names were,

William, Marquis of Powis.
Robert, Earl of Sunderland.
Roger, Earl of Castlehaven.
Nathaniel, Lord Bishop of Durham.
Henry, Lord Dover.
Sir Edward Hales.
Sir Francis Wythens.
Sir Edward Lutwych.
Sir Thomas Jenner.
Sir Nicholas Butler.
Theo. Earl of Huntingdon.
John, Lord Melford.
Thomas, Lord Howard.
Thomas, Lord Bishop of St. David's.
William Molineux.
Sir Edward Herbert.
Sir Richard Holloway.
Sir Richard Heath.
Sir Roger L'Estrange.
Edward Petre.
Thomas Tildesley.
Rowland Tempest.
Obadiah Walker.
Richard Graham.
Robert Lundy.
—— Townley, commonly called Col. Townley.
Edward Morgan.
Robert Brent.
Philip Burton.
MATTHEW CRONE.

How long he lay in Newgate does not appear; but that he was a considerable Time in Custody, appears by Mr. Crone's Letter to Major Richardson, though without Date, and printed as wrote †.

To Major Richardson.

" SIR,

" IF you please, I would be glad you would let me have a Chamber in " the Press-Yard, not that I would expect any more Libertie theire " than I have hear. Only I am desireous to be in the Hearing of People, " for you cannot be unsencible how troublesom itt is to your Servtts, nay " sometimes to yourselfe, when you are pleased to chide my Mother for " staying so late; but beleive me, Sir, she cannot help it, for none can " heare us, and 'tis unserting when any body comes to let her out," which " sometymes obleidges her to neglect my Busines when it should be lookt " after, therefore I know 'tis the same Thing to you whether I lye theire " or heare. You are sencible how lonnge I have laine under Uncertain- " tys, and I can see no Alteration, therefore am ashamed to request or " petition for any more Liberty then I have hitherto had, though God " knows I much want it, as you may beleive, haveing been very neare " three Quarters of a Year close Prisoner heare and in the Tower, and " with my Confinemt as could Comfort as ever poore Criminall receivd. " Pray, Sir, excuse me for this; since I can never have the Honr of see- " ing you. I desire my humble Service may be given to your good Lady " and the reast of your Family; and that if it stands with your Likeing, " I may be removed; if not, assure yourselfe I shall at all Times willing- " ly comply with that which may seem most agreeable to you, and am, Sir,

" Your reale Friend and humble Servantt,

Thursday Night. " M. CRONE."

The famous, or rather infamous, Mr. Fuller, in his Pamphlet, intitled, A brief Discovery of the true Mother of the pretended Prince of Wales, p. 24, says, (if he is to be credited) " Mr. Crone, with myself, was sent to " England with several Commissions and Letters from King James, for " raising Men."—Page 28, " After my last Return from France with " Mr. Crone, I informed his Majesty of all I knew: Mr. Crone was seiz- " ed, and sent Prisoner to the Tower."—Page 29, " They (the Jaco- " bites) finding their whole Design unravelled, and that I had discovered " all I knew, and Mr. Crone safe, and to be suddenly tried, which might " make him confess, they (the Jacobites) got me poisoned, in Hopes to " have prevented Crone's Trial; but it pleased Almighty God to restore " me to my Health after ten Weeks Sickness. I was able to come to the " Old-Bailey, where Mr. Crone was tried and condemned for High-Trea- " son. He had several Reprieves from Time to Time, on his Promise of " making a full Confession; but as he was lingering it out, about six " Months after his Conviction, I received a Letter from the Earl of Mel- " ford, King James's Secretary, in which I was promised King James's " Pardon, and all the Favour I could desire from him and the Court of " France, and 500 l. if I would return to France, and recant what I had " done. I carried this Letter to King William, who sent me to Lord " Chief Justice Holt for his Advice; but his Lordship was of Opinion, " it was all a Trick to invalidate my Evidence, they being apprehensive " of Mr. Crone's Confessions, which they must know would be so agree- " able to my Informations, that the Heads of King James's Party had " been entirely at King William's Mercy: And this Matter highly con- " cerned the French Court; for, had Crone been just to him that gave " him his Life, there might have been but small Encouragement from " England to the French, and consequently no Plotting now. They of " King James's Party made it their Interest to have Crone hanged, and " stop his Mouth; and that, as I am well informed, occasioned his " making almost a full Discovery: Though he went for France, as soon " as he was let out of Newgate, being invited back with great Promises, " I must thank him for his Justice to me in his last and most authentic " Confession: He affirms on Oath, That all my Information was true. " For the Confirmation of this, I appeal to any Member of Parliament " that heard Mr. Crone's or Lord Preston's Confessions read before that " honourable House. After this, it may seem strange to some, how the " House came to be so angry with me. I beg Leave to inform them, " That the Jacobites, by Mr. Crone's going off, knew they had partly " secured themselves from the just Power of the Law."

NUMBER VII.

CROSBY's Case.

Rex versus Crosby, alias Philips. B. R ‡.

CROSBY was indicted for High-Treason; and at the Trial at Bar he excepted against the Evidence of Mr. Aaron Smith, because he had been set in the Pillory upon a Judgment given against him in this Court, upon an Information, 34 Car. II. the Record of which he produced. Mr. Sollicitor General Trevor and Mr. Cowper, on Behalf of Aaron Smith, agreed, That the Infamy was always a Consequence of the Guilt, and not of the Punishment; and therefore (by them) if an innocent Man hath an infamous Judgment given against him, for a Crime that does not deserve such Judgment, this will not render the Party infamous. Then for Application, they said, That the Crime of which Mr. Aaron Smith was accused, did not deserve such Judgment; and therefore shall not take away his Testimony. And,

Sir Samuel Eyre, Justice, seemed to be of that Opinion.

But Holt, Chief Justice, gave no Opinion as to this Point, saying, that he could not impeach the Record; but he was of Opinion, that the general Act of Pardon, 2 Wil. and Mar. gave Mr. Smith a new Credit, but did not work by way of Restoration, to restore him to his old Credit: As, if a Person be attainted of Felony, he is now incapable of making a Purchase to hold, or to give Evidence; but if the King pardons him, he is now become a new Creature, and may do both; but he is not restored to inherit to those Persons, to whom he was inheritable before: And the Difference is, between a Civil Disability, which the Pardon cannot cure, (Co. Lit. 234. Sir Ar. Ingram's Case) and a Criminal Disability, which the Pardon may take away. And for these Reasons the Testimony of Mr. Aaron Smith was admitted.

But the principal Point of Treason charged upon Mr. Crosby being the writing of certain treasonable Papers, which the King's Counsel endeavoured to prove by Comparison of Hands, having no other Evidence; the Prisoner, Crosby, produced the Copy of the Act of Parliament for the Reversal of the Attainder of Algernon Sidney, Esq. (Vide Vol. VIII. p. 472.) in which it is declared, That the Comparison of Hands is not legal Evidence. Upon which the Jury found the Prisoner Not Guilty.——Mr. J. Foster, in his Reports of Crown Cases, p. 198. says, " In Mr. Sidney's " Case, it was said, Scribere est agere. This is undoubtedly true under " proper Limitations, but it was not applicable to his Case. Writing " being a deliberate Act, and capable of satisfactory Proof, certainly may, " under some Circumstances with Publication, be an Overt-Act of Trea- " son. And I freely admit, that had the Papers found in Mr. Sidney's " Closet been plainly relative to the other treasonable Practices charged in " the Indictment, they might have been read in Evidence against him, tho' " not published.——But Papers not capable of such Connection, whilst " they remain in the Hands of the Author unpublished, as Mr. Sidney's " did, will not make a Man a Traitor.".

* From the Collection of Papers of Major Richardson, many Years Keeper of Newgate, in the Hands of the Editor.

† From the original Letter among Major Richardson's Papers.

‡ It is great Pity this Trial (if taken at large) could not be procured, for the Arguments of the Court and Counsel must have been curious; so have inserted this short Account from Lord Raymond's Reports, Vol. I. p. 39. See also Salkeld, 689.

NUMBER VIII.

The Proceedings againſt the Three Nonjuring Clergymen, Mr. COLLIER, Mr. COOK, and Mr. SNATT, for publickly abſolving Sir Willidm Perkins and Sir John Friend at Tyburn, April 3, 1696.

THE Editor of the State Trials, in Vol. IV. p. 660, ſays no more than this:

"Jeremy Collier, a Nonjuring Miniſter, publickly abſolved "them at the Gallows."

This Affair made a great Noiſe at that Time. Biſhop Burnet, Vol. II. p. 174, ſays, "A very unuſual Inſtance of the Boldneſs of the Jacobites "appeared upon that Occaſion: Theſe two had not changed their Reli- "gion, but ſtill called themſelves Proteſtants; ſo three of the Nonjuring "Clergymen waited on them to Tyburn; two of them had been oft with "Friend, and one of them with Perkins; and all three, at the Place of "Execution, joined to give them public Abſolution, with an Impoſition "of Hands, in the View of all the People: A Strain of Impudence, "that was as new as it was wicked! ſince theſe Perſons died, owning the "ill Deſigns they had been engaged in, and expreſſing no Sort of Re- "pentance for them. So theſe Clergymen, in this ſolemn Abſolution, "made an open Declaration of their allowing and juſtifying theſe Per- "ſons in all they had been concerned in. Two of them were taken "up, and cenſured for this in the King's-Bench, the third made his "Eſcape." The Account publiſhed at that Time, by Permiſſion of the Sheriffs, is as follows:

An Account of what paſſed at the Execution of Sir William Perkins, and Sir John Friend, at Tyburn, on Friday, April 3, 1696.

THE Priſoners being drawn in a Sledge from Newgate to the Place of Execution, were permitted to have the Aſſiſtance of three Nonjuring Miniſters of their own chuſing, viz. Mr. Collier, Mr. Cook, and Mr. Snatt.

Sir William Perkins came firſt up into the Cart, and had ſome private Diſcourſe with one of the Miniſters.

Sir William Perkins. When muſt I deliver my Paper?

Miniſter. When all is over.

Then the Executioner went to put the Rope about Sir William Perkins's Neck.

Sir William Perkins. May not I pray before it be put on?

Executioner. Yes, Sir, if you pleaſe.

Then Sir John Friend came into the Cart; and the three Miniſters and Priſoners all kneeling down, Mr. Cook read ſome Prayers out of the Morning-Prayer, and the Office for Viſitation of the Sick: And then the Miniſters ſtanding up, aſked them, Whether they were in Charity with all the World? And if they had offended any, whether they did aſk them Forgiveneſs? And whether they did deſire the Abſolution of the Church? Upon their Anſwer, That they did, they all laid their Hands upon their Heads, and Mr. Cook pronounced the Abſolution, which ended in theſe Words: And by his Authority committed to me, I abſolve thee from all thy Sins, in the Name of the Father, &c.

Sir William Perkins. When are we to deliver our Papers?

Miniſter. Now, if you pleaſe.

Mr. Sheriff. Take what Time you pleaſe, Sir, for your Devotions, we will wait your Leiſure.

Then the two Priſoners continued in their private Prayers, Sir William Perkins making uſe of the Prayers in the Whole Duty of Man, and Sir John Friend read ſome Prayer out of a written Paper; and afterwards, Sir William Perkins delivered to the Sheriffs a Paper.

Mr. Sheriff. If you require any more Time, you ſhall have it. You ſay this is your Paper?

Sir William Perkins. Yes, Sir; and I deſire you to diſpoſe of it as you think fit.

Mr. Sheriff. Have you any Thing to ſay, by way of Confeſſion or Denial, of the Fact for which ye come hither to ſuffer?

Sir William Perkins. What I think fit to ſay, is contained in that Paper.

Mr. Sheriff. If you deſire any more Time, you may have it; you ſhall have your Liberty.

Then Sir John Friend held a Paper up.

Mr. Sheriff. What do you ſay, Sir John?

Sir John Friend. Sir, here is a Paper, I deſire it may be printed; for I came here to die, and not to make a Speech; but to die, and to reſign myſelf to God; and I deſire it may be printed, for all People to ſee it. (For both their Speeches, ſee Vol. IV. p. 659, 660.) And I have no more to ſay, but to beg of God to receive my Soul; I reſign my Soul to him.

Mr. Sheriff. The Lord have Mercy upon you.

Sir John Friend. I hope the Lord will have Mercy on me.

Mr. Sheriff. Sir John, if you deſire any more Time, you ſhall have it; we will wait on you with great Willingneſs.

Sir John Friend. I thank you, Sir. Mr. Sheriff, I deſire the Cart may not be too haſty to go away, 'till we give a Sign.

Mr. Sheriff. You ſhall have your own Time; take your Time, communicate your own Sign, and the Cart ſhall not go before.

Then the Ropes were tied about them.

Sir John Friend. I have no Animoſity againſt any Man; I freely forgive all, and I hope God, for Chriſt's ſake, will forgive me.

Then their Caps were put on.

Sir John Friend. My Saviour had a Crown of Thorns for me; the Lord receive my Soul! the Lord have Mercy upon me!

Then the Executioner aſked them both Forgiveneſs; and they anſwered, We freely forgive you.

Sir John Friend. Will not the Things lie in my Way?

Executioner. I will remove them. If you pleaſe, tell me when I may pull your Caps over your Eyes.

Priſoners. When you will.

Sir William Perkins. The Lord receive my Spirit! Executioner, had I beſt hold up my Legs, or ſtand in the Cart when it goes away?

Executioner. It is beſt to ſtand, Sir, I think.

Sir William Perkins. But then my Feet will hang in the Cart.

Executioner. If you pleaſe, give me Notice when you will have the Cart go away.

Sir John Friend. Stretch forth thy Arms, O Lord, and receive my Soul, and carry it into Heaven, I beſeech thee! Executioner, when we knock, go away.

And after a few Ejaculations, they gave the Sign, and the Cart drew away.

They both of them gave Money to the Executioner; and having hung above half an Hour, being a conſiderable Time after they were dead, they were cut down and quartered, according to the Sentence.

For this Act of theirs, Mr. Cook and Mr. Snatt were committed to Newgate, and ordered to be proſecuted by the Attorney-General; but Mr. Collier kept out of the Way, and was not taken.—On this Occaſion, Mr. Collier publiſhed the following Defence of himſelf:

A Defence of the Abſolution given to Sir William Perkins at the Place of Execution, April the 3*d*.

MY being preſent, and in ſome meaſure officiating, at the Place of Execution on Friday laſt, has been extremely miſunderſtood. The Weekly Intelligence, together with the Remarker, have cenſured this Action with a great deal of Liberty and Heat. I thank God I am not eaſily diſturbed with intemperate Language, eſpecially when it is given without Occaſion. So that if Matters had gone no farther, I could have paſſed over the ill Uſage, and ſaid nothing. I confeſs, having received Notice that ſome Perſons of Figure threatened me with Impriſonment, I took a little Care of myſelf; and as it happened, not without Reaſon: For on Monday about Twelve at Night, ſix or eight Perſons ruſhed into my Lodgings, broke open a Trunk, and ſeized ſome Papers of Value, though perfectly inoffenſive and foreign to their Purpoſe. And ſince, I underſtand there is a Bill found againſt me for High Miſdemeanors. And now one would think I had done ſomething very extraordinary.

I ſhall therefore make a brief Report of Matters of Fact, and leave the World to judge, whether all theſe Cenſures and Severities are deſerved or not.

Sir William Perkins (whom I had not ſeen for four or five Years laſt paſt) after his Trial, deſired me to come to him, in order to his Preparation for another World. I accordingly viſited him in Newgate, as I thought myſelf obliged by my Character. I was put in the Liſt of thoſe who had Leave to ſee him by public Order, and had the firſt two Days the Liberty of converſing with him in private. Afterwards I was not permitted to ſpeak or pray with him alone, a Keeper being always preſent. At laſt even this Permiſſion was recalled, inſomuch that I could never ſee him from Wedneſday Morning, April the 1ſt, till Friday at the Place of Execution. Sir William, being under an Expectation of Death from the Time of his Sentence, had given me the State of his Conſcience, and therefore deſired the ſolemn Abſolution of the Church might be pronounced to him by me the laſt Day. And underſtanding I was refuſed Admittance on Friday Morning, he ſent me Word that he would gladly ſee me at the Place of Execution. I went thither, and gave him the Abſolution he requeſted, it being impracticable for me to do it elſewhere. This Office I performed Word for Word in Form, as it ſtands in the Viſitation of the Sick. And now where lies the great Crime of all this? When a Man has declared his Sorrow for all the Faults and Miſcarriages of his Life, and qualified himſelf for the Privilege of Abſolution, with what Juſtice could it be denied him? Ought not dying Perſons to be ſupported in their laſt Agonies, and paſs into the other World with all the Advantage the Church can give them? I am ſurprized, ſo regular a Proceeding as this ſhould give ſo much Offence, and make ſo much Noiſe as I perceive it has done. Some People, I underſtand, are diſpleaſed at the Office being performed with Impoſition of Hands. Now this is not only an innocent, but an ancient Ceremony of Abſolution. It was the general Practice of the Primitive Church in ſuch Caſes, long before there were any Exceptions to the Roman Communion. It is, in the Opinion of ſeveral Fathers and good modern Expoſitors, referred to by the Apoſtle, 1 Tim. v. 22. It is likewiſe preſcribed the Aſſiſting Preſbyters in our own Ordination Form. But I ſuppoſe I need ſay no more in Defence of this Circumſtance. To proceed: Others ſeem very much ſhocked at the Thing itſelf; and think it a ſtrange Preſumption to admit a Perſon charged with ſo high a Crime, to the Benefit of Abſolution. With Submiſſion, this is concluding a great deal too faſt. Are all People damned that are caſt in a Capital Indictment? If ſo, to what Purpoſe are they viſited by Divines, why are they exhorted to Repentance, and have Time allowed them to fit them for Death? But if they may be acquitted hereafter, notwithſtanding their Condemnation here; if they may be recovered by Recollection, by Repentance, and Reſignation, why ſhould the Church refuſe them her Pardon on Earth, when ſhe believes it is paſſed in Heaven? The Power of the Keys was given for this Purpoſe, that the Miniſters of God might bind or looſe, as the Diſpoſition of the Perſon required. The latter I ſincerely believed to be Sir William's Caſe: I judged him to have a full Right to all the Privileges of Communion: And therefore had I denied him Abſolution upon his Requeſt, I had failed in my Duty, and gone againſt the Authority both of the Ancient and Engliſh Church. If it is ſaid that the Nature of this Gentleman's Charge required his being abſolved in private; to this I anſwer, So he had been, had I been permitted to viſit him the laſt Morning: But this Liberty was refuſed me more than once; and I hope I ſhall not be blamed for Impoſſibilities of other Men's making. In ſhort, he ſeemed very deſirous of Abſolution at my Hands, as being the only Perſon acquainted with his Condition. Privately it was not in my Power to give it him; ſo that he muſt either receive it publickly from me, or not at all. But Sir William confeſſed himſelf acquainted with the intended Aſſaſſination. Pray, did he confeſs it to me, and have I revealed any Part of his Confeſſion? Then I had been guilty of High Miſdemeanor indeed: I had broke the 113th Canon, and been pronounced Irregular by the Church; and he that falls under Irregularity, is for ever after incapable of executing the Office of a Prieſt. (Dr. Heylin's Introduction to Cyprian, Angl. p. 6.) I confeſs there is an Exception in the Canon, but that does not reach the Caſe in Hand, even upon the largeſt Suppoſition. Well! But Sir William owned this Charge before the Committee. How could I know that? I neither ſaw Sir William after his Examination, till Friday Noon, nor the Votes which mentioned it till after that Time. But he confeſſed it in his Paper. What then? Which Way does the Paper concern me? It is well known Sir William Perkins was a Man of Senſe, and bred to Law and Letters, and needed no Help to aſſiſt him in writing a few Lines. Beſides, I was not permitted to come near him for more than two Days before he ſuffered: Neither was he allowed ſo much as Pen and Ink till the laſt Morning. Then it was that he penned his Speech, as I am told by thoſe who were preſent; and having read it before the Keeper, delivered a Copy of it to a Friend, which was not ſhewed to me till after the Execution. Indeed, I did believe he would leave ſome Paper behind him, both becauſe it is cuſtomary upon ſuch ſad Occaſions, and becauſe on Tueſday Night, when he expected Death on Wedneſday, he deſired Pen, Ink and Paper, for that Purpoſe.

And now, after all, I deſire to know in what ſingle Circumſtance I have miſbehaved myſelf, or done any Thing unbecoming my Profeſſion? It is very hard a Man muſt be proſecuted for performing the Obligations of his Office, and the Duties of common Friendſhip and Humanity. As for any Methods of Murder, I diſlike them no leſs than thoſe who rail loudeſt; and nothing but a mercenary Malice could ſuggeſt the contrary: But if the Functions of the Prieſthood, and the Aſſiſtances of Religion, and the reading the Public Liturgy, are grown a Crime, I am not concerned at the Imputation. I hope the complying Clergy will take ſome Care to check the Diſorders, and inform the Ignorance of their People a little better. If they are unreproved for theſe ſlanderous Exceſſes, their Paſtors muſt one Day expect to account for it.

As for thoſe in Power, it is poſſible they may have been governed by Miſ-reports, and ſudden Reſentment: If ſo, ſecond Thoughts and the Reaſon of the Caſe, will put a Stop to their Severities, and that this may be the Iſſue of the Buſineſs I think myſelf obliged to wiſh, as well for their Sakes as my own.

April 9th, 1696. JER. COLLIER.

On this Occaſion the following Declaration of the Archbiſhops, &c. appeared:

A Declaration of the Senſe of the Archbiſhops and Biſhops, now in and about London, upon the Occaſion of their Attendance in Parliament, concerning the irregular and ſcandalous Proceedings of certain Clergymen, at the Execution of Sir John Friend and Sir William Perkins.

WE the Archbiſhops and Biſhops now in and about London, upon Occaſion of our Attendance in Parliament, having ſeen a printed Paper, intituled, A true Copy of the Papers delivered by Sir John Friend and Sir William Perkins to the Sheriffs of London and Middleſex, at Tyburn, the Place of Execution, April 3, 1696: And being alſo certainly informed of the moſt irregular Behaviour of Mr. Cook, Mr. Collier *, and Mr. Snatt, in pretending to abſolve the ſaid Criminals at their Execution, to the great Scandal of the Church, and of our holy Religion, have therefore thought ourſelves obliged to declare our Senſe of the ſame, as here followeth:

1. As to the Paper before mentioned, we cannot but obſerve, that in that Part to which Sir John Friend is intituled, among many other Things there delivered as his private Opinion, (for which we muſt leave him to God) there are mingled ſome Things concerning the Church of England, to the great Diſhonour and Reproach of it. That venerable Name is, by the Author of that Paper, appropriated to that Part of our Church which hath ſeparated itſelf from the Body; and more particularly, to a Faction of them who are ſo furiouſly bent upon the reſtoring of the late King, that they ſeem not to regard by what Means it is to be effected. We have a ſad Inſtance of it in this very Perſon, who (as was depoſed at his Trial) was privy to the horrid Deſign of Aſſaſſination, and yet neither diſcovered it, nor ſhewed any Diſlike of it, but as he was afraid it might ruin King James and his Affairs; and was ready alſo, together with others of the ſame Chriſtian Principle (as the Author of his Paper is bold to call it) to act in Conjunction with an Army of French Papiſts, for the Ruin of their Country, and the Extirpation of that Religion which they themſelves do profeſs.

2. As for Sir William Perkins, who alſo profeſſed to die in the Communion of the Church of England, we cannot think he meant any thing elſe by it, than that he adhered to the ſame violent Faction: Being aſſured (as we are by very good Information), that both he and Sir John Friend had withdrawn themſelves from our public Aſſemblies ſome Time before their Death; which makes us the leſs wonder to find in both their Papers ſo light, and even favourable, a Mention of that moſt inhuman Deſign of aſſaſſinating his Sacred Majeſty: And eſpecially in that of Sir William Perkins, who, though he was publickly convicted of his having engaged ſo many in that horrible Sin, yet, after all, could think to clear himſelf of it with this wretched Excuſe: 'Tis true I was privy to the Deſign upon the Prince, but was not to act in it. Bleſſed be God, there never was any of our Church, that in any Change of Times could have this laid to his Charge, that he was ſo much as privy to a Deſign of Aſſaſſination.

Laſtly, For thoſe Clergymen that took upon them to abſolve theſe Criminals at the Place of Execution, by laying all three together their Hands upon their Heads, and publickly pronouncing a Form of Abſolution; as their Manner of doing this was extremely inſolent, and without Precedent, either in our Church, or any other that we know of; ſo the Thing itſelf was altogether irregular.

The Rubrick in our Office of the Viſitation of the Sick, from whence they took the Words they then uſed, and upon which, if upon any thing in our Liturgy, they muſt ground this their Proceeding, gave them no Authority nor no Pretence for the abſolving theſe Perſons; nay, as they managed the Affair, they acted in this Abſolution far otherwiſe than is there directed.

That Rubrick is concerning ſick Perſons; and it is there required, Firſt, That the ſick Perſon ſhall be moved to make a ſpecial Confeſſion of his Sins, if he feel his Conſcience troubled with any weighty Matter; and then, after ſuch Confeſſion, the Prieſt ſhall abſolve him, if he humbly and heartily deſire it. But here they abſolved, and that publickly, Perſons condemned by Law for execrable Crimes, without ſo much as once moving them at that Time to make a ſpecial Confeſſion of their Sins, at leaſt for thoſe Sins for which they were condemned. And on the other Side, here were Perſons abſolved that did not humbly deſire Abſolution, as feeling any ſuch weighty Matter to trouble their Conſcience; but on the contrary, in Sir John Friend's Paper it is declared, that he had a great deal of Satisfaction in ſuffering for that Cauſe, which he firmly believed to be the Cauſe of God, and true Religion.

If theſe Miniſters knew not the State of theſe Men's Souls, before they gave them Abſolution, as it is manifeſt two of them, Mr. Snatt and Mr. Cook, did not as to Sir William Perkins (they having ſince declared that they had not ſpoke with Sir William till they were at the Place of Execution), how could they, without manifeſt Tranſgreſſion of the Church's Order, as well as the prophane Abuſe of the Power Chriſt hath left with his Miniſters, abſolve them from all their Sins?

If they were acquainted with theſe Men's Sentiments declared in their Papers, then they muſt look upon them, either as hardened Impenitents, or as Martyrs.

We are ſo charitable to believe that they would not abſolve them under the former Notion, for that had been, in Effect, ſealing them to Damnation: But if they held theſe Men to be Martyrs, then their abſolving them in that Manner was a Juſtification of thoſe grievous Crimes for which theſe Men ſuffered, and an open Affront to the Laws both of Church and State.

Upon the Conſideration of theſe Things, and for the doing of Right to our Church, which may otherwiſe ſuffer, among ſuch as are Strangers to our Conſtitution, by the evil Principles and Practices both of the aforeſaid Criminals, and the three Clergymen that aſſiſted them, who all pretended to be Members of the Church of England; we do declare, That we diſown and deteſt all ſuch Principles and Practices, looking upon them as highly ſchiſmatical and ſeditious, dangerous both to the Church and State, and contrary to the true Doctrine and Spirit of the Chriſtian Religion. And we alſo take this Occaſion to warn and exhort all the People committed to our Charge, to beware of ſuch Seducers, and to avoid them; leſt (as the Apoſtle St. Peter ſpeaks) they be led away with the Error of the Wicked, and fall from their ſtedfaſt Adherence to the Principles of the true Church of England, as it was eſtabliſhed at the bleſſed Reformation of Religion, and as by God's eſpecial Providence it continues to this Day. April 10th, 1696.

A farther Defence of the Abſolution given to Sir William Perkins, occaſioned by a Paper, intituled, A Declaration of the Archbiſhops and Biſhops, &c.

ABOUT a Fortnight ſince I publiſhed the foregoing Defence of the Abſolution given to Sir William Perkins. 'Tis true, the Vindication was not drawn out into any great Length, neither did I imagine it neceſſary. That which was ſaid, was in my Opinion ſufficient to ſatisfy any candid and impartial Reader. If the Argument was any where over-contracted, it was in that Part which mentions Impoſition of Hands. Here I confeſs the Proofs were but generally named, and the Force and Improvement of them left in ſome Meaſure to Collection. My Deſire to undeceive the People, and to ſilence their Clamours as ſoon as might be, the Diſadvantage of my Retirement, and the Plainneſs of the Caſe, were the Reaſons why I was no fuller upon that Head: But now I have a freſh Opportunity to treat the Point more at large, the late Declaration, &c. of the Biſhops having given me a juſt Occaſion to reſume the Argument. I muſt own the Peruſal of this Declaration ſurprized me very much. I could not imagine theſe Reverend Prelates would have publiſhed ſo unſupported a Cenſure; nor engaged their Character ſo far in this Affair. I am almoſt amazed an innocent Conduct ſhould be thus miſconſtrued, and the Charge run ſo high without Proof, or Provocation to defend it.

The Declaration begins with ſome Remarks upon the Papers of Sir William Perkins and Sir John Friend: Theſe Exceptions I ſhall paſs over, as being unconcerned in their Defence. Indeed, my Reſolution upon the whole is, to engage no farther than the Juſtification of my own Conduct; as being unwilling to have any unneceſſary Diſputes with theſe Reverend Prelates.

The pretended Irregularity objected againſt Mr. Snatt, Mr. Cook, and myſelf, relates wholly to the Abſolution given to thoſe two Gentlemen at the Place of Execution. The Performance of this Office, the Biſhops are pleaſed to ſay, was extremely inſolent and without Precedent in the Manner, and altogether irregular in the Thing.

I ſhall endeavour to juſtify my Practice againſt every Point of the Accuſation, and prove the Abſolution defenſible, both with reſpect to Manner and Form, to Persons and Occasion. And, 1st, with respect to the Manner. And here I shall make good three Things.

* This Mr. Collier was a very learned and ingenious Man, and the Author of the Great Hiſtorical Dictionary, in Folio;—of the Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory, in Folio;—of the View of the Stage; and many other Pieces.

1st, That giving Absolution with Imposition of Hands was the general Practice of the ancient Church.

2dly, That the Performance of this Ceremony was allowed to Priests, and sometimes to Deacons, as well as Bishops.

3dly, That Imposition of Hands is enjoined the Assisting Presbyters by our own Church in the Office of Ordination, and by Parity of Reason is fairly applicable to the present Case.

First, That giving of Absolution with Imposition of Hands, was the general Practice of the ancient Church.

To begin with Tertullian, who lived in the Beginning of the third Century. This Father understands that Place of the Apostle, Lay Hands suddenly on no Man, (1 Tim. v. 22.) of the Offices of Penance and Absolution. (L. de Pudic. cap. 18.) And (cap. 22.) he alludes to the same Custom in these Words, Carnem laniatam prosternens, as Albaspinæus observes, (Albasp. Obser. l. 2. p. 97. Not. in Tertull. p. 181.) Indeed the Design of his Book, De Pudicitia, plainly determines the Author to this Sense. Here he treats professedly of those who were to be finally excluded from Church Communion, and denied the Discipline of Penance. He disputes nothing about Confirmation, or Orders; so that it is evident the Imposition of Hands, mentioned by him, must relate to Penitential Absolution.

St. Cyprian's Council of Carthage is express to the same Purpose. Here Nemesianus, Crescens, Secundinus, and Vincentius, Bishops of Thubuni, Cirta, Carpi, and Tiberis, all of them agree, that the Church's Peace, and the Expedients of Reconciliation, were to pass through this Form of Imposition of Hands.

The 80th Canon of the fourth Council of Carthage enjoins, That during the whole Time of Abstinence, (I suppose either stated or occasional) the Priests (Sacerdotes) should lay their Hands upon the Penitents.

The 11th Canon of the third Council of Toledo, in the Directions for the Methods of Penance, is positive for the frequent Use of this Ceremony; which made Albaspinæus conclude, That Absolution-Prayers and Imposition of Hands were repeated and customary in such Cases. (Albasp. Observ. l. 2. p. 86.)

To conclude this Point, The learned Dr. Hammond, in his Annotations on the Text above-mentioned, (1 Tim. v. 22.) refers the laying on Hands to Absolution. "The Apostle (says he) exhorts Timothy that he "should not make too much Haste to receive those who were under Cen"sures, to Absolution. For that was the Thing which would most pro"bably make him Partaker, or guilty of their Sins, which the Censures "were designed to reform in them; but would not do so, if, before they "had approved their Repentance and Reformation, they were received to "the Peace of the Church." This learned Divine cites a great many Authorities in Defence of his Opinion, which the Reader may consult at his Leisure.

Secondly, The pronouncing the Absolution with Imposition of Hands, is no Encroachment upon the Episcopal Authority, but plainly allowed to the Order of Presbyters.

This Point I shall make good from several plain Testimonies of St. Cyprian, whose Authority must be granted to be unexceptionable, both with respect to the Antiquity and Character of the Person. Indeed it is to this Father that we are principally obliged for the Remains we have of the Discipline and Government of the Primitive Church.

Now St. Cyprian is categorical in the Case, and affirms roundly, that in lesser Crimes than those of the Lapsed, the Penitent could not be admitted to full Communion, unless the Bishops and Clergy had laid their Hands upon him. Nisi prius illi ab Episcopo et Clero manus fuerit imposita. (Ep. 17. p. 39. Ed. Oxon.) Now where the Bishops and Clergy are thus contradistinguished, the Order of Priests must be comprehended in the latter, in the most restrained Construction. I might produce his 15th and 16th Ep. (p. 34. 37.) for the same Purpose; but because these Testimonies run much in the Words of the former, I shall wave the Recital.

This Father, in his 18th Ep. tells his Priests and Deacons, That they need not expect his coming Home, to reconcile the Lapsed; but if any of the Laity were in Danger of Death, a Priest; and if a Priest could not be had, and the Necessity was extreme, a Deacon was a sufficient Authority to hear their Confession, to lay Hands upon them, and consign them to the Peace of the Church. The same Advice, upon the same Occasion, is repeated, Ep. 19. p. 41. From whence it is evident, that Imposition of Hands was no reserved incommunicable Privilege of the Bishops, but delegated as low as the Deacons, upon emergent Necessity, and visible Approaches of Death. These Authorities of St. Cyprian are all double charged, and prove two Points at once. They prove, that Imposition of Hands was a general Appendix to Absolution, and that it was within the Commission of the Priest to officiate in the Ceremony. To proceed:

In the 13th Canon of the first Council of Nice, the Viaticum is ordered to be given to those who are at the Point of Death. And by the Viaticum, Albaspinæus proves, that Absolution with Imposition of Hands was meant, and not the Eucharist: And that such an Absolution might be given by those who were no more than Priests. (Albasp. Not. in quosdam Can. p. 131.) I could amass a great many more Testimonies, were it necessary; but I conceive, what has been said already, may be sufficient to vindicate my Practice from the Charge of Encroachment and Singularity.

Thirdly, Imposition of Hands is enjoined the Assisting Presbyters by our own Church in the Office of Ordination, and by Parity of Reason is fairly applicable to the present Case.

If our Church had thought the Imposition of Hands too much for the Character of Priests, she would not have prescribed them a Share in it at her Ordinations. But since she has allowed them this Liberty in the most solemn Exercises of Authority, why should she deny it in interior Cases? To assist in the Conveyance of an Authority seems a greater Mark of Power, than the executing any Branch of the Authority conveyed. If the Presbyters are permitted to lay their Hands upon the Clergy, why not, à fortiori, upon the Laity? St. Hierom affirms plainly (Ep. ad Evagr.) that the Powers of a Priest comprehend those of a Bishop, excepting in the Point of Ordination. Our Church has never condemned this Father's Assertion; why then may not the first absolve with Imposition of Hands, no less than the other?

But there is no Appointment of this Ceremony in the Absolution-Rubrick. True: Neither is there any Prohibition. The Rubrick is perfectly silent both as to Posture and Gesture, and yet some Circumstances of this Nature must of Necessity be used.

Now since our Church allows the Priest Imposition of Hands in another Case, and does not forbid it in this, Is it any Harm if our Liberty moves upward, and determines itself by general Usage and primitive Practice? Our Church has always professed a Regard for the Patterns of Antiquity: We cannot do her a greater Honour, than by conforming to the Solemnities of the purest Ages, than by making the Discipline of Fathers and Councils the Rule of our Behaviour *: Especially when we are not bound up by National Law, and particular Constitution. Thus much for the Manner.

I come now to justify the Thing and the Occasion.

It is objected by these Reverend Prelates, that the three assisting Clergymen pronounced a Form of Absolution, &c. With Submission, I hope a Form is better than no Form; especially when it was a Form Rubrically appointed; a Form drawn up by the publick Authority of the Church, confirmed by Canon, and Act of Parliament; a Form the most pertinent and proper to the Occasion of any in the Liturgy. I am sorry to see the solemn Offices of Religion mentioned with such seeming Coldness, and Abatements of Expression. Were it not that I am unwilling to give these Reverend Prelates the Trouble of a Question, I would gladly understand, what Form they could have fixed on more suitable to so sad an Occasion? I am sure that Form of Absolution is the most solemn and authoritative of any in the Service-Book. Now if ever the Church exerts herself, ought it not to be in Cases of the greatest Necessity? Can her most comfortable Administrations, and the highest Acts of her Authority, be better employed than for the Relief of dying Persons, who are combating the King of Terrors, and stand just upon the Brink of Eternity? Upon the whole, I am surprized they should say the Rubrick gave us no Pretence of Authority to absolve those Persons. Does not the Rubrick give the Priest a Power to pronounce the Absolution, and to judge of the Condition of the Penitent? This cannot be denied. And why then had we no Pretence of Authority? Because the Rubrick relates to the Sick. To this I answer; Had the Church left us a stated Office for Persons Condemned, and we had refused to make Use of it, there had been some Force in the Objection; but as the Matter stands, I humbly conceive there is none at all. The Church, without Question, would have Condemned Persons taken care of, as well as others, and their Spiritual Necessities supplied. And if so, is it not more Respect to the Church to officiate in Forms of her own setting forth, than in private and unauthorized Compositions? And if the Function was to be performed in the publick Devotions, I desire to know what Part of them could have been more proper than the Office of Visitation of the Sick? If we consider the Design of the Church, and especially the Rubrick before the Absolution, we shall find that she intended this Office to prepare People for the other World, and considered them rather as dying, than likely to recover. This appears evidently from the Questions and Advices ordered to be asked and given; so that wherever Death is in View, the Office cannot be unseasonable, nor misapplied. And can any Persons be more certain of Death than those who are publickly condemned, who lie under fatal Sentence, and irresistible Power; who have the Force of the County to dispatch them, and are just ready to receive the Stroke? As to the previous Questions, they were put and answered, the Absolution was desired, and the Confession received in Prison; and in short, the Church's Directions were observed in every Particular. But we did not move them to make a special Confession of their Sins at that Time. With Submission, Where lies the Necessity, or even the Expediency of such a Practice? Does our Church oblige dying Persons to publick Confession? Does she require them to throw open the Retirements of Conscience, and the Secrets of private Life, to the View of the World? I am at a Loss to understand why we should be charged with Omissions on such Accounts as these.

The Declaration, &c. proceeds with great Vehemence, and charges us with manifest Transgression of the Church's Order, and prophane Abuse of the Authority of Christ. These are hard Words, but I hope altogether undeserved. It is true, they instance only in Mr. Snatt, and Mr. Cook, but I must own the Objection lies equally against myself; for I never saw Sir John Friend during his whole Imprisonment. But in assisting at his Absolution, so far as laying on my Hand amounts to, I did no more than what is easily defensible. I grant I had no immediate and particular Knowledge of his Condition, neither was it necessary. Our Church, in Conformity to Antiquity, has made the Priest the proper Judge of the Qualifications of the Penitents, and supposes him fit to be trusted, and believed in that Affair. Now Mr. Snatt and Mr. Cook (upon whose Judgment and Integrity I can very well depend) had given me a general Account of Sir John's pious Disposition, and that he was well prepared for all the Assistance the Church could give him. The having so good Information from first Hands, from proper and authorized Judges, is sufficient to warrant my Part in Sir John's Absolution. This, besides what has been said, I shall make good from two parallel Instances.

First, It is well known that Bishops of the ancient Church used to give a Sort of Certificates to those that travelled; by virtue of which, they were not only entertained and accommodated, but admitted to full Communion all over Christendom. (Albasp. Not. in Can. p. 115.) From whence we may observe, that personal Acquaintance, and particular Examination, are not necessary to give a Right to the Privileges of Christianity. Where the Credentials are good, the Church is to enquire no farther; she is to presume upon the Probity of the Person recommended, and to treat him accordingly.

Secondly, Our own Church, in some of the highest Administrations, acts upon Principles of Trust and Confidence. She conveys her Privileges,

* Bishop Sanderson, that eminent Casuist, about a Day before his Death, desired his Chaplain, Mr. Pullen, to give him Absolution; and at his performing that Office, he pulled off his Cap, that Mr. Pullen might lay his Hand upon his bare Head. Walton's Life of Bishop Sanderson, p. 94. Folio Edit.

vileges, and exercises her Authority, without always insisting on personal Inquiry and immediate Proof. At the giving of Holy Orders, neither the Bishops, nor the assisting Presbyters, are always personally acquainted with those they Ordain. The Prudence of our Church does not tie us up to such unreasonable Rigours. Both Practice, and the Ordination Form, suppose the contrary. And why then may not the Priest assist in Absolution as well as Orders, without any previous Experiment of the State of the Person? Why may not he in the first, as well as the latter Branch of his Authority, act upon the Warrant of unexceptionable Testimony? By all Parity of Reason and Force of Consequence, the Practice is no less defensible in one Case, than in the other.

If it is objected, That the joining of all the three Clergymen in the Imposition of Hands is unprecedented, and exceptionable; to this I answer, That if the Action was lawful, singly performed, I cannot imagine how a Concurrence of more authorised Persons should make it otherwise? Is there any Harm in Union and Solemnity? Or can Religion be treated with too many Circumstances of Advantage? What Canon is there that stints the Assistance to One, and forbids a Plurality of Persons? Timothy had the Hands of the Presbytery laid upon him, (1 Tim. iv. 14.) which, without Doubt, exceeded the Number now objected. Our Church, at her Ordination, allows this Ceremony to all the Presbyters present. And in the very Case of Absolution, the Penitent was to receive Imposition of Hands from the Bishop and Clergy; as appears from the Testimony of St. Cyprian above-mentioned. Farther,

These Reverend Prelates argue, that we must either look on the Persons absolved as Impenitents, or Martyrs; and they make their Advantage of each Branch of the Supposition. But, with Submission, I see no Necessity of granting the Disjunction. For there may be a third Way of considering the Matter. To speak to my own Case: I absolved Sir William Perkins as a Penitent; and I suppose every Body must be absolved under that Consideration: For Absolution supposes both Sin and Repentance, in the Notion of it. But as for the Matter of Sir William's Repentance, that is never likely to be known from me. Neither am I in the least affected with the Bishops Inference. For supposing I received a defective Confession, am I accountable for that? However, I neither do nor am obliged to declare my Opinion in this Matter. But thus far I am positive, that there was nothing confessed to me, which the Canon obliges me to reveal: And what the Canon does not enjoin me to discover, it enjoins me not to discover. (Can. 113. Vid. first Defence.) And so there is an End of this Dispute.

I hope by this Time it may appear, that I am neither unfurnished with Reason, or Precedent, to justfy what I have done. However, I shall give one late Instance for the whole Case, and so conclude.

At the Execution of Mr. Ashton, Jan. 1690, Absolution was given him in the same Form, with Imposition of Hands, at the same Place, and upon the same Occasion; and a justifying Paper left by the Person that suffered. Now at that Time there were no Exceptions made either to Manner or Thing. The Performance was so far from displeasing, that the Sheriff gave his Thanks for the Solemnity of the Office. There were no Complaints either at Lambeth, or Whitehall, no public Invectives, no seizing of Body and Goods; in short, no Signs of the least Dissatisfaction. And who could imagine, that the bare repeating of an Action should raise such a Storm upon us now, which was so perfectly inoffensive before? To punish in this Manner, without Warning or Precedent, without Canon or Law, is (with Submission) somewhat unintelligible.

And now having defended myself, I shall reply nothing to all the unkind Reflections, and tragical Language of the Declaration. It is probably within my Power, to turn some of these Reverend Prelates Artillery upon them. But my Regard to their Character, and Inclination not to displease, makes me wave the Advantage.

However, their extraordinary Usage has done me the Honour of an Opportunity to forgive them, which I thank God I heartily do.

April 21, 1696. J. C.

P. S. "I have just now received a Sheet, called An Answer to my Defence, &c. As for that little which is material in this Paper, it is already satisfied, and I do not love needless Repetitions. And therefore to begin and end in a Word with this Answerer; If he has any Thing remarkable, it is, in my Opinion, his Ill Language; and that I can both pity and despise.' April 25.

There were several Pamphlets published on this Occasion, against and in Defence of this Proceeding, but these are sufficient to shew the Nature of the Controversy.

In July following, Mr. Cook and Mr. Snatt were brought to the Court of King's-Bench, and the Proceedings against them are thus briefly related in Comberbach's Reports, p. 382.

Indictment for absolving Traitors.

"UPON an Indictment setting forth, that Sir John Friend and Sir William Perkins being attainted, and about to be executed at Tyburn, for High Treason, &c. the Defendants conspiring and intending (as much as in them lay) to justify, or at least to extenuate and lessen their Crimes, and to induce his Majesty's Subjects to believe that they died rather as Martyrs than as Traitors, and to incite the King's Subjects to commit the like Treasons, they did take upon them to absolve, and did pronounce a Form of Absolution of them the said Sir William Perkins and Sir John Friend, without any Repentance, or any Signs of Repentance by them given.

"It was proved, that the Defendants asked the Criminals the several "Questions directed by the Rubrick in the Office of Visitation of the Sick, "and Mr. Cook pronounced the Words of Absolution of one of the Traitors; Mr. Snatt, and one Mr. Collier, (who is not now indicted) laying "their Hands upon his Head; and after the Words pronounced, saying, "Amen; and Mr. Collier pronounced the Words as to the other Traitor, "they all three laying on their Hands, &c. It was proved, that the Defendants were earnestly requested by Sir William Perkins and Sir John "Friend, to assist them at the Place of Execution; and therefore the Jury "were directed to acquit them of Conspiracy (though the Attorney-General said the Indictment was not for Conspiracy, and Conspirantes was "put adjectively only to introduce the other Matter, and therefore was not "material): And Holt directed the Jury, that this Proceeding of the Defendants was certainly scandalous and irregular; for if the Criminals "had before made a private Confession, the Absolution should have been "private likewise; but if they would give a public Absolution, they ought "to have required as public Confession, and particularly with respect "to those Crimes for which they were attainted, being so notorious, "&c. However, if the Jury were of Opinion they did it only ignorantly, and by Mistake, (in which Case it is properly connusable in the Spiritual Court:) then to acquit them; but if they did it with a Design to "affront the Government and to vilify the Justice of the Nation, then to "find them Guilty: But at the Instance of the Defendants Counsel, it was "directed to be found Specially, that Snatt laid his Hand on the Head, "and was assistant, while the other pronounced the Words of Absolution, "and afterwards Snatt said, Amen (it being laid quod pronuntiaverunt). "And accordingly the Jury acquitted them of the Conspiracy, and found "Cook guilty of the rest, and as to Snatt, ut supra *.

When this Special Verdict was argued, or how this Matter ended, does not appear: But at the Sale of the late Earl of Clarendon's Manuscripts, in Covent-Garden, April 1763, the following Argument was purchased in Manuscript.

The King against Cook and Snatt.

IT is an Indictment for a Misdemeanor on which a Special Verdict is found. I am, by your Lordship's Appointment, Counsel for the Defendants.

The Indictment sets forth, That whereas Sir John Friend and Sir William Perkins were severally convicted and attainted of High Treason, in conspiring the Death of the King, and adhering to his Enemies, and according to due Course of Law, and Judgment thereon severally given, were drawn to Tyburn, to be there put to Death; Jeremy Collier, and these two Defendants, well knowing the Premisses, but intending to withdraw the King's Subjects from their Allegiance, and to incite them to commit the like Treasons, at the Gallows, being in the Cart with Sir John Friend and Sir William Perkins, and immediately before their Execution, conspiring, designing, and intending that execrable, horrible, and detestable High Treason, for which Sir John Friend and Sir William Perkins were attainted, and then instantly to die, according to due Course of Law, to justify, or at least to extenuate, diminish, or set at nought; and to insinuate into the King's Subjects, and persuade them, that Sir John Friend and Sir William Perkins were about to die innocent and undeservedly, and rather as Martyrs than Traitors; and to incite the King's Subjects to commit the like Treasons, and unlawfully and contumaciously, as Priests of the Church of England, in the Presence and Sight of a great Concourse of People, and in the Hearing of a great many of them, laying their Hands on the Heads of Sir John Friend and Sir William Perkins in the said Cart, then and there took upon themselves to absolve them, and did pronounce them to be absolved from all their Sins, without any Repentance by the said Sir John Friend and Sir William Perkins, or either of them, for the High Treason aforesaid first declared.

To this Indictment these two Defendants pleaded Not Guilty: And the Issue being tried before your Lordship, the Jury find this Special Verdict: That Cook, Snatt, and Collier laid their Hands on Sir John Friend, and Cook pronounced the Absolution, and Collier and Snatt said, Amen: That Collier and these two Defendants laid their Hands on Sir William Perkins, and Collier pronounced the Absolution, and Cook and Snatt said Amen: And that Cook and Snatt assisted, and assented to the said Absolution.

As to the Conspiracy, they find the Defendants Not Guilty; and as to all the rest of the Indictment, they find the Defendants Guilty; But whether, on the whole Matter, the Defendants, or either of them, be guilty of the Matters and Things charged on them in the Indictment (besides the Conspiracy) or no, the Jury pray the Advice of the Court. And thereupon it now comes before your Lordship. And

I hope, with Submission to your Lordship, as this Indictment is, these Defendants shall be discharged. And to that End I shall crave Leave humbly to lay before your Lordship some Considerations on these three Points:

First, Whether what is laid in this Indictment will amount to an Offence?

Secondly, If it be an Offence, I shall humbly submit it to your Lordship, Whether the Examination of it doth not belong to another Jurisdiction? And,

* 5 Modern, p. 363. reports the Case thus:

Term Mich. 9 W. III. B. R. 1697. Rex versus Cook, Snatt & Collier.

"They were found Guilty upon an Indictment for the following Crime, ff. Sir John Friend and Sir William Perkins were convicted for High Treason, in conspiring the "Death of the King; and the Defendants, being present with them at the Place of Execution, did, all of them, lay their Hands on Sir John Friend, who shewed no Repent- "ance for the Crime for which he was about to die; and Cook pronounced the Absolution, and Snatt and Collier said, Amen.

"That they all three likewise laid their Hands on Sir William Perkins, who was likewise impenitent of this Crime; and Collier pronounced the Absolution, and Cook and "Snatt said, Amen; and that they all assisted and assented to the said Absolution.

"The Jury made a Special Conclusion in their Verdict, Whether the laying on the Hands of three, and but one at a Time pronouncing the Absolution, makes them all "guilty of the whole Matter? Adjourn'.

Thirdly,

Thirdly, If it should be an Offence, and punishable in this Court, yet there can be no Judgment given against them on this Indictment.

But before I come to these Points, I must crave Leave to explain what I take to be the Meaning of one Expression in the Indictment, and that is, Absque aliqua pœnitentia per eos pro alta proditione prædicta prius declarata. By pœnitentia, though it usually amongst the Canonists signifies Penance, and sometimes Repentance, Absolution and Penance, yet in this Place I take it for Repentance only. And by the Words pro alta proditione prædicta prius declarata, is meant publickly declared for that particular Offence. For on the Evidence it appeared, there was a general Repentance of all their Sins; and there might have been a private, particular Repentance of this very Treason to the Priests, whilst they were in the Prison, according to the Rule of the Canonists, Posse in una die confessionem audiri, et in altera injungi pœnitentiam: As I find it cited by the greatest Casuist and best Author I have met with on this Occasion, Valerius Reginaldus de Requisitis in Confessione, l. 8. n. 11. fol. 230. But when this was objected at the Trial, the King's Counsel answered, The Repentance ought to be as public as the Absolution. Therefore, to reduce it all to a Case on this Indictment, I take it, these Gentlemen (especially Mr. Cook, for Mr. Snatt's Case doth somewhat differ) did publickly absolve Sir John Friend and Sir William Perkins, as they were about to be executed for High Treason, without their particular Repentance publickly declared for the Crimes for which they suffered. And I shall humbly submit it to your Lordship, whether this be any Offence in these Gentlemen, or in either of them. They were Persons, that by Order, at least by Leave of the Court when Sir John Friend and Sir William Perkins were attainted, were permitted and appointed to officiate with the condemned Criminals to prepare them for another World, when they were about to leave this by the Judgment of our Law. Accordingly they officiated, and were several Times with the condemned Criminals in the Prison; where we may very well presume, that they brought their Penitents to a particular Confession and Repentance, though we could not prove it at the Trial; because the Penitent was dead, and the Absolver the Person indicted.

And besides, the Absolver was not obliged to discover the Confession; nay, it is expressly forbidden by the 113th Canon of our Church, made by the Convocation in the Year 1603, which was called by the King's Writ, and confirmed under the Great Seal, according to the Form of the Statute 25 H. VIII. c. 19. as my Lord Vaughan tells us in his Reports, fol. 329. And the King or Convocation, but certainly both of them with their joint Power, may make Orders and Ordinances, which shall bind all the King's Subjects, but more especially the Clergy, as may plainly be inferred from the Statute 25 H. VIII. c. 19. And so are our Books, 21 E. IV. 45. Bro. Abr. Ordinary, pl. 1, Moor 755, 783. 2 Cro. 37. Noy 100. and 2 Ventr. 44. And so hath been the Practice, in the first Volume of the History of the Reformation, fol. 225. and the second Volume, fol. 60, 69, and 70. In a Case of this Nature, I must beg Leave of your Lordship to make use of the Writings of Divines and other Authors, and not strictly confine myself to our Books of Common Law: For our Law Books are silent in this Case; and indeed I do not find any other Authors speaking directly to the Point. Therefore, I must be forced to look into the Nature of Absolution, the Power of the Clergy, the Practice of Divines, and other collateral Matters, for some Light herein; which makes me dread growing tedious, and becoming very tiresome to your Lordship's Patience.

And, my Lord, as to this particular Case, these Canons are in some Manner confirmed by Act of Parliament: For the Statute 13 Car. II. c. 12. sect. the last, which seems to set aside the Canons of 1640, doth establish the Church as it was in the Year 1639; and then these Canons were in Force and practised. For the King who then reigned, at his Coronation, (the first that was after the making of these Canons) did not only swear to maintain to the Church the Laws of St. Edward, but likewise to preserve to the Bishops, and Churches committed to their Charge, all Canonical Privileges, 1 Rushworth's Collection, fol. 201. And the Power of Secrecy seems to me a Privilege; and these Canons are now received and observed as Laws amongst the Clergy. And, my Lord, neither the Indictment nor Evidence did deny that there was a private Repentance. Now, that a private Confession and Repentance had been sufficient, appears from the Rule of the Canonists, Non tenetur pœnitens tertio audiente confiteri, quia confessio cum sacerdote fiat in persona Dei omnia exploratissime cognoscentis, excludit omnem testem, Val. Reg. lib. 6. n. 78. fol. 182. De Sacramentali Confessione. Nay, the Confession to God Almighty only is held sufficient: Exaudi, Domine, preces nostras, et confitentiam tibi. Parce peccatis, ut quos conscientiæ reatus accusat, indulgentia tuæ miserationis absolvat, &c. as is set down in the Ordo Romanus de Officiis Divinis, in the tenth Tome of the Bibliotheca Patrum, fol. 30. and is verbatim rendered into English in our Liturgy, in the Commination, and in the Form of Prayer appointed to be used on the 30th of January, and in that appointed for our last general Fast. And I shall presume to offer to your Lordship's Consideration some Reasons, why such a private Confession to God Almighty, or to his Minister here on Earth, is sufficient for Absolution. One is drawn from the Nature of the Thing itself. No Man is obliged by Law to do any Act to any other Person, from whom he can receive no Benefit by so doing. And the People cannot absolve, it is only the Priest can do it; and therefore to him alone must be made the Confession and Repentance. And so is Linwood, the last Impression, fol. 337. on the Words, Debito caret fructu, says he, Fructus igitur sive utilitas pœnitentiæ est absolutio à peccatis, quam quis non consequitur ab eo qui non est suus judex, nec habet potestatem eum ligandi vel solvendi. And the same Author, speaking concerning Confession, fol. 327. Verbo confessionis, hath these Words, Confessio tripliciter fit, aut in foro animæ interius coram Deo, aut in foro pœnitentiæ exterius coram Dei vicario, aut in foro contentioso coram judice. And then he adds, Confessio est legitima coram sacerdote peccatorum declaratio. And there is not, as I can find, the least Hint of making any Confession or Repentance to the People, but only to the Priest, and that may be in private. But in this Case there was likewise a public Repentance declared, which the Priests might well take for a Repentance of that Offence as well as for any other. That Repentance indeed was general: For Traitors being by no Decree foreclosed Absolution, and no particular Form being prescribed, these Gentlemen followed the Rubrick in the Form there set down for the Visitation of the Sick, which may very well be taken to have been designed for all that are in Danger of Death; and so our greatest Divines have taken it. The learned Dr. Duport, in his Greek Version of our Liturgy, renders this Office by a Word that signifies as well to be in Peril or imminent Danger, or the like, as to be visited with Sickness; which likewise answers the Canonists Description or Denomination of this Sort of Absolution; to distinguish it from the common and sacramental Absolution, they call it Absolutio in articulo mortis, without distinguishing between a natural and violent Death, or between the Innocent and Malefactors. And if our Law had designed to have excluded Malefactors from the Benefit of this Office, it would have used the same Caution as it doth against others in the Office for Burial of the Dead, where it says, it shall not be used to those that die unbaptized, excommunicated, or are Felo de se. And I do not find Malefactors that suffer by the Hand of Justice excluded that Office, and I think it is often performed for them; why then must this of Visitation of the Sick be denied them? There is no other Office or Form appointed for these Sort of Persons. And then, where there is no Law there is no Transgression; they are left to their own Method and Form, and therefore may use that set down in the Common-Prayer as well as any other. And here the Priests asked Sir John Friend and Sir William Perkins, if they repented truly of all their Sins, and were in Charity with all the World? The Penitents answering in the Affirmative, the Absolvers advising Forgiveness, did, at the Request of the Penitents, in the Form set down in the Liturgy, pronounce the Absolution, neither of the Criminals signifying that he felt his Conscience troubled with any weighty Matter. And, with Submission to your Lordship, such Signification ought to be previous to the Motion for a Special Confession, for the Words are, If he feel his Conscience troubled; which I think is fully explained by the second Homily of Repentance, which condemns Auricular Confession, and then adds, "I do not say but that, if any do find themselves "troubled in Conscience, they may repair to their learned Curate or "Pastor, or to some other godly, learned Man, and shew their Trouble "and Doubt of their Consciences to them, that they may receive at "their Hands the comfortable Salve of God's Word." But it no where enjoins such Confession and Repentance, much less doth it command the Priest to exact them from the Penitent. There is no Order for the Priest to examine whether he doth find his Conscience troubled, if the Penitent doth not intimate it to the Priest. There is no Direction for the Priest to ask him any Question about it. And Val. Reg. l. 2. c. 2. n. 13. out of Sotus, gives us this Definition or Description of the Office and Duty of a Confessor in these Words, Officium quidem Confessarii de se non est interrogare pœnitentem, sed audire confitentem: And going on, he gives this Reason, Cum in foro pœnitentiali non procedatur sicut in criminali per vim coactivam ad extorquendam à reo confessionem, sed per spontaneam voluntatem confitentis. I acknowledge, that in the Church of Rome, to make Absolution a compleat Sacrament, a special Confession is required; as is directed by our Church, when the Penitent signifies that he feels a Burthen on his Conscience: But neither in these, nor in any other Cases, wherein special Confession is required, is it any where ordered to be public. It is sufficient that it is made to the Priest alone; and the common Practice in these and all other Cases is to have it private: All other Persons are excluded the sick Man's Chamber. But supposing, my Lord, that the Meaning of the Rubrick should be taken to be, that the Priest should move him to make such a special Confession, this is only directory; it is not compulsatory, any more than the preceding Paragraphs, where the Priest is to admonish the sick Person to make his Will, and declare his Debts, and, if he be of Ability, to give charitably to the Poor. And it would be difficult to maintain an Indictment on any of these Paragraphs against a Priest, for absolving a sick Man without admonishing him to make his Will, declare his Debts, or be liberal to the Poor, who perhaps starved for Want of such Relief. Certainly in those Cases the Rubrick would be looked on to be only directory: And why not so in this? The like Exposition hath been made on other Acts of Parliament. The Statute 21 Jac. I. c. 4. against vexatious Informers, enacts, That no Information shall be received, filed, or entered of Record, before the Informer hath made Oath that the Offence was committed within the County where it was laid, and, as he believes, within a Year before exhibiting the Information; and this Oath to be entered of Record. Yet I believe, it cannot be shewn that any such Oath hath at any Time been made, nor Informer nor Officer indicted for preferring, filing, entering, or receiving any Information without such Oath; for that Statute hath (as to that Part) been always held to be directory, that the Judge or Officer might require it, if they thought fit; but they are not thereby obliged in any Case to exact it from the Informer, any otherwise than as their own Discretions guide them, 1 Cro. 316. But taking the Clause in the Case now before your Lordship to be compulsatory, yet it is not to be universally observed to all Penitents; it is only in some Cases, where the Persons are not qualified without such special Confession, and the Priest is to consider and determine of the Qualifications: For Absolution is purely spiritual, and so left to the Priest, that he is the only Judge thereof. And if it might not be thought improper, I should crave Leave briefly to mention the Opinions of some of the Fathers of the Church on this Occasion.

St. Chrysostom says, The Father judges no Man, but hath committed all Judgment to the Son; and the Son, till his second Coming, hath left all Judgment to his Ministers. And St. Jerom, speaking of the Priests, hath these Words, Qui claves regni cœlorum habentes quodammodo ante diem judicii judicant. And St. Gregory the Great says of them, Principatum superni judicii sortiuntur, ut vice Dei quibusdam peccata retineant, et quibusdam relaxent; and therefore Tertullian calls Excommunication Præjudicium futuri seculi. And the learned Prelate Usher, in his Answer to Malone the Jesuit, saith, "We acknowledge most willingly, that the principal Part of the Priest's "Ministry

" Miniſtry is exerciſed in Matter of Forgiveneſs of Sins." And it farther appears by what I before cited out of Linwood, and likewiſe by another Expreſſion in the ſame Book, fol. 335. on the Words Competentis literaturæ, where he ſays, Epiſcopus eſt judex tam animarum quam corporum; Preſbyter vero non eſt judex niſi animarum. And fol. 337. the Word Sacerdotum is thus explained, Qui deputati ſunt ad audiendas confeſſiones: And in the next Paragraph he hath theſe Words, Verbum Dei dimittit peccata, ſacerdos autem eſt judex. And, my Lord, what I would infer from theſe Divines and Linwood, is, that the Prieſt being the Judge of the State of the Soul of the Penitent, he muſt at his Peril, as he will anſwer it to God Almighty, take care of the Confeſſion and Abſolution; and if he errs, he may perhaps be puniſhed for it in another World, but not in this. We uſually eſteem it a hard Caſe to puniſh a Man for erring in his Judgment, for not being ſo wiſe as he ought to be, or ſo underſtanding as another. No Judge is in any Caſe, at Common Law, to be puniſhed for an erroneous Judgment, either by Action or Indictment, 9 E. IV. 3. a. Pl. 10. 1 Len. 324. Hut. 120. And our Divines tell us, that God Almighty will judge us by our Wills, not by our Underſtandings. And therefore, if theſe Gentlemen were miſtaken in what they did, it being only an Error of their Judgments, though it may be deemed an imprudent Action, yet I hope it will not be adjudged criminal. And, my Lord, there may be this farther Reaſon given, why it ſhould be left to the Prieſt to judge of the Repentance, and give the Abſolution when he ſees Occaſion. Suppoſe, my Lord, an innocent Man ſhould be condemned for Treaſon or Felony, as it happened in the Caſe of the Uncle condemned and executed for the Murder of his Niece, mentioned in my Lord Coke's third Inſtitutes, 232. And the like Caſe happened in Glouceſterſhire between thirty and forty Years ſince, when Joan Perry and her two Sons (See p. 29, 30.) were executed for the Murder of one Harriſon; and after they were executed, the Perſon ſuppoſed to be murdered came into the Country, and vivâ voce proved the Innocency of thoſe Perſons that were condemned and executed for that fancied Murder. Now ſuppoſing, in ſuch a Caſe, the Perſon to be executed obſtinately and reſolutely denies the Fact, ſhall the Prieſt refuſe him Abſolution? And becauſe the innocent Perſon will not accuſe himſelf of what he was not ſo much as in Thought guilty, muſt he therefore die the ſecond Death for his other Sins, for which he does repent? For they are ſtill retained by the Prieſt, who refuſes to give him Abſolution. Becauſe ſuch Perſons cannot condemn themſelves for what their Conſciences do not accuſe them, can there be no Forgiveneſs, no Abſolution for them? Will not Charity allow they may be ſaved, and conſequently entitled to Abſolution? Nay, will not Charity extend to thoſe that ſuffer in an ill Cauſe, through a Fault in their Underſtanding? And I hope that the Errors of our Judgments, as well as the Weakneſs of our Memories, may be pardoned amongſt our ſecret Sins; and therefore ſuch Perſons may not always be denied the Benefit of Abſolution. It is no where denied to Traitors; nay, the Canoniſts ſay, In articulo mortis, omnes ſacerdotes quoſlibet pœnitentes à quibuſvis peccatis et cenſuris abſolvere poſſunt, Val. Reg. l. 1. n. 58. fol. 9. And he there cites a Council for it, where it was ſo determined. Nor is there any particular Form or Method preſcribed for their Repentance or Abſolution; therefore, methinks, a general Repentance may deſerve a general Abſolution; and perhaps, in ſome of theſe Caſes, the Prieſt had been to blame, if he had denied Abſolution.

And now, with your Lordſhip's Patience, I will look into the Practice of Divines in ſuch-like Caſes; though it cannot be expected that I ſhould bring many Precedents to warrant this, becauſe it is ſeldom that Abſolution is given at the Place of Execution; the Ordinary, or ſome other Divine performing that Office, uſually doing that in private, when they have free Acceſs to the Priſoner: And if it were not ſo done here, it was becauſe, after theſe Divines were appointed to be with the Criminals, and to prepare them for another World, and had been with them, and, as we ſay, received their Confeſſion and Repentance for the Crimes for which they were condemned, and perhaps had thereupon given them Abſolution; yet after this, for two or three Days immediately preceding the Execution, they were kept from them, and not permitted to come to them till they were in the Cart at the Place of Execution: And it may be intended, that the Abſolution that was then given them, was for the Sins which they had committed ſince they ſaw them laſt. Therefore, unleſs the King's Counſel can ſhew me a Caſe with ſuch Circumſtances, they cannot expect from me a direct Precedent to juſtify our Proceedings. But I ſhall crave Leave to mention a few that I think will bear ſome Proportion to the Caſe now before your Lordſhip. I ſhall begin with that of John Twyn, who was tried, convicted, and attainted at the Old-Bailey, the 20th of February, 1663, the Narrative of which was then printed by Authority. He was convicted for printing and publiſhing a treaſonable Libel; and my Lord Chief Juſtice Hyde, before whom the Trial was, ſaith, (State Trials, Vol. II. p. 538.) " I ſhall not " ſpend my Time in Diſcourſe to you to prepare you for Death: I ſee a " grave Perſon, whoſe Office it is, and I leave it to him... Do not think " of any Time here: Make your Peace with God, which muſt be " done by Confeſſion, and by the Diſcovery of thoſe that are guilty " of the ſame Crime with you. God have Mercy upon you; and if you " do ſo, he will have Mercy upon you." Afterwards, and before he came to be executed, the Ordinary preſſed him to Confeſſion of thoſe others concerned with him, which he refuſed; and yet the Ordinary offered to adminiſter the Sacrament to him. From whence I would infer, that it is the Office of the Ordinary to prepare condemned Criminals for another World, and conſequently he muſt be the Judge when they are prepared. And next, though the Chief Juſtice was of Opinion, that God Almighty would not pardon him but on the Confeſſion of his own Fault, and the Diſcovery of his Accomplices, yet the Ordinary tendered him the Sacrament, which comprehends the Abſolution, when he obſtinately refuſed to make any ſuch Diſcovery; (See Twyn's Speech and Behaviour in State Trials, Vol. VIII. p. 386, 387.) and yet no Indictment againſt him for it. My Lord Strafford, when he was going to be beheaded, being denied to ſpeak with Archbiſhop Laud; as he paſſed by his Grace's Lodgings, ſeeing the Archbiſhop at his Window, the Earl of Strafford bowing himſelf to the Ground, ſaid, My Lord, your Prayers and your Bleſſing. The Archbiſhop lifted up his Hand, and beſtowed both. There was not Time or Opportunity for his Grace to pronounce the Abſolution at large, nor to lay his Hands on the Head of the Penitent, as theſe Defendants did, but he came as near it as he could; he lifted up his Hands, and beſtowed both his Prayers and Benediction, and that without any particular Confeſſion or Repentance. And though his Grace was afterwards proceeded againſt, and, as they then called it, tried for High Treaſon, and all the Dirt thrown on him that Prynne and ſeveral others could rake up againſt him, and his whole Life ſearched into, and every particular Action narrowly traced, and even his Reputation, when he was a Scholar at the Univerſity, produced as Evidence againſt him; yet this Bleſſing, this Abſolution was never ſo much as mentioned, though they had often Opportunity ſo to do, when it was urged (as frequently it was) that his Grace and the Earl of Strafford were very intimate Friends and Acquaintance, and went hand in hand to deſtroy the Government both in Church and State: And yet this Action was publickly taken Notice of, as we find by the Hiſtorians of thoſe Times, Ruſhworth in the Earl of Strafford's Trial, fol. 782. Franklyn's Annals, 901.

Now, my Lord, Bleſſing and Abſolution in ſuch Circumſtances amount to the ſame. No Man bleſſes the Impenitent. The Form that the Archbiſhop then uſed is not ſet down, nor is it, with Submiſſion to your Lordſhip, any ways material. There are ſeveral Forms of Abſolution, which in Senſe and Virtue are the ſame, as Archbiſhop Sparrow has it in his Rationale on the Common-Prayer; where he ſhews us, that there are three ſeveral Forms of Abſolution in the Liturgy; as firſt, in the Morning and Evening Prayer, He pardoneth and abſolveth, &c. The ſecond is uſed in the Viſitation of the Sick, By his Authority committed to me, I abſolve thee, &c. The third is at the Sacrament, Almighty God, &c. have Mercy upon you, &c. pardon and forgive you, &c. The like Form is appointed to be uſed in Caſe of imminent Danger at Sea, and ſtiled an Abſolution. And, ſaith that Reverend and learned Prelate, " All theſe ſe- " veral Forms in Senſe and Virtue are the ſame; for it is all one as to the " Remiſſion of Sins in the Penitent, whether the Prieſt abſolve him after " this Form, Almighty God, who hath given me and all Prieſts Power to " pronounce Pardon to the Penitent; he pardons you—Or thus, By Virtue of a " Commiſſion granted to me from God, I abſolve you—Or laſtly, God pardon " you."

I muſt now, my Lord, in my Way, crave leave to obſerve, that Criminals, be their Offences never ſo heinous, though they do not confeſs them, or ſhew any Repentance for them, yet they are not kept from the public Service of the Church; nor are they denied or refuſed to be admitted to the bleſſed Sacrament, where they have the Benefit of this third Abſolution, and that in public. What Reaſon then can there be to deny them this Abſolution, for the giving which theſe Gentlemen ſtand now indicted, which hath not, I believe, been at any Time denied to any Malefactors, either in this or any other Part of the whole Chriſtian World? The Emperor of Germany, in his Manifeſto againſt thoſe Perſons that killed his Officers and Miniſters at Prague, as a great Aggravation of their Offence ſays, they did it without giving them a Moment of Time to repent, or make Confeſſion, or receive the Sacrament, which is never denied to the worſt Offenders, 1 Ruſhworth 7.—Without giving them a Moment of Time to repent, or make Confeſſion, or receive the Sacrament---It is in the Diſjunctive, my Lord; and thereby Confeſſion and Repentance cannot be meant of that particular Fact for which they were then put to Death, for that was the Service of the Emperor their Maſter, and the Manifeſto ſtiles the Authors of their Deaths, barbarous, cruel, and inhuman Murderers. But I ſhall proceed to give your Lordſhip another Inſtance, where there hath been a public Abſolution to a Criminal condemned, and that even at the Place of Execution, without any ſpecial Repentance for the Crime for which he was about to ſuffer. And that was in the Caſe of Sir Thomas Armſtrong, who, by Judgment of this Court upon an Outlawry for High Treaſon, for conſpiring againſt the King's Life and Government, was executed at Tyburn in June 1684. In the Court he inſiſted on his Innocency, and ſo he did in a Speech which he likewiſe left with the Sheriff at the Place of Execution; yet, notwithſtanding that, the Reverend Divine that then aſſiſted to prepare him for another World, did in Effect the ſame with theſe Gentlemen that are now Defendants (which I humbly ſubmit to your Lordſhip's Conſideration): For, after a long recommendatory Prayer, he uſeth this Benediction; The Grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and the Love of God the Father, and the Fellowſhip of the Holy Ghoſt, be with us, and in a particular Manner with this thy Servant, now in the Minute of Death, and Day of Judgment. And then ſpeaking to Sir Thomas Armſtrong, ſays, Now, Sir, commend yourſelf to God by your Devotions, make yourſelf ready, and then let that be the laſt Thing you do. Sir Thomas Armſtrong ſays, Sir, I hope in God my Sins are pardoned, and I do pray for it heartily. I forgive the World all their Offences they have committed againſt me. Then the Doctor ſays, I pray God ſhew Mercy to you, as you expreſs Charity to them; and then immediately followed the Execution. I have dwelt the longer, my Lord, on this Particular, becauſe it muſt needs be of very great Authority, the Reverend Divine that then aſſiſted being (Dr. Tenniſon) now Archbiſhop of Canterbury. (See State Trials, Vol. III. p. 985.) And the Circumſtances of that Caſe are much the ſame with ours: In the Indictment the ſame Offence was laid as againſt Sir John Friend and Sir William Perkins, he ſuffered at the ſame Place, and that Reverend Divine was likewiſe with him in the Cart. There was alſo a Paper delivered by the Criminal to the Sheriff, declaring his Innocency; yet Abſolution was publickly given at the Time and Place of Execution. Not indeed in the ſame Words as theſe Defendants uſed, but in thoſe that are as effectual. I think it is apparent, that no particular Form of Words is requiſite to an Abſolution. Whether we think the Power of the Church authoritative, or only declarative, whatſoever is an Execution of that Power that is given by our Saviour in St. John, and denotes the Prieſt's abſolving, or the Prieſt's declaring that God doth abſolve them, or the Prieſt's recommending them to God for Mercy or a Pardon for their Sins, That, with Submiſſion to your Lordſhip, is as much an Abſolution, as when the Prieſt doth in his own Perſon abſolve them. So it is in our Morning and Evening Service, and in the Communion, and the Service at Sea, as I have before mentioned; and yet the Rubrick ſtiles them Abſolutions. The whole Chriſtian Church, for the firſt ten Ages, uſed that Form of Recommending, and no other; and the Greek Church doth ſtill retain the ſame. St. Cyprian De Lapſis, fol. 136. the Oxford Edition, on the Words, Pro vobis Deum rogare peſſimus, the Learned Oxford Annotators ſay thus—And I may well ſtile them the Learned Annotators, ſince that great Maſter and Judge of all Learning, the preſent Biſhop of Worceſter (Dr. Stillingfleet), in his Vindication of the Trinity, fol. 155. 164. ſtiles them ſo. Their Annotations are in theſe Words, Quantumvis nunc temporis formula judiciaria et poteſtativa (Ego te abſolvo) quaſi tradita à Chriſto per Apoſtolos feratur, ex adverſo compertiſſimum habetur per decem priora ſecula in uſu minime receptam, imo nec adhuc in Eccleſia Orientali invaluiſſe. And that Abſolutions, Ordinations, and Conſecrations were in a deprecatory Form, plainly appears from Morinus, l. 8. De adminiſtratione pœnitentiæ, c. 12. ſect. 7. fol. 397. Ipſe Domine remitte, dimitte, condona peccata hujus N. &c. And this, he ſays, was the common and vulgar Abſolution in the Greek Church. So Theodorus, who wrote his Penitentials towards the latter End of the ſixth Century, (it was publiſhed per Jacobum Pettit, in Quarto, Anno 1677, at Paris) in the firſt Book, and the firſt Chapter, page 26, is this Abſolution, Deus omnipotens ſit adjutor et protector tuus, et præſtet indulgentiam de peccatis tuis; and many others of the like Nature are ſparſim through both the Volumes. In the Roman Pontifical there is this Abſolution, Miſereatur veſtrum, omnipotens Deus, et dimiſſis peccatis veſtris perducat vos ad vitam æternam. And likewiſe in the Ordo Romanus I before cited, fol. 61. is this, which is ſtiled Abſolutio ſingularis: Frater N. abſolutionem et remiſſionem peccatorum tuorum, per invocationem ſacrati nominis Dei, et per miniſterium noſtrum, percipere merearis hic et in æternum. And in the ſame Page are ſeveral other Abſolutions plural and ſingular, penned after the ſame Manner, in ſuch a deprecatory Form, and all ſtiled Abſolutions. And in none of theſe Abſolutions do I ſee any Enumeration of particular Offences, nor have I found in any of theſe Penitentials, that Malefactors are excluded from this Abſolution. Mr. Newland, who was about two or three Years ſince condemned and executed for the Murder of Mr. Thomas, did poſitively deny that he was guilty of that Fact, or of aiding, aſſiſting, or abetting thereunto. Yet Mr. Stevens not only gave him the Sacrament, and that three Times, with other Company; but likewiſe gave him Abſolution, as Mr. Stevens himſelf hath ſince in Print publiſhed to the World. And what is lawful and juſtifiable at Newgate before three or four Perſons, cannot become a Crime at Tyburn, though it be done in the Preſence of five hundred People; for the Place or Number of People cannot alter the Nature of the Fact, and make an innocent Action an horrid Crime. I am credibly informed, that in the Caſe of Anderton the Printer, who was executed for High Treaſon about four or five Years ſince, there was the ſame Form of Prayer uſed for him by the Divine that then aſſiſted, (State Trials, Vol. VIII. p. 71.) and that at this very Place of Execution. In the Caſe of Mr. Aſhton, who was likewiſe executed for High Treaſon, though he expreſſed no Sorrow for his Crime, and left a Paper behind him juſtifying the Fact for which he died, (Vol. VIII. p. 482.) yet the ſame Form of Prayer, the very ſame Abſolution, and at the ſame Place of Execution, with all the Circumſtances of the preſent Caſe, were uſed and performed for him; and inſtead of any Reprimand for ſo doing, the Sheriff of Middleſex ſaid thus to the Abſolvers, as I had it from one that was then preſent, and ſet it down in Writing; Gentlemen, I thank you for performing the laſt Offices ſo decently. And, my Lord, my Clients do inſiſt on it, that on theſe Precedents and this Encouragement, they were induced to act as they did at the Execution of Sir John Friend and Sir William Perkins. I have, my Lord, looked into the Treatiſes of ſome Divines upon this Occaſion; and though I find a mighty Stir about Auricular Confeſſion, whether the Church doth require that or no, yet I cannot perceive that it is by any inſiſted on, that there muſt be in any Caſe a public Confeſſion or Repentance, no, not even in thoſe Caſes where public Penance is enjoined, unleſs in ſome few, where the Eccleſiaſtical Court hath made it Part of the Penance. Mr. Prynne, in his Canterbury's Doom, fol. 192, 3. tells us, that one Mr. Adams preached at St. Mary's Church in Cambridge, Anno Domini 1637, and maintained ſpecial Confeſſion to the Prieſt to be neceſſary; for which being ſummoned before the Vice-Chancellor, he and ſeveral other Doctors ordered Mr. Adams to make a Recantation of that Doctrine, and declare it was only requiſite in thoſe Caſes where People could not quiet their own Conſciences; and likewiſe to declare, that it is againſt true Chriſtian Liberty, that a Man ſhould be bound to the enumerating of his Sins, as hath been uſed heretofore in the Times of Ignorance and Popery. There were indeed ſome Doctors that did oppoſe this Recantation, and juſtified Mr. Adams, inſiſting it was needful to make ſuch Confeſſion to the Prieſt; but none pretended it was in any Caſe requiſite to be made to the People. But, as I ſaid before, the Vice-Chancellor, and the major Part of the Doctors, ordered the aforeſaid Recantation, and well they might; for it is verbatim taken out of the ſecond Homily of Repentance, which Book of Homilies was compoſed by many eminent Prelates of our Church, and the Reading of it enjoined by the Rubrick, which is Part of the Act of Uniformity. And that Homily doth further ſay, that it is moſt evident and plain that Auricular Confeſſion hath not its Warrant from God's Word; and it cites St. Auſtin, who ſays, What have I to do with Men, as though they were able to heal my Diſeaſes? And if a Penitent be not compelled by the Laws of God or Holy Church to make a particular Confeſſion of his Sins to the Prieſt, who gives that Abſolution, much leſs is he any ways obliged to ſatisfy the Curioſity of the People, by enumerating of his Offences, or publickly declaring a Repentance for his Sins. Nor do they any where diſtinguiſh the Caſe of condemned Criminals from others: But the Rules concerning it are general, Et generaliter dictum generaliter intelligendum eſt. Whatever I find ſpoken concerning Abſolution is expreſſed indefinitely, which falls under another Maxim, Indefinitum æquipollet univerſali. And, my Lord, one Reaſon why I take it to be lawful to pronounce Abſolution to condemned Malefactors, is, that be their Crimes never ſo great, the Sword of Juſtice doth not ſtrike deeper than the Grave, and there is ſtill Room for a Deus miſereatur animæ ejus, a Lord have Mercy on his Soul.

Thus I have, with all Humility, ſubmitted to your Lordſhip's Conſideration what I have to ſay, why the Fact, of which theſe Gentlemen ſtand accuſed, ſhould in itſelf be no Offence. Neither can it be made a Crime, with Submiſſion to your Lordſhip, by any ill Intention that can be ſuggeſted to be adherent to it: For the Actions of Men ſhew their Hearts; and if their Works are not evil, you cannot from them in foro humano prove their Minds corrupt. Omitting the Reaſon given by my Lord Chief Juſtice North, on the Reverſal of the Judgment in the Caſe of Barnardiſton and Soame, (State Trials, Vol. VII. p. 441, 442, &c.) I ſhall trouble your Lordſhip but with two Caſes, and the Reaſons of them, to prove the Truth of this Aſſertion. The one is Elliot's Caſe, in the laſt Impreſſion of Croke's Charles, fol. 608. where my Lord Chief Juſtice Vaughan ſays, it is clear and undoubted Law, that whatſoever is in itſelf lawful cannot have an unlawful Intent annexed to it; for then the moſt innocent Act of a Man's Life would be liable to ſevere Cenſures. And he inſtances in this, that a Man might then be indicted for High Treaſon, for drinking Water with a Deſign to leſſen and deſtroy the Cuſtoms and Revenue, thereby intending to dethrone the King. The other Caſe that I would mention is in Dyer, f. 296. pl. 19. in theſe Words: "A "Subject of this Realm, being a Merchant of London, departed out of "this Realm without Licence of the Queen, only to the Intent that he "might live there free from the Laws of this Realm, and out of his due "Obedience to the Queen, and not upon any Account of Merchandizing; Whether ſuch a Departure were any Offence or Contempt to the "Queen, or not? And by the Opinion of almoſt all the Juſtices, ſuch "a Departure, before an expreſs Prohibition or Reſtraint by Proclamation, or Writ of Ne exeat regnum awarded by the King or Prince, is "not any Offence or Contempt; for it is a Thing indifferent to depart "the Realm, and the Purpoſe and Cauſe, which is ſecret in the Heart, "is not examinable." That is the Reaſon given in the Book: And Jenkins, a Man much for Prerogative, in his ſecond Century, cap. 70. fol. 88. agrees this Caſe to be Law; and ſays, that the Common Law doth not allow an Intent to be iſſuable or triable, and gives this Reaſon for it, Cor hominis eſt inſcrutabile. Now, my Lord, thoſe that will not allow Abſolution to be a very good Act, muſt grant that it is at leaſt indifferent. And then the Cauſe, Purpoſe, End or Intent of it being ſecret in the Heart, is not examinable, and therefore cannot be juſtly ſaid to be done for raiſing a Rebellion, or cauſing a Diſturbance in the Kingdom. And I do not know that in any Caſe a Man is puniſhable for an ill Intent, except in one Species of Treaſon, the Compaſſing the King's Death; and in that Caſe the Intention muſt be proved by ſome Overt-Act directly tending to the Fact deſigned.

2. But I come now to the ſecond Point, That if this ſhall be deemed an Offence, yet it is not enquirable nor puniſhable in this Court. I muſt humbly ſubmit it to your Lordſhip's Judgment, whether the Power of Abſolution, which is given to the Apoſtles and their Succeſſors by the Author and Eſtabliſher of all lawful Power, both Eccleſiaſtical and Civil, in theſe Words, in the twentieth Chapter of St. John, v. 23. Whoſe-ſoever Sins ye remit, they are remitted; and whoſe-ſoever Sins ye retain, they are retained, be not an Authority far above all ſublunary Juriſdictions; and theſe Gentlemen, the Succeſſors of the Apoſtles, not to be called to an Account for what they did in the Execution of that Authority, but by Him alone who delegated that Power to them. But ſuppoſing it ſhould be examinable here on Earth, with Submiſſion to your Lordſhip, it is only in that Court, by thoſe Perſons, or that Sort of Men, who conveyed to theſe Gentlemen that Power given by our Saviour. And this I ſhall endeavour to prove, Firſt, From the Nature of the Thing itſelf. Their Commiſſion for it is their Ordination, which Laymen cannot give. Nor is it to be tried by the Common Law; for Profeſſion in Religion, or infra ſacros ordines, is only triable by the Ordinary, Co. Lit. 132. b. 2 Inſt. 492.

That very learned Prelate, the preſent Biſhop of Worceſter, in his Charge to his Clergy, fol. 43. tells us out of Cajetan, Officium curæ animarum eſt præcipuum ac ſpiritualiſſimum Dei donum. And the Biſhop is ſubſtituted by our Saviour to give the Ordination, which he doth in theſe Words, Receive the Holy Ghoſt now committed unto thee by the Impoſition of our Hands. Whoſe Sins thou doſt forgive, they are forgiven; and whoſe Sins thou doſt retain, they are retained. Now, methinks, a Man muſt naturally infer from hence, that ſince this Authority is derived from our Saviour by the Biſhops; if any Perſons on Earth can viſit and reform the Errors or Abuſes in the Execution of this Power, it muſt be thoſe who are intruſted to give the Ordination: And of Things of this Nature their Courts have uſually had the Conuſance Nay, the Privileges of the Clergy in old Times went much further; for our pious and devout Anceſtors, following the Directions of the Son of Sirach, Eccleſiaſticus vii. 29, 31. Fear the Lord, and reverence his Prieſts, thought they could not pay ſufficient Reſpect and Honour to the Clergy, unleſs they exempted them from all Temporal Juriſdiction. So that even in Temporal Offences, and thoſe of almoſt the higheſt Nature, Murder, and Felony of courſe, and even in Sacrilege, if the Ordinary would demand the Priſoner for his Clerk, he was immediately taken from the Temporal Court, and ſubjected to the Ordinary's Juriſdiction, Stanford's Pleas of the Crown, 123. and 3d Inſtitut. 114. And Horn, in his Mirror of Juſtice, c. 3. ſect. 4. aſſerts, that if, in a Temporal Court, a Clerk accuſed of any Caſe criminal or mortal, pleads that he is a Clerk, the Judge hath no farther Conuſance of the Cauſe; for the Church is ſo enfranchiſed, that no Lay Judge can have Juriſdiction over a Clerk. And the Abridgment of the Book of Aſſizes, Tit. Coronæ, fol. 74. ſays, that if a Clerk will not pray the Benefit of his Clergy, yet if the Judge knows him to be ſo, he will not give Judgment of Death againſt him, as againſt a Layman. And theſe Privileges would have remained to this Day, if Acts of Parliament had not altered them. And if the Clergy were exempted from the Temporal Juriſdiction for Offences of ſo high a Nature, if the Argument à majori ad minus holds good, they must certainly have been exempted from being punished in Temporal Courts for all their lesser Crimes; and must still be so, where no Statute Law interposes, and that will lie on the other Side to shew.

And so far of late Years have the Clergy been thought and esteemed to be exempt from the Secular Power, that on the Treaty of the Spanish Match, it was agreed, that the Infanta, who was then designed to be our Queen, should have her Popish Clergy, and a Superior over them. And the 14th Article runs thus, "That if any Secular Judge shall apprehend "any Ecclesiastical Person for any Offence, he shall forthwith cause him "to be delivered to the aforesaid superior Ecclesiastick, who shall proceed "against him according to the Canon Law." These Articles were then sworn to by the King, Prince, and Privy-Council; and therefore we must believe it to be done on very good Advice. This is taken Notice of by Mr. Rushworth, in his first Volume, fol. 87. And although how far and in what Cases Spiritual Persons were formerly out of the Reach of the Secular Power, may admit of some Debate; yet nothing is more plain than that Spiritual Causes cannot be determined by the Civil Power. Judex secularis de rebus spiritualibus cognoscere non debet, says Fleta, l. 6. c. 37. f. 429. There is (as the incomparably learned Bishop of Worcester has it, in his Charge to his Clergy, fol. 35.) a Common Law Ecclesiastical, which, although in many Things it may be the same with the Canon Law that is read in Books, yet hath it not its Force from any Papal or Legatine Constitutions, but from the Acceptance and Practice of it in our Churches. And such a Law, my Lord, is coeval with the very Government itself. The learned Selden, in his Notes on the 17th Chapter of Fortescue, says, That in Time of Paganism the Druids were the Lawyers, and determined Controversies; the same Persons were their Priests and Judges. And Sir Henry Spelman, in his Discourse of Law-Terms, tells us, that in the Infancy of Christianity the Bishops and Clergymen did hear and determine all Causes amongst the Christians. And how those Matters were settled, when Christianity came to be established amongst us, Sir Thomas Smith will acquaint your Lordship, in his Treatise De Republica et Administratione Anglorum; a Book I have often heard cited in this Court, not only at the Bar, but by very learned Judges on the Bench. In his third Book, the 11th Chapter, are these Words: In quatuor potissimum caujarum generibus Archiepiscopi Episcopique peculiarem jurisdictionem sortiuntur, in testamentis et legatis, in decimis et mortuariis, in nuptiis, adulterio aut fornicatione, et in iis demum omnibus quæ ad ordinem & decus Ecclesiasticum conservandum et religionem constabiliendam pertinent; nam majores nostri rempublicam primo ordinarunt, postea fidei Christianæ nomen dederunt, et politiam sic constitutam, cum ea quam Apostoli, doctores theologique religionem invexerunt, semper retinuerunt; quicquid ad conscientiæ forum pertinebat, illis utpote peritioribus, et ob vitæ sanctimoniam morumque probitatem laudatissimis, quibusque confidebant, maxime delegabant. I shall not take up your Lordship's Time to prove, out of Magna Charta, and other old Laws, that the Clergy have Rights, Liberties, Privileges and Immunities; but taking that for granted, shall proceed to examine, whether this Case doth any way, and how, concern their Rights and Privileges. It cannot be denied, but that to be exempt from the ordinary and common Jurisdiction is an Immunity, and to have Conusance of Causes is a Liberty and Privilege: But the Question still is, if the Clergy are in Cases of this Nature exempt from the common Jurisdiction of the King's Temporal Courts, and the Ecclesiastical Judges have Conusance of the Offence (if an Offence it be) of which these Gentlemen stand accused? My Lord Coke, in his 5th Report, in the Cause of the King's Ecclesiastical Law, fol. 9. says, "As in Temporal Causes the King, by the Mouth of "his Judges of Justice, doth judge and determine the same by the Tem-"poral Laws of England; so in Causes Ecclesiastical and Spiritual, as "namely, Blasphemy, Apostacy from Christianity, Schisms, Ordering, "that is, (Ordination), Admissions, Institutions of Clerks, Celebration of "Divine Service, and others, the Conusance whereof belongs not to the "Common Law of England, the same are to be determined and decided "by Ecclesiastical Judges, according to the King's Ecclesiastical "Laws of this Realm." In the Case of Holt and Dighton, in the twelfth of King James the First, (it is reported 1 Rolle's Rep. 410.) who were brought up into this Court by Habeas Corpus, the Return whereof was, that they were committed by the High Commission Court, and the Cause of their Commitment was, that they were demanded by the High Commission Court if they would conform themselves to the Custom of the Church of England, and receive the Sacrament kneeling; and for that they would not give a direct Answer to it, they were committed; and though it was moved by Serjeant Harvey to have them discharged, yet Coke and Doderidge said, that the High Commission Court had Jurisdiction of Schisms and Heresies, and in that Case they were accused of a Schism, and therefore they had Jurisdiction of the Cause; and so the Court remanded them.

Now, my Lord, within all and every one of these Descriptions of Spiritual Causes comes this that is now before your Lordship; for, according to that of Sir Thomas Smith, this concerns Orders or Ordination, for it was by Virtue of their Ordination that they did it. It relates to the Decorum of the Church, and concerns the Establishment of Religion; for the Indictment says, it was done to the Scandal of the Protestant Religion now by Law established. And that it is Matter of Conscience, is in itself apparent. The Case comes likewise within my Lord Coke's Description of Spiritual Causes; for it concerns Ordering and the Celebration of Divine Service; for the Question is, Whether they performed it as they ought to do? And the Indictment itself shews it; which not only stiles the Defendants Clerks, but says they did it ut Presbyteri Ecclesiæ Anglicanæ; which intimates it was done in celebrating Divine Service. And if kneeling at the Sacrament be a Matter of Ecclesiastical Conusance, and out of the Reach of the Temporal Courts; though the Rubrick is much more plain and express in that than in our Case; yet if that Nonconformity be called a Schism, it is only examinable in the Spiritual Courts, whether ours be so or no. And the rather, my Lord, shall the Bishop's Court, or the Bishop himself, judge this Matter, for that, by the Common Law Ecclesiastical, the Bishop is appointed the Visitor of all that enter into Holy Orders, and he is to see if they live and act according to their Ordination, and to punish them that do amiss. And Absolution is one of the great Ends of Ordination; and for this Purpose doth the Bishop make his frequent Visitations. Now, my Lord, where the Law doth appoint a particular Visitor, he alone is to look to that Charge, and no one else to interfere: And that is the Reason why a Mandamus did not formerly go out of this Court to restore a Monk or Friar, nor at this Time for a Fellow of a College, a Proctor of Doctors-Commons, or the like. And, I think, on that Point the Cause of Exeter College was adjudged against Dr. Berry, in the House of Lords. To this I must crave Leave to add, that where the Ecclesiastical Court hath Conusance of any Cause, all other Things that are incident or relating to it are likewise within their Jurisdiction: Cognitio principalis trahit ad se accessorium. And the Books are so full of Instances thereof, that I need not mention any. And if any inferior Officer transgresses in acting or doing that which belongs to Ecclesiastical Conusance, the Archbishops and Bishops are to punish it, and the Temporal Judge is not to interfere. Exactions and Extortions look more like Temporal Offences, than what these Defendants stand now convicted of; for those in their own Nature tend to stir up the People to Sedition and Rebellion; yet these Offences, when committed by Spiritual Men or in Ecclesiastical Affairs, by the Common Law our Courts could not meddle with them. Mr. Prynne, in his Animadversions on my Lord Coke's fourth Institutes, fol. 233. cites this Record out of the Petitions in Parliament, Anno 18 E. I. Homines de London' conqueruntur de officialibus et ministris Ecclesiæ de multimodis vexationibus et exactionibus nimis onerosi, per quas plus extorquent de populo quam omnes curiæ laicales; et petunt quod Rex opponat remedium festinanter, ne destruatur populus in occulto. The Beginning of the King's Answer is somewhat doubtfully penned. Mr. Prynne gives it in a distinguishing Character: Si curia Regis possit emendari, faciat. But the rest of the Answer is direct; Cancellarius emendet in temporalibus, Archiepiscopus faciat in spiritualibus. But these Oppressions and Extortions, it seems, continued; and some Attempts there were to punish them by Indictments at Common Law; but such Indictments were thought illegal: For in the Close Roll of * 16 E. III. par. 2. mem. 12. dorso, I find a special Supersedeas processibus omnibus & singulis coram justiciariis nostris inchoatis seu factis contra viros Ecclesiasticos, cujuscunque conditionis aut status fuerint, super extorsionibus et excessibus per ipsos in nostri ac jurium coronæ nostræ prejudicium in exercitio jurisdictionis Ecclesiasticæ factis: And that there should be no more new Indictments against them before the next Parliament. And in the Close Roll 17 E. III. par. 1. m. 24. dorso, is the like Writ to the Justices of Oyer and Terminer for the County of Hereford, in which there is a Supersedeas to stay the Proceedings at Common Law against some particular Persons for those Offences. And in the Close Roll of 18 E. III. m. 14. dorso, (Sir William Dugdale is mistaken in the Year, when he calls it the 17th) is the Summons to Parliament, the next Parliament after the aforesaid Writs; and the Summons runs thus: Quia pro quibusdam arduis et urgentibus negotiis, honorem Dei, et decus et defensionem ecclesiæ Anglicanæ, et salubre regimen populi et regni nostri Angliæ summe contingentibus, ordinavimus parliamentum nostrum, &c. At which Parliament there was an Act made, which is in the printed Statutes 18 E. III. c. 6. in these Words: "Whereas Commissions be newly made to divers Justices to make Inqui-"ry upon Judges of Holy Church, Whether they made just Process or "excessive in Causes Testamentary, and other, which notoriously "pertaineth to the Conusance of Holy Church; the said Justices "have inquired, and caused to be indicted Judges of Holy Church, "in blemishing the Franchise of Holy Church, that such Commis-"sions be repealed, and from henceforth defended." And so the Officers of the Ecclesiastical Courts went on with their Oppressions and Extortions, and the Temporal Courts could not lay hold of them for those Offences, as appears by several Petitions and Answers in the Parliament Rolls, 21 E. III. n. 51. 1 H. V. n. 23. till the Statute, 21 H. VIII. c. 5. brought them within the Conusance of the Courts of Common Law. And if the Archbishops and Bishops can alone, (the Statute being out of the Case) exclusive of all Secular Power, look after and punish the Irregularities of their Commissaries, though they tended to the Prejudice of the King and his Royal Prerogative, their Power must be full as great over all Ecclesiasticks, and in an eminent Manner over the Clergy, in all Matters relating to their Function, and especially in all Things which concern the Discipline of the Church, of which the Bishops are Judges, as well as of the Doctrine. Bracton, in his fifth Book, De Exceptionibus, c. 2. fol. 401. a. treating concerning the Jurisdiction of Courts, hath this Expression: Clericus in nullo conveniendus est coram judice seculari, quod pertineat ad forum Ecclesiasticum, sicut in causis spiritualibus, vel spiritualitati annexis, ut si pro peccato vel transgressione fuerit pœnitentia injungenda, & quo casu Judex Ecclesiasticus habet cognitionem; quia non pertineat ad Regem injungere pœnitentias, nec ad judicem secularem, nec etiam ad eos pertinet cognoscere de iis;

* Rot. Claus. 16 Ed. And there is a Space in the Roll, supposed to be left for entering of other Writs of the like Nature, that were then issued forth.

ſunt quæ ſpiritualibus annexa. And if the Temporal Courts cannot hold Plea de pœnitentia injungenda, certainly they cannot puniſh pro pœnitentia non declarata. Beſides, I think it cannot be denied, that Abſolution is Spiritual, vel ſaltem ſpiritualitati annexa. More Inſtances I could produce, if I thought it neceſſary, to prove that where the Eccleſiaſtical Court hath Conuſance of the Celebration of Divine Service or other Spiritual Matters, it muſt hold Plea of what is incident or belonging to it; and therefore of the Mind, Intention, and Deſign with which any Spiritual Office is performed, if ſuch Mind can be fathomed, and Intention puniſhed. And I preſume, my Lord, there will be no Occaſion to prove that all the Rights, Liberties, Privileges and Immunities, that the Clergy lawfully enjoyed in the Time of Popery, do ſtill belong to the preſent Church of England, unleſs they are taken away or altered by Act of Parliament; for though the Errors were corrected, and Abuſes reformed in Matters of Doctrine and of foreign Juriſdiction, yet the legal Rights of the Church, and Power of the Clergy, were not ſhaken or invaded by the Reformation.

3. And now, my Lord, I come to the third and laſt Point I propoſe to ſpeak to; and that is, ſuppoſing what theſe Gentlemen ſtand accuſed of is an Offence, and that this Court hath Conuſance of it; yet, with Submiſſion to your Lordſhip, there is no Judgment to be given againſt us on this Indictment. I believe the King's Counſel cannot ſhew me any Rule at Common Law concerning Abſolution. So that, if we are guilty of any Offence, it is for not obſerving the Rubrick. If we have acted according to the Letter and Intent of that, no Indictment will lie againſt us for the Fact we are now accuſed of: And if we have deviated from the Rubrick, then the Indictment ought to have been framed on the Act of Uniformity. It is a Rule laid down in our Books, That where a Statute makes that an Offence which was not ſo before, an Indictment for that Offence muſt conclude contra formam ſtatuti. So is 1 Saunders 249. 2 Rolle's Abr. 82. 1 Cooke 449. and Jones 379. And I could inſtance in many Precedents that are drawn accordingly. I ſhall mention ſome few on this very Act of Parliament: They are all in the ſame Term, Mich. 15 & 16 Q. El. in this Court, and againſt the ſame Perſon, Robert Johnſon, of St. Clements Danes, Clerk. One of the Indictments is for ſpeaking againſt the Book of Common-Prayer, contra formam Statuti: Another againſt him, for omitting the Litany, Epiſtle and Goſpel, in ſaying the Divine Service: Another againſt him, for chriſtening a Child, and not ſigning him with the Sign of the Croſs: Another againſt him, for marrying a Couple without a Wedding-Ring: Another againſt the ſame Perſon, for ſaying Morning and Evening Service without a Surplice. And though the Preamble and Inducement to every one of theſe Indictments make an heavy Complaint againſt the Perſon that is ſo indicted, as if he intended to deſtroy the Proteſtant Religion by Law eſtabliſhed, and overthrow the Government, yet they all conclude contra formam ſtatuti. Now, my Lord, according to the Rule and Precedents I have cited, this Indictment that is now before your Lordſhip ſhould have ſet forth, that the Defendants did not move Sir John Friend and Sir William Perkins to a ſpecial Confeſſion of their Sins, but without it gave them Abſolution, contra formam ſtatuti. But ſuppoſing, my Lord, it ſhould be anſwered, that the Indictment is rather for the ill Intention of the Defendants, than for not obſerving the Rubrick; with humble Submiſſion to your Lordſhip, if ſuch an Indictment may be brought, yet this before your Lordſhip is not rightly framed, but is inſufficient and incertain in relation to that very Intent: For the Indictment ſays, Theſe Defendants conſpiring, intending, and deſigning the execrable, horrible, and deteſtable Treaſon, for which Sir John Friend and Sir William Perkins were then juſt going to be executed, to juſtify, or at leaſt to extenuate, diminiſh, and undervalue, &c. did abſolve them. Now, my Lord, non conſtat which they aimed at, Juſtifying or Undervaluing; and they cannot be found guilty of all: For though the Verdict be general as to this, yet it is according to the Indictment, which is in the Disjunctive, Et in disjunctivis ſufficit unum verificari. Therefore our Common Law doth always require Certainty, but eſpecially in Indictments; they ought to be certain to every Intent, that a certain Judgment may be given on them. Where a Man in pleading ſets forth his Title by a Conveyance, in which are the Words give, grant, releaſe, confirm, bargain, ſell, &c. he muſt ſhew which of them he makes Uſe of, and which he applies to his Purpoſe, or elſe his Plea is naught, 1 Ventr. 109. The Return of a Habeas Corpus ſets forth the Commitment, Et hæc eſt cauſa captionis ſeu detentionis, adjudged an ill Return, 1 Ventr. 324. In Trinity Term laſt, in this Court, there were ſeveral Indictments againſt Baker and others for exerciſing the Trade of a Rope-maker, exiſtens miſterium infra regnum Angliæ vel Walliæ; and there, altho' the Offence was the ſame whether it were a Trade in England or Wales, yet for the Incertainty which the Disjunctive made, the Indictment was quaſhed. And in the laſt Term (H. 9. W. III. B. R.) Sanky and another Quaker were brought up by Habeas Corpus, and the Return ſet forth a Commitment by two Juſtices, by Virtue of the Statute 27 H. VIII. c. 20. reciting a Certificate from the Commiſſary, that a Cauſe of Subtraction of Tythes or other Eccleſiaſtical Duty was depending in the Eccleſiaſtical Court, to which the Defendants refuſed to anſwer. In that Cauſe, though the Words of the Act of Parliament are ſtrictly purſued, which gives the ſame Remedy where the Fact is for other Eccleſiaſtical Dues as it does for Tythes, yet becauſe the Certificate on which the Return was grounded, did not ſet forth in particular for what the Suit was commenced in the Eccleſiaſtical Court, but only in the Disjunctive, for that Reaſon the Commitment was held inſufficient, and the Parties diſcharged. In Mr. Rowe's Caſe, Bendlow, fol. 60. in Replevin, the Plaintiff claims Common appurtenant to a Manor or a Meſſuage called Curſall Grange, by Preſcription, and they were at Iſſue on the Preſcription; but in Arreſt of taking the Inqueſt, it was ſhewn to the Court, that the Preſcription was uncertain for the Common, to wit, To the Manor or Meſſuage: where he ought to have claimed it to one only. And the Court adjudged them to re-plead, though the Place itſelf was expreſly and certainly named, and called Curſall Grange. In the ſame Book, fol. 177. pl. 39, an Ejectment de una acra terræ ſive prati adjudged ill; and ſo is the ſame Caſe reported, Dyer 264. pl. 39. and 1 And. 31. pl. 73. An Inquiſition on a diem clauſit extremum finds, that a Man was ſeized de uno meſſuagio ſive tenemento, was held void and inſufficient, Ley. 9. 13 Rep. 48. So an Ejectment de uno meſſuagio ſive tenemento is ill, even after a Verdict, 1 Rolle's Rep. 7. 334. 2 Rolle's Abr. 80. 3 Lennard 228. Ley. 43. 2 Cor. 621. 1 Siderfin 295. 1 Cro. 188. and many other Books. And in Noy's Reports, on the like Occaſion, it is ſaid, that a Writ in the Disjunctive is void. And in Popham, fol. 203. it is held, that an Ejectment de burgagio ſive tenemento is naught. Though indeed in Serjeant Hardreſſe's Reports, fol. 173. in the Caſe of Danvers verſus Willington, it was held, that an Ejectment pro uno meſſuagio ſive burgagio in Hay infra Muros was good enough; but the Reaſon given was, becauſe meſſuagium et burgagium ſignify the ſame Thing in a Borough. There was a Cauſe (Paſch. or Tr. 8. W. III.) about two Years ſince in this Court, it was an Indictment againſt Stoker, for that he fabricavit, ſeu fabricari cauſavit, a certain Bill. Exception was taken to it, becauſe it was in the Disjunctive, whereas it ought to have been poſitive and particular. And I think the Counſel for the Proſecutor could never get over that Exception; and, to the beſt of my Remembrance, there was but one Anſwer that was aimed at, and that was, that the Offence and Fact were the ſame; for he that cauſed it to be counterfeited, might be truly ſaid to counterfeit it: But I think that was not held a good Anſwer to that Exception. But in our Caſe that cannot be pretended: Juſtificare and Vilipendere are of a very different Signification. The very Indictment doth inſinuate as much; Juſtificare, vel ſaltem extenuare, diminuere, et vilipendere. The vel ſaltem doth ſhew, that the ſubſequent Words are not of ſo great Force as thoſe precedent. And indeed almoſt oppoſite they are; for he that juſtifies, denies that it was an Offence; whilſt he that diminiſhes or undervalues it, ſays truly, it was an Offence, but not ſo great as is pretended. And, my Lord, by reaſon of this Uncertainty, the Court muſt be in Doubt what Judgment to give; for it is evident, he that would juſtify Sir John Friend's Offence would deſerve a greater Puniſhment, than he that ſhould only leſſen it, and ſay it was not ſo great an Offence as Charnock's. Such an Invaſion is not ſo horrid and villainous, nor of ſo deep a Dye, as that barbarous Aſſaſſination that was intended. After ſuch a Manner, methinks, a Man might lawfully extenuate an Offence, when it would be highly criminal to maintain and juſtify the Fact. Beſides, Vilipendere may be taken to vilify, contemn, and condemn the Fact; and muſt that be thought a Crime? And the necnon afterwards, with thoſe other Aggravations that are there added, cannot mend the Matter: For all that Harangue of perſuading Perſons that Sir John Friend and Sir William Perkins were innocent, and the inciting the People to Treaſon and Rebellion, depend purely on the Juſtification or Extenuation of the Crime; for, if the Fact were juſtified, People would be ſooner induced to follow their Example, than if it were acknowledged to be an Offence, but the Heinouſneſs of it leſſened, diminiſhed, or vilified. And which of theſe the Defendants aimed at, was doubtful to him that drew the Indictment, doubtful to the Jury, and therefore I hope the Court will give no Judgment on it. Beſides this, my Lord, there is, I preſume, another Exception that may prove fatal to this Indictment; and that is, the inſufficient ſetting forth the Attainders of Sir John Friend and Sir William Perkins, in not ſhewing when, where, or before what Judges they were attainted, which, with Submiſſion to your Lordſhip, ought of Neceſſity to have been done. I acknowledge that a bare Inducement requires not much Certainty: But when it is ſuch a Matter, on which the whole doth ſo depend that you can make nothing without it, and when it is traverſable, then it is Subſtance, and muſt of Neceſſity be certainly expreſſed. For Inſtance, if J. S. be accuſed, either civilly or criminally, of an Offence, which is not ſo but with relation to a Fact of J. D. there the Fact of J. D. muſt be certainly expreſſed. As in Hetley 73. 3 Cro. 752. Plowman, a Conſtable, was indicted for ſuffering one, who was arreſted pro quadam felonia antea facta, to eſcape; and becauſe it was not ſhewn what Felony it was, and when done, he was diſcharged. So in this Caſe, if it be an Offence to abſolve Traitors, whether they are attainted or no, then the Treaſon ought to be ſpecially and particularly ſet forth, and when and where it was committed: But if it be not an Offence to abſolve Traitors, unleſs they are attainted, then that Attainder ought to be as fully and plainly expreſſed as the Time and Place where thoſe Traitors were executed, which in this Indictment is carefully ſet forth. And that this Indictment is faulty in this Particular, I ſhall endeavour to prove, as well by Precedents, as by the Opinions and Judgments in our Books of Law. But inaſmuch as this Indictment is primæ impreſſionis, I muſt treſpaſs on your Lordſhip's Patience, whilſt I refer to other Precedents in which Records are mentioned and recited, and from a Parity of Reaſon reduce them to the preſent Caſe. I ſhall begin with Precedents of Declarations. If an Action of Debt be brought againſt a Sheriff for the Eſcape of one in Execution, the Time and Place, and the Court in which the Judgment was obtained, is always mentioned, Hern. 74. Robinſon 311. Brown's Entries, 1 par. 18. 2 par. 15. Brownlow's Lat. Rediviv. 33. Thompſon 122. and Vidian 193, 197. and ſeveral other Books.

So againſt a Sheriff for not taking one in Execution that was in his Preſence, ſets forth the Judgment, and out of what Court, when and where the Execution iſſued. Upper Bench Precedents 79. Aſhton 57. 2 Brownlow 35, 36.

An Action for maliciouſly indicting the Plaintiff for Felony ſets forth, when, where, and before whom the Indictment was. Vidian 145. Hanſard 24, 25, and 53.

An Information againſt one for taking and carrying away the Goods of a Felo de ſe, ſets forth the Inquiſition, and before whom it was taken. Old Book of Entries, 225. b.

An Information for intruding into Lands which came to the King's Hands by Attainder, ſets forth the Record of Attainder, where, when, and before whom. Raſtall's Entries 387, 412. Plowden's Commentaries 547. Aſhton 181.

And ſo, my Lord, in all good Precedents, where Records of Attainder are mentioned, the Time, Place and Court are always ſet forth. So is Wiat's Attainder, Co. Entries 79. Raſtall 413. b. Plowden's Com. 449.

So is Littleton's Attainder, Co. Entries 422. b. And Truſſel's Attainder, Co. Entries 246. b. the Duke of Somerſet's Attainder, Co. Entries 481. and the Attainder of John Bary, in the ſame Book, fol. 699.

So if the Maſter of the Crown-Office takes an Inquiſition concerning the Eſcape of any Priſoners of this Court, according to the 39th of H. VI. c. 33. the Record on which they were committed is fully taken Notice of, as I have ſeen a Precedent, Mich. 4 & 5 El. rot. 7. In the Caſe of Mr. Braddon and Mr. Speake, the Indictment doth not only ſay that my Lord Eſſex did murder himſelf at ſuch a Time and Place, but adds further, as by Inquiſition taken at the Tower of London aforeſaid, upon View of the Body of the ſaid Arthur Earl of Eſſex, and now in this Court remaining of Record, does more plainly appear (State Trials, Vol. III. p. 855). So the Indictment againſt Taſborough and Price, for ſuborning Dugdale to retract his Evidence that he had given againſt the Popiſh Recuſants, &c. (Vol. II. p. 1017.) ſets forth the Record, where and before whom ſuch Convictions were. So in the Caſe of Thompſon, Pain and Farewel, for printing and publiſhing a ſcandalous Pamphlet relating to Sir Edmondbury Godfrey's Death (Vol. III. p. 505.) the Information doth not begin like this Indictment, Whereas Green, Bury, and Hill were attainted of Murder; but ſets forth, That it was in ſuch a Court, in ſuch a Year and Term, with the Indictment and Attainder at large, and where the Record is to be found.

I could inſtance in many more Precedents of the like Nature; but I fear I have tired your Lordſhip's Patience too much already, and therefore ſhall conclude with one that will lead me to the Opinions and Judgments in our Books of Law, which I hope will be of Uſe to fortify the Precedents I have cited to prove this Indictment vicious. It is in Keilway 193. An Inquiſition that finds the Attainder of one Bays: The Record is large, and therefore I ſhall not recite it, nor make any other Obſervations on it than what are in the very Report, which are in theſe Words: "Memo-"randum. This Inquiſition was drawn by good Advice, that is to ſay, "by the Council of King Henry the Seventh; yet the Inquiſition which "entitled the King to the Land, by reaſon of the Attainder of the ſaid "Bays, doth not make any Mention of the Indicters, nor of the Names of "the Juſtices of Peace who took the Indictment, but only the Day of "the Indictment taken, and the Day of his Attainder, without ex-"preſly mentioning what Kind of Felony, but pro quadam felonia, and "the Names of the Juſtices before whom he was attainted." Theſe are the Words of the Reporter: And, my Lord, that this Caſe is of general Concern, appears by the next Caſe in that Book, Keilway 194. An Indictment was found on the Eſcape of certain Perſons convict, without ſhewing before what Juſtices the Conviction was; and after the Matter was conſidered at the Bar and the Bench, the Indictment was held inſufficient: But ſays that Caſe, "The Names of the Juſtices of Peace be-"fore whom the original Indictment was taken is not material, nor the "ſpecifying of the Felony, prout patet ſupra in the Caſe of Bays; for "where the Court is inſtructed to whom to write to certify the Record, "all the Special Matter ſhall come in by the Certificate: And although "the Juſtices of Gaol-Delivery, or other Juſtices, before whom the Con-"viction or Attainder is, do not certify the Original, it is not material, "ſo that they certify the Body of the Record of the Attainder or Con-"viction." Theſe are the Words of that Book: And, my Lord, it muſt be on the ſame Reaſon, that where a Man pleads a Conviction of Recuſancy, he muſt ſhew before whom it was, Noy 89, 97. And ſo are the Precedents in Winche's Entries 522, 523, 524. 2 Brownl. 15. Hern. 503. So in an Action for maliciouſly indicting a Man for Treaſon, it is not ſufficient to ſay he did indict the Plaintiff; nay, if he adds coram ſuch Perſons, Juſtices of the Peace, and omits ad gaolam deliberand' aſſignat', it is ill, 2 Cro. 357. And in an Action for maliciouſly indicting a Man of Perjury, he muſt ſet forth the Indictment, and ſhew that it was preferred before one that had Conuſance of ſuch Matters. And that is not all; he muſt likewiſe ſhew, that the Cauſe in which he ſwore was coram judice, 3 Cro. 725. He that pleads a Preſentment in a Court Leet, muſt ſet forth the Day when the Court was holden, 2 Saunders 290. 1 Ventris 107. And therefore to plead that at quandam curiam he was amerced, is ill, Modern Rep. 75.

An Indictment of Maintenance in quodam placito coram Domino Rege pendente, not mentioning where the King's-Bench ſat, was held fatal in Arreſt of Judgment, 1 Ventr. 302.

An Indictment for a ſecond Offence, where the Puniſhment is greater than for the firſt, ought to recite the former Conviction, 1 Lennard 295. So it was done in Roger Booth's Caſe, Mo. 666. pl. 913. In 3 Keble 737, an Indictment for a ſecond Offence of Printing did ſet forth the firſt, but did not ſay where it was; therefore Twiſden held the Indictment naught. And if there be a Neceſſity of ſetting forth ſo preciſely the firſt Conviction, to make the ſecond Offence the greater, methinks, in Reaſon, it muſt as certainly be ſet forth, where it gives the very eſſe to the Offence. And if ſuch a general Way of referring to Records ſhould be allowed in Indictments, it would not only overthrow all the Precedents and other Authorities I have cited, but the Defendants muſt needs lie under ſeveral Inconveniencies. They would then be cut off from the Privilege of pleading Nul tiel Record, or traverſing it, as was done in Bays's Caſe before-mentioned: For, although ſuch a Traverſe might amount almoſt to the General Iſſue, yet comprehending Matter of Law, the Defendants may plead it ſpecially, Hobart 127. And if the Defendants plead the General Iſſue, how ſhall they know where to go to find out the Record, to ſee whether a true Copy be produced againſt them? And it cannot be a ſufficient Anſwer to ſay, that the Indictment ſets forth that debite et legitime they were convicted and attainted; it muſt be ſhewn after what Manner they were attainted, that the Court may judge whether it was legally done or no. In Patrick Harding's Caſe, in the firſt Year of this King and the late Queen (it is reported in 2 Ventr. 316.), the Indictment againſt him was for High Treaſon, and did ſet forth that he adhered to the King's Enemies. The Jury found, that he liſted and ſent Soldiers to the French King, then an Enemy to our King and Queen: But the Court held the Indictment too ſhort there, becauſe it mentioned hoſtibus et inimicis generally; whereas it ſhould have ſet forth who thoſe Enemies were, that the Court might take Notice whether they were Enemies, as the Law intended.

In the Caſe of Woodly and Bezly, 2 Cro. 291. Yelverton 213. 1 Brownlow 114. In Debt for Rent upon a Leaſe for Years, the Plaintiff derives his Title by the Grant of the Reverſion by way of Bargain and Sale in Fee from the firſt Leſſor, and declares, that by Indenture of ſuch a Date, one grants, bargains and ſells for Money to him the Reverſion in Fee, which Indenture was inrolled ſuch a Day ſecundum formam ſtatuti; and on nil debet pleaded, there was a Verdict for the Plaintiff: Yet Judgment was arreſted, becauſe the Plaintiff had not ſhewn in what Court the Indenture was inrolled; though it might have been, and undoubtedly it was alledged, that it was but a Conveyance to the Title, and an Inducement to the Action, and ſecundum formam ſtatuti ſhews it was debite et legitime. So in Ailen 19. King againſt Somerland. In Debt for Rent, the Plaintiff declares on a Leaſe for Years made by a Stranger, who bargained and ſold the Reverſion per indenturam debito modo inrotulat' in Curia Cancellaria. After a Verdict for the Plaintiff, on nil debet pleaded, it was moved in Arreſt of Judgment, that he had not alledged the Inrollment to be within ſix Months, nor ſecundum formam ſtatuti; and though it were ſaid to be debito modo, yet that would not mend the Matter, nor aid the Incertainty, and therefore Judgment was arreſted. So in the ſame Book and Folio, Colman againſt Painter. In an Action by the Leſſee againſt his Leſſor, on a Covenant for peaceable Enjoyment, he aſſigns for Breach a former Leaſe to J. S. The Defendant pleads, that the Leaſe to J. S. was with Condition of Re-entry for Non-payment of Rent, and that before the Leaſe made to the Plaintiff, the Rent was behind, and legitime demandat' ſecundum formam indenturæ, and upon Non-payment he re-entered, and made the Leaſe to the Plaintiff: And upon Demurrer it was reſolved, that the Demand was inſufficiently alledged; for, ſays the Book, he ought to ſet forth certainly, when and where it was made, that it might appear to the Court to be legal.

I ſhall trouble your Lordſhip but with one Caſe more to this Point; it is in 3 Lennard 72. A Quo Warranto was brought by the Queen againſt Sir John Conſtable, who claimed certain Wreck in the County of York. The Defendant pleaded, that Edward Duke of Buckingham was ſeized of ſuch a Manor, to which he had Wreck appendant, and that he was de alta proditione debito modo attinctus, and that found before the Eſchеator; and ſhewed further, that that Manor deſcended to Queen Mary, who granted the ſame to the Earl of Weſtmoreland, who granted the ſame to the Defendant: Upon which it was demurred; and Exception was taken to the Plea, becauſe the Attainder is not fully and certainly pleaded. It was argued by Plowden, Counſel for the Defendant, that the Attainder was certainly pleaded, ſcilicet, debito modo attinctus: For, ſays he, it is ſhewn that the Wreck is appendant to the Manor, and then if he hath the Manor, he hath the Wreck alſo: And if he had the Manor, it is not material to the Queen how he hath it; for the Queen doth not claim the ſame, but impeacheth the Defendant for uſing there ſuch a Liberty. But he there grants, that if the Heir of the Duke had demanded the Manor there againſt him, the Attainder ought to have been pleaded certainly. And if ſo much Certainty be required in pleading an Attainder that makes a Title to an Eſtate, that Attainder muſt needs be as fully, as clearly, and as certainly ſet forth; that is the Ground-work and Foundation of an Indictment for that which is called a very great Offence, which is not for abſolving two Perſons in the Pariſh of Paddington, nor for abſolving two impenitent Traitors, but for abſolving two Perſons attainted of High-Treaſon, who did not repent of that Treaſon of which they were attainted.

There are, my Lord, I think, ſome other Faults in the Indictment. It mentions, That Sir John Friend and Sir William Perkins were attainted for High-Treaſon, in compaſſing the King's Death, and adhering to his Enemies; which were two Treaſons in each of them, and conſequently four in all. Yet afterwards the Indictment ſays, That theſe Defendants intending to juſtify the horrid Treaſon aforeſaid (in the Singular Number). So in the Concluſion, that the Abſolution was given abſque aliqua pœnitentia pro alta proditione prædicta prius declarata, without ſhewing which Treaſon in particular was unrepented of; and each of them was not obliged to repent of all the Treaſons, for they were not all his own. And is like the Caſe this very Term in this Court, where a Reſcous was returned againſt two Perſons, that they had reſcued J. S. prædict', without ſhewing which, and there was J. S. ſenior, and J. S. junior before-mentioned; and for this Incertainty that Return was quaſhed. And it ſeems to me to bear ſome Reſemblance to the Caſe of Tindall and Cobbs, 3 Lennard, fol. 9, 10. In an Action of Waſte, the Declaration ſhews the Demiſe of the Manor of Wolverton and other Lands, and aſſigns the Waſte in quodam boſco vocat' Wolverton Wood, parcel' præmiſſor'; and it was held inſufficient, for that it could not be Parcel of the Manor and other Lands alſo.

I muſt likewiſe humbly ſubmit it to your Lordſhip, whether the Fact itſelf be ſufficiently ſet forth, et eos abſolvi pronuntiaverunt, pronounced them to be abſolved: Whether it does not refer to ſomewhat to be done hereafter, and ought not rather to have been, eos abſolutos pronuntiaverunt.

The Proclamation for Evidence before the Jury is ſworn, which ought to be after, and ſeveral other Informalities in the Indictment and Proceedings, I ſhould have ſpoken to; and have juſtified and maintained the Impoſition of Hands, from the Doctrine and Practice of our Church; and likewiſe have ſaid ſomewhat to the Matter that is ſpecially found, to prove that theſe Defendants are thereby acquitted of the whole: But theſe Things will (I doubt not) be much better done by ſuch other Counſel as your Lordſhip ſhall pleaſe to hear for the Defendants. I am ſenſible I have already been too tedious, for which I humbly beg Pardon of your Lordſhip, and pray your Judgment for the Defendants.

NUMBER X.

The CASE, with the PROCEEDINGS againſt Major JOHN BERNARDI, Mr. COUNTER, Mr. BLACKBURN, Mr. CASSELS, Mr. CHAMBERS, and Mr. MELDRUM, on Account of the Aſſaſſination-Plot, in King William's Reign.

Wrote by Major John Bernardi, in Newgate, after he had been there near thirty-three Years a Priſoner, (though in the Hiſtorical Part abridged) without any Allowance from the Government, and who could never be admitted to Bail, or take his Trial †.

MAJOR John Bernardi was the Son of Francis Bernardi, deſcended of an ancient Noble Family, Counts of the Holy Empire, &c. This Francis was ſent to England by the Serene Republick of Genoa, with Credentials from the Duke and Governors of that State, in the Character of Agent, and afterwards of that of Reſident, from 1651, untill after the happy Reſtoration of King Charles II. We find, that on Tueſday, Sept. 16, 1651, on a Report from the Speaker,

It was reſolved by the Parliament to receive Francis Bernardi, Agent from the Commonwealth of Genoa, according to the Rule for receiving Agents.

Henry Scobell, Cler' Parliament'.

And on the 22d of June, 1660, Signior Francis Bernardi was appointed Reſident from the ſaid Commonwealth to England, to congratulate his Majeſty on his happy Return to his Kingdoms. But about two Years afterwards the Republick ſent over another Perſon to ſucceed the ſaid Signior Francis Bernardi; and as he was born in England, at the Time when his Father Count Philip de Bernardi was here alſo in Embaſſy, and loving the Country as the Place of his Nativity, he lived and died in this Kingdom, having ſpent near thirty thouſand Pounds in Hoſpitality, and in indulging a particular Taſte in Gardening, being the moſt famous Gentleman in the Kingdom of his Time for fine Gardens. He lived ſome Time near Windſor, when firſt out of his Miniſtry; but removed afterwards into Worceſterſhire, to be more remote and unknown. Here his Son John began to entertain Thoughts of getting from under his Father's Diſcipline, who uſed him with great Severity; ſometimes confining him like a Criminal in a little dark Room for Trifles, allowing him only Bread and Small-Beer; and whilſt ſo confined, Nobody durſt relieve him, or let him out. Thus this John Bernardi was unhappily deſtined to Confinement in his Youth by an unkind Father, and in his Old Age to undergo the like rigid Fate by unprecedented Acts of Parliament, without ever being heard, or proved criminal by any Court in the Kingdom.

Accordingly John Bernardi eſcaped from his Father in the Year 1670, leaving him aſleep in his Bed; and going out of his Gate, he kneeled down on the Ground, proteſting and praying, that he might never return whilſt his Father lived. He began his Journey towards Coventry, and, though purſued, had the good Luck to eſcape, and got to Sir Clement Fiſher's Seat at Packington, near that City, whoſe Lady was the heroick Mrs. Jane Lane, who protected and conducted King Charles II. after the Battle of Worceſter, (ſo often mentioned in the Hiſtory of thoſe Times) and who was very intimate with young Bernardi's Father: But Sir Clement and his Lady were gone to London two Days before, whither young Bernardi followed them. On hearing his Caſe, they did not perſuade him to return; but recommended him by Letter to Captain Littleton Clent, a Relation of her Ladyſhip's, then in Garriſon at Portſmouth, and equipped him with Neceſſaries and Money for his Journey. On his Arrival at Portſmouth the Captain received him very obligingly, and entered him in his own Company, and taught him all the Duty and Exerciſe of a Soldier. This Life young Bernardi was very fond of, and paſſed through various Poſts (in Holland) in the Army; for he had ſeven Commiſſions in all, five of which were conferred on him by his Highneſs the Prince of Orange, the ſixth by the States-General and the Prince of Orange, and the ſeventh by King James II. before the Revolution. He attained the Rank of a Captain at twenty-ſeven Years of Age. At the Siege of Maeſtricht he loſt an Eye, and was ſhot through one of his Arms, the Bones of which were daſhed to Splinters; after wrapping his Arm in the Flap of his Coat, he crowded back to the Breach, and fell down to the Bottom amongſt the Dead, (the Ground being covered with them;) when a Soldier under his Command seeing him fall, jumped after him, took him up in his Arms, and ran to the Trenches with him, where Surgeons are always waiting on those Occasions; and thus saved his Ensign from bleeding to Death. The Prince of Orange hearing of it, immediately promoted Bernardi, and ordered him, with the other wounded Officers, to be conducted to Bois-le-duc: But Bernardi not being able to endure the jolting of the Carriage, was laid on the Ground, till his Servant went to get Men to carry him back to the Hospital. When he was pretty well recovered, he went with his Arm in a Sling to Utrecht: But not being able to do Duty for some Time in his Regiment, he made his Addresses to a Maiden Lady, well born and bred, but near twice as old as himself, he being then about twenty; but her Fortune being considerable for one in so low a Post, he married her in April 1677, and lived with her eleven Years. In 1687, when King James II. demanded the six Regiments he had lent the Dutch, and they refused to return them, about sixty Officers quitted that Service; amongst whom was Captain Bernardi, who thinking it his Duty to obey the Commands of his Prince, came to England. In 1688, when the Prince of Orange landed in England, and succeeding in his Enterprize, King James II. after many Difficulties and Dangers risqued by him, got privately away from Rochester over into France; when Major-General KIRK was sent by the Prince of Orange to all the Regiments then in England, with an Association to be signed by all the Officers, the Contents of which were to bind them under their Hands to stand by and defend the Prince against all Persons whatsoever, and all the Officers that refused to sign it, were ordered to quit their Commands. Captain Bernardi refused to sign such Association, and quitted his Employ, went to London, and sollicited for the Prince of Orange's Pass for himself and Family, being six in Number, to go out of the Kingdom, the only Favour he desired, which was granted him; those Persons that went without a Pass being in Danger of their Lives, or being plundered by the Mob. Captain Bernardi got safe to Calais, and found many English Gentlemen arrived there before him, some of whom were his Acquaintance, and in great Distress for want of Money to bear their Charges to Paris, having been stripped of all they had by the Tumults in England. Bernardi having got to the Value of above one hundred Pounds in Cloaths, Linen, Tent and Field-Equipage, pawned them all to a Broker for less than half their Value, to assist some of those Gentlemen; whereby he lost his Goods, not having an Opportunity of redeeming them in Time. Captain Bernardi arriving at St. Germain's, King James II. told him, that he was just going to Ireland, and had then about twenty-three hundred of his Subjects arrived at St. Germain's. The French King granted Orders for them to march to Brest, where the late Earl of Dover was ordered to meet and receive them: In the mean time King James went to Brest, where the French King had ordered a large Fleet, of about thirty-five Sail, to receive him and his Soldiers, and land them in Ireland; and in getting thither was the famous Battle with Admiral Herbert in Bantry-Bay. But King James's Affairs growing bad in Ireland, he sent Major Bernardi (made a Major in Ireland) to Scotland, to accompany the Earl of Seaforth, then going to raise Men for King James: But receiving the News of King James's being defeated at the Battle of the Boyne, the Earl of Seaforth dismissed his Forces, and sent them to their Places of Abode, without consulting his Uncle, his Officers, &c. who were greatly exasperated: Whereupon Major Bernardi desired to go to England, which Major-General Buchan approved of, and sent for the Laird of * Glencoe to come with forty of his Vassals to receive Bernardi at Invergary, and to conduct him to the Braes of Monteth, which was performed in the Night-time, for Fear of the Garrisons that lay in the Way.

* See Hiſtorical Account of Trials and Attainders, Vol. II. p. 282.

† As many People are unacquainted with the Reaſons why thoſe Perſons, ſuſpected of being concerned in the Aſſaſſination-Plot, lay ſo long in Newgate, without being either bailed, tried, or diſcharged; this Account, wrote by Major Bernardi, (one of thoſe taken up and confined) will explain the Cauſe of it.

Bernardi proceeded on his Journey from the Braes of Monteth, under the Conduct of a Guide appointed him by Colonel Graham, and arrived at Edinburgh in the Month of November 1691. The Rulers of that City having heard that some Gentlemen were come from the Highlands, ordered their Gates to be shut, and a general Search to be made for them. Bernardi's Landlord getting Notice of it, conducted him out of Town, but half an Hour before that Order was put in Execution; otherwise his Journey at that Time had terminated in the Tolbooth, or some other Prison in Edinburgh; but escaping that and other Dangers, he travelled on from thence to London, meeting with no more Difficulties at that Time, than those of a long Winter Journey. But Misfortunes may be compared with evil Habits, it being no easy Task to get out of either, when once unhappily fallen into the Road of them. And this proved to be Bernardi's Case; for, having finished his Affairs in London, by disposing of some Effects he had left with a Friend when he went out of England, and by selling his Scotch Horses, he purposed to go over into Flanders; and meeting with two Gentlemen of his Acquaintance ready to go out of Town, in order to make the same Voyage, he went with them to Colchester, where they were recommended to a Master of a Ship, who was in a short Time to carry over a Lady of great Quality to Ostend; but the Wind happening to be fixed in the East, the Lady ordered her Trunks to be put on Shipboard, and then went to a Gentleman's House about five Miles off, charging the Master to send for her as soon as the Wind came fair. Bernardi and his two Friends met with two other Gentlemen, who were Strangers to them, and also unknown in the Town, who were come thither to get a Passage over in the same Ship. They joined Company, and lodged all together for some Nights at Mr. Cook's, then Post-master in Colchester; but having Notice of some busy People's Inquisitiveness about them, Bernardi and his two Friends went to a Gentleman's House, about a Mile out of the Town, and the other two Gentlemen went to the Master of the Ship's House. The second Night after Bernardi and his two Friends went into the Country, Intimation was given to them, that Sir Isaac Rebow, a Justice of the Peace, had issued out his Warrant to apprehend them, and bring them before him; and the Wind coming fair the same Night, they went directly to the Master of the Ship's House, in order to go on board. The Master of the Ship told them, that he had sent a Messenger for the Lady two Hours before, and expected her in an Hour more; and sent one of his Men to conduct them on Ship-board, and said he would follow them, with the other two Gentlemen at his House, as soon as the Lady came. A Message came from the Lady, that she could not possibly come before the next Day in the Afternoon. Bernardi and his two Friends continued on Ship-board to avoid the Justice's Warrant. The next Day towards the Evening, came a Company of Train-Bands, with five hundred Mob, to the Quay, where the Ship lay dry, at Low Water, about two Miles from the Town. This Captain of the Train-Bands commanded his Men to go on board, and to bring all the Persons they found in the Ship to him. These Orders were obeyed; and Bernardi, and the two Gentlemen with him, were seized and carried directly to Colchester Gaol, where the other two Gentlemen and the Master of the Ship had before been made Prisoners. The Lady had set out in order to go on board, but being told what had happened, she returned back, and never appeared; upon which six Justices assembled to break open and search her Trunks, exposing even her foul Linen to the View of Hundreds of People; but their Worships could not discover who she was, neither had Bernardi or any of the other four Gentlemen the least Knowledge of her, but by Name and Title, which was the Countess of Errol; having never seen her. When the six wise Men had finished their Search of the Lady's Goods, they strictly examined and searched their five Prisoners separately, and charged them with having treasonable Papers and Pamphlets, though no such were found about them, neither had they any; but some such Things were found amongst the Lady's Goods. These Justices sent an Account of their Proceedings to the Earl of Nottingham, then Secretary of State, and thereby represented Major Bernardi and the other four Gentlemen to be Accomplices with the said Lady, and committed them to the County Gaol at Chelmsford; from hence they writ to their Friends, and got themselves removed by Habeas Corpus to London, and gave Bail before a Judge, to appear in the Court of King's-Bench the then next Term. Before the Term Two of the Five went off, either by Composition or Bilking their Bail; but Bernardi and his two Friends appeared, in Hopes and Expectation of being discharged by the Court: But the Attorney-General opposed their being discharged, having Instructions from the Secretary of State so to do, alledging that they were guilty of Treason. The Court ordered them into Custody of a Messenger, where they remained confined near seven Months. Bernardi having for many Years been well known to my Lord Romney, who was the other Principal Secretary of State, writ a Letter to his Lordship; and, by his Favour, they all three were admitted to Bail again upon the first Day of Michaelmas Term, to appear on the last Day of the same Term. They appeared accordingly; but the Attorney-General still went on with his Charge against them, and affirmed to the Court, that the treasonable Papers found in the Lady's Trunk, together with such other Evidence as would be produced in Essex, was sufficient to bring them to their Trial; and therefore he moved the Court to bind them over to Chelmsford Assizes, and they were bound over accordingly, twelve of their Friends giving five hundred Pounds Security each for their Appearance; and in order to their Defence, they applied themselves to four eminent Counsel in London, and gave them Breviates and large Fees to plead their Cause, and provided Coaches to carry them down, and to attend and bring them back again. The Day before the Assizes began, they went down with their Counsel, Sir Creswell Levinz, Sir Bartholomew Shower, Counsellor Dolben, and another whose Name the Author hath forgot. The six prosecuting Justices were got there before them, with their subpœna'd Witnesses, who were all heard by the Grand Jury the next Day, upon an Indictment preferred against them; but for want of sufficient Evidence to find the Bill, the Grand Jury rejected it, and gave in their Verdict Ignoramus; whereupon they were discharged in Court by Proclamation; and the six Justices galloped Home to Colchester in all Haste, as soon as they heard that the Grand Jury had thrown out the Bill of Indictment. This Prosecution, under close Confinement sometimes, and under Bail at other times, continued about a Year and a half, which put Major Bernardi to the Expence of some Hundreds of Pounds, and his two Fellow-Sufferers to as much.

Major Bernardi, soon after he was discharged, went over to Holland with the Earl of Nottingham's Pass, and returned again within the Time limited by the Pass, and appeared at the Secretary's Office as he was enjoined, that my Lord might know he had not exceeded the Time prescribed him to return in; and by so doing he obtained some Favours from his Lordship afterwards. Not long after his Return from Flanders, he judged it to suit best with his Circumstances at that Time to retire into the Country, to be out of Harm's Way, and less liable to Company and Expence; for his five hundred Miles Journey from the Highlands of Scotland to London, with the undeserved Imprisonment and Prosecution which he suffered by the officious Justices, had very much impaired his Substance. And although nothing less than his Life was aimed at by the Essex Justices, yet his Sufferings then were but Flea-Bites, in comparison to the unprecedented Hardships laid upon him soon after. He returned from a pleasant Country-House near Brentford, where he had resided about a Year and a half, and where he employed much of his Time, and some Expence, in improving and beautifying the Gardens there; but the Premises being made over to Doctor Ward, Prebend of Salisbury, in Part of his Lady's Portion, Bernardi was obliged to quit the House on that Account, and came to London at Christmas 1695: A fatal Remove from a quiet Country-Abode to a Sea of Troubles, which in great Measure is to be imputed to his Misfortune in meeting with one Captain Rookwood by Accident at a Tavern! Captain Rookwood was then lately come from France, and had been an Acquaintance of Bernardi's of about seven Years standing, though they had not seen each other for some Years then last past. Rookwood frankly told Bernardi, that he was quite tired out in foreign Service, that his Brother had a good Estate, and See Bishop Burnet's History of his Own Times, Vol. II. p. 88, 89. for an Account of this cruel Affair. See also a Quarto Pamphlet, intituled, Murder will out. The English Parliament voted this a barbarous Massacre.

Interest

Intereſt enough to obtain Leave for him to come Home; and that he was come over to that End, but kept himſelf a little private, until his Brother had gained him a Licence to appear; it being then made criminal by a Law, for any Subject to come from France without Leave from the Government. Within two Months or thereabouts after Bernardi's Arrival in Town, a horrid Conſpiracy to aſſaſſinate and murder his late Majeſty King William was diſcovered, and many Proclamations came forth, offering a thouſand Pounds Reward for ſecuring each Man inſerted in thoſe Proclamations. Several were taken up on the firſt, and more were apprehended daily upon the repeated Proclamations. Captain Rookwood came to Bernardi on a Saturday, ſoon after the horrid Plot broke out, and his Countenance and Behaviour ſeemed to diſcover him to be under ſome Diſturbance of Mind. Bernardi thereupon aſked him, if any Evil had happened to him? To which he anſwered, No; but ſaid, that if any body ſhould be ſo malicious as to give Information of his being come over at that Time, he ſhould certainly be taken up. But it ſeems his Name was in a Proclamation, which came out upon that very Day, to ſeize him as one of thoſe who were concerned in the ſaid Aſſaſſination-Plot, though Bernardi had not then heard any thing of the Matter, and Rookwood concealed it from him, intending, as appeared by his Behaviour afterwards, to ſpend that Evening with Bernardi; but Bernardi told him, that he was under a Promiſe and Engagement to ſup that Night at a Tavern on Tower-Hill. Captain Rookwood thereupon earneſtly replied, that if the Meeting there was not upon private Buſineſs, he deſired he might be one of the Company; with which Bernardi readily complied, and he and Rookwood, with other Company, ſupped there accordingly; and making it too late to go Home to their Lodgings, Rookwood and Bernardi ſtayed all Night at the Tavern, and went to Bed together there. The next Morning, being Sunday, ſome Conſtables and other armed Men came into the Houſe, and entered the Room where Bernardi and Rookwood were in Bed, and producing their Warrant to ſearch for and ſeize them, they demanded Submiſſion thereto. Bernardi and Rookwood readily yielded to their Authority, not making the leaſt Reſiſtance, and got up and dreſſed themſelves as ſoon as poſſibly they could; but the Conſtables Orders being to carry them, and all the People belonging to the Tavern before the Recorder of London, who was then gone to Church, they were obliged to remain in the Tavern until Noon, guarded by twenty Men. This Delay gave Bernardi Time and Opportunity to make ſome Inquiry into the Cauſe of all that Hurly-Burly. The ſenior Conſtable told him, that a Neighbour's Servant-Maid came to the Tavern the Night before, and ſeeing ſome Gentlemen at Supper, ſhe aſked a Drawer who they were? And he making her a ſurly Anſwer, ſhe went with her Brother, a Journeyman Shoemaker, directly to the Recorder, and gave Information, that ſome evil-minded Men were at the Tavern, and that the People of the Houſe refuſed to diſcover who they were; and therefore it was reaſonable to believe, that they might be ſuch Perſons as the Government then ſought for, by divers Proclamations. It was then near the latter End of February, and the before-mentioned horrid Conſpiracy was diſcovered about the Middle of the ſame Month. The Conſtables having Notice of the Recorder's being at Home, they carried Bernardi and Rookwood, with all the Tavern Family before him, who examined them very ſtrictly and ſeparately, and told them that he could do no leſs than commit them at that diſturbed Time, though he found no other Cauſe than Suſpicion for ſo doing; and therefore, as a Favour, would ſend them to the two Compters, and not to Newgate, that they might with leſs Difficulty and Expence obtain their Liberty, when the Storm was blown over. He ordered the Tavern Family to give Bail the next Day. Bernardi and Rookwood remained quiet under their reſpective and different Confinements near a Month, without any Communication with each other, either by Letter or Meſſage, in all that Time. Captain Charnock, King and Keys, were taken up on the firſt Proclamation, which came forth on or about the 22d Day of February; and were tried and convicted of High-Treaſon March 11, 1695-6, and were all three executed on the 18th of the ſame Month.

Upon the 23d of March came forth another Proclamation, in which Bernardi's Name was inſerted, and a Reward of a thouſand Pounds was thereby offered to apprehend him. Captain Rookwood repoſing an entire Confidence in the Friendſhip of one Mr. George Harris, intruſted him with the Knowledge of his and Bernardi's being Priſoners in the Compters, as before related. And here it is to be obſerved, that although Captain Rookwood was in a Proclamation, which came forth but the Day before he and Bernardi went together to the Tavern on Tower-Hill, and of which, without Doubt, he had been appriſed at the Time of his firſt coming to Bernardi, who then knew nothing of the Matter; yet Captain Rookwood thought fit to conceal the ſame from the Knowledge of Bernardi as long as he could, and judging it conducive to his Safety, he changed his Name, and prevailed on Bernardi, by earneſt Intreaty, to do the like; but without acquainting him with the Proclamation, as a Reaſon for his ſo doing. Captain Rookwood was often viſited in the Compter by his Minion the ſaid Harris, to whom he had communicated theſe Particulars: And as ſoon as the Proclamation of the 23d of March came forth, which was the laſt that was publiſhed to apprehend Conſpirators, and was publiſhed at ſome Weeks Diſtance from the reſt, Harris went and diſcovered Captain Rookwood and Bernardi for the Reward, and they were taken out of the Compters by a Detachment of the Guards, in the Night of the 24th of the ſame Month of March, and were carried to the Tilt-Yard Guard, and examined by the Lords of the Council the next Day, and committed March 25, 1696, cloſe Priſoners to Newgate, loaded with heavy Irons, and put into ſeparate, diſmal, dark and ſtinking Apartments, not being allowed to ſpeak to each other from the Time of their being taken out of the two Compters. Bernardi did never ſee Rookwood afterwards, who was ſoon after tried and condemned, and was executed at Tyburn with Cranburne and Lowick, on the 29th Day of April following.

It may be here demanded, How came Bernardi not to undergo the like Fate with Rookwood? To which he anſwers, That it was not by Favour, but for want of Evidence to hang Bernardi; though to have taken away his Life at that Time without Proof, had been tender Mercy, compared to the Cruelty of the ſevere and long Confinement he has ſince endured. None of the Diſcoverers of the ſaid horrid Plot, who were about ten or twelve in Number, ever ſo much as mentioned Bernardi's Name, unleſs Harris might make ſome Mention of him *, who had no other Knowledge of him, but by ſeeing him and his Friend Rookwood ſometimes together; in which Caſe he might ſpeak Truth with reſpect to Bernardi, but no farther. Harris's View was the two thouſand Pounds Reward, which he received, and which muſt, no doubt, with him have been a Conſideration highly preferable to Captain Rookwood's Friendſhip, though the Captain had been a true Friend to Harris for many Years, and, according to all Accounts, as kind to him as a good Father could poſſibly be to a beloved Son. Captain Rookwood was proved, by one of the chief Diſcoverers of the Conſpiracy, to have been one Night in their Aſſembly and Councils, and then unhappily to have given his Conſent to the deſigned bloody Act againſt King William, which coſt him his Life. Had or could Bernardi at that Time have been drawn into their vile and pernicious Councils, with reſpect to that horrid and moſt diſhonourable Deſign, his Rank and long Service muſt neceſſarily have rendered him a welcome Gueſt amongſt the Conſpirators, and conſequently he muſt have ſhared Captain Rookwood's Fate, without any poſſible Means of eſcaping it. Thoſe who ſuffered Death upon the Account of the Aſſaſſination-Conſpiracy, were eight in Number, namely, Captain Charnock, King and Keys, Major Lowick, Captain Rookwood, and Cranburne, and Sir William Perkins and Sir John Friend. Sir John Fenwick ſuffered for another Species of Treaſon, as ſhall herein after be particularly related and explained. The nine before-mentioned being executed, there ſtill remained many cloſe Priſoners in Newgate upon that Account; but Evidence being wanted to convict any more of them, the Habeas Corpus Act was ſuſpended for nine Months, to prevent them from gaining their Liberty by Law; and this was done with a View of finding out Evidence againſt them within that Time. The Suſpenſion of the Act expiring, ſeveral of them entered their Prayer at the then next Seſſions and Term, to be tried and admitted to Bail. The firſt who entered ſuch their Prayer were three Gentlemen who were Brothers, and related to the Earl of Bath, Captain Stow, Captain Walbank, and Mr. Blackburn, and ſome others, and they were all bailed out and diſcharged, though they were taken by Proclamation, and a thouſand Pounds Reward was paid for each of the firſt five Perſons. The remaining Number in Confinement then, were only Bernardi, Captain Counter, Mr. Caſſels, Mr. Meldrum, and Chambers; and they being locked up cloſe in ſeparate diſmal Parts of the Gaol, and moſt of them unknown to each other, could neither communicate or do any Thing for themſelves in order to their Liberty, nor could know what had been done for others: But the good Succeſs of thoſe before-mentioned cauſed their Friends abroad officiouſly to enter Prayers for them at the ſecond Seſſions after the Habeas Corpus Act came in Force; whereupon they were all of them taken out of their cloſe Holes, and were carried to the Old-Bailey, in order to be tried or bailed. Mr. Conſtantine Phipps, (who was afterwards Lord Chancellor of Ireland) was appointed their Counſel to move for them, and aſked Bernardi, If any Application had been made to the Sollicitor of the Treaſury? Bernardi anſwered, No; alledging, that as there was no Law to keep them any longer confined, their Friends judged it needleſs to apply to any body for Favour; little dreaming that an Act of Parliament would be obtained to ſecure and continue their further Confinement, a Practice never known or heard of before. As ſoon as they were produced in Court in order to be tried or bailed, the Sollicitor of the Treaſury ſtood up and whiſpered the Judges upon the Bench: And though that Seſſions, being a Seſſions of Gaol-Delivery, could not lawfully be determined without either trying or bailing theſe State-Priſoners, the Judges being obliged by Law to deliver the Gaol; yet, upon the whiſpering Motion of the Sollicitor of the Treaſury, the Judges adjourned the Court for a Fortnight, and immediately after a Bill was brought into Parliament, and an Act paſſed within that Time to confine them for a Twelvemonth, on a ſuppoſed Probability ſtill of finding out ſome Evidence againſt them in that Time †. But how came it that the ſame prudent Precaution for the Safety of the State, and to bring vile Conſpirators to condign Puniſhment, was not made Uſe of againſt thoſe that prayed their Trial at the Seſſions before, and thereby obtained their Diſcharge, and ſome of whom were committed upon the Oath of one Witneſs? It will not ſure be difficult to ſolve this Queſtion. Mr. Sollicitor of the Treaſury neither ſpoke aloud nor ſoftly againſt them; and why he was ſo good-natured may be eaſily underſtood, having, no doubt, been properly talked with by them; which was a very unfortunate Omiſſion in the Conduct of Bernardi and his Fellow-Sufferers, in not properly beſpeaking Mr. Sollicitor's Favour for them. And here a very ſingular and deplorable Paſſage happened, relating to Mr. Blackburn, who being bailed out and diſcharged, with thoſe who had

* Captain Harris, in his Evidence at Rookwood's Trial, Vol. IV. p. 636. ſays, He met Rookwood, Blackburn, Bernardi, Counter, and others; and with two or three of them talked of going to Turnham-Green, and attacking the Prince of Orange.

† By an Act 8 W. III. "to attaint ſuch of the Perſons concerned in the late horrid Conſpiracy to aſſaſſinate his Majeſty's Royal Perſon who are fled from Juſtice, unleſs they render themſelves to Juſtice, and for continuing ſeveral others of the ſaid Conſpirators in Cuſtody;" in the laſt Clauſe of which are theſe Words:

"And whereas the Perſons hereafter named, viz. —— Counter, John Bernardi, Robert Caſſels, Robert Meldrum James Chambers, and Robert Blackburn, have been committed, and are ſtill in Cuſtody in Newgate, for the ſaid Conſpiracy and Treaſon: Be it enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That the ſaid —— Counter, John Bernardi, Robert Caſſels, Robert Meldrum, James Chambers, and Robert Blackburn, and ſuch other Perſons who ſhall hereafter render themſelves, or ſhall be apprehended, and againſt whom there ſhall be Evidence upon Oath of their being concerned in the ſaid barbarous and bloody Conſpiracy of aſſaſſinating the Perſon of his Sacred Majeſty, ſhall be detained and kept in Cuſtody, without Bail or Mainprize, until the firſt Day of January 1697, unleſs they ſhall be ſooner bailed by Order of Council, ſigned by ſix of his Majeſty's Moſt Honourable Privy-Council."

first entered their Prayers to be tried, was taken up again upon the same Account, and, without any fresh Charge or Information against him, put into the Custody of a Messenger, at the Time when the House of Commons were passing the Bill for continuing the Confinement of the five last-mentioned State-Prisoners; and the Bill being carried up to the House of Lords for their Concurrence thereto, Mr. Blackburn was added to the said fatal Number in the Lords House, by way of Amendment to the Bill, and sent again to Newgate. Mr. Chambers. another of the last-mentioned State-Prisoners, who had also entered his Prayer at the Term with the first to be tried or bailed, was brought up to the Court of King's-Bench by Habeas Corpus, in order to be bailed; but one of his Bail refusing to swear himself worth five hundred Pounds, Chambers was remanded back to Newgate, where he remained, with the rest, under the Parliament's Confinement, till released by Death. The first Act expiring, a second (9 W. III. c. 4.) was soon passed to continue them in Prison another Year; unless, as in the former Act, they should sooner be bailed or discharged by Order of Council, signed by six Privy-Councillors. And at the End thereof, all Prospect of finding out any Evidence against them seeming to be entirely vanished, a third Act (10 & 11 W. III. c. 13.) was passed, confining them during the Pleasure of his late Majesty King William. And even some of the Members of that Parliament afterwards told Bernardi, and others of the Number so miserably confined, that the very Intention of that Act was purely to lay them under dutiful Obligations to King William for their Liberty, and thereby also at the same time to pay his Majesty a Compliment; and that the Members did not in the least doubt of his Majesty's Clemency to them, but that in a little Time he would set them free. King William was afterwards accordingly applied to in their Favour, not long before his Death, by the late Earl of Burlington; and his Majesty was graciously pleased to promise his Lordship, that he would deliver them in a short Time. But the King's Illness and Death following soon afterwards, and before any Order was given for their Discharge, the good and gracious Design of his Majesty for the Deliverance of these unhappy Men (if he really intended it) was most unfortunately frustrated and prevented. The Act for their Confinement, by the Demise of King William, being determined, (as they were advised) they entered their Prayer at the next Sessions to be tried or bailed, but were opposed by the Attorney-General, and neither was granted. Afterwards another Act of Parliament (1 Ann. st. 1. c. 29.) was procured to be passed, confining them during the Pleasure of Queen Anne. Her Majesty was graciously pleased to release Captain Counter, the first named in the said Acts of Confinement. Major Bernardi thereupon petitioned the Queen for his Liberty, and prevailed upon his Grace the late Duke of Buckingham, then Lord President of the Council, to deliver his Petition to her Majesty; which was so done at the Intercession of her Grace the Dutchess of Buckingham his Consort, and her Lady-Mother the late Countess of Dorchester, both of them being so very good as strenuously to move his Grace to undertake it, urging that such Acts of Compassion and Charity were generous and excellent in Persons of Quality, and well becoming a good and great Man in high Station. The Queen was graciously pleased, upon the Duke's Motion, to consent to Bernardi's Liberty; but his Grace afterwards cautiously laying the Petition before the Privy-Council, it was by them referred to Sir Edward Northey, the then Attorney-General, which might give him an Opportunity to obstruct the Queen's intended Clemency, for politic or other Reasons. Upon this Reference, it took up some Time and Expence to attend and solicite the Dispatch of Mr. Attorney's Report, which, when made, nevertheless appeared to be in Bernardi's Favour. The Lord President called for the Report, in order to have the Sentiments of all the Lords in Council, how and in what Manner Bernardi should be delivered and discharged; but the late Earl of Oxford, then Lord Treasurer, at the same Time took the Opportunity to move that Mr. Blackburn might have his Liberty as well as Bernardi; and thereupon his Grace the President, and his Lordship the Treasurer, differed in Council about the respective Discharges of Bernardi and Blackburn, whereby both their Pretensions to their Liberty, though so near succeeding (to all Appearance) dropped, and never could be revived again to the Queen's Death. How far those two great Statesmen were sincere in attempting the Liberty of Bernardi and Blackburn, or either of them, or played Booty, God alone knows; the Windings, Turnings, and Labyrinths of Politicians not being easily traced and found out by a well-meaning, honest Man. The Earl of Oxford afterwards was often applied to in their Behalf, and sometimes by Persons of greater Honour and Quality than himself; and his Lordship made more Promises than he had Buttons upon his Coat, Waistcoat, and Cloak, and some of them upon his Honour, that these Prisoners should soon be set at Liberty, if they would but have a little more Patience; but all his Lordship's Promises were by him either forgot, or, through his most refined Policy, neglected to be performed.

By the Demise of the Queen they had again Liberty, by Virtue of the Habeas Corpus Act, to pray for their Trial or to be bailed; and in order thereunto they entered their Prayer accordingly, at the first Old Bailey Sessions, and were by that Court referred to Michaelmas Term following. They retained three or four eminent Counsel at Law, and fee'd them to move and plead for them. Seven or eight Motions were made that Term, at different Times, in their Behalf, and several Rules of Court were obtained at great Expence, before they could bring the then Attorney-General, Sir Edward Northey, to appear and defend their Motions. At last the then Lord Chief Justice Parker told Serjeant Webb, (one of the Counsel for the Prisoners) that the Court consented to their being brought to the Bar by Habeas Corpus on the Monday following, being the last Day of the Term, in order to admit them to Bail, bidding the Serjeant in the mean time to direct his Clients to give in the Names of such substantial Men as they intended to bring into Court to bail them. This glimmering Favour proved only as a little enlightening before Death, as will appear by the Sequel. The Prisoners were accordingly brought up by their Keepers from Newgate to the Court of King's-Bench, the last Day of the Term, when the Chief Justice before-named, having Notice of their being there, was pleased to ask Serjeant Webb, their Counsel, if they had Bail ready in Court? And being answered in the Affirmative, his Lordship was pleased to reply, That Wonders were to be done presently; Wonders indeed, and such as were never heard of before! The Prisoners were called and brought into Court, and thereupon the same Gentleman made an Harangue against them of above an Hour long; and although towards the End of his very bitter and invective Speech against those helpless Wretches, who were obliged to receive all his Fire and Huffs, he was so ingenuous as to declare, that he had never heard of any Evidence charging them with the Crime they were committed for; yet he was pleased also to declare, that he was very well satisfied of their Guilt, by the Proceeding of the first Parliament against them, and would therefore remand them back to Newgate, which accordingly he did. At the Meeting of the next Parliament Matters were so ordered, that another Act (1 Geo. I. st. 2. c. 7.) was prepared and procured to pass both Houses very expeditiously, to continue them in Prison during his late Majesty King George's Pleasure. If it was intended still to debar these unhappy Men from the Benefit of the Law, it would have been Charity to have told them so, when they entered their Prayer to take their Trial or be bailed at the Demise of Queen Anne, and not to have drilled them on with Hopes of Relief all that long Term, when none was intended them; impoverishing them at the same time by great Expence of Counsel's Fees, and otherwise, in attempting it, to the reducing and bringing them into a starving Condition in Gaol. Several Petitions were afterwards delivered to his late Majesty King George in the Name and Behalf of these Wretches, imploring his Sovereign Compassion, and setting forth, as an Instance of his great Mercy, upon another Occasion, his pardoning many condemned for actual Treason against his Majesty's Person; whereas these had been long miserably confined as Prisoners of State, purely upon bare Suspicion only of being concerned in a Conspiracy against a deceased Monarch, of which the least Proof could never be made out against them; yet their Petitions were not minded. The Court of England hath the least Regard to Petitions of any Court in Europe, and so it hath been for many Reigns past; which Neglect is chiefly to be imputed to the Prime Ministers and other great Men: His Majesty having a Petition put into his Hand, generally gives it to one of the Lords near him, where it is too often thrown aside, and never heard of more. In most other Courts particular Days are appointed to read Petitions, inserting in the Margin of each Petition, to the Effect following, viz. Consented to, or not consented to; and an Office is settled wherein to lodge Petitions, where the Deliverers take them out, and by that Means all Petitioners soon know how far they are, or are not, to prevail upon such their submissive and most humble Application.

By the Demise of his late Majesty King George the First, which happened at Hanover, on or about the 11th Day of June, 1727, Bernardi and his two Fellow-Sufferers, being all the Survivors of the said miserable State-Monuments, had again Liberty by Law to pray for a Trial or to be admitted to Bail; whereupon Bernardi, on the 16th Day of June, 1727, moved the Court of King's-Bench by his Counsel for an Habeas Corpus to bring him up, in order to be tried, bailed, or discharged, according to Law; such Counsel at the same Time apprising the Court, that Bernardi had, so long ago as the 25th Day of March, 1696, been committed to Newgate by the late Duke of Shrewsbury, then Secretary of State, on Suspicion of being concerned in a horrid Conspiracy to assassinate his late Majesty King William III. but without any Proof, there not being so much as the Oath of one single Witness made against him, nor was it specified in his Commitment that he was charged upon Oath; and no Proof at any Time afterwards ever appearing against him, to induce the bringing him to a Trial, several Acts of Parliament had been made to keep him in Prison, and by the last of them he was confined during the Pleasure of his said late Majesty King George I. by whose Decease Bernardi was become intituled to his Liberty, there being no Law then in Force to detain him in Prison; and the Court then made a Rule for such Habeas Corpus accordingly; though the Motion was strongly opposed by the Attorney-General Sir Philip Yorke, who, though a young Man, had sprung up quickly to that great Post in the Law, through the early Favour and Countenance of the before-mentioned Chief Justice, and his own shining Merit, built upon so nursing and advantageous a Foundation. Mr. Attorney-General (but sure he was only in Jest) objected in particular to the Motion as not proper or regular, without producing the original Commitment, which, for Want of due Care in keeping and preserving the Records of Newgate, after upwards of one-and-thirty Years, and the Change of the several Keepers within that Time, was not then to be had; but that weighty Objection was over-ruled by the Court. Afterwards Sir John Fortescue Aland, then one of the Judges of the Court of King's-Bench, and now one of the Judges of his Majesty's Court of Common-Pleas, declared in Court, that the same Matter had been moved upon the Demise of Queen Anne, when the Chief Justice Parker before-mentioned declared his Opinion, that the Court had a discretionary Power either to bail or discharge the Prisoners, then brought up to the Court of King's-Bench by Habeas Corpus in the like Case; yet nevertheless, at the same Time, he remanded them back to Newgate. Bernardi's Counsel thereupon waved the Habeas Corpus, and desired to take nothing by his Motion, as conceiving the Expence only certain, (which Bernardi was ill able to bear) and the Success doubtful; and besides the Judges Commissions were not then renewed, who of themselves could not subsist longer than six Months from his present Majesty's Accession to the Crown. It was therefore thought expedient and more adviseable for Bernardi to seek Relief by petitioning the King for his Royal Favour and Clemency, than to make any farther Trial to be discharged or bailed by the Court of King's-Bench. A Bill was soon after brought into Parliament, and speedily passed into an Act (1 Geo. II. st. 1. c. 4.) to continue his Imprisonment, with his other two Fellow-Sufferers, Blackburn and Cassels, during his present Majesty's Pleasure. A printed Case was delivered to all the Lords and Commons against the Bill, while the same was under the Consideration ation of the Two Houſes, as is herein after ſet forth. And Bernardi preferred ſeveral Petitions to the King and Queen, both before and after the ſaid laſt-mentioned Act paſſed; the Tenor or Purport of which Caſe and Petitions are as followeth, viz.

The moſt ſad and deplorable Caſe of Robert Blackburn, John Bernardi, and Robert Caſſels, humbly offered againſt the Bill now depending in Parliament for continuing their Impriſonment, after a Confinement worſe than Death by them already undergone, of upwards of one-and-thirty Years in Newgate.

IN March and April 1696, they were committed: The Crime they were charged with in their reſpective Commitments was High Treaſon, in conſpiring the Murder and Aſſaſſination of his late Majeſty King William III. but without Proof, there being not ſo much as the Oath of one ſingle Witneſs made againſt any of them, nor is it ſpecified in their Commitments, that they were charged upon Oath: That no Proof appearing againſt them whereby to bring them to a Trial, ſeveral Acts of Parliament had been made to keep them in Priſon, the laſt of which left them to his late Majeſty's Pleaſure, and then by the Demiſe of the King they were become intituled to their Liberty: That the Perſons charged with this moſt horrid and deteſtable Crime were originally Six, namely, James Counter, Robert Meldrum, James Chambers, Robert Blackburn, John Bernardi, and Robert Caſſels: Counter was ſet at Liberty by Queen Anne, and Meldrum and Chambers died in Priſon; ſo that there were then remaining only the laſt Three of theſe miſerable, wretched and moſt unfortunate Priſoners, who ſolemnly diſclaim, and from their Hearts ever did and do abhor and deteſt, the ſaid villainous Crime ſo laid to their Charge as aforeſaid: And although their Number was then reduced to Three as before-mentioned, yet nevertheleſs by that Bill they were intended to be further confined: That they were reduced to extreme Miſeries by their ſaid tedious Confinement of one-and-thirty Years and upwards, in a melancholy, diſmal, and loathſome Gaol, and by their great Age, Infirmity, and Poverty; and though they had been confined cloſe Priſoners of State in Newgate for upwards of one-and-thirty Years as aforeſaid, yet they had never had one Penny Allowance from the Government.

Wherefore, and in regard to the unprecedented and unparalleled Hardſhips of their Caſe, it was humbly hoped the ſaid Bill ſhould not paſs. Subſcribed,

Robert Blackburn.

Copies of Commitments follow, whereby it plainly appears that none of the ſaid three Priſoners were committed upon Oath.

THESE are, in his Majeſty's Name, to authoriſe and require you to receive into your Cuſtody the Body of ——— Bernardi, herewith ſent you for High Treaſon, in conſpiring the Aſſaſſination and Murder of the King; and you are to keep him ſafe until he ſhall be delivered by due Courſe of Law; and for ſo doing this ſhall be your Warrant. Given at the Court at Whitehal, the 25th of March, 1696.

To the Keeper of Newgate, or his Deputy. SHREWSBURY.

(Vera Copia, examinat. per James Fell.)

N. B. The Commitments of Mr. Blackburn and Caſſels are to the ſame Effect with Bernardi's.

None of the ſaid ſix Priſoners were committed upon any Oath, except Counter, who was charged upon the Oath of one Witneſs, as may appear by the following true Copy of his Commitment:

Middleſex.

RECEIVE into your Cuſtody the Body of John, alias James Gunter, alias Counter, alias Rumſey, herewith ſent you, charged before me, upon the Oath of George Harris, Gent. for High Treaſon, in conſpiring to aſſaſſinate his Majeſty, and to procure an Invaſion of this Kingdom by the French, being the Perſon mentioned in his Majeſty's Proclamation, and there called Counter, alias Rumſey; and in order to a further Examination, you are him ſafely to keep, until he ſhall be diſcharged by due Courſe of Law; and for ſo doing this ſhall be your Warrant. Given under my Hand and Seal, this 29th Day of May, 1696.

S. LOVELL, Recorder.

(Vera Copia, examinat. per James Fell.)

A Copy of the Keeper's Certificate, ſetting forth that none of the ſaid three Priſoners were committed upon Oath; which Certificate was annexed to one of Bernardi's Petitions to the King.

WHEREAS James Gunter, alias Counter, alias Rumſey, James Chambers, Robert Meldrum, Robert Blackburn, Robert Caſſels, and John Bernardi, were committed to Newgate in 1696, for conſpiring to aſſaſſinate his late Majeſty King William the Third, as appears by Copies of their ſeveral Commitments, ſigned by James Fell, the Keeper of Newgate, and by his Head Turnkey Bodenham Rouſe, which I have ſeen and examined:

I hereby certify, that none of the before-named Perſons are charged upon any Oath ſpecified in the ſaid Copies of their reſpective Commitments, except the aboveſaid Counter, who ſtands charged in his Commitment for the ſaid Crime, upon the Oath of one George Harris, Gent. Given under my Hand this 15th Day of Auguſt, 1727.

True Copies of Petitions to the King and Queen, and of an Affidavit of two eminent Surgeons, are herein after ſet forth as followeth:

To the KING's Moſt Excellent Majeſty.

The moſt humble Petition of Major John Bernardi,

Sheweth,

THAT your Petitioner now is, and for upwards of one-and-thirty Years laſt paſt has been a State-Priſoner in Newgate, committed the 25th of March, 1696, by the then Earl of Shrewſbury's Warrant, as Secretary of State, and therein charged with High Treaſon, in conſpiring the Murder and Aſſaſſination of his late Majeſty King William; but without any Proof, or ſo much as any Information upon the Oath of one ſingle Witneſs, that your Petitioner could ever hear of: Neither hath, in all the ſaid Time of thirty-one Years and upwards, any Proſecution been had againſt your Petitioner for the ſaid horrid ſuppoſed Crime, which your Petitioner doth diſclaim, and from his Heart ever did and doth abhor and deteſt.

That by two Acts of Indemnity, the one in the third, and the other in the ſeventh Year of the Reign of his late Majeſty your moſt gracious Father King George the Firſt, the Crime alledged againſt your Petitioner in his Commitment is pardoned; but by the ſaid Acts the Impriſonment of your Petitioner was continued during his late Majeſty's Pleaſure.

That your Petitioner is adviſed, that by the Demiſe of his ſaid late Majeſty, your Petitioner became intituled to his Liberty, and ought not to be detained in Priſon by any Law now in Being; and has very lately applied to your Majeſty's Judges of the Court of King's-Bench to be diſcharged from his Confinement, but without Succeſs.

That your Petitioner, by his ſo long Impriſonment, is reduced to great Straits and Want, and great Infirmity of Body; and his Life is in Danger by his cloſe Confinement in Newgate, as by Affidavit of two eminent Surgeons, herewith produced, and ſworn before one of your Majeſty's Judges of the King's-Bench, and filed in the ſaid Court, may appear. And your Petitioner is now upwards of ſeventy Years of Age, great and the beſt Part of which Time has been very uncomfortably worn out by your Petitioner, in a melancholy, diſmal, and loathſome Gaol, where it has coſt your Petitioner above ſeven hundred Pounds for his Lodging.

That in regard to all ſuch your Petitioner's ſad and deplorable Circumſtances, and advanced Old Age, your Petitioner moſt humbly hopes he may be deemed a fit Object of your Majeſty's Charity and Clemency, and more eſpecially at this Juncture of your Majeſty's Acceſſion to the Throne.

Wherefore your Petitioner doth moſt humbly beſeech your Majeſty, that he may, for the preſent, for the Benefit of his Health, and to ſave Expence, be removed from Newgate to the King's-Bench Priſon, till ſuch Time as your Majeſty ſhall graciouſly ſee Cauſe to order your Petitioner's abſolute Diſcharge.

And your Petitioner ſhall ever pray, &c.

Ex Parte Johannis Bernardi Ar' in Banco Regis.

JOHN WHEELER the Elder, and John Wheeler the Younger, his Son, both of the City of London, Surgeons, jointly and ſeverally make Oath, That Major John Bernardi, who now is, and for upwards of one-and-thirty Years laſt paſt, as theſe Deponents have been informed, and verily believe, hath been a State-Priſoner in Newgate, hath frequently had very ill Fits, occaſioned by a miſerable Lameneſs and Swelling in his Arm, by Humours flowing to an old Wound. And theſe Deponents further ſay, That they have attended him many Times in ſuch Illneſs, for about twelve Years laſt paſt, as his Surgeons, laying his Arm often open to the Bone by large Inciſions, which have continued open and running Wounds for ſeveral Months after every ſuch Operation; and his Torments occaſioned thereby have frequently brought Fevers upon him, to the endangering his Life. And theſe Deponents further ſay, That in theſe Deponents Judgment, the Cauſe of contracting ſuch ſharp and groſs Humours hath proceeded, and doth proceed from the Length and Cloſeneſs of his Confinement; which, if continued, will ſtill endanger his Life, in theſe Deponents Judgment; and the rather by reaſon of his advanced Old Age, he being now, as theſe Deponents have been informed, and do believe, upwards of ſeventy Years of Age.

To the KING's Moſt Excellent Majeſty.

The humble Petition of Major John Bernardi,

Sheweth,

THAT your Petitioner, by an Act of Parliament lately made, being intirely left to your Majeſty's moſt gracious Pleaſure, after having ſuffered near thirty-two Years cloſe Impriſonment in Newgate, on Suſpicion of being concerned in a moſt horrid Conſpiracy againſt his late Majeſty King William,

That your Petitioner hath always prayed and petitioned to be tried, as often as he could do it by Law, to be acquitted or condemned; yet he could never be heard or brought before any Court, to have his Guilt or Innocence proved.

That your Petitioner was not charged upon any Oath, of his being a Conſpirator in that horrid Plot, which is evident by his Commitment: No Man ever being taken up for High Treaſon, and ſo charged, but the ſame was always ſpecified and expreſſed in his Commitment (as your Petitioner is adviſed). For Inſtance, Mr. Counter is only charged upon the Oath of one Evidence; the Diſtinction ſufficiently appeareth by the Copy of his Commitment, and that of your Petitioner, hereunto annexed.

That your Petitioner hath humbly ſet forth his great Age, Infirmity and Poverty, by a former Petition delivered into your Majeſty's moſt gracious Hand; your Petitioner being above ſeventy Years old, ſuffering inſupportable Miſeries by frequent Ulcerations in his Limbs, occaſioned by his long and cloſe Confinement, atteſted upon the Oath of two eminent Surgeons, and annexed to his former Petition to your Majeſty.

Your Petitioner therefore moſt humbly implores and ſupplicates your Majeſty, in your Sovereign Compaſſion and great Goodneſs, to grant that your Petitioner may be removed from Newgate to your Majeſty's Bench Priſon for the preſent, for the Benefit of more Air, and leſs Expence, until your Majeſty may be graciouſly pleaſed to grant your Petitioner entire Liberty.

And your Petitioner ſhall ever pray, &c.

To the QUEEN's Most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Petition of Major John Bernardi,

Sheweth,

THAT your Petitioner hath been a close Prisoner of State in Newgate near thirty-two Years, and is now destined to a longer Confinement, by an Act of Parliament lately made to that End, leaving your Petitioner to his Majesty's most gracious Pleasure.

That your Petitioner was not committed upon the Oath of any Evidence, as appeareth by the Copy of his Commitment annexed to his Petition, delivered also to his Majesty's most gracious Hand this Day.

That your Petitioner and the rest had their Case delivered to the Members of both Houses of Parliament, whilst the Act for their longer Imprisonment was under their Consideration; a Copy of which is hereunto annexed.

That your Petitioner is one of the oldest Commission-Officers in the Kingdom, having served the States of Holland fifteen Years by the King of England's Consent and Approbation; your Petitioner bearing five of his then Highness the Prince of Orange's Commissions in several Stations of Honour, the first of which bears Date above fifty-four Years ago; and your Petitioner hath been much wounded in the said Service.

That your Petitioner's Grandfather and Father were both Counts of the Empire, &c. though his said Father and your Petitioner were both born Subjects of this Kingdom.

That your Petitioner hath his before-mentioned Commissions, and the Imperial Patent, to produce in Testimony of the Truth thereof.

That your Petitioner hath already suffered a Punishment a thousand-fold worse than a present or violent Death, and never could obtain the Favour to be brought before any Court of Justice, to have his Guilt or Innocence proved; kept in Prison near thirty-two Years, by Methods never heard of before; and is now nigh worn out with Old Age, Decrepidness, and Poverty.

Your Petitioner therefore most humbly implores and beseeches your Majesty, in your Sovereign Compassion and Pity, to move the King to grant the Prayer of your most miserable Petitioner, which is but one Prison for another, until the King of Kings, in his Divine Providence, shall deliver your Petitioner out of this changeable World, or that his Majesty may be graciously pleased to grant him more Liberty in it.

And your Petitioner shall ever pray, &c *.

To the QUEEN's Most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Petition of Abigail Bernardi, Wife to the most unfortunate Major John Bernardi, who hath for upwards of one-and-thirty Years last past been confined a State-Prisoner in Newgate,

Sheweth,

THAT your Petitioner, on the 25th of June last, did deliver to the King's Most Excellent Majesty an humble Petition on the Behalf of the said unfortunate Prisoner, thereby praying, for the Reasons therein contained, that he might for the present, for the Benefit of his Health, and to save Expence, be removed from Newgate to the King's-Bench Prison, till such Time as his Majesty should graciously see Cause to order his absolute Discharge, as by the said Petition, Reference being thereunto had, more fully may appear.

That in the Reign of his late Majesty, in the Time of the Preston Rebellion, many Prisoners under Condemnation and Sentence of Death for High Treason, (but reprieved) for the Sake of their Health obtained an Indulgence of a Removal from one Prison to another, where the Closeness of their Confinement endangered their Lives, as is now the Case of the said unfortunate Bernardi, who, although he hath already undergone a Confinement worse than Death, was committed only upon Suspicion of a very horrid and most detestable Crime, in conspiring the Murder and Assassination of his late Majesty King William, but without any Proof, or as much as the Oath of one single Witness against him; neither hath any Proof been found against him, or he brought to any Trial, in upwards of one-and-thirty Years Time; and as he hath been always ready and desirous to take his Trial, he hath, from Time to Time, regularly entered his Prayer to be tried.

Your Petitioner therefore doth most humbly beseech and supplicate your Majesty, in your Sovereign Compassion and great Goodness, to intercede with the King's Most Excellent Majesty for the Removal of your Petitioner's unfortunate Husband, the said Major John Bernardi, from Newgate to the King's-Bench Prison.

And your Petitioner shall ever pray, &c.

To conclude this Point, it is manifest by the before-recited Copies of Petitions, Cases and Certificates, and distinct Allegations of the said Major John Bernardi, that he was not guilty even of as much as Misprision of Treason, having never had, directly or indirectly, any Knowledge of the said horrid Conspiracy.

Here are two Passages to be curiously inquired into; the first of which is, How Bernardi came to be put into a Proclamation? The Answer to this is not at all difficult. Undoubtedly it was by reason of George Harris's Information of his being then in the Compter with Captain Rookwood; which Rookwood was accused upon Oath, though Bernardi never was. And this seems to be more unquestionably evident, in regard the Proclamation, wherein Bernardi is named, did not come out until the very Morning before Bernardi and Rookwood were taken out of the Compter by the Guards at Midnight, upon Harris's Information, which was five Weeks after the Discovery of the Plot, and Bernardi's Name was never inserted in any former Proclamation.

The next and second Question is, On what Grounds he was first confined by Act of Parliament? To which Bernardi answers, That the Duke of Shrewsbury having inserted in his Commitment the following positive Words, viz. for being concerned in the horrid Conspiracy, &c. though not a Syllable of any Charge upon Oath, his Grace's Word under his Hand was not to be called in Question by the Parliament, in Favour of a poor, inferior, supposed Enemy to the Government: And how Bernardi, or any other Man, could have the Confidence to set forth so positively, by Petitions to the King, and a Case to the Parliament, that he was never charged upon Oath, if he had ever known or heard of any Evidence against him, and in which (if the contrary had been fact) he might easily have been contradicted, is not to be accounted for. He affirms, and with great Truth, that he never lay under the Odium of being guilty of any base or dishonourable Act in the whole Course of his Life, until the Commencement of his present deplorable Sufferings; which may gain some Credit from his several Promotions in Commission from Time to Time, both Abroad and at Home: And laying aside all true Notions of Honour, no Man in his Senses, having Capacity or common Sense enough to judge of his own Interest, could sure be so infatuated as to engage in so horrid an Action; because no Prince upon Earth, being a Christian, could or would ever countenance such a Man afterwards, though what he did might turn to such Prince's Service. We have an Instance of it at Home, of one Sir Paul Whitford, who murdered Dorislaus, Oliver Cromwell's Ambassador at the Hague. This base and wicked Act might tend to the Service of King Charles II. when in Exile; however the King, after the Restoration, never suffered Whitford to appear in his Presence, though he had been a Favourite before; and if his Majesty allowed him any Thing, it was done so privately, that Nobody knew it, and he lived and died in a remote Part of the Kingdom.

Bernardi quitted to the Amount of about five hundred Pounds a-Year, which he had coming in by Employs, and by his Wife's Fortune, upon King James's demanding his Subjects Home from the Dutch Service; and it may be therefore reasonable to believe, that Bernardi was in some Esteem with the King as long as his Majesty lived; and nothing but a Fool or a Madman could be so stupid as to forfeit such an Advantage, by engaging in a vile, wicked, and most dishonourable Action, which neither King nor Subject could justify.

It may not be improper here, for manifesting and clearing up Bernardi's Innocence beyond all Contradiction, to give a particular Relation of what passed before the Lord Chief Justice Holt, upon the Evidence given before his Lordship, upon Bernardi's being suspected to be concerned in the said horrid and detestable Conspiracy, the Witnesses and Discoverers of which were Captain George Porter†, Mr. Le Rue, Captain Blair, Captain Fisher, Mr. Ubank or Hewbank, Mr. Bertram, Captain Boyce, and some others, whose Names have escaped the Author's Memory: They were all

* To Blackburn's Petition, to the same Effect, was added the following Certificate:

Middlesex, ff. THESE are to certify, That upon Search made amongst the Records of the Sessions of Gaol-Delivery of Newgate, held for the County of Middlesex, it appears by the said Records, that on the 2d Day of April, 1696, Robert Blackburn was committed to the said Gaol of Newgate, by the Right Honourable the Duke of Shrewsbury, Principal Secretary of State, for High Treason, in conspiring the Assassination of the late King. And I do further certify, That at the Sessions of Gaol-Delivery of Newgate, held for the said County, at Justice-Hall in the Old-Bailey, in the Suburbs of the City of London, on the 9th Day of September, 1696, the said Robert Blackburn was delivered to Bail by the Court, for his personal Appearance at the next Sessions of Gaol-Delivery, to be held for the said County, to answer to all such Matters, as on his said late Majesty's Behalf should be objected against him; and not to depart the Court without Licence; and in the mean time, to be of his good Behaviour; that then, &c. At which said next Sessions of Gaol-Delivery, to wit, at the Sessions of Gaol-Delivery of Newgate, held for the said County, at Justice-Hall aforesaid, on the 14th Day of October, 1696, the said Robert Blackburn personally appeared in open Court; and was by the said Court discharged of his Recognizance. And I do hereby further certify, That it appears by the said Records, That on the 7th Day of January, 1696-7, the said Robert Blackburn was committed to the said Gaol of Newgate, by Sir William Trumbull, Knight, one of his late Majesty's Most Honourable Privy-Council, Principal Secretary of State, for High Treason, in conspiring the Murder and Assassination of the said King. Dated this 10th Day of August, 1708, in the seventh Year of our Sovereign Lady Anne, by the Grace of God Queen of Great-Britain, &c.

S. HARCOURT, Clerk of the Peace, and Gaol-Delivery of Newgate, for the County of Middlesex.

It appears, by the foregoing Certificate, that Robert Blackburn was committed the 2d of April, 1696.
That on the 9th of September following, he was admitted to Bail.
The 14th of October, 1696, he was discharged.
The 7th of January committed again for the same Fact; though taken up at the Buoy and Nore, by one Captain Nash, for attempting to go to Flanders without a Pass. By Captain Nash left in Custody of a Messenger nine Weeks. Then committed by Sir William Trumball, Knight, to Newgate, and never examined, or any Oath against him, that ever he heard of; and then detained till an Act passed to imprison Counter, Meldrum, Chambers, Bernardi and Cassels, who were all Strangers to, and never seen by Blackburn, till in Newgate; and then he was inserted in the amended Bill, which came down from the Lords to the Commons.
He has been now almost thirty-three Years in Prison, and no Allowance from the Government, though a State-Prisoner.
He was not one of those, for whom the thousand Pounds was offered.

These several Allegations have been reported true, by Sir Edward Northey, and Sir Robert Raymond; therefore he hopes to have his Majesty's Relief.

† This George Porter, the principal Evidence in the Assassination-Plot, and against Sir John Fenwick and the rest, was tried for the Murder of Sir James Hacket; and his Trial is here inserted.

The Trial of George Porter, Esq. for the Murder of Sir James Hacket, of Scotland, Knt. at the Sessions of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, held at Justice-Hall in the Old-Bailey, London, on Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, the 10th, 11th, 12th, and 13th Days of December, 1684, before the Honourable Sir James Smith, Lord-Mayor of the City of London, Sir Thomas Jenner, Knt. one of his Majesty's Serjeants at Law, and Recorder of the aforesaid City; together with other Justices of London and Middlesex.

JURY.

Ralph Box, Esq.	Walter Coventry,	John Palmer,	John Easton,	Roger Attley,	Francis Smith,
William Moyer,	Jacob David,	Ralph Izzard,	John Fauster,	Thomas Harrison,	William Drinkwater.

GEORGE PORTER, of London, Esq. was indicted for killing Sir James Hacket, in the Parish of St. Bride's, London, on the 11th of October, 1684, in the thirty-sixth Year of his Majesty's Reign. The Case and Circumstances appearing on the Trial were, That the Deceased and the Prisoner, being at the Duke's Theatre in Salsbury- all ordered to assemble at the said Lord Chief Justice's Chambers in Serjeants-Inn in Chancery-Lane, which they did, and were there examined upon Oath by his Lordship, in order to the Trials of Major Lowick, Major Bernardi, Captain Knightly, and Captain Rookwood, which Four were designed to be tried next after the Condemnation and Execution of Captain Charnock, Mr. King, Mr. Keys, Sir William Perkins, and Sir John Friend, for being concerned in the said vile and villainous Plot. Captain Boyce deposed upon his Examination, that he had known Major Bernardi a Captain in the Dutch Service, where he bore a very good Character, but that he had not seen him in five Years then last past. Mr. Le Rue deposed, That he also knew Major Bernardi, but could lay nothing to his Charge; and that the last Time he was in his Company, to the best of his Remembrance, was at least two Years before the Assassination-Plot was discovered. Captain Porter and the rest declared, that they never had any Knowledge of Major Bernardi. Thereupon Major Bernardi was struck out of the Number or List of the Four designed for Trial, and Mr. Cranburne was appointed to be tried in his room, to make up Number Four. They were all Four tried accordingly, and condemned. Three of them, viz. Major Lowick, Captain Rookwood, and Mr. Cranburne, were executed soon after. Captain Knightly, who pleaded guilty, was by great Intercession reprieved, and some Time after pardoned upon the Terms of Banishment. Now followeth a Remark upon a mistaken Notion frequently broached and argued abroad, to the great Prejudice and Wrong of Major Bernardi and his two remaining Fellow-Sufferers, Blackburn and Cassels; viz. That there was one Evidence against them, and only one to be come at, they having artfully spirited away and decoyed out of the Kingdom one other Evidence, who could have proved them concerned in the Fact; which was the Ground and Foundation of the Parliament's passing the first Act for their Confinement. Major Bernardi takes upon him positively to deny that Fact, and to affirm that nothing can be more false and untrue: for no one Evidence or Discoverer of that abominable Conspiracy was ever prevailed on to abscond or quit the Land, or ever absented himself, while the Government had any Use or Occasion for him. Mr. Goodman indeed, the Stage-Player, had been a Copartner Evidence with Captain George Porter against Sir John Fenwick, who was charged by them with being concerned in a different Species of Treason, with other Persons of Quality, by endeavouring to procure an Invasion from France, two Years before the Assassination-Plot broke out, though Sir John Fenwick was not accused by Goodman and Porter till that Time. True it is, that the said Goodman was soon after influenced by a Bribe and fair Promises (as is supposed) to quit the Kingdom, thereby to prevent Sir John Fenwick's being convicted of High Treason by the Common Law; which occasioned the Parliament's passing a Bill of Attainder against him, which took away his Life. But that was not the Case, in any respect, of Bernardi, Counter, Meldrum, Chambers, Blackburn, and Cassels, or any of them: Neither was Goodman ever so much as mentioned or charged with the Knowledge of, or of being in any Manner concerned in, the Assassination-Plot; so that he neither was, nor could be an Evidence against any one upon that Account.

Providence was so gracious, merciful and indulgent to Major Bernardi, in the Midst of his Miseries and Afflictions in Newgate, as to provide him a second virtuous, kind and loving Wife, in the Year of our Lord 1712, who hath proved to him a true Helpmeet, having by her good Management and Industry, and great and kind Care of him, contributed much to his Support and Comfort, and to the keeping of his Heart from breaking, under the worst of his Hardships, Difficulties and Distress. And by her he hath had, during his Confinement in Newgate, Ten Children, who, in respect of Charge and Expence under his strait and narrow Circumstances, and under his Immurement, or being buried alive, have been no small Burthen to him; yet he esteems them great Blessings bestowed upon him by Almighty God, at whose Tribunal, after this miserable and wretched Life ended, he knows he shall appear innocent of the heinous and monstrous Crime laid to his Charge; and for the bare mistaken Suspicion of which, he hath in three Reigns (and for near a Year and three Quarters in a fourth) been so severely treated: And then he shall, if not sooner delivered by any King upon Earth, God Almighty's Vicegerent here below, be delivered from the English Bastile (vulgarly called Newgate) by the great and merciful God himself above, the King of Kings, and only Ruler of Princes. It may not be improper here to distinguish our said English Bastile from that in France, and to shew in what Circumstances they materially differ. To which End know, candid Reader, that a State-Prisoner in the Bastile in France pays not, nor is squeezed out of any Thing for his Lodging, Meat, Drink, or Ease, nor is loaded with Irons, nor put in Dungeons, or otherwise ill used in Prison; but he is always handsomely provided for, and allowed a liberal Subsistence by the Government, according to his Rank and Degree: But in our said English Bastile no State Prisoner has any Allowance made him from the Government, and in case he hath not of his own, he must live upon Charity, if he can be so happy as to meet with it, or starve: And in case he hath any known Substance, he must expect to be squeezed out of a great Part of it, or he shall have much worse Lodging than many a tolerable Dog-Kennel of a kind good-natured Country 'Squire would make, be loaded with Irons, and used worse than a Dog. And all this is permitted or connived at, under a Government, the Voice of whose People is almost perpetually boasting of Liberty and Property; the Words Liberty and Property being ever uppermost, and at their Tongues End, and they constantly exclaiming against Arbitrary Power: But God alone knows the Sincerity and Soundness, or the Hollowness and Deceitfulness of Men's Hearts. Can it be accounted for, that so much Oppression should be suffered to be practised in a free and Christian Nation (as England is); and, on the contrary, that so much Humanity and Relief should be shewn and used to State-Prisoners in Distress in France, under an absolute and arbitrary Government? Sure it cannot proceed from the French being more honest, more polite, more humane, less malicious and revengeful; or of a more generous and Christian Temper, than the English. For my Part, I am so far from asserting it, that I will not so much as think it. But this I will affirm, that what I have before observed with respect to the different Usage of Prisoners, in the two several Bastiles of the different Nations, is not more strange than true. And now I have nothing more to add hereunto, but my Hope and earnest Desire, that such as, out of Curiosity or otherwise, shall give themselves the Trouble to read this small Tract, will be pleased to judge favourably of me; to which Intent I was chiefly moved and induced to the Pains of writing it in my Old Age, and to prevent an infamous and odious Character of me from being wrongfully and injuriously handed down and transmitted to Posterity; the very Thoughts of which have been more grievous to my Mind, and more piercing and wounding to my Spirit, than all the rest of my Hardships and Sufferings, which will ever be the Case of a Man well born, having an honest Heart, a Soldier, and a Man of Honour. Such a Man can ill bear Reproach and Disgrace, not having deserved it, and to whom his good Name and Fame must be ever dearer, and by him held in much greater Esteem, than any other Thing in Life, nay, even than Life itself. And the Author being old, as before mentioned, and (as he doth hereby frankly own) unlearned, and not skilled in Letters, having chiefly been trained up in War, and not much in Scholarship, he humbly hopes the same may in some Measure plead his Excuse for such defective Words as may be found in this his short Narrative; and for the Plainness and Uncorrectness of its Stile. Untruths or Misrepresentations there are none in it, to the best of his Knowledge and Memory; nor hath he intentionally, or at all, to the best of his Judgment, herein reflected upon any Person whomsoever in any wise, or upon the Power, Justice, or Wisdom of the several Parliaments, by whose renewed Acts, from time to time, his Confinement in Prison hath been spun out to so great a Length; nor upon the Courts of Justice, and learned Judges presiding therein, who have had the several Opportunities beforementioned of discharging or bailing him according to Law, further or otherwise than as any Reflection upon any of them, from the particular Facts by him herein plainly, truly, and impartially stated, may naturally and unavoidably arise and result.

One very great Misfortune it hath been to the Author, and the last that he will trouble his Reader withal; and which would scarce, in the Case of another, be deemed a Misfortune, but rather on the contrary be esteemed a very great Blessing, viz. That he hath lived to so great an advanced Old Age, which most People would naturally desire to do, Life, generally speaking, being sweet, and the very Thoughts of Death abhorrent and shocking to Nature; though Death, when all other Friends fail, is most certainly a kind and sure Friend and Deliverer in Time of Need, from Chains and Goals, an Hell upon Earth: But to explain and make out, that the Author's having lived so long hath been a Misfortune to him, the same is verified in this, that he hath thereby survived almost all his Cotemporaries, Friends, and Acquaintance, who have contributed to his Support. And it is now too late in the Day, and under Confinement, for him to hope or expect to make any new Acquaintance or Friends, whereby he may reap any Advantage or Assistance under his present difficult Circumstances, unless this his little Tract may perchance make him some Friends among the good-natured, generous, and charitable Part of Mankind, who shall not be void of all Sense, Notion and Fellow-Feeling of another's Suffering; nor be perfect Strangers to all Humanity, Pity, Commiseration and Compassion; nor profane that sacred Petition in the Lord's Prayer, viz. Forgive us our Trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us; as it is to be feared many do, by having it in their Mouths, when they themselves, with hardened Hearts, cannot forgive even the Innocent and Guiltless, who have not trespassed against them. And so the Author concludes with bidding his Reader heartily farewel; and in Attestation of the Truth of what he has writ, he takes the Freedom to subscribe his Name.

Newgate,
March 1, 1728. JOHN BERNARDI.

He died at his Chambers in the Press-Yard in Newgate, the latter End of September 1736, in the 82d Year of his Age, having been a State-Prisoner about forty Years in that Goal, without Trial or any Allowance from the Government.

Salisbury-Court, after the Play ended, a great Crowd happening upon their coming out, and Sir James endeavouring to make Way for his Children with his Cane, gently moving it, happened to push Mr. Porter on the Back; who asked, What the Meaning of it was? But Sir James, as he designed him no Affront, took no Notice of what he said; and still pressing for more Room, accidentally hit Mr. Porter on the Nose or Mouth, and made it bleed; upon which the Prisoner supposing himself to be affronted, and jostled or brushed by the Deceased, (who had the Cane still in his Hand) drew his Sword, and, without further Consideration, run the Deceased into the Thigh, so that the Weapon appeared both Ways, cutting likewise his Fingers, whilst he struggled to draw it forth; whereupon the Prisoner recovered his Sword, (the Deceased at that Time sinking down) but had no further Opportunity to push at Sir James, ere it was seized by a Gentleman present; whereat the Prisoner expressed much Indignation, and getting it once more at Liberty, stood upon his Guard, saying, He had served one already as he had deserved, or to that Effect; yet the Deceased, after the Wound received, went Home in a Coach, and lived till the 26th following, and then died in the Parish of St. Martin's in the Fields.——The Defence the Prisoner made, was, That he had received a Push in the Mouth, as he verily believed, from the Deceased, and by that Means became so rashly unfortunate, as to run him through the Thigh; adding, That he knew not the Person that fell through this Occasion, and therefore could have no premeditated Malice against him, &c. whereupon the Jury returning their Verdict, found him guilty of Manslaughter only; by which Means he was not found guilty upon the Statute of Stabbing; upon which Statute he was charged with a second Indictment: But the next Heir brought an Appeal. At the next Sessions, held the 16th and 17th of January, 1684, Mr. Porter prayed the Court, that he might be admitted to his Clergy; but was answered, That an Appeal being already brought and allowed, it could not be granted. Then he desired he might have his Prayer recorded; but that not being practicable in such Cases, he was only admitted to Bail, himself entering into a Recognizance of 1000 l. and his Sureties 500 l. each; and ordered to move it by his Counsel the succeeding Term, at the King's-Bench Bar. Though at the next Sessions held at the Old-Bailey, the 25th of February following, Mr. Porter pleaded his Majesty's most gracious Pardon for killing Sir James Hacket, which was read and allowed, and he discharged †.

This Captain Porter, as a Reward for giving Evidence against Charnock, King, and Keys (his Servant), Sir John Friend, Sir William Perkins, Brigadier Rookwood, Mr. Cranburne, Sir John Fenwick, &c. had a Pension settled on him of 260 l. per Annum, which he enjoyed till about June 1728: For the Probate of the Will of this George Porter, late of the Parish of St. James's, Westminster, Esq. was granted in the Prerogative-Court of Canterbury, July 4, 1728, unto Elizabeth Porter, his Widow and Executrix; so entered in the Pension-Office Books, and in Auditor Harley's and Auditor Foley's Office, July 1728. Captain Fisher had likewise a Pension of 260 l. per Annum for being an Evidence in that Plot, as had others, but less Sums.

† Captain Porter, in Rookwood's Trial, Vol. IV. p. 681, was excepted against by the Prisoner's Counsel, as incapable of being a Witness, standing convicted of Felony, for killing Sir James Hacket, Knt. 36 Car. II. But having got the King's Pardon, was allowed a legal Witness, though not burnt in the Hand. See Vol. IV. p. 681, for Dangerfield's and other Cases quoted there.

NUMBER XI.

Proceedings against William Gregg *, at the Old-Bailey, 19th January, 1707-8, for High Treason, before Lord Chief Justice Holt, and other Judges.

THE Post-Master of Bruſſels diſcovered a Correſpondence between Mr. Secretary Harley's Office and the French, and communicated his Knowledge to the Government here; whereupon Mr. William Gregg, a Clerk in that Office, was taken into Cuſtody of a Meſſenger, and, after ſeveral Examinations before the Council, was committed to Newgate; and on the 19th of January was indicted of High Treaſon for compaſſing the Death of the Queen, and alſo for adhering to her Enemies. The Indictment imported, "That he had ſent Letters to Monſieur Chamillard, one of the French King's Prime Miniſters, particularly one dated the 28th of November laſt, and others, wherein were "incloſed the Proceedings of both Houſes of Parliament, in relation "to the Augmentation of our Forces; alſo a Copy of a Letter from "the Queen to the Emperor, and Copies of private Buſineſs ſent to "the Duke of Savoy, &c." To which Indictment Gregg pleaded Guilty; and the Recorder pronounced Sentence of Death upon him †. Whereupon the Houſe of Lords took into Conſideration this Affair, and appointed the following Committee to examine him:

The Duke of Somerſet,
The Duke of Devonſhire,
The Duke of Bolton,
Earl of Wharton,
Lord Viſc. Townſhend,
Lord Halifax,
Lord Somers.

Die Jovis 18 Martii, 1707.

WE Your Majeſty's moſt dutiful and obedient Subjects, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament aſſembled, having been informed, That William Gregg, a Clerk in the Office of the late Secretary Mr. Harley, had been indicted for High Treaſon, in holding Correſpondence with your Majeſty's Enemies, and betraying to them Secrets of the higheſt Importance; and that upon his Trial he had confeſſed the Indictment, and by that Means had prevented the Examinations, whereby the Public might have been truly informed of the particular Nature and Circumſtances of his Crime; we thought ourſelves indiſpenſibly obliged, in Duty to Your Majeſty, and for the future Safety of the Kingdom, to do all that was in our Power to find out the Riſe and Progreſs of this dangerous Correſpondence.

In order thereto we made our humble Addreſs to Your Majeſty for all Papers relating to the Charge againſt William Gregg; and Your Majeſty having been graciouſly pleaſed to give Orders, that the Papers ſhould be laid before us, we referred thoſe Papers to a Committee, and directed them to examine Gregg, and to report the ſaid Examination to the Houſe, as alſo what they obſerved upon the Papers, together with ſuch other Matters as they ſhould think proper, upon their Inquiry into the ſaid Affair: And the Report having been made, and taken into Conſideration by the Houſe, we humbly conceive it to be very highly for Your Service to lay the ſame before Your Majeſty ‡.

Report concerning Gregg.

The Houſe having appointed a Committee to examine William Gregg, who is a Priſoner in Newgate, convicted for High Treaſon; and having alſo been pleaſed to refer to the ſame Committee ſeveral Papers, which, upon the humble Addreſs of the Houſe, had been laid before your Lordſhips by Her Majeſty's Command, do humbly take Leave to inform the Houſe, That the Effect of the ſeveral Papers referred to the Committee is as follows.

I. A Copy of Gregg's Letter, which was intercepted, dated the 28th of November, 1707, O. S. ſent to Mr. Chamillard, incloſed in a Pacquet from Marechal Tallard, directed to Mr. Robineau, his Steward, at Paris.

In this Gregg ſends to Mr. Chamillard a Copy of the Queen's Letter, written with her own Hand to the Emperor.

In the ſame Letter, Gregg takes Notice of two Letters ſent by him to Mr. Chamillard, the one dated the 24th, the other the 28th of October laſt, which he underſtood Robineau had put into his Hands.

That perceiving by Robineau's Letter to his Maſter, that Mr. Chamillard deſired to know the Marechal's Sentiments of Gregg, Gregg had himſelf written to him.

In Expectation of his Anſwer, Gregg flattered himſelf that the Paper then ſent was of that Importance, that there could be no longer Doubt of the Devotedneſs of a Scottiſhman for France; not to ſpeak of his Zeal for the Service of his Prince, who had found Refuge there.

That the Lines under which he had drawn a Stroke, were the Thoughts of the Lord Treaſurer, which he had added with his own Hand to the firſt Draught of the Letter.

The ſame Letter contained ſome other News.

II. There was a Copy of a Letter, dated the 25th of November, O. S. in the ſame Pacquet, ſubſcribed William Gregg; in which Notice is taken of what Robineau writes to Mr. Tallard concerning him, and that he himſelf had written to the Marechal, and deſired Robineau to deliver the incloſed according to the Addreſs, as being of great Conſequence.

III. The Copy of a Letter from Marechal Tallard to Robineau, dated the 10th of December, N. S. in which Mr. Tallard ſays, That as to the Letters of which Robineau made Mention in his of the 25th and 28th of November, that he had delivered them according to the Addreſs. Mr. Tallard knew nothing of their Contents, but by the ſame Poſt which brought his Letters.

That he was obliged for the Offers, but could make no Uſe of them while he was a Priſoner. When the Peace was made, he would give Proof of his Acknowledgment to him who made the Offers, and would endeavour to engage the Perſon to whom the Letters were addreſſed to do the ſame. In the Interim Robineau was to tell the Perſon to whom he delivered the Letters, for whom the Marechal had the utmoſt Conſideration, That he was much obliged to him for deſiring to know his Thoughts, before he would determine what to do; that the Offers made did not ſuit with the preſent Time, at leaſt as to him, &c.

IV. An original Letter of the 2d of December, 1707, to Mr. Robineau, from Gregg, to felicitate him for being delivered from an importunate Man, as would appear by Marechal Tallard's Letter, unleſs his laſt to Mr. Chamillard had not made him determine otherwiſe.

V. Copy of another Letter of Gregg to Mr. Chamillard, dated the 23d of December, O. S. which was alſo taken in Marechal Tallard's Pacquet, in which he pretends to give Mr. Chamillard an Account of what paſſed in Parliament, with the Queen's Anſwer to the Addreſs of the Two Houſes, and his Excuſe for not ſending the Addreſs itſelf.

VI. A Letter of Robineau to Mr. Tallard, 26th December, N. S. from Paris, (tranſcribed by Gregg in his own Hand) in which he ſays, he was going to Verſailles to deliver the Anſwer with which he was charged; that he received every Poſt Letters from the ſame Perſon, and that he took care to deliver them according to the Addreſs.

VII. Another of the 30th December, 1707, N. S. that he had been to deliver, as Mr. Tallard had charged him, the Anſwer which was deſired of Mr. Tallard.

VIII. Another Letter in Gregg's Hand, dated the 30th December, 1707, found in Gregg's Cloſet, written to Mr. Chamillard, giving an Account of the Intention to ſend Mr. Palmes to Savoy, and to take ſeveral other German Courts in his Way.

IX. A Confeſſion of Gregg, delivered to the Lords of the Committee, and ſigned by him.

On Thurſday the 12th of this Inſtant February, the Committee appointed by your Lordſhips went to Newgate, in order to examine William Gregg.

They acquainted him with your Lordſhips Order, and told him, That as the Crime of which he ſtood attainted was of the moſt heinous Nature, ſo there were ſome Circumſtances ſo extraordinary, which attended his Caſe, that the Houſe of Lords thought it might be of Service to her

* This Affair of Gregg's having made a great Noiſe in the World at that Time, and many People at this Time quite unacquainted with it, and being quoted by Mr. Juſtice Foſter and others, we ſhall give an Account of it from the beſt Authorities.

† "Biſhop Burnet, in his Hiſtory of his own Times, Vol. II. p. 494—497, ſays, "At this Time Diſcoveries were made very unlucky for Mr. Harley: One Gregg, a Clerk, "whom Mr. Harley had taken into a particular Confidence, without Inquiry into the former Part of his Life, for he was a vicious and a neceſſitous Perſon, who had been "Secretary to the Queen's Envoy in Denmark, but diſmiſſed for his ill Qualities. The Lords, who were appointed to examine Gregg, could not find much out by him: "He had but newly begun his Deſign of betraying Secrets; and he had no Aſſociates with him in it. He told them, that all the Papers of State lay ſo carelеſsly about "the Office, that every one belonging to it, even the Door-keepers, might have read them all. Harley's Cuſtom was to come to the Office late on Poſt-Nights, and after "he had given his Orders, and wrote his Letters, he uſually went away, and left all to be copied out when he was gone. By that Means he came to ſee every Thing, in "particular the Queen's Letter to the Emperor. The Lords ordered the Report and Examinations to be laid before the Queen in an Addreſs, in which they repreſented "to her the Neceſſity of making Gregg a public Example: Upon which he was executed. He continued to clear all other Perſons of any Acceſſion to his Crimes, of "which he ſeemed very ſenſible, and died much better than he had lived."

Judge Foſter, in his Reports, p. 198, takes Notice, "That the Papers found in Lord Preſton's Cuſtody, thoſe found where Mr. Layer had lodged them, the intercepted "Letters of Doctor Henzey, were all read in Evidence as Overt-Acts of the Treaſon reſpectively charged on them. And William Gregg's intercepted Letters might in like "Manner have been read in Evidence, if he had put himſelf upon his Trial. For thoſe Papers and Letters were written in Proſecution of certain determinate Purpoſes, "which were all treaſonable, and then in Contemplation of the Offenders, and were plainly connected with them. But Papers not capable of ſuch Connection, while they "remain in the Hands of the Author unpubliſhed, as Mr. Sidney's did, will not make a Man a Traitor. Lord Hale (1 Hale, p. 119—125.) mentioneth two Circumſtances as "concurring to make Words reduced to Writing Overt-Acts of Compaſſing the King's Death, That they be publiſhed, and that they import ſuch Compaſſing.

"Sending Intelligence to Rebels or Enemies, which in moſt Caſes is the moſt effectual Aid that can be given them, will make a Man a Traitor, (except what is done in "caſe of ſuperior Force) though the Intelligence ſhould happen to be intercepted; for the Party in ſending did all he could; Treaſon was complete on his Part, though it "had not the Effect he intended. So ruled by the Judges aſſembled in the Caſe of William Gregg, Meſſ. Tracy, Dod, Price, and Deaton: and by the Court of B. R. Trin. "31 of the late King, in the Caſe of Dr. Henzey." Foſter, p. 217. And p. 218, adds,

"For Gregg was indicted for Compaſſing the Death of the Queen, and alſo for Adhering to her Enemies; and Henzey's Indictment was in the ſame Form; and ſo was Lord "Preſton's. And the Writing and Sending the Letters of Intelligence, which in the Caſe of Gregg and Henzey were ſtopped at the Poſt-Office, was laid as an Overt-Act "of both the Species of Treaſon. So that, admitting for Argument's Sake, which is by no Means admitted, that it was not an Overt-Act of Adhering, ſince the Letters "never came to the Enemy's Hands, and conſequently no Aid or Comfort was actually given; yet the bare Writing and Sending them to the Poſt-Office, in order to be "delivered to the Enemy, was undoubtedly an Overt-Act of the other Species of Treaſon. In Gregg's Caſe the Judges did reſolve, that it was an Overt-Act of both the "Species of Treaſon charged on him. And in Henzey's, the Court adopted that Opinion, and cited it with Approbation.

"Though the Caſes of theſe Men were in Subſtance the ſame, the Charge againſt them varied in one Particular. Gregg's Indictment chargeth, that the Letters were "ſent from the Place where the Venue is laid, into Parts beyond the Seas (in Partes tranſmarinas) to be delivered to the Enemy. Henzey's, with much greater Propriety, "and agreeable to the Truth of the Caſe, chargeth, that the Letters were ſent from the Place where the Venue is laid, to be delivered in Parts beyond the Seas to the Enemy. "As the Letters never went abroad, this was undoubtedly the ſafer Way of laying the Charge."

‡ Die Martis, 23 Martii, 1707. It is ordered by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament aſſembled, That the Addreſs of this Houſe, and the Reports therein contained, with the ſeveral Examinations annexed, preſented to Her Majeſty Yeſterday, and Her Majeſty's moſt gracious Anſwer thereunto, ſhall be forthwith printed and publiſhed.

Matth. Johnson, Cler' Parliamentor'.

her Majesty and the Kingdom, to have all the Beginning and Progress of his treasonable Correspondence fully laid open; that her Majesty, upon the Application of the House, had ordered all former Examinations and Papers concerning him to be laid before them.

They told him farther, That if he, by a true, ingenuous and full Confession, would deserve it, he might have Ground to hope the House of Lords might intercede in his Behalf for Mercy from her Majesty, which otherwise he had no Reason to look for.

He was also told, That being a Man of Understanding, he was not to expect to be asked Questions, but was to give an Account of himself, when, and how he became first employed, when and by what Instigation he was drawn in to correspond with the Queen's Enemies, and how far it proceeded.

He said, That one Mr. Gregg, the late King's Resident at Copenhagen, was his Kinsman, and sent for him thither, and he continued with him about three Years, till his Death, which happened about two Months before the late King died.

That Mr. Vernon was sent Envoy to Denmark, and took him, whom he found there, into his Service, in which he continued about two Years and an half, and then he was discharged from his Service by Mr. Vernon.

Mr. Vernon coming for England about his private Affairs, while Gregg was in his Service, and staying here some Time, in that Interval Gregg received some Letters from Mr. Secretary Harley, which gave him Occasion after to apply to him.

The 9th of December 1704, Gregg came to England, and soon made Application to Mr. Secretary Harley for Employment, but was not recommended to him by any body.

The 3d of January he saw him first at his Office, where he attended often.

The 5th of February, 170$\frac{4}{5}$, Mr. Jones, the Secretary's First Clerk, came to him, and told him, the Secretary would speak with him. He attended on the Secretary the same Day, who asked him, If he would be willing to be employed in his own Country? Gregg said, He was willing to be sent upon any good Errand. Mr. Secretary told him, It was to give an Account of the Proceedings of the ensuing Parliament, which was to be held under the Duke of Argyle.

The 6th of February he went to the Office, and Mr. Secretary told him, he should be dispatched in a few Days.

To make some Trial of him (as he supposed) Mr. Secretary asked him, If he could give an Account of the Court of Denmark? Gregg said, He was willing to do it as well as he could; and accordingly, in some Time, he drew up a State of that Court, and it was not disapproved.

He attended daily; and on the 20th of April Mr. Secretary Harley gave him a Note of 20 l. to be paid by his Steward in Scotland-Yard.

On the 23d of May, 1705, he was ordered to go for Scotland, and about a Week after set forwards on his Journey. When he was dispatched, a Note of 30 l. was given to him.

Mr. Secretary always amused him, with telling him, he should have Instructions for his Directions in Scotland; but at last ordered him to draw up some Queries himself about the State of Affairs in Scotland, which he did, and they were approved.

Some of the Queries were, What were the Designs of the several Parties? What Correspondence between the Highlands and St. Germain's? How affected to the House of Hanover? &c.

He was also ordered to form a Cypher of Letters, whereby to design the Great Men there.

The 2d of June, 1705, he arrived at Edinburgh, and wrote to Mr. Secretary the Thursday following, being ordered to direct all his Letters to Thomas Bateman, in Scotland-Yard.

Mr. Secretary promised the Receipt of his Letters should be acknowledged, and he pressed often for it, to know they came to Hand, fearing his Letters were intercepted, because he was suspected as a Spy in that Country; but though he wrote thrice a-Week, he never heard one Word from Mr. Secretary, or by his Order, during his whole Stay in that Country. Being asked by the Lords, If he was recommended to any body in Scotland? he answered, No.

The 15th of October he arrived at London, and the next Day waited on Mr. Secretary, who thanked him for his Letters, and told him, he had named him to the Queen, upon Occasion of a Paper he had sent: But Gregg said, He believed the Queen had never heard of his Name, till this last unhappy Accident.

On the 29th of October Mr. Secretary ordered him 25 l.

He attended daily, and pressed much to be sent abroad, particularly to go with Mr. Methuen when he was sent to Savoy, but it was declined.

On New-Year's-Day Mr. Secretary dropped a Word which startled him much: He told him, he would fix him; which Gregg understood was bringing him into his Office.

Upon this he presented a Petition, that he might not be in the Office, because the Salary was small; and being in Debt, he could not live on it.

He attended every Day. The Secretary inquired of him, What he knew of Languages? He said, he knew some French and German, but knew Latin better than either.

The 16th of April, 1706, he was admitted into the Office, and a Note was given upon Mr. Jones, as for one of the Clerks; and Mr. Secretary told him, it was only to keep his Hand in Use, and that he would provide better for him.

The 16th of May, copying a Letter sent to Mr. Vernon, That he was to consider of Somebody fit to be left behind, Gregg thought it to be intended in his Favour, and wrote to Mr. Vernon on that Occasion, desiring his Countenance.

But the 28th of May, Mr. Secretary writing Word to Mr. Vernon, That he had Leave to come at his own Time, but must leave Somebody behind; and this being wrote before any Answer could come from thence, Gregg saw nothing was meant for him in the former Letter.

Gregg made Offers of Service to Mr. Pulteney when he was to go; but he said, he was provided.

Then he told Mr. Secretary, his Mind was depressed by his Debts, and desired to be thrown abroad, and to go with Sir Philip Meadows; but that was refused, and Strahan was sent.

Then Mr. Secretary asked, What would make him easy? And he gave in a List of his Debts, amounting to about 35 l.

Since that, Mr. Secretary has ordered him at several Times about 20 or 25 l. in the whole; the last Sum was 7 l. in October last, Part of a Bill of 14 l. for which Debt he was pressed at that Time.

Being asked by the Lords, If his Debts only made him so desirous to be gone? he said, At the Rate Business was managed in the Office, it was a perfect Drudgery.

Their Business seldom began till about Eleven or Twelve at Night, and they stayed till Two or Three, or later; though sometimes not above two Letters to dispatch, and he thought himself happiest who could get away soonest.

The Method was, First, the Letters were taken in Short-hand, afterwards wrote fair, then sent to Mr. Secretary's House to be signed, and after returned to the Office to be entered; so that they were obliged sometimes to stay till Four o'Clock in the Morning.

He said, That in April last, when Hill the Messenger was sent to Turin, the Pacquet was left to him, though the youngest Clerk, to be made up, and delivered to the Messenger.

In that Pacquet there was a Letter to Sir John Norris, and another to Mr. Chetwynd, most of the last Letter was in Cypher; Gregg entered both those Letters. There was also another Letter to Sir Cloudesly Shovell, and Letters from the Lord Treasurer. He put them all up in the Pacquet, and after gave them to Hill.

Being asked, If he knew by the Letters what the Design was? Gregg said, he understood Thoulon was to be besieged: He could not read the whole, but knew enough to find out that. He said, it was wrote in the Cypher of the other Office by Mr. Harley, the Earl of Sunderland being sick at that Time.

The Queen's Letters de Cachet are made up before they are brought to the Office, but the Clerks are trusted to make up other Letters.

The Lords Committees required him to give the whole Relation of his Correspondence, when it began, and how long it had been carried on.

Gregg said, the first Motive of his writing to France was in order to get Money, by obtaining a Pass, and that his first Letter was the 24th of October last.

From his first entering into the Office, he had always a great Hand in perusing the French Prisoners Letters: That convenient Opportunity, and his Poverty, gave him the Temptation.

The French Prisoners Letters came under a general Cover, directed to Mr. Lewis. Marechal Tallard's Letters are under a flying Seal, the rest of them come always sealed, but are opened at the Office.

Generally Mr. Lewis threw them down on the Table, and left the perusing them to the Clerks, to Mr. Mann and Gregg; and since Mr. Mann left the Office, they have been trusted wholly to Gregg.

If Gregg observed any Thing that he thought material, he made an Extract of it, and shewed it to the Secretary or Under-Secretary. He mentioned a particular Extract he had made out of a Letter of Mr. Chamillard's to Marechal Tallard.

Letters came from Nottingham every Post; sometimes twenty Letters came to them in a Day from France: Those came always sealed. From the Time he came into the Office, these Letters were never perused either by the Secretary or Under-Secretary, which he is sure of, because they were sealed when he looked on them. He cannot for that Reason say, but Mr. Lewis might sometimes look in Marechal Tallard's Letter, because that had a flying Seal; but the rest were left sealed, as they came by Mr. Lewis, to the Clerks Perusal.

Gregg said, he had a Dispute with Mr. Lewis upon the account of these Letters; Gregg declaring, he thought it not to be a Business fit for the Under-Clerks to be trusted with.

Mr. Secretary Harley wrote a Letter in Answer to one from Mr. Pontchartrain, thanking him for his Civility to one Middleton.

In transcribing it, Gregg found it so ill-turned, and the French so bad, that he acquainted the Secretary with it at Eleven o'Clock at Night in October last. This Letter was stopped, and lay a Month in the Office; but after Mr. Lewis sent it away as it was wrote at first.

The rough Draught of the Queen's Letter to the Emperor, as it was altered by the Lord-Treasurer, was left in the Public Book of the Office, to be entered, the same Night it was to be sent away: There, Gregg said, he found it and transcribed it, and any other Clerk of the Office might have done it as well as he.

All the Books in the Office lie in a Press, the Key is always in the Door, and not only the Clerks, but the Chamber-keepers may have Access.

All Letters, except those wrote to the Duke of Marlborough, are entered in the Books, but those are only copied in loose Sheets. Gregg said, he had copied many of those.

The Draught of the Queen's Letter to the Emperor was prepared by Mr. Lewis; it was then written in the Hand of Mr. Thomas, Mr. Harley's Domestic Clerk. The Addition was in the Lord Treasurer's own Hand. Mr. Mann saw it as well Gregg. Mann said to Gregg, that what was added by the Lord Treasurer, was much the brightest Part of the Letter.

Gregg said, he sent all his Letters to France under the Cover to Mr. Robineau: He owned he sent the Copy of the Queen's Letter to Mr. Chamillard the same Night the Queen's Letter was dispatched to the Emperor.

Gregg said farther, That the Letter in the Queen's own Hand was given to Gregg by Mr. Secretary himself about One o'Clock at Night, and he was solely intrusted to put it up in Sir Philip Meadows's Pacquet, after every body had left the Office.

Ribineau, in his Letter to Gregg, took Notice, That he had delivered his Letters to Mr. Chamillard, and that Mr. Chamillard sent to advise with Marechal Tallard upon Gregg's Proposal.

Upon this, Gregg wrote a Letter to Marechal Tallard, of which he said he had no Copy, but pretended to repeat the Words of the Letter to the Lords Committees.

The Lords Committees told Gregg, it would be expected by the House, that he should be very clear and particular in declaring by what Advice or Encouragement he firſt began ſuch a Correſpondence. He ſaid, By none at all: He was tempted to it by the Devil, and the Hopes of getting Money.

He ſaid, That upon hearing a French Perriwig-maker was committed to Newgate for High Treaſon, he had deſired to be admitted again to the Lords of the Cabinet-Council.

But he would not own that he knew the Man; but ſaid, he had ſince heard his Name was Valiere or Clarke; he was told ſo by a Gentlewoman who came to ſee him ſince his Condemnation.

He ſaid, he held no Correſpondence in England, but only in ſending the Common Letter of the Office, with other printed News-papers, to ſome Gentlemen.

Gregg ſaid, he had been long acquainted with one Crookſhanks, who promiſed him, that if he would procure a French Paſs, he ſhould have two hundred Guineas; and Gregg undertook to procure the Paſs.

The firſt Time he wrote to Mr. Chamillard was the 24th of October laſt.

Brown a Merchant, Father-in-law to Crookſhanks, and one Bollinger a Merchant, were acquainted with this Agreement about the Paſs, and they dined together at Brown's Houſe; and Brown undertook for the Money, if the Paſs could be procured.

Gregg ſaid, he acquainted Bollinger of his having ſent a Copy of the Queen's Letter to Mr. Chamillard, at the Croſs-Keys Tavern in Covent-Garden, and ſhewed him Extracts of Marechal Tallard's and Robineau's Letters. He ſaid alſo that he read the Extracts of their Letters at another Time in Engliſh to Brown and Crookſhanks.

The Lords Committees aſked him, To what End he told Bollinger of what he had done, in ſending the Queen's Letter to Mr. Chamillard? He only ſaid, It was downright Madneſs.

The Lords Committees aſked him, If any body came to him? He ſaid, one Mr. Arbuthnot came to him, and Nobody elſe, and his Buſineſs was to bring him Charity.

The Lords Committees aſked Mr. Gregg, If he had no more to acquaint their Lordſhips with? He ſaid, No: And being told by them that it concerned him very much to conſider of it; that the Lords obſerved he had told them nothing but what he knew they had Means in their Hands to be fully informed of, without his ſaying any thing; and how hard it would be for the Houſe of Lords to believe that he would venture upon ſuch a Correſpondence, without ſome Support or Encouragement; he perſiſted in it, that he had no more to ſay.

As the Lords Committees were riſen up, and had called for the Keeper to take Mr. Gregg away, he took a brown Paper out of his Pocket, which was ſealed up, and took out of it a Paper, which he ſaid he had prepared againſt the Queen's Birth-day, and deſired the Lords to read it. It purported to be a Petition to the Houſe of Commons. He pretended he knew not how to get it delivered, becauſe he concluded all the Papers ſent by him would be delivered to Mr. Secretary Harley.

The Lords finding the Paper to be addreſſed to the Houſe of Commons, told him, It was not proper for them to receive it, and delivered it immediately back to him again.

The Lords Committees, as they went away, told Gregg, That if he would recollect himſelf, and ſet down in Writing any thing that he thought might be for his own Service, or of Uſe to the Queen and her Government, he might ſend it to them, and the Keeper ſhould have Directions to convey it ſafely.

The next Morning Gregg ſent a Letter to the Lords Committees, which, as ſoon as they had peruſed, they returned to him again by a Gentleman, with the following Meſſage:

" The Lords of the Committee have ordered me to return this Paper " to you, they being of Opinion that it is not material to the Examina- " tion for which they were ſent to you by the Houſe."

The Lords Committees think themſelves obliged to acquaint the Houſe, That they did not obſerve Gregg to be under any Diſorder or Terror from the Apprehenſion or Senſe of his Danger.

The Indictment of Gregg for his treaſonable Correſpondence with her Majeſty's Enemies, was brought before the Lords Committees, which Indictment he confeſſed upon his Trial, and Judgment was thereupon given againſt him.

The Lords Committees do think it their Duty to acquaint the Houſe, That they having been informed by means of the Keeper of Newgate, that one William Gregg had been formerly in Newgate, and indicted for counterfeiting the Coin of the Kingdom, and that it was talked amongſt the Turnkeys in the Priſon, that this was the ſame Man; they ſent to ſearch the Books in Newgate, and found there, That in May 1697, William Gregg and Elizabeth Gregg were indicted for counterfeiting the Coin. Thereupon they ſent for Mr. Tanner, who has the Cuſtody of thoſe Records; he brought the Indictment before them, and it appeared that Elizabeth Gregg was found guilty and executed, but that William Gregg was acquitted; and that Thomas Holloway and Simon Newport were the Witneſſes at the Trial, who, as was ſaid, are both dead ſince that Time.

But one Thomas Kinſerley and James Biddle declaring, That they both knew that Gregg, who was then indicted, very well, and believed they ſhould know him again if they ſaw him; the Lords Committees ſent them ſeverally to ſee William Gregg now in Newgate, and they both of them did declare, That they believed, and were confident, that the ſame Perſon now in Newgate was the ſame William Gregg who was then indicted, and whoſe ſuppoſed Wife was then found guilty, and burnt; and they did both of them voluntarily make Oath to this Effect, and James Biddle ſwore, That after the Trial, the Diſcourſe in the Neighbourhood was, that Elizabeth Gregg took the whole Matter upon herſelf at the Trial.

Their two Affidavits are laid before your Lordſhips.

After one of theſe Perſons had been to ſee William Gregg, William Gregg wrote a Letter, directed to the Lords of the Committee, in which he did very poſitively deny that he was the Perſon who had been tried for Coining in May 1697.

May it pleaſe your moſt Excellent Majeſty,

WE Your Majeſty's moſt dutiful Subjects, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament aſſembled, having entered into a ſerious Conſideration of the ſaid Report, have unanimouſly come to the following Reſolution thereupon:

That it is our Opinion, That the Crime of which William Gregg ſtands attainted, is of ſo heinous a Nature, and attended with ſuch extraordinary Circumſtances, that it may prove of very pernicious Conſequence, if he ſhould not be made an Example.

May it pleaſe Your Majeſty,

IT is Your Majeſty's Glory, and the Happineſs of Europe, that You are at the Head of one of the greateſt Confederacies that ever was known in Hiſtory; and it is the common Concern of the whole Alliance, that Your Councils ſhould be kept with the ſtricteſt Secrecy: But in the Papers now laid before You, Your Majeſty will be pleaſed to obſerve, That ſome of your Reſolutions of the greateſt Moment, and that required the utmoſt Secrecy, have been ſent to Your Enemies by the ſame Poſt they were diſpatched to the Allies; That all the Papers in Mr. Secretary Harley's Office have, for a conſiderable Time, been expoſed to the View even of the meaneſt Clerks in that Office; and that the Peruſal of all the Letters to and from the French Priſoners was chiefly truſted to Gregg, a Perſon of a very ſuſpicious Character, and known to be extremely indigent. It is not eaſily to be known what ill Conſequence may have attended ſuch Negligence, but we depend upon it, that theſe Matters being thus plainly laid open to Your Majeſty, we ſhall be ſecured againſt any Dangers of this Nature for the future.

Her MAJESTY's Moſt Gracious Anſwer.

My Lords,

I AM ſorry that any who have been employed by thoſe in my Service ſhould have proved falſe to their Truſt, and injurious to the Public.

The Examples you lay before Me, will, I do not doubt, be a ſufficient Warning to keep all Matters of Importance as ſecret as may be, and to employ ſuch only as there ſhall be good Grounds to believe will be faithful.

Gregg lay one hundred Days under Sentence before he was executed: But a few Years after Mr. Francis Hoffman (a Perſon of ſome Note) wrote thus in a Pamphlet to the Public *.

" I Was abroad at the Time of Mr. Gregg's Trial which has made ſo much " Noiſe; and the great Eſteem People had of the Duke of Marlborough " on account of his glorious Succeſſes, ſoccaſioned them to think very " hardly of the Honourable Mr. Robert Harley, then one of the Secre- " taries of State, when they heard his Grace would have laid down, un- " leſs the other was removed; and Mr. Harley having been reflected on, " ever ſince he was made a Peer and Lord Treaſurer, on Gregg's Account, " I thought myſelf obliged by Truth and Juſtice, to give the following " Account, as I received it from Mr. Lorrain, a Man of Character; and " Mr. Lorrain did, in a moſt ſolemn Manner, declare to me, not only his " being fully convinced of Mr. Harley's Innocence, but told me of ſo " many Endeavours to corrupt Gregg's Conſcience, not only with re- " peated Offers of Life, but of great Preferments and Advantages.

" It is apparent from hence, that ſome Perſons ſtabbed as directly and " villainouſly at Mr. Harley's Life then, as Guiſcard did ſince. I have " printed, and cauſed to be publiſhed, a true Copy of a Letter written to " me by Mr. Lorrain himſelf of what relates to Mr. Gregg, while " he was under Mr. Lorrain's Care, with Gregg's dying Speech, and " am, &c.

" FRANCIS HOFFMAN."

A true Copy of the Ordinary of Newgate, the Reverend Mr. Paul Lorrain's Letter to Francis Hoffman.

" My good Friend,

" WHEN you were with me Yeſterday, you know I was in Haſte " to go to St. Andrew's, and could not, for that Reaſon, give you " the Account you then deſired; but promiſed it you againſt this Morn- " ing.

" That I may be as good as my Word, I have (being now engaged " in Buſineſs from Home) left this to refreſh your Memory, in what I " once, and more than once, told you about Mr. William Gregg.

" When that unfortunate Perſon was under Sentence of Death for " High Treaſon, I (according to the Duty of my Place) conſtantly viſited " him, prayed with him, examined him, and applied ſuch Directions " and Exhortations to him, as I thought moſt ſuitable for the well- " diſpoſing him, and preparing him for another World.

" I found him to be a Man of Parts, and very ſenſible of his heinous " Crime, which he readily confeſſed, and for which he expreſſed great " Horror, Sorrow and Repentance.

" I often preſſed him to diſcover who (if any) were concerned with " him in that Treaſonable Fact.

" And preſſed him alſo, (in an eſpecial Manner, upon his eternal Sal- " vation, and as he ſhould anſwer it at the great Tribunal of God) freely " to tell me, whether Mr. Harley did know any thing of it, or was any " ways concerned, or to be concerned in it.

" To which he anſwered me, with the greateſt and ſolemneſt Aſſeve- " ration and Proteſtation imaginable, (he being all the while upon his " Knees, and calling the great God to Witneſs) That that Honourable " Gentleman, Mr. Robert Harley, knew nothing of it, neither was to " know, nor to be concerned in it.

" Which he having ſaid, and often repeated to me, I then grew jealous " of thoſe People that frequently came to him, who (as he told me) were " ſo far from offering him any thing to quiet his Conſcience, that on " the contrary, they gave a great Diſturbance to it.

" It ſeems that among the reſt, ſome Friends of that Honourable Gen- " tleman's coming to ſee this Priſoner, I then expreſſed ſome Diſlike of " his being ſo much diſturbed, by Perſons that reſorted to him, even " at thoſe Hours when myſelf was to be at Prayer with him; but I " knew not who thoſe Perſons were that thus came to him, and my " endeavouring to keep them from him, was with no other Deſign than " for the Good of that poor Man's Soul, who did all along expreſs to " me his great Deſire of being in the Chapel, and privately in his Room " with me, as much as poſſible.

" And as he alſo told me, that he was proffered his Life, and a great " Reward, if he would accuſe his Maſter; ſo I muſt own to you, I was " very uneaſy at his frequent Viſitors, eſpecially when I conſidered how " they diſturbed his Mind, and how much they took up of his precious " Moments, and hindered him from his Devotions, and my Aſſiſtances " to him therein.

" I urged him many and many Times and Ways to clear his Con- " ſcience, and not violate it for the whole World; telling him, that it " was infinitely better to die with a good Conſcience, than make Ship- " wreck of it, and ſave his Life here; yea, and gain all the World, by " laying a falſe Accuſation on that Honourable Perſon, or any other he " knew to be innocent, for that would certainly make him miſerable " both here and ever, &c.

" With ſuch like Expreſſions and Admonitions (God's Grace inter- " vening) I fixed his (then unſettled) Conſcience, weaned him from the " vain Hopes and Deſires of this Life, and directed his Thoughts and " Affections to far better Things, which I told him it was poſſible for " him to obtain, if he earneſtly and entirely laboured after them.

" He thanked me for my good Advice, and the great Concern I " ſhewed for his eternal Welfare, and ſaid, he would now give the " deaf Ear to the World, and ſo hoped God's Ear would be open to " his Prayers, &c.

" At the Place of Execution, he thanked me publickly for all my " Pains with him, which had proved ſo happy to his Soul, praying God " to bleſs me and my Family.

" Then he delivered a Paper into my Hand, for me to publiſh; in " which Paper, he (among other Things) acknowledges God's Mercy to " him, in preventing him from proſtituting his Conſcience to ſave his " Life.

" Now the Reaſon why I did not preſently publiſh that Paper, was " this:

" That it was commanded and kept from me by the then preſent " Sheriffs, Sir Benjamin Green (to whom I was then Chaplain) and Sir " Charles Piers, even from the Time of its Delivery, which was the 28th " of April, 1708, to the 6th of May, then next enſuing; at which Time, " having received it again, I waited with it on the Right Honourable " the Earl of Sunderland, then one of her Majeſty's Principal Secretaries " of State, who immediately gave me Leave to publiſh it.

" Telling me withal, that I was the propereſt Perſon to authorize " ſuch Papers, as were thus delivered to me.

" Upon this, I forthwith ſent it to the Preſs, and it then appeared " under my Name, as you may ſee by the printed Copy here incloſed:

I am, Dear Sir,

Your very humble, and affectionate Servant,

PAUL LORRAIN."

Chriſt's-Hoſpital, Tueſday Morning, June 13, 1711.

A Copy of William Gregg's Paper, delivered by him to the Sheriffs of London and Middleſex, Sir Benjamin Green and Sir Charles Piers, and Paul Lorrain, Ordinary of Newgate, at Tyburn, the Place where he was executed for High-Treaſon, on Wedneſday the 28th of April 1708. Printed from the Original, and publiſhed by Authority.

" THE Crime I am now juſtly to ſuffer for, having made a great " Noiſe in the World, a Paper of more than Ordinary Length will " be expected from the Criminal; who therefore takes this laſt Oppor- " tunity to profeſs his utter Abhorrence, and ſincere Repentance of all " his Sins againſt God, and of the heinous Crime committed againſt the " Queen, whoſe Forgiveneſs I moſt humbly implore, as I ſhall heartily " pray for her Majeſty's long Life and happy Reign over her united " People, and Succeſs againſt her Enemies, with my parting Breath; " this being all the Satisfaction I can make injured Majeſty.

" I declare, in the next Place, the Reparation I would make (were it " in my Power) to thoſe of her Majeſty's Subjects I have wronged in " any kind.

" And particularly the Right Honourable Robert Harley, Eſq. whoſe " Pardon I heartily beg for baſely betraying my Truſt. Which De- " claration, though of itſelf ſufficient to clear the ſaid Gentleman, yet " for the Sake of thoſe whom it was my Misfortune not to be able to " ſatisfy in my Life-time, I do ſacredly proteſt, that as I ſhall anſwer it " before the Judgment-Seat of Chriſt, the Gentleman aforeſaid was not " privy to my writing to France, directly nor indirectly.

" Neither I, his unworthy Clerk, any ways acceſſary to the Miſcar- " riage before Thoulon, nor the Loſſes by Sea; all which happened before " the firſt of my Letters, which was written the 24th of October, 1707.

" As for my Creditors, as I am in no Condition to ſatisfy them; ſo " I earneſtly beg they would forgive me, and I pray God to make up " their Loſſes to them ſeven-fold.

" For my own Part, I do freely forgive all Men, and die in perfect " Charity with them, not without humble Hopes of finding Forgive- " neſs, through the Merits of Jeſus Chriſt, with God, who in Mercy " touched my Conſcience ſo powerfully from the Beginning, as to pre- " vent my proſtituting the ſame to ſave my Life; for which Inſtance of " his Love (to be preferred before Life itſelf) I bleſs and magnify his " holy Name, with unſpeakable Joy and Comfort, at my Death no- " thing near ſo ignominious, as would have been ſuch a Life.

" After this Confeſſion, the Duty of a dying Man leads me to profeſs " the Religion in which I was brought up, and do now die, which is " the Proteſtant.

" The Scandal given whereunto, by my enormous Practices, cannot " be better taken away, than by my publiſhing to the World my hearty " Sorrow for thoſe ſenſual Pleaſures which have proved my Bane.

" Wherefore let all that ſhall read this poor Paper, take Warning by " me to ſhun the like youthful Luſts, to which whoever gives up him- " ſelf, cannot tell how far they may (when indulged) carry him, even " to the committing of ſuch Crimes, as he thought himſelf incapable of " ſometime a Day.

" Of which ſad Truth, I (to my woeful Experience) am a melan- " choly Inſtance; but at the ſame Time, I appeal to the great God, " before whom I am now going to appear, that notwithſtanding all the " Pains taken to make me out an old Offender, by faſtening on me the " Crime of counterfeiting the Coin, this is the firſt Fault that ever I " ventured upon, which was not out of Zeal for the Pretender, whom " I not only diſown at my Death, but ſolemnly declare, that in all " my Life I never thought he had any Right to theſe Realms, how " fooliſhly ſoever I may have rendered myſelf obnoxious in this Particular.

" But the only Motive of my mad Undertaking was Money, of " which I never received any, on account of the Ship Paſs, though I " have met with the more juſt Reward of ſuch ſecret Services, in- " tended by

" W. GREGG."

After which Mr. Hoffman adds thus: " Here it is evident, that he lay " in Newgate after Sentence of Death paſſed on him for High-Treaſon, " in correſponding with her Majeſty's Enemies, from the 19th Day of " January, 170⅞, to April the 28th, 1708, which was the Day of his " Execution, as a Traitor, at Tyburn.

" So that, in the whole, he lay under Sentence of Death, from the " Time of his Sentence to the Day of his Execution, one hundred Days.

" All which Time Mr. Lorrain laboured very diligently and devoutly " with him, by good Admonitions, and frequent Prayers to God for " him and with him, that he might not violate his Conſcience, nor " betray his Maſter.

" While, on the other Side, Gregg often declared to Mr. Lorrain, " no Manner of Sollicitations, or Offers of Life, Preferment, and great " Advantages were wanting, to induce him to bring Mr. Harley's inno- " cent Blood on his Head.

" So long a Reſpite from Death, as one hundred Days, was enough " to make any Man ſo unwilling to die, as to make him to do any thing " to ſave his Life, right or wrong; and Mr. Lorrain ſaid, Gregg ſo " often wavered in his Mind about it, being put ſo much, and ſo often, " in Hopes of living with Splendor by certain Perſons, that he almoſt " reſolved to ſay and do any thing Mr. Harley's Enemies would have " him.

" Againſt which, Mr. Lorrain fortified his Mind with all Manner " of upright Induſtry, and at length with final Succeſs. So that Gregg " gave a deaf Ear to all their farther Attempts.

" Here was one hundred Days hard Struggle between Life and Death, " Innocence and Party-Malice.

" Who thoſe Perſons were that offered Gregg his Life, with great " Preferments and Advantages (if he would but accuſe his Maſter), may " not uneaſily be gueſſed at; for moſt of the Time he was locked up, " none but People of Note were permitted to come near him, who made " him ſtrange Promiſes, and often repeated them.

" And here it would be worth while to examine how, and why, a " certain Perſon got out of Newgate, who was juſtly confined there for " Life, by Act of Parliament.

" Submitting to ſtop Gregg's dying Speech for eight Days only.

" And then, when it was publiſhed by another Hand, for the two " Sheriffs of London to ſend Mr. Lorrain to the Earl of Sunderland, to " aſk Leave to print a dying Speech they had commanded, and kept " from him, till to keep it any longer, or indeed ſo long, was a burning " Shame to them, but of no Manner of farther Service.

" From hence you may conclude, how generous it was to ſay to " Mr. Lorrain, " You are the proper Perſon to give Authority to this Paper, " and I will give you my Word, you ſhall come to no Trouble for the printing " and publiſhing it."

NUMBER XII.

IN STATE TRIALS, Vol. VI. p. 17. after the Execution of the Earl of Derwentwater, read as followeth *:

" The Lord Kenmure made no Speech, nor delivered any Paper; but " the following Letter of his to a Nobleman, was printed ſoon after his " Death."

A true Copy of a Letter written by the Lord Viſcount Kenmure to a certain Nobleman, the Day before his Execution.

" after a very courageous Manner."

NUMBER XIII.

The TRIAL of the Reverend Mr. WILLIAM HENDLEY, for preaching a Charity Sermon at Chiſlehurſt, in Kent, for the Charity Children of St. Ann's, Alderſgate, London; and of GEORGE CAMPMAN, ROBERT HICKS, FILIAR HARDING, and WALTER PRAT, the Schoolmaſter, and Truſtees for the Charity Children, for collecting Money for the ſame; at Rocheſter Aſſizes in Kent, before Sir Littleton Powys, Knight, one of his Majeſty's Juſtices of the Court of King's-Bench, July 15, 1719.

The CASE*.

ON Saturday, Auguſt 23, 1718, upon Leave obtained, firſt, from the Biſhop of Rocheſter, (Atterbury, then Biſhop of the Dioceſe) and ſecondly, from the Reverend Mr. Wilſon, Rector of Chiſlehurſt, to preach two Charity Sermons for the Children of St. Ann's, Alderſgate; the School-maſter, with four or five more, carried down ſome of the Children to Chiſlehurſt.

Immediately after they arrived, they were taken up, and carried before Sir Edward Bettiſon, Bart. Thomas Farrington, Eſq; Juſtices of the Peace, and Major Stephens, High Sheriff of the County; by whom they were aſked, How they dared to come ſtrolling and begging about the Country, without Licence or Authority firſt obtained? To which they anſwered, That if Archbiſhops and Biſhops thought it a good Work to preach for ſuch Children, they imagined it to be a good Work to collect for them: To which the Juſtices replied, They cared not for Archbiſhops or Biſhops, and were reſolved the Thing ſhould not be purſued.

On Sunday, Auguſt 24, a Sermon was preached by the Reverend Mr. Hendley, ſuitable to the Occaſion: The Sermon being ended, the Reverend Mr. Wilſon (whoſe Curate read Prayers) put on a Surplice, and repaired to the Altar to read the Offertory Sentences before the Prayer for the Church Militant; when Mr. Wilſon made his Offering in one of the Communion Patens, and then gave them to Mr. Campman and Mr. Prat, two of the Truſtees for the Children, to collect for them from Pew to Pew.

The People gave liberally, till they came to Mr. Farrington, who not only refuſed giving, but ſeized the Collector, aſſerting it was illegal, and no Collection ſhould be made; that the Children were Vagrants, and ſent about begging for the Pretender. Mr. Hendley called out from the Pulpit, and commanded them to proceed; Mr. Wilſon (from the Altar) did the like; but the Collectors anſwered, They could not. Mr. Wilſon came down, and ſaid he would collect in Perſon, and Mr. Hendley called for a Common-Prayer Book, and read the ſeveral Rubricks which authorized theſe Proceedings, and told the Juſtices, they could not anſwer diſturbing Divine Service, and muſt expect a Complaint to the Biſhop of Rocheſter. The Juſtices ſaid, They cared not for the Biſhop, or them either, and were charged by Sir Edward Bettiſon and Captain Farrington to deſiſt from collecting.

In the mean time, the Rector had good Succeſs in collecting, many People crouding up to give before their Turn; and others, kept back by mere Force, threw their Money into the Plate. Mr. Farrington made a Snatch at the Plate to take the Money; when Mr. Wilſon ordering the Money to be brought to the Altar, Mr. Wilſon took one Paten and Mr. Hendley the other, and decently placed them thereon. Mr. Farrington preſſed to come within the Rails; Mr. Hendley held the Door, and told him, his Place was not there, and forbid him touching the Money. Then Sir Edward Bettiſon came up to Captain Farrington, who called for a Conſtable, who came up with a long Staff; upon this they were ordered to diſperſe, upon Pain of being guilty of a Riot, being ſeconded by Sir Edward Bettiſon; when Mr. Wilſon and Mr. Hendley told them, that the Service of the Church was not finiſhed, for the Prayer for the Church Militant was not read, nor the Bleſſing given; and if any Riot, it was occaſioned by the two Juſtices. Sir Edward anſwered, That the Service was finiſhed, and forbid them to proceed; and that all concerned in bringing down the Charity Children ſhould ſuffer for what was done. Mr. Wilſon then called the Churchwarden to tell the Money with him, and agree to the Diſpoſal of it according to the Rubrick. The Juſtices countermanded the ſame, whom Mr. Churchwarden rather choſe to obey.

Upon this Mr. Wilſon and Mr. Hendley told the Money on the Lord's Table, and committed it that Afternoon into the Cuſtody of the Biſhop of Rocheſter. In the Evening, the Rector, the Preacher, and three Perſons who brought the Children down, were taken into Cuſtody, and bound over to the Quarter-Seſſions at Maidſtone, as Rioters and Vagrants.

Theſe Gentlemen appeared at Maidſtone upon their Recognizance; but no Bill being found againſt them, they moved to be diſcharged; but the Juſtices obliged them to put in freſh Bail for their Appearance at the next Aſſizes, when they appeared, and the following Indictment was found againſt them.

MITCHELL.'

The Sum of which Indictment in Engliſh runs thus:

THE Jury for our Lord the King preſent, That William Hendley, late of the Pariſh of Chiſlehurſt, in the County of Kent, Clerk, George Campman, lately of the ſame, Painter, Robert Hicks, lately of the ſame, Labourer, Filiar Harding, lately of the ſame, Packer, and Walter Prat, lately of the ſame, Upholſterer, being evilly and ſeditiouſly diſpoſed to the Government of this Kingdom, under our moſt excellent Lord George, King of, &c. and averſe to the happy Eſtabliſhment thereof, and wickedly deſirous of Gain, and moſt horridly and injuſtly intending to procure to themſelves unlawful Gains, under Pretence of collecting Charities, Alms, and Gifts, for the Suſtenance and Maintenance of Boys and Girls, viz. Twenty Boys, and Thirty Girls; on the 24th Day of Auguſt, in the fifth Year of our ſaid King, did, in the aforeſaid Pariſh of Chiſlehurſt, with ſeveral other ill-diſpoſed Perſons (to the Jury unknown), conſpire and confederate with the ſaid Boys and Girls, to wander up and down in Kent, and divers other Parts or Counties in England, in order to collect great Sums for the aforeſaid Purpoſes. And, that the ſaid William Hendley, George Campman, &c. in order to put their ſaid wicked Intentions in Execution, did, on the 24th Day as above-mentioned, at the aforeſaid Pariſh, with the ſaid Boys and Girls (none of them being Natives of that Pariſh), wander, itinerate, and ſtroll to the ſaid Church; and there did aſſemble in the ſaid Pariſh-Church at the Time of Divine Service; and there, at the Time of Divine Service, the ſaid William Hendley (to proſecute his Conſpiracy, without any Licence from the King, or legal Authority) did incite and aſk of the Pariſhioners Charities, Alms, and Gifts; though neither George Campman nor Walter Prat were Church-Wardens, or otherwiſe Officers of that Pariſh, yet they did there, in Divine Service, unlawfully extort theſe Charities, amounting to the Sum of three Pounds, from Rowland Tryon, and other Inhabitants, to the great Diſturbance of Divine Service, at that Time celebrating by George Wilſon, Rector of that Church; to the great Defrauding and Cheating of Rowland Tryon, and the other Pariſhioners; for a wicked and evil Example of all offending hereafter in the ſame Manner againſt the Laws; and in Contempt of our ſaid King and his Laws, and againſt the Peace of the ſaid King, his Crown and Dignity.

To which they pleaded Not Guilty.

The Jury were,

Sir Thomas Roberts, of Cranbrook, Bart.
William Honeywood, of Cheriton, Eſq.
Edward Gulſton, of Weſt Farley, Eſq.
Richard Lewin, of Lee, Eſq.

The Counſel were,

For the Plaintiffs,	For the Defendants,
Serjeant Darnell,	Serjeant Comyns,
Mr. Baynes,	Sir Conſtantine Phipps,
Mr. Marſh.	Mr. Biondell.

Mr. Marſh, with a Warmth, alledged, That in Time Charity Schools might raiſe ſuch Sums of Money, as to enable them to make Head againſt the Government; their Drums beat to Arms, and their Trumpets ſound a moſt dreadful Alarm; the Proteſtant Religion had its Quarters beaten up at Chiſlehurſt, and the Terror had ſtruck the Head Quarters in Town; the Sum of three Pounds was raiſed even in that little Pariſh, and ſuppoſe ten thouſand Pariſhes in England, from each of which if that Sum was raiſed, it would be enough to bear the Chevalier's Charges into Italy, and help him to conſummate the Marriage with the Princeſs Sobieſki, upon whom he might get new Pretenders, to the great Diſquiet of the Proteſtant Intereſt; and that if a Stop were not put to theſe Proceedings, in Time the Clergy would grow up into Friars Mendicant; and then quoted ſeveral Acts of Parliament againſt Vagrants, to prove the Defendants were within the Meaning of them; and ſhewed the Illegality of collecting Money without Letters Patents or Briefs †; and then called the Juſtices, Conſtable, and others, to prove the bringing down the Charity Children to Chiſlehurſt, the Preaching, and collecting Charity for them after they were forbid, &c.

The Defendants proved that they had the Biſhop's and Incumbent's Conſent, by the Oaths of John Reeves, William Moor, Richard Neeves, and Thomas Shackleton.

William Tryon, Eſq. and George Jefferies proved, that the Juſtices were the Authors of the Diſturbance.

To prove the Archbiſhop of Canterbury preached at St. Dionis Back-Church, for the Charity Children of Shadwell, the Reverend Mr. Hume, Mr. Tryon, Captain Thomas Shackleton, and Richard Payne, were called, who proved the ſame. And,

That the Archbiſhop of York did the ſame, was proved by Captain Thomas Shackleton.

Mr. Archdeacon Sprott offered in Evidence, that he had ſeen the Houſe of Lords preſent at a Sermon at Weſtminſter, when a Collection was made for poor Children not thereunto belonging; and offered the three Rubricks for the Defendants Vindication, viz. the laſt after the Nicene Creed, the firſt after the Offertory, and the laſt after the Communion Service; but the Judge over-ruled them, by urging, That the Collection was reſtrained to a fixed Time.

Serjeant Darnell ſpoke chiefly relating to the Acts of Parliament made in the Reigns of Queen Elizabeth, King Charles II. and Queen Anne, made againſt Vagrants and Wanderers from their Pariſhes, and inſiſted theſe Collections were illegal; as did Mr. Baynes.

Sir Conſtantine Phipps inſiſted it was legal, as they had the Biſhop's and Rector's Licence; and that if what they had done was illegal, it was cognizable only in the Eccleſiaſtical Courts; and that if the Houſe of Lords were preſent at ſuch a Collection, as Mr. Archdeacon Spratt had depoſed, and that he had ſeen the late Lord Chancellor Cowper, and the late Lord Keeper Wright, encourage ſuch Collections, ſure there could be no Illegality in it; and then proceeded to ſhew the Defendants were not within the ſeveral Acts of Parliament quoted; as did Mr. Comyns and Mr. Blondell, who inſiſted, That ſuch Proceedings would diſcourage Charity-Schools, and put an End to that noble Inſtitution, &c. and that there was no Precedent for this Proceeding.

The Judge ſummed up the Evidence, and obſerved what dangerous Conſequences might happen from theſe Collections; and was a little ſuſpicious, that Mr. Hendley had Cardinal Alberoni's Leave, as well as the Biſhop of Rocheſter's, to make this Collection, to carry on worſe Deſigns under the ſpecious Colour of advancing Charity; and ſeemed confirmed in his Suſpicion, becauſe the Manner of collecting had ſome Reſemblance with that of the Cardinal's in Spain; for he laid a Tax upon the People, which they were forced to pay, and gave it the ſpecious Name of a Free-Gift, alias Charity. If this Stratagem was to ſpread in England, by the ſubtile Artifices of this political Cardinal, the Nation is in Danger of paying double Taxes. Upon the whole, the Judge wiſhed that he had his eleven Brethren to conſult with upon the Bench; but as that was not possible, he directed the Jury to bring in their Verdict for the Plaintiffs; when the Jury went out, and returned in a few Minutes with a Verdict, Guilty; upon which the Judge fined them 6 s. 8 d. each, and told them, if they did not like the Verdict, they might bring a Writ of Error.

The Counsel for the Justices urged for a larger Fine, for that the Defendants had become Plaintiffs in the Bishop's Court; and therefore prayed, that such a Fine might be laid upon Mr. Hendley, &c. as might either satisfy the Charges they should be at in the Bishop's Court, or make the Opponents desist. But the Judge refused their Request, and told them, That should serve for the present; but if they came before him again, they should have their Deserts.

We shall here conclude (the Account of) this Trial, with an original Letter wrote by Sir Littleton Powys to the Lord Parker Lord Chancellor, upon the Occasion.

To his Excellency the Right Hon. Thomas Lord Parker, Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain, one of his Majesty's Lords Justices, London.

Henley, near Ludlow, Aug. 4, 1719.

My Lord,

I TAKING London in my Way between Lewes and Kingston, came to your Lordship's House the Morning before I went to Kingston, but your Lordship was then sitting. I did then intend to have informed your Lordship of what occurred in the Circuit thitherto, relating to the Public, especially in Kent: And after I came from Kingston, I found your Lordship was gone out of Town; and before your Return, I set out for my Country Concerns here in Shropshire, till near next Term; so that what Account I give your Lordship must be by Letter.

Though your Lordship has heard how the Verdict went in the Trial at Rochester *, yet perhaps it may not be unacceptable to your Lordship to have some Abstract of the Matter arising in it. It began at Six in the Morning, by my Appointment, and held till Twelve. The Court was very full of Clergymen, and a great Auditory; and I gave both Sides Liberty to expatiate as they pleased, especially the Defendants, that they might not say but that they had a full and fair Trial. Most of the Witnesses for the Prosecution were unwilling, and did prove the Facts but meanly; but afterwards the Witnesses for the Defendants did, upon questioning, prove all the Facts very fully upon all the Defendants, viz. Hendley the Preacher, the Schoolmaster, and the two Collectors, being all who were served with Process. Serjeant Comyns, Sir Constantine Phipps, and Mr. Blondell, were Counsel for the Defendants. After an Harangue upon the Virtue of Charity, and how essential to Christianity (though I thought the Texts they cited proved another Sort of Charity, viz. Good-Nature and Good-Neighbourhood, but I thought it not proper then to take Notice of the Distinction) they insisted chiefly,

1. That it would discourage all Charity, and Charity-Schools, which would thus be in Danger of Subversion.

2. That every Parson might order Collections in his own Parish, for what Charities he pleased, especially if approved of by the Bishop.

3. That the Rubrick in the Communion-Service, a Common-Prayer Book being produced in Court, does imply that the Parson and the Bishop are intrusted in Collections of Charity in the Church; for it says, that if the Parson and Churchwardens disagree in the Distribution, the Bishop shall determine.

4. That the Parson of the Parish, and also the Bishop of Rochester, did give Hendley Leave to preach this Sermon, for this Purpose.

5. That though the Sermon was done, yet the Prayer for the Holy Catholic Church at the Communion-Table was not quite finished, as were not also the Sentences for exciting Charity, when Mr. Farrington, the Justice of the Peace, interrupted the Collection.

6. That the two present Archbishops have preached Charity Sermons, in London, for the Children of other Parishes there.

7. That there is no Precedent of such an Indictment ever before.

Too much Time was spent on both Sides, relating to what Power the Bishops had antiently in the Distribution even of Tythes and Profits relating to the Church, and their Rights to license Preaching, and to direct what is to be done in Churches, and that Laymen are not to intermeddle there.

Serjeant Darnell. Mr. Baynes, and Mr. Marsh, were pro Rege. The Substance of what they all said is herein mentioned, intermixed with my own Thoughts in my summing up to the Jury.

I first said, That there were three Things much insisted on by the Defendants Counsel, and answered by the Counsel on the other Side, which I thought ought to be pared off, and put out of the Case, viz.

1. All Jealousy of discouraging all Charity, and Charity-Schools; for that they remained just as they were before, as long as they kept within the Bounds of their proper Parishes. But this Case was quite of a different Nature, relating to arbitrary Collections, and that in other Parishes, and the coming of fifty Boys and Girls together begging for that Purpose; and if this was practised, it might do more Harm to Charity-Schools, by making them odious to their Parishes, whose Poor would be injured, by lessening the Charity to them.

2. It ought to be put out of the Case, whether Mr. Hendley was authorized to preach there, or not; for that I thought it the same Case if the Parson of the Parish himself had then preached, [It was at my Tongue's End, if the Bishop himself had preached, as indeed it was the same; but I thought it better not to heat the Question by a Supposal of the Bishop's Preaching] for that the Preaching was not the Point, being used only to excite Giving; but the true Point was, Whether the Collection was without lawful Authority; and therefore the Collecting of it in the Church is not a Jot better, in Point of Law, than if the fifty Boys and Girls had stood at the Market-Place, and the Collectors had there received the Charity of all whom they could assemble about them.

3. Another Matter I thought proper to be pared off, (though so much debated on both Sides), whether it was a Crime (I suppose the Crime suggested in the Bishop of Rochester's Court) to interrupt the Collection before the Prayer for the Holy Catholic Church, and the Sentences for Charity, were fully read; since they thought, that if such Collecting is an unlawful Act, the proper Time to stop it is just when it begins, or soon after, as was done here by Mr. Farrington; for otherwise Common-Prayer, or a Sermon, might be used to justify and give a Sanction to any unlawful Act, and this Stop might as well have been in the Middle of the Common-Prayer, or of the Sermon, in case the unlawful Collection had then begun: So that the true Point is, Whether the Collection was unlawful: and upon that all the Case depends.

As for the Assertion, that every Parson of a Parish may order Collections in his Parish for Charities, when and for what he pleases; I declared my Opinion, that he could not; it not being any Part of his Function, like reading Prayers, Preaching, Christening, Burying, &c. and I knew not how he was made Judge of the Times and Objects of all Charities within his Parish, though he might preach as much as he pleased upon the general Duty of Charity.

As to the Rubrick in the Communion-Service, I said, I thought that was to be taken secundum subjectam materiam, viz. the ordinary Collection at the Communion, which is ever then used to be made for the Poor of that Parish, but should not extend to every Collection the Parson should appoint for any foreign Charity, and that I did not till now hear that the Clergy did claim such a Power. And farther, I said, that I thought those Words of the Rubrick did not imply such a Power in the Parson: For the Words being, "the Money given at the Offering shall be dis-"posed of to such pious and charitable Uses as the Parson and the "Churchwardens shall think fit, wherein if they disagree, it shall be "disposed of as the Ordinary shall appoint;" such a Power of appointing a Collection at Pleasure, is as much implied in the Churchwardens as in the Parson, for they have as much Liberty to disagree from the Parson in the Distribution, as the Parson has to disagree from them; and so the Churchwardens might also appoint Collections for what Charities they pleased: But that I thought that the Parson and Churchwardens, either jointly or severally, could not appoint any Collection for Charity otherwise than in common Form for the Poor of their own Parish, and that those are the charitable Uses intended by the Rubrick, and particularly at the Communion, to the Service of which those Words of the Rubrick are subjoined. I hope your Lordship, on reading that Part of the Rubrick at the End of the Communion-Service, will be of my Opinion, which I then suddenly declared, as to the Implication, and do not since alter, unless otherwise convinced.

As to what was mentioned of the two present Archbishops, it was for the Poor of the same Town, though of a different Parish †; and all the Circumstances of those Cases do not now appear, nor were they litigated, as this Case is.

As to the Objection, That there is no Precedent of such an Indictment ever before: There never was such an Attempt before, that fifty Boys and Girls should go into another Parish, in another County, and make a Kind of Migration in such a Body, really begging, though with great Formality. And though much might be said (as the Counsel for the King insisted) to bring them within the Statute of Vagrants, especially seeing the Statute of 39 Eliz. c. 4. paragr. 2. says, That all Persons calling themselves Scholars, going about begging, shall be accounted Vagrants; yet I judged it not proper to put the Case upon that Point, when I thought it so clear otherways, and fit so to be mentioned.

I also told the Jury, that this Case did consist of two Parts; the first but particular, and the other very general.

As to the particular, it is relating to the Maintenance of the Poor, which is not of a Spiritual Nature, but a mere Lay Concern, and relating to the Civil Government; and the several Acts of Parliament do plainly esteem it as such, by ordering the Rates and Collections for the Poor, and putting the whole Management into the Lay Hands of the Justices of the Peace, and the Overseers of the Poor, who are to be nominated by the Justices of the Peace, and accountable to them, and by their Directions to set the Poor at Work, if they thought proper; and therefore a Justice of Peace, being then in the Church, might well take it to be a Matter within his Jurisdiction, and that he might stop such a new and extraordinary Proceeding, newly begun among the Clergy, relating to the Maintenance of the Poor, and a Collection made by Strangers, without the Consent or Assistance of the Churchwardens or Overseers of the Poor of that Parish.

But this Case, if under a general Consideration, is of a vast Extent, and mighty Consequence to the King and the People, and at which the very Legislature may take great Umbrage. The levying of Money is the tenderest Part of our Constitution, and if it may be done arbitrarily, under the Shew and Form of Charity, (which may comprise all good Works and all good Intentions) it cannot be said whither it may go; any more than it can be said whither these fifty Boys and Girls may go: For as, by the same Reason, they may go into all the Parishes in England, so Collections, as for Charities, may be set up in all the Churches in England by the Clergy, as often as they please: And though it be said, it is all but voluntary Giving, yet it is a Sort of Compulsion, by the Solemnity in the Church, and vying with others, and being marked out, if refusing, or giving meanly.

In the Time of Charles I. the Parliament took great Offence at some Attempts for Free Gifts to the Crown; and we hear that Cardinal Alberoni is now setting up the like all over Spain.

But besides, here in England no Collection ‡, even for Charity (unless for the Poor of the same Parish) is, by Law, to be made, but by the Leave and

* Occasioned by a Charity-Sermon preached at Chiselhurst by one Hendley of Illington. He died not long after.

† Charity Sermons are preached in London frequently in the Parish Churches there, for the Charity Children of different Parishes. The British Charity-School on Clerkenwell-Green have an annual Charity Sermon, preached before the Stewards and Gentry of the Welch Feast, on the 1st of March, for their Benefit, and generally at a different Church each Year, and are never molested.

‡ In the Year 1745, when the Rebellion was on Foot, at the several County Meetings then held for subscribing Sums of Money to raise Men, &c. for the Defence of his Majesty's Person and Government, several Gentlemen, in different Counties, objected to it, as against Law; and that no Money could be raised but by Authority of Parliament, or the King's Licence, &c. But my Lord Chancellor Hardwicke, in his Speech (when Lord High Steward) at passing Sentence on the Rebel Lords, p. 38. has these Words "Men of Property, of all Ranks and Orders, crouded in with liberal Subscriptions, of their own Motion, beyond the Examples of former Times, and uncom-"pelled by any Law; and yet in the most legal and warrantable Manner, notwithstanding what has been ignorantly and presumptuously suggested to the contrary."

Permission

Permiſſion of the King, gathering of Money being ſo nice a Matter that it muſt not be done, even for Charity, without his Leave, in the moſt compaſſionate Caſes; and thence the antient Method of Briefs under the Great Seal, has been uſed, even upon extreme great Loſſes by Fire. And the Statutes of 4 and 5 of Anne have put the whole Management of Briefs under the Regulation of the Court of Chancery, and impower the laying great Fines upon the Offenders. But this Method were giving a Go-by to all Royal Licences, and putting it in the Power of the Clergy to do all Acts of Charity of themſelves, at the Expence of the People, and to be ſole Judges of the Occaſions, and to make what Application and Account they pleaſe.

I told the Jury that I was very clearly of Opinion, in Point of Law, this was a Caſe of dangerous Conſequence, and was an Invaſion not only on the King's Prerogative, but alſo upon the Legiſlature, and that I thought the Defendants guilty.

The Jury ſtayed out but a little while, and brought them in all Guilty. I then told the Defendants Counſel, that if they did not like my Opinion, in Point of Law, they might bring their Writ of Error; and the Indictment being ſo ſpecial, it did equal a ſpecial Verdict, and they might have the Opinion of a ſpecial Court if they pleaſed.

I then ſet a Fine of a Noble upon each Defendant, ſaying, it was ſo ſmall only becauſe it was made a Queſtion; but now that a Verdict had ſettled it, there would be very heavy Fines upon thoſe who ſhould preſume to offend in like Manner hereafter. Yet I heard that ſome Gentlemen in the Town had thereupon ſaid, that I had been too favourable to them by ſo ſmall Fines: But it was far from my Intention of any Favour to them, but of Service to the King; whereas, if great, it might have been ſaid, that, while they were proſecuted for levying Money on the People, the Proſecution was only to levy Money upon them, when it was really to ſettle the Point: And great Fines might have raiſed Compaſſion, and perhaps a Collection for them. It would be great Satisfaction to me, if your Lordſhip be of the ſame Opinion with me, as to the Smallneſs of the Fines; I am ſure I intended it for the beſt.

I gave Mr. Woodford a News-Paper, wherein was an Advertiſement, which I thought very fit to be ſhewed to Superiors: That the Biſhop of London had iſſued a Circular Letter to all his Clergy, to collect Charities in their Pariſhes for the poor Vicarages in England, which I thought much a-kin to the late Collection in Kent, or rather more dangerous, not only by raiſing a vaſt Sum of Money, (if the like in all Dioceſes) but alſo by marking out People how far affected to the Church throughout England, and caſting ſome Reflection upon Queen Anne's Bounty, and upon a beneficial Explanation after by his preſent Majeſty, yet as if to be ſupported by begging: And this done in a Time of Taxes, which muſt appear the more heavy after ſuch Collections; and the Clergy would thus gain a Power of raiſing Money as they pleaſe, and applying it as they pleaſe. How this Project goes on, I know not; but ſure it ought to be ſtopped: And for that Purpoſe, a Thing very appoſite was mentioned in the Debate of the late Trial in Kent; That commonly about Chriſtmas, when it is hard with the Poor for Want of Work, in great Froſt and Snow, then the Biſhop of London does ſend a Circular Letter to the Pariſhes within the Bills of Mortality, to make Collections for the Poor, to be put into the Hands of the Lord-Mayor. But it was alſo alledged in the ſame Trial, that precedent to ſuch Circular Letter of that Biſhop, the King ſends a Letter, under his Sign Manual, to that Biſhop, authorizing and requiring him ſo to do. This deſerves to be inquired into; and, if true, it is a Caſe in Point againſt this new Letter of the Biſhop of London, if without the King's Licence.

A Man of Rocheſter, worth nothing, was convicted before me of drinking the Pretender's Health. I ordered him to be whipped, in open Market, twice, till his Back was bloody, with a Month between the firſt and ſecond Whipping.

And at Lewes, a Man of Rye was convicted before me for drinking the Health of King James the Third, and ſaying, he knew no ſuch Perſon as King George. He had run out a good Eſtate by Looſeneſs, and had nothing left but an Annuity of thirty Pounds per Annum for his Life. I fined him a hundred Pounds, and committed him till paid, and that he would find good Sureties for his good Behaviour for three Years next after the Payment of the Fine. I told him, that by his paying a hundred Pounds to King George, he would certainly know there is ſuch a Perſon.

Your Lordſhip's Notion, againſt ſetting a State Offender in the Pillory, was certainly very right, and did ſo convince me, that I have ever ſince ordered corporal or pecuniary Puniſhments upon them, as having a better Effect upon ſhameleſs People, and without giving the Mob an Opportunity to be troubleſome.

I declared in all my Charges in this Circuit, as I did the two laſt Terms at Weſtminſter, that the Number of baſe Libels; and ſeditious Papers, is intolerable, and that now a quicker Courſe will be taken about them; for that now the Government will not be ſo much troubling itſelf to find out the Authors of them, but as often as any ſuch Papers are found on the Tables of Coffee-houſes, or other News-houſes, the Maſter of the Houſe ſhall be anſwerable for ſuch Papers, and ſhall be proſecuted as the Publiſher of them, and let him find out the Author, Letter-writer, or Printer, and take Care, at his Peril, what Papers he takes in.

This laſt was a Maiden Circuit, which had not been known before, and is to be attributed to the late good Law of Tranſportation, which is well put in Execution in the Counties near London, whence Tranſporting is eaſy, but not ſo well in other Parts of England. The Treaſury would ſave much Money, partly by paying fewer Rewards of Forty Pounds, and partly by not long maintaining Fellows in Gaol, if ſome Rates were agreed to be given to Merchants to carry them off ſpeedily.

Your Lordſhip's Order of Notification, to the Juſtices of Peace, had a very good Effect, for they appeared much better this Circuit than formerly, eſpecially in Surrey; where I told them, that I would requeſt your Lordſhip, that you would pleaſe to acquaint his Majeſty at his Return, how very well, in particular, his Juſtices of Peace in Surrey had appeared, upon his Pleaſure being notified to them for that Purpoſe.

I did, in all my Charges, inform the Audience of the Occaſion and Neceſſity of that Notification, for that there was grown a Sort of general Neglect, all over England, of the Appearance of the Juſtices of Peace at the Aſſizes, when the Judges had often Matters to inform them of, by Command of his Majeſty; and Trials of Felons were often imperfect by the Non-attendance of the committing Juſtice of Peace; and that their Attendance was a Reſpect due to the King and his Government, upon thoſe ſolemn Occaſions: And that it is no Hardſhip upon them; there being three Excuſes, which will be readily admitted, if upon the Call mentioned to the Court, barely upon the Word of ſome other Juſtice, or Proof upon Oath by ſome other Perſon, viz. 1. If not fit to travel, by Age or Want of Health. 2. If living out of the County. 3. If then actually out of the County. But if Juſtices of Peace ſhall remain at Home, about their private Affairs, or to avoid the Trouble of a Journey to the Aſſizes, it ought to be looked on as a Neglect of the Duty of their Office: For they are not called only to notify to the People that they are in Commiſſion, but to anſwer to their Names in Perſon.

Many of thoſe in Commiſſion do not act, and have not taken the Oath of Office: whereupon I ordered, in open Court, each Clerk of the Peace, againſt next Term, to tranſmit to your Lordſhip a Liſt of ſuch as reſide in the County, and refuſe to act; yet that he does, in the mean time, know of them, if they perſiſt in ſuch Refuſal; that ſo it may be their own doing, if they are put out of the Commiſſion, after his Majeſty's Favour to them in being put in.

I fear I have tired your Lordſhip with this long, though abridged, Account: But your Lordſhip's Pardon will be an Addition to all your former Favours to,

My Lord,
Your Lordſhip's moſt faithful
and moſt humble Servant,
LITTLETON POWYS.

NUMBER XIV.

CURL's CASE.

Mich. Term. 1 Geo. II.

Dominus Rex verſ. Edmund Curl.

An obſcene Book is puniſhable as a Libel *.

"INFORMATION exhibited by the Attorney-General againſt the Defendant Edmund Curl, for that he exiſtens homo iniquus et ſceleratus, ac nequiter machinans et intendens bonos mores ſubditorum hujus regni corrumpere et eos ad nequitiam inducere, quendam turpem, iniquum et obſcænum libellum, intitulat' Venus in a Cloyſter, or, The Nun in her Smock, impie et nequiter impreſſit et publicavit, ac imprimi et publicari cauſavit, (ſetting forth the ſeveral lewd Paſſages) in malum exemplum, &c. and of this the Defendant was found guilty. And in Trinity Term laſt, it was moved in Arreſt of Judgment by Mr. Marſh, that however the Defendant may be puniſhable for this in the Spiritual Court as an Offence contra bonos mores, yet it cannot be a Libel for which he is puniſhable in the Temporal Court. Libellus is a Diminutive of the Word Liber, and it is Libellus from its being a Book, and not from the Matter of its Contents. In the Caſe De Libellis famoſis, my Lord Coke ſays, That it muſt be againſt the Public, or ſome private Perſon, to be a Libel: and I do not remember ever to have heard this Opinion contradicted. Whatever tends to corrupt the Morals of the People, ought to be cenſured in the Spiritual Court, to which properly all ſuch Cauſes belong. What their Proceedings are I am a Stranger to: But for me it is ſufficient to ſay, I do not find any Caſe, wherein they were ever prohibited in ſuch a Cauſe. In the Reign of King Charles II. there was a filthy Run of obſcene Writings, for which we meet with no Proſecution in the Temporal Courts; and ſince theſe were Things not fit to go unpuniſhed, it is to be ſuppoſed that my Lords the Biſhops animadverted upon them in their Courts. In the Caſe of the Queen verſus Read, 6 Ann. B. R. there was an Information for a Libel in writing an obſcene Book, called, The fifteen Plagues of a Maidenhead; and after Conviction, it was moved in Arreſt of Judgment, that this was not puniſhable in the Temporal Courts; and the Opinion of Chief Juſtice Holt was ſo ſtrong with the Objection, that the Proſecutor never thought fit to ſtir it again.

"Mr. Attorney-General contra. I do not obſerve it is pretended there is any other Way of puniſhing the Defendant; for if the Spiritual Court had done it, Inſtances might be given; and it is no Argument to ſay, we meet with no Prohibitions; ſuch a Way of Argument would conſtrue them into all Sorts of Juriſdictions. What I inſiſt upon is, that this is an Offence at Common Law, as it tends to corrupt the Morals of the King's Subjects, and is againſt the Peace of the King. Peace includes good Order and Government, and that Peace may be broken in many Inſtances without an actual Force.

* Strange's Reports, Vol. II. p. 788.

"1. If

" 1. If it be an Act againſt the Conſtitution or Civil Government. 2. If " it be againſt Religion. And, 3. If againſt Morality.

" 1. Under the firſt Head fall all the Caſes of ſeditious Words or " Writings, 2 Roll. Abr. pl. 2. Vent. 324. 3 Keble 841. and the Caſe " of the Queen verſus Bedford, Mich. 12 Ann. whoſe Treatiſe of Here- " ditary Right was held to be a Libel, though it contained no Reflection " upon any Part of the Government.

" 2. It is a Libel, if it reflects upon Religion, that great Baſis of " Civil Government and Liberty; and it may be both a ſpiritual and " temporal Offence, Cro. Jac. 421. 2 Roll. Abr. 78. pl. 2. 1 Vent. 293. " 3 Keble 607, 621. In Tremayne's Entries, 226. there is a Sentence to " have a Paper fixed upon the Defendant's Head, intimating, that he " had uttered blaſphemous Words, tending to the Subverſion of Go- " vernment. There is one Hall now in Cuſtody on a Conviction as for " a Libel, intituled, A ſober Reply to the merry Arguments about the Tri- " nity. And Paſch. 10 Ann. Regina verſ. Clendon, there was a Special " Verdict on a Libel about the Trinity, and it was not made a Doubt of " in that Caſe.

" 3. As to Morality. Deſtroying the Peace of the Government; for " Government is no more than public Order, which is Morality. My " Lord Chief-Juſtice Holt uſed to ſay, Chriſtianity is Part of the Law: " And why not Morality too? I do not inſiſt that every immoral " Act is indictable, ſuch as telling a Lie, or the like: But if it is de- " ſtructive of Morality in general; if it does, or may, affect all the " King's Subjects, it then is an Offence of a public Nature. And upon " this Diſtinction it is, that particular Acts of Fornication are not pu- " niſhable in the Temporal Courts, and Bawdy-Houſes are. In Sir " Charles Sedley's Caſe it was ſaid, that this Court is the Cuſtos Morum " of the King's Subjects, 1 Sid. 168. and upon this Foundation there " have been many Proſecutions againſt the Players for obſcene Plays, " though they have had Intereſt enough to get the Proceedings ſtayed " before Judgment, Tremayne's Entries, 209, 213, 214, 215. State Trials, " Vol. III. Lord Grey's Caſe.—Mich. 10 Wil. III. Rex verſ. Hill, the " Defendant was indicted for printing ſome obſcene Poems of my Lord " Rocheſter's, tending to the Corruption of Youth; upon which he went " abroad, and was outlawed; which he would not have done, if his " Counſel had thought it no Libel. The Spiritual Courts puniſh only " perſonal Spiritual Defamation by Words; if it is reduced to Writing, " it is a Temporal Offence, Salk. 552. Mo. 627. and it is puniſhable as " a Libel. My Lord Coke, in the Caſe De Libellis famoſis, had nothing " in View but ſcandalous, defamatory Libels. Libellus is not always to " be taken as a technical Word; in this Caſe it may ſtand as an obſcene " little Book. And as to the Caſe of Read, there was no Judgment, but " it went off upon the Chief-Juſtice's ſaying, Why don't you go to the Spi- " ritual Court? Which was giving a falſe Reaſon for that ſudden Opi- " nion: Now it appears there is no Inſtance of the Spiritual Court's " intermeddling, where it is reduced to Writing, or in Print.

" Chief-Juſtice Raymond. I think this is a Caſe of very great Con- " ſequence; though, if it was not for the Caſe of the Queen verſus " Read, I ſhould make no great Difficulty in it. Certainly the Spiritual " Court has nothing to do with it, if in Writing: And if it reflects on " Religion, Virtue, or Morality; if it tends to diſturb the Civil Order " of Society, I think it is a Temporal Offence. I do not think Libellus " is always to be taken as a technical Word. Would not Trover lie de " quodam libello intitulat' the New Teſtament, and does not the Spiritual " Court proceed upon a Libel?

" Forteſcue J. I own this is a great Offence; but I know of no Law " by which we can puniſh it. Common Law is common Uſage, and " where there is no Law, there can be no Tranſgreſſion. At Common " Law, Drunkenneſs, or Curſing and Swearing, were not puniſhable; " and yet I do not find the Spiritual Court took Notice of them. This " is but a general Solicitation of Chaſtity, and not indictable. Lady Pur- " beck's Caſe was for procuring Men and Women to meet at her Houſe; " and held not indictable, unleſs there had been particular Facts to make " it a Bawdy-Houſe. To make it indictable there ſhould be a Breach of " the Peace, or ſomething tending to it, of which there is nothing in " this Caſe. A Libel is a technical Word at Common Law; and I " muſt own the Caſe of the Queen verſus Read ſticks with me, for there " was a Rule to arreſt the Judgment niſi. And in Sir Charles Sedley's Caſe " there was a Force, of throwing out Bottles upon the People's Heads.

" Reynolds J. It is much to be lamented, if this is not puniſhable: I " agree there may be many Inſtances, where Acts of Immorality are of " Spiritual Cognizance only; but then thoſe are particular Acts, where " the Proſecution is pro ſalute animæ of the Offender, and not where they " are of a general immoral Tendency; which I take to be a reaſonable " Diſtinction. Read's Caſe is indeed a Caſe in Point: But I confeſs I " ſhould not have been of that Opinion. Libellus does not ex vi terminis " import Defamation, but is to be governed by the Epithet, which is " added to it. This is ſurely worſe than Sir Charles Sedley's Caſe, who " only expoſed himſelf to the People then preſent, [naked] who might " chuſe whether they would look upon him or not; whereas this Book " goes all over the Kingdom. Drunkenneſs and Swearing were puniſh- " able in the Spiritual Court, before the Acts which made them Tempo- " ral Offences, and in which the Juriſdiction of the Spiritual Court is " ſaved.

" Probyn J. inclined this to be puniſhable at Common Law, as an " Offence againſt the Peace, intending to weaken the Bonds of Civil " Society, Virtue, and Morality. But it being a Caſe of great Conſe- " quence, it was ordered to ſtand over for a further Argument.

" And this Term Page J. came into the King's-Bench, in the Room " of Juſtice Forteſcue; it was to have been ſpoke to by Mr. Sollicitor- " General and myſelf. But Curl not having attended me in Time, " I acquainted the Court I was not prepared; and as my Want of be- " ing ready proceeded from his own Neglect, they refuſed to indulge " him to the next Term. And in two or three Days, they gave it as " their unanimous Opinion, That this was a Temporal Offence. They " ſaid, it was plain the Force uſed in Sedley's Caſe was but a ſmall In- " gredient in the Judgment of the Court, who fined him 2000*l.* " (Q. Marks *,) and if the Force was all they went upon, there was " no Occaſion to talk of the Court's being Cenſor Morum of the King's " Subjects. They ſaid, if Read's Caſe was to be adjudged, they ſhould " rule it otherwiſe: And therefore, in this Caſe, they gave Judgment " for the King. And the Defendant was afterwards ſet in the Pillory, " as he well deſerved."

This Edmund Curl ſtood in the Pillory at Charing-Croſs, but was not pelted, or uſed ill; for, being an artful, cunning (though wicked) Fellow, he had contrived to have printed Papers diſperſed all about Charing-Croſs, telling the People, he ſtood there for vindicating the Memory of Queen Anne; which had ſuch an Effect on the illiterate Mob, that it would have been dangerous even to have ſpoken againſt him: And when he was taken down out of the Pillory, the Mob carried him off, as it were in Triumph, to a neighbouring Tavern.

* Sir Charles Sedley was indicted at Common Law for ſeveral Miſdemeanors againſt the King's Peace, and which were to the great Scandal of Chriſtianity; and the Cauſe was, for that He ſhewed his naked Body in a Balcony in Covent-Garden to a great Multitude of People, and there did ſuch Things, and ſpoke ſuch Words, &c. mentioning ſome Particulars of his Miſbehaviour, as throwing down Bottles (piſſed in) vi et armis among the People, Keble's Reports, Vol. I. p. 620. Forteſcue's Reports, 93, 105. And this Indictment was openly read to him in Court; and the Juſtices told him, That notwithſtanding there was not then any Star-Chamber, yet they would have him know, that the Court of King's-Bench was the Cuſtos Morum of all the King's Subjects; and that it was then high Time to puniſh ſuch profane Actions, committed againſt all Modeſty, which were as frequent, as if not only Chriſtianity, but Morality alſo had been neglected. After he had been kept in Court by Recognizance from Trinity Term to the End of Michaelmas Term, the Court required him to take his Trial at Bar: But being adviſed, he ſubmitted himſelf to the Court, and confeſſed the Indictment, 15 Car. II. 1663. The Michaelmas Term following, the Court conſidered what Judgment to give; and inaſmuch as he was a Gentleman of a very antient Family (in Kent), and his Eſtate incumbered, (not intending his Ruin, but his Reformation) they fined him only 2000 Marks, and to be impriſoned a Week without Bail, and to be of good Behaviour for three Years, Sid. 168. pl. 29. Digeſt of the Law, p. 60 and 116.

NUMBER XV.

The TRIAL of WILLIAM HALES, for forging a Promiſſory Note for 6400*l.* in the Name of Thomas Gibſon, Eſq. and Partners †, and for publiſhing the ſame as a true one, knowing it to be falſe and counterfeit, at the Seſſion of the Peace, and Oyer and Terminer, for the City of London, held at the Old-Bailey, on Monday, the 9th Day of December, 1728, before Mr. Juſtice Page, and Mr. Baron Carter.

Cryer. OYEZ! Oyez! Oyez! All Manner of Perſons, that have any Thing to do at this Seſſions of Oyer and Terminer, holden for the City of London, and Gaol-Delivery of Newgate, holden for the City of London, and County of Middleſex, draw near, and give your Attendance.——Oyez! You good Men of the City of London, ſummoned to appear here this Day, upon the Trial between our Sovereign Lord the King and William Hales, anſwer to your Names, on Pain and Peril that ſhall come thereon.

James Seymour, Samuel Cranmer, &c. called.

Clerk of the Arraigns. William Hales, look to your Challenges.

Samuel Cranmer——

Mr. Serj. Baynes. My Lord, I have a Paper delivered to me. There are three worthy Perſons on this Pannel, we deſire may be ſet aſide.

Mr. Juſtice Page. You know what the Law is: If Mr. Attorney conſent they ſhould be withdrawn, very well.

Mr. Serj. Baynes. We know there are enough, my Lord.

Cl. of Arr. Richard Knellys.

Mr. Serj. Baynes. He is related to Mr. Gibſon.

Mr. Serj. Whitaker. Prove it.

Mr. Baron Carter. Pray, how is Mr. Gibſon concerned?

Mr. Serj. Darnell. It is for a Note of Mr. Gibſon's.

Mr. Juſtice Page. I would recommend it to Mr. Attorney. I would have this Trial without any Colour of Unfairneſs whatſoever; and as Mr. Gibſon is concerned, if he be really a-kin, I would adviſe Mr. Attorney to waive him.

Mr. Attorney General, (Sir Philip Yorke.) My Lord, I am ſure it is our Deſire that this Trial ſhould proceed with all the Fairneſs imaginable; therefore,

† This Trial (taken in Short-hand by Order of Mr. Gibſon) ſhould have come in Vol. IX. p. 67. being the firſt of Hales's Trials; but not procuring it Time enough to inſert in its proper Place, have given it here; as it completes all the Trials at large, relating to the Forgeries of Mr. Hales and Kinnerſley: Though a ſhort Account of this Trial, from the Seſſion-Paper of that Time, is printed in Vol. IX. p. 68—71.

therefore, without entering into the Queſtion how far Mr. Gibſon is concerned, or, if he is, what Conſequence that may have, I waive this Gentleman.

Then the twelve Jurors, who were ſworn, were counted, and their Names were as follows, viz.

Samuel Cranmer,	Ralph Knox,	James Coulter,
William Howard,	Cornelius Maſon,	Harvey Spragge,
Thomas Swayne,	John Pott,	Joſeph Jackſon,
Thomas Port,	Richard Chauncy,	Robert Knaplock.

Cl. of Arr. Crier, make Proclamation.
Crier. If any one can inform, &c.
Clerk of the Arraigns opened the Indictment, which is as follows, viz.

'London. ſſ. JURATORES pro Domino Rege ſuper ſacramentum ſuum præſentant, quod Willielmus Hales, nuper de London, Aurifaber, Anglicè Goldſmith, exiſtens perſona malorum nominis et famæ, ac converſationis inhoneſtæ, ac injuſte et fraudulenter machinans et intendens quendam Thomam Gibſon, necnon quoſdam Johannem Jacob et Robertum Jacomb, participes ejuſdem Thomæ Gibſon, ac diverſos alios dicti Domini Regis nunc ligeos et ſubditos, de magnis denariorum ſummis fraudulenter et inique decipere et defraudare, ſeptimo die Septembris, anno regni Domini Georgii Secundi, nunc Regis Magnæ Britanniæ, &c. ſecundo, apud London prædict', ſcilicet, in parochia Sancti Dunſtani in Occident', in warda de Farringdon extra, vi et armis, &c. falſo, fraudulenter, et deceptive fabricavit et contrafecit, et fabricari et contrafieri cauſavit, quoddam ſcriptum in verbis et figuris ſequentibus, videlicet,

'Auguſt 27*th*, 1728.

'I promiſe to pay to George Watſon, Eſq. or Bearer, the Sum of ſix thouſand four hundred Pounds, at Demand, the like Value received. For myſelf and Partners,

N. B. This Indictment was found under the Commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer, and not upon the Gaol-Delivery.

Cl. of Arr. Upon this Indictment the Defendant hath been arraigned, and pleaded Not Guilty; and for his Trial he puts himſelf upon God and his Country, which Country you are.

Your Charge is to inquire, &c.

Mr. Strange. May it pleaſe your Lordſhip, and you Gentlemen of the Jury: This is an Indictment againſt William Hales, of London. The Indictment ſets forth, That he being a Perſon of ill Fame and Reputation, and intending to deceive and defraud Thomas Gibſon, John Jacob, Robert Jacomb, and divers others, did, on the 7th of September, forge and counterfeit, and cauſed to be forged and counterfeited, a certain Note, viz. "Auguſt 27, 1728. I promiſe to pay, &c." This is laid to be to the great Damage of the ſaid Thomas Gibſon, &c. and to the evil Example of others in like Caſe offending, againſt his Majeſty's Peace, &c. It ſets forth, That, from the ſame evil Intentions, he did produce and publiſh, and cauſed to be produced and publiſhed, a certain Note following, viz. "Auguſt 27, 1728, I promiſe to pay, &c." That he publiſhed this as a true and lawful Writing, knowing the ſame to be falſe, forged, and counterfeit. It ſets forth, That he forged and counterfeited, and cauſed to be forged and counterfeited, a certain Writing, dated Auguſt 27, 1728, purporting that the aforeſaid Thomas Gibſon, for himſelf and Partners, promiſed to pay George Watſon, or Bearer, 6400*l.* Gentlemen, the Indictment ſets forth, That on the ſame 7th of September, in this City, the ſaid William Hales did produce, and cauſed to be produced, a Writing, which purported that the ſaid Thomas Gibſon had promiſed to pay George Watſon, or Bearer, 6400*l.* and publiſhed this, knowing it to be forged at the ſame Time. And this is laid to be to the great Damage of the ſaid Thomas Gibſon, &c. and to the evil Example of all others in like Caſe offending. To this Indictment he hath pleaded Not Guilty. But if we prove the Fact, it becomes your Duty to convict him thereof.

Mr. Attorney General. May it pleaſe your Lordſhip, and you Gentlemen of the Jury; I am of Counſel in this Caſe for the King. The Charge againſt the Defendant, Mr. William Hales, is for forging a Note in the Name of Mr. Gibſon, payable to George Watſon, Eſq. or Bearer, for no leſs a Sum than 6400*l.* and publiſhing this Note as a true one, knowing it to be falſe and counterfeit: For, though the Fact is laid different Ways in the Indictment, yet it is upon one and the ſame Note, and the Difference conſiſts only in the Form of alledging it.

This, Gentlemen, is the firſt Caſe of the moſt extraordinary Scene of Forgery that hath come under Examination in this Place, committed in ſuch a Manner, and attended with ſuch Circumſtances, as make it neceſſary to be proſecuted with the greateſt Weight and Solemnity, for an Example and Terror to others. All Kinds of Forgery are Crimes of a moſt pernicious Nature, as they tend to weaken and deſtroy that Faith and Commerce which ought to be maintained amongſt Men: But Forgery in the Caſe of negotiable Notes, which have a particular Currency given to them by Act of Parliament, whereby private Credit is greatly aſſiſted, and Trade carried on, is one of the moſt dangerous, and, if it ſhould prevail, the Conſequences, though not eaſy to be foreſeen, would certainly be extenſive and deſtructive. Such is the Nature of the Offence whereof the Priſoner ſtands accuſed: But howſoever heinous that may be, his Guilt will depend entirely upon the Evidence of the Fact.

Gentlemen, the Advantage taken to commit this Forgery was from an Act of Kindneſs and Civility done to the Defendant. He ſome Time ago prevailed with one Mr. Booth, Book-keeper to Mr. Gibſon, to accommodate him with two Covers for Letters franked by Mr. Gibſon, in order (as he pretended) to ſend News into the Country: A Practice which I fear is too common; but I hope this Inſtance will have ſome Effect to make it leſs frequent. It will appear to you, from ſeveral Circumſtances, That the Note in Queſtion was made on one of theſe Covers: For, Gentlemen, it is a Promiſſory Note, ſubſcribed, For myſelf and Partners, Thomas Gibſon. The Body of the Note is all of one Hand-writing, not pretended to be Mr. Gibſon's. When we come to the Subſcription, there is a Raſure at the End of the Word For, which, upon holding the Paper againſt the Light, is plainly to be ſeen. The Manner of Mr. Gibſon's Writing being pretty wide and looſe, the Letter o in the Word For appears to have been crouded between the other two Letters F and r, and is remarkably of a different Character and freſher Ink than the others. From hence the Manner of making the Forgery ſeems to have been, by raſing out the two e's at the End of the Word Free, or at leaſt the greateſt Part of them, and inſerting an o in the Manner I have mentioned, and then adding in the ſame Line, after this Word thus made to be For, theſe other Words, Myſelf and Partners; which ſtanding a little above the Name Tho. Gibſon, ſerve as a proper Subſcription to this Note. It will appear likewiſe, that the Stroke at the Beginning of the m in the Word my is of the older Kind of Ink, and probably was at firſt Part of one of the e's in the Word Free. There is ſomething obſervable in the Figure and Appearance of the Paper itſelf: The old Folding, which is moſt worn, anſwers to that which probably might have been the Fold of a Cover of a Letter, and the Paper is torn off at one Side and at the Top.

This, Gentlemen, being the Nature of the Writing, and the Manner in which it was transformed from the Direction of a Letter to a Note of this Value, we ſhall, in the next Place, lay before you the Uſe which was made of it. And, Gentlemen, the Time pitched upon for this Purpoſe will be material for your Conſideration. Mr. Gibſon was gone to Bath, and it was thought proper to date the Note the Day before he went. No Uſe was made of it till ſome Time after he was gone, that there might be no Room for applying to the Perſon himſelf. The Day, and Time of the Day, which were choſen to put it off, were Saturday at Night; when probably there would be no Opportunity of making Inquiries till the Monday Morning following, and conſequently a whole Day might be gained. This being the Opportunity reſolved upon, it will appear, that on Saturday the 7th of September Mr. Hales made Uſe of an Inſtrument, that hath confeſſed himſelf to have been drawn in by him, one Thomas Rumſey, a young Fellow bred to the Sea, who was abſolutely under his Influence; told him he muſt go with him into the City, bid him put on a particular Suit of Cloaths, and obſerving that he had a laced Hat upon his Head, adviſed him to leave that behind him, and gave him a plain one. To make him appear ſtill more like a Man of Buſineſs, Mr. Hales, as they went along the Strand, bought him a Pocket-Book or Letter-Case. Thence he carried him to Middle-Row, and bought him a dark Perriwig, bid him put it on, and said, it became him very well. Thus equipped, he took him to John's Coffee-house in Shire-Lane; and when they were there, Rumsey not knowing about what he was to be employed, a Porter came in with a Letter. Without the Porter's saying one Word, Hales asked, If he did not want Rumsey? The Porter answered, Yes; and produced a Letter directed to Rumsey, which Mr. Hales took, and readily found inclosed in it this Note for 6400*l.* payable to George Watson, or Bearer. In the Letter were two Names written with Sums against them thus, Lady Harriot Elliot 4300*l.* Sir John Hynde Cotton 2100*l.* and underneath, payable to them or Bearer. These Names only being in the Letter, Mr. Hales took upon him to order Rumsey to write under them, James Moreton, Esq. or Bearer; and when this was done, that Part of the Letter with the Names was torn off, and put into the Pocket-Book (which had been bought for the Purpose), together with the Note for 6400*l.* and a Bank Note of 20*l.* and two of 25*l.* each. Then the Prisoner gave it to Mr. Rumsey, with Directions to carry these Notes to the Shop of Mr. Snow and Poltock without Temple-Bar, and there take their Cash-Note, payable to James Moreton, Esq. or Bearer, for 70*l.* the Produce of the Bank-Notes; and in Exchange for this forged Note, to take one of their Notes, payable to the Lady Harriot Elliott, or Bearer, for 4300*l.* and another to Sir John Hynde Cotton or Bearer, for 2100*l.* The Prisoner gave strict Instructions to Rumsey, that, if at Mr. Snow's he should be asked where he lived, he should answer, at the upper End of Bond-Street; if he should be asked his Name, he should say, Thomas Fowler, or any other Name besides his true Name; that it was indifferent what, so it was not the right Name. Rumsey, thus instructed, went immediately to the House of Mr. Snow and Poltock, which Hales took Care to shew him. Mr. Poltock took the small Bank Notes, and gave his Note for them; but observing the Appearance of the Note for 6400*l.* that it was written on a dirty Scrap of Paper, and the Difference of Hand-writings in it, would have nothing to do with that. During this Time Hales kept at a little Distance; and Rumsey returning without Success, he directed him to go to Mr. Hoare's, and (as he had concerted in the former Instance) to pay in a small Sum of Money not exceeding 70*l.* and take their Note for it, and to exchange the Note of 6400*l.* for their Notes. The Names of the Persons to whom the Notes were to be made payable were then to be changed; for the Stratagem was, to make Use of the Names of Persons that dealt at the several Shops, in order to gain Credit to the Transaction. Therefore the Names of two Honourable Persons, well known at Mr. Hoare's, were pitched upon; and the new Direction which the Prisoner gave to Rumsey was, to take one of Mr. Hoare's Notes for 4300*l.* payable to Sir Richard Grosvenor or Bearer: and another for 2100*l.* payable to Sir John Hynde Cotton or Bearer; and there also if he was asked to give in his Name, Thomas Fowler. When it was near dark, Rumsey went to Mr. Hoare's, and exactly pursued his Orders. They made him out a small Note for the Cash, and gave such Credit to Mr. Gibson's Name, as to give him the Notes he desired, in lieu of the 6400*l.* Note; all which Mr. Rumsey delivered immediately to Mr. Hales, who waited for him at a Fruit-stall not far from the Shop.

Gentlemen, Mr. Hales being now possessed of three Notes of Mr. Hoare's, one for 70*l.* another for 2100*l.* and a third for 4300*l.* the next Part of his Scheme was to negotiate and exchange them for other Notes from Hand to Hand, in order to entangle the Affair, and make it difficult to trace out the Cheat: Therefore his next Orders to Rumsey were, to carry the Note for 4300*l.* payable to Sir Richard Grosvenor or Bearer, to Mr. Brassey's, and exchange it for smaller Notes. Rumsey went thither that Night, and took four smaller Notes of Mr. Brassey's, in lieu of Mr. Hoare's, viz. two of 1000*l.* each, one of 1200*l.* and another of 1100*l.* But though these Notes of Mr. Brassey's were given out on Saturday Sept. 7th at Night, they were made to bear Date on Monday the 9th; because, it being late in the Evening, the Cash-Book was made up for that Day. These four new Notes Mr. Rumsey delivered to Mr. Hales, who waited for him again at a very small Distance from Mr. Brassey's Shop.

The next Part of the Scheme was to change these Notes into negotiable Securities equal to Cash, in which there was probably a double View; partly to intricate the Affair still further, and partly for the greater Convenience of carrying off the Fruits of their Iniquity, when that should become necessary: Therefore the Prisoner sent Rumsey to Mr. John Hals, a Broker in Exchange-Alley, and directed him to acquaint him, that he came from Mr. Samuel Palmer, in Mansel-Street, Goodman's-Fields, with Orders to buy South-Sea and India Bonds to the Value of 3400*l.* against Monday Morning following.

Thus the Matter rested till Monday the 9th of September: But on the Sunday the Prisoner was not wanting in making his Preparations. He then appointed one Robert Hall, his Taylor, to meet him at Lloyd's Coffee-house in Lombard-Street, at Eight of the Clock the next Morning, without letting him into the Secret of what he was to do. Hall went accordingly, and there found one Samuel Lee waiting for Mr. Hales; an Instrument made use of by the Prisoner in another Transaction, which will one Day appear as rank a Forgery as this. About Nine Hales came, and gave to Hall Mr. Brassey's Note for 1200*l.* directing him at the same Time to go and receive 650*l.* in Guineas, and have it indorsed off. He told Hall, that if he was asked, he should tell them he lived in the Hay-Market, or any where else except the real Place of his Dwelling, and that his Name was John Roberts. So here is another sham Name and Place of Abode. He obeyed these Orders, received the Money, not in Gold, but in three Bank-Notes; and when the Persons in Mr. Brassey's Shop enquired his Name, he told them John Roberts. Whilst Hall was in the Shop, he observed that Mr. Hales walked by; so jealous was he of his Agents, or at least so vigilant to see how Things succeeded. Hall delivered the Bank-Notes, together with Mr. Brassey's Note, on which the 650*l.* was indorsed off, at Lloyd's Coffee-house; and afterwards met him again at Janeway's Coffee-house in Cornhill. There Hales returned these Bank Notes to Hall, and ordered him to go to the Bank, and there receive the Money upon them in Gold. Mr. Hales was still so jealous or impatient, that whilst Hall was at the Bank receiving the Money, he took Occasion to come in there upon Pretence of changing a Guinea, and taking no Notice of Hall, went away; after which Hall went with him to a Tavern, and paid him the 650*l.* which he received at the Bank.

Gentlemen, thus far the Design succeeded well. Here are several good Notes obtained, and some Cash got, without Discovery: But the Occasion of that will arise out of the Part which Rumsey was to act on the Monday Morning.

Gentlemen, you observe there are two Notes of Mr. Hoare's behind, whereof no Account hath been yet given, viz. that of 70*l.* and that of 2100*l.* payable to Sir John Hynde Cotton, to put off which Mr. Rumsey was employed. It will appear, that Mr. Hales kept Rumsey continually with him, and lodged him in his House on Saturday and Sunday; and on Monday Morning, when he went into the City, brought Rumsey with him, took Care to shew him Mr. Alderman Hankey's Shop, and directed him to exchange these two Notes for 70*l.* and 2100*l.* for Mr. Hankey's Notes. Rumsey went to the Shop, and they having no Difficulty about exchanging Mr. Hoare's Notes, accepted them, and gave him two of their own, one for 1100*l.* and another for 1050*l.* both payable to Samuel Palmer or Bearer; and the remaining 20*l.* was paid in Money. As to the Note for 1100*l.* the whole was received upon that at Mr. Alderman Hankey's the same Day, by a Person who called himself Samuel Lane.

Gentlemen, the next Part of the Transaction relates to the South-Sea and India Bonds for 3400*l.* which had been ordered to be procured by Hals the Broker. On Monday Morning Rumsey received the Money of Mr. Hales, with Directions to carry it to Hals, and pay for these Bonds. Whilst Rumsey was gone to transact this, it appears that Mr. Hales was upon this Occasion also uneasy and impatient, thought Rumsey stayed too long, and sent a Porter for him to Hals's Office, by the Name of Thomas Fowler; and that Rumsey answered to that Name, and went along with the Porter.

Gentlemen, we shall next produce to you the Account made up by Mr. Hals or Mr. Cole his Partner, which will appear to have been made out in these feigned Names, Samuel Palmer, Esq. per Thomas Fowler; whereas no such Persons had any thing to do in the Transaction, but the whole was negotiated by Hales and Rumsey. And it will be proved, that whenever the Prisoner sent Rumsey upon any of these Errands, he considered the Questions which were likely to be asked, and gave him Instructions how to make proper Answers, and some of them in Writing.

While these Things were transacting, the Accident happened that led to the Discovery. About Eleven o'Clock on Monday Morning, Mr. Humphreys, a Servant of Mr. Hoare and his Partners, who carries out Notes and receives Money abroad, carried the Note for 6400*l.* to Mr. Gibson's, and, Mr. Phillips the Cash-keeper being abroad, left it with Mr. Cramlington, another of the Servants, with Directions to pay the Money upon it to Mr. Bromfield at the Bank, who was to place it to Mr. Hoare's Account. When Mr. Phillips came Home, he was surprized to find such a Note with Mr. Gibson's Hand to it; the Note not of his own Writing, though it is always his Practice to write the Body of his Notes as well as the Subscription. And no Notice having been given of it by Mr. Gibson, upon this he conceived a Suspicion, and resolved not to pay it till he had first spoke to Mr. Jacomb. The Note was shewn to Mr. Jacomb, who, upon finding out the Rasure, and observing the other Circumstances which I at first mentioned to you, immediately suspected it to be a Forgery, and took Methods for the Discovery. He found out, that one of Mr. Hoare's Notes had been exchanged for Bank-Notes, and traced out the Numbers; upon which Notice was immediately given at the Bank, that if any of those Notes were brought for Payment, they should be stopped, and the Person secured. It happened soon after this, that Mr. Hales, designing to get the Remainder of the Effects into his Pocket, carried Rumsey within Sight of the Bank, (who was so ignorant a Person, that he asked him whether it was a Church) and directed Rumsey to receive Money there on two Bank-Notes, each for 200*l.* Part of the Bank-Notes given out by Mr. Brassey; and thereupon the Officers of the Bank stopped Rumsey, and inquired into the Matter. Mr. Rumsey was first interrogated how he came by these Notes; and after much Hesitation and Difficulty, at last said, he had them from a Gentleman that stayed for him at Robin's Coffee-house in the Old-Jewry. Upon this they sent a Constable, and found Mr. Hales there, having in his Hand Mr. Brassey's Note for 1100*l.* This Note he endeavoured to conceal, but was prevented. They brought him to the Bank, and upon Search found about him the very Effects which were the whole Produce of Mr. Hoare's three Notes, except about the Sum of which was wanting. He was asked, how he came by them, and by the Note signed with Mr. Gibson's Name, payable to Watson, with which he procured them. The Account he gave was, that he had them from one Mr. Samuel Palmer: But he there declared, that all the Effects that he had about him were the Produce of this Note, and wrote down in a Paper how he had disposed of the rest.

Gentlemen, this will appear to you to be the Nature of the Case; and upon this Mr. Hales was committed, and Rumsey secured. And, Gentlemen, I apprehend, that, though this be a long Series of Facts, yet it will amount to a clear Evidence against the Prisoner. No reasonable Man can expect Proof to be made of the very Act of Forgery. Such Iniquities are Deeds of Darkness, and those who commit them do not call Witnesses to attest the Performance: But next to that we have the strongest Evidence. What arises out of the Note itself is of great Weight: The Circumstance of the Rasure and Alterations, which I will not repeat: The Body of the Note not of Mr. Gibson's Writing, whereas it is his constant Practice to write the whole Note with his own Hand, and that too in a different Form of Expression from the present Note: There is no Person of the Name of George Watson, with whom he hath any Dealings. Another Circumstance material to be taken into Consideration is the immediate exchanging all these Effects, without any apparent Occasion. One Banker's Note exchanged for another, Mr. Hoare's, Mr. Alderman Hankey's, Mr. Brassey's---all of them Persons of great Credit ----What Account can be given, without any Reason appearing, why one one of these Gentlemen's Notes should be exchanged for another, but to darken and intricate the Affair?

Add to this the Consideration of the Persons concerned: Mr. Hales, a Bankrupt not discharged, employing such Agents as I have described to you; himself lurking about in a concealed Manner; all these Circumstances shew the Man was doing a wicked Thing, which would not bear the Light, nor his appearing in it. But what amounts to a Demonstration, is his directing these Agents to take upon them feigned Names and Places, to dress themselves in Masquerade, and to take Notes in the Names of other Persons, who were absolute Strangers to the Transaction.

As this is Evidence of the Prisoner's publishing a forged Note knowingly, it is Evidence likewise that he forged it: For, if a Person hath a forged Note in his Custody, and taketh such Methods to put it off and give it a Currency, it is a strong Proof against him of the Forgery itself; and properly turns it upon the Defendant to give a clear Account how he received it, upon what Consideration, and in what Way of Business; more especially in this Case, where the Note is for so great a Sum of Money, that Nobody can pretend to be at a Loss or under any Difficulty to shew how they came by it.

Gentlemen, when the Witnesses shall have given you an Account of these Things upon their Oaths, I apprehend there can remain no Doubt but the Charge of Forgery against the Prisoner is just, and this Prosecution necessary.

Call Philip Booth. (Who was sworn.)

Mr. Solicitor General. (Hon. Mr. Talbot.) Mr. Booth, do you know the Prisoner at the Bar, Mr. Hales?

Mr. Booth. Yes, Sir, I do know him.

Mr. Sol. Gen. How long have you been acquainted with him?

Mr. Booth. Ever since the Year 1703.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Can you remember the Time—how was he brought up at that Time?

Mr. Booth. I remember him at the Shop of Sir Stephen Evance several Years before their Failure.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you remember any thing of a franked Letter?

Mr. Booth. About a Year and a half ago he came to me, desiring me (Mr. Gibson being a Member of Parliament, and his other Friends out of Town), that I would do him the Favour to give him two Franks. He brought two Sheets of Paper; I desired Mr. Gibson to frank them, who wrote on them, To Robert Booth, Esq. Bristol. Free Tho. Gibson.

Mr. Sol. Gen. How did he write his Name?—Mr. Booth. Tho. Gibson.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What did you do with them?

Mr. Booth. I gave them to Mr. William Hales.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Sir, look on that Note. Are you acquainted with the Hand of Mr. Gibson? See whether you take any Part of the Note to be of his Hand-writing?

Mr. Booth. The Name is his.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Is there any other Part of the Note which you take to be his Hand-writing?

Mr. Booth. The F I take to be Part of the Word Free—the F I take to be Mr. Gibson's Hand-writing.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What is the r? Look carefully upon it.

Mr. Booth. The r may be Mr. Gibson's; but the o seemeth to be crouded in between the F and the r.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do they seem to be of the same Hand, or of a different one?

Mr. Booth. Crouded in irregularly.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Are they of the same Ink?

Mr. Booth. I take them to be of a different Ink. The r is his Letter; but I take it there is some Alteration: Here is a plain Rasure, where the Letters my are written.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What Distance from the r?

Mr. Booth. The Rasure is probably where the two e's stood.

Mr. Sol. Gen. The my, and the Word following, do you take them to be Mr. Gibson's Writing?

Mr. Booth. No, Sir.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Take Notice of the Fold.

Mr. Booth. This seems to be the Fold of a Letter.

Mr. Sol. Gen. If you take that to be the Fold of a Letter; Is that the usual Place for the Folding of a Letter?

Mr. Booth. There must be some Alteration on the left-hand Corner.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Make your own Observations. Look on the Top of it; Doth that seem the Fold of the Paper as at first, or cut or torn off from any other Paper?

Mr. Booth. I believe it is not the original Fold of the Paper as it is now.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Look on that Side next me; Doth it seem cut or torn off?

Mr. Booth. Yes, it is not the original Selvedge of the Paper.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Is the original Selvedge of the Paper in any other Part? Is it cut off, or the original Selvedge?

Mr. Booth. The original Selvedge is not there.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Is it cut off?

Mr. Booth. I cannot tell; I query, whether cut or torn off.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Have you lived with Mr. Gibson long?

Mr. Booth. Eight Years.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Have you seen any Notes of his giving?

Mr. Booth. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What is his common Manner of signing Notes?

Mr. Booth. For myself and Co.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Read that Note, and give an Account to the Jury, wherein you think it agrees with his ordinary Way of Writing Notes, and wherein it differs.

Mr. Booth. Mr. Gibson generally begins with I promise to pay, and concludes his Notes For Self and Co. but never mentions Value received.

Mr. Just. Page. Consider of what Avail this is to prove that it is not written by Mr. Gibson, because it is different from the Manner of his Stile. It is certainly allowed by all not to be a Note written by Mr. Gibson.

Mr. Sol. Gen. My Lord, this is a Forgery, the Proof whereof depends upon a vast Variety of Circumstances, and every one of them is corroborating.

Mr. Just. Page. I submit it, whether it be of any Avail or not; the Cause will be long enough.

Mr. Sol. Gen. My Lord, this is one Circumstance. We know not what Reply they will make, and this is our Time to give in our Evidence—We hope therefore your Lordship will bear with us, and permit us to take our own Method.

Mr. Just. Page. Go on then your own Way.

Mr. Sol. Gen. We shall ask but one Question more; Those Notes that are signed by Mr. Gibson, of whose Hand-writing are they?

Mr. Booth. All his own.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you ever see any Promissory Note signed by Mr. Gibson, where the Body of it was wrote by any other Hand?

Mr. Booth. Never, to the best of my Knowledge.

Mr. Sol. Gen. As to Self and Partners, do you ever remember his writing in his Notes these Words, or always Self and Company?

Mr. Booth. Self and Company always.

Mr. Sol. Gen. In what Part of the Note? In a straight Line, or under?

Mr. Booth. In a straight Line.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you know that he ever signed a Promissory Note written by any other?—Mr. Booth. Never, to my Knowledge.

Mr. Sol. Gen. How long have you been with him?

Mr. Booth. Eight Years.

Mr. Sol. Gen. In what Place?—Mr. Booth. Book-keeper.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you see the Note when first brought to Mr. Gibson's? Had it the same Creases in it?—Mr. Booth. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Sol. Gen. One Question more I would ask; Are the Letter o, and the Words following, of the same Ink?

Mr. Booth. Here seems to be an accidental Dash of the Pen, as if the Hand shook.

Mr. Sol. Gen. I apprehend the Gentleman mistakes my Question: Sir, I ask, whether you take the Letter o to be of the same Ink with the Word my and the following Words? Sir, I desire you will look once more distinctly on it, and tell us whether you apprehend the Letter o to be of the same Ink with the Word my and the following Words?

Mr. Booth. There seem to be some Fragments of a Letter?

Mr. Sol. Gen. Might there be the Fragments of the Letter e?

Mr. Booth. There are the Remains of the Letter e.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Then I ask you, whether these Remains of the Letter e, appear of the same Ink with the Word my and following Words?

Mr. Booth. No, nothing like it.

Mr. Sol. Gen. You have observed (I suppose) his Manner of Franking—Pray, Is it Free or Frank?

Mr. Booth. Free always.

Mr. Sol. Gen. One Question more; Have you observed, in his general Way, that the Space between the F and the r is so great? Suppose the o was out, would there be more Room between the F and the r than Mr. Gibson usually makes? You seem to be a very sensible Person, Sir; Is it further between the F and the r, than the Distance that Mr. Gibson usually makes?

Mr. Booth. I believe that he might make that Distance of Space, but cannot say that he always doth so; he often writes close.

Mr. Sol. Gen. This Frank (I think you say) was directed To Mr. Robert Booth, Bristol; I ask you, Whether that Direction was not written over the Words Free Thomas Gibson?

Mr. Booth. Yes, it was.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What Distance was there?

Mr. Booth. It was on a large Sheet of Paper: The Direction was very small, being only To Mr. Robert Booth, Bristol; and could not fill up a large Space.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What Distance do you think between the Top of the Word Free, and the Bottom of these Words of Superscription immediately over it?

Mr. Booth. I believe there might be an Inch.

Mr. Sol. Gen. The Question that I ask is, Whether, after this Direction To Mr. Robert Booth, Bristol, Free Thomas Gibson was not perpendicularly?

Mr. Booth. I cannot say on what Part of the Letter.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Was Free Thomas Gibson wrote so much on the Side, that it was possible that any other Words should be wrote above it?

Mr. Booth I believe that it might be so.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Here is a Direction To Mr. Robert Booth, Bristol; Where was the Word Bristol? Was it towards the left Hand, or was it towards the Bottom of the Superscription?

Mr. Booth. I cannot say how much to the Bottom; but I know that Mr. Gibson generally wrote loose.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Whereabout was the Word Free wrote?

Mr. Booth. Towards the left-hand Corner, and Bristol towards the right-hand Corner.

Mr. Sol. Gen. I ask one Question more; Did Mr. Gibson ever give Franks, without writing himself the Superscription?

Mr. Booth. I know not but that sometimes he may.

Mr. Strange. I desire he may fold it thus, (producing a Sheet of Paper which he had folded) This Half Sheet as large as you can:—Suppose you see where the Name Thomas Gibson is wrote, I inquire whether, when the Direction was over it, there was Room to tear off such a Paper as this, (shewing the Note) and have none of the Direction? You see the Distance from Free Thomas Gibson to the Top of the Paper; Was the Folding so large, that there might be the Direction torn off, and yet this (the Note) remain?

Mr. Booth. As I remember, it was a very large Sheet of Paper, and very largely folded. This I remember the more particularly, because Mr. Hales hath endeavoured the same Thing since, and I have some of them by me. I believe the Paper was large enough that there might be the Direction torn off.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Pray, will you look where Mr. Gibson's Name is wrote, and tell me whether you apprehend that End is torn or cut?

Mr. Booth. This was the torn End, and the other answers exactly.

Mr. Robert Booth called and sworn.

Mr. Att. Gen. Sir, have you ever had any Letter by the Post from Mr. William Hales?

Mr. R. Booth. No, Sir; I never had any Letter from him by the General Post.

Mr.

Mr. Att. Gen. Can you recollect that you ever had a Letter from any body, franked with the Name of Thomas Gibſon?

Mr. R. Booth. I never had, I am poſitively ſure of that.

Mr. Att. Gen. Do you live at Briſtol?

Mr. R. Booth. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Att. Gen. Do you know of any other Perſon there of your Name?

Mr. R. Booth. None at all.

Mr. Att. Gen. Pray, had you ever any Letter from Mr. Hales, either franked or otherwiſe?

Mr. R. Booth. No, nor ever any Correſpondence with him.

Thomas Rumſey called and ſworn.

The Note propoſed to be read, and read accordingly.

Auguſt 27, 1728.

I promiſe to pay to George Watſon, Eſq. or Bearer, the Sum of ſix thouſand four hundred Pounds, at Demand, the like Value received. For myſelf and Partners,

£. 6400. THO. GIBSON.

Then the Note was handed about amongſt the Jury.

Mr. Att. Gen. Now, Gentlemen, it is proper for you to take Notice of the Obſervations that have been made by the Witneſſes upon the Appearance and View of the Note, the Size and Folding of the Paper, the Raſure, the Difference of the Ink, the Letter o in the Word For, and the other Letters. I deſire that you will look on it, and judge whether the Side of the Paper next to the Name hath been torn off from ſomething elſe, or is as it was originally. We ſhall, in the next Place, ſhew the Uſe that was made of this Note.——Mr. Rumſey, do you know the Defendant, William Hales?——Rumſ. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Att. Gen. How long have you known him?

Rumſ. I knew him above a Twelve-month agone.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did you ſee him at all in September laſt?

Rumſ. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Att. Gen. What Trade or Buſineſs are you of yourſelf?

Rumſ. I have been at Sea ever ſince ſix Years of Age, except when in Harbour.

Mr. Att. Gen. Well, Sir; What Time was it in September that you ſaw Mr. Hales, and what Buſineſs did he employ you in?

Rumſ. I ſaw him every Day.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did you ſee him September the 7th?----Rumſ. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Att. Gen. What Day of the Week was it?

Rumſ. Saturday.

Mr. Att. Gen. What did he ſay to you?

Rumſ. He bid me go into the City, and to dreſs me in theſe Cloaths.

Mr. Att. Gen. What Cloaths had you on before?

Rumſ. A lightiſh-coloured Coat, with a red Waiſtcoat and Breeches.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did he ſay any thing about your Hat?

Rumſ. When he ſpoke to me to go into the City with him, I had then a laced Hat on, a new Hat, with a broad open Lace.

Mr. Att. Gen. What did he ſay to you about it?

Rumſ. He told me, he had rather I ſhould wear a plain one, and aſked if I had one; I told him, No; he then deſired me to take his own.

Mr. Att. Gen. What Time of the Day was this?

Rumſ. About Four or Five in the Afternoon, as near as I can gueſs.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did he tell you on what Buſineſs you were to go into the City?-----Rumſ. No, Sir.

Mr. Att. Gen. Whence did you ſet out?

Rumſ. From his own Houſe in Duke-Street, Weſtminſter.

Mr. Att. Gen. When you came into the Strand, did you do any thing there?

Rumſ. He went into a Shop, and bought me a Pocket-Book. (Produces the Pocket-Book.)

Mr. Att. Gen. Let us ſee it.—When you had bought that, where did you go afterwards?

Rumſ. To Holborn, to a Place where they ſell Perukes.

Mr. Att. Gen. Was it Middle-Row?

Rumſ. I believe it might be; but I never was there before.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did he tell you he would preſent you with one?

Rumſ. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Att. Gen. What Sort of one was it?

Rumſ. I have it in my Pocket. (Pulls out a dark-coloured Peruke.)

Mr. Att. Gen. Put it on; I do not obſerve that you wear now a dark Peruke. Did you uſe to wear one?——Rumſ. No, Sir.

Mr. Att. Gen. What Peruke had you on before, when he made you change it?

Rumſ. This, Sir, that I have here. (A light-coloured Peruke.)

Mr. Att. Gen. After he had fitted you with a Peruke, whither did he carry you?

Rumſ. To John's Coffee-houſe in Shire-Lane. He did not tell me whither we were going, nor for what.

Mr. Att. Gen. What happened there?

Rumſ. We went into a back Room, and had Pen and Ink brought us. Immediately a Porter came in.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did the Porter ſpeak to you?

Rumſ. No; he aſked the Porter; if he wanted me? He ſaid, Yes. The Porter produced a Letter directed to me, and he bid me open it.

Mr. Att. Gen. What did you find in it?

Rumſ. I found a Note for 6400*l.* payable to George Watſon, Eſq. or Bearer.

Mr. Att. Gen. Look on that; tell us whether you believe that to be the Note?

Rumſ. Yes, Sir; I take that to be the ſame Note, to the beſt of my Knowledge.

Mr. Att. Gen. What elſe did you find in the Letter?

Rumſ. I found written Lady Harriot Elliott 4300*l. Sir John Hynde Cotton* 2100*l. payable to them or Bearer.*

Mr. Att. Gen. Where was it written?

Rumſ. In the Body of the Letter.

Mr. Att. Gen. Was there any thing wrote to you in the Letter?

Rumſ. No, Sir; I remember only theſe two Names and Sums.

Mr. Att. Gen. What did he order you to write under theſe Names?

Rumſ. James Moreton, or Bearer.

Mr. Att. Gen. After he had bid you write this Name, what did he do with the Paper?

Rumſ. Tore theſe Names off.

Mr. Att. Gen. What did he do with the reſt of the Letter?

Rumſ. I know not.

Mr. Att. Gen. When he had torn off theſe Names, together with what you had added, what did he do with that Part?

Rumſ. He put it in the Pocket-Book, with the Note of 6400*l.* and a 40*l.* Note and two other Notes. He then ordered me to go to Mr. Snow and Poltock's Shop, to give them the 40*l.* Note and the two other Notes, and to take their Note, payable to James Moreton, or Bearer.

Mr. Att. Gen. For what Sum?

Rumſ. I cannot tell exactly the Sum, but ſuppoſe it about 70*l.* If I was aſked, what Moreton, I was to tell them that he lived at the upper End of Bond-Street; but I never knew him. He ordered me to deſire for the 6400*l.* Note, their Notes for 4300*l.* payable to Lady Harriot Elliott, and 2100*l.* payable to Sir John Hynde Cotton, or Bearer.

Mr. Att. Gen. What further Directions did he give you?

Rumſ. If my Name was aſked, he bid me ſay that it was Thomas Fowler, or any other; it was an indifferent Thing, and I might make Uſe of any Name but my own. He had been ſo very kind to me, and I had ſo good an Opinion that he deſigned no Ill, that I readily did as he ordered me.

Mr. Att. Gen. After he had given you this Pocket-Book with theſe Notes and Inſtructions, whither did you go?

Rumſ. To Mr. Snow and Poltock's.

Mr. Att. Gen. Whither did Mr. Hales go?

Rumſ. A little Way to ſhew me the Houſe.

Mr. Att. Gen. What happened at this Shop?

Rumſ. I aſked for their Note for the ſmall Notes, which they readily gave me. I then produced the other Note, and deſired their Notes; the Gentleman ſaid, he did not care to accept it, becauſe it was not all of Mr. Gibſon's own Hand-writing.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did he mention any other Reaſon?

Rumſ. I remember not.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did he aſk your Name?

Rumſ. I think he did, and I told him Thomas Fowler.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did any thing further happen there?

Rumſ. No, Sir.

Mr. Att. Gen. What did you do then?

Rumſ. I went back; Mr. Hales met me a little Way off, on that Side of Temple-Bar next the Shop.

Mr. Att. Gen. Had he appointed to meet you there?

Rumſ. No, Sir.

Mr. Att. Gen. Was it within View of the Shop?

Rumſ. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Att. Gen. What did you ſay to him, when you came back?

Rumſ. He aſked me what I had got, and I told him; then we went back to John's Coffee-houſe, where I gave him the Note; he then bid me write, inſtead of Lady Harriot Elliott, Sir Richard Groſvenor.

Mr. Att. Gen. On the ſame Paper, or another?

Rumſ. I cannot ſay.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did he bid you ſtrike out the Name Lady Harriot Elliott?

Rumſ. No; but write on a plain Paper, To Sir Richard Groſvenor 4300*l. to Sir John Hynde Cotton* 2100*l. payable to them or Bearer.*

Mr. Att. Gen. After this, what further Directions did he give you?

Rumſ. He ordered me to go to Mr. Hoare's in Fleet-Street; he went oppoſite to the Shop, and ſhewed me the Shop.

Mr. Att. Gen. What Time of the Afternoon was it?

Rumſ. A little before it was dark.

Mr. Att. Gen. What o'Clock?

Rumſ. Half an Hour or three Quarters before it was dark.

Mr. Att. Gen. What Inſtructions did he give you to obſerve at that Shop?

Rumſ. To receive for this Note their Notes for 4300*l.* to Sir Richard Groſvenor, and 2100*l.* to Sir John Hynde Cotton, payable to them or to the Bearers.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did he give you Directions about taking any other Note?

Rumſ. I have a Notion of ſome other Note, but I cannot ſay poſitively what it was, but it did not exceed 70*l.*

Mr. Att. Gen. Did he give you any thing in Notes or Caſh?

Rumſ. Much the ſame as before.

Mr. Att. Gen. You ſay you had a Note from Mr. Poltock; Did Mr. Hales return that to you?

Rumſ. I cannot ſay poſitively; but it was that, or ſome other Notes, not exceeding 70*l.*

Mr. Att. Gen. Did he give you any Directions as to your own Name?

Rumſ. The ſame as before, Thomas Fowler.

Mr. Att. Gen. When you went to this Shop, what Peruke had you on?

Rumſ. The dark one, and the other in my Pocket.

Mr. Att. Gen. What paſſed at Mr. Hoare's Shop?

Rumſ. I received their Notes, one for 4300*l.* payable to Sir Richard Groſvenor or Bearer, the other for 2100*l.* payable to Sir John Hynde Cotton or Bearer.

Mr. Att. Gen. What did you give for them?

Rumſ. The Note of 6400*l.*

Mr. Att. Gen. What for the ſmaller Note?

Rumſ. I cannot tell.

Mr. Att. Gen. For what Sum was that?

Rumſ. I remember not, but it did not exceed 70*l.*

Mr. Att. Gen. Where did you find Mr. Hales?

Rumſ. He told me he would wait for me at a Fruit-ſtall at the End of a Court about ſix Doors further. I went thither, and delivered the Notes.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did you deliver him the Notes at the Fruit-ſtall?

Rumſey.

Rumſey. I cannot be poſitive whether there, or at the Coffee-houſe.

Mr. Attorney General. Do you know the Court where the Fruit-ſtall was? Was it Mitre-Court?

Rumſ. I know not, not being acquainted with the Town.

Mr. Att. Gen. How far from Mr. Hoare's?—Rumſ. About Six Doors.

Mr. Att. Gen. When you gave him the Notes, did you deliver them with the Pocket-Book, or without?

Rumſ. Pocket-Book and all.

Mr. Att. Gen. Where did you go afterwards?

Rumſ. He took a Coach, and bid the Coachman drive to the Royal-Exchange.

Mr. Att. Gen. Whither did he go when he came there?

Rumſ. He went out of the Coach, went a little Way with me to Janeway's Coffee-houſe, called for Pen, Ink, and Paper, and bid me write 1200 l. 1100 l. 1000 l. 1000 l. to Samuel Palmer or Bearer.

Mr. Att. Gen. What Inſtructions did he give you about Samuel Palmer?

Rumſ. To ſay that he lived in Manſel-Street, in Goodman's-Fields.

Mr. Att. Gen. After you had done this, whither did you go next?

Rumſ. Next he carried me to Mr. Woodward's, a Banker in Exchange-Alley. It was then dark. He bid me deſire their Notes for theſe Sums, payable to Samuel Palmer or Bearer, in Lieu of the 4300 l. Note of Mr. Hoare's.

Mr. Att. Gen. What happened there?

Rumſ. They ſaid they could not do it.

Mr. Att. Gen. Where did you go next?

Rumſ. I went to him, who was cloſe by the Door. He took me to Mr. Braſſey's, bade me deſire their Notes for the ſame Sum, in lieu of Mr. Hoare's Note payable to Sir Richard Groſvenor. They gave me the Notes; they aſked me, what Mr. Palmer it was? I ſaid, that he lived in Manſel-Street, Goodman's-Fields.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did you ſay any thing further of him?

Rumſ. I think not; if I did, it was what Mr. Hales directed me.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did they aſk your Name?

Rumſ. I am not poſitive; if they did, I told them as elſewhere, Thomas Fowler.

Mr. Att. Gen. Whither did you carry the Notes?

Rumſ. I carried them to Mr. Hales.

Mr. Att. Gen. Where was he?

Rumſ. He was by a Shop at the Corner of a Court; he was in the Court, and came to me there. This was a little beyond Mr. Hals's Door. He bid me aſk the Price of South-Sea Bonds, and aſk them, whether they could get 1000 l. worth by Monday Morning? They ſaid, they believed they could. We then went to Janeway's Coffee-houſe.

Mr. Att. Gen. What did he then?

Rumſ. He called for ſomething, paid for it, went to Stocks-Market, thence took Coach, and went Home.

Mr. Att. Gen. Where did you go? Did you leave him there?

Rumſ. No, I ſupped with him.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did he make any further Appointment with you?

Rumſ. He bid me be ready on Monday Morning in the ſame Cloaths.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Where was you?

Rumſ. I was at his Houſe; he lodged me there.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did any thing elſe happen on Saturday?

Rumſ. No, Sir.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Was you to put on the ſame Hat and Peruke?

Rumſ. Yes, Sir; and he ordered the Man to comb and powder it.

Mr. Sol. Gen. On Monday Morning did you do as directed?

Rumſ. Yes, and he then told out twenty Broad Pieces and ten Guineas.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Thoſe Notes that you received at Mr. Braſſey's, do you know the Date of them?

Rumſ. Yes, Sir; Monday Morning, September the 9th.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What did you with them?

Rumſ. I delivered them to Mr. Hales.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What did you do on Monday Morning?

Rumſ. He then walked to Janeway's Coffee-houſe; he did not tell me whither he was going, nor what I was to do.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What happened there?

Rumſ. He read the News, bid me call for what I wanted, he would pay for it; I drank two Diſhes of Chocolate.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What did you there?

Rumſ. He told me, that it was too ſoon to go to Mr. Hals's for the Bonds, it being then between Eight and Nine o'Clock; ſo he told me, that he would ſend me with ſome Notes to Mr. Alderman Hankey's.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What Directions did he give you?

Rumſ. He went oppoſite to Mr. Alderman Hankey's.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What Notes did he give you?

Rumſ. One Note of 2100 l. another of Mr. Hoare's for 70 l. payable to Samuel Palmer or Bearer.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What did you do after you received theſe Directions?

Rumſ. I went to Janeway's Coffee-houſe, and there delivered the Notes to him.

Mr. Sol. Gen. But firſt did you not carry them to Alderman Hankey's?

Rumſ. I got them changed there, delivered them to Mr. Hales at Janeway's Coffee-houſe, one of 1050 l. and another of 1100 l. both payable to Samuel Palmer or Bearer, and 20 l. in Money. He gave me theſe again, and the 20 l. in Money.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What did you do with the Money?

Rumſ. He bid me keep it in my Pocket with the reſt of the Money that I had received of him. He then ſent to Mr. Hals's for the Bonds.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What Quantity?

Rumſ. A thouſand Pounds worth.

Mr. Sol. Gen. In whoſe Name did you buy them?

Rumſ. In Mr. Samuel Palmer's

Mr. Sol. Gen. Who directed you to buy them?—Rumſ. Mr. Hales.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What Name did you take?

Rumſ. Thomas Fowler, as before.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What did you do with the Bonds?

Rumſ. I delivered them to Mr. Hales; he ſent me to ſee for 2400 l. worth more; I came back and told him, that I could get no more than 400 l. worth more.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What then?

Rumſ. He ſent me for 2000 l. of India Bonds, and gave me Notes to pay for them all.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you know what the Notes were that he gave you?

Rumſ. I cannot tell; but I believe that they were ſome of the Notes that I had received before.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What did you do with them?

Rumſ. I went and bought the Bonds. The Notes coming to more, they gave me the Balance in Money; and I deſired them to give me a Bag, which they did.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Was there any Account made up by Mr. Hals?

Rumſ. His Clerk caſt it up on a Paper, and gave me a Note what they came to.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Have you that Note by you?

Rumſ. No; I gave it with the Bonds to him.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What was you directed next?

Rumſ. I told him, that I was to go to Mr. Edward Jaſper to receive my Pay. He bid me put it off. I told him that I could not. He bid me, when I had received it, to return to him. I went and received it, 35 l. odd Money. I then came to him, and deſired him to take the remaining Money. He ſaid, that he had not Time to reckon it, but bid me come to him at Janeway's. He bid me not go through Fenchurch-Street.

Mr. Sol. Gen. For what Reaſon?

Rumſ. He did not tell me the Reaſon.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Was any Shop that you was at there?

Rumſ. Yes, Mr. Alderman Hankey's.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you obſerve his Directions?

Rumſ. Yes, I came back to Janeway's Coffee-houſe through Leaden-hall-Street.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Was he there?---Rumſ. Not at firſt, but I ſtayed for him.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What Time of the Day was it?

Rumſ. About Two o'Clock, Monday Noon.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What Directions did he give you then?

Rumſ. He bid me dine with him. I thought he was going Home directly; but he turned aſide to the Bank, which I aſked him if it was a Church. He told me, it was the Bank. He gave me two Notes of 200 l. each, bidding me, when I had received the Money, to come to him at Robin's Coffee-houſe in the Old-Jewry. He peeped through the Saſh-Door, and directed me to a Gentleman at the left-hand Side. I went to him, who directed me to the other Side. They bid me ſtay a little. One of them went out and called a Conſtable, and ſtopt me.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What did they aſk you?

Rumſ. I was ſo confuſed and ſurprized, that I could not give a ſenſible Anſwer.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Had you any Name given you to go by at the Bank, if aſked your Name there?

Rumſ. Yes, Sir; at every Place I was to ſay Thomas Fowler.

Mr. Sol. Gen. I would have you recollect yourſelf, whether when you was receiving the Money, Mr. Hales came in to do any thing?

Rumſ. No, not at all.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Afterwards was you preſent when Mr. Hales was brought in?

Rumſ. I ſaw him carried up Stairs, but ſpake not to him.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Was you preſent at his Examination?—Rumſ. No, Sir.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you receive any more Money than what you have mentioned?

Rumſ. No, Sir, nor knew nothing till he gave me Directions.

Mr. Sol. Gen. You ſay, that they ſeized you at the Bank; Did you acquaint them where the Perſon was that gave you the Notes?

Rumſ. I told them at Robin's Coffee-houſe in the Alley near the Bank.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did they go to find him according to your Directions?

Rumſ. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you ſee them bring any body back in Cuſtody?

Rumſ. They brought him ſecured, and carried him up Stairs.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you ſee him?—Rumſ. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Was that Perſon, that you ſaw in the Room, the ſame that gave you the Bills (that you brought to the Bank) at the Coffee-houſe?

Rumſ. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Pray, will you look on that Note? Is that the Note that you received of Mr. Hales?

Rumſ. Yes, I take it to be the ſame Note; that was for 6400 l. and the Name was Gibſon; it was payable to George Watſon, Eſq; or Bearer.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. Mr. Rumſey, pray was not you engaged to go a Journey ſomewhere with Mr. Hales?

Rumſ. He told me on Monday Morning, that he was about going into the Country.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. Where was you to go?

Rumſ. He told me not where; but aſked me to ride out with him, and directed me where to get a Pair of Boots.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. On your Oath, was not the Peruke bought for riding in?—Rumſ. No, Sir.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. What was your Apprehenſion of theſe Things?

Rumſ. He having been ſo kind to me, I had a good Opinion of him.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What of this Tranſaction?

Rumſ. I thought that there was nothing wrong in it.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. When was it that he told you firſt of his going into the Country?---Rumſ. On Monday.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. Did he not mention it on Saturday?

Rumſ. No, Sir.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. Did not he mention Harlow?---Rumſ. No, Sir.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. You ſay, that this Note was ſent incloſed to you when at John's Coffee-houſe; Were there no Names in the Letter but thoſe two you mentioned, nor no Directions what to do with it?

Rumſ. No, Sir.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. You ſay, that you have been acquainted with Mr. Hales ever ſince the 8th of June; between that and September did you tranſact Affairs for him?

Rumſey. No; he deſired me once before to write a Promiſſory Note, but no Name to it.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. You ſay, that you lay at Mr. Hales's Houſe on Saturday Night September the 7th; Did not you lie there the Month before?

Rumſey. I lay there from the 8th of June, or thereabouts.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. Sir, you ſay, that you went in Diſguiſe; Did any then know you? What Occaſion was there for this Diſguiſe?

Mr. Juſt. Page. A Perſon in this Town every body may know; therefore it was proper to go in a Diſguiſe that no one might know him in. I find that they would have it thought that theſe Cloaths (the red Waiſtcoat and Breeches and Peruke) were for riding out: When you went firſt, did you go with them?

Rumſey. Yes, my Lord.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. When did he talk of riding out?

Rumſey. On Monday Morning he ſaid, he had Buſineſs to ride out on Tueſday or Wedneſday.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. When you lay at his Houſe on Saturday or Sunday Night, did he bid you be ready on Monday Morning, and have on the ſame Cloaths?----Rumſey. Yes.

Mr. Serj. Whitaker. Give me leave to propoſe to the Court a Queſtion, to aſk the Witneſs, whether he had ever been concerned in negociating Bills, or doing ſuch Buſineſs for any body?

Mr. Juſt. Page. He ſaith, he never did do any thing for Mr. Hales, but this Job of theſe Bills, except once writing a Promiſſory Note.

Mr. Serj. Whit. My Lord, that Queſtion was confined to Mr. Hales: But I would deſire, that he may be aſked the ſame Queſtion in general.

Mr. Juſt. Page. No, but he ſhall not indeed.

Mr. Serj. Whit. My Lord, we will now call other Witneſſes to confirm the ſeveral Steps that were afterwards taken.

Mr. Poltock called and ſworn.

Mr. Serj. Whit. Sir, look on that Paper; Have you ever ſeen that before? Tell us who brought it to you?

Mr. Poltock. A young Man on a Saturday came to my Shop; he ſaid that he had Money to pay; he pulled out a Bank-Note for 50*l.* I apprehended that it might be for ſome Cuſtomer. I aſked him where the Perſon lived; he told me about Bond-Street. I looked on the Note, and ſaw it was ſigned For Wanly and Company. Afterwards he produced this Note; ſaid he, I have another Note. I looked upon it wiſtfully, and told him thereupon, that I would not take it. Why not? (ſaid he.) Becauſe (ſaid I) not wrote by Mr. Gibſon. It is (ſaid he) ſigned by him. I told him that I would not meddle with it. He ſaid, it was late, and he ſhould have a good deal of Trouble with it; and was going to ſhew me ſome Paper to confirm its being Mr. Gibſon's Hand. I told him, that as I would not receive the Note, I would not regard it. He laid before me a Paper with two Names and Sums, Lady Elliott's and another Name.

Mr. Serj. Whit. Pray, Sir, mind the Folds, and ſee whether or no it is the very ſame Paper.

Mr. Poltock. Yes; I told the young Man, when he ſhewed it me, that Mr. Gibſon on ſuch a Paper as this would not write a Note for ſuch a Sum; therefore I would not medddle with it.

Mr. Serj. Whit. You ſaw the Witneſs that was laſt examined; Is he the ſame Perſon that brought you the Note, or not?

Mr. Pol. If he had the ſame Wig on, I believe I might know him.

Mr. Serj. Whit. Let him put the Wig on. (Rumſey puts on the dark Wig.)

Mr. Pol. Yes, I verily believe that that is the ſame Perſon, though I never ſaw him before nor ſince. He was a good genteel young Man, with a dark Wig.

Mr. Serj. Whit. What Cloaths had he on?

Mr. Pol. I cannot directly ſay, not knowing.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Now we are going to Mr. Hoare's Shop.

Mr. Turner called and ſworn.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Mr. Turner, look on that Paper; When did you ſee it firſt?

Mr. Turner. On Saturday Evening, September the 7th laſt.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Pray, can you recollect with yourſelf, who it was that brought it you?

Mr. Turner. Sir, I did not ſee Mr. Rumſey when he came into the Shop firſt.

Mr. Richard Hoare called and ſworn.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Mr. Richard Hoare, pray tell us when you ſaw that Bill firſt?

Mr. Hoare. On the 7th of September laſt, about Seven o'Clock in the Evening. That Gentleman (as I take it) produced Mr. Snow's Note, and a Bank-Note of 25*l.* for which I gave him our Note for 70*l.* After which he produced this Note of Mr. Gibſon's Hand, and another Paper, deſiring our Notes for that Sum. I had not been long in the Buſineſs, and not knowing Mr. Gibſon's Hand-writing, called Mr. Turner to tranſact that Affair, after I had given the 70*l.* Note.

(The Note read.)

Sir Richard Groſvenor, Bart. 4300*l.*
Sir John Hynde Cotton, 2100*l.*

Mr. Sol. Gen. Whoſe Hand-writing is this?

Rumſey. It is mine, Sir.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you remember what you did with that Note, or where you delivered it?---Rumſey. At Mr. Hoare's.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Mr. Turner, will you give us an Account what was done upon the producing that Bill?

Mr. Turner. Mr. Hoare ſent for me. I think there lay upon the Counter both the Note Mr. Rumſey brought for 6400*l.* and this little Direction. I made theſe Notes payable accordingly, knowing that Sir John Hynde Cotton did Buſineſs at Mr. Hoare's Shop.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Doth he?---Mr. Turner. Yes, Sir, he frequently doth.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Produce the three Notes given at Mr. Hoare's Shop.

Mr. Turner. Theſe are the Notes (producing the Notes) which I gave in Exchange for Mr. Gibſon's Note, and the 70*l.* Note Mr. Hoare wrote, and I ſigned them, and gave them to Mr. Rumſey.

Mr. Sol. Gen. You ſay, theſe are the Notes that you gave in Exchange for that Note; Do you know what became of that Bill afterwards?

Mr. Turner. After that I had delivered theſe Notes, I had this Note (Mr. Gibſon*'s* 6400*l. Note)* in Exchange, brought into Mr. Hoare's Caſh, in lieu of the other.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you ſend it out?

Mr. Turner. Yes, upon Monday Morning.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Will you give us an Account what was done upon this?

Mr. Turner. I know nothing further.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Theſe Notes which you have produced, can you give an Account what became of them, or when they were brought back to Mr. Hoare's?

Mr. Turner. I did nothing further about them.

(The Notes read.)

I promiſe to pay Sir John Hynde Cotton, or Bearer, two thouſand one hundred Pounds, on Demand, for Meſſ. Benjamin and Henry Hoare and Partner.
WILLIAM TURNER.

Sept. 7th, 1728.

I promiſe to pay to Sir Richard Groſvenor, or Bearer, four thouſand three hundred Pounds, on Demand, for Meſſ. Benjamin and Henry Hoare and Partner.
WILLIAM TURNER.

I promiſe to pay James Moreton, Eſq. or Bearer, ſeventy Pounds, on Demand, for Meſſ. Benjamin and Henry Hoare and Partner.
Sept. 7th, 1728. WILLIAM TURNER.

Mr. George Lee called and ſworn.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Where is it that you live?

Mr. Lee. At Mr. Braſſey's in Lombard-Street.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you ever ſee that Note before? (Mr. Hoare*'s Note for* 4300*l.)*----Mr. Lee. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Upon what Occaſion, or when was it?

Mr. Lee. It was on Saturday Sept. 7th brought by Mr. Rumſey to Mr. Braſſey's in Lombard Street, near Seven o'Clock in the Evening.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What paſſed upon it?

Mr. Lee. Being brought there by him, he pulled a Paper out of his Pocket, deſiring four Notes payable to Samuel Palmer. I have three of them by me, and an Account of the other. One was for 1200*l* two for 1000*l.* each, the other for 1100*l.*

Mr. Sol. Gen. What did you give him them in Exchange for?

Mr. Lee. Mr. Hoare's Note for 4300*l.*

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you aſk who Palmer was?

Mr. Lee. He told me that he lived in Manſel-Street, in Goodman's-Fields. I aſked him, whether he was a Merchant? He ſaid, that he could not tell. We had a Perſon dealt with us before of that Name. I aſked, whether it was he? He ſaid, that he could not tell. I enquired at Woodward's, where Mr. Hoare doth Buſineſs; they ſaid that there had been a Perſon there of the ſame Name. I began to ſuſpect ſomething. I then went to Mr. Hoare's, to inquire whether it was their Note; they acquainted me that it was, and ſhewed me Mr. Gibſon's. I ſaid that I believed the Name was Mr. Gibſon's Hand, but not the Body of the Note.

Mr. Sol. Gen. This Tranſaction was on the Saturday, Sept. 7th; How came the Bills to be dated the 9th?

Mr. Lee. Our Accounts were balanced for that Day, it being late in the Evening; therefore they were dated the 9th.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What became of them afterwards?

Mr. Lee. They came back again: Two of them came the ſame Day, the other the next Morning.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Who brought them?

Mr. Lee. The moſt of the Money was paid to Mr. Hals the Broker; there was 650*l.* paid to a Perſon who brought one of the Notes in the Morning; I believe that it was about Ten o'Clock. We aſked him his Name; he ſaid, it was John Roberts. He wanted to have 650*l.* to be wrote off from one of the Notes and wanted the Money for it. As I had ſome Reaſon to ſuſpect on the Saturday Night, and he coming ſo ſoon on the Monday Morning, I aſked him, whom he came from? He ſaid, Mr. Manſel. I heſitating, he ſaid, the Gentleman that it was to; I ſaid, Palmer; he ſaid Palmer in Manſel-Street. I did not know but that there might be ſome Demur on Mr. Hoare's Note; therefore, to protract Time, I told him that he might receive the Money at the Bank. I gave him Bank-Notes:

N°. 11, payable to Mr. Hankey, 100*l*
106, payable to Mr. Collett, 50*l.*
131, payable to Mr. Charles Shales, 500*l.*
Which together made up 650*l.*

Mr. Sol. Gen. You wrote off 650*l.* Did you deliver the Note, when indorſed to the Perſon that brought it?---Mr. Lee. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Sol. Gen. This was a 1200*l.* Note; How was the other 500*l.* paid?

Mr. Lee. The other Part was paid off at ſeveral Payments to Mr. Hals.

Mr. Sol. Gen. As you have given an Account of that Note, can you give an Account of the other?

Mr. Lee. Two to Mr. Hals, Sir, at ſeveral Payments.

Mr. Sol. Gen. How much was each for?

Mr. Lee. A thouſand Pounds.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Well then, of theſe Notes two for a thouſand Pounds each have been paid; Hath the 1100*l.* Note been paid?

Mr. Lee. Four hundred and twenty Pounds have been paid as Part of the 1100*l.* and the reſt is out-ſtanding ſtill.

Mr.

Mr. Sol Gen. Do you remember the Form of the Perſon that came to you by the Name of Roberts? Is that Man the Perſon? (Pointing to Robert Hall.)

Mr. Lee. Yes, Sir, I believe that is the Perſon.

Robert Hall called and ſworn.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Mr. Hall, pray what Trade are you of?

Hall. A Taylor, Sir.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you ever work for Mr. Hales?

Hall. Yes, Sir, ſeveral Years.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you know him?---Hall. Yes, very well, Sir.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Had you any Converſation with him in September laſt?

Hall. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did he ſend for you?

Hall. He ſent his Footman for me, September 8th, Sunday Night.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What Meſſage did the Footman bring you?

Hall. He came and knocked at the Door; my Wife opened the Door. He deſired to ſpeak with me; ſhe ſaid that I was in Bed. He came up, opened the Curtain, told me he had a Meſſage for me, I muſt be with his Maſter at Nine o'Clock on Monday Morning at Lloyd's Coffee-houſe in Lombard-Street; I ſaid, that I muſt be with Mr. Rumſey at that Time to take Orders for Cloaths; he told me, that I ſhould meet Rumſey there. I went to Lloyd's, and walked in the Coffee-Room. Whilſt I was there, there came up one Leigh, who aſked me what Buſineſs I came about? I ſaid, That I could not tell, but waited for 'Squire Hales. I aſked him what his Buſineſs was? He ſaid, that he had a Letter to meet him there. I drank ſomething there before Mr. Hales came, which was the beſt Part of an Hour. He firſt mentioned ſomething to Leigh; he then aſked me to ſtay one half Hour more. Accordingly I ſat down. He talked awhile with Leigh. When Leigh was diſmiſſed (whither I cannot tell) he took me up. In the Paſſage he gave me a Note, and deſired me to go to Mr. Braſſey's, and receive 650 l. upon that Note.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What Note was it?---Hall. About 1200 l.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What Directions did he give you?

Hall. He told me to go to Mr. Braſſey's the Banker, at the Acorn; he told me to receive 650 l. on this Note; he told me to mind that there was no Miſtake. If (ſaid he) they offer to pay you Silver, give them Half a Crown to pay it you in Gold. He told me that ſix hundred and nineteen Guineas and one Shilling would make juſt 650 l. I took theſe Notes (the Bank-Notes he received at Mr. Braſſey's) : He looked them over, and ſaid that it was all very right.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Look on that Paper: Did you ever ſee that Paper before? Is that the Note that you delivered to Mr. Braſſey?

Hall. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Sol. Gen. You ſay, that you had Inſtructions to receive it in Gold: Did they pay it in Gold?---Hall. No, Sir, three Bank-Notes.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What was the Amount of them?

Hall. Six hundred and fifty Pounds.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What did you do with them?

Hall. I gave them to Mr. Hales.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did they write upon the Note?

Hall. Yes, they diſcounted this 650 l.

Mr. Sol. Gen. When ſent by Mr. Hales, had you Inſtructions what Name you ſhould go by?---Hall. Yes. John Roberts.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Of what Place?

Hall. The Hay-Market, or any Place where I pleaſed that Way?

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you ſee him while you were in the Shop?

Hall. Yes, I ſaw him paſs by, and turn again.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Where was he when you gave him the Bank-Notes?

Hall. In the Paſſage in Lloyd's Coffee-houſe.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Theſe Bank-Notes for 650 l. which you delivered to Mr. Hales, did you ever ſee them again afterwards?

Hall. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Upon what Occaſion?

Hall. He told me, that if I would take a Walk under the Piazza by the Royal Exchange, he would come to me. Accordingly he came to me, and at the Coffee-houſe (Janeway's Coffee-houſe) gave me them again. He aſked me, whether I was ever at the Bank? I told him, that I had been within it, but never received any Money there for myſelf or any body elſe. He bid me go and receive this in Gold, or if I ſhould be offered Silver, to do as directed before.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What was you to do with it?

Hall. To bring it to him at this Coffee-houſe (Janeway's).

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you go to the Bank?

Hall. I went to one there; he bid me go to another Gentleman, and he would ſign my Bills. I went to him, he ſigned them; I then went again to the ſame Perſon, who paid me the Money for them.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Were they the ſame Bills which you had received at Mr. Braſſey's?---Hall. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you receive it in Gold or Silver?

Hall. In Gold.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you ſee him when you was at the Bank?

Hall. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Whereabouts?

Hall. Within one or two of the Tellers whom I received my Money of.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did he take any Notice of you?---Hall. No, Sir.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Nor you of him?

Hall. No, being buſy receiving the Money.

Mr. Sol. Gen. He ſaw you, did not he?---Hall. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What did you do with it?

Hall. I took it at the Bank.——As I was going down Grocers-Alley, Mr. William Hales was ſtanding by the Alley, we turned into a Tavern (the Globe and Sceptre Tavern); he rang for the Drawer, and called for an half Pint of Wine. I gave him the Money, he counted it over, and we had done.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did he give you any Reaſon why he came into the Bank?

Hall. No; but ſaid, You was a long Time at the Bank.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did he offer you any thing for your Pains?

Hall. Yes; but I ſaid, that I would have nothing from a Gentleman that I had ſerved ſo long. He ſaid, if I would call on him the next Day, he would lend me ten Pounds, and I ſhould work it out.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Why did you go by the Name of Roberts?

Hall. I thought I might do any thing for Mr. Hales.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did he give you any Reaſon for it?

Hall. No, Sir.

Mr. Hankey called and ſworn.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Mr. Hankey, will you give an Account whether any Bills were brought to you, what they were, and by whom brought?

Mr. Hankey. Mr. Rumſey (this Gentleman here) came to me on Monday Morning, September the 9th, with two Notes, for which I gave him my Notes, payable to Samuel Palmer or Bearer, one for 1100 l. the other for 1050 l. which with 20 l. amounted to Mr. Hoare's Notes of 2100 l. and 70 l.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you aſk him his Name?

Mr. Hankey. No; but I aſked him who Samuel Palmer was, becauſe we had a Gentleman of that Name that had a Drawing Account with us, and I thought that this was to be put to his Account: But he told me, that it was a Gentleman in Manſel-Street in Goodman's-Fields. When he had done his Buſineſs, he went out of the Shop. He brought a little Bit of Paper, wherein was written to go to Alderman Hankey's and get the two Notes figured down 1100 l. 1050 l. and 20 l. in Money.

Mr. Sol. Gen. You have looked on Rumſey; Is that the very Man?

Mr. Hankey. Yes, Sir; I was with him, when, having been apprehended at the Bank, he was examined.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you remember any thing of one Lane's fetching any Money?

Mr. Hankey. If you will favour me with the Notes, I can tell the better. The 1100 l. Note was hardly dry, when he ſent a Porter-like Fellow, who came to a Servant of ours, and deſired that he would indorſe 550 l. and give it him in Guineas; he did it; he had it, and went out of the Shop. I believe that it was not an Hour before the ſame Perſon came again, and ſaid that Mr. Palmer begged Pardon for giving us ſuch Trouble, he did not know he ſhould ſo ſoon have Occaſion for it, deſired that we would give him the Remainder in Bank. I ſaid, that we had not juſt the Sum in Bank, but I would give it him in Money; he ſaid, then he muſt go and fetch a Bag. He went accordingly, and fetched a Bag. We aſked his Name; he ſaid, that it was Samuel Lane, and that he lived in Marine-Square. I gave him 523 Guineas and an half, and 6*s.* 6*d.* which compleated that Note. As to the other Note, it had not been written long, but a Servant to Mr. Hals, or he himſelf, came and deſired that I would give him a Note for 853 l. 14*s.* 5*d.* payable to him. I indorſed it, and gave him a Note for the Sum that he would have.

Mr. Sol. Gen. There are three Notes that compleat the Sum of 1050 l. Do you remember any Bank-Bills?

Mr. Hankey. I paid none at all.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you know any thing of the Reſidue being paid? Give an Account what you know of it.

Mr. Hankey. The Remainder was thus paid: 1100 l. was paid to Samuel Lane; 1050 l. by Indorſement for Samuel Palmer, for which the Perſon had a Note payable to Mr. John Hals for the ſame Sum; for the Remainder of that Note, two Notes were given payable, to James Hickman.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Was you preſent at the Bank, Sir, when Mr. Hales and Mr. Rumſey were ſeized?

Mr. Hankey. No; but I was there, Sir, when he was examined.

Mr. Benjamin Cole called and ſworn.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Mr. Cole, do you know Mr. Hals?

Mr. Cole. I live with him, Sir.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Are you his Servant, or Partner?

Mr. Cole. His Servant.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you know any thing of Mr. Rumſey?

Mr. Cole. On Saturday September 7th, he came about Seven o'Clock to me, and inquired the Price of South-Sea Bonds. He ſaid, that he ſhould want a large Parcel. I promiſed to get him them as cheap as I could.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What Name did he uſe?

Mr. Cole. None till Monday the 9th of September. I then bought ten South-Sea Bonds of 100 l. each; I aſked him what Name they ſhould be entered in? He ſaid, Samuel Palmer in Manſel-Street, in Goodman's-Fields. The Amount was 1058 l. 14*s.* 4*d.* for which he gave me Mr. Braſſey's Note for 1000 l. and the reſt in Money.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you obſerve the Date of that Note?

Mr. Cole. I did not obſerve the Note.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Were there any other Bonds?

Mr. Cole. He ſaid that he ſhould want more. This happening when there were but few came to Market, I told him I could not procure him ſo many as he mentioned. Then he deſired as many South-Sea Bonds as I could get, and the reſt India. I procured four more South-Sea Bonds, and twenty India Bonds. He paid me a Note of Mr. Braſſey's for 1000 l. and another Note of Mr. Braſſey's upon which there remained 550 l. and one Note of Mr. Hankey's for 1050 l. which made 2600 l. upon which Mr. Hals paid him 41 l. 2*s.* 3*d.* which made the Balance.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What Name did he take?

Mr. Cole. He ſaid that his Name was Thomas Fowler, and that he lived with Mr. Palmer.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Was there an Account drawn up?

Mr. Cole. Yes, Sir, this is the Abſtract of the Account.

For Mr. John Hals,
Benjamin Cole, jun.

Mr. Sol. Gen. How came you to make it up in this Manner, ſince he told you that it was for Samuel Palmer?

Mr. Cole. Yes, Sir, he did ſo; but we always mention alſo the Name of the Perſon that comes to us. This was the Particular of the Account.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Pray, Mr. Cole, do you remember that any body came to inquire for Mr. Rumſey?

Mr. Cole. There was a Perſon came and aſked for him by the Name of Fowler; to the beſt of my Memory, it was the Priſoner at the Bar. He came and aſked Mr. Hals, if he had any thing to do in South-Sea Bonds.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Was this Mr. Hales that aſked him this Queſtion?

Mr. Cole. Yes, Sir.

Then Mr. Lightfoot, a Porter, was called and ſworn.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you remember, Sir, any Time in September laſt, that you were ſent to Mr. Hals's Office to inquire for Mr. Thomas Fowler?---Lightfoot. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Sol. Gen. When?----Light. September the 9th.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What Day of the Week was it.---Light. Monday.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Who ſent you?----Light. Mr. William Hales.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Is that the Gentleman?---Light. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What was the Meſſage that he ſent you on?

Light. He ſent me to inquire for Mr. Thomas Fowler, and to tell him, that the Gentleman wanted him as ſoon as he could diſpatch his Buſineſs, to come immediately away with me to him.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you ſee any body at Hals's that anſwered the Name? Shew him Mr. Rumſey: Was that the Perſon?

Light. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did he come with you?

Light. Yes, Sir, he came with me directly to the Piazza under the Royal Exchange.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Whom did he meet there?---Light. Mr. Hales.

Mr. Sol. Gen. You had known Mr. Hales before, had you not?

Light. Yes, Sir, for twenty Years: I knew him when he was Partner with Sir Stephen Evance.

Mr. Sol. Gen. And are you ſure that that was the young Man that anſwered to the Name of Fowler?---Light. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Humphreys called and ſworn.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Let him ſee the Note. Mr. Humphreys, look upon that Note; have you ſeen that Note before?---Mr. Humphreys. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Upon what Occaſion?

Mr. Humphreys. By Direction from Mr. Hoare, I went to receive it September the 9th.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Whither did you carry it?

Mr. Humphreys. To Mr. Gibſon's Houſe. His Caſhier not being at Home, I left it there, deſired that the Money ſhould be left with Mr. Bromfield, one of the Tellers at the Bank, to be placed there to Mr. Hoare's Account. I went about One o'Clock to ſee if the Money was left there; finding that it was not, I went to Mr. Gibſon's. The Caſhier was at Dinner. I got one to go for him, and left Word that I ſhould be back in a Quarter of an Hour. I went to the Royal Exchange, where Mr. Hoare met me. We went to Mr. Braſſey's afterwards. We ſtopped the Payment of the two Bank-Notes, which we found there had been delivered out. I had been returned not above ten Minutes, before we had an Account that a Perſon was ſtopped with the two Notes.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What is your Buſineſs?

Mr. Humphreys. It is my Buſineſs to go with Mr. Hoare's Notes into the City.

Mr. Sol. Gen. When you came the ſecond Time to Mr. Gibſon's, what Anſwer had you?

Mr. Humphreys. None, but that the Caſhier was gone to Dinner.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Who was the Perſon that you left the Note with?

Mr. Humphreys. I do not know the Gentleman's Name; there were three of them there, who were Servants to Mr. Gibſon. One of them aſked, where it ſhould be left? I thereupon named Mr. Bromfield, one of the Tellers of the Bank.

Mr. Cramlington called and ſworn.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you remember that you ever ſaw that Note before?

Mr. Cramlington. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Sol. Gen. When, and upon what Occaſion?

Mr. Cramlington. This Note was brought to Mr. Gibſon's Office Sept. 9th by Mr. Humphreys, an Agent or Out-teller to Mr. Hoare. He deſired, that when Mr. Phillips (Mr. Gibſon's Caſhier) came in, he would leave a Note or Money for the ſame with Mr. Bromfield at the Bank.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What became of it?

Mr. Cramlington. I put it into Mr. Phillips's Seat between the Baniſters, for him to ſee when he came in.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Are you concerned or employed for Mr. Gibſon about Book-keeping?---Mr. Cramlington. No, Sir.

Mr. Phillips called and ſworn.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Look on that Note, Sir: Have you ever ſeen it before?

Mr. Phillips. Yes, Sir, on Monday the 9th of September laſt. I happened to be at the Bank; and on my Return from thence, which was about Twelve o'Clock, Mr. Harwood, one of the Clerks in our Office, told me, that Mr. Humphreys (Mr. Hoare's Servant) had been there with a Note for 6400 l. and that I not being at Home, he had left it with Mr. Cramlington, deſiring that when I returned I would leave a Money-Ticket for it with Mr. Bromfield, one of the Tellers at the Bank, for Humphreys. I aſked him, where was the Note? He ſaid, that it was left with Mr. Cramlington. I opened my Seat Door, and ſaw the Note there. I was very much ſurprized, it being wrote by a ſtrange Hand; and knowing, by many Years Experience, that Mr. Gibſon never ſigned any Promiſſory Notes without writing the whole Notes. I obſerved a Difference in the Note, that the laſt Words, For myſelf and Partners, were wrote with a nearer Reſemblance to his Hand than the other Part of the Note. I obſerved that this Note was dated the 27th of Auguſt, and that he went to the Bath on the 28th: I had the Honour to attend him ſeveral Days. He concluded his Buſineſs relating to the Office on the 26th: On the 27th he did nothing of that Buſineſs, but prepared for his Journey. I endeavoured to recollect, whether he had any Tranſactions then with any George Watſon, to whom it was made payable. I could not remember that he had, nor did I remember that I had ever before heard of the Name, nor had I any Directions from any of my Maſters, that there was any ſuch Note ſtood out. I obſerved alſo that there was a Difference between the Stile of this Note and Mr. Gibſon's: He always writeth, in a ſtraight Line, For myſelf and Co. Tho. Gibſon, never Partners. And then as to the Value received, he never uſeth theſe Words. I carried it to Mr. Harwood, whom Mr. Humphreys ſpoke to. I told him, that I did not like it, it being written in a ſtrange Hand; I would not therefore take Notice of it. We obſerved that there was the F and r, in For myſelf and Partners, wrote in a different Hand. I thought that there might be ſome Wickedneſs at the Bottom; I went therefore myſelf into Mr. Booth's Office; and he and Mr. Phippes being there, I deſired Mr. Phippes to look into the Books, and ſee whether one Mr. Watſon had Credit for ſuch a Sum. Not finding any ſuch Thing, I then deſired them to look into the Kalendars of the Ledgers. They looked, and ſaw that there was no ſuch Name there. I ſaid then to Mr. Booth, I have a Note for 6400 l. which I do not like, and will not pay, without inquiring into it, and acquainting Mr. Jacomb (Mr. Jacomb was then above Stairs, which I knew not). I told Mr. Booth the Circumſtances which made me ſuſpect a Forgery; Foh! (ſaid he) this is a Villainy, a Forgery; this looks like one of Hales's Tricks. I waited for Mr. Jacomb's coming down; I ſaid to him, Sir, here is a Note for 6400 l. which I believe to be forged. It is (ſaid Mr. Jacomb) very plain; here is a Raſure on a Frank. (Mr. Booth having recollected that Mr. Hales ſome Time before had two Franks from him, one of which he now ſuſpected to be thus abuſed, acquainted Mr. Jacomb therewith.) He inquired where we had it? We told him, of Mr. Humphreys, Mr. Hoare's Servant. He hereupon took me out with him. We went to the Bank. I ſtayed in the outer Office, whilſt he went in and acquainted the Directors, that ſuch a Thing had happened. Mr. Bromfield was ſent for, and examined, what the Reaſon was of this Direction, that it ſhould be left with him? He ſaid, he could give no Reaſon, but that Mr. Hoare's Man uſed to tranſact Affairs with him: Mr. Jacomb took the Note to Mr. Hoare's, and I went to Dinner.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Is it not uſual for Mr. Gibſon to enter Notes in the Book when he makes them out, and give you Notice of them?

Mr. Phillips. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Sir, look on the F and r, and tell us what you think of them?

Mr. Phillips. This is certainly Mr. Gibſon's F, the o ſeems thruſt in irregularly, two e's eraſed, and then follows Myſelf and Partners.

Mr. Sollicitor General. You have ſeen his Franks; doth he make ſuch a Diſtance between the F and the r? Caſt your Eye again on it, and ſee whether the Diſtance between the F and r be ſuch as is uſual in his Franking.

Mr. Phil. Much as uſual, for I have compared it with ſome Franks, and they are there at the ſame Diſtance: but I obſerve the o is not of the ſame Letter, but crouded in irregularly: And the o is of a blacker Ink.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Pleaſe, Sir, to look on the Beginning of the m: What Obſervations do you make on that?

Mr. Phil. There is the Stroke before the firſt Minim of the m that ſeems of lighter Ink.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What do you make of that?

Mr. Phil. It ſeems to me to be the Tail or Bottom of the e.

Mr. Maddox called and ſworn.

Mr. Sol. Gen. I think, Mr. Maddox, you belong to the Bank?

Mr. Maddox. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Pray, Sir, will you give us an Account, whether any Notice was given you to ſtop any Bank-Bills?

Mr. Mad. Mr. Braſſey, with Mr. Humphreys, (Mr. Hoare's Man) came to the Bank to deſire me to ſtop five Notes, with the Numbers, Dates, and Names. I looked and ſaw that three of them of 350*l.* were already paid. I took the Numbers of thoſe not paid, and gave Directions to all the Tellers, that the Minute any brought any of them, they ſhould give me Notice. In a little Time after I was gone up, I was called down again. Pewtreſs (one of them) came to me, and told me that two hundred Pound Notes were brought and demanded. I aſked him, Who brought them? He told me, that Perſon (Rumſey). I bid him bring a Conſtable, and not come back again till he had brought one. When he had brought one, I charged him with him. I aſked him, Where he had thoſe Notes? He would not tell me where he had them, nor who he was, but was very obſtinate. One of the Officers of the Bank ſaid, that he knew him, that his Name was Rumſey, that he belonged to the Eagle Galley. He aſked me to let him write a Letter; I let him, but would myſelf appoint the Meſſenger. He wrote a Letter, ſigned it Thomas Fowler, and directed it to Mr. at Robin's Coffee-houſe. I called ſome Officers of the Bank, and directed them to go there with the Conſtable, and ſee what ſuſpicious Perſon was there. They went into the Coffee-houſe, and inquired of the Maſter of the Houſe what Company was there. He ſaid there was only three Neighbours, and a fourth Perſon whom he did not know. Whereupon one of the Officers of the Bank ſaid, I know that Perſon, that is Mr. Hales. They went and ſeized him. As they brought him into the Bank, Rumſey ſaid, That is the Perſon that I had the Notes of, and would fain have ſpoke with him. I kept them apart, carried the one up Stairs, kept the other below. They ſearched Rumſey, found about him 60*l.* and 25*l.* in different Bags, and two Notes were ſtopped below, before they went up to Mr. Hales. They found upon him above Stairs thirty-ſix South-Sea and India Bonds, a Bill of Parcels for ſome of them from Mr. Hals, five hundred and odd Pounds in Money, a Note of Mr. Braſſey's, and Mr. Shales's Note.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What Account did Rumſey give of the Money found upon him?

Mr. Mad. Thirty-five Pounds and odd Money he ſaid was his own Wages. There was about 60*l.* beſides, which he ſaid was Mr. Hales's.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What Notes had Mr. Hales about him?

Mr. Mad. He had a Note of Mr. Braſſey's of 680*l.* the Remainder of the 1100*l.* Note; a Note of Mr. Shales's of 120*l.* A Note of Mr. Thrupp's he had received, and had procured the Money for it, as he owned when he came upon his Examination.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Was his Examination in Writing or not?

Mr. Mad. It was taken before Sir Edward Bellamy. I cannot ſay whether it was in Writing or not.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Go on, and give us an Account what Mr. Hales ſaid when examined at the Bank, upon making up the Account of what was taken from him.

Mr. Mad. It wanted about four or five hundred Pounds of the 6400*l.* Mr. Hales having that Day (as he ſaid) redeemed two Eaſt-India Bonds, which he had pawned with Mr. Braſſey; and had alſo taken up a Note of Mr. Thrupp's for 400*l.* which he had diſcounted with Mr. Shales. Among the Papers that were found upon Mr. Hales, there was an Account of the particular Produce of the Note.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What did Mr. Hales ſay?

Mr. Mad. He owned that he employed Rumſey; but ſaid, that he himſelf was employed by one Samuel Palmer, a Perſon whom he had been acquainted with for ſome Months, and that this Note was left by him with him to inveſt in ſomething that would turn to Account.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Was there any Notice then taken of Rumſey's going by a ſham Name?

Mr. Mad. I remember not that.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Was there any one that told Mr. Hales, that he was a Man of Figures, and deſired him therefore to give a more particular Account?

Mr. Mad. Yes, Mr. Moſes Raper.

Mr. Juſt. Page. Is it not enough that Mr. Hales himſelf owned that what he had was the Produce of the 6400*l.* Note? Did not Rumſey manage all this? And came he not from him to the Bank? Hath he not owned it?

Mr. Mad. That was one of the Notes found upon Mr. Hales.

Mr. Juſt. Page. Had you any Diſcourſe with him about the Import of it?

Mr. Mad. No, my Lord. This Paper, one of thoſe found in the Pocket of Mr. Hales, contains a particular Account of the Produce of the 6400*l.* Note, and a little more.

(The Paper read.)

One of Mr. Henry Hoare's for 2100*l.* payable to Sir John Hynde Cotton.
One of 70*l.* payable to James Moreton, Eſq.
One of 1000*l.* of Mr. Nathaniel Braſſey's.

Bank-Notes, No. 412, for 1000*l.*
413, for 1000*l.*
414, for 1200*l.*
415, for 25*l.*
23*l.* received in Gold.

Mr. Att. Gen. In Caſe of Forgery, every Circumſtance is corroborating of the Fact, and therefore this was proper to be laid before the Jury.

Mr. Juſt. Page. Whoſe Writing is that Paper?

Mr. Mad. I believe it to be his: I knew him when a Goldſmith.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. Mr. Maddox, I deſire to aſk you one Queſtion. We have a very good Opinion of you: Pray, do you not know one Samuel Palmer? Had you never any Tranſactions in your Books between Mr. Hales and Samuel Palmer, with relation to a ten thouſand Pound Note, payable to one Dymer?

Mr. Mad. No, Sir.

Mr. Serj. Darn. Nor have you never heard of him?

Mr. Mad. No, only by the Paper found on Mr. Hales.

Mr. Serj. Darn. Did not the Defendant Mr. Hales bring you a Draught from Mr. Jacomb upon a particular Occaſion, payable to Dymer?

Mr. Mad. I cannot remember this. We never had any Account, that I know of, with Palmer.

Moſes Raper, Eſq. called and ſworn.

Mr. Att. Gen. Mr. Raper, will you look on that Paper? Have you ſeen it before? Do you know upon what Occaſion it was wrote, and by whom?

Mr. Raper. I was at the Bank the 9th of September laſt. Alderman Bellamy was then examining Mr. William Hales: He was then giving an Account of the Produce of that Note of 6400*l.* of Mr. Gibſon's. He was a long Time before he could caſt it up. He ſeemed not much concerned. I ſaid to him, I wonder that you, who are a Man of Figures, ſhould be ſo much at a Loſs: You want about 400*l.* He at length mentioned a Note of one Thrupp's. They aſked him, where he had that Note? He ſaid, of one Palmer of Manſel-Street.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did you ſee him write that Note?

Mr. Raper. I ſaw him ſum up that, as the Produce of the 6400*l.* Note.

Mr. Att. Gen. Do you remember that the Queſtion was aſked him, why Rumſey went by the Name of Fowler?

Mr. Raper. I know no Reaſon that he gave. He was aſked the Queſtion ſeveral Times, but gave no Anſwer.

Mr. Att. Gen. The Evidence, my Lord, hath been ſo extreme long, and every Part ſo well connected, that I ſhall not trouble your Lordſhip with any Obſervations thereupon. If there be Occaſion given by the Reply, your Lordſhip will then give us Leave.

Mr. Serj. Darn. My Lord, and Gentlemen of the Jury; I am Counſel in this Caſe for Mr. Hales. And indeed, according to the Miſrepreſentation that they have laid him under, he is a very unfortunate Perſon. And really they have given a great deal to lead into a Suſpicion of the Truth of what he is charged with; but we think a good deal of it is owing to the Misfortune he lay under. Having been a Bankrupt many Years, and not having obtained a Certificate, it was therefore impoſſible for him to carry on any Thing in his own Name; therefore, in the whole Courſe of his Traffick for many Years, he hath been forced to uſe fictitious Names, and thereby conceal all Receipts and Payments. And the Conſequence of his doing otherwiſe is very obvious. Till he hath obtained a Certificate, whatſoever he received in his own Name would be ſubject to the Commiſſioners. Therefore (according to my Inſtructions) Mr. Hales hath concealed his Dealings. I am inſtructed, that he had conſiderable Dealings with one Samuel Palmer, and that he was indebted to Mr. Hales in the Sum mentioned; and having had great Tranſactions for many thouſands of Pounds, they came to a Balance of the Account, and Mr. Palmer gave him this Note in Payment. It is difficult for us to clear Things in ſuch Affairs as require Privacy: But it appears, that he hath tranſacted great Affairs. He hath Books, whereby it appeareth that he hath traded for upwards of 300,000*l.* and that he hath traded with this Samuel Palmer for upwards of 10,000*l.* To prove that this is not a forged Note, will be extremely difficult; and I think that it matters not any Thing to Mr. Hales, whether it be ſo or not. If it be ſo, if this Note came from Mr. Palmer to Mr. Hales, the Forgery falls not upon Mr. Hales. The only Thing for us to eſtabliſh is, that it came from Mr. Palmer to Mr. Hales. They own, that he ſaid, when the Thing was recent, that he had it from Palmer. It happens (I ſuppoſe from a Certainty that the Note was a forged Note) that Mr. Palmer is gone out of the Kingdom. It is impoſſible therefore to produce him; and if he was here, he could not be a Witneſs. And, if my Inſtructions are true, that Palmer is gone, it leaves Mr. Hales without the Aſſiſtance of Palmer. Taking it for granted that he hath forged the Note, we ſubmit it that Mr.

Hales cannot be guilty of the Forgery.——Another Part of the Indictment is, That he hath publiſhed this Note, knowing it to be forged. If he received it in Satisfaction of a Debt or Demand that he had upon Palmer, that excuſeth him. Mr. Palmer being gone, it is only poſſible for us, firſt, to eſtabliſh Mr. Hales's Character, then ſhew that he is a great Dealer, and produce his Books, in which theſe Things are entered. There are ſeveral Tranſactions therein, ſome many Years ago, ſome later, that will be verified by Witneſſes. If there be ſuch Tranſactions which we can verify, we leave it to the Court how far that will avail. Under theſe Circumſtances we beg Leave to ſubmit it to your Lordſhip.

Mr. Serj. Baynes. My Lord, and Gentlemen of the Jury; I am Counſel on the ſame Side. The firſt Thing that lies under Conſideration is, Whether this Note was forged by Mr. Hales? That it was a Forgery, they have given ſtrong Evidence; but the only Queſtion is, firſt, Whether Mr. Hales did forge it? In the next Place, Whether he publiſhed it, knowing it to be forged? Theſe are the two Charges laid againſt him in the Indictment. We hope, that upon the Evidence we ſhall give, you will think him clear of what is charged. It is well known, that he hath dealt for as great Sums as moſt in Lombard-Street: He had the Misfortune afterwards to fail; therefore he was obliged to act in a different Way from others. We ſhall ſhew that Mr. Gibſon himſelf gave him ſuch Credit, that he truſted him with great Sums of Money, and with receiving Rents in Kent. For us to prove a Negative, that he did not forge this Note, cannot be but by Circumſtances. In order to charge us, they have gone a great Way with Circumſtances; and the Queſtion is, What Validity theſe Circumſtances will have with you? They lay a Streſs upon this, That he gave Directions to Rumſey to tranſact theſe Affairs, to change his Cloaths, his Wig, and to put on another Hat. As to that, that will depend a great deal upon the Credit of Rumſey's Evidence which he gives. Mr. Rumſey appears to be Particeps Criminis: Therefore, tho' I cannot ſay but this Evidence is legal, yet it affects his Character and Credit; it is not ſuch as if he was an indifferent Perſon. As to the Wig, they made a great Noiſe, as if it was bought with a Deſign to impoſe on Perſons in that Diſguiſe. We ſhall ſhew that it was not, but with another Deſign. Mr. Hales and Rumſey had an Intention, before Monday, to go into the Country. He himſelf ſaith, that he only had the fine light Wig which he had upon his Head. It was very proper at that Time of the Year, that he ſhould have another Wig to travel in. Therefore it ſeems probable, that it was bought with that View, and not to impoſe upon Perſons; ſince that could not make an Alteration in his Countenance. As to his acting under a different Name, that ſeems upon this Account; Mr. Hales had the Misfortune to have a Commiſſion of Bankruptcy awarded againſt him; and after long ſolliciting for a Certificate, could not get it: Therefore, although he tranſacted great Affairs, all the Sums which he negotiated were forced to be under feigned and borrowed Names; becauſe if his Creditors knew that he had ſuch Credit, and negotiated ſuch Affairs, they would be the harder upon him. Therefore there was ſuch a Direction given, that Mr. Hales might not be known to be concerned in ſuch an Affair.—It is incumbent upon us, firſt, to give an Account how we came by that Note: There was one Samuel Palmer indebted to Mr. Hales between ſix and ſeven thouſand Pounds; he came to him, offered this Note as a Security, that he might pay himſelf upon receiving this Money; thereupon Mr. Hales very innocently took the Note, not queſtioning its Goodneſs. Mr. Gibſon being a Man very well known, Mr. Hales knew that the Signing was his Hand, though the Body of the Note was not written by him; and he might be eaſily impoſed upon, and take this as a good Note. No Wonder that it ſhould be thought ſo. Though Mr. Poltock ſuſpected this Note, becauſe it was not written by Mr. Gibſon's own Hand; yet it is plain, that at Mr. Hoare's Shop, Mr. Turner made no Scruple at all to exchange this Note, and give other Notes for it. Therefore, though they ſaw that this Note was written on a different Piece of Paper from what a Note of ſuch a Value uſed to be, it is plain that Mr. Turner did not think this of ſo much Weight. No Wonder, therefore, that Mr. Hales ſhould be ſo impoſed on. The next Part of the Conſideration is, Whether he publiſhed this Note, knowing it to be forged? For otherwiſe it is not criminal. Therefore the Indictment runs, Knowing it to be forged. Now, in caſe that we prove this firſt Part which is in my Brief, and I hope that the Witneſſes will come up to, the other Part will fall to the Ground. If he came fairly by it, he cannot be ſaid, knowing it to be forged, to publiſh it. We ſhall call our Witneſſes, and ſubmit it to your Lordſhip.

The Indictment, my Lord, runs, That he, Vi et Armis, viz. Verbis et Figuris ſequentibus, forged this Note. Now, my Lord, it is not pretended that he forged the Name of Mr. Gibſon; and therefore, though I do not controvert that he that writes over my Name is guilty of forging the whole Note, yet not Verbis et Figuris ſequentibus; that is, forging the whole Note. Therefore being charged herewith, and they admitting that he did write the Name Thomas Gibſon——

Mr. Juſt. Page. Is the Name in the Indictment?

Mr. Serj. Baynes. Yes, my Lord.

Mr. Juſt. Page. Now Thomas Gibſon is agreed to be the Hand of Mr. Gibſon, but not to that Note.

Mr. Serj. Baynes. No, my Lord, I admitted that, in ſtating the Objection. I ſaid, that he that writes over my Name is guilty of forging ſuch a Note, but not in Verbis et Figuris ſequentibus; he is not guilty of forging the Name of Thomas Gibſon. They have taken upon them to fix that this Note was Verbis et Figuris ſequentibus; then after the Body of the Note followeth Thomas Gibſon. Now, my Lord, we apprehend this is not forged. Though the Subſtance of the Note is not Mr. Gibſon's Hand-writing; yet they own, on the other Hand, that the Name is the Hand-writing of Mr. Gibſon. If ſo, it appears very plainly, that we have not forged this Note Verbis et Figuris ſequentibus.

Mr. Juſt. Page. Brother, do you rely upon this Objection? If you do, I will give you my Opinion of it when the Whole is finiſhed.

Mr. Grainger called and ſworn.

Mr. Serjeant Darnell. Sir, are you acquainted with Mr. William Hales?

Mr. Grainger. I am not perſonally acquainted with him, though I have known him by Sight many Years. I know nothing at all of his Dealings.

Mr. Serj. Darn. Do you know Mr. Samuel Palmer? Do you know his Dealings?

Mr. Grain. Yes, Sir, as to Mr. Palmer, I knew him from a Child. I married his Mother. He was brought up at the Eaſt-India Houſe, was ſent by the Eaſt-India Company into Perſia, and lived there many Years. Not having the Encouragement that he expected, he returned thence, but ſtayed in Turkey.

Mr. Juſt. Page. Was you there with him? After he came Home, what did you know of him?

Mr. Grain. As he came Home through Turkey——

Mr. Juſt. Page. You cannot ſay that upon Oath, ſince you was not there with him. Did you know him here at London after his Return? What did he deal in?

Mr. Grain. I know not of any Dealings he had in England.

Mr. Juſt. Page. Do you know of any Tranſaction between him and Mr. Hales?

Mr. Grain. He told me——

Mr. Juſt. Page. That is nothing. What Subſtance was he of?

Mr. Grain. He had no Subſtance at all, for he was an inſolvent Man.

Mr. Juſt. Page. How long ſince he was in London?

Mr. Grain. Within a Twelve-month.

Thomas Ayles, Eſq. called and ſworn.

Mr. Serj. Baynes. You are deſired, Sir, to give an Account, whether you know the Defendant Mr. Hales, how many Years you have known him, and what is your Opinion of him?

Mr. Ayles. I have known him twenty-three Years and upwards, when Partner with Sir Stephen Evance, with whom I kept a conſiderable Caſh all that Time: I received a great many Civilities from Mr. Hales upon ſeveral Occaſions, for which I have always had a good Opinion of him.

Mr. Serj. Baynes. What Opinion had you of his Character?

Mr. Ayles. I took him to be of as good a Character as any.

Mr. Serj. Baynes. Do you know of any conſiderable Sums paſſing through his Hands, during theſe Years that you have known him?

Mr. Ayles. Not any ſince his Failure.

Mr. Lacy. I beg a Word of the ſame Side with the other Gentlemen. As to the Exception they have made, it will not be contended (I believe) but that they might have laid it otherwiſe. They might have made it a Forgery of the Note, though they had ſet it forth otherwiſe. Our Objection is, Whether Verbis et Figuris ſequentibus doth not tie it down to the ſecond Part of the Note as well as the reſt? Another Thing is this; they have given an Account of the Publication at London in Mr. Hoare's Shop; whether ſhould not the Forgery be fixed in London too?

Mr. Juſt. Page. If a forged Note be publiſhed in two Counties, may not the Proſecutors lay it in which they will? And the Indictment too is in London, if that were any Objection.

Mr. Lacy. Should not the Forgery be local as well as the Publication?

Mr. Juſt. Page. Yes. If that very Act of Forgery had been in Middleſex, it ought to have been tried there: But where there is no poſitive and direct Proof of the Forgery, but the Whole ariſes from Circumſtances, ſome in London, and ſome in Middleſex, it may be laid in either; or it would be impoſſible that any artful Perſon ſhould be convicted of Forgery; it is but being alone when he commits the Fact, and he is ſafe. And the Objection will be as ſtrong in one County as another; and then, if your Doctrine be true, he can be tried no where, which ſure is not ſo. You know a Felony may be tried in any County where the Goods are found on the Priſoner. As to your other Objection, That the Indictment is for forging the whole Note, whereas Tho. Gibſon is Mr. Gibſon's own Hand-writing; that is extraordinary. Did Mr. Gibſon put his Name to that Bill? No. Suppoſe, in a leſs Degree, Mr. Gibſon had given his Note for a leſs Sum, and Mr. Hales had only made it for a greater, would not that have been a Forgery of the whole Bill? You know it is ſo of a Bond, Bank, or other Bill, in every Day's common Experience.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, this was the ſame Caſe with Mr. Ward's. There it was adjudged, that Mr. Ward forged a Note of the Duke of Buckingham's in that Form. There was no Pretence but that it was (as originally) the Duke of Buckingham's Note. This Objection was then made, but it was over-ruled, That the altering a material Part was making it entirely another Bill.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. My Lord, we have done with our Defence.

Mr. Sol. Gen. My Lord, as their Defence hath given us no further Occaſion, we ſhall not take up your Lordſhip's Time with any Reply.

Mr. Juſt. Page. Gentlemen of the Jury, the Priſoner at the Bar is indicted dicted for forging a Note of Mr. Gibſon's of 6400 l. and alſo for publiſhing this Note, knowing it to be forged; upon which two Things are proper for your Conſideration: Firſt, Gentlemen, by whom this Note was forged, (for it is agreed to be a forged Note) Whether by the Priſoner, or if he was privy to, or concerned in it? And ſecondly, Whether he is guilty of the Publication of it knowing it to be forged? There have been a great Number of Witneſſes examined; and I ſhould have gone over the whole Evidence as it was given, but the Counſel for the Priſoner have eaſed me of that Trouble. Forgery is what concerns every Engliſhman: As Paper-Credit is come to that Heighth it is now in, the utmoſt Care ought to be taken to preſerve that Credit; but ſtill the Innocent muſt not ſuffer. As to this Note's being forged, which hath taken up the moſt Part of the very long Time this Cauſe hath been trying, the Counſel for the Priſoner all agree that it is a forged Note; and then it will be to no Purpoſe to ſum up that Part of the Evidence to you. I ſhall therefore take Notice only of ſuch Parts, as go to prove Mr. Hales himſelf guilty of this Forgery, or of his Publication of it knowing it to be forged.

The two firſt Witneſſes were Philip and Robert Booth, which may be proper to be taken Notice of by and bye.

The third Witneſs was Rumſey, who hath gone through this whole Matter, and whoſe Credit hath been ſupported by others of unqueſtionable Reputation in every material Circumſtance. He tells you, he was no Dealer in this Kind of Buſineſs, but a perfect Stranger to it, bred up to the Sea: That he hath been acquainted with the Priſoner for about a Year, and from June, till the Time this Fact was committed, was very much with him. This Note, which was read and ſhewn to you, bears Date the 7th of September laſt; and the whole Management was carried on till the 9th. He ſaith, that on the 7th of September, which was Saturday, he was at Mr. Hales's, not then knowing that he was to dip his Finger for him in ſo vile a Thing. He ſays, Mr. Hales only then told him, that he muſt go into the City with him on ſome Buſineſs; and that his Dreſs, which was a red Waiſtcoat and Breeches, were not proper to appear in, in the Affair he had to employ him in; and that he had provided him another (the ſame which Rumſey has now on). That he was not thought diſguiſed enough, but was in this new Dreſs carried to Holborn, and there had a black Peruke bought for him, and a Letter-Caſe with Papers put in, as a Man of Buſineſs; from whence, after he was equipped in this Diſguiſe, he and the Priſoner went together to John's Coffee-houſe in Shire-Lane.

You will obſerve, Gentlemen, Mr. Hales, as Rumſey ſwears, did not then diſcover to him what he was to do; but it was to come out as by Accident, which was thus: Soon after they came to the Coffee-houſe, a Porter, with a Letter directed to Rumſey, came there, which Mr. Hales immediately took from the Porter and opened; which then appeared to be a Cover with this Note in it, and nothing writ on the Cover but, Lady Harriot Elliot 4300*l.* Sir John Hynde Cotton 2100*l.* This, Rumſey ſays, he did not underſtand; nor did the Priſoner give him Leave to open the Letter, knowing (as Rumſey ſays) he was unacquainted with the Contents of it. But when Mr. Hales had opened the Letter, he explained to him what the two Names and Figures meant, and then told him, he would have him go to Meſſ. Snow and Poltock's with this Note, and get of them two Bills, one for Lady Harriot Elliott for 4300*l.* the other for Sir John Hynde Cotton for 2100*l.* and told him, that Mr. Snow's Shop was a little without Temple-Bar, and did not ſo much as truſt Rumſey out of his Sight, but went with him over-againſt the Door. Rumſey goes in, where was Mr. Poltock. The firſt Thing Mr. Rumſey does is to produce a Bank-Note of 40*l.* and 10*l.* in Money, and to take his Note for 50*l.* and then produces the Note for 6400*l.* But Mr. Poltock being a very careful Man, and being now called, ſays, he made much the ſame Obſervations that I believe you have all made on View of it. He ſays, it was an odd Sort of a Bill; that he never had any of Mr. Gibſon's Bills but of his own Hand-writing; and that this was writ on ſo ſcanty a Piece of Paper, that he would not meddle with it.

When Rumſey came out of the Shop, he ſays he found Mr. Hales over-againſt the Door, where he left him, and tells him what ill Succeſs he had had, and gives him back the Note; Whereupon the Priſoner and Rumſey go back to the Coffee-houſe, and there the Priſoner ſaid, he muſt try elſewhere, and named Mr. Hoare's. And to give Rumſey Credit there, he was firſt to pay in at Hoare's 70*l.* that is, Mr. Poltock's Note for 50*l.* and 20*l.* in Money, and to take Hoare's Bill for 70*l.* which was done: That it was then ſcarce light; and every one knowing Mr. Gibſon's very great Credit, Mr. Turner, who was then in the Shop, without obſerving much this Note, takes it, and gives Rumſey two others. But Mr. Hales had then directed Rumſey not to take the 4300*l.* Note to Lady Harriott Elliott, but to Sir Richard Groſvenor or Bearer, and the 2100*l.* Note to Sir John Hynde Cotton or Bearer; and That Turner confirms. And Rumſey ſwears, that the Priſoner alſo ſhewed him Mr. Hoare's Shop, and went with him almoſt to the Door.

When Rumſey had ſucceeded at Mr. Hoare's, he ſays, he found the Priſoner waiting at a Fruit-ſtall, a ſmall Diſtance from the Shop; and there he gave the Priſoner the 70*l.* Note, and the Notes he had received in Exchange for Mr. Gibſon's. Rumſey ſwears, he was to get nothing, and that the Priſoner had the whole Profit. But this would not do the Priſoner's Buſineſs, nor did he reſt here. The next Thing therefore is to make the beſt of theſe Notes, and to manage Matters ſo as not to be traced or found out; in which, Gentlemen, it was certainly right that the Notes ſhould be ſhifted and changed, divided and ſubdivided, as much as poſſible, that no Track of them might be ſeen: And for this, Rumſey ſays, that he accordingly did go with theſe Notes, by the Priſoner's Direction, from one Goldſmith to another; firſt with the 4300*l.* Note to Mr. Woodward's, who would not meddle with it; thence to Mr. Braſſey's, where he changed it for four Bills, which he gave to Mr. Hales, who waited for him at a Coffee-houſe.

The Notes Rumſey received at Mr. Braſſey's the Goldſmith's, in Exchange for Mr. Hoare's Note of 4300*l.* were four, viz. one for 1200*l.* one for 1100*l.* and two for 1000*l.* each, all made payable to one Samuel Palmer, in whoſe Name Rumſey was inſtructed by Hales to take theſe Notes, and was himſelf directed by the Priſoner to go by the Name of Fowler, which he did; and the Priſoner was ſo watchful, that he waited about Mr. Braſſey's Shop during all the Time Rumſey was there.

Rumſey ſays, that he went and lay at Mr. Hales's that and the next Night; and Mr. Hales bid him be ready on Monday Morning in that Dreſs he had then put on: And accordingly on Monday Morning he went with him to Janeway's Coffee-houſe, where it was fixed how he ſhould diſpoſe of theſe Notes, and was directed by the Priſoner to go to Mr. Alderman Hankey's to make other Alterations, and then to the Broker's for the Bonds he had beſpoke, who told him he had only got one thouſand Pounds worth, which Rumſey ſays he had, and afterwards, on his going again, had more.

Gentlemen, I have laid before you, not for your Conſideration whether Mr. Gibſon's Note was forged, for that is admitted; but how far Mr. Hales has been concerned an Actor in this Affair; and to put you in Mind (if Rumſey ſwears true) that he was only the Cat's Claw, and a mere Tool for Hales, and that Hales contrived and ordered every Thing.

When all this was ſo ſucceſsfully carried through, the Priſoner ſends Rumſey to the Bank for Money, where the Matter comes to be diſcovered in this Manner.

Mr. Humphreys ſwears, That he being Mr. Hoare's out-going Clerk to carry Bills abroad and receive Money, on Monday Morning he went to Mr. Gibſon's with this Note for 6400*l.* Mr. Gibſon, he ſays, was gone to Bath; and it is remarkable that the Note is dated on a Day when he tranſacted no Buſineſs, and it was not publiſhed till he was gone to Bath. Mr. Humphreys ſays, that he not meeting with Mr. Gibſon's Caſhier, deſired the Money ſhould be paid into the Bank, and left the Note for that Purpoſe. When Mr. Gibſon's Caſhier, Mr. Philips, came Home, he ſays he had the Bill, and looking upon it, ſaw great Reaſon to ſuſpect it, and thought it not probable Mr. Gibſon ſhould draw a Bill as that was. He ſaith, that in all his Time he never knew Mr. Gibſon ſign ſuch a Note, nor any Note for Money, but of his own Hand-writing. The Size of the Paper alſo, he ſays, confirmed his Suſpicion. And ſure, Gentlemen, Paper muſt be very dear, that a Note for ſuch a Sum ſhould be wrote on ſo ſcanty a Piece as you have produced. But the Caſhier further ſays, that looking on the Note, he found there was a manifeſt Alteration in the Writing; Thomas Gibſon was Mr. Gibſon's Hand, but a Raſure appeared above it, and the Letter o in the Word For to be intruded in it, and wrote with another Ink. You have all ſeen the Note, and to me it ſeems very plain, that the Letter o was not originally written in that Place. And to give you at leaſt a very probable Account, that this Word was at firſt Free and not For, and done by Mr. Hales himſelf, the firſt Witneſs (Mr. Philip Booth) you will remember, ſwears, That the Priſoner ſome Time ago prevailed on him to get of Mr. Gibſon two Franks on two Letters of Mr. Hales, directed to Robert Booth, Eſq; at Briſtol; and ſays, that the Foldings of thoſe Letters were large enough to tear off the Piece produced. And Robert Booth, Eſq; of Briſtol, ſays, there is no other of that Name there, and that he never received any Letter franked by Mr. Gibſon. And as Things of this Kind are generally made out by Circumſtances, it ſeems no very hard Thing to eraſe the two e's, and put the e between the F and r, in ſuch a Manner as this has been ſhewn to you. Gentlemen, Mr. Humphreys goes further, and ſays, That going to the Bank about Noon that Day, he found that Mr. Gibſon's People had not paid in this Sum; at which he ſays he was pretty much ſurprized, knowing Mr. Gibſon's Credit and the Careſulneſs of his People; and went again to Mr. Gibſon's, to know what the Reaſon was; where he was informed of the Diſcovery, which came out thus: Mr. Hoare's two Notes having been ſhifted and changed about, as you have heard, ſome Part of the Money was at laſt in Bank-Bills, and there Rumſey that Monday Morning receives 650*l.* on Account of thoſe Bills, before the Fraud was diſcovered. But from what appeared at Mr. Gibſon's, and the Bank-Numbers of the Bills delivered being entered, Care was taken to examine the Receipt-Book, to ſee who came for any more Money on thoſe Bills. And Mr. Maddox tells you, that he having Notice given him, ordered the Clerk that paid, when any body came with thoſe Bills, to ſeem ready to pay the Money, but to delay it till a Conſtable could be fetched: That ſoon after Rumſey came again, when a Conſtable was fetched, and charged with Rumſey. He at firſt declined to give any Account of his Name, or where he had the Note; at length he told Mr. Maddox, that if they would let him write a Letter, he would ſend it to the Perſon he had the Note from; and accordingly writes a Letter to Mr. ——— (with a Blank) at Robin's Coffee-Houſe, with which the Conſtable, with ſome of the Clerks of the Bank, went immediately to ſee who was there, and found three Perſons beſides Mr. Hales. The three were Neighbours whom the Coffee-Man knew: Mr. Hales was a Stranger to him, but known to the Officers of the Bank. When he was ſeized, Mr. Rumſey was examined again, and owned that that was the very Perſon who ſent him with the Bill. Upon this Hales was carried up Stairs, examined and ſearched; and not only one of thoſe Bills that had been received found upon him, but alſo an Account under Mr. Hales's own Hand, that exactly tallied with the Account Rumſey gave. And Mr. Maddox ſays, the Priſoner owned the Account to be his, and the Notes, Bonds, Broker's Account of the Bonds bought, and Effects found upon him, to be the very Produce of the 6400*l.* So that, Gentlemen, you will now take it into your Conſideration, that the Evidence againſt the Priſoner doth not depend ſingly on the Credit of Rumſey, but that he is ſupported by the Number of Witneſſes you have had, and in particular by Mr. Maddox, and (which cannot err) the Account and Produce of the Money taken upon him.

Thus, Gentlemen, the Forgery being admitted, I have laid before you that Part of the Evidence that principally affects Mr. Hales, and that goes to prove him either guilty of the Forgery, or of the Publiſhing of this Note, knowing it to be forged. As to the Forgery, Gentlemen, of this Note by Mr. Hales, I muſt leave it to you upon the Strength of this Evidence, which has been very long, and (I doubt not) fully obſerved by you; and that you will give it its juſt Weight. But as to his publiſhing it knowing it to be forged, he hath not given you the leaſt Colour of Evidence to the contrary; and I muſt tell you, wherever a forged Note, or other Thing of that Nature, is found in any one's Hands, it is in Law a ſtrong Evidence that he is the Forger, unleſs he can give ſome Account of it. But here you are only told, that he had it from Palmer; but not one Word of Proof. Mr. Hales's Counſel have indeed offered to you in his Defence, firſt, that he is a Gentleman, and ſhall not be preſumed to be guilty of ſuch an Offence; nor, Gentlemen, ſhall any other on a bare Preſumption. But here, Gentlemen, is great Strength of Evidence that affects him; I do not know that I have met with a ſtronger Proof of the very Fact; it is not to be expected. They have alſo told you, that he was a Bankrupt, and could not get a Certificate; that the Commiſſion of Bankruptcy againſt him was about twenty Years ago. They ſay, That upon that Account he was forced to make uſe of other Names in his Dealings, and ſometimes fictitious ones: That he hath traded for upwards of 300,000*l.* in that Time: That Palmer was much employed by him, and entruſted in the carrying on that Trade, and being thereby indebted to Mr. Hales in above 7000*l.* gave him this Note in Part of Payment; which, as to his Trading in that Manner, I think, is ſo far from juſtifying his Character, that it is of itſelf a Crime not much leſs than that with which he ſtands charged. A Man that is a Bankrupt, if he afterwards becomes able, ought in Honour and Conſcience to pay his juſt Debts. It is not the firſt Time I have known that done: General Wood was a Draper, failed, and paid very little; he went into the Army for Bread, and proved ſo gallant a Man, that he raiſed himſelf to be a General. He, like a good Chriſtian, and a Man that did as he would be done by, paid his Debts to the full; which if the Priſoner had done, it would have given him a much better Character. Gentlemen, his Counſel have told you he carried on a vaſt Trade for twenty Years; but do they tell you that his Creditors were the better for it, or were ever paid one Penny? No, Gentlemen, they did not; and therefore I muſt leave it to you, whether this was not one continued Act of Fraud to cheat his Creditors; if ſo, it will affect the Priſoner quite another Way than his Counſel intended it. And though two or three Witneſſes were called to give Evidence of the Dealings between Mr. Hales and Mr. Palmer, there was not one Thing proved: So that, Gentlemen, there ſeems very little for you to conſider. You have a Number of concurrent Witneſſes, that have given you a full and clear Account of this whole Tranſaction; that this was contrived, managed, and carried on by the Priſoner in a very extraordinary Manner, and which there was not, nor could be any Reaſon for, but to avoid being detected of the vile Crime he is now charged with; nor can there be any Doubt but the whole Produce of this Note was for his Benefit, the Account, Bonds, and Bills, having been found in his Pocket.

I muſt leave it to you, Gentlemen: But never was ſtronger Evidence than here is, that Mr. Hales is the Author of this. So that I think, Gentlemen, if you believe the Evidence, the Charge, one Way or other, is fully brought to the Priſoner's Door. If you believe him Guilty of the Forgery, you will then find him Guilty generally of the whole Indictment: But if you are not ſatisfied of that, you will only find him Guilty of the other Part of the Indictment; or, if you can upon this Evidence, you may acquit him.

The Jury being withdrawn, after a few Minutes Stay, brought the Priſoner in Guilty of forging the Note, and of publiſhing the ſame, knowing it to be forged.

The Priſoner was a ſecond Time indicted upon the Statute of 33 H. VIII. c. 1. for obtaining Money by falſe Tokens. To which Indictment the Defendant pleaded Not Guilty; and the ſame Evidence, in Subſtance, being offered as upon the former Indictment, the Jury brought him in Guilty.

NUMBER XVI.

The KING againſt JOHN GIBBON.

Upon an Information, in the Nature of a Quo Warranto, by the King's Coroner and Attorney, againſt the Defendant, to ſhew by what Authority he claims to be a Freeman of the Town and Port of New-Romney, at the Relation of William Jarvis. Tried at Kent Aſſizes, held at Maidſtone, the 6th of Auguſt, 1734, before the Right Hon. the Lord Chief Juſtice Eyre.

Mr. Smith.

MAY it pleaſe your Lordſhip, and you Gentlemen of the Jury; this is an Information, in the Nature of a Quo Warranto, againſt the Defendant Gibbon, to ſhew by what Authority he claims to be a Freeman of the Town and Port of New-Romney, in this County: And the Information ſets forth, That the Town and Port of New-Romney is an ancient Town and Port; and that the Mayor, Jurats, and Commonalty of the ſaid Town and Port are, and for ten Years laſt paſt, and long before, were, one Body Corporate and Politic, by the Name of Mayor, Jurats, and Commonalty of the Town and Port of New-Romney in Kent; and that the Office of Freeman of the ſaid Town and Port is a publick Office, and an Office of great Truſt and Preheminence within the ſame Town and Port, concerning the good Rule and Government of the ſame, and the Adminiſtration of publick Juſtice: And that the Defendant Gibbon, of the ſaid Town and Port, Innholder, on the 25th of March, in the ſeventh Year of his preſent Majeſty, and from thence continually, hitherto, at the Town and Port aforeſaid, hath uſed and exerciſed, without any lawful Warrant, the ſaid Office, and claims to be one of the Freemen of the ſame Town and Port, and to have all the Privileges, Liberties, and Franchiſes thereof: Of which Office the ſaid Defendant Gibbon, for all the Time aforeſaid, upon his Majeſty hath uſurped, in Contempt of his Majeſty, and to the great Damage and Prejudice of his Royal Prerogative, and againſt his Crown and Dignity: Whereupon he prays Proceſs, &c.

To this the Defendant has pleaded, that the ſaid Town and Port is an ancient Town and Port, and the Office of Freeman thereof a publick Office.

And ſays, That the late Queen Elizabeth, by her Letters Patent, dated at Northaw, the 4th of Auguſt, in the fifth Year of her Reign, did will and grant, that the Barons and Inhabitants of the ſaid Town and Port (who before that Time had been incorporated, by the Name of Jurats and Commonalty) ſhould for ever after be one Body Incorporate, by the Name of Mayor, Jurats, and Commonalty of the Town and Port of New-Romney.

And that they, and their Succeſſors, and all other the Barons and Inhabitants of the ſaid Town and Port, their Heirs and Succeſſors, ſhould for ever after be, in all Matters whatever, as free as the Mayor, Jurats, and Commonalty of the Town and Port of Sandwich, or any other Town and Port of her ſaid Cinque Ports.

And the Defendant by his Plea further ſets forth a Cuſtom in Sandwich, one of the ſaid Cinque Ports, That if a Man marries the Daughter of any Freeman of that Town, ſuch Daughter being born after the Swearing and Admiſſion of her Father into the Office of Freeman, and being reſiant and inhabiting within the Town, has a Right to be ſworn and admitted a Freeman of Sandwich.

And alledges the like Cuſtom in Dover, another of the Cinque Ports.

And that the ſole Right of ſwearing and admitting Freemen of New-Romney is, and at the Time of ſwearing and admitting of him, the ſaid John Gibbon was, in the Mayor and Jurats, or in the Mayor and any two Jurats.

That the Defendant Gibbon, on the 1ſt of May, 1727, married Elizabeth Smith, Daughter of William Smith, a Freeman of the ſaid Town and Port; and thereby, and by virtue of the ſaid Letters Patent, became entituled to be ſworn and admitted a Freeman of the ſaid Town and Port; and having ſuch Right, and being ſo entitled, was, on the 25th of March laſt, ſworn and admitted by John Coates, the then Mayor, and Humphry Wightwick and Edward Batchelor, then two of the Jurats of the ſaid Town and Port, being there aſſembled in due Manner for that Purpoſe; by reaſon of which he ſays, he is a Freeman.

The King replies, That Gibbon, by marrying the ſaid Elizabeth Smith, did not become entituled to be ſworn and admitted a Freeman.

To which there is a Demurrer, for the Opinion of the Court upon the Words of the Charter.

So that, Gentlemen, the firſt Iſſue you are to try is, Whether the ſole Right of ſwearing and admitting Freemen of the Town and Port of New-

New-Romney be in the Mayor and Jurats, or in the Mayor and any two Jurats: And if we prove to you, that the Commonalty have always had and exercised a concurrent Right with the Mayor and Jurats, you will please, Gentlemen, to find for the King.

Mr. Marsh. May it please your Lordship, and you Gentlemen of the Jury; I am Counsel for the Defendant Gibbon. You observe, by the Opening, that this is an Information, in the Nature of a Quo Warranto, against him, to shew by what Authority he claims to be a Freeman of New-Romney: And the only Points that come before you now to be tried, are, First, Whether the Right of swearing and admitting Freemen of this Corporation be in the Mayor and Jurats, or in the Mayor and two Jurats? And, Secondly, Whether the Defendant Gibbon has been duly sworn and admitted a Freeman? There being a Demurrer as to the Right, that is to be determined by the Judges of the Court of King's-Bench: And in order to make out this Right, we shall produce to you the Books of the Corporation, as well as living Witnesses; whereby it will appear, that the Right of swearing and admitting Freemen of this Corporation is in the Mayor and Jurats, or in the Mayor and two Jurats; and that every one of the present Members of the Corporation was sworn and admitted by the Mayor and Jurats, or the Mayor and two Jurats: And by an Entry in the same Books it will likewise appear, the Defendant was duly sworn and admitted a Freeman; and when this appears, Gentlemen, you will find a Verdict for the Defendant.

Mr. Lacy. Mr. Wellard, please to produce the Corporation-Books. (Which were produced accordingly.)

Mr. Serj. Darnell. My Lord, we insist, the sole Right of admitting and swearing Freemen of this Corporation is not in the Mayor and Jurats, but in the Mayor, Jurats, and Commonalty.

C. J. Eyre. 'Tis Swearing and Admitting.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. Gibbon being called on by the Court of King's-Bench, to shew by what Authority he claimed to be a Freeman of the Town and Port of New-Romney, has demurred, and thereby waived the Foundation of his Claim.

C. J. Eyre. What! Is that waiving it? What concerned his Right comes not now in Issue, and was left undetermined by the Court. If he had a Right, the Question is, Whether he be duly admitted? And in order to that, he must be elected: And then the Question is, Whether he be admitted according to the Constitutions of the Town and Port of New-Romney?

Mr. Serj. Darnell. My Lord, a Right is here claimed by the Defendant; I have a Right by marrying a Freeman's Daughter; and if I have a Right, the Question is, as to the Method of coming to this Right. The Defendant says, the sole Right of swearing is in the Mayor and Jurats: But we say, though they have a Right, the whole Body must admit, though the Swearing be by the Mayor and Jurats.

C. J. Eyre. Swearing and Admitting is the same Thing, Brother Darnell. Where a Man is chosen Mayor of a Corporation, the Swearing and Admitting him is the same Thing. All Persons are admitted by Swearing, and taking the Oath is the Admission. A Man admitted is to be sworn: and there is no Corporation in the Kingdom, but where Swearing and Admitting is the same Thing; and yet you would make them two distinct Acts.

Mr. Lacy. We shall prove to your Lordship and the Jury, that the sole Right of Swearing and Admitting is in the Mayor and Jurats: And the first Instance we shall shew is in 1679, Peter Martin was admitted and sworn by the Mayor and Jurats.—Read the Entry of the 8th of March, 1679.

(Witness sworn to prove an Assembly-Book.)

C. J. Eyre. I think it proper to be read as a Court-Book.

Associate reads——

"New-Romney. Whereas the Mayor, Jurats, and Commonalty of the "Town and Port of New-Romney aforesaid, at their Common Assem-"bly, holden in the Common Place of the said Town and Port, did "elect and chuse Mr. Stephen Brett, being free-born; Thomas Short, born "at Smeeth in the County of Kent; Robert Easton, born at Battle in the "County of Sussex; and John Coates, Grazier; all free-born, to be "Freemen of the said Town and Port, the 15th Day of May last: Now "be it remembered, that at a Court of Record holden in the Guildhall "of the same Town and Port, this 3d Day of December, Anno Domini "1694, the said Stephen Brett, Thomas Short, Robert Easton, and John "Coates, testifying their free Consents for the observing and maintaining "the Charters, Franchises, Decrees, Privileges, Customs, and Usages of "the Cinque Ports, two antient Towns, and their Members, and parti-"cularly of this Town and Port of New-Romney, have severally taken "the Oaths of Freemen of the same Town and Port, according to the "Customal there, and are admitted into the Franchises of the Town "and Port aforesaid; and did also, at the same Time, here take the "several Oaths appointed by an Act of Parliament, intituled, An Act for "abrogating the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy, and appointing other "Oaths, &c."

Mr. Marsh. Read the Entry, fol. 770.

"New-Romney. At a Court of Record, holden in the Guildhall of the "same Town and Port, the 16th of May, 1698. Whereas the Mayor, "Jurats, and Commonalty, at a Common Assembly, holden in the "Common Place, on Thursday the 17th of March, 1697, did elect Robert "Mascall, free-born, Thomas Lancaster, and Thomas Edwards, free-born; "having testified their free Consents to observe the ancient Orders, "Charters, Ordinances, &c. were then admitted into the Freedom "of the said Town: Be it remembered, That the said Robert Mas-"call, Thomas Lancaster, and Thomas Edwards, having testified their free "Consent to observe the Orders, &c. aforesaid, have taken the Oath, "according to the Customal, and are admitted into the Franchises of the "Town and Port aforesaid, and took the several Oaths appointed."

C. J. Eyre. A Court of Record, and this Court held before the Mayor and Jurats.

Mr. Marsh. My Lord, there is not a single Member of the Corporation but is sworn in this Manner.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. We admit, my Lord, that no Man can be sworn but by the Mayor and Jurats; but none but Freemen can consent there shall be Freemen among them.

C. J. Eyre. If the Precedents are admitted by the other Side, there is no Occasion for proving them.

Mr. Marsh. My Lord, if they admit them according to the last Entry, there is no Occasion; but if not, it is necessary to call a living Witness.

C. J. Eyre. It is all one to me what you do. It is admitted on all Sides, there are many of these Entries since 1679.

Mr. Marsh. Read the Admission of Isaac Rutton and others, 7 February, 1708.

Associate reads —

"New-Romney. At a Court of Record holden in the Guildhall of the "same Town and Port, the 7th of February, 1708. Mr. Marsh. Turn. to fol. 125. Read the Admission of Thomas Wilson.

Associate reads —

"18 November, 1727. Whereas the Mayor, Jurats, and Commonalty "elected Thomas Wilson, within this Town, to be a Freeman: Be it "remembered, that he, testifying his Consent to observe the ancient "Orders, &c. and taking the Oath, is admitted into the Freedoms of "this Town and Port.

"Born at Lydd in Kent."

Mr. Lacy. Now read the Admission of William Gray, the 7th of June, 1731.

"7 June, 1731. Whereas the Mayor and Jurats, at the last Election "of Mayor, did admit William Gray a Freeman: Be it remembered, "that he, testifying his Consent to observe the ancient Orders, &c. has "taken the Oath, and is admitted into the Freedoms of this Town "and Port."

Mr. Marsh. My Lord, we submit our Case here.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. The Word admitted is used both at the Common Assembly——

C. J. Eyre. But only there, in that Instance.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. May it please your Lordship, and you Gentlemen of the Jury; I am for the King against Gibbon: And this Issue is only a Part of a Question in relation to the Franchises and Privileges of the Town and Port of New-Romney, where of late there have been many illicit Practices in order to overthrow the Constitutions of the Town; and thereupon Application was made to the Court of King's-Bench, in two several Causes, against Gibbon and Darby, who were to shew by what Authority they claimed their Freedoms; and they insisted they had married the Daughters of Freemen, and therefore had a Right to their Freedoms; and also against one Wightwick, who was to shew by what Authority he claimed to be Mayor of New-Romney.

Gentlemen, the Election of the Mayor depending on the Right of Gibbon and Darby, the Court, by Rule, directed the Information against Gibbon first to be tried; and if he had no Right, Darby was to take the Fate of that Trial; and to disclaim.

Gentlemen, as the Election turned upon the Right of Gibbon and Darby, if this Issue be found for them, then Wightwick is the Mayor. But, inſtead of coming to the Queſtion, Whether a Man has a Right to a Freedom by marrying a Freeman's Daughter? they have demurred: And now the Queſtion is, Who is to admit the Freemen? And I humbly apprehend, my Lord, where a Number of Freemen have the Freedom of a Town, Nobody can be let in without their Conſent; for, if the Mayor and Jurats are to admit ſolely, they may ſet up as many Freemen as they pleaſe.

My Lord, and Gentlemen of the Jury, the laſt Inſtances they have produced out of the Aſſembly-Books, are, I humbly apprehend, very ſtrong in our Favour; for it appears from thoſe Inſtances, that when the Body have agreed upon the Choice of a Freeman, the Mayor and Jurats ſwear him; and I take the Swearing to be a Thing of courſe; but the Admiſſion is in the whole Body, as appears by every Inſtance they have read. A Freeman is elected by the Mayor, Jurats, and Commonalty, and then he is ordered to be ſworn in by the Mayor and Jurats: Sure there can be no Doubt in the Queſtion. Swearing and Admitting I take to be the ſame Thing; they are ſynonymous: Without Swearing no Man can be admitted; but the Swearing does not admit. Suppoſe twenty Freemen ſworn in by the Mayor and Jurats, the Franchiſe of the Town is worth nothing—

C. J. Eyre. You take Admitting to be the Election; it is not ſo: But Admitting to the Exerciſe of the Right. Admitting is not conferring the Right. The Defendant has a Right by his Marriage: Admitting muſt be conſtrued the receiving him into the Office, and admitting him to the Exerciſe of that Right, and therefore is ſynonymous. You go upon a wrong Iſſue: Who were the Perſons intituled to adminiſter the Oath of Office?

Mr. Serj. Darnell. Admiſſion gives the Right.

C. J. Eyre. I think it would be proper to admit the Iſſue to be, Who ought to adminiſter the Oath?—I don't underſtand the Cuſtoms of the Cinque Ports.

Mr. Serj. Darn. If ſworn, whether duly elected? or it ſignifies nothing.

C. J. Eyre. Suppoſe Gibbon to have a Right: An Oath adminiſtered to a Man that has no Right is of no Avail: A Man muſt have a Right to an Office, and muſt be admitted into that Office by Swearing; and the Queſtion now is, Who is to adminiſter that Oath?

Mr. Serj. Darn. We are to ſupport the Right of the whole Body to elect and admit; or the Court of King's-Bench will think this Matter not tried.

C. J. Eyre. The Court of King's-Bench would think me a trifling Fellow to try the Right of the Election.

Mr. Serj. Darn. The Rule is, that Gibbon's Iſſue ſhould be tried firſt, and Darby abide the Fate of that; to which they have demurred.

Mr. Serj. Baynes. May it pleaſe your Lordſhip, and you Gentlemen of the Jury; I am alſo of Counſel in this Caſe for the King. The Senſe of the Court of King's-Bench was, in relation to a Right ſet up by Gibbon and Darby; and the Queſtion was, Whether a Perſon marrying a Freeman's Daughter was intituled to his Freedom? And the Court was of Opinion, That ought principally to be tried; and to make an End of the whole, if Gibbon and Darby had a Right, Wightwick was to be Mayor; if not, then Elles was to be Mayor. But they have evaded this Queſtion; and when an Iſſue was tendered to try the Right, they demurred; and thereby the ſole Reaſon of granting theſe Informations is entirely eluded: And now the Queſtion is, Whether the ſole Right of admitting Freemen belongs to the Corporation, or to the Mayor and Jurats, or to the Mayor and two Jurats? But, Gentlemen, we contend that the Right of Admiſſion is in the Court of Aſſembly.

The Gentlemen of the other Side have produced ſome Inſtances to ſhew the Right to be in the Mayor and Jurats, and that they have accordingly taken upon them to ſwear in ſome Perſons, and Swearing is a Completion of the Perſon's Right to be admitted.

My Lord, the Admiſſion of Freemen is to be made on Lady-Day: After the Election the Bell tolls; and the Perſons having a Right come before the General Aſſembly, and ſay, they claim to be admitted, for Servitude, or as Free-born, &c. And they judge of theſe Facts, and thereupon admit; though the Freedom is not completed till the Perſon be ſworn.

Gentlemen, the Evidences the other Side have produced go no higher than 1679: whereas we have Inſtances, long before that Time, of Admiſſions by both; and a new Inſtitution, lately practiſed, we humbly hope ſhall not ſet aſide an ancient Cuſtom. Strange! that this Power of admitting ſhould be in a Part of the Body! A Mayor and two Jurats cannot admit, contrary to the General Aſſembly; when they have approved a Claim, the Right is to be completed by Swearing before the Mayor and Jurats. They are two diſtinct Rights; and we ſhall produce to your Lordſhip and the Jury unqueſtionable Inſtances, that this is the conſtant Uſe, for the Perſons claiming to be Freemen to make out their Right to the Aſſembly, and afterwards to be ſworn by the Mayor and Jurats. A High Conſtable is named by the Juſtices in Seſſions, and then is ſent by them to a Juſtice of Peace to be ſworn; as, in the preſent Caſe, a Freeman is elected by the Common Aſſembly, and then is ſent to the Mayor and Jurats to be ſworn: And therefore, Gentlemen, we hope you will find a Verdict for the King.

Mr. Wynne. My Lord, the ſingle Queſtion before the Court of King's-Bench was, Whether Gibbon and Darby had a Right to Freedoms by marrying Freemen's Daughters? By the Rules of Practice, it is impoſſible for any Part of this Queſtion to come before this Court; the ſubſequent Proceedings in the Crown-Office muſt ſhew this; and nothing could be done by the Court of King's-Bench, the Pleadings being brought into the Crown-Office after the Term.

My Lord, it is endeavoured by the Gentlemen of the other Side to take away the Diſtinction between the Admiſſion and Swearing; and it is true, they are by diſtinct Bodies.

Gentlemen, the Claim is firſt to be made to the General Aſſembly on Lady-Day, on tolling a Bell: When that has been conſidered, and allowed, and admitted by the General Body, then, by Delegacy, it has been ſent to the Mayor and Jurats to ſwear the Perſon, and is merely a miniſterial Act; and what they have done has been in Eaſe of themſelves, in Delegacy to them. It will appear from the ancient Entries, (their higheſt Entry being 1679) and 'tis at an Aſſembly of Mayor and Jurats, Peter Martin was ordered to be ſworn by the Mayor and two Jurats; but not to part with any Right they had, as will fully appear, when our Evidences are compared in Point of Time with the others.

You will pleaſe therefore, Gentlemen, to conſider, that the Admiſſion is the Act of the General Aſſembly, but the Swearing the Act of the Mayor and Jurats.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. My Lord, we humbly inſiſt, the ſole Right is not in the Mayor and Jurats.

C. J. Eyre. I am of Opinion, this is an Admiſſion.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. In all the Inſtances, till 1679, they were admitted at the General Aſſembly; and in 1699 they have read one Inſtance. We inſiſt, therefore, that our Evidence is equally ſtrong.

Mr. Knowler. My Lord, we have a Rule to produce all the Corporation-Books at the Trial, and Mr. Wellard refuſes us the Books.

Mr. Wellard. My Lord, we have brought the Books hither at a great Expence. Mr. Wightwick muſt be paid for them.

Mr. Knowler. Mr. Wellard has had four Guineas on that Account.

Mr. Wellard. The Mayor has been at more than four Guineas Expences already, and there are ſeveral other Charges to be paid.

C. J. Eyre. You ſhould agree to pay what the Maſter of the Crown-Office ſhall think reaſonable more than four Guineas, and enter into a Rule for that Purpoſe. (Which was done accordingly.)

Mr. Lacy. My Lord, we ſubmit, whether this is proper Evidence on the Iſſue? The Plea is, that the ſole Right of Swearing and Admitting is, and at the Time of Swearing and Admitting Gibbon was, in the Mayor and Jurats, or in the Mayor and two Jurats, of the Town and Port of New-Romney; and the Iſſue is taken upon that, Is, and at the Time was—

C. J. Eyre. I think it proper Evidence, to ſhew what has been the Uſage by the Books. You muſt prove an ancient Right; for Gibbon's Right muſt be determined by the ancient Uſage.

(Here a great Diſpute aroſe about the Corporation-Books between Mr. Wellard and Mr. Knowler, &c. Mr. Wellard being in Fear he ſhould loſe them.)

C. J. Eyre. Give them all in, and call for them one by one. You have them, and make no Uſe of them.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. Fol. — Read the Election of Mayor and Jurats.

(Aſſociate begins to read, but could not go on; when the Chief Juſtice took the Book out of his Hands.)

C. J. Eyre. Give me the Book; I can read it.

(Attempts to read, but does it very indiſtinctly and with great Difficulty; and then throws down the Book, not being able to go on.)

Mr. Wellard reads—

" The Election of Mayor and Jurats of the Town and Port of New-
" Romney, 1571. According to Patent, appeared John Stevens and others,
" in Number fourteen; by their Conſent, Mercer and others choſen
" Jurats."

C. J. Eyre. Admiſſion and Election are ſynonymous. Let it be ſhewn, that any Perſon was ſworn at this Aſſembly from an Entry.

Mr. Wynne. Read the Admiſſion and Swearing of John Amerſham.

Mr. Wellard reads—

" 25 March, 1571. John Amerſham, natus apud admiſſus et
" juratus ad franchis'.

C. J. Eyre. Shew that he was elected before: This is very material Evidence.

Mr. Serj. Darn. Read the Entry of Thomas Baſtard's Admiſſion in 1671.

Mr. Wellard reads—

" Election of Mayor and Jurats of the Town and Port of New-Rom-
" ney, 1671. According to Patent, appeared John Cheſſman, and Lau-
" rence Fane, Thomas Wall, and others;
" Thomas Baſtard, natus apud Yalden, admiſſus ad franchis' et ſol' feod'."

Mr. Serj. Baynes. Read the Admiſſion of William Southland, the 9th Auguſt, 33 Elizæ.

Mr. Wellard reads—

" Gulielmus Southland, natus apud 9 Auguſt, 33 Elizæ, ad-
" miſſ' per Major', Jur', et Com' ad franchis', et ſol' inde feod', et
" juratus."

Mr. Wynne. Read the Admiſſion and Swearing of Thomas Maſter, and five others, Lady-Day, 1579.

Mr. Wellard reads—

" Lady-Day, 1579. Appeared William Hyett, John Cheſſman, Richard
" Hoppen, and others, Commoners and Freemen; were elected and
" choſen;

" Thomas Maſter, admiſſ' et jur' et ſol' feod'.

" Gul' Taylor, admiſſ' ad franchis', et jur', et ſol' feod'.
" James Gardner,
" Thomas Wymond, } adm' et jur' et ſol' feod'.
" Johannes Southern,

Now turn to the Admiſſion and Swearing of John Smith, and others.

" New-Romney. Election of Mayor and Jurats, 25th March,
" 22d James Iſt, 1624. Appeared Bedell, Mayor; Lancaſter, and others,
" Commoners and Freemen;

" Geo. Labden, adm' ad franchis', et ſol' 3s. 4d. et jur'.
" Daniel Duke, admiſſ' et jur'."

Mr. Serj. Darn. Read the Entry of the 25th March, 1627.

" Election 25 March, 1627. Appeared Fell, Mayor; Lancaſter, and " others;
" John Plomer, free-born, admiſſ' in franchis'."

N. B. It does not appear he was ſworn.

Mr. Serj. Baynes. Read on the Entries in 1659, 1660, and 1666.

" 25 March, 1659. John Wyvill admitted and ſworn.
" 15 October, 1660. Four Perſons admitted and ſworn.

" 29 May, 18 Car. II. 1666. Mayor and Jurats, at a Common " Place;

" Richard Strode admitted into the Franchiſes, ſubſcribed the Declaration, and took the Oath of a Freeman, according to the Cuſtomal."

Mr. Wynne. Turn to the Admiſſion and Swearing of John Gray, the 2d of October, 1699.

Mr. Wellard reads---

" 2d October, 11 Wil. III. 1699. Mayor and Jurats, at a Common " Place, Commoners and Freemen;

" John Gray, being free-born, was admitted and ſworn according to " the Cuſtomal."

Mr. Knowler. Read on till you come to Mr. Furneſe and Mr. Papillon's Admiſſion and Swearing.

" 4 July, 1683. Mayor, Jurats, and Commoners, at a Common Place;

" John Walker, free-born, Thomas Edwards, Richard Kent, and William Pidd, were ſworn according to the Cuſtomal, and admitted " according to the Election, at a Common Aſſembly.

" 4 November, 3 Q. Anne, 1704. Mayor, Jurats, and Commoners; " Walter Whitfield admitted and ſworn.

" 10 October, 1710. Robert Coates, Mayor, Jurats, and Commoners; " Robert Furneſe admitted and ſworn according to the Cuſtomal.

" 20 April, 1713. Mayor, Jurats, and Commoners; " Edward Watſon admitted and ſworn.

" 23 March, 1721. Mayor, Jurats, and Commoners; " David Papillon admitted and ſworn according to the Cuſtomal."

Mr. Serj. Darnell. We ſubmit it to your Lordſhip, whether here is any Colour to ſay, that here is a Right in the Mayor and Jurats ſolely.

Mr. Knowler. My Lord, on the 28th of November, 1727, John Maſcall being before choſen, the Court made an Order, that he ſhould not be ſworn.

C. J. Eyre. A very ſtrong Evidence, that the Right is in the Mayor, Jurats, and Commonalty. They have ſhewn only from 1679: I deſire to know, if they can ſhew any Thing before the Reſtoration.

Mr. Wellard reads----

" 18 March, 1668. The Corporation conſidering the ſmall Number " of Freemen, purſuant to a Decree of Brotherhood and Ghueſtling, " have choſen John Shoeſmith and others to be Freemen, and ordered them " to be ſummoned to take the Oath according to the Cuſtomal."

Fol. 614. " They were afterwards declared free, and ſworn before the " Mayor and Jurats."

C. J. Eyre. The Mayor and Jurats have not the ſole Power of Swearing and Admitting. Reading ten or twenty Inſtances will not prove the ſole Right of Swearing to be in them.

Mr. Wellard reads----

" 34 Car. II. 1683. Mayor and Jurats; Maſcall Mayor, no Com- " moner preſent;

" A Freeman ſworn."

C. J. Eyre. One or two Inſtances will not alter the Caſe.

Mr. Marſh. My Lord, the Iſſue now before your Lordſhip and the Jury is, Whether the ſole Right of Swearing and Admitting Freemen be in the Mayor and Jurats, or not? And the Gentlemen of the other Side have produced Evidences to ſhew, that notwithſtanding what we contend for may in ſome Inſtances be true, the contrary Cuſtom has likewiſe been practiſed, and will deſtroy our Right. They have begun early with Evidences, (I think as far back as 1571) and carried it down to the Reſtoration: And the Stile of that Aſſembly does appear to be, " At the Election of the Mayor and Jurats," though it was a general Aſſembly when the Perſons were choſen Freemen. It expreſſes, that they were admitted and ſworn: Admiſſion may ſignify Election: If they are elected, the Entry goes on and ſays, they were ſworn. But I ſubmit it to your Lordſhip, Whether, though they, the Commons, joined in Electing, yet when the Swearing comes to be performed, That being a diſtinct Act, is not ſolely in the Mayor and Jurats?

My Lord, it is alledged by the Gentlemen of the other Side, that tho' the Name of the Aſſembly is often altered, yet the Perſons were there who made up the whole Corporation. But the modern Inſtances given, and ſome ancient ones, ſay, the Election was according to the Cuſtomal: So that all from 1679 ſay ſo. Theſe are ancient Entries; and therefore I ſubmit it to your Lordſhip, when from theſe Entries it does appear plainly that they were admitted and ſworn in general, whether it be neceſſary to make that more plain? And alſo, whether theſe modern Inſtances in 1668 and 1683 do not explain what was the Uſage before? For, if the Right was in the Freemen with the Mayor and Jurats, they would never part with it; and yet we find, they did order this Swearing to be by the Mayor and Jurats; and they would not have parted with their Right, if they had not been conſcious there was no Right in them. As to the Evidence given that refers to the Cuſtomal, when Sir Robert Furneſe, Mr. Papillon, and Mr. Wellard, were admitted; if the Reference is to the Cuſtomal, that Cuſtomal we have, and it takes Notice particularly of their being to be ſworn before the Mayor and Jurats, and that the Commoners ſhould not be excluded before they had the ſetting of the Price. Your Lordſhip was pleaſed to ſay, you did not underſtand the Cuſtoms of the Cinque Ports; where we find many ancient Entries, that the Freemen ſhould be ſworn according to the Decrees of Brotherhood and Ghueſtling; which is an Aſſembly or Parliament of the Cinque Ports, when they meet and make Orders and Rules; they extend to other Ports in point of Example, Influence, and Power, if not in point of Authority. We hope, my Lord, to produce and give in Evidence theſe Acts of Aſſembly; and if theſe are ſo, we doubt not but the Jury will find for us.

Mr. Wellard reads----

The Old Cuſtomal.

" New-Romney, Henry VII.

" Item, it is uſed, that; if a Stranger of good Name and Converſation be dwelling within the Town, and deſireth to be a Freeman of the " Town, the Jurats may grant the Franchiſes, paying to the Commons " as they may accord; and when they be accorded, he ſhall be charged " in a Book, for to maintain the Franchiſes with his Body and Cattle, and " for to be true in all Points, and for to keep all the Commons Counſel; " and to be obedient as another Freeman to the Commons, and to have " a proper Place, of the Price of 40*s.* within the Town, within the next " Year enſuing, by which he may be diſtreyned and juſtified, upon Pain " of Forfeiture of his Franchiſe: And when he is thus ſworn, the Com- " mon Clerk ſhall enter his Name in Paper of the Common, for to witneſs the ſaid Grant; and all his Children, freely got en after the ſame " Day of Grant, may claim and enjoy the Franchiſe by the ſame Grant: " But, if he have any Children before the Day of Grant, or elſe that he " get any Child otherwiſe than in Sponſal, he ſhall not have the ſame " Franchiſe by the ſame Grant; but if he be of new Grant, and it is to " wit, that the Jurats may not grant the Franchiſe to no Stranger- " Man, if he be not reſiant within the Franchiſe."

Mr. Lacy. My Lord, the Jurats ſhall grant the Franchiſes, and the Commons are to ſet the Price.

Mr. Smith. Grant the Franchiſes muſt be to put them in Poſſeſſion, which cannot be till they are ſworn; and the Commons are to ſet the Price.

Mr. Lacy. All the modern Entries mention, according to the Cuſtomal.

C. J. Eyre. It is taking the Oath according to the Cuſtomal. Is there the Oath of Office of a Freeman, according to the Cuſtomal? If there is, let it be read.

Aſſociate reads the Freeman's Oath----

Mr. Marſh. Now read an Act of Ghueſtling.

C. J. Eyre. We'll have no Brotherhood and Ghueſtling: I know nothing of it. Let Mr. Town-Clerk explain it.

Mr. Wellard reads---

" At a Brotherhood held at New-Romney, the 8th of July, 1603.

" Whereas there are, in many of the Towns and Members of the " Cinque Ports, Men of Wealth, ſtayed, and of good Government, " dwelling within the ſame, who enjoy much Benefit of their ſo dwelling, viz. free from Payment of Fifteenths and Tenths, and from " being returned to appear at Aſſizes or Seſſions in the County where they " inhabit; and receive many other Privileges and Benefits, by reaſon " of their ſo inhabiting within the ſaid Cinque Ports, ancient Towns, or " Members, which otherwiſe they could not enjoy; and yet refuſe to be " Freemen of the ſame Town and Port where they dwell, and enjoy " the ſaid Benefit and Privileges; by reaſon whereof, divers of the " ſaid Towns, Ports, and Members, are unfurniſhed and unprovided " of ſufficient and able Men to execute and diſcharge ſuch Offices and " Services, as they are, by the Charters and Cuſtoms of the ſaid Cinque " Ports, Towns, and Members, bound to do: It is therefore at this " Aſſembly fully conſented and decreed, That, if the Mayor, Jurats, and " Commonalty, or the more Part of them, in any of the ſaid Cinque " Ports, Towns, and their Members, (or Bailiff, Jurats, and Com- " monalty, where no Mayor is, or the moſt Part of them) ſhall think " any Inhabitant or Inhabitants dwelling amongſt them, and in that " Port, Town, or Member, which ſuch Mayor and Jurats, or Bailiff " and Jurats, do govern, and ſhall by the more Voice of Mayor, Jurats, " and Commons, (or Bailiff, Jurats, and Commons, where no Mayor " is) chuſe ſuch their Inhabitant or Inhabitants to be Freeman or Free- " men of the ſaid Town where they ſo govern, and ſhall call the ſaid In- " habitant and Inhabitants, ſo to be choſen a Freeman or Freemen of the " ſaid Town, to their Court-Hall, and there, in full and open Court, " acquaint him and them, ſo choſen to be Freeman or Freemen, of their " ſaid Choice and Election, and do then and there require ſuch Perſon " or Perſons, ſo choſen for a Freeman or Freemen, to take the uſual " Oath of a Freeman in that Place, and he or they, ſo choſen, ſhall " not then and there, without further Delay, take the ſaid Oath, and " become a Freeman of the ſame Place, ſhall forfeit, to the Uſe of the " ſaid Town and Corporation where ſuch Default or Neglect ſhall hap- " pen, a Fine of 10*l.* of lawful Money of England. And ſo often as the " Mayor and Jurats, (or Bailiff and Jurats, where no Mayor is) after " ſuch Election or Choice of a Freeman or Freemen, as aforeſaid, ſhall " in full Court, there to be holden, proffer the Oath of a Freeman there " uſed to ſuch Perſon or Perſons ſo choſen as aforeſaid, and he or they, to " whom ſuch Oath ſhall be proffered, do not take the ſame Oath, and " become a Freeman as other Freemen of the ſaid Place, ſhall forfeit for " a Fine, to the Uſe of the ſaid Corporation where ſuch Neglect ſhall " be, for every ſuch Neglect, and not taking of his or their Oath, 10*l.* " of lawful Money of England; to be levied upon ſuch Perſon and Per- " ſons, ſo neglecting to take their Oaths, as Fines in the ſaid Place are " uſed to be levied."

Mr. Lacy. My Lord, we humbly ſubmit, we are intituled to the ſole Right. Inſtances have been produced, to ſhew that the Commons have a Right with the Mayor and Jurats; for all the Entries they have produced refer to the Book of Brotherhood and Ghueſtling, and all the Choices in that Book are by the Mayor and Jurats, who are to offer the Oath of a Freeman. Read the Act of Ghueſtling of the 21ſt of July, 1668.

Mr. Wellard reads----

" Brotherhood, or Ghueſtling, held at the ſaid Town and Port of " New-Romney, 21ſt July, 1668.

" Whereas, by a Decree of Brotherhood, made in the Year of our " Lord 1603, it is conſented to and decreed, That if the Mayor, Jurats, " and

"and Commonalty, (or Bailiff, Jurats, and Commonalty, where no "Mayor is) shall, by major Voice of such Mayor, Jurats, and Com-"mons, (or Bailiff, Jurats, and Commons, where no Mayor is) elect "and chuse any Inhabitant or Inhabitants, in their respective Corpora-"tions, to be Freeman or Freemen of the said Town, and shall call "the said Inhabitant or Inhabitants, so chosen a Freeman or Freemen "of the said Town, to their Court-Hall; and there, in full and open "Court, acquaint him and them of such Election, and shall then and "there require such Person or Persons, so chosen, to take the usual "Oath of a Freeman in that Place, and he or they shall not then and "there, without further Delay, take the said Oath, and become a "Freeman of that Place, shall forfeit, to the Use of the Corporation "where such Default or Neglect shall happen, for a Fine, the Sum of "10 l. And that, so often as any Inhabitant or Inhabitants, so elected "Freeman or Freemen in any of the said Towns, Ports, or Members, "shall refuse or neglect, (the said Oath being tendered to him or them "in Manner aforesaid) every such Inhabitant shall forfeit the like Sum "of 10 l. to be levied as in the said Decree is directed, and as by the "said Decree may more fully appear. Now, for that this Assembly "doth find that the said Decree is not so effectual to compel such Inha-"bitants to be made free in their respective Corporations where they do "inhabit, but that several Persons do evade the same, and the Penalty "therein contained, by refusing to appear in full and open Court, "where the said Oath is to be required and tendered, as aforesaid, and "by divers other subtle Devices; wherefore, for preventing such "Evasions and Devices for Time to come, and for the better uphold-"ing of several Corporations of the said Ports, Towns, and Members, "which otherwise may cease and be annihilated, it is now by this "Assembly fully decreed and ordered, That the said Penalty of Ten "Pounds, mentioned in the said recited Decree, is, and shall be, "by virtue hereof, imposed and levied upon every Inhabitant of any "of the said Ports, Towns, or Members, who shall be elected a "Freeman of such respective Corporation wherein he is Inhabitant, "according to the said ancient Decree; in case such Inhabitant or "Inhabitants, so elected, shall refuse or neglect to be and appear at "the next Court of Record to be holden in such Corporation wherein "he dwelleth, upon verbal or other Summons from the Mayor or "Bailiff of such Corporation, to be made by himself, his Serjeant, "or other Officer; or, upon Appearance at such Court, shall refuse "or neglect to take the Oath of a Freeman in Manner aforesaid: And "that, so often as such Inhabitant or Inhabitants, so elected free, shall "refuse or neglect to appear at any Court to be holden in such Town, "Port, or Member, where he or they inhabit, upon like Summons as is "last above-mentioned, or appearing, shall not take the Oath as afore-"said, they and every of them shall forfeit, for every such Offence "contrary to the Intent of this Decree, the like Sum of Ten Pounds; "which several Fines shall be levied by Warrant under the Seal of "Office of Mayoralty or Balliage of each Town or Member where the "same shall be forfeited, or in such other Manner as Fines in that Place "are usually levied."

C. J. Eyre. If the Mayor and Jurats call the Man, and he refuse, they may set a Fine upon him.

Mr. Lacy. My Lord, we humbly insist, the sole Right of Swearing and Admitting is in the Mayor and Jurats, or in the Mayor and two Jurats. Their Evidence is of admitting at a Common Assembly; and the Issue is not confined to the Mayor and Jurats only. The first Evidence we began with, was an Order of the Mayor, Jurats, and Commonalty, for the Mayor and Jurats to swear in a Freeman, and they did swear him in accordingly. The other Evidences given are of Instances, where the Mayor, Jurats, and Commonalty, all swore in. And we submit it to your Lordship, whether the Evidence of swearing in at the Common Assembly is not a concurrent Proof, that the sole Right is in the Mayor and Jurats; because the Mayor and Jurats must be Part of the Common Assembly: And if so, though the Commoners are not gone, yet the Swearing shall be construed to be before the Mayor and Jurats; Reddendo singulo singulis. Your Lordship sits Judge of Nisi prius, and takes a Fine; it is not as Judge of Nisi prius—

C. J. Eyre. The Common Assembly, as Mayor, Jurats, and Commonalty, cannot hold a Court of Record. An Assembly can act only as that Assembly. If a select Number take upon them to do an Act of the Corporation, that will be a void Act.

Mr. Marsh. My Lord, the second Issue is, Whether Gibbon was sworn and admitted before the Mayor and two Jurats?

C. J. Eyre. Gibbon's Plea is, That he was intituled, as having married the Daughter of a Freeman; that the Mayor and Jurats had a Right to swear; and that he was sworn in accordingly.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. The Defendant was not sworn and admitted as by the Plea is alledged. Read the Plea.

(Associate reads Gibbon's Plea, as before opened.)

C. J. Eyre. The Question is, Whether this be the due Manner and Form alledged in the Plea?

Mr. Lacy. We have a Right, but not a sole Right.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. You have pleaded, you have a Right by marrying a Freeman's Daughter; and that the Mayor and Jurats have the sole Right of swearing and admitting you to that Right; and that you were sworn and admitted in due Form: Therefore you were admitted by the Mayor and Jurats, who had the sole Right.

Mr. Serj. Baynes. The Question is, Whether they were duly admitted and sworn by Coates and two Jurats? And if they were, the Right must be in the Mayor and two Jurats only. Read the Plea.

(Associate reads Gibbon's Plea, as before.)

C. J. Eyre. That he was admitted in due Manner and Form; so the Plea is.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. My Lord, by the Plea, he alledges the sole Right to be in the Mayor and Jurats, and that he was admitted in due Manner and Form; which must be by the Mayor and Jurats, who had the sole Right.

Mr. Wynne. My Lord, The second Issue is, Whether, having a Right, he was admitted in due Manner and Form? The Replication answers, That he was not admitted and sworn in Manner and Form as by the Plea is alledged; which would make this an absurd or immaterial Issue; and therefore, in Construction of Law, it is only one Issue.

Mr. Marsh. We submit it to your Lordship, Whether the second Issue involves any Matter of Right? The Matter is before the Jury; and if so, we are not at Liberty to go to the second Issue, and the Fact of Completing remains still; and it is necessary to prove that Issue. It may be thought immaterial by the Gentlemen of the other Side; but, if the first Issue is for us, the other will be absolutely necessary.

Mr. Lacy. My Lord, the first Issue is, Whether Gibbon was sworn and admitted in due Manner and Form before the Mayor and two Jurats?

C. J. Eyre. It was not in due Manner and Form, unless they had a Right.

Mr. Lacy. My Lord, we humbly hope we have given a sufficient Evidence, that there is a sufficient Right in the Mayor and two Jurats; and therefore have proved, that Gibbon was duly admitted.

Mr. Smith. If the first Issue should be found against us, Will it not be true, that there is a Right, if not a sole Right, in the Mayor and Jurats? And if so, the Defendant Gibbon was sworn in that Manner, and so he insists upon it.

Mr. Marsh. My Lord, it is plain there was a Right in the Mayor and two Jurats. The Plea saying it was a sole Right, we submit it to your Lordship, Whether that contradictory Evidence could destroy our Issue, which had tied it down? But this surely cannot in any Sort affect the second Issue, Whether it was in due Manner and Form? And, if we prove he was sworn in any due Manner, we hope the Jury will find for us.

C. J. Eyre. It must be in the due Manner you have set forth by your Plea, which must be according to the Right asserted to be in the Issue. We must not suppose there are two Rights. It must be in the due Manner upon the Construction of the Plea; and I shall leave it upon my own Sense of the Matter; I shall not lump it.

Gentlemen of the Jury, This is an Information against Gibbon, in the Nature of a Quo Warranto, for exercising of the Office of a Freeman in New-Romney, to which he was not intituled; and for usurping the Exercise of that Office.

To this he pleads, he is intituled to hold the same, and to exercise this Office, because he had married the Daughter of a Freeman, and in her, by the Custom, is intituled; and that the Right of admitting and swearing is in the Mayor and two Jurats, and that by them he was duly admitted into this Office. To this Plea there has been a Replication, which ends in a Demurrer; so not brought to be tried.

The King replies, That the sole Right of Swearing and Admitting is not in the Mayor and Jurats; and therefore the Defendant is not duly admitted to the Right of a Freeman.

The Right Gibbon has is not now in any Issue; but, supposing he had such a Right, Whether he should be sworn by the Mayor and two Jurats, exclusive of any other People? And the other Issue is about the Defendant's being duly admitted. If the Mayor and Jurats have a sole Right to admit, then Gibbon is duly admitted; and if they have not that sole Right, then he is not duly admitted, in the Sense of this Plea.

To prove the sole Right to be in the Mayor and Jurats, the Defendant has produced several Books; by which it appears, several Freemen have been admitted by the Mayor and Jurats solely. He particularly instances,

8 March, 1679, at a Common Assembly of the Mayor and Jurats and Commonalty of the Town and Port of New-Romney, in the Common Place, Peter Martin is elected, and ordered to be sworn in by the Mayor and Jurats.

3 December, 1694, another Instance of a Freeman admitted and sworn by the Mayor and Jurats.

16 May, 1698, another.

Another the 7th of February, 1708.

Another the 13th of June, 1715.

6 August, 1717, one Widcomb and another.

18 November, 1727, Thomas Wilson.

7 June, 1731, William Gray.

And there are other Instances, the 18th of March, 1668, and the 22d of July, 1683.

So here are People sworn and admitted by the Mayor and Jurats, but the Election is at a Common Assembly; and People elected have been chosen at such an Assembly, and must be so elected, unless they have another Right. But the Common Assembly have not a Right to swear these People; but the sole Right, Gibbon says, (for Swearing and Admitting are synonymous) is in the Mayor and Jurats.

The other Side say, it should be by the Common Assembly, rather than by the Mayor and Jurats only; and to shew you this, they have called for several Books, and shewn more Instances of admitting by the Mayor, Jurats, and Common Assembly, than by the Mayor and Jurats alone; and many Instances of admitting by the Common Assembly.

And this Swearing is a prescriptive Right, no Directions being in the Charter about it.

And the Crown says, that, by ancient Usage, he ought to be admitted by the Common Assembly, and not by the Mayor and Jurats solely; 1679 is the only Admittance.

But they instance, at Lady-Day 1571, at a Common Assembly, at the Election of Mayor and Jurats, several People, John Amersham and others, were admitted; admissus et juratus.

Soon after, 1579, at another Common Assembly, Thomas Master admissus ad franchis', et juratus.

In Book N°. 7, and in Book N°. 4, is an Election on the 25th March, 22 Jac. I. and there certain Men were admitted and sworn, one Smith, Labden, and one Duke paid his 3*s.* 4*d.*

Another Instance, in 162-, of a Person admitted and sworn at this Common Assembly.

By their Admittance I understand elected.

Another, in 1659, admitted to the Franchise, and sworn.

Another, the 15th of October, 1660, four Persons admitted to the Franchise then.

Another, 29 May, 1666, Richard Strode having taken the Oath of Freedom, according to the Custom.

2 October, 1699, John Gray, free-born, was admitted, and took the Oath: Though he was not intituled by their Election, but was free-born, yet the Common Assembly swore him.

4 July, 1683, at the Common Aſſembly, John Walker, free-born, and three others; they ſwore him and the others, and they were admitted.

4 November, 1704, Whitfield was admitted, and took the Oath.

10 October, 1710, Robert Furneſe was admitted.

20 April, 1713, Mr. Watſon admitted.

23 March, 1721, Mr. Papillon was admitted in the ſame Manner.

Which ſhews, the ſole Right was not in the Mayor and Jurats; becauſe the Common Aſſembly exerciſed this at the ſame Time, and did it before the Mayor and Jurats.

In 1679, a Perſon elected was ordered to be ſworn by the Mayor and Jurats: But ſure they have not the ſole Right, there being more Precedents againſt the ſole Right than for it.

The ancient Practice has been to ſwear them by the Common Aſſembly, and no modern Practice can take away that Right.

If you think the ſole Right is in the Mayor and Jurats, then you muſt find for the Defendant.

But, if you think it to be a concurrent Right with the Common Aſſembly, then the Iſſue is againſt the Defendant; for the Mayor and Jurats have not the ſole Right.

The ſecond Iſſue is, Whether the Defendant was ſworn by the Mayor and Jurats? But this depends on the former Iſſue; for, after the Mayor and Jurats Right is ſet forth to be the ſole Right, and the Defendant ſays he was duly admitted, it is, he was admitted according to the Right inſiſted on by the Plea. And if the Mayor and Jurats have not the ſole Right, we are not to ſuppoſe they have any other Right; for the Defendant has confined himſelf to the ſole Right. He ſays, he was duly admitted; which muſt be by the Right ſet forth by the Plea, which is the Right of Swearing ſolely by the Mayor and Jurats.

The Queſtion therefore is, Whether the Mayor and Jurats have the ſole Right?

If you find for the King, or for the Defendant, in the firſt Iſſue, you muſt find the ſecond Iſſue in the ſame Manner.

Verdict for the King in both Iſſues.

NUMBER XVII.

The KING againſt RICHARD ELLES,

Upon an Information, in the Nature of a Quo Warranto, by the King's Coroner and Attorney, againſt the Defendant, to ſhew by what Authority he claims to be Mayor of the Town and Port of New-Romney, at the Relation of Benjamin Man. Tried at Kent Aſſizes, held at Maidſtone, the 6th of Auguſt, 1734, before the Right Hon. the Lord Chief Juſtice Eyre.

Mr. Knowler.

MAY it pleaſe your Lordſhip, and you Gentlemen of the Jury; This is an Information, in the Nature of a Quo Warranto, againſt the Defendant Elles, to ſhew by what Authority he claims to be Mayor of the Town and Port of New-Romney: And the Information ſets forth, That the Town and Port of New-Romney is an ancient Town and Port, and one of the five ancient Ports of this Kingdom; and that the Barons and Inhabitants of the ſaid Town and Port are, and for ten Years laſt paſt, and long before, were, and have been, one Body Corporate and Politic, in Deed and in Name, by the Name of the Mayor, Jurats, and Commonalty of the Town and Port of New-Romney, in the County of Kent; and that the Office of Mayor of the ſaid Town and Port is, and for and during all the Time aforeſaid hath been, a public Office, and an Office of great Truſt and Preheminence, within the ſaid Town and Port, touching the Rule and Government of the ſaid Town and Port, and the Adminiſtration of public Juſtice within the ſame Town and Port; and that Richard Elles, of the Town and Port of New-Romney aforeſaid, Yeoman, on the 19th of April, in the ſeventh Year of his preſent Majeſty, at the Town and Port of New-Romney aforeſaid, did uſe and exerciſe, and from thence continually, to the Time of filing the Information, hath uſed and exerciſed, and yet doth there uſe and exerciſe, without any legal Warrant, Royal Grant, or Right whatſoever, the Office of Mayor of the ſaid Town and Port, and to have, uſe, and enjoy all the Liberties, Privileges, and Franchiſes thereof; which the ſaid Richard Elles upon his Majeſty hath uſurped, in Contempt of his Majeſty, and to the great Damage and Prejudice of his Royal Prerogative, and alſo againſt his Crown and Dignity: Whereupon he prays Proceſs, &c.

To this the Defendant has pleaded, That the ſaid Town and Port is an ancient Town and Port, and one of the Five ancient Ports of this Kingdom; and that the Barons and Inhabitants of the ſaid Town and Port are, and for the Space of ten Years laſt paſt, and long before, were, and have been, one Body Corporate and Politic, by the Name of Mayor, Jurats, and Commonalty of the Town and Port of New-Romney, in the County of Kent; and the Office of Mayor to be a public Office, and an Office of great Truſt and Preheminence, as by the Information is ſuppoſed.

And that the late Queen Elizabeth, by her Letters Patent, dated at Northaw, the 4th of Auguſt, in the fifth Year of her Reign, did will and grant, that the Barons and Inhabitants of the ſaid Town and Port (who before were incorporated by the Name of Jurats and Commonalty, as ſhe was informed) from thenceforth for ever ſhould and might be one Body in itſelf Incorporate, in Deed and Name, by the Name of Mayor, Jurats, and Commonalty of the Town and Port of New-Romney, in the County of Kent.

And thereby made and ordained John Cheſſman, then one of the ſaid Jurats, Mayor of the ſaid Town and Port, to have and exerciſe that Office until Lady-Day then next enſuing, if he ſhould ſo long live; and did thereby make, ordain, approve, and confirm John Percker, William Ipſe, George Holton, Laurence Fane, and Jeffery Tomkin, then Jurats of the ſaid Town and Port, to have and exerciſe that Office during their reſpective Lives, in Manner and Form as the Jurats of the ſaid Town before that Time exerciſed their ſaid Offices.

And thereby willed and granted, that upon Lady-Day then next enſuing, in the Pariſh-Church of St. Nicholas, within the ſaid Town and Port, one of the Jurats of the ſaid Town and Port ſhould and might be choſen Mayor, by the Jurats and Commonalty of the ſaid Town and Port, for one whole Year then next enſuing; which ſaid Jurat, ſo elected to be Mayor, if he ſhould be preſent, ſhould take his corporal Oath, for the due Execution of his Office, before his Predeceſſor, in like Manner and Form as the Mayor of the Town and Port of Sandwich uſed to take it; and if ſuch Perſon, ſo elected, ſhould not be preſent, then at the next Court to be holden within the ſaid Town and Port: And ſo from Year to Year, and from Time to Time, the Mayor ſhall be choſen for ever.

And that every one of the Jurats, from Time to Time, from thenceforth for ever, ſhould be choſen by the Commonalty, or the greater Part of them there preſent, out of themſelves, in like Manner and Form as before that Time they had been uſed to be choſen there; yet ſo that the Jurats at one Time ſhould not be, in the whole, above the Number of Twelve, beſides the Mayor.

And the Defendant by his Plea further ſaith, That upon the 25th of March laſt, and long before, he was, and ſtill is, one of the Jurats of the ſaid Town and Port: And ſo being a Jurat as aforeſaid, and John Coates, Eſq. then being Mayor, and then one of the Jurats, the then Jurats and Commonalty aſſembled themſelves together in the Pariſh-Church of St. Nicholas, within the ſaid Town and Port, for the Year then next enſuing, according to the Tenor of the ſaid Letters Patent; and being ſo aſſembled, then and there, at that Aſſembly, the major Part of the ſaid Jurats and Commonalty then preſent there (of which ſaid Jurats the ſaid John Coates, the then Mayor, then was one, and preſent there) choſe him the ſaid Richard Elles, then being one of the Jurats as aforeſaid, to be Mayor of the ſaid Town and Port for the Year then next enſuing, according to the Form and Effect of the ſaid Letters Patent: And the ſaid Richard Elles being ſo choſen into the Place and Office of Mayor of the ſaid Town and Port as aforeſaid, after his ſaid Election, to wit, then and there, at the ſame Aſſembly in the Pariſh-Church aforeſaid, he the ſaid Richard Elles was duly ſworn into his ſaid Office by Robert Loftie, then Town-Clerk of the ſaid Town and Port, before the ſaid John Coates, being the laſt Predeceſſor of the ſaid Richard Elles in the Office of Mayor of the ſaid Town and Port; and the ſaid Richard Elles, then and there, at the ſaid Aſſembly, took his corporal Oath, for the due Execution of his ſaid Office of Mayor of the ſaid Town and Port, before the ſaid John Coates, his laſt Predeceſſor as aforeſaid, the ſaid Oath being adminiſtered by the ſaid Town-Clerk as aforeſaid, (the ſame being the like Manner and Form, in which the Mayor of the Town and Port of Sandwich, in the ſaid Letters Patent named, at the Time of making the ſaid Letters Patent, was, and ever ſince hath been, and been uſed and accuſtomed to be ſworn into the ſaid Office of Mayor of the ſaid Town and Port of Sandwich) according to the Form and Effect of the Letters Patent aforeſaid: And by virtue thereof, the ſaid Richard Elles, after his Election and Swearing aforeſaid, upon the ſaid 25th of March laſt, and from thence continually afterwards, until the Time of exhibiting the Information, at the Town and Port aforeſaid, was, and ſtill is Mayor, and by that Warrant claims to be Mayor of the ſaid Town and Port; and traverſes the Uſurpation.

The King replies, That the ſaid Richard Elles was not one of the Jurats of the ſaid Town and Port, in Manner and Form as he hath alledged by Pleading; and prayeth that this may be inquired of by the Country; and the ſaid Elles prayeth the like.

So that, Gentlemen, the firſt Iſſue you are to try is, Whether the ſaid Richard Elles was one of the Jurats of the Town and Port of New-Romney, in Manner and Form as he hath alledged by his Plea?

And the ſecond Iſſue is, Whether the major Part of the Jurats and Commonalty of the ſaid Town and Port did chuſe the ſaid Richard Elles to be Mayor of the ſaid Town and Port for the Year then next enſuing, according to the Form and Effect of the ſaid Letters Patent, in Manner and Form as the ſaid Elles hath alſo alledged by Pleading?

Gentlemen, the third Iſſue is, Whether the ſaid Richard Elles was duly ſworn into the Office of Mayor of the ſaid Town and Port, in Manner and Form as he hath alledged by Pleading?

And the fourth Iſſue is, Whether the ſaid Richard Elles did take his corporal Oath, for the due Execution of the ſaid Office of Mayor of the ſaid Town and Port, according to the Form and Effect of the Letters Patent aforeſaid, in the Manner and Form as he hath alledged by Pleading?

And, Gentlemen, the fifth Iſſue you are to try is, Whether the Manner and Form, in which the ſaid Richard Elles hath alledged himſelf in his Plea to have been ſworn into the Office of Mayor of the ſaid Town and Port of New-Romney, be the like Manner and Form, in which the Mayor of the Town and Port of Sandwich, in the ſaid Letters Patent named, at the Time of making the ſaid Letters Patent, was, and ever ſince hath been, and been uſed and accuſtomed to be ſworn into the ſaid Office of Mayor of Sandwich aforeſaid, in Manner and Form as he hath alledged by Pleading?

If therefore, Gentlemen, Evidence is laid before you, to prove that the Defendant Elles, being one of the Jurats of this Town and Port, was duly elected and ſworn into the Office of Mayor, then, Gentlemen, you will find a Verdict for him.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. May it pleaſe your Lordſhip, and you Gentlemen of the Jury; I am Counſel for the Defendant Elles; and you will pleaſe to obſerve, that, by very great Art, theſe Iſſues are all turned upon the Defendant to prove. By his Plea he ſets forth the Conſtitutions of the Town and Port of New-Romney; that he was duly choſen into the Office of Mayor, and had taken the Oaths. But the other Side turn every Thing upon him by Proof: They ſay, he was not a Jurat; that the major Part of the Jurats and Commonalty did not chuſe him; and then, merely to multiply Iſſues, and for Delay, ſay, You are not a Jurat; the major Part of the Jurats and Commonalty did not chuſe you; you are not duly ſworn; that he did not take his Oath of Office according to the Form of the Letters Patent; that the Manner and Form, in which the ſaid Richard Elles is alledged by his Plea to be ſworn into his Office, is not according to the Cuſtoms of Sandwich.

My Lord, and Gentlemen of the Jury, there has lately been a very great Conteſt in the Court of King's-Bench about the Officers of this Town; and there were two Candidates for this Office of Mayor, one Wightwick, and the Defendant Elles; and upon the Poll it appeared, that Elles had eleven Votes, and Wightwick ten; ſo that Elles was choſen Mayor by the Majority of one Voice: But the preſiding Officer ſaid, he had a Man who was appointed to take the Poll; by which Poll it appeared, that Gibbon and Darby, who had never been allowed to be Freemen, had polled; and then, upon that Poll, there were twelve Votes for Wightwick, and Eleven for Elles: upon which the Oath of Office was adminiſtered, and both Candidates were ſworn.

Gentlemen, on Application to the Court of King's-Bench, Elles by Affidavits made it appear, that Gibbon and Darby had no Right to Freedoms; on which the Court declared, the Point would turn on Gibbon's Right; and then the Queſtion was, Whether Perſons marrying Freemen's Daughters had a Right to Freedoms? and Darby's Right was to abide the Fate of that. But they have declined this, and turn all the Circumſtances of proving upon us. We ſhall therefore, Gentlemen, fully prove every one of theſe Iſſues to you by Witneſſes; in the Courſe of which Evidence, you will hear, Gentlemen, of very great Sums of Money offered to engage thoſe Freemen, who were in Elles's Intereſt, to vote for Wightwick. We ſhall prove to you, Gentlemen, that one hundred Pounds was offered for one Vote, and even ſo large a Sum as one thouſand Pounds for another, in order to procure Wightwick to be Mayor.

Under theſe Circumſtances, Gentlemen, two Mandamus's iſſued from the Court of King's-Bench to admit theſe two Men; for they all agreed there was no Right by Marrying; and then theſe two Perſons were ſworn in by virtue of theſe Mandamus's.

If therefore, Gentlemen, we ſhew there was a Majority for Elles upon the Poll as taken by the Town-Clerk; notwithſtanding the Pocket-Poll they have ſet up; we hope you'll take it upon the Foot of the Town-Clerk's Poll, and find a Verdict for the Defendant accordingly.

Mr. Serj. Baynes. May it pleaſe your Lordſhip, and you Gentlemen of the Jury; I am Counſel in this Caſe with the Defendant: And this is an Information granted by the Court of King's-Bench, in order to procure Peace in Romney, where there were two acting Mayors at one and the ſame Time; and the Court granted this Information, to try which of them was duly elected. Upon this five Iſſues are joined: And the firſt Iſſue you are to try, Gentlemen, is, Whether Elles was a Jurat? And we ſhall ſhew he was firſt elected a Freeman, and then, in due Manner and Form, a Jurat. The ſecond Iſſue is, Whether the Mayor, Jurats, and Commonalty of the Town and Port of New-Romney, did chuſe the Defendant Elles Mayor? Gentlemen, in this Town, we ſee, there are twenty-one Voters: Wightwick ſtood in oppoſition to Elles; the Town-Clerk took the Poll; and on caſting it up, there appeared to be for Elles eleven Votes, and for Wightwick ten; ſo that Elles was duly choſen Mayor. But another Perſon pretended to take the Poll, and ſet down ſuch Perſons as he thought fit, and amongſt them Gibbon and Darby, as Voters for Wightwick; and that caſt the Majority of Voters on Wightwick: But Darby and Gibbon's Votes ought not to have been taken, their Right being by marrying Freemen's Daughters; whereas there is no ſuch Cuſtom, nor ever was, nor ever attempted till the Year 1728, when it was ſet up by this Gibbon: And thereupon the Corporation ordered it to be entered in their Books, that he was not to be admitted, for that there was no ſuch Cuſtom; which, we ſhall call our Witneſſes, and fully prove to you.

The third Iſſue, Gentlemen, is, Whether the Defendant Elles was duly ſworn into the Office of Mayor, in Manner and Form as by his Plea he hath alledged? And we ſhall ſhew you, that he was ſworn by the Town-Clerk, before the Mayor.

The fourth Iſſue is, Whether Elles took his corporal Oath, for the due Execution of the Office of Mayor, according to the Form and Effect of the Letters Patent?

The fifth Iſſue is, Whether the Defendant Elles was ſworn according to the Manner and Form as the Mayor of Sandwich is ſworn?

Gentlemen, we ſhall call our Witneſſes, and make it plainly appear, that theſe Iſſues are for the Defendant Elles; and then we hope you will find a Verdict for him accordingly.

Mr. Marſh. My Lord, in order to be a Jurat, he muſt be a Freeman.

C. J. Eyre. Was he a Jurat?——Mr. Knowler. He acted as a Jurat.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. His acting as a Jurat is Evidence, prima facie, that he was a Freeman.

C. J. Eyre. Will you admit he was a Jurat?

Mr. Marſh. They may go on; I ſhall make no Bargains.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. Swear Mr. Loſtie. (Which was done.)

Mr. Marſh. What do they call him to? We object to him.

Mr. Serj, Darnell. To prove an Aſſembly-Book. Mr. Loſtie, is that the Entry of Elles's Election to be a Jurat?---Mr. Loſtie. Yes.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. Read it,

Aſſociate reads ——

"John Tooke, Mayor. At a Common Aſſembly held the 23d December, "1730, Mayor, Jurats, and Commonalty duly elected Edward Batchelor "and Richard Elles to be Jurats."

Mr. Lacy. The Election-Day is the 25th of March.

C. J. Eyre. This proves an Election the 23d of December, 1730. Was he duly ſworn?

Mr. Serj. Baynes. Yes, my Lord. Read his Swearing.

Aſſociate reads —

"4 January, 1730, Batcheler and Elles took the Oath of Jurats."

C. J. Eyre. Go on, Iſſue by Iſſue: Firſt, Whether Elles was a Jurat? They inſiſt, by Cuſtom, the Jurats muſt be ſworn every Year: Prove it.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. My Lord, they have given us Notice, that every Qualification of the Jurats and Freemen would be objected to.

Mr. Knowler. A Jurat (ſo MS. Q. Mayor) is ſaid to be an annual Officer. We ſhall prove, my Lord, that Elles was choſen for the Year 1734.

C. J. Eyre. Mr. Wellard, you muſt not talk more than neceſſary.

Mr. Marſh. It is neceſſary to be a Freeman, in order to be a Jurat.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. A Man is a Jurat; Is it neceſſary he be a Freeman, in order to be qualified for a Jurat?

Mr. Marſh. If the Entry be ſufficient, it is needleſs to go on.

C. J. Eyre. The Qualifications of a Jurat are, A Jurat he muſt be, to be a Mayor; for a Jurat, he muſt be a Freeman.

Mr. Marſh. Theſe Points are often diſputed.

C. J. Eyre. Diſpute what you will; but he was owned a Freeman by the Corporation when he was made a Jurat.

Mr. Marſh. He was ſworn before the Mayor and Jurats only.

C. J. Eyre. The Entries are all ſo. Nothing has been read to ſhew they might not ſwear him. If he was ſworn by the Mayor and Jurats, that muſt be proved: We had nothing of that in the laſt Cauſe.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. The Queſtion is, Whether the major Part of the Mayor, Jurats, and Commonalty, did duly chuſe him Mayor, according to the Form and Effect of the Letters Patent? And, in order to prove that he was duly choſen, we are to ſhew what were the Number of Jurats and Freemen that voted for Elles; for which Purpoſe I ſhall call Mr. Loſtie.

Mr. Marſh. We object to Loſtie: He was one of the Perſons who voted for Elles, and therefore has given his Opinion already.

C. J. Eyre. I never knew it denied a Corporation-Man that voted; he is a legal Witneſs.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. Mr. Loſtie, was you preſent at the laſt Election of a Mayor for Romney?---Mr. Loſtie. Yes.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. Where was it made?---Mr. Loſtie. At St. Nicholas.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. What Number of Freemen were preſent and voted?

Mr. Loſtie. Twenty-one.

Mr. Lacy. Are you Town-Clerk of Romney? Do you keep a Book?

Mr. Loſtie. Yes.

Mr. Lacy. Where is that Book?--Mr. Loſtie. Mr. Wellard took it away.

Mr. Wellard. Here it is.

Mr. Loſtie. Mr. Wellard and Mr. Wightwick took away the Books, and Mr. Wightwick has entered the Proceedings of that Day himſelf.

C. J. Eyre. Are there any Entries made by you of the Proceedings of that Day?---Mr. Loſtie. I have a Copy of the Poll, my Lord.

C. J. Eyre. Why were they not entered?

Mr. Loſtie. Becauſe Coates inſiſted I ſhould take the Poll according to the Minutes they had taken.

C. J. Eyre. And you did not think it right?

Mr. Loſtie. No, my Lord; becauſe they had taken Gibbon and Darby's Votes, who, I thought, had no Right to vote.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. You take an Oath; what is that Oath?

Mr. Loſtie. To enter faithfully and right all the Proceedings of the Corporation.

C. J. Eyre. You did not make an Entry of the Poll, becauſe every body did not agree to it; but you took a Copy of the Poll. Read the Oath of the Town-Clerk.

Aſſociate reads —

Mr. Knowler. Read the Poll again.

Mr. Loſtie. Wightwick and Elles—The Votes for Mayor—

For Wightwick:

John Coates, Eſq;
Wightwick,
Batchelor,
Rutton,
Baſſett,
Joſhua Coates,
Odiham Coates,
Wilſon,
Haffenden,
Dree.

Theſe were all that voted for Wightwick, but Gibbon and Darby, who, I apprehended, had no Right to vote; and therefore I did not inſert their Names.

For Elles:

Himſelf,
Robert Maſcall,
Norman,
Tookey,
Smith,
John Maſcall,
Weeden,
Langdon,
Loſtie,
Benjamin Cobb,
William Gray.

Mr. Marſh. Darby and Gibbon were there, but you did not take their Votes ---Was Nobody elſe there? Did not Mr. Papillon and Wellard ſend, that they might be admitted to come to exerciſe their Franchiſe of voting?

Mr. Lacy. I deſire to ſee the Poll-Paper, the very Paper you took in the Church, Mr. Loſtie.

(Mr. Loſtie produces the Poll-Paper, as before.)

Mr. Lacy. Did not you take another Liſt or Poll?

(Mr. Loſtie produces another.)

Mr. Lacy. He took one Liſt, and then, by Elles's Direction, took another. Read it.

Mr. Loſtie reads another Poll —

For Wightwick:

John Coates, Eſq;
Wightwick,
Batchelor,
Rutton,
Baſſett,
Joſhua Coates,
Odiham Coates,
Wilſon,
Haffenden,
Dree,
John Darby,
John Gibbon,
Papillon,
Wellard.

For Elles:

Elles,
Robert Maſcall,
Norman,
Tookey,
Smith,
John Maſcall,
Weeden,
Langdon,
Loſtie,
Benjamin Cobb,
William Gray.

Mr.

Mr. Marſh. Where does this Aſſembly meet?
Mr. Loſtie. In the South Chancel of St. Nicholas.
Mr. Serj. Darnell. Is the Door uſually kept open, or ſhut?
Mr. Loſtie. Shut, to prevent People coming in, who have no Buſineſs.
Mr. Smith. Which of the two Polls did you minute down firſt?
Mr. Loſtie. The laſt-delivered.

Mr. Marſh. My Lord, this is the principal Iſſue; and we object to the Evidence of this Perſon who voted for this Mayor. He has given his Opinion already; and therefore I ſubmit it to your Lordſhip, whether he is a legal Evidence? Or otherwiſe we inſiſt, the Perſons taken down as Pollers, that they are more in Number than he has given an Account of. According to his Liſt, they are but ten; but there muſt be four Votes more added, two of which are Perſons not numbered by him.

My Lord, Darby's and Gibbon's Rights to vote depend upon their being free of this Corporation; and if we ſhew they are free, and are admitted, it will be ſufficient Reaſon for putting them on the Poll for Wightwick; and then Elles can't be Mayor. Beſides, there is Mr. Papillon's Right, who was not in the Church, becauſe the Door was ſhut within ſide; and Mr. Wellard was alſo a Freeman, and he could not come in, the Door being ſhut. We ſhall ſhew you, Gentlemen, their Qualification, and that they could not get into the Church; that they went to the Door, but there was no Admiſſion to be had; that they ſent in a Letter to the Mayor, and demanded Admittance; and if they had been let in, they had voted for Mr. Wightwick; and they having a Right, and aſſerting that Right, theſe Votes ought to be allowed to them.

In the firſt of the late King, there was the Caſe of the Mayor of Hythe tried before my Lord Macclesfield at this Place. Two Perſons offered their Votes at the Poll, and being refuſed by the preſiding Officer, the Court was of Opinion, they were good Votes. And therefore we humbly hope your Lordſhip will allow theſe to be good Votes, and, in conſequence, that the Jury will find for us.

Mr. Lacy. The Iſſue now before your Lordſhip is, Whether the major Part of the Jurats and Commonalty did, or did not, chuſe the Defendant Elles Mayor? By Loſtie's Poll it appears, there were eleven Votes for Elles, and ten for Wightwick: So that, if either of the four Votes diſallowed by him ſhall appear to be good, then, Gentlemen of the Jury, they do not prove their Iſſue. As to Mr. Papillon, he is a Freeman, admitted and ſworn; and though his Vote was refuſed, he tendered it, and ſent in a Note in Writing, ſignifying to the Mayor, that he voted for Wightwick, and is therefore a good Vote. And as to Darby and Gibbon, we ſubmit, whether, being ſworn, they are not in the Exerciſe of their Office, and ought to be allowed good Votes. We ſhall call our Witneſſes, and ſhew the Entries of Gibbon and Darby.—Mr. Loſtie, look upon the Book; Is it your Hand-writing?

Mr. Loſtie. Yes. Reads ——

" J. Coates, Mayor. Be it remembered, at a Court of Record held " the 25th of March, 1734, the Corporation having been ſerved with " a Writ of Mandamus, Gibbon and Darby, demanding their Freedoms, " were admitted and ſworn."

Mr. Marſh. Where is Mr. Popillon and Mr. Wellard's Entry?
C. J. Eyre. Gibbon and Darby were admitted before the Election?
Mr. Loſtie. Yes, my Lord.
C. J. Eyre. How came you, then, to refuſe their Votes?
Mr. Loſtie. Becauſe I thought there was an Order made, that they ſhould not be admitted to vote.
C. J. Eyre. Were they elected by the Mayor and Jurats?
Mr. Loſtie. Never, my Lord.
Mr. Wellard. Read my Election, and then read my Swearing.

Aſſociate reads ——

" Nicholas Durrant, Mayor. At a Common Aſſembly of the Town " and Port of New-Romney, in the Common Place, 20 October, 1720, " Nicholas Durrant, Mayor, &c. elected Charles Wellard, an Inha- " bitant and Town-Clerk, to be a Freeman of this Town and Port; " and he was ordered to be ſworn, more ſolito, according to Brotherhood " and Ghueſtling.

" 19 December, 1720, he was ſworn and admitted."

Mr. Serj. Darnell. Is that the Aſſembly-Book?
Mr. Wellard. Yes.
Mr. Serj. Darnell. My Lord, all the Entries of ſwearing theſe People are in the Aſſembly-Book, and therefore it is but a delegated Power.
Mr. Lacy. Read the Mandate for chuſing two Barons to ſend to Parliament.

Aſſociate reads ——

" Whereas a Mandate for chuſing two Barons was read, the Mayor " and Jurats ——"

Mr. Marſh. Read Mr. Papillon's Election and Swearing.

Aſſociate reads ——

" New-Romney, ſſ. Mayor. At a Common Aſſembly " of the ſaid Town and Port of New-Romney, held in the Common " Place there, the 23d of March, 1731, elected David Papillon a Free- " man of this Town and Port; and he was ſworn and admitted, more " ſolito, according to Brotherhood and Ghueſtling."

Mr. Dodd called and ſworn.

Mr. Marſh. Were you preſent at the laſt Election for Mayor?
Mr. Dodd. Yes.
Mr. Marſh. Was Mr. Papillon there?
Mr. Dodd. Yes; but he was not in the Church.
Mr. Marſh. And how came he not to get in?
Mr. Dodd. Becauſe the Door was locked.
Mr. Marſh. Did he try to get in? ——

" Here the Chief Juſtice was told by a By-ſtander, that a Perſon was " taking Notes; on which he aſked,

" C. J. Eyre. Who is it?—Who employed you? Give me the Paper.

" On which the Notes were delivered to him; and, after turning them " over, he ſaid, with ſome Warmth,

" C. J. Eyre. I obſerve my Name in it: Who was you employed by " to take thoſe Notes?

" Short-hand Writer. My Lord, I was employed by a Gentleman " concerned in the Event of theſe Iſſues.

" C. J. Eyre. Who?

" Short-hand Writer. Mr. Papillon deſired me to attend and take Notes.

" Then the Chief Juſtice called croſs the Court to Mr. Papillon:

" C. J. Eyre. Mr. Papillon, here is a Man taking Notes, that ſays " you employed him.

" Mr. Papillon. Yes, my Lord, I deſired him to attend, and take " Notes.

" C. J. Eyre. Who is he? I obſerve my Name in ſeveral Places. I " ſuppoſe, I ſhall next Week have my Name in Print.

" Mr. Papillon. My Lord, it is no common Short-hand Writer; it " is Mr. I never knew it was a Crime to take Notes in a " Court where your Lordſhip ſat.

" C. J. Eyre. Well, I hope you are the better for them.

" Mr. Papillon. I think I am, my Lord; and on ſome Occaſions " they have been of great Uſe to me.

" C. J. Eyre. I am glad to hear that.

" Mr. Papillon. Your Lordſhip preſides here; ſo do with the Papers " what your Lordſhip pleaſes.

" C. J. Eyre. No, no. Now I know it is done by Authority, if I " ſee any thing in Print, I ſhall know where to apply.

" Mr. Papillon. It is no Reaſon to ſuppoſe it ſhould come from me, " if your Lordſhip does; there are great Numbers now taking Notes, " as well as Mr. and it may ſure come as well from any " of them. My Lord, I never was a Libeller, nor ever in my Life " encouraged a Publication of this Sort. We are all liable to Accu- " ſations of this Sort: I have ſeen many Falſhoods printed, but never " thought them worth my Notice. My Lord, I am not anſwerable: " Do with the Notes what you will.

" C. J. Eyre. No; ſince it is your Writer, let the Man have his " Paper, and go on.

(The Notes being out of the Short-hand Writer's Poſſeſſion, he could not take down what was ſaid.)

" C. J. Eyre. There, take down that, and print it too, if you will; I " don't care; though I don't ſay it is Law; nor will juſtify it as ſuch.

" Mr. Papillon. Here, give me the Notes: Let my Lord have them, " ſince they give Offence.

" C. J. Eyre. No, I will not have them. Let the Man have his " Paper again, ſince it is done by Authority.

" Mr. Papillon. My Lord, pray do what you pleaſe with them; cut " them to Pieces, or put them in the Fire.

" C. J. Eyre. No, no. Let him go on, ſince he is your Writer.

" Mr. Papillon. Then pray let him go on, without Reflections."

Mr. Lacy. Pray, Mr. Dodd, where did they aſſemble?
Mr. Dodd. They went from Mr. Coates's.
Mr. Serj. Darnell. Did Mr. Papillon and Mr. Wellard go with the People to the Church?-----Mr. Dodd. No.
Mr. Marſh. Was Mr. Papillon there?
Mr. Dodd. Yes.
Mr. Serj. Darnell. Why could not he go into the Church, as well as Coates and the reſt?
Mr. Dodd. I do not know.
Mr. Serj. Darnell. Did you ſee the Mayor go from the Houſe?
Mr. Dodd. Yes.
Mr. Serj. Darnell. What Time did they go?
Mr. Dodd. At Two o'Clock.
Mr. Marſh. Is that the uſual Time?-----Mr. Dodd. Yes.
Mr. Marſh. How long was the Door locked before Mr. Papillon and Mr. Wellard came?
C. J. Eyre. Did the Mayor and Jurats ſee them coming?
Mr. Dodd. I do not know.
Mr. Serj. Darnell. Is it not uſual to lock the Door on ſuch Occaſions?
Mr. Dodd. Yes; and not to open it till the Election is over.
Mr. Serj. Darnell. Did Coates or Wightwick give Orders to ſhu out Mr. Papillon or Wellard?
Mr. Dodd. I do not know.
Mr. Serj. Darnell. Was any body ſhut out beſides?
Mr. Dodd. Several.
Mr. Knowler. How long was Mr. Wellard in Town before the Election?
Mr. Dodd. About five Weeks.
Mr. Knowler. Whoſe Houſe was he at during that Time?
Mr. Dodd. At Gibbon's.
Mr. Knowler. How long was it after the Door was ſhut, that Mr. Papillon and Mr. Wellard came to apply to get in?
Mr. Dodd. A Minute or two.
Mr. Knowler. Why did they not apply to the Door-keeper to be let in?
Mr. Dodd. I do not know.
Mr. Marſh. Did you ever know a Freeman refuſed, that came and applied to be let in, a little after the Door was ſhut?----Mr. Dodd. Yes.
Mr. Serj. Baynes. Was any particular Meſſage ſent to the Mayor by Mr. Papillon or Mr. Wellard?
Mr. Dodd. Not that I know of.

Mr. Wellard ſworn.

Mr. Marſh. Mr. Wellard, you was with Mr. Papillon: Pray, give an Account of his going to Church, and his Demand to come in.

Mr. Wellard. I went with him to the Church, where the Election was, in order to vote for Wightwick. As we were going, we ſaw the Witneſs laſt examined, and deſired him to take Notice we went for that Purpoſe. We went up to the Doors, and found them faſtened within.

Mr. Marſh. Did you obſerve any body about the Doors?

Mr. Wellard. Yes, the Mayor's Servant and others. I knocked and puſhed at the Door, but Nobody came, or gave any Anſwer.

Mr. Marſh. And by what Method did you acquaint the Aſſembly that you were there, and deſired Admiſſion, in order to give your Votes?

Mr.

Mr. Wellard. We ſent in Letters to the Mayor, to acquaint him we were at the Door. We gave the Letters to Mr. Wightwick, and deſired him to deliver them to the Mayor. We expected to be denied, and therefore gave Letters to Wightwick, to deliver to the Mayor.

C. J. Eyre. Mr. Wellard,———If you will not hear, I cannot help it. They went to the Church; you came after, and tried to get in. You ſent in a Letter to the Mayor by Wightwick; How could that be? becauſe he was gone into the Church before.

Mr. Wel. My Lord, I gave Mr. Wightwick my Letter to carry in with him, before he went.

C. J. Eyre. It was to acquaint him, you were ready to come in, and give your Vote?—Can you tell whether Wightwick delivered that Letter, or not?

Mr. Wel. Yes, my Lord; he told me, after the Election was over, he had delivered it.

Mr. Marſh. Did you not, on the Day of the Election, dine with Coates? Did not the Mayor, and all the Jurats and Freemen, dine there, and go from thence? And if you had had a Mind, could you not have got in with them?

Mr. Wel. No; the Mayor told us, if we had a Mind, we ſhould not come in.

Mr. Knowler. Was you not in the Church before the Buſineſs was over? Did not you come into the Chancel?

Mr. Wel. Not till after the Mayor was ſworn, and had Poſſeſſion of the Staff.

Mr. Knowler. Did you then tender yourſelf to vote?

Mr. Wel. No; it was all over.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. You dined with Coates; Did you prognoſticate there would be a Shutting of the Door, and a Refuſal?

Mr. Wel. Yes; becauſe the Mayor had told us, we ſhould not come in.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. Did you write Word Mr. Papillon was with you?

Mr. Wel. I ſent in the following Letter:

(Produces and reads it.)

" Mr. Mayor,

" I Am at the Church, and demand to be admitted, to give my Vote, " as others, for Mayor. If I am denied, pray take Notice, that I give " my Vote for Mr. Humphry Wightwick to be Mayor for the Year enſu- " ing, I being at this Time a Reſiant in this Town. C. Wellard."

Mr. Serj. Darnell. Whoſe Advice did you write that Letter by?

Mr. Wel. I demur to that Queſtion. In Point of Law I ought not to anſwer it.

C. J. Eyre. I think, Mr. Wellard, you ſhould anſwer the Queſtion, becauſe it is an indifferent Queſtion.

Mr. Wellard. Mr. Papillon and I concerted it, in order to preſerve our Rights.

C. J. Eyre. You thought they would not let you in: therefore you wrote this Letter, and ſent it?—Mr. Wel. Yes, my Lord.

Mr. Lacy. Did Mr. Papillon write this Letter?

Mr. Wel. I know his Hand; I ſaw him write it, and deliver it to Wightwick.

Aſſociate reads ——

" Mr. Mayor,

" I Am at the Church, and demand to be admitted, to give my Vote, " as others, for Mayor. If I am denied, pray take Notice, that I give " my Vote for Mr. Humphry Wightwick to be Mayor for the Year enſuing, " I being at this Time a Reſiant in this Town. D. Papillon."

Mr. Batchelor called and ſworn.

Mr. Lacy. Look upon the two Papers ſigned Papillon and Wellard; Were they delivered by Mr. Wightwick to the Mayor?

Mr. Batch. I ſaw Wightwick deliver them to Coates, the Mayor.

Mr. Lacy. Was it before or after the Choice?

Mr. Batch. It was before; and the Mayor ſaid, he would admit no Foreigners to come in. The Mayor ſhewed the Letters about, and gave them to me to read, and ſaid, he would admit no Foreigners in.

Mr. Lacy. Had the Freemen given their Votes?

Mr. Batch. No; they were gone to the Chancel to vote, but had not voted.

Mr. Lacy. Did you ſee the Letters delivered to Wightwick?

Mr. Batch. No.

Mr. Lacy. How do you know them to be the ſame?

Mr. Batch. Becauſe they were open. I ſaw Coates ſign at the Bottom, " This was brought me at the Time of the Election of Mayor, and " We refuſed it."

Mr. Knowler. Did Coates acquaint the Aſſembly he had received ſuch Letters, and reſolved not to admit them?—Mr. Batch. Yes.

Mr. Knowler. Did any other Perſon demand to be admitted?

Mr. Batch. No.

Mr. Knowler. Did you ever know any Foreigners vote for Mayor?

Mr. Batch. No.

Mr. Marſh. Was there Time for them to have given their Votes, if they had been let in as ſoon as the Letters were delivered?

Mr. Batch. Yes; they were juſt gone out, and hardly got into the Chancel, before Wightwick delivered them.

C. J. Eyre. Did you ever know any one let in after the Door was ſhut?

Mr. Batch. No, my Lord.

Mr. Lacy. After they are let into the Church, and the Door ſhut, cannot a Freeman be let in?

Mr. Batch. I never knew or remember it in my Life, after the Church-Door ſhut.

C. J. Eyre. Did you ever know or hear, that Coates was to make the Election void, as their Friend, by refuſing to let them in? Coates voted for Wightwick, and knew that on Refuſal it would be a void Election. If People that had a Right were excluded, I think it a void Election.

Mr. Lacy. My Lord, they all joined to exclude Foreigners.

Mr. Papillon called; and, whilſt ſwearing,

Mr. Serj. Darnell. So they were to ſerve, or ſwear for one another.

Mr. Wellard. I don't know what you mean by that Inſinuation: We regard an Oath as much as you do.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. My Lord, Mr. Wellard ſays, I inſinuated Mr. Papillon would aſſert a Falſehood. I ſcorn it; I ſaid no ſuch Thing.

Mr. Marſh. Pray, Sir, give an Account what paſſed on or before the Day of Election.

Mr. Papillon. There was an Inſinuation, that I deſigned to vote at the Election for Mayor; on which they applied to the Mayor, to know if he would admit me. He told them, No; and it was refuſed at the Inſtance of the Gentlemen of the other Side. I do not know that I thought of voting before; but then I aſked the Mayor about it, and he refuſed me, becauſe I was their Member, and therefore ought not to meddle. I did not chuſe to make any Diſturbance, and therefore wrote the Letter, and then followed myſelf, as ſoon as I could. I delivered the Letter to Wightwick, to give it to the Mayor. I deſired him to take Notice, I inſiſted on my Vote. I waited all the Time of the Election at the Church-Door, but could not get in. Coates has put me to much Trouble, and was always my Enemy.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. Did not Coates vote for Wightwick?

Mr. Papil. The Poll will tell you.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. He voted on your Side. Read the Letter.

Aſſociate reads ——

" Mr. Mayor, I am at the Church-Door, &c." verbatim as Mr. Wellard's Letter.

Mr. Serj. Baynes. Did you ſee the Men go to vote?

Mr. Papil. I cannot be ſure; but I thought the propereſt Time to be refuſed was when they were aſſembled. I did not deſign to make a Diſturbance, and therefore delivered a Letter to Mr. Wightwick; and afterwards I knocked at the Door, which was ſhut. The Proclamation was ready to be read; for there was great Reaſon to think there would be a Diſturbance created.

Mr. Serj. Baynes. Might you not, upon your Oath, have gone in with the other Gentlemen, if you had thought fit?

Mr. Papil. I believe not, upon my Oath; becauſe Coates told me, he would not admit me.

Mr. Knowler. Did you not ſtay in Coates's Parlour purpoſely, when he went out, that the Church-Door might be ſhut?

Mr. Papil. I cannot tell.

Mr. Knowler. Pray, Sir, recollect yourſelf.

Mr. Papil. Upon my Oath, I cannot recollect whether I was then in the Houſe; I think not.

Mr. Knowler. Was there any Diſturbance at the Election?

Mr. Papil. No; they knew the Proclamation was ready.

Mr. Knowler. Were there not other Gentlemen reſiant, as well as you, refuſed?—Mr. Papil. I believe not.

Mr. Knowler. How long had you been a Reſiant? Did not you come the Day before the Election?

Mr. Papil. I cannot recollect as to the Day.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. You ſay in your Letter, you were reſiant; Pray, Sir, how long had you been ſo?

Mr. Papil. I cannot recollect. If you allow my Letter is a good Demand, I will explain it.

Mr. Smith. Would there not have been a Diſturbance, if you had ruſhed into the Church?

Mr. Papil. Upon my Oath, I believe there would.

Mr. Lacy. My Lord, we ſubmit this Iſſue here.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. May it pleaſe your Lordſhip, and you Gentlemen of the Jury; This, my Lord, is the principal Iſſue; and the Gentlemen of the other Side, in order to prove that a Majority did not chuſe the Defendant Elles Mayor, ſay, that this Poll was not a Majority of the whole, and have endeavoured to ſhew, that other People had a Right to vote, beſides the Perſons who appear upon the Poll; that Gibbon and Darby were admitted Freemen, and their Votes not taken; therefore, inſtead of the one Majority for Elles, if they had been admitted, there would have been a Majority of one for Wightwick. Now, my Lord, it appears from the Evidence, that Gibbon and Darby were admitted the very Morning of the Election, not by the Mayor, Jurats, and Commonalty, but by other Perſons, at another Place, and upon producing Mandamus's. We ſhall ſhew you, Gentlemen, that when the Mandamus's were brought, though this Matter had been a great while kept private, it was unanimouſly reſolved, at a Common Aſſembly, That no Freeman's Daughter ſhould by Marrying intitle her Huſband; and that they would conteſt any ſuch Claim at Law. We ſhall ſhew you, Gentlemen, that, the Day before the Election came on, one hundred Guineas were offered to one Man, a thouſand Guineas to another: But, when neither would do, being both abſolutely refuſed, then the Mandamus was produced, and two Men ſworn in the very Morning before the Election. I appeal to the common Senſe of every Man; is there any Pretence of Right for this? The Swearing and Admitting can give no Right; the Man muſt be legally choſen by the Body: But this was not at all the Caſe; inſtead of this, an Order was made by the Aſſembly, and entered in their Books, That the Mandamus ſhould be controverted.

After this, they offered Mr. Papillon and Mr. Wellard as Voters; and their Proceeding in this is as extraordinary as the Mandamus. It is true, they were Freemen; but no Man not reſiant, can be admitted to vote; and therefore they were refuſed by the Body.

But, Gentlemen, they tell you, We have done all we could; we ſent in Letters to the Mayor, and came to the Church-Door in order to get in, and were refuſed; and therefore their Votes ought not to be objected to, as they ſtand on the Poll.

Pleaſe, Gentlemen, to obſerve how this Affair has been cooked up between Mr. Papillon and Mr. Wellard. Wellard tells you, the Letters were written before Dinner on the Day of the Election; they are Word for Word the ſame, Letter for Letter. The Subſcription is exactly in the ſame Words. " We refuſed it, John Coates, Mayor." Coates had propoſed it to the Body, and they refuſed it. But Coates is in Mr. Papillon's Intereſt, and votes for him: Can he ſay this, We refuſed this? No; 'tis only to give a Handle of Complaint, that Men have been unjuſtly refuſed, and that therefore the Election is void: Though I never yet heard that a Man was to be admitted to vote by Letter, or that a Vote was to be put into a Pocket.

As to the Case of Hythe, the Men were actually there at the Poll, and offered their Votes for the Candidates, and were actually refused by the presiding Officer; and if he refuses, the Person has his Remedy; But I never before heard of a Vote put into a Pocket. If this is to be admitted, there can be no Certainty in any Election. A Corporate Body assembled are not to be broke in upon, after the Doors are locked, and the Keys taken in, (as in the House of Commons) to prevent Confusion; and therefore all Right of Voting is excluded, when this Body is once assembled. Besides, they dined with Goates, and might have gone in with him, and the rest of the Freemen, if they would: But, instead of that, for particular Purposes, they say, No; we will not claim it in Person, we will demand it by Letter.

Upon the whole Circumstances of this Case, we hope, Gentlemen, it has been clearly made out to you, that Elles had the Majority; that the eleven that voted for him were legal Votes, and that but ten legal Votes voted for Wightwick; and therefore, Gentlemen, that you will find a Verdict for us.

Mr. Serj. Baynes. My Lord, the Gentlemen of the other Side have endeavoured to make out, that four legal Voters were excluded; and that, Gibbon and Darby being sworn in, though they were rejected by the Assembly, they are to be looked on as if they had given their Votes.

The Right of Voting is, to be elected by the Mayor, and Jurats, and Commonalty: But they were never elected, or duly sworn in, by the Mayor and Jurats; it was done by Mandamus: And though it was agreed and resolved, at a Common Assembly, to contest it, yet the Mayor and two Jurats swore them in; and therefore it was right to refuse them their Votes; and then there is plainly a Majority for Elles.

And, Gentlemen, as to Mr. Papillon and Wellard's Votes, if there be any Fraud or Collusion in that Matter, their Votes are to be set aside: And they came for their Right, after the Church-Door was shut. It is agreed, that, on the Election of a Mayor, the Keys of the Church are laid down on the Table, and the Doors are shut: This, Gentlemen, is the Constitution of the Town. The Evidences tell you, they were all met at Coates's, and went after Dinner to Church, to vote for Wightwick; but the Mayor would not admit them. How could this create a Disturbance? But he did not admit them for Fear of a Disturbance, and they were kept out; and any Part of the Assembly are to be excluded, if they come too late, as in the House of Commons.

But the Gentlemen of the other Side say, their Offer to vote should be looked on in the same Manner as if they had voted. And this, Gentlemen, we admit, is Law in the House of Commons, but was never determined to be Law in any of the Courts in Westminster-Hall: It is the Practice there, but never at Common Law. So that, Gentlemen, there is a plain Majority of those assembled for the Defendant Elles; and therefore we hope you will find that he is duly elected.

Mr. Knowler. My Lord, there is an Entry upon the Assembly-Book, where Gibbon's and Darby's Right were taken into Consideration by the whole Body; and it was unanimously resolved, that they had no Right; and, to make it the more solemn, the Mayor, Jurats, and Commonalty subscribed it; and Coates, and the others, who admitted them, have also subscribed it.—Read the Entry of the 1st of March, 1728.

C. J. Eyre. It signifies nothing, an Act in 1728: They gave their Judgment, what signifies it?

Mr. Knowler. Read the Entry.

Associate reads—

"New-Romney, 1 March, 1733. Reciting that Gibbon and Darby had "threatened to bring their Mandamus, to be admitted to the Freedom of "this Town and Port; It was resolved to return as Counsel shall advise, "and the Suit to be defended at the Charge of this Corporation."

Mr. Marsh. I hope, my Lord, we are proper to reply.

C. J. Eyre. You are not regular to reply. You laid down a Rule the Beginning of this Circuit, and now you do not keep to it: But I will hear you, regular or irregular.

Mr. Marsh. My Lord, we humbly insist, the last Entry is no Evidence.

C. J. Eyre. You are the Master of Order; I submit to you.

Mr. Marsh. My Lord, I had not objected, but that four People who voted for Wightwick, that had no Disqualification, are left out of their Poll. By their own Evidence it appears, that this was upon a Right, in having married a Freeman's Daughter; and I submit it to your Lordship, that a Resolution to contest that Right surely can never take it away, especially if afterwards it appears to be a Right not contested—

C. J. Eyre. It should be a Custom proved as a Foundation for this Right.

Mr. Marsh. My Lord, a Point of Law depending on the Demurrer, we submit, whether your Lordship will not save it, in case we lay proper Evidence before your Lordship to support it: For, if the Charter puts them on the same Freedom with Sandwich, and the Custom there is, that the Daughter of a Freeman, by Marrying, intitles the Man to a Freedom; then it will be a Point, Whether the Charter warrants that Custom? A Pretence of Right, however, they have; the Entry of Gibbon and Darby is by their own Officer, and they were sworn in by the Mayor and Jurats.

And, my Lord, it is admitted on all Sides, that Mr. Papillon and Wellard are Freemen; and if they did all they could to get into the Church and vote, then, my Lord, we humbly insist, they are as much Voters as if they had been at the Poll, and were actually in the Case of the Men of Hythe mentioned before.

Therefore, Gentlemen, if the Mayor told Mr. Papillon and Mr. Wellard, that, if they came to the Church, they would not be admitted; and said to Mr. Papillon, You are our Member, do not insist upon it; and when they offered themselves to vote, refused them; we humbly insist, they are as good Voters, as if they had been at the Poll, and actually voted.

And, as to Gibbon and Darby, they had this Right by Marrying, and were warranted by the Charter

C. J. Eyre. It is not regular.

Mr. Lacy. My Lord, the Gentlemen of the other Side object to the Fact laid by us in Point of Law, that we do not come up to what we contend for by our Plea, as to the sole Right: But, if Darby and Gibbon had a Right, other than by Election, where they are sworn in; I would submit it to your Lordship, Whether, till disqualified, they are not in the complete Exercise of that Franchise? There may be Rights that come not in by Election. Mr. Serjeant Darnell says, that the Majority of those present are to chuse the Mayor: But, my Lord, if we did all we could to get in, as has been fully proved to your Lordship and the Jury; we humbly insist, we are intituled to a Vote as much, as if we had been actually present at the Poll, and had given our Votes.

It has been said, that, when the Business is begun, Nobody is to interfere: But, my Lord, we were present by Letter before: and if they read it not, that was not our Fault.

Mr. Smith. My Lord, we admit, that all Persons are to be chosen by a Majority of Freemen pteseut; and we humbly insist, Mr. Papillon and Mr. Wellard were present in Point of Law; and, in fact, in the House of Commons it never was otherwise.

My Lord, in the Case of Ashby and White, (Vol. VIII.) the Question was, Whether an Action would lie for refusing a Vote? It was resolved that it would, because the common Remedy in the House of Commons would give no Relief. And the Authority of the Men of Hythe's Case was fully with us: Darby and Gibbon being admitted, we apprehend, when they voted, they were in the Exercise of their Franchise, and are therefore good Votes.

C. J. Eyre. Gentlemen of the Jury, The Question upon this Issue is, Whether the Defendant Elles was duly elected by a Majority of the Jurats and Commonalty of the Town and Port of New-Romney? And it appears from the Evidence, that twenty-one Freemen being assembled, Wightwick had ten Voices, Elles had eleven; and that two People were present, whose Votes were not taken, Darby and Gibbon. It was on the 25th of March; and these two People were admitted by the Mayor and Jurats, on producing a Mandamus, which is a Precept from a superior Court; but that confers no Right, nor mends the Thing, if there be no Evidence of a prior Right.

They tell you, on one Side, that Darby and Gibbon being sworn in by the Mayor and Jurats, they are put in Possession of their Office, and are to be regarded as People that have a Right in the Election of Mayor: But, unless some such Right be proved, such as Birth, Election, or some other Right, the Mandamus confers none.

But they tell you, this is a particular Right, supported by a particular Custom: and therefore the Question is, Whether this Admittance can give a Right?

Now, Admittance and Swearing can give no Right, without a previous Right. A Mandamus may be brought, when they were never elected; and such Admittance will do nothing of itself.

But no such Custom has been proved, and the Corporation has protested against it; and therefore Darby and Gibbon had no Right to vote.

But they say, Mr. Papillon and Wellard had a Right; and if one more Vote be added to the Poll, then Wightwick had it.

They were certainly Freemen; but yet they could not send in their Votes by Letter, or vote otherwise than personally; they must be corporaliter congregati.

Mr. Papillon was told, the Mayor would not admit him---What then? Should he not then have endeavoured to go in with the rest? I think he ought, if he will give his Vote; there can be no reasonable Excuse.

The Mayor having told him, they would not admit a Foreigner; they tell you, they sent in Letters, and did what they could to get in.

But they have not done what they could: For they should have attended the Mayor, and gone to the Church, and got in with him and the rest: But they do not come till after the Church-Door is shut; and the Evidences all say, that, after the Church-Door is shut, Nobody can be admitted; and that, when they go in, they lock the Door, take up the Keys, and then Nobody is ever admitted. If they do not come in Time, therefore, they exclude themselves. They must be there, and come at the usual Time; and if they did not, they excluded themselves: And is the Law, or the Method of Elections, to be changed for them?

Mr. Papillon's--- (I would not insinuate ---) sending the Letters is attended with odd Circumstances. The Letters are given to Wightwick, and he is to deliver them to Coates; then they are refused by the Assembly; and afterwards the Letters are returned into their Hands again, with a Note, "We have received this Letter, and it has been refused."

Gentlemen, I think the Letter will do nothing: They were wrong in their Judgment; and not coming in Time, they ought not to be let in, any more than any body else. A Man cannot send in his Vote by Letter; he must be present in the Assembly.

And therefore neither of these four Gentlemen had any Right to vote, in my Opinion; and then the Majority is for Elles, and he is duly elected.

Verdict for the Defendant.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. My Lord, the next Issue is, That he was not duly sworn.---Mr. Loftie, Do you know whether Mr. Elles was sworn in Mayor of Romney?

Mr. Loftie. Yes; he was sworn in by me in the Church, in the Manner as other Mayors are sworn.

Mr. Marsh. As to the Oath to be taken by the Mayor, you are only Ministerial: Did not the Mayor say to you, Wightwick was the Man that was to be sworn in Mayor? Did not Coates tell you, "I administer the "Oath to Wightwick," and strike Elles's Hand off the Book?

Mr. Loftie. No, not that I heard.

Mr. Lacy. Did not he order you to swear Wightwick?

Mr. Loftie. He ordered me to swear the Mayor.

Mr. Lacy. Did he not order you to swear Mr. Elles?

Mr. Loftie. Not to my Knowledge.

Mr. Smith. Did Coates say who he thought was Mayor?

Mr. Loftie. Yes; he ſaid Wightwick had the Majority.

C. J. Eyre. Where two People are ſworn in, the Right muſt be in the Man that had the Poſſeſſion of the Staff.

Mr. Batchelor ſworn.

Mr. Marſh. Was you preſent in the Church the Day the Mayor was choſen?

Mr. Batchelor. Yes.

Mr. Marſh. What Declaration was made by Coates, as to the Perſon choſen Mayor?

Mr Batchelor. He told the Town-Clerk, Wightwick was Mayor; and ſaid, "I would have you ſet down Darby and Gibbon as Voters for Wight-"wick," and called them over: But Loftie would not ſet them down, becauſe it was againſt his Inclination. Coates gave the Staff to Wightwick; and ſaid, "I reſign this to you; you ſhall be the Mayor; you had the "moſt Votes."

Mr. Marſh. Who then called for the Oath?

Mr. Batchelor. The old Mayor.

Mr. Marſh. Did he call on any one to adminiſter the Oath?

Mr. Batchelor. Yes; he bid Loftie adminiſter the Oath to Wightwick; and then Wightwick and Elles laid their Hands on the Book, and Coates ſaid, He would ſwear Wightwick only, and ſhoved Elles's Hand off the Book twice.

C. J. Eyre. Read the Clauſe in the Charter that relates to the chuſing of a Mayor; the Queſtion being, Whether the Mayor or Town-Clerk ſhould adminiſter the Oath?

Aſſociate reads——

"The ſaid late Queen by Letters Patent granted, that on Lady-Day, "in the Chancel of St. Nicholas, one of the Jurats ſhould be choſen into "the Mayoralty for the Year enſuing, and ſhould take his Oath, in "Manner as the Mayor of Sandwich takes it."

C. J. Eyre. The Mayor muſt adminiſter the Oath.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. My Lord, the Oath is always read by the Town-Clerk; and I humbly apprehend, it is taking the Oath, when it is read by him in Preſence of the Mayor.

C. J. Eyre. The Mayor muſt conſent to the Oath; he is the Judge, whether the proper Perſon be ſworn, or not. The Oath is to be adminiſtered by the old Mayor; and it appears it was againſt his Conſent; he thought another elected, and ſtruck Elles's Hand off the Book.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. Suppoſe a Man to take an Oath to qualify him for an Office; ſhall a Juſtice of the Peace refuſe it?

C. J. Eyre. Can a Man take an Oath that is not adminiſtered to him? The Town-Clerk has no more to do with it than you or I. A Man is guilty of Perjury, if a Clerk will adminiſter an Oath, when a Court forbid him. Beſides, the Mayor delivered the Enſigns of his Power to Wightwick.

Mr. Benjamin Cobb ſworn.

Mr. Marſh. Was you preſent at the Election of the Mayor?

Mr. Cobb. Yes.

Mr. Marſh. Did you ſee the Oath adminiſtered?

Mr. Cobb. Yes.

Mr. Knowler. Was Elles ſworn?

Mr. Cobb. No.

C. J. Eyre. Did not the Mayor deliver his Staff into the Hands of Wightwick?

Mr. Cobb. Yes, my Lord.

Mr. Langdon ſworn.

Mr. Lacy. Was you preſent at the Election of the Mayor?

Mr. Langdon. Yes.

Mr. Lacy. Was the Oath adminiſtered to Wightwick?

Mr. Langdon. Yes.

Mr. Lacy. Did Coates make any Objection to the ſwearing Elles?

C. J. Eyre. Did Coates think Elles was choſen Mayor?

Mr. Langdon. I believe not.

C. J. Eyre. Who did Coates think was Mayor?

Mr. Langdon. My Lord, he ſaid Wightwick was Mayor, on Account of Darby and Gibbon.

Mr. Marſh. Did Wightwick take the Staff, or did Coates deliver it to Elles?

Mr. Langdon. Wightwick had the Staff, and went Home with the Staff.

Mr. Wynne. Did Elles walk as near the Staff as the other?

Mr. Langdon. I believe he did.

Mr. Gray ſworn.

Mr. Serj. Baynes. Was you preſent at the Choice of Mayor? Did Coates ſay any Thing, or ſtrike Elles's Hand off the Book? Was you near?

Mr. Gray. I was preſent; he never touched his Hand.

Mr. Lacy. Did not Coates order Wightwick to be ſworn?

Mr. Gray. I do not know he ordered any body to be ſworn.

C. J. Eyre. Had Wightwick the Staff in his Hand, when he was ſworn?

Mr. Gray. No.

C. J. Eyre. Where was it?

Mr. Gray. It lay down upon a Tomb-Stone.

C. J. Eyre. I take it, he ordered the Mayor to be ſworn.

Mr. Gray. I do not know his Thoughts.

Mr. Marſh. Is it uſual for the Mayor to have the Staff in his Hand, when ſworn?

Mr. Gray. I do not know.

Mr. Marſh. Whom did he name?

Mr. Gray. I heard him mention Nobody.

Mr. Lacy. Who was Wightwick declared Mayor by?

Mr. Gray. By Mr. Coates.

Mr. Lacy. When did the Mayor ſay this?

Mr. Gray. At the Time of the Election.

Mr. Lacy. Mr. Loftie, was you near Coates, when the Mayor was ſworn? Did he ſtrike Elles's Hand off the Book?

Mr. Loftie. Not that I ſaw.

Mr. Tookey ſworn.

Mr. Lacy. Was you preſent at the Election of the Mayor?

Mr. Tookey. Yes; I was very cloſe to Mr. Coates. I did not hear him declare Wightwick Mayor, or ſee him ſtrike Elles's Hand off the Book. He mentioned Wightwick, and ſaid, Wightwick ſhould be ſworn.

Mr. Marſh. Did he order him to be ſworn, or deliver to him his Staff?

Mr. Tookey. He ſaid, he ſhould be ſworn; but I did not ſee him deliver his Staff to him.

Mr. Halſenden ſworn.

Mr. Marſh. Was you preſent at the ſwearing Mr. Wightwick Mayor?

Mr. Halſenden. Yes, I was preſent, and ſaw Coates ſhove Elles's Hand from the Book. I heard him ſay, he would not ſwear Elles, and ſaw him, after Swearing, deliver the Staff to Wightwick; and I ſaw Elles's Hand ſtruck off twice.

Mr. Marſh. Did Elles walk even with the Mayor?

Mr. Halſenden. I cannot tell.

Mr. Gibbon ſworn.

Mr. Marſh. Was you preſent at the ſwearing in the Mayor by Coates?

Mr. Gibbon. Yes; he gave Orders to take the Poll; and after it was taken, he aſked, Who was Mayor? Loftie told him, Elles; Wilſon ſaid, Wightwick. Then Coates ſaid, that Wightwick was choſen Mayor, and ſhould be ſworn; and then Coates delivered the Staff to Wigthwick. I ſaw it delivered, and ſaw Coates ſhove Elles's Hand off the Book, and heard him ſay, "Mind, I ſwear Wightwick Mayor."

Mr. Marſh. We ſhall trouble your Lordſhip no more.

C. J. Eyre. Gentlemen of the Jury, The Queſtion on this Iſſue is, Whether the Defendant Elles was ſworn Mayor, or not?

It muſt be done by his Predeceſſor.

Loftie ſays, That Coates ordered him to ſwear the Mayor, and that he read the Oath: If this was done by Coates's Order, then he was well ſworn.

But, if it was done contrary to his Order, and he declared another Man, and ſhoved Elles's Hand off the Book, and ſaid, "Take Notice, "I ſwear Wightwick Mayor," and not the other, and delivered the Staff to him, and did all he could to oppoſe the ſwearing Elles; then Elles was not ſworn Mayor.

The Town-Clerk cannot ſwear the Mayor; and the Evidence is ſtrong that Coates oppoſed ſwearing Elles. The Man that has the Right, he is the Man that muſt be ſworn; but none but the former Mayor can ſwear him.

The Queſtion therefore is, Whether he was ſworn by a proper Authority?

If you think him ſworn by a proper Authority, and that Coates meant that Elles ſhould be the Mayor, then you muſt find for him.

But if you think he meant Wightwick ſhould be ſworn Mayor, then you muſt find for Wightwick.

Verdict for the King.

Middleſex. SOME Time ago, that is to ſay, upon the 28th Day of November, in the ninth Year of the Reign of our Sovereign Lord George the Second, by the Grace of God, of Great-Britain, France, and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith, before our ſaid Lord the King at Weſtminſter, the ſame Lord the King commanded, to the Mayor, Jurats, and Commonalty of his Town and Port of Haſtings, in his County of Suſſex, his Writ cloſed, in theſe Words; that is to ſay, "George "the Second, by the Grace of God, of Great-Britain, France, and "Ireland King, Defender of the Faith; To the Mayor, Jurats, and "Commonalty of the Town and Port of Haſtings, in our County "of Suſſex, greeting: Whereas the ſaid Town and Port is an an-"cient Town and Port, and one of the five ancient Ports of this "Kingdom: And whereas there is, and Time out of Mind hath "been, a certain ancient and laudable Cuſtom, uſed and approved "within the ſaid Town and Port, That every Perſon, being the "eldeſt Son of any Freeman of the ſaid Town and Port, and "born

" born within the ſaid Town and Port, after the Admiſſion and Swearing " of his Father into the Place and Office of one of the Freemen of the " ſaid Town and Port, hath a Right, in Reſpect thereof, and alſo upon " paying a reaſonable Fine, to be admitted and ſworn into the Place and " Office of one of the Freemen of the ſaid Town and Port, and ought by " you to be admitted and ſworn into the Place and Office of one of the " Freemen of the ſaid Town and Port, according to the Cuſtom of the ſaid " Town and Port: And whereas one Henry Moore is the eldeſt Son of " Samuel Moore, one of the Freemen of the ſaid Town and Port, and was " born within the ſaid Town and Port, after the Admiſſion and Swearing " of his Father into the Place and Office of one of the Freemen of the ſaid " Town and Port: And whereas the ſaid Henry Moore, by virtue thereof, " and upon paying a reaſonable Fine according to the ſaid Cuſtom, ought " by you ſo to be admitted and ſworn into the Place and Office of one of " the Freemen of the ſaid Town and Port; yet you, well knowing the " Premiſſes, but not regarding your Duty in this Behalf, have not as yet " admitted the ſaid Henry Moore into the ſaid Place and Office of one of " the Freemen of the ſaid Town and Port; nor have you adminiſtered the " Oaths to the ſaid Henry Moore, which are in that Caſe uſually adminiſ- " tered and taken, although you often have been requeſted ſo to do by the " ſaid Henry Moore; but have refuſed, and yet do refuſe, to admit and " ſwear the ſaid Henry Moore into the ſaid Place and Office of one of the " Freemen of the ſaid Town and Port, although the ſaid Henry Moore " has tendered to you a reaſonable Fine on that Behalf; in Contempt of " Us, and to the no ſmall Damage and Grievance of him the ſaid Henry " Moore, and to the manifeſt Injury of his Eſtate, as We have been in- " formed from his Complaint to Us: We therefore being willing that due " and ſpeedy Juſtice be done to the ſaid Henry Moore in this Behalf, (as " it is reaſonable) do command you, by firmly injoining, that, immediately " after the Receipt of this our Writ, you do without Delay, upon the " ſaid Henry Moore's paying a reaſonable Fine, admit, or cauſe to be ad- " mitted, the ſaid Henry Moore into the ſaid Place and Office of one of " the Freemen of the ſaid Town and Port, together with all the Liberties, " Privileges, Franchiſes, Emoluments, and Commodities, to a Freeman " of the ſaid Town and Port belonging and appertaining; and that you " adminiſter, or cauſe to be adminiſtered, to the ſaid Henry Moore, the " Oaths which are in that Caſe uſually adminiſtered and taken according " to the ſaid Cuſtom; or ſhew to Us Cauſe to the contrary thereof, that " the ſame Complaint may not, by your Default, be repeated to Us. And " how you ſhall have executed this our Writ, make it appear to Us at " Weſtminſter, on Friday next, after the Octave of St. Hilary, returning " then to Us this our Writ. And this you are not to omit, upon Peril " that may fall thereon. Witneſs Philip Lord Hardwicke, at Weſtminſter, " the 28th Day of November, in the ninth Year of our Reign."

Upon which ſaid Friday next after the Octave of St. Hilary, before our ſaid Lord the King at Weſtminſter, the ſaid Mayor, Jurats, and Commonalty of the ſaid Town and Port of Haſtings, in the ſaid County of Suſſex, returned the ſaid Writ as followeth; that is to ſay, " The Anſwer of the Mayor, Jurats, and Commonalty of the Town " and Port of Haſtings, within mentioned, to this Writ, appears in " a certain Schedule to this Writ annexed: We, the Mayor, Ju- " rats, and Commonalty of the Town and Port of Haſtings, mentioned " in the Writ, hereunto annexed, do, according to the Command of " the ſaid Writ, humbly certify to our Sovereign Lord the King, That " there is not, nor Time out of Mind hath been, any ſuch ancient and " laudable Cuſtom, uſed and approved within the ſaid Town and Port, " That every Perſon, being the eldeſt Son of any Freeman of the ſaid " Town and Port, and born within the ſaid Town and Port, after the " Admiſſion and Swearing of his Father into the Place and Office of one " of the Freemen of the ſaid Town and Port, hath a Right, in Reſpect " thereof, and alſo upon paying a reaſonable Fine, to be admitted and " ſworn into the Place and Office of one of the Freemen of the ſaid Town " and Port, as in the ſaid Writ is alledged: And, for this Cauſe, We, " the ſaid Mayor, Jurats, and Commonalty of the ſaid Town and Port of " Haſtings, have not admitted, nor cauſed to be admitted, neither ought " we to admit, or cauſe to be admitted, Henry Moore, in the ſaid Writ " named, into the Place and Office of one of the Freemen of the ſaid " Town and Port, together with all the Liberties, Privileges, Fran- " chiſes, Emoluments, and Commodities to a Freeman of the ſaid Town " and Port belonging and appertaining; neither have we adminiſtered, " nor cauſed to be adminiſtered, nor ought we to adminiſter, or cauſe to " be adminiſtered, to the ſaid Henry Moore, the Oaths which are in that " Caſe uſually adminiſtered and taken, as by the ſaid Writ we are com- " manded to do."

And hereupon, upon the ſame Friday next after the ſaid Octave of St. Hilary, before our ſaid Lord the King at Weſtminſter, came as well the ſaid Henry Moore, in the ſaid Writ, and Return named, by Henry Maſterman his Attorney, as the ſaid Mayor, Jurats, and Commonalty of the ſaid Town and Port of Haſtings, in the ſaid County of Suſſex, in the ſame Writ and Return mentioned, by Henry Walrond their Attorney. And the ſaid Henry Moore, having had Oyer of the ſaid Writ and Return, ſaith, That for any Thing above alledged by them, the ſaid Mayor, Jurats, and Commonalty, in their ſaid Return to the ſaid Writ of Mandamus, he the ſaid Henry Moore ought not to be barred from having a peremptory Writ of Mandamus, in order to be admitted and ſworn into the ſaid Place and Office of one of the Freemen of the ſaid Town and Port; becauſe he ſaith, that there is, and Time out of Mind hath been, ſuch ancient and laudable Cuſtom, uſed and approved within the ſaid Town and Port, That every Perſon, being the eldeſt Son of any Freeman of the ſaid Town and Port, and born within the ſaid Town and Port, after the Admiſſion and Swearing of his Father into the Place and Office of one of the Freemen of the ſaid Town and Port, hath a Right, in Reſpect thereof, and alſo upon paying a reaſonable Fine, to be admitted and ſworn into the Place and Office of one of the Freemen of the ſaid Town and Port, in Manner and Form as in the ſaid Writ of Mandamus is above alledged. And the ſaid Henry Moore prayeth, that this may be inquired into by the Country; and the ſaid Mayor, Jurats, and Commonalty pray the like.

Mr. Clarke. May it pleaſe your Lordſhip, and you Gentlemen of the Jury; Henry Moore is the Plaintiff; and the Mayor, Jurats, and Commonalty of the Town and Port of Haſtings, are the Defendants. And, Gentlemen, this is a Mandamus, directed to the Defendants, the Mayor and Jurats of that Town and Port, to admit and ſwear in the Plaintiff Henry Moore into the Place and Office of one of the Freemen of this Town.

And, Gentlemen, the Mandamus ſets forth, That the Town and Port of Haſtings is an ancient Town and Port, and one of the Five ancient Ports of this Kingdom; and that there is, and for Time out of Mind has been, a certain and ancient laudable Cuſtom, uſed and approved within that Town and Port, That every Perſon being the eldeſt Son of any Freeman there, and born within the ſaid Town, after the Admiſſion and Swearing of his Father into the Place and Office of one of the Freemen of the ſaid Town and Port, has a Right, in Reſpect thereof, and alſo upon paying a reaſonable Fine, to be admitted and ſworn into the Place and Office of one of the Freemen there, according to the Cuſtom of that Town and Port.

Gentlemen, the Mandamus further ſets forth, That the Plaintiff Henry Moore is the eldeſt Son of Samuel Moore, one of the Freemen of the ſaid Town and Port, and was born within the Town, after the Admiſſion and Swearing of his Father into the Place and Office of Freeman; and that the Plaintiff, by virtue thereof, and upon paying a reaſonable Fine according to the Cuſtom, ought to have been admitted and ſworn by the Defendants into the Place and Office of a Freeman; but that the Defendants, contrary to their Duty in this Caſe, have refuſed, and ſtill refuſe, to admit and ſwear him, although he has tendered to them a reaſonable Fine on that Behalf.

And this, Gentlemen, the Defendants are laid to have done in Contempt of the King, to the great Damage and Grievance of the Plaintiff, and to the manifeſt Injury of his Eſtate.

And therefore the Writ proceeds to command the Defendants, immediately, upon the Plaintiff's paying a reaſonable Fine, to admit and ſwear him into the Place of a Freeman, or to ſhew Cauſe why they do not.

To this Writ, Gentlemen, the Mayor, Jurats, and Commonalty have returned for Anſwer, That there neither is, nor for Time out of Mind has been, any ſuch ancient and laudable Cuſtom, uſed and approved, within the Town and Port of Haſtings, as is alledged in the Writ; and this, they ſay, is the Reaſon they have not admitted the Plaintiff.

Gentlemen, upon this Iſſue is joined; and the only Queſtion you are now to try, is, Whether there be ſuch a Cuſtom in the Town and Port of Haſtings, as the Plaintiff has laid in the Mandamus? If therefore, Gentlemen, Evidence is laid before you, that there is, and Time out of Mind has been, ſuch a Cuſtom, you will pleaſe, Gentlemen, to find a Verdict for the Plaintiff.

Sir Thomas Abney. May it pleaſe your Lordſhip, and you Gentlemen of the Jury; I am alſo of Counſel of the ſame Side with the Plaintiff; and you will pleaſe, Gentlemen, to obſerve, that the ſingle Iſſue you are to try is, Whether there now is, and Time out of Mind has been, an ancient and laudable Cuſtom in the Town and Port of Haſtings, in the County of Suſſex, That every Perſon, being the eldeſt Son of a Freeman of the ſaid Town and Port, and born within the ſaid Town and Port, after the Admiſſion and Swearing of his Father into the Place and Office of one of the Freemen of the ſaid Town and Port, hath a Right, in Reſpect thereof, and alſo upon paying a reaſonable Fine, to be admitted and ſworn into the Place and Office of one of the Freemen of the ſaid Town and Port?

This, Gentlemen, is the Iſſue you are now to try; and it will not, I believe, be neceſſary to trouble you with an Account of the Cinque Ports, and their Privileges and Cuſtoms.

But, Gentlemen, the Matters of Proof we ſhall lay before you will be of three Kinds.

And the firſt which offers itſelf to your Conſideration, ariſes from a very ancient Record, called the Cuſtomal; which is a very ancient Deed, without any Date; it being an uſual Thing for ancient Deeds and Evidences to be without any Date; and this Cuſtomal is the Rule and Law of all the Cinque Ports.

Gentlemen, this Cuſtomal is ſo old, and goes ſo far back as the Year 1573; it contains fifty-nine Articles. Our Right ariſes upon this Cuſtomal; and therefore I will beg Leave to read the Title, and ſome Paſſages out of it, to you.

Hic ſequuntur Conſuetudines Quinque Portuum, et earum Membrorum, à tempore quo non extat memor' hom' uſitat' et approbat'.

Gentlemen of the Jury, the Words we ground our Right upon are theſe:

Art. 34. " Poſſunt Majores et Jurati, Ballivi et Jurati, et Jurati, in quo- " libet Portu et Membro ubi Major et Ballivus de communi electione non fue- " rit, in præſentia Communitatis, recipere et facere liberes tribus modis:

" Poſſunt Majores et Jurati, Ballivi et Jurati, et Jurati, in quolibet " Portu, &c. recipere & facere liberes tribus modis:

" Una

"Uno modo, per Nativitatem infra libertatem ſuam, ſi pater ſuus, tempore "nativitatis ſuæ, fuit liber——

That, Gentlemen, is the Point we ground our Right upon; the firſt Right. If a Perſon be the eldeſt Son of a Freeman, and born within the ſaid Town and Port, after the Admiſſion and Swearing of his Father into the Office of one of the Freemen of the ſaid Town and Port; we ſay, ſuch eldeſt Son is intituled.

"Alio modo, per Liberum Tenementum perquiſit'.

"Tertio, per Emptionem."

So that, Gentlemen, by this 34th Article of this Cuſtomal you ſee what the ancient Law and Uſage was; That the eldeſt Son of every Freeman, under theſe Circumſtances, is intituled to his Freedom: And therefore we ſay, that the Plaintiff Henry Moore, as the eldeſt Son of Samuel Moore, has, and he is undoubtedly intituled, under this Right, to his Freedom.

And, Gentlemen, as this Cuſtomal mentions three diſtinct Methods of making free, viz. by Birth, by a Freehold Tenement, and by Purchaſe; ſo it has made a manifeſt Diſtinction between the Freedom acquired by Birth, and by either of the other two Ways.

For, Gentlemen, the Fine that is paid by the Son of a Freeman, upon his being admitted and ſworn, is only 6*s.* 8*d.* That is the reaſonable Fine, that is always paid, when a Man is intituled as the Plaintiff is: But all other Perſons, whether they are made free by a Freehold or by Purchaſe, they always paid 13*s.* 4*d.* or, however, always more than the Perſon who was admitted as the eldeſt Son of a Freeman.

My Lord, and Gentlemen of the Jury, when you have heard this Cuſtomal (which we ſhall lay before you) read, we ſhall then read to you ſome Hundreds of Entries out of the Corporation-Books; from whence it will appear, that the eldeſt Sons of Freemen, under the Circumſtances of the preſent Caſe, have been always admitted; and from whence there will reſult ſo uniform and clear a Teſtimony in Support of the Plaintiff's Right, that we defy the Gentlemen of the other Side to produce one Entry, in any of the Corporation Books, to contradict, or at leaſt to impeach, our Entries.

Gentlemen, theſe are old Entries, many of them in Queen Elizabeth's Time; and, therefore, they are not ſo exact in the Stile as modern Entries uſually are. Sometimes the Son is ſaid to be admitted, "Quia pater ejus "liber erat, et ipſe natus fuit infra libertatem." Sometimes the Stile is, "Quia maximus natu filius." And ſometimes, "Quia filius liberi "hominis."

And, Gentlemen, by comparing the Times of their Fathers Admiſſions, and the Births or Baptiſms of the Perſons admitted (which we ſhall prove to you by authentic Copies from the Pariſh Regiſter-Books in Haſtings), it will appear to you to be the moſt clear and ſtrong Caſe that ever came before a Jury.

Gentlemen of the Jury, another Part of our Evidence will ariſe from living Witneſſes; very ancient Men, who, by their own Knowledge and Obſervation for fifty or ſixty Years together, and by converſing with their Anceſtors, many of whom lived to be eighty and ninety Years old, will prove, that this has always been the Cuſtom, That the eldeſt Son of a Freeman, born within the Liberties, and after his Father was made free, has always been intituled to his Freedom; till the other Day, when the Rights of the Town were to be played into a narrower Compaſs, and no Man was to be intituled to his Freedom, but at the Will and Pleaſure of the Mayor and Jurats. And theſe Witneſſes, Gentlemen, are not only ancient Men, but Perſons free and diſintereſted; not a few Men diſfranchiſed To-day, to ſerve a particular Purpoſe, and be made free again To-morrow: But our Witneſſes are Men of great Age and Experience, not intereſted. We doubt not, therefore, Gentlemen, when you have heard our Evidence, that you will be of Opinion, that the Plaintiff has an undoubted Right, as the eldeſt Son of a Freeman, and find the Cuſtom for the Plaintiff accordingly.

Mr. Strange. May it pleaſe your Lordſhip, and you Gentlemen of the Jury; I am alſo of Counſel for the Plaintiff: And, my Lord, this Caſe has been ſo fully and clearly opened by the Gentlemen who have gone before me, that I ſhall not take up any of your Lordſhip's Time in ſtating any of the Circumſtances in the Plaintiff's Caſe; and I ſhall beg Leave, Gentlemen, only to obſerve, that the ſingle Queſtion now to be tried by you is, Whether the Cuſtom in the Town and Port of Haſtings be, That every Perſon, being the eldeſt Son of a Freeman of the ſaid Town and Port, and born there, after the Admiſſion and Swearing of his Father, has a Right, in Reſpect thereof, and alſo upon paying a reaſonable Fine, to be admitted into the Office of one of the Freemen of the ſaid Town and Port? For, Gentlemen, if this be the Cuſtom there, the Plaintiff Moore is within every Part of this Cuſtom.

In this Caſe, Gentlemen, three Things are to be proved:

Firſt, That the Plaintiff be the Son of a Freeman, that was admitted and ſworn into the Franchiſe of this Town.

Secondly, That he be born within the Liberties of the Town.

Thirdly, That he be born under this Circumſtance, after the Time of his Father's Swearing and Admiſſion into this Freedom.

And we ſhall apply ourſelves to lay before your Lordſhip and the Jury ſuch an Evidence, as ſhall fully make out the Cuſtom, That the eldeſt Son of a Freeman, born within the Borough, is, upon paying 6*s.* 8*d.* as a reaſonable Fine, to be admitted and ſworn into the Freedom of the Town.

My Lord, and Gentlemen of the Jury, the particular Evidence we ſhall lay before you, has been minutely opened to you; and I would beg Leave only to obſerve, that, as I humbly apprehend, the Cuſtom now inſiſted on by the Plaintiff is a Sort of common Right of all the Subjects of England, there being no Corporation in the Kingdom (I might ſay, upon the Face of the Earth), but where the Sons of Freemen, born after their Fathers Freedom, are intituled, according to the ſeveral Uſages of the reſpective Boroughs where they claim their Freedom; ſo I do not know, I own, of one Inſtance, that I ever yet heard of, to the contrary.

But, my Lord, as we do not rely on that general Cuſtom, but on the particular Evidence which has been opened; we ſhall begin with an old Record in 1573, as ancient as the old Cuſtomal of the Cinque Ports. We ſhall then, Gentlemen, read to you the Entries of Perſons who have been admitted as Sons of Freemen, for near two hundred Years paſt; and then produce to you ſeveral ancient living Witneſſes, who will ſpeak to the Uſage and Cuſtom, and will prove to you, that it has been ſo Time out of Mind: And then, Gentlemen, we hope that, upon hearing theſe Records, and the Opinion of the old Witneſſes, you will find a Verdict for the Plaintiff.

Mr. Marſh. My Lord, we had a Rule for inſpecting the Corporation-Books; therefore they are not in our Hands: But we have taken authentic Copies of the old Cuſtomal and Entries on Stamps, which we are ready to prove.----Swear Mr. Cranſton.

Mr. Attorney-General (Sir John Willes). My Lord, we have the Original in our Hands; and if we produce the Original, they cannot read their Copy. But, my Lord, we ſay, with great Submiſſion to your Lordſhip, that the Original itſelf is no Evidence.

Lord Hardwicke. Mr. Attorney, ſome Light ſhould be given what it is, and then I ſhall be able to judge.

Mr. Strange. If your Lordſhip pleaſes, we may as well prove our Copy.

Lord Hardwicke. If the Original is here, I cannot read the Copy.

Mr. Cranſton ſworn.

Mr. Strange. Where had you that Book?

Mr. Cranſton. From the Town-Clerk of Haſtings.

Mr. Marſh. Where was it kept? Among the Corporation-Books and Records?——Mr. Cranſton. Yes.

Mr. Marſh. Turn to the 34th Article.

Sir Tho. Abney. My Lord, it is an ancient Book, kept among the other Records of the Corporation; and I never knew a Trial of this Kind, but the ancient Books of the Corporation were always read.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, I humbly ſubmit it to your Lordſhip, that, as they open it, ſuch a Book ought not to be read in Evidence; beſides that there are ſeveral other Objections to it.

My Lord, they open it as the Cuſtomal of all the Cinque Ports, but not as the Cuſtomal of this Borough in particular: And, my Lord, this Mandamus takes no Notice of any Privileges that belong to all the Cinque Ports; and therefore the Cuſtomal they ought to produce, ſhould be the Cuſtomal of that particular Town: But, to ſhew that this will be Evidence, they ſhould make it appear, that there is one concurring Cuſtom throughout the whole Cinque Ports.

And, my Lord, though there are ſome general Cuſtoms which do affect all the Cinque Ports; yet, with great Submiſſion to your Lordſhip, I muſt beg Leave to inſiſt, that this particular Cuſtomal, in caſe it could be read, no more affects this Corporation, than the Cuſtoms of a County affect every particular Borough or Hundred in that County. In order to make this Evidence, they ſhould prove one concurring Cuſtom throughout all the Cinque Ports.

But, my Lord, if that were ſo, I ſubmit it to your Lordſhip, that this cannot be read as Evidence.

The Gentlemen of the other Side ſay, that it is an ancient Record, becauſe it is without a Date; and therefore it is ancient. And this, my Lord, would have been proper, if they had had the old, ancient Cuſtomal itſelf to produce. And I ſubmit it to your Lordſhip, that they muſt either produce that Cuſtomal, or ſhew that it cannot be come at, before this can be read. This is only an Entry in the Corporation-Books, in the Year 1573, of an ancient Cuſtomal.

This, my Lord, is what they would offer to your Lordſhip and the Jury, as Evidence: It is only a Copy; and if it be only a Copy, I humbly inſiſt, they ought to produce the Original, or ſhew that they cannot come at it. But I believe they will be at a Loſs to ſhew, it was ever entered at all by the Corporation's Order: For there is an Entry juſt before this, in the Year 1573, of a Mortgage; there are Abundance of Scraps put together, which nothing at all can be made of; ſome in 1609, ſome in 1592; a hundred Things got together, and entered at different Times, by Nobody knows who. Non conſtat, but this pretended Cuſtomal may be ſewed into the Book; for there is nothing entered in this Book, that can be given in Evidence. If it was the Corporation-Book, there would have been other Entries, of the Manner of electing Freemen, Officers of the Corporation, and Members to ſerve in Parliament, and other Corporation-Affairs: But, becauſe it is found among the Corporation-Papers, therefore it is to be given in Evidence; though found amongſt a Medley of a hundred Sorts of trifling Things, in no wiſe relating to the Corporation, and that belong to God knows who. In the Book there are Copies of Mortgages, not one of them from Perſons who ſtood indebted to the Corporation in one Farthing; an Account of a Rental of a Noble Lord's Eſtate; the Reſolution of the Judges upon the Statute relating to the Poor; a hundred miſcellaneous Things got together, Nobody knows how, or why: My Lord, I ſay, when it appears in this Light before your Lordſhip, I ſubmit, that, as it does not at all appear what this Medley of a hundred Things are, becauſe it is found amongſt ſome Papers in the Cuſtody of the Town-Clerk, and there is one Thing which relates to the Cuſtom of all the Cinque Ports, and a hundred other Things not relating either to them or to this Borough, whether it be any Evidence at all. I ſubmit it therefore to your Lordſhip, in the firſt Place, that as, upon the Face of it, it appears to be only a Copy of a Thing; and as it appears that Thing does not relate to this Borough in particular; and as it does not appear what Book this is, nor how it came amongſt the Books of the Corporation; and as it is only a Collection of uſeleſs, miſcellaneous Papers; I think it ought not to be read.

Lord Hardwicke. If I could get off from reading this Book lawfully, yet, from the Nature of this Cauſe, I muſt look upon the Book. In Caſes of this Nature, I think it, prima facie, proper to be read in Evidence. There may be Objections to the reading it of different Kinds; ſome, from the Nature of the Cuſtody in which it has been kept; ſome intrinſical, from the Book itſelf. Thoſe from the Nature of the Cuſtody, when, where, and how long it has been kept, are proper againſt reading it at all: But, when they ariſe from the Book itſelf, it is impoſſible to ſay it ſhould not be read; becauſe the Court cannot judge whether it be proper or no, till they have heard it. I think, therefore, it muſt be read. If, upon reading, there appear to be any material Objections to the Book, I will hint them to the Jury, when I come to ſum up.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, we ſubmit it to your Lordſhip, that it is torn and defaced, and in many Places not legible.

Mr. Strange. Why did not you keep it better? This Book has not been in our Cuſtody. If you do not take proper Care of your Corporation-Books, are we to be prejudiced by your Neglect?

Mr. Marſh. Mr. Salkeld, pleaſe to read the Title: If they have put Chevy-Chaſe in it, what is that to our Cuſtomal?

Aſſociate reads——

"Et ſi fuerit extraneus, in partibus tranſmarinis oriundus, et in aliquo "Portu ſive Membro bonæ famæ et conditionis permanſit, et poſtmodum in "eodem Portu ſive Membro maritat' fuerit, ac libertatem gaudere deſiderans, "fiat ipſe liber per emptionem, ut prædict' eſt, per totam libertatem Quinque "Portuum; ſalvo, quod non ad electionem Majoris, Ballivi, Jurat', ſive "alior' officiar', nec de conſilio ſive negotiis Communitatis fiend', quouſque habuerit literas Domini Regis, pro indigenat' cognoſci poteſt."

37. "Et poteſt Dominus Cuſtos Quinque Portuum, ſive ejus Locum-tenens, "ſemel dum in officio fuerit, mandare et facere unum extraneum, ultra mare "natum, liberum in quolibet Portu et Membro, in forma liberis per Emptionem, abſque aliquo fine communitati ubi ipſe extraneus commoratur pro eodem "perſolvend', except' officiar' feod' ad hoc uſque conſuet'."

38. "Et ipſi, qui ſunt in omnibus et ſingulis formis prædictis facti liberi in "aliquo Portu ſive Membro, habeant libertatem conſuet' in omnibus aliis "Portubus."

Sir T. Abney. Now read the next, Nullus fiat liber per Emptionem.

Aſſociate reads——

39. "Et nullus fiat liber per Emptionem, quouſque in Portu vel Membro "ubi libertatem deſiderat, per unum annum et unam diem permanſit, et ſi bene et "honeſte habuerit, &c."

Mr. Strange. My Lord, we ſhall read no more.

Lord Hardwicke. Are there any other Parts, Mr. Attorney, you would have read?

Mr. Att. Gen. Let me ſee the Book. (Turns it over.) My Lord, here is an Entry in 1606, before the Entry of 1573. Here are counter-parts of Leaſes. We muſt, I believe, trouble your Lordſhip with reading one of them.—Read that Leaſe.

Aſſociate reads——

"This Indenture made the 10th Day of Auguſt, in the fifteenth Year "of the Reign of our Sovereign Lady Elizabeth, &c. between Theophilus "Johnſon, of Lamberhurſt, in the County of Kent, Gent. of the one Part, "and James Woodgate, Yeoman, of the other Part"——

Mr. Att. Gen. Read the Judges Opinion about the Statute of Queen Elizabeth.

Mr. Strange. They would inſinuate, that becauſe a few miſcellaneous Papers are bound up with our Cuſtomal, therefore it is not authentic.

Lord Hardwicke. There is no Weight in that at all: The Town Clerk may bind up what he pleaſes with the Corporation-Books. The Queſtion is, Whether the general Declarations of the Cinque Ports are binding in the particular Ports, or no?

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, I ſubmit it to your Lordſhip, that the Things bound up with it, appearing to be miſcellaneous, uſeleſs Papers, take off from the Authority of it.

Lord Hardwicke. There are Copies of Leaſes bound up with it, Mr. Attorney: Will that take off from its Authority?

Mr. Att. Gen. If you will admit what I ſtate, we will read it.

Mr. Strange. You may ſtate what you will, and read what you will out of it; it is your own Book.

Mr. Att. Gen. Then here is the Rental of a certain Noble Lord's Eſtate.

Mr. Strange. That looks as if the Corporation were in Hopes he would leave it them.

Mr. Marſh. Not at that Time of Day. There are ſome Addreſſes, that may be a Proof of their Loyalty.

Lord Hardwicke. Let me ſee the Book (which was delivered). There is an Entry of ſome Leaſes, with a Rental of an Eſtate.

Mr. Att. Gen. Let me ſee the Book.

Sir T. Abney. My Lord, we beg Leave firſt to read the Entries of eldeſt Sons, born within the Liberties, after their Fathers were admitted, and that were admitted on paying their Fines of 6*s.* 8*d.*—Read Jeremiah Brybam. He was admitted into the Freedom the 27th of April, 12 James I. anno 1614, and paid his Fine of 6*s.* 8*d.* He was baptized, my Lord, the 9th of November, 1587, and admitted as the eldeſt Son of James Brybam, Jurat. (Produce the Copy on Stamps.)

Lord Hardwicke. What is that? Where had you it from? Is it a true Copy?

Mr. Cranſton. My Lord, it is a true Copy. I had it from the Corporation-Books; I examined it with the Entry in the Book.

Aſſociate reads——

"Memorandum. 27° Aprilis, 12° Jacobi I^mi, anno 1614. Haſtings, ſſ. "At the Court of our Sovereign Lord the King, came Jeremiah Brybam, "and prayed to be admitted to the Freedom and Liberty of this Town; "and by Mr. Mayor and his Brethren was admitted and ſworn, and kiſſed "the right Cheek of Mr. Mayor, more ſolito, pro fine 6*s.* 8*d. duntaxat*, "quia filius ſen' eſt liberi hominis et Jurat' hujus villæ, &c. viz. filius Jacobi "Brybam, Jurat' defunct', &c."

Mr. Strange. That, my Lord, is the Cuſtom: He kiſſed the Mayor's Cheek, "more ſolito, pro fine 6*s.* 8*d. duntaxat, quia filius ſen' eſt liberi "hominis et Jurat' hujus villæ, &c. viz. filius Jacobi Brybam, Jurat' de"funct', &c.*"

Sir T. Abney. My Lord, we beg Leave now to ſhew when he was born, and when his Father was admitted. He was born or baptized the 9th of November, 1587.—Read the Certificate. Did you compare it with the Pariſh Regiſter-Book of Haſtings? Is it a true Copy?

Mr. Cranſton. Yes; it is a true Copy; I examined it with the Regiſter.

Aſſociate reads——

"1587, November 9th, ——

Sir T. Abney. This is the Birth or Baptiſm of this Jeremiah Brybam.

"Chriſtened, Jeremiah, the Son of James Brybam."

Sir T. Abney. My Lord, to ſhew that his Father was a Freeman, we ſhall read to your Lordſhip and the Jury an Entry, whereby it will appear, that his Father acted as a Freeman January 4, 18 Eliz. 1576.

Lord Hardwicke. He is mentioned to be a Jurat in this Entry; therefore that is needleſs.

Mr. Strange. My Lord, the next Entry is the 20th of December, 1620, James, the Son of James Laſher.—Where is that? Did you examine that with the Entry in the Corporation-Book? Is it a true Copy?

Mr. Cranſton. Yes; I examined it; it is a true Copy.

Aſſociate reads——

"Haſtings, ſſ. Aſſembly holden the 20th December, anno regni Regis "Jac. 18°, 1620, ſecundum conſuetudinem, &c. At which Court appeared "Richard Waller, Mayor; James Laſher, Martin Liſe, William Byſhop, "Richard Withers, Jeremiah Brybam, Richard Boys, John Brett, Nathaniel Laſher, Thomas Bryan, John Barley, William Barker, Jurats; Robert "Mills ——

Mr. Strange. Paſs over the Names.

"At this Aſſembly, Samuel Moore and are "elected Barons of this Town: ——

Sir T. Abney. My Lord, this Samuel Moore was the Plaintiff's Grandfather.

"——And at this Court it is decreed, that James Laſher inſtantly re"quiring the ſame, was admitted to the Liberty and Freedom of this "Town, by Conſent of all; et fecit ſacramentum, et oſculatus eſt malam "dextram Majoris, more ſolito, et ſolvit pro fine 6*s.* 8*d. quia primogenitus "filius Jacobi Laſher, Jurat'.*"

Sir T. Abney. Becauſe he was the eldeſt Son of his Father. Now, my Lord, we ſhall ſhew he was born within the Borough, and after the Time of his Father's being admitted a Freeman.—Look out the Certificate of James Laſher's Baptiſm, the 27th April, 1579. Is that a true Copy, Sir? Did you examine it with the Regiſter?

Mr. Cranſton. It is; I examined it.

Aſſociate reads——

"27 April, 1579. Chriſtened, James, the Son of James Laſher, Jurat."

Mr. Strange. The Father is ſaid to be a Jurat at the Time of regiſtering the Son's Baptiſm.

Mr. Marſh. My Lord, the next Inſtance we go upon is Thomas Lovell, (Look out that) the eldeſt Son of William Lovell. The Father was admitted the 6th of September 1636. Thomas the Son was born the 10th of February, 1640; he was admitted a Freeman on the 20th of April, 1667.—Read the Son's Admiſſion. Did you examine it?

Lord Hardwicke. Is that a true Copy?

Mr. Cranſton. It is, my Lord; I examined it.

Aſſociate reads——

"Haſtings, ſſ. 20 April, 1667. In public Court came Thomas Lovell, "jun. eldeſt Son of William Lovell, late Jurat, deceaſed, and prayed the "Franchiſe of this Town; to which, for his Fine of 6*s.* 8*d.* he is "admitted, took his Oath, and kiſſed the Mayor's right Cheek, more "ſolito."

Mr. Marſh. To prove that his Father was a Freeman, ſhew the Entry of the 6th of September, 1636. Is it examined?

Mr. Cranſton. Yes.

Associate reads ——

"Hastings, ss. Memorand', quod 6th September, 1635, came William "Lovell, and prayed to be admitted into the Freedoms of this Town and "Port, and took the Oaths, more solito, and was admitted accordingly."

Mr. Strange. My Lord, his Father had been four Years a Jurat, when the Son was baptized.---Read the Certificate of the 10th of February, 1640. Is it a true Copy? Did you examine it?

Mr. Cranston. I did.

Associate reads ——

"1640, February 10th. Baptized, Thomas, the Son of William Lovell, "Jurat."

Mr. Filmer. My Lord, the next Instance is William Batchelor, eldest Son of James Batchelor. He was admitted the 2d of May, 1669.---Read that. Is it a true Copy? Did you examine it?

Mr. Cranston. It is; I examined it.

Associate reads ——

"Hastings, ss. 2 Maii, 22 Car. II^di, 1669. At this Election and As-"sembly, William Batchelor, eldest Son of James Batchelor eldest, Free-"man above-named, at his humble Request, is also made a Freeman, "and admitted into the Franchise of this Township, for his Fine of a "Demi-Mark, and thereunto sworn, and kissed the Mayor's Cheek, "more solito, &c."

Mr. Filmer. My Lord, he was baptized the 17th of July, 1636.---Read that Certificate. Did you examine it? Is it a true Copy?

Mr. Cranston. It is.

Associate reads ——

"17 July, 1636. Baptized, William, the Son of James Batchelor."

Mr. Filmer. My Lord, his Father was admitted nineteen Years before, 17th September, 15 Jac. I. 1617.---Read his Admission. Is it a true Copy? Did you examine it?

Mr. Cranston. I did; it is a true Copy.

Associate reads ——

"15° Regis Jacobi I^mi, Jacobus Batchelor admissus est ad libertatem hujus "villæ, et osculavit malam dextram Majoris, more solito, pro fine suo 13*s.* 4*d.*"

This James was the Father, and he paid a Fine of 13*s.* 4*d.* because he was not admitted as the Son of a Freeman. He was admitted by a Freehold, or by Purchase.

Mr. Clarke. My Lord, the next Instance we shall trouble your Lordship with, is William Parker, jun. He was admitted the 9th of May, 1670, for a Fine of 6*s.* 8*d.*---Read his Admission. Is that a true Copy? Did you examine it?

Mr. Cranston. Yes; I examined it.

"Hastings, ss. 9° die Maii, 22 Car. II. 1670. Assemblat' tent' ibidem "coram Majore villæ et portus Hastings prædict',

"William Parker, jun. eldest Son of William Parker, Jurat, came here "in Court, praying his Freedom, &c. which is granted him for a Demi-"Mark; took his Oath, and kissed the Mayor's Cheek, more solito, &c."

Mr. Clarke. My Lord, we have a Certificate of the Son's Baptism, the 14th of August, 1644.---Is it a true Copy?

Mr. Cranston. It is.

Associate reads ——

"14 August, 1644. Baptized, William, the Son of William Parker."

Mr. Clarke. We shall now shew your Lordship, that his Father acted as a Freeman six Years before the Birth of the Son, and as a Jurat two Years after.---Is that a true Copy? Did you examine it?

Mr. Cranston. It is.

Associate reads ——

"Hastings, ss. Elect' Majoris villæ et portus de Hastings prædict', tent' "ibidem 15° die Aprilis, anno regni Regis nostri Car' Angl', &c. 14°, 1638. "Ad hanc diem Johannes Barley electus est in offic' Majoris hujus villæ pro "hoc anno sequent'——"

Lord Hardwicke. Who was present?

"—— per voces horum liberorum hominum villæ prædict', videlicet, Nic. "Staplus, Ric. Staplus, Wil. Goldham, Wil. Chapman, Johannis Sargent, "sen. Wil. Turpine, Ric. Batchelor: Qui quidem "Major sic elect' sacramentum suum præstitit corporale ad offic' illud exercend' "prout decet, more solito, &c."

Sir T. Abney. The next Person we shall trouble your Lordship with, is——

Mr. Serj. Eyre. Was any body else admitted at that Time?

Sir T. Abney. There were nine made free.---My Lord, the next is John Fantley. He was admitted the 5th of December, 1674.---Is it a true Copy? Did you examine it?

Mr. Cranston. I examined it; it is a true Copy.

Associate reads ——

"Hastings, ss. 5 Decembris, 1674, 26 Car. II^di. Assemblat' tent' ibidem "coram Majore, &c. villæ et portus Hastings prædict', in plena curia venit "Johannes Salmon, et petit libertatem hujus villæ; Johannes Fantley, jun. et "Willielmus Genner, jun. et admittuntur, scilicet, prædict' Salmon pro 13*s.* "4*d. et prædict' Fantley* 6*s.* 8*d. et prædict' Genner* 6*s.* 8*d. quia filii sen'* "patr' eor' liber'; qui omnes fecerunt inde sacramentum, et malam dextram "Majoris osculaverunt, more solito, &c."

Sir T. Abney. My Lord, the Father of Fantley was admitted a Freeman the 8th of July, 1626. Fantley the Son was baptized the 13th of December, 1640; just thirty-four Years before he was admitted a Freeman, which was the 5th of December, 1674.---Read the Certificate of his Baptism. Is it a true Copy?

Mr. Cranston. It is.

Associate reads ——

"Hastings, ss. 13 December, 1640. Baptized, John Fantley, the Son of John and Margaret Fantley."

Sir T. Abney. We shall now shew your Lordship, that his Father was admitted to his Freedom the 8th of July, 1626, thirteen Years before the Birth of his Son.---Read the Father's Admission. Is it a true Copy? Did you examine it?----Mr. Cranston. I did.

Associate reads ——

"Hastings, ss. 8 Julii, 1626. Johannes Fantley admissus est ad libertatem "hujus villæ, pro fine 13*s.* 4*d.*"

Mr. Serj. Eyre. There the Fine is 13*s.* 4*d.*

Sir T. Abney. This is the Father.

Mr. Serj. Eyre. That is a very material Difference. The Son's Fine is 6*s.* 8*d.* but every body that is admitted by any other Right, pays for his Fine 13*s.* 4*d.*

Mr. Strange. The Fine of 6*s.* 8*d.* is a particular Indulgence to the Sons of Freemen, and all others paid 13*s.* 4*d.* or more.---My Lord, the next Instance is Philip Bayley, the eldest Son of John Bayley. He was admitted the 10th of April, 1691; he was born the 14th of May, 1669. ---Read his Admission. Did you examine it? Is it a true Copy?

Mr. Cranston. It is.

Associate reads ——

"10 April, 1691, 3 W. and Mar. Hastings, ss. This Day, being "Good-Friday, Philip Bayley, eldest Son of John Bayley, deceased, for-"merly Mayor of Hastings, for his Fine of 6*s.* 8*d.* was admitted to the "Freedom of this Town and Port, by Thomas Lovell, Mayor, Edward "Milward, Richard Watts, and John Medhurst, Jurats; who took his "Oath, and kissed the Mayor's right Cheek, more solito, and also took "the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy."

Mr. Strange. We shall now produce the Copy of the Registry of his Baptism, which was the 14th of May, 1669.

Mr. Cranston. It was the 19th of May, 1667.

Mr. Strange. Read the Certificate of the 19th of May, 1667, of Philip Bayley's Baptism. Did you examine it? Is it a true Copy?

Mr. Cranston. It is.

Associate reads ——

"1667, May 19. Baptized, Philip, the Son of John Bayley and Anne "his Wife."

Mr. Strange. My Lord, we shall now read the Copy of the Entry of the 28th of April, 1656; whereby it will appear, John Bayley his Father was then a Freeman.---Is it a true Copy? Did you examine it?

Mr. Cranston. I examined it; it is a true Copy.

Associate reads ——

"Hastings, ss. The Election of the Mayor of the Town and Port of "Hastings, the 28th Day of April, 1656, in the Court-Hall of the "same Town, according to the Use and Custom thereof, Time "out of Mind used, &c.

"At this Day was chosen Thomas Delves into the Office of Mayoralty "of the same Town, for the Year ensuing, by the Voices of these "Freemen of the said Town following:----

Mr. Strange. Who was present?

"—— That is to say, of Richard Wheeler, William Dighton, Richard "Sargent, sen. Philip Girdler, John Lasher, William Barker, Mark Pontes, "James Batchelor, Daniel Downe, James Lasher, Gent. Drew Richardson, "Thomas Jarret, John Spey, Samuel Smershall, John Fyssenden, Richard "Stevenson, James Redames, William Geerey, Robert Bursey, Thomas Hyder, "Daniel Stevens, John Brunnel, John Bayley, jun. Thomas Penbuckle, "Edward Hildring, Simon Waters, James Chowe, Ralph Barnicle, John "Shoesmith, John Fantley, Peter Stanbynooth."

Mr. Marsh. My Lord, the next Instance is Jeremiah Redames. He was admitted the 11th of January, 1691.----Look out that. Did you examine it? Is it a true Copy?——Mr. Cranston. It is.

Associate reads ——

"Hastings, ss. Memorandum. The 11th Day of January, 1691, be-"fore Mr. Mayor, assisted by Philip Lovell, John Stevens, and Dr. Peter "Fiat, Jurats, came Jeremiah Redames and Philip Girdler, and craved to "be admitted into the Freedom of this Town and Port; and they were "accordingly admitted into the Freedom, and took the Oath of a Free-"man, and also the other Oaths, and kissed the Mayor's right Cheek, "more solito; and for a Fine paid, viz. Philip Girdler, a Mark; and "Jeremiah Redames, being the eldest Son of a Freeman, half a Mark; "which was extr' to the Chamberlain."

Mr. Marsh. My Lord, the Time of his Baptism was the 2d of January, 1655.---Read that Certificate. Have you examined it? Is it a true Copy?——Mr. Cranston. It is.

Associate reads ——

"Hastings, ss. 2 January, 1655, Jeremiah, the Son of James Redames, "was baptized."

Mr. Marsh. My Lord, James Redames was a Freeman in April 1649.

Mr. Clarke. My Lord, the next Instance is Thomas Boyce. He was admitted as an eldest Son.

Lord Hardwicke. You must shew Jeremiah Redames was born after the Father's Admission, if you would apply this Instance.

Mr. Clarke. My Lord, we will shew that James Redames, the Father, acted as a Freeman the 28th of April, 1649, six Years before the Son was born.---Look out that Entry. Is it a true Copy?

Mr. Cranston. It is.

Associate reads ——

"Hastings, ss. The Election of the Mayor of the Town and Port "of Hastings, the 28th Day of April, 1656, in the Court-Hall of "the same Town, according to the Use and Custom there Time out "of Mind used.

Lord Hardwicke. What Regiſter is that a Copy of; now it comes to be more neceſſary to aſk?

Mr. Cranſton. My Lord, it is a true Copy of the Pariſh-Regiſter of Haſtings.

Mr. Strange. My Lord, the next is William Lovell. His Father was not only a Freeman, but a Jurat. He was admitted the 6th of September, 1636.

Mr. Attorney General. You go backwards and forwards in a very irregular Manner.

Mr. Strange. We'll go regularly on; you will not be able to follow us.—Read the Entry of the 6th of September, 1636, of the Admiſſion of William Lovell, jun.

Mr. Att. Gen. You muſt prove William Lovell the Father was a Freeman; you read him before as Father.

Lord Hardw. What is the Time of William Lovell's Admiſſion?

Mr. Strange. My Lord, the 6th of September, 1636.

Sir T. Abney. My Lord, we read it before, to ſhew that he was born before Thomas Lovell. He is the third Inſtance we ſpoke to under the firſt Head.

Lord Hardw. The 20th of April, 1667, Thomas, the Son of William Lovell, was admitted.

Sir T. Abney. And now, my Lord, we read his Father's Admittance, the 6th of September, 1636.

Lord Hardw. You did not read it before?

Sir T. Abney. My Lord, we read him before, as a Jurat.

Mr. Strange. My Lord, it has been read, to ſhew that the Father was a Freeman at the Time of the Son's Birth.—Read it again. Did you examine it? Is it a true Copy?

Mr. Cranſton. Yes.

Aſſociate reads —

" Haſtings, ſſ. 6 September, 1636, William Lovell, jun. eldeſt Son of his
" Father, Jurat, who is now made free of this Corporation for 6 s. 8 d.
" Fine, took his Oath, and kiſſed the Mayor's right Cheek, more ſolito,
" &c."

Sir T. Abney. My Lord, we have many more Entries, not distinguishing between Sons and eldest Sons: But we shall not trouble your Lordship with them, but go to our living Witnesses.—Call Robert Evernden.

Robert Evernden sworn.

Sir T. Abney. How old are you?—Evernden. Sixty-five Years old.

Mr. Lacy. Was your Father a Freeman of Hastings?---Evernden. No.

Sir T. Abney. Where was you born?---Evernden. At Robertsbridge, fifteen Miles from Hastings; but I have lived fifty Years in Hastings.

Sir T. Abney. What do you know of the Custom in Hastings, as to what Right the eldest Sons of Freemen have to their Freedoms?

Evernden. I have heard Gentlemen say---I know no otherwise—

Sir T. Abney. Who have you heard say?

Evernden. I have heard Mr. Thomas Moore and John Moore, who were both Justices of Peace, and Jurats.

Mr. Serj. Eyre. My Lord, here is a Man prompts this Witness.

Lord Hardwicke. Let him go on the other Side.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, I apprehend this is not Evidence.

Mr. Strange. You say, you lived fifty Years in Hastings, and knew Thomas Moore and John Moore, Justices of the Peace, and Jurats; Give my Lord and the Jury an Account, what you have heard them say in relation to the Right of eldest Sons of Freemen to be free.

Evernden. I heard them say, that the eldest Son of a Freeman had a Right.

Mr. Strange. Where must they be born?

Evernden. Born in Town, to be sure.

Mr. Strange. Whether must they be born before their Fathers were made free, or after?

Evernden. They must be born in their Fathers Freedom.

Mr. Strange. What Fine do they usually pay?

Evernden. Six and eight Pence.

Mr. Strange. Did you ever know an eldest Son of a Freeman, during the fifty Years you have lived in Hastings, refused?

Evernden. Some did not require it.

Mr. Strange. Was any body denied, that ever demanded it?

Lord Hardwicke. He only tells you what he heard the Moore's say.—— You say, you had this Conversation with John Moore, and he was a Justice; What did he tell you?

Evernden. He told me, that the eldest Son of a Freeman had a Right.

Lord Hardwicke. Was John Moore a Jurat?—Evernden. Yes, my Lord.

Lord Hardwicke. And these two Men told you this?

Evernden. Yes, my Lord.

Mr. Strange. How long ago is it that they told you this?

Evernden. I cannot tell.

Mr. Strange. But, according to your Memory, how long do you think it may be?

Evernden. It was, I believe, in the last King's Reign, or Queen Anne's, that they spoke it; I cannot tell to a Year.

Mr. Strange. Have you seen them lately?—Evernden. No.

Mr. Strange. Within twenty or thirty Years?---Evernden. Yes.

Mr. Strange. Did both, or one of them, mention this? and how long is it since, according to the best of your Remembrance?

Evernden. About Ten or a Dozen Years ago.

Mr. Strange. Had you any Conversation with any other Freeman about this Right?---Evernden. Yes, with Robert Bartholomew.

Mr. Strange. Was he a Freeman?

Evernden. Yes; he had been Mayor.

Mr. Strange. What have you heard him say about this Right?

Evernden. I have heard him say, the eldest Son of a Freeman had a Right.

Mr. Marsh. Do you know Dr. Fiat? During so many Years as you lived in Hastings, do you remember him to say any Thing about the Right of eldest Sons?---Evernden. He has been dead some Time.

Mr. Marsh. What was he?

Evernden. He was a Doctor, and Mayor of the Town.

Mr. Marsh. Did he ever say any Thing to you about this Right?

Evernden. No, not that I remember.

Mr. Strange. During the fifty Years you lived in Hastings, what was the general Report there concerning the Right of eldest Sons, that what they informed you about it was true?

Evernden. I never heard any body say but that they had such a Right.

Mr. Clarke. How old were Robert Bartholomew and the two Moore's, when you heard them say this?

Evernden. They were very ancient Men.

Mr. Att. Gen. You know nothing of your own Knowledge; it is only by Hear-say?

Evernden. No.

Mr. Att. Gen. What did you hear them say; it was only in general?

Evernden. That the eldest Son of a Freeman had a Right.

Mr. Att. Gen. Was it to the eldest Son of a Freeman generally, without confining it to being born within the Borough, or to any particular Case?

Evernden. They said, that the eldest Son of a Freeman had a Right.

Mr. Att. Gen. Are you sure they confined it to the eldest Son of a Freeman? Did they say nothing, that all the Sons had a Right?

Mr. Strange. If all the Sons have a Right, then an eldest Son has.

Lord Hardwicke. Mr. Evernden, you said, they must be born in the Town during the Fathers Freedom; Did Thomas Moore or John Moore say whether they must be born in Hastings, or after their Fathers Freedom?

Mr. Evernden. No, my Lord.

Lord Hardwicke. Then why did you say that?

Evernden. They said, that the eldest Son of a Freeman had a Right, if any body had.

Several Counsel. Ay, if any body had!

Lord Hardwicke. What is the Right of Freedom?

Evernden. None at all, but by the Election of the Mayor and Jurats.

Sir T. Abney. They are glorious Fellows!

Mr. Lacy. Did Moore say any Thing of Residence?—Evernden. No.

John Couzens sworn.

Mr. Strange. How old are you, Mr. Couzens?—Couzens. About sixty.

Mr. Strange. Where was you born?

Couzens. In Hastings, and have lived all my Time there.

Mr. Att. Gen. Was your Father a Freeman?——Couzens. No.

Mr. Strange. During all that Time you have lived in Hastings, what have you heard any ancient People say concerning the Right of eldest Sons to be free?

Couzens. I have heard several ancient People say, the eldest Son of a Freeman had a Right by his Father's Charter.

Sir T. Abney. Did you hear them say any Thing, where he was to be born?

Couzens. I cannot tell; but they said he had a Right by his Father's Charter.

Sir T. Abney. What is a Charter?

Couzens. I take it, his Father was to be free first.

Sir T. Abney. Can you recollect the Names of any ancient Inhabitants you have heard say this?

Couzens. Yes; I lived with Dr. Fiat when he was Mayor, and was to and fro with him; and I heard him say, the eldest Son of a Freeman had a Right by his Father's Charter.

Sir T. Abney. Did you hear any others say so?

Couzens. Yes; several others, both Thomas and John Moore, Jurats.

Sir T. Abney. Have you heard any others say so?

Couzens. I have heard it from several others; but I cannot recollect their Names.

Sir T. Abney. Did you ever know the eldest Son of a Freeman refused?

Couzens. No, not till I heard of the Plaintiff Moore's being refused.

Sir T. Abney. Not till you heard of the Plaintiff Moore! They are an ancient Family in Hastings, I think?---Couzens. Yes.

Mr. Marsh. My Lord, this Dr. Fiat was Mayor; he was Town-Clerk and Doctor, and had the Records of the Town in his Custody when Mayor, and must know the Custom. He was a Jurat in 1691.

Mr. Serj. Eyre. Mr. Evernden, suppose a Freeman has several Sons, are all these Sons entitled as well as the eldest?---Evernden. I cannot say.

Mr. Serj. Eyre. Did you ever know a younger Son refused?

Drew Shengleton sworn.

Lord Hardwicke. How old are you, Mr. Shengleton?

Shengleton. Sixty-nine Years of Age.

Mr. Strange. How long have you lived in Hastings?

Shengleton. I have lived ſixty Years in Haſtings, in the Town.

Mr. Strange. What is the Uſage and Right there of Freemen's eldeſt Sons?

Shengleton. I was not born there, though I was a Child when I went to live at Haſtings.

Mr. Strange. Do not you know what the Cuſtom and Uſage is there?

Shengleton. I have heard ſay, the eldeſt Sons had a Right.

Mr. Strange. Who has told you?

Shengleton. I cannot nominate them, they were ſo many; but I can tell it is a Diſcourſe among a great many People.

Mr. Strange. Was it the common Report, when you went to live in Haſtings, and ſince, that the eldeſt Sons of Freemen had a Right?

Shengleton. So far as I have heard, it was.

Mr. Strange. Did you ever know an eldeſt Son refuſed?

Shengleton. I know nothing about it.

Mr. Strange. Have you heard any ancient People, that are dead, talk about it?——Shengleton. I cannot remember.

Mr. Strange. Have not you heard them ſay, that the eldeſt Son of a Freeman had a Right? Have not you heard your Mother ſay ſo?

Shengleton. She told me my Father was a Freeman.

Mr. Strange. When was that?—Shengleton. When I was a Child.

Mr. Strange. What did ſhe tell you elſe?

Shengleton. I have heard my Mother ſay, that the eldeſt Son of a Freeman was to be free, and that my elder Brother had a Right.

Mr. Strange. Was your elder Brother a Freeman?——Shengleton. No.

Mr. Strange. Why had he it not?

Shengleton. My Mother ſaid, ſhe had loſt my Father's Franche or Charter, and that was the Reaſon; and ſhe ſaid, her Son ſhould go into the Hall, and demand it.

Mr. Strange. How came ſhe to ſay ſo?

Lord Hardwicke. How long is it ſince you heard this Diſcourſe, that Freemen's eldeſt Sons had a Right?

Shengleton. It is many Years; I cannot tell exactly how many.

Lord Hardwicke. How many do you think? Is it ten, or twelve, or twenty Years back?

Shengleton. Yes, it is full twenty Years back.

Mr. Clarke. Did you never hear the Report, when you was a young Man, that the eldeſt ſons of Freemen had a Right?

Shengleton. Yes; but I cannot nominate them.

Mr. Clarke. You cannot name one Perſon that ever ſaid ſo?

Shengleton. No.

John Boykett ſworn.

Mr. Marſh. Mr. Boykett, how old are you?

Boykett. Turned of Sixty.

Mr. Marſh. How long have you known Haſtings?

Boykett. I was born there, and have lived almoſt all my Time in Haſtings.

Mr. Marſh. I would aſk you, Within your Time, what have you known to be the Cuſtom with regard to the admitting of Freemen? Whether an eldeſt Son is intituled?

Boykett. I have heard it among the Freemen.

Lord Hardwicke. Who have you heard ſay ſo, do you remember?

Boykett. My Lord, I cannot ſpeak poſitively to particular Perſons.

Mr. Marſh. Did you know Dr. Fiat, the two Mr. Moore's, and Mr. Bartholomew?——Boykett. Yes.

Mr. Marſh. Did you ever ſpeak with them about it?

Boykett. I aſked to be made free myſelf, in Court.

Mr. Marſh. How came you to aſk it?

Boykett. I aſked it as a Favour, but it was not granted.

Mr. Marſh. When was it, and who did you aſk it of?

Boykett. I aſked it of Thomas Lovell, about forty Years ago: He was a Freeman and Mayor.

Mr. Marſh. Did you go into the Court-Hall to aſk it?—Boykett. Yes.

Mr. Marſh. Was any Thing ſaid to you in relation to your being admitted? How long ago was it?—— Boykett. Forty Years.

Mr. Marſh. What did they ſay to you, upon your aſking to be admitted?——Boykett. I aſked to be admitted to the Freedom, as a Favour; and that they would be ſo good as to admit me. Some were for my being made free, particularly Mr. Clifts, a Juſtice.

Mr. Marſh. Was your Father a Freeman?

Boykett. No. But the Mayor ſaid, I ſhould not be admitted, becauſe I was a Diſſenter: And then Waller, the Town-Clerk, aſked the Mayor, whether I was the Son of a Freeman? and the Mayor anſwered, I was not: And then Waller ſaid to the Mayor, Then do as you pleaſe; and the Mayor ſaid, he would not admit a Diſſenter for 40*l.*

Lord Hardwicke. What did Waller ſay upon that?

Boykett. My Lord, the Mayor ſaid, they would not make a Diſſenter free for 40*l.* And then the Town-Clerk aſked the Mayor, Whether he was the Son of a Freeman? To which the Mayor ſaid, He was not. And then Waller, the Town-Clerk, ſaid, Then, Mr. Mayor, you may do as you pleaſe.

Lord Hardwicke. What did you underſtand by thoſe Words?

Boykett. I underſtood by them Words, that if my Father had been free, I ſhould have had a Freedom.

Mr. Att. Gen. How many Children had your Father?

Boykett. Several.

Mr. Att. Gen. Was you the eldeſt?

Boykett. Yes, and ſerved my Time in Haſtings.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did you know John Medhurſt, any thing of his having a Son?——Boykett. Yes, he had a Son born in his Mayoralty.

Mr. Att. Gen. Was it his firſt Son?——Boykett. Yes.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did he deſire to be made free?

Boykett. Yes; he aſked for his Freedom in Court, when I was preſent.

Mr. Att. Gen. Was he made free?

Boykett. Not at that Time; I heard them diſputing about it.

Lord Hardwicke. How long ago was that?

Boykett. I cannot tell, my Lord.

Lord Hardwicke. Was it ten Years ago?

Boykett. I cannot ſay certainly; but I believe thereabouts.

Mr. Strange. You have ſet up this Excluſion for ten Years; Was it twenty Years ago, that his Father was made free?

Boykett. I cannot ſay.

Mr. Strange. How long has he been dead?

Boykett. About eight Years.

Mr. Strange. How many Years before he was dead was it, that the Son aſked to be made free? Was it ſeven or eight Years?

Boykett. I cannot ſay.

Mr. Strange. Is the Son a Freeman now?

Boykett. He has not his Freedom.

Mr. Serj. Eyre. How long was it before Medhurſt's Death, according to your beſt Recollection, that he applied to have his Freedom? Was it four or five Years?

Boykett. Medhurſt the Father died about eight Years ago; I cannot ſay how long ſince the Son demanded his Freedom.

Lord Hardwicke. Can you recollect about what Time, according to the beſt of your Remembrance?

Boykett. Not a great while, my Lord, before the Father's Death.

Lord Hardwicke. Was it two, or three, or five Years?

Boykett. Not five Years, my Lord.

Mr. Clarke. You ſay, Mr. Boykett, Medhurſt was refuſed his Freedom; What was the Reaſon? Was he born within the Liberties, and after his Father was made free?

Boykett. Yes, during the Time he was Mayor.

Mr. Clarke. Was he his eldeſt Son?

Boykett. He was his only Son.

Mr. Clarke. Who was Mayor when he was refuſed?

Boykett. I cannot ſay.

Lord Hardwicke. He does not remember.

Joan White ſworn.

Mr. Clarke. Do you know Haſtings?

White. Yes.

Mr. Clarke. How long have you known it?

White. All my Years.

Mr. Clarke. What Age are you?

White. I am ſixty-two Years old.

Mr. Clarke. Do you know what is the Cuſtom of making Free in Haſtings, whether the eldeſt Son has a Right?

White. I heard my Father ſay, that the eldeſt Son had a Right.

Mr. Clarke. Was he a Freeman?——White. Yes.

Lord Hardwicke. Speak out; ſpeak to that Gentleman.

Mr. Clarke. Is your Father living or dead?——White. Dead.

Mr. Clarke. Tell the Court what you have heard him ſay about the Right of Freemen's eldeſt Sons.

White. I heard him ſay, they had a Right.

Sir T. Abney. What, that Freemen's eldeſt Sons had a Right?

White. Yes.

Sir T. Abney. Have you ever heard any body elſe ſay any Thing about it?——White. No.

Sir T. Abney. Did you never hear your Mother ſay any Thing about it?

White. No.

Anne Sargent ſworn.

Mr. Clarke. Do you know the Town of Haſtings?

Sargent. Yes.

Mr. Clarke. How old are you?

Sargent. I am ſixty-three Years old.

Mr. Clarke. How long have you lived in Haſtings?

Sargent. I have lived there always, and was born there.

Mr. Clarke. Have you heard any Diſcourſe concerning the Right of Freedom in that Town?

Sargent. I have heard Mr. John Stevens, who was ſeveral Times Mayor of Haſtings, ſay——

Mr. Clarke. Is he living or dead?——Sargent. He is dead.

Mr. Clarke. What did he ſay concerning the Right of Freedom?

Sargent. That it belonged to the eldeſt Sons to be Freemen.

Mr. Clarke. Have you heard any body elſe ſay ſo?——Sargent. No.

Mr. Clarke. Have not you been married?——Sargent. Yes.

Mr. Clarke. Have not you heard your Huſband ſay, that it belonged to the eldeſt Sons to be made free?

Sargent. Yes, he has ſaid the ſame.

Mr. Clarke. Was the common Repute during your Time, that the eldeſt Sons had a Right?——Sargent. Yes.

Mr. Clarke. Was it ever diſputed, that they had that Right?

Sargent. No.

Mr. Clarke. And you heard Stevens the Mayor ſay, that the eldeſt Sons had a Right, ſeveral Times?——Sargent. Yes.

Suſannah Medhurſt ſworn.

Mr. Filmer. How old are you, Mrs. Medhurſt?

Medhurſt. I am fifty-ſix Years of Age.

Mr. Filmer. Have not you been Mrs. Mayoreſs?

Medhurſt. Yes.

Sir T. Abney. Who have the Right in Haſtings to be Freemen?

Medhurſt. All the Sons of Freemen.

Sir T. Abney. Has not the eldeſt Son a Right?

Medhurſt. Yes; I have heard my Huſband ſay, they could not deny him.

Sir T. Abney. Have you heard him ſay ſo more than once?

Medhurſt. Yes; I have heard him ſay ſo often.

Sir T. Abney. Pray, Mrs. Medhurſt, during your Time, was it the common Reputation, that the eldeſt Son of a Freeman had a Right?

Medhurſt. Yes.

Sir T. Abney. Where were they to be born?

Medhurſt. In the Town; it was not ſo much denied then; if it was required, they would do it.

Sir T. Abney. Have you ever known an eldeſt Son denied?

Medhurſt. Yes.

Sir T. Abney. When? Was it within twenty Years?

Medhurſt.

Medhurſt. I cannot ſay when.

Mr. Att. Gen. How many Years is it ſince the firſt eldeſt Son was denied, that you know of? Was it twenty Years ago?

Med. I do not know.

Mr. Att. Gen. Mention the Name of an eldeſt Son that you know has been denied?

Med. The eldeſt Son of Mr. Medhurſt.

Mr. Att. Gen. How long ago is that?---Med. I cannot tell.

Lord Hardwicke. Is your Huſband living, Mrs. Medhurſt?

Med. No, my Lord; my Huſband has been dead a great many Years.

Lord Hardwicke. Did you ever know any body denied before? Was it in your Huſband's Mayoralty that this Perſon was denied?---Med. No.

Lord Hardwicke. Was it before or after your Huſband's Death, that Mr. Medhurſt was denied?

Med. It was ſince my Huſband's Death, my Lord.

Mr. Serj. Skinner. You have a Huſband now, have you not?

Med. I hope ſo, and a good one too.

Mr. Serj. Skin. You will be Lady Mayoreſs again then.

Mr. Serj. Eyre. Mrs. Medhurſt, I would aſk you, whether, when you firſt knew Haſtings, they did not admit every body on Payment of a Fine of 6*s.* 8*d.*?---Med. I do not know.

Mr. Strange. My Lord, we ſhall trouble your Lordſhip with but one Witneſs more. Call Thomas Colebrand.

Thomas Colebrand ſworn.

Mr. Strange. You are not a Freeman of Haſtings, are you?

Colebrand. No.

Mr. Strange. Have not you been Apprentice there? How old are you?

Cole. I am about eighty Years old, and was Apprentice there about ſixty Years ago.

Mr. Strange. Have you been acquainted there ever ſince?

Cole. Yes; I live about ſixteen Miles from Haſtings, and go to and fro frequently there.

Mr. Strange. Do you know what is the Uſage or Cuſtom, as to the admitting of Freemen?

Cole. Yes; that Freemen's eldeſt Sons were intituled to Freedoms.

Mr. Strange. Were they to be born within the Town?

Cole. I never knew nor heard, that being born within the Town, or at a Diſtance, made any Difference.

Mr. Strange. Had you any Diſcourſe with any ancient People about this Matter?---Cole. Yes.

Mr. Strange. What Account did you receive from them?

Cole. That the eldeſt Sons of Freemen, only, had a Right to Freedoms.

Lord Hardwicke. Who have you heard ſay ſo?

Cole. Old Waller, the Town-Clerk.

Lord Hardwicke. Who have you heard ſay ſo beſides?

Cole. One Thomas Lovell, and Thomas Rainolds; he was a Mayor; and I have heard the Mayor and Jurats ſay ſo ſeveral Times.---I am not able to ſtand.

Mr. Strange. My Lord will give you the Liberty to repoſe yourſelf upon that Stool.

Cole. I remember one Medhurſt demanded his Freedom.

Lord Hardwicke. How long ago was that?---Cole. About ſixty Years.

Lord Hardwicke. What paſſed upon that?

Mr. Strange. Was he the Son of a Freeman?

Cole. Yes. I cannot recollect what the Diſpute was; but they put him by at firſt.

Mr. Strange. What was the Reaſon given?

Cole. I do not know; I was not in Court.

Mr. Clarke. You ſay, he demanded his Freedom; Do you know upon what Right he demanded it?

Lord Hardwicke. How came you to know that Medhurſt demanded his Freedom?---Cole. My Uncle Lovell was then Mayor, and he told me ſo.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, the Witneſs ſpeaks to a particular Cuſtom only; I ſubmit it to your Lordſhip, whether this Evidence of a particular Fact----

Lord Hardwicke. I think it is Evidence to a general Right, and not to any particular Cuſtom.---What did your Uncle Lovell ſay?

Cole. That it was an ancient Right, that Freemen's eldeſt Sons ſhould be made free.

Lord Hardwicke. How came there to be a Diſpute about this Matter? Did your Uncle Lovell tell you any Thing about it?

Cole. He ſaid, that Medhurſt came and demanded his Freedom.

Lord Hardwicke. How did you know afterwards that Medhurſt was made free?

Cole. Becauſe I afterwards ſaw him among the Freemen, at the Election of one Muntz to be a Member of Parliament. He voted in the Election.

Mr. Strange. This Rainolds was old Rainolds the Town-Clerk, who was admitted the 27th of May, 1662. He is the 15th Man we ſpoke to.

Sir T. Abney. My Lord, the 13th of March, 1674, this John Medhurſt was admitted.---Read the Entry of his Admiſſion. Is it a true Copy?

Mr. Cranſton. Yes.

Aſſociate reads----

"Haſtings, ff. 13 March, 22° Car. II^di^, 1674. In full Court then and there holden, before the ſaid Mayor and Jurats, came John Medhurſt, eldeſt Son of Nicholas Medhurſt, late a Freeman of Haſtings aforeſaid, and prayed to be made free of the Liberties of this Town; whereunto he is admitted, took his Oath, and kiſſed the Mayor's Cheek, more ſolito, and paid 6*s.* 8*d.* to the Chamberlain for his Fine."

Sir T. Abney. My Lord, we ſhall not trouble your Lordſhip to give any further Evidence.

Mr. Att. Gen. May it pleaſe your Lordſhip and you Gentlemen of the Jury; I am Counſel in this Caſe with the Defendants: And, notwithſtanding the long Evidence you have heard, we doubt not but the Defendants will make it appear, to your entire Satisfaction, that they have no other View in defending this Suit, but as by their Oaths they are obliged to ſupport the ancient Rights of the Corporation, and prevent Innovations there; of which this pretended Right of the Plaintiff will appear to be one.

And, Gentlemen, the ſingle Queſtion you are now to try is, Whether there be ſuch a Right in the Town and Port of Haſtings, as the Plaintiff has ſet forth in the Mandamus, as the Foundation of his Claim to be free of this Town and Port, which he inſiſts belongs to him? And, Gentlemen, as the whole depends upon this, Whether he has proved the Right in the Manner he has laid it in the Mandamus; it will be proper to ſtate the Cuſtom to you, and then to obſerve, how far the Evidence that has been given by the Plaintiff has ſupported his Right, as it is laid in the Mandamus?

And, Gentlemen, as the Plaintiff has laid it, four Things are neceſſary to give a Man a Right to a Freedom in Haſtings:

1*ſt*, He muſt be an eldeſt Son. It is, every Perſon, being the eldeſt Son of a Freeman—

2dly, He muſt be born in the Town. And born within the ſaid Town and Port.

3dly, It muſt be after the Admiſſion and Swearing of his Father. For it is ſaid in the Mandamus that the Plaintiff has a Right in Reſpect thereof; and alſo, 4thly, Upon paying a reaſonable Fine, to be admitted and ſworn into the Place and Office of one of the Freemen of the ſaid Town and Port.

So that, Gentlemen, theſe four Things are ſet forth in the Mandamus, and, as they alledge, muſt concur, and are neceſſary to give a Man a Right to a Freedom in Haſtings: For it is, in Reſpect thereof, and alſo upon paying a reaſonable Fine, that he is to be admitted and ſworn into the Place and Office of one of the Freemen of the ſaid Town and Port.

If therefore, Gentlemen, any of theſe four Things, which they have laid as neceſſary, or if one of theſe Things laid as neceſſary, they have failed in the Proof of; for the Right they lay is in Reſpect thereof; my Lord, I ſay, if every one of theſe Things are neceſſary----They are,

1ſt, That he be the eldeſt Son of a Freeman.

2dly, That he be born after his Father's Freedom.

3dly, That he be born within this Town.

And the next Qualification is, upon paying a reaſonable Fine.

Theſe, Gentlemen, are the four Things they have thought proper to ſay as neceſſary, in order to be admitted a Freeman of this Town and Port.

And, my Lord, I humbly apprehend, they have given no Proof at all of three of them; of one of them they have given but a very ſlight Proof; and of one of the Facts every Evidence they have produced has given a direct Proof to the contrary.

And, my Lord, there is one Thing more, which is abſolutely neceſſary in order to be free of this Borough, that they have not taken in at all; and that is, that he muſt be reſident within this Town; and as they have not made that Part of their Cuſtom, they muſt undoubtedly fail. I ſaid before, that they had not made Reſidence a Part of their Cuſtom; and we ſhall fully prove Reſidence and Inhabiting within the Town to be abſolutely neceſſary, and ſhew that they have laid a Foundation, by their own Evidence, that this is neceſſary.

My Lord, I would beg Leave now to conſider their Evidence which has been brought to ſupport this Right of the Plaintiff.

And the firſt Thing they have offered to your Lordſhip and the Jury, is a Writing, which they are pleaſed to call the Cuſtomal; of which I admit it may be a Copy, as they have ſet it out. And, my Lord, your Lordſhip hinted, that Books of this Nature ſhould be read in Evidence, becauſe the Court could not ſee whether it was proper to be read or no, till they had heard it; which ſuppoſes (as I humbly apprehend) that we are at Liberty to object to it.

And, my Lord, I would ſubmit it to your Lordſhip, that, conſidering how it comes before the Court, and the Part they rely on; what bad Company it keeps, and what it is ſaid to be, only an Entry of a Cuſtomal; that it is no Evidence at all, or, if it be any, not of the Thing they bring it to prove. They open it as only an Entry of ſome old Cuſtomal; and the ancienter it is, the better, provided it had been the old Cuſtomal; but this is not the Thing itſelf, but only an Entry in the Books they produce; and it is very improper to have a Cuſtomal of the Cinque Ports entered amongſt other Things. It would have had great Weight and Honour, had it been kept in ſome proper Place. It does not appear, but this may have been ſewed in, by the Fraud of an Officer of the Corporation. It is not the ancient Inſtrument, but only a Copy; and it does not appear how it might come there. I would therefore ſubmit it to your Lordſhip, whether, without they give an Account that they have made Search for the Original, this is any Evidence at all of what they bring it to prove?

But, Gentlemen, if it be Evidence at all, I ſubmit it to your Conſideration, that as it is but an Entry, and conſidering what Company it is found in, that it can have no Weight. If it had been found in an ancient Corporation-Book, amongſt old Entries and authentic Records of the Corporation, it would have come before the Court and you with ſome Authority. But, as it is found amongſt a hundred miſcellaneous Things no way relating to the Corporation, Copies of Leaſes, the Reſolution of the Judges upon the Statute of Queen Elizabeth relating to the Poor, amongſt many miſcellaneous Things; and very probably this might be ſewed in the Middle of the Book, for it begins in the 200th Page; I ſay, conſidering the Company it keeps, and the trifling Things it is found amongſt, it can have no Weight; I ſubmit, it is a Book that can have no Authority at all.

But, Gentlemen, if it be any Evidence at all; I ſubmit it to you, that it can be no Evidence of the Matters in Diſpute. It is not ſaid to be the Cuſtomal of Haſtings: That, Gentlemen, we ſhall read to you: And though there may be ſome concurring Cuſtoms which relate to all the Cinque Ports in general; yet, unleſs they can ſhew the ſame Cuſtom to be in all the Ports, a Cuſtom that relates to the Right of all can have no Weight in this particular Borough. To have made this Evidence, they ſhould have proved by ancient Charters and Records, that there is a concurring Right in all the Cinque Ports to the Election of Freemen.

But, Gentlemen, we ſhall lay Evidence before you quite to the contrary. We ſhall ſhew you a Cuſtom relating to eldeſt Sons in other Ports, quite different from this; whereby it will appear, there are diſtinct Rights in all the Ports, and that it was never pretended there there was one uniform Right amongſt them; though if this Cuſtomal be Evidence, there muſt be a general Right of all the Cinque Ports. But, Gentlemen, taking it as Evidence of the Matters in Diſpute, even then it is far from proving moſt of the Things they have laid, and but a very ſlight Proof of what they rely on.

Firſt, Here is a Negative implied: "Poſſunt Majores et Ballivi, &c." After having ſet forth the particular Perſons having a Right, it goes on and ſays, the eldeſt Son of a Freeman may be admitted, and that there are three Ways of admitting him:

"Poſſunt Majores et Jurati, Ballivi et Jurati, &c. recipere et facere
"liberes tribus modis:
"Uno modo, per Nativitatem."

They are Qualifications rather than Rights: Poſſunt, &c. They may admit, and there is no Diſtinction made between the eldeſt Son and the other Sons.

"Alio modo, per Liberum Tenementum perquiſit':
"Tertio, per Emptionem."

Such a Man has no Right; and yet the ſame Words are uſed to thoſe who come in by a Freehold, or by Purchaſe, as to thoſe who are to be made free as eldeſt Sons; and therefore it is no Evidence of the Right of an eldeſt Son. Does it ſay, the eldeſt Sons of Freemen, born after their Fathers Freedom, or within this Liberty, that they ſhall be free?——

Lord Hardwicke. "Uno modo, per Nativitatem infra libertatem ſuam, ſi
"pater ſuus, tempore nativitatis ſuæ, fuit liber."

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, I aſk Pardon; it turns the other Way; but I ſubmit that it is no Evidence of the eldeſt Son. It does not ſay, per Nativitatem of the eldeſt Son; if he had any Son born after his being admitted into the Freedom, he had a like Right with the eldeſt Son.

Lord Hardwicke. "Per Nativitatem infra libertatem ſuam."

Mr. Strange. Within his Franchiſe.

Lord Hardwicke. I was thinking, whether it related to the Freedom of the Father.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, it is the Libertatem of the Five Towns, and not of this particular Town. Talking of the general Privileges of the Cinque Ports is an uncertain Evidence of what they contend for. My Lord, it goes on, and, ſo far as it is an Authority eſtabliſhed in all the Ports, it ſays, He is to take an Oath to maintain the Liberties of the Five Ports, and eſpecially of that Port ubi commoratur. It lays down, as the Foundation of being free, that Reſidence is abſolutely neceſſary: He cannot be admitted, unleſs he be commorant. This, my Lord, is the Foundation we go upon, and I humbly apprehend we ſhall eſtabliſh it by a very ſtrong Evidence.

My Lord, I reckon that the 35th Article they have read entirely deſtroys the Credit of this Book. The Words are, "Et quilibet gaudere
"intendens libertatem Quinque Portuum per Emptionem, inveniet quatuor
"manucaptores reſident' de omnibus et ſingulis præmiſſ' perimplend'." They have not ſhewn that this Article has ever been complied with: They have never produced a Time that ſuch Manucaptores have been given, or that they were ever required of any Perſon: And therefore it appears, that this pretended Cuſtomal has been always conſidered as a Ballad, as I would conſider it; for they would have obſerved it, if it had been the ancient Law: And as they begin with this Point, I ſubmit it to your Lordſhip, that it ſhould not be left out of the Caſe; beſides, it is neceſſary that they be reſident within the Borough.

My Lord, and Gentlemen of the Jury, as to the Evidence that has been given from the Entries read; in conſidering this Corporation, one general Obſervation may be made, That they are a very weak Argument, if any, of what they are brought to prove.

My Lord, the Mandamus admits a Preſcription; and in making out a Cuſtom in the Caſe of a Borough, they ſhould give in Evidence more ancient Entries than any of theſe that have been read. They have gone no further back than 1608, although in the Books there are much older Entries. It may be ſaid by the Gentlemen of the other Side, that going back a hundred Years is a great Way back; and if there are no Entries before, it is ſufficient: But it happens unfortunately for them, that in this Corporation there are regular Entries, from the Year 1389, down to this Time where they have thought proper to begin; and there is no Inſtance or Footſtep of one claiming, or any Entry taking Notice of the Right of an eldeſt Son; and we ſhall read Entries back for two hundred Years before they begin; which, I humbly apprehend, will be a ſtrong Objection to every Entry they have read. A Proof from 1608 is but a ſlight Evidence of an ancient Cuſtom: And as they have proved another different Cuſtom, and there has been an Intermiſſion for ſo many Years, this Application of the Plaintiff's can proceed from nothing elſe but the ſame litigious Spirit that now prevails in the Corporation. From 1691 to 1716, they have produced no Footſteps of this Right, for twenty-five Years together. Can it be believed there was any Right, when for twenty-five Years no eldeſt Son ever claimed a Right; I ſay, when it appears Nobody ever claimed it during that Time, or, if they did, that they were refuſed? And, my Lord, if they were refuſed, it is a ſtronger Evidence.

Mr. Strange. You are miſtaken, Mr. Attorney; there was John Geery admitted the 25th of October, 1707, and John Huſſey the 5th of January, 1694; and we have ſeveral others.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, they have divided their Evidence into three Parts. In the firſt Clauſe they have given no Evidence-----

Lord Hardwicke. That this, Time out of Mind, has been the Cuſtom.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, I would conſider, how far their Evidence ſupports the Right the Plaintiff has laid in the Mandamus, and what they have proved.

And, with great Submiſſion to your Lordſhip, I muſt inſiſt, that they have proved no more, than that eldeſt Sons of Freemen have been admitted for a Fine of 6*s.* 8*d.* for the Entries all are, on their praying to be admitted. And, my Lord, it is no Wonder; for we ſhall ſhew your Lordſhip ſeveral hundred Inſtances of Perſons who were admitted during the Time theſe Freemen were admitted, who were younger Sons, for their Fines of 6*s.* 8*d.* and they have produced but fourteen Inſtances of eldeſt Sons; they have ſhewn they were admitted, and proved the Fine paid by them to be 6*s.* 8*d.* We have other Inſtances of Sons who paid 13*s.* 4*d.* And therefore they might as well ſay, ſince there is Proof, that every body paying 13*s.* 4*d.* has as good a Right to be admitted as the eldeſt Son of a Freeman; for it is upon paying 13*s.* 4*d.* and the eldeſt Son's Admiſſion is upon paying 6*s.* 8*d.* and if it be an Argument of a Right, it is a Right by paying 6*s.* 8*d.* and every body, from their own Account of the Matter, has the ſame Right for 13*s.* 4*d.*

My Lord, in any of the Entries, there is no Diſtinction made in the Admiſſion between the Sons and others; they all come and pray to be admitted; ſometimes it is upon making it their humble Requeſt, ſometimes upon their earneſtly beſeeching, that they are to be made free. They all aſk in the ſame Manner, whether they are Sons or no, and are made free; and therefore, on their own Entries, it appears to be a Favour granted to eldeſt Sons as well as others, upon their aſking that they might have it; and therefore they are indulged with a leſſer Fine. They rely much on the Fine of 6*s.* 8*d.* but, if it proves any thing, it is (as I humbly apprehend) an Argument againſt them.

My Lord, in the next Place, they have laid the Cuſtom to be, That this eldeſt Son be born within the Town, after the Admiſſion and Swearing of his Father; then it is that the Son is to be admitted. But I do not remember that any one of their Witneſſes has confined it to this (I aſk Pardon if I have forgot); but they ſaid, ſome of them expreſly, that the being born after the Father's Admiſſion, or within the Town of Haſtings, or out, made no Difference. But they have endeavoured to ſupply this from their Entries, by ſaying, that they are mentioned in the Entries as eldeſt Sons, and therefore they were admitted for 6*s.* 8*d.* But this infers nothing.

Gentlemen, we ſhall ſhew you, both by Entries and living Witneſſes, that there has been no Diſtinction made between the eldeſt Sons and other Sons. It was no Indulgence therefore to them; but the ſame to the other Sons of Freemen as well as the eldeſt.

And, my Lord, we have many Entries in the Books, where only the Sons of Freemen are mentioned, without taking any Notice of the eldeſt; which fully proves, that, if the Point reſted upon their being eldeſt Sons, and born within the Borough, after the Admiſſion and Swearing of the Fathers, they would have been particularly entered ſo in the Books, and is a ſtrong preſumptive Evidence againſt this pretended Right of the Plaintiff.

My Lord, we have ſome Inſtances where they are called the youngeſt Sons, and were admitted for their Fines of 6*s.* 8*d.* upon their coming and humbly praying that they might be admitted into the Franchiſe of this Town. That therefore being added, ſtrongly ſhews, that they had no Regard at all to what the Gentlemen of the other Side principally contend for, the Right of eldeſt Sons.

Beſides this, Gentlemen, we ſhall produce to you many living Witneſſes, very old ones, who will prove to you, that the Mayor and Jurats (the Charter being ſilent in this Matter) have Time out of Mind admitted Perſons at their Pleaſure, and this has been the ancient Cuſtom.

And, Gentlemen, as their Entries go no further back than 1608, ſo their living Witneſſes do not make it a Jot the better. They do not ſay there is a Right in this Borough, in one Inſtance, of their own Knowledge; they do not ſay a Word of any Diſtinction, whether they are born after the Admiſſion and Swearing of the Father, or within the Borough; and one of them expreſly contradicts it. The Evidence they have given is nothing but a tittle-tattle Diſcourſe of what they have heard, that the eldeſt Sons of Freemen had a Right.

Therefore, Gentlemen, as to the Point in Queſtion, as they have entirely failed in their Entries, and as the living Witneſſes they have brought to ſupport it ſay little or nothing to the Purpoſe---One of them ſays, when he deſired his Freedom himſelf, the Town-Clerk anſwered the Mayor, Sir, you may do as you pleaſe. He did not aſk him, whether he was born within the Town, or after his Father became free, and mentions a Fact ſtrong to the contrary. And, as ſome of their Evidence comes down ſo low as 1722, one of them tells you, that when one was made a Juſtice of Peace, the eldeſt Son of a Freeman came to the Court, and demanded his Freedom, and was abſolutely refuſed; and that he did it nine Years ago, ſome of them ſay about twelve. So that, Gentlemen, their living Witneſſes give but a ſlight Evidence of one Part of their Cuſtom; and as to the other Part, they have given no Evidence at all. But we have many old Witneſſes, who will give your Lordſhip and the Jury no wrong Views of the Manner of admitting Freemen.

My Lord, we ſhall begin with the Cuſtomal, which is ſaid in the Title to be the Cuſtomal of this Town; where the fulleſt Directions are given as to the Manner of electing Freemen, and yet there is not a Word ſaid of the Right of the eldeſt Son.

We ſhall then, by reading many Entries out of the Corporation-Books, ſhew, that no Notice at all has been taken of eldeſt Sons, in Diſtinction to other Sons; but that they have all been admitted promiſcuouſly.

And then I ſhall trouble your Lordſhip to ſay no more; but call our living Witneſſes, who will fully prove to your Lordſhip and the Jury, that the Mayor and Jurats have, Time out of Mind, admitted Freemen at their Pleaſure; and that, beſides being the eldeſt Son of a Freeman, and born within the Town after the Admiſſion and Swearing of the Father, he has a Right in Reſpect thereof, but it muſt be on another Condition, as neceſſary as any of the former, upon paying a certain Fine. The Mandamus goes on and ſays, And alſo upon paying a reaſonable Fine; and the Writ commands the Mayor and Jurats to admit him upon paying a reaſonable Fine. So that, my Lord, I take it, by the Writ, that Fine is made to be as neceſſary in order to the Perſon's being admitted, as any of the other Qualifications mentioned in the Mandamus: And, my Lord, I humbly apprehend, they have proved it a certain Fine, inſtead of a reaſonable Fine.

My Lord, a Copyholder lays a Cuſtom, to be admitted to Copyhold Lands upon paying a reaſonable Fine: If, upon the Proof, it comes out to be a certain Fine, he muſt undoubtedly fail; for in Copyholds there is a known Diſtinction between a reaſonable Fine and a Fine certain.

And, my Lord, I humbly apprehend, that, in Point of Law, Caſes of Copyholders are parallel with the preſent.

There is as much a Diſtinction between a Fine certain and a reaſonable Fine in the preſent Caſe, as in the Caſe of a Copyhold.

My Lord, they have fully proved 6*s.* 8*d.* to be conſtantly paid, which is a certain Fine, upon every Admiſſion of an eldeſt Son. The Mayor cannot contend; if they offer that Fine, they have a right to be admitted. They therefore have failed in this Point; it is not a reaſonable, but a certain Fine.

My Lord, in the next Place, we ſhall call Evidence to prove, that, without Reſidence within the Borough, no one can ever be admitted a Freeman of this Town and Port: And I take this, my Lord, to be a general Rule in moſt Corporations; it being unreaſonable that any Man, who does not reſide in the Borough of which he is free, ſhould have a Share in conducting the Affairs of that Borough. And although the Charter is ſilent in this Affair, yet, my Lord, beſides the general Reaſon of the Thing, we ſhall ſhew your Lordſhip and the Jury a By-Law made above two hundred Years ago, by which it is declared, That if any one who was a Freeman removed out of the Borough, and ſhould dwell out of the Town, ſuch Freeman loſt all his Right. And we ſhall prove by ſeveral ancient living Witneſſes, that Reſidence within the Borough was always neceſſary, and that this has been the conſtant Uſage.

My Lord, upon the whole Circumſtances of this Caſe, we beg Leave to inſiſt, that they have not proved three Parts of the Cuſtom, as they have laid it in the Mandamus; and that, as to the fourth Part, they have proved directly the contrary: And therefore, Gentlemen, we hope you will find a Verdict for the Defendants.

Mr. Serj. Skinner. May it pleaſe your Lordſhip, and you Gentlemen of the Jury; I am alſo of Counſel with the Defendants: And Mr. Attorney-General has been ſo very particular in anſwering the Evidence, which has been offered to you by the Gentlemen of the other Side, as well as in ſtating the Evidence we are to lay before you, that I need ſay little.—

Lord Hardwicke. You are not going to ſtay, Mr. Strange, I hope: We are now coming to a material Part.

Mr. Serj. Skinner. My Lord, the Right the Plaintiff has laid in the Mandamus is, That every Perſon, being the eldeſt Son of a Freeman, born within the Town, after the Admiſſion and Swearing of his Father into the Office of Freeman, has a Right, in Reſpect thereof, and alſo upon paying a Reaſonable Fine, to be made free: And they have endeavoured to prove this Right, Firſt, by producing an old Book, called the Cuſtomal, as an Evidence of this Right: But it is a ſuſpicious Authority; it has no Date; and that, they ſay, is an Evidence of its Antiquity, but without any Foundation from the Book: There are ſeveral Entries entered prior to it; it is not paged regularly; it is in the Middle of the Book, and yet it is marked Fol. 1. And if we look into the Thing itſelf, it tells us there are three Ways of making free, viz. by Birth, if born within the Town, and after the Swearing and Admiſſion of the Father; by the Purchaſe of a Freehold; and by Redemption.

My Lord, they have ſhewn ſome Inſtances of the firſt; but as to the ſecond, they have ſhewn no Purchaſer of a Freehold that ever was made free; and we ſhall prove many Perſons living in the Town that have Freeholds, that never were made free.

The next Evidence they have given is from the Entries of Sons, who have been made free as Sons of Freemen; and this they would have us take as a Proof of the Cuſtom, of a Right in the eldeſt Son, born after the Freedom of the Father, to be made free: For they ſay, it is in Reſpect thereof; that he muſt be the Son of a Freeman, and born after his Father was made free. And all the Inſtances they have produced of this amount to no more, than that ſuch a one was admitted, being the eldeſt Son of a Freeman, not becauſe he was an eldeſt Son, and born after his Father was made free.

My Lord, they have produced Copies taken out of the Regiſter-Books in Haſtings, by which it appears, when theſe Sons were baptized: But it is not given as a Reaſon in any of theſe Entries, that he was admitted into the Freedom, becauſe he was born there; though, in Fact, it might be ſo, and that is the Right they contend for.

My Lord, I ſubmit it to your Lordſhip, that, as to the Fine, nothing concluſive can be drawn from thence, that there is any Right in the Eldeſt Son of a Freeman. The Fine paid by him is 6*s.* 8*d.* quia pater ſuus liber eſt; that is the Reaſon. No; he is not admitted into the Freedom becauſe his Father was a Freeman; but he is admitted for 6*s.* 8*d.* not becauſe his Father was a Freeman. This therefore does not ſhew that he had a better Right than any body elſe: And none but the ſecond Inſtance they read, James Laſher, among all the Entries, was admitted upon any other Terms than his humble Petition and Prayer to be made free. He, indeed, inſtantly required the Freedom, and by the Conſent of all he was admitted. In all the other Inſtances it is ſaid, At his humble Requeſt and Deſire he is admitted: Nobody inſiſted on, or demanded this Right.

My Lord, as they have laid the Right, there is a further Qualification neceſſary, viz. on Payment of a reaſonable Fine: And I ſubmit it to your Lordſhip, that they have proved it a Fine certain; and that therefore nothing is left to the Mayor and Jurats in this Affair, but to admit the Perſon upon paying 6*s.* 8*d.* and claiming his Freedom.

But, my Lord, we ſay, a further Qualification is abſolutely neceſſary, and that is Reſidence: And this appears from an Entry in this very Cuſtomal they have produced. And, my Lord, Nobody is ever admitted, but on taking an Oath to obſerve the Statutes, Orders, and By-Laws of the Borough ubi commoratur; and therefore the Perſon admitted into the Freedom muſt be commorant in the Place of which he is free. And, my Lord, by a By-Law of the 12th of April, the 15th of Queen Elizabeth, they were not only to be commorant, but to continue to live there; and if any one admitted went and lived out of the Town a Year and a Day, he was to be excluded from any Privilege or Freedom within that Borough: And this By-Law has been conſtantly obſerved; and yet, my Lord, the Plaintiff Moore, they do not ſo much as pretend that he is reſident within this Borough. We contend not, whether the Sons of Freemen are intituled to Freedoms; but we ſay, that Freemen's Sons and Foreigners are in the ſame Right; they pray alike, if it ſeems fit, and ſo pleaſes the Mayor and Jurats: And the Mayor and Jurats have rejected the Sons of Freemen: And it is only a Compliment to the Sons of Freemen to pay 6*s.* 8*d.* and 13*s.* 4*d.* is paid if a Foreigner is admitted.

Gentlemen of the Jury, we ſhall lay our Evidence before you; and then we doubt not but you will be convinced, that the Right is the ſame to a Foreigner as to the Son of a Freeman, and therefore that you will find for the Defendants.

Lord Hardwicke. I own there are Difficulties upon the Point of a reaſonable Fine, and that of Commorancy. I have taken Reſidence in all the Ports to be eſſential.

Sir T. Abney. My Lord, we apprehend 6*s.* 8*d.* to be a reaſonable Fine, from the Reaſonableneſs of the Sum.

Lord Hardwicke. The Notion of Law is, Sir Thomas Abney, that there is an eſſential Difference between a Fine certain and a reaſonable Fine.

Sir T. Abney. My Lord, we can prove that different Sums have been paid upon the Admiſſion of Sons.

Mr. Strange. We have one Inſtance of a Son who paid twenty Shillings for a Fine.

Lord Hardwicke. Then as to the Point of Commorancy.

Mr. Marſh. My Lord, the Ports in general preclude no Member for Non-reſidence. I have known them vote for Mayor, that have not been reſiant.

Lord Hardwicke. In ſome of the Ports a Diſtinction is made between voting for Mayor and Members of Parliament.

Mr. Serj. Eyre. My Lord, they cannot ſhew, within ten Years, an Inſtance of one Son's paying more than 6*s.* 8*d.*

Lord Hardwicke. Go firſt to that Point of the Fine.

Mr. Att. Gen. We ſhall begin with our By-Law, where the Words ubi commoratur are.

Lord Hardwicke. One By-Law has been mentioned, that a Freeman of one of the Ports ſhall have a Right to be admitted in another; that is never uſed.

Henry Carlton ſworn.

Sir T. Abney. Was not you a Freeman? Are you not diſfranchiſed?

Carlton. Yes.

Sir T. Abney. Are you not promiſed to be reſtored?

Mr. Att. Gen. What Book is that?

Carlton. One of the Corporation Books of Haſtings.

Mr. Att. Gen. Where had you it?

Carlton. It came from the Town-Clerk's Office.

Mr. Att. Gen. Read the By-Law of the 15th of Queen Elizabeth.

Aſſociate reads—

" Haſtings, ſſ. Electio Ballivi tent' die Dominica prox' poſt, &c. 12° die
" menſis Aprilis, anno regni Reginæ Elizæ 15°, Elect' Major' pro hoc
" anno.

" It is decreed, That, if any Freeman, now or at any Time hereafter
" an Inhabitant of this Town, ſhall depart or dwell out of the Town, by
" one Year and one Day, he or they, ſo dwelling out of the Town, ſhall
" loſe his or their Freedom."

Mr. Att. Gen. How old are you, Mr. Carlton?

Carlton. I am eighty Years old.

Mr. Att. Gen. Where have you lived? Where was you born?

Carlton. I was born within a Mile of Haſtings. My Father came to live at Haſtings when I was about fifteen Years old; and ſince I have lived greateſt Part of my Time in Haſtings.

Mr. Att. Gen. Do you know what the Cuſtom is in Haſtings, as to the Admiſſion of Freemen?

Carlton. Yes; I was a Freeman myſelf, and have been at ſeveral Meetings of the Mayor and Jurats.

Mr. Att. Gen. Pray now, during your whole Time, did you ever know any one made free that was not reſident?

Carlton. No, never, except Honorary Freemen.

Mr. Att. Gen. Have they any Right to vote in your Borough at Elections?—Carlton. No.

Mr. Att Gen. But as to thoſe that are really free, did you ever know any, that were not Inhabitants, vote at Elections?—Carlton. No.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did you ever know any, that were not Inhabitants, demand it?—Carlton. No, nor I never knew it demanded.

Mr. Att. Gen. Is it not neceſſary, in order to be free, that they ſhould inhabit within the Town?

Carlton. I always thought ſo.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did you ever hear any thing to the contrary?

Carlton. No.

Mr. Serj. Skinner. You know no Inſtance, in your Time, of any Perſons made free, who were not reſident?

Carlton. No, none but Honorary Freemen, ſuch as Members of Parliament and Captains of Ships.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did they own that the eldeſt Sons had a Right?

Lord Hardwicke. Whether they had a Right to demand a Freedom, although they were not reſident?

Mr. Att. Gen. Have they a Right to demand it?

Carlton. No, Nobody that don't live there.

Mr. Lacy. Is there not a Roll of the Freemen, by which they call over their Names upon Elections?---Carlton. Yes.

Mr. Lacy. Are the Honorary Freemen called over with the others upon ſuch Occaſions?---Carlton. No.

Mr. Lacy. Does not a Freeman by Non-reſidence loſe his Freedom?

Carlton. Yes.

Mr. Lacy. Do you know any Inſtance?

Carlton. Yes, Jonathan Stevens.

Mr. Lacy. Was he a Freeman?---Carlton. Yes.

Mr. Lacy. Was he out of the Freedom a Year and a Day?

Carlton. Yes, and loſt his Freedom.

Mr. Lacy. Did you know one Milward?

Carlton. Yes, he was a Jurat.

Sir T. Abney I would aſk you, Sir, as to the eldeſt Son of a Freeman; has not he a Right?

Carlton. No, no Right, without the Favour of the Mayor and Jurats.

Lord

Lord Hardwicke. Examine him to the Point we are upon.

Mr. Attorney General. Can the Mayor and Jurats elect an eldest Son, if he is not resident?---Carlton. No.

Lord Hardw. You said, Mr. Carlton, you had known Persons not resident admitted?

Carlton. Yes, my Lord, Honorary Freemen.

Lord Hardw. Could not they as well admit the Son of a Freeman not resident?

Carlton. No, I never knew it in my Life.

Mr. Att. Gen. Could not a Son of a Freeman be made free, though not resident, as well as another?

Lord Hardw. Mr. Attorney, to support the Qualification of Residence, some Right must be set up.

Mr. Att. Gen. Honorary Freemen have no Right in Point of Law. The Universities give Degrees to Persons who are not Members; it is a Compliment, and they do not vote.

Mr. Strange. It is not worth their while to come down to vote.

Lord Hardw. Honorary Freemen vote at Elections.

Mr. Serj. Eyre. I submit it to your Lordship, that we are upon the Right, and therefore ought to examine to that.—I would ask you, Mr. Carlton, has any body non-resident a Right to be elected a Freeman?

Carlton. Nobody has any Right.

Mr. Strange. Did you ever know the eldest Son of a Freeman refused, because he was not resident?

Carlton. I never knew it asked.

Mr. Serj. Eyre. A Man who is free forfeits his Freedom by being out of the Borough; and yet you would have it that Persons non-resident have a Right.

Mr. Strange. That, Mr. Serjeant, is by your By-Law, not by a Custom.

Mr. Clarke. Do you know no Person, though non-resident, that voted?

Carlton. No.

Mr. Clarke. Do you know one Thomas Hatcher? Do not you remember his coming to vote, though he lived out of the Corporation?

Carlton. No.

Lord Hardw. That By-Law, will it take away a Right?

Mr. Serj. Eyre. We do not rely upon that, my Lord.

Robert Bartholomew sworn.

Mr. Serj. Skinner. How old are you, Mr. Bartholomew?

Bartholomew. I am eighty-two Years old.

Mr. Serj. Skinner. Where have you lived?

Barth. In Hastings, almost all my Time.

Mr. Serj. Skinner. Have you been there at their Meetings?

Barth. Yes.

Mr. Serj. Skinner. Did you ever know one admitted, not living in the Borough?———Barth. No.

Mr. Serj. Skinner. Has any Person a Right to be admitted a Freeman, that does not live there?

Barth. He that lives there, to be sure, has a Right.

Lord Hardw. Examine him to the Fact, what he has known.

Mr. Serj. Skinner. What Right has any body to be made free?

Barth. They are made free by the Mayor and Jurats.

Mr. Serj. Skinner. Did they live in the Town when they were made free?

Barth. I never knew any body made free, that lived out of the Town, in my Life except Honorary Freemen, and them we used to call Ablocates.

Mr. Serj. Skinner. Have you known no Persons non-resident, made free, to vote, or do a Corporate Act?---Barth. No, none.

Sir T. Abney. Who has a Right to be made free of your Town?

Barth. Any body the Mayor and Jurats please.

Mr. Strange. Have not you sometimes taken it into your Head to fancy the eldest Son of a Freeman has a Right?

Barth. No, I never had such Thoughts.

Mr. Strange. Did not you say so?———Barth. No.

Mr. Strange. Have not you said so to Robert Evernden?---Barth. No.

Mr. Strange. Nor to Mr. Broadway?———Barth. No.

Mr. Strange. Did you never say so in their Hearing?—Barth. No.

Mr. Strange. Nor to Mr. Dodson?———Barth. No.

Mr. Strange. They are in Town.

Barth. I know they are; I see them.

Mr. Strange. Have not you declared to them, that the eldest Son of a Freeman has a Right?

Barth. Never since I was born.—I have heard my Father say, a Man could not be made free, that would not swear himself worth 100 l.

Mr. Strange. Why do you take more Money of other People than of Freemen's Sons?

Lord Hardw. It is inconsistent to say there is no such thing as a Right, and yet Commorancy is necessary, and Honorary Freemen are admitted, though no Person of Right can demand his Freedom: But to say they are all at the Pleasure of the Mayor and Jurats, and yet Residence is necessary, is a Contradiction.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, they cannot be admitted if they have a Right, if they have not that of Residence.

Lord Hardw. If you put it in that Way, you must go into the Custom. Go on your own Way.

Mr. Serj. Eyre. The Gentlemen of the other Side, my Lord, are not able to shew a Freeman's eldest Son admitted for any other Fine than 6 s. 8 d.

Sir T. Abney. Yes, we can produce the Book; it will shew its Antiquity; it is scarce able to be read.—Read the Entry of John Hall, admitted for a Fine of twenty Shillings.

Lord Hardw. Don't go into the Reply, before they are gone through the Defence.

Mr. Att. Gen. What Book is that?

Mr. Cranston. One of the Corporation-Books.

Mr. Att. Gen. You had it from the Town-Clerk, from among the Records of the Town?———Mr. Cranston. Yes.

Mr. Marsh. What Book is that, Mr. Attorney?

Mr. Att. Gen. It is the Custom of Hastings; that is a Translation.

Mr. Marsh. What Language is it in?

Mr. Att. Gen. It is in old French.

Mr. Strange. That bound up with ours is a Translation, and that you say is the Original.

Mr. Att. Gen. I believe so.

Mr. Strange. (Looks upon it.) This Custom is false.

Mr. Att. Gen. It is a Translation, and may be wrong translated.

Mr. Strange. We'll see that.

Mr. Att. Gen. Read it.

Mr. Holmes reads--- (The Copy in old French.)

" The Usage of Hastings Time out of Mind———

" Die Maii, anno 30° Elizæ -----

Mr. Att. Gen. Read that relating to the making of a Freeman.

Mr. Holmes reads -----

" If a Foreigner resides in Hastings for a Year and a Day, he may come " before the Bailiff and Jurats, and be admitted to the Freedom upon " taking an Oath."

Mr. Att. Gen. In order to be admitted a Freeman, he is to stay a Year and a Day.

Mr. Serj. Eyre. Have you looked over that Book, Mr. Holmes?

Mr. Holmes. Yes.

Mr. Serj. Eyre. In order to be a Freeman, he is to come and reside a Year and Day; and if he be of a good Conversation, then he is to be admitted.

Mr. Serj. Eyre. Is there any other Custom in that Book relating to making of Freemen?---Mr. Holmes. No.

Mr. Serj. Eyre. Read the Entry of the 36th Edw. III:

Associate reads ----

" Memorandum, quod in pleno hundredo tent' apud Hastings, viz. die Do- " minica prox' ante festum Annunt' beatæ Mariæ, anno regni Regis Edwardi " III^tii à Conq' 36^to, coram Ball' et tot' Communitat', Willielmus de Beurn, et " Johannes fil' ejus, recep' sunt ad libertat' de Hastings, et dederunt commu- " nitat' unam pipam vini, de quo satisfec'."

Lord Hardw. That is the Admission of particular Persons. Is there any Fine in that Admission?

Mr. Serj. Eyre. A Pipe of Wine, my Lord.

Mr. Att. Gen. We shall shew, my Lord, a concurrent Proof of 6*s.* 8*d.* paid as a Fine certain.

Lord Hardw. Can you shew any Admissions of Persons who were eldest Sons, without paying any Fine at all?

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, it is improper to call such an one an eldest Son, if the Father had no other Son.

Lord Hardw. There two Persons were admitted; but in that Entry neither is mentioned to be the Son of a Freeman.

Mr. Att. Gen. It is for a Pipe of Wine; that, my Lord, is one of the Rights they admit upon.---Read the Admission of William Cobden, fol. 147. He was admitted the 7th of May, the 7th of James the First.

Associate reads -----

" Hastings, ff. Ad assemblat' tent' ibidem 7° die Maii, 7° Jacobi Regis " primi, Gulielmus Cobden admissus est ad libertatem hujus villæ, et sacramen- " tum suum more solito præstitit, et osculatus est malam dextram Majoris se- " cundum usum, pro fine suo; quia filius liberi hominis."

Lord Hardw. The Custom of the Five Ports does not fix what the Fine shall be.

Mr. Strange. My Lord, proving that all the Sons are admitted, is proving that the eldest Son is admitted.

Lord Hardw. You have laid it in Respect thereof, which you need not have done. I cannot imagine why it was laid so, in Respect thereof.

Mr. Serj. Eyre. Turn to fol. 147. Read the Admission of John Sand, the 14th of July, the 8th of James the First.

Associate reads -----

" Hastings, ff. 14° Julii, 8° Jac. I^mi, in plena Curia venit Johannes " Sand, et petit libertatem hujus villæ, et admissus est ad libertatem, quia " pater suus liber erat, et sol' 6 s. 8 d. et fecit inde sacramentum, et osculavit " malam dextram Majoris more solito."

Mr. Strange. We may admit many of these Entries, Mr. Attorney, if you will tell us for what Purpose you read your Entries over again.

Mr. Att. Gen. These were admitted as Sons of Freemen. We read them, to shew a different Custom from what you have laid.———Read Nathaniel Lasher the Son. He was admitted, quia filius liberi hominis. Turn to fol. 175.

Associate reads ----

" Hastings, ff. 1613, 11° Jac. I^mi, 26 Martii, hoc anno, came Nathaniel " Lasher, Son of James Lasher, Jurat, before Mr. Mayor and his Bre- " thren, and prayed to be admitted to the Liberty and Freedom of " this Town; and was admitted, sworn, kissed the right Cheek of Mr. " Mayor, more solito, pro fine 6 s. 8 d. quia filius liberi hominis, &c."

Mr. Att. Gen. Turn to fol. 179. Read John Isted.

Associate reads ——

" Hastings, ff. 1614. Decimo quarto die hoc anno, came John Isted, " and craved to be admitted to the Liberty and Freedom of this Town; " And by Mr. Mayor and his Brethren was admitted, and sworn, and " kissed the right Cheek of Mr. Mayor, more solito, pro fine 6 s. 8 d. " duntaxat, quia filius est liberi hominis hujus villæ."

Lord Hardw. What Men do you admit there?

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, we admit Men as the Sons of Freemen, and that pay 6 s. 8 d.——Now read the Entry of the 31st of March, 1638, of the Admission of James Batcher, jun.

Mr. Serj. Eyre. James Batcher, jun. Son of his Father.

Mr. Strange. That is just the same as you read before.

Mr. Serj. Skinner. Read William Lovell.

Sir T. Abney. We read that.

Associate reads ——

" Hastings, ff. 31 March, 1638, 14 Car. I^mi. At this Court, James " Batcher, jun. Son of his Father, a Freeman, is now made also free, " for his Fine of 6 s. 8 d. took his Oath, and kissed the Mayor's right " Cheek, more solito, &c."

Mr. Serj. Skinner. I believe we must trouble the Doctor once more.

Mr. Att. Gen. Mr. Carlton, you told me you had lived all your Time in Haſtings, except about fourteen Years; you ſay you have been at their Elections; Pray, who has the Right to be elected a Freeman of this Borough during your Time?

Carlton. Thoſe whom the Mayor and Jurats pleaſe.

Mr. Att. Gen. Has not the eldeſt Son of a Freeman a Right to be admitted?——Carlton. No; if there had been ſuch a Cuſtom, it would never have been denied.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did you ever know any body, that was an eldeſt Son, inſiſt on this Right?

Carlton. Yes; one Evernden inſiſted on it, and was refuſed.

Mr. Att. Gen. How long is that ago?

Carlton. It was before I was a Freeman, about thirty-five Years ago.

Mr. Att. Gen. So you ſay Evernden demanded his Freedom, and was denied; Do you know this of your own Knowledge?

Carlton. I have heard it, but do not know it.

Mr. Att. Gen. Who have you heard it ſpoke by? Are the Perſons dead or living?

Carlton. I have heard it by ſome Perſons living.

Mr. Att. Gen. Was it the general Reputation in the Town, that this Evernden had no Right?——Carlton. Yes; he was looked on as an impudent Fellow, for coming and demanding it.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did you ever know any body admitted upon this Right?

Carlton. No.

Mr. Att. Gen. How long have you been a Jurat?

Carlton. Ever ſince the Year 1701.

Mr. Att. Gen. That is thirty-five Years ago. Did ever any body before this Evernden come and demand to be admitted as an eldeſt Son?

Carlton. I do not know any one.

Mr. Serj. Parker. Suppoſe the eldeſt Son of a Freeman apply to the Mayor and Jurats to be admitted, and they think fit to admit him; How do the Corporation proceed on that Occaſion?

Carlton. They apply to the Mayor and Jurats ſeparately at their Houſes, and aſk that Favour of them; and if they conſent, then they come to the Court-Hall, and aſk it of them again.

Mr. Serj. Parker. What follows upon that?

Carlton. Then the Mayor aſks the Gentlemen, if they conſent, and are ſatisfied, and whether they are willing the Perſon ſhould be made free; and then they put it to the Vote.

Mr. Serj. Parker. Do they make any Diſtinction between the eldeſt and youngeſt Sons?

Carlton. No; the Majority determines whether the Man ſhall be made free or no.

Mr. Serj. Eyre. If any other Perſon applies to be made free who is not a Son, what Steps do they take then?——Carlton. Juſt the ſame.

Mr. Serj. Eyre. You are the eldeſt Son of a Freeman, are you?

Carlton. Yes; but not born within the Town.

Sir T. Abney. Mr. Carlton, did you know John Geery?

Carlton. Yes.

Sir T. Abney. Was not he admitted to the Freedom in your Time?

Carlton. Yes.

Sir T. Abney. Was not he the eldeſt Son of a Freeman?

Carlton. Yes.

Sir T. Abney. Did you know John Oliver, John Chambers, Benjamin Stevens, Philip Stevenſon, William Shorter, and Jacob Fantley?

Carlton. Yes.

Sir T. Abney. Have not all theſe Perſons been admitted in your Time, as eldeſt Sons?

Carlton. Not becauſe they were eldeſt Sons, but becauſe the Mayor and Jurats thought fit to admit them.

Sir T. Abney. You ſaid you did not know, but you believed Evernden was refuſed; Pray, do you believe or fancy any other Perſon, who was an eldeſt Son, was ever refuſed?

Mr. Strange. Do you remember Boykett the Diſſenter, that applied to be admitted to his Freedom?——Carlton. No.

Mr. Strange. Do you know no Inquiry made by the Town-Clerk, whether he was the Son of a Freeman, or not?——Carlton. No.

Mr. Strange. And upon admitting Freemen, you ſay, that is the only Queſtion put by the Mayor, Gentlemen, are you ſatisfied? and if any objects, he puts it to the Vote?——Carlton. Yes.

Mr. Marſh. Do you remember Thomas Lovell?

Carlton. Yes; he was Mayor ſeveral Times.

Mr. Marſh. Do you remember Mr. Waller, the Town-Clerk?

Carlton. Yes.

Mr. Marſh. How long is it ſince he was Town-Clerk?

Carlton. Since I was upon the Bench.

Mr. Clarke. Do you remember nothing of Boykett?—Carlton. No.

Mr. Clarke. Nothing of his being refuſed?——Carlton. No.

Mr. Clarke. Call Robert Bartholomew again.—(He not appearing,)

Mark Bayley ſworn.

Mr. Marſh. Are you a Freeman?

Bayley. I was one, and am diſfranchiſed.

Mr. Serj. Skinner. How long have you known Haſtings?

Bayley. Ever ſince I was born.

Mr. Serj. Parker. How old are you?

Bayley. I am ſeventy-ſix Years old.

Mr. Att. Gen. How long have you lived there?

Bayley. I have lived there all my Time.

Mr. Serj. Skinner. You have been a Jurat there, have not you?

Bayley. Yes, ſix or ſeven Years.

Mr. Att. Gen. How do you make Freemen?

Bayley. You muſt apply to the Mayor and Jurats, and deſire that they would pleaſe to let you be made free.

Mr. Serj. Skinner. Suppoſe I was the eldeſt Son of a Freeman, might I come and demand to be free?

Bayley. No; there is no ſuch Thing as demanding it without the Conſent of the Mayor and Jurats.

Mr. Serj. Parker. When you come before the Mayor and Jurats, does the Mayor put the Queſtion, whether the Perſon ſhall be admitted, or no?——Bayley. He ſays, that ſuch a Man deſires to be made free, if you think fit of it.

Mr. Serj. Parker. The eldeſt Son can demand it if he thinks fit, cannot he?——Bayley. No, no; we have nothing at all of an eldeſt Son.

Sir T. Abney. Are not you the eldeſt Son of a Freeman?—Bayley. No.

Sir T. Abney. How long have you been a Jurat?

Bayley. Six or ſeven Years.

Sir T. Abney. How long have you been a Freeman?

Bayley. Forty-eight Years clear.

Sir T. Abney. What Profeſſion are you of?—Bayley. I am a Seaman.

Sir T. Abney. Pray, Mr. Bayley, was you always reſident in the Borough? Did you live there all your Life?——Bayley. Yes.

Sir T. Abney. What, when you was at Sea?

Bayley. No, but at all Times when I was not at Sea.

Thomas Caſwell ſworn.

Mr. Serj. Eyre. How long have you known Haſtings?

Caſwell. I was born there, and have lived there almoſt all my Time.

Mr. Serj. Eyre. Have not you been a Freeman and a Jurat?

Caſwell. Yes.

Mr. Serj. Eyre. Are not you diſfranchiſed?

Caſwell. Yes, I am now diſfranchiſed.

Mr. Serj. Eyre. When was you made a Freeman?—Caſwell. In 1717.

Mr. Serj. Eyre. When a Jurat?——Caſwell. In 1726.

Mr. Serj. Eyre. Pray, Mr. Caſwell, how do they make free?

Caſwell. When I was made free, I aſked the Mayor and Jurats, altho' I was the eldeſt Son of a Freeman.

Mr. Serj. Eyre. Acquaint my Lord and the Jury, what happened on your applying to be made free.

Caſwell. I applied in 1717 to the Mayor and Jurats for their Good-will to make me free.

Mr. Serj. Eyre. Is there any Difference between an eldeſt Son and another in making free?

Caſwell. No Difference at all, but that one pays half the Fine, and the other the whole; but the Conſent of the Mayor and Jurats is the ſame.

Mr. Serj. Eyre. As to Non-Reſidence, do they ever make any Perſons free, who are not reſident within the Borough?

Caſwell. They never make any Free, but ſuch as are reſident.

Mr. Serj. Eyre. Has any Perſon a Right to be made free, or is it in the Pleaſure of the Corporation?

Caſwell. It is entirely in the Pleaſure of the Mayor and Jurats.

Mr. Serj. Eyre. A Man, by purchaſing a Freehold, has he any Right?

Caſwell. No.

Mr. Att. Gen. Is he free of the other four Cinque Ports?—Caſwell. No.

Mr. Strange. Where was you born?

Caſwell. At Haſtings. My Father was a Freeman when I was born, and many Years before. That is my Father's Copy. (Producing it.)

Mr. Strange. Did you take up your Freedom by that Copy?

Caſwell. I wiſh I could; I ſhould have had it ſooner.

Mr. Strange. How old was you when you was made free?

Caſwell. I was twenty-ſix Years old.

Mr. Strange. Did you ever know an eldeſt Son of a Freeman denied?

Caſwell. No; but it is in the Breaſts of the Mayor and Jurats, whether he ſhall be free or no.

Mr. Strange. Was your Father the Son of a Freeman?

Caſwell. I cannot tell.

Mr. Strange. How comes it upon your Father's Admiſſion to be marked the Day he was born?

Caſwell. It is the Time I was born.

Mr. Strange. How came it there?

Caſwell. I wrote it from a Bible where my Father had entered it.

Mr. Strange. For what Purpoſe?——Caſwell. I wrote it down now, upon this Summons, to ſhew how old I was.

Mr. Clarke. What is the Difference between the Fine paid by Freemen's Sons, when you was admitted, and now?

Caſwell. When I was admitted it was 6 s. 8 d. and now it is 20 s.

Mr. Clarke. How long has it been 20 s.?

Caſwell. Twelve or fourteen Years.

Mr. Strange. If the Mayor inſiſts upon 10 s. you pay it?

Caſwell. The Uſage is 6 s. 8 d.

Mr. Strange. But he might refuſe it now?

Caſwell. I do not know.

Mr. Strange. Suppoſe he had aſked ten Guineas?

Caſwell. You aſk fooliſh Queſtions.

Mr. Strange. It is not your Buſineſs to tell me ſo.

Caſwell. You do it to aggravate your Cauſe.

Mr. Strange. I aſk you, Is it not a Cuſtom for the eldeſt Son to be admitted, upon paying ſuch reaſonable Fine as the Mayor ſhall think fit?

Caſwell. No; all the Cuſtom is, that 6 s. 8 d. is paid by Sons, and 13 s. 4 d. by others; and now the Diſtinction is 20 s.

Mr. Strange. Do you know any Inſtance of Perſons admitted for a Fine of 20 s.?

Caſwell. I know but of one Inſtance.

Mr. Strange. So you take it, no Perſon has a Right to be made free?

Caſwell. Not without the Conſent of the Mayor and Jurats.

William Bourne ſworn.

Mr. Serj. Parker. Do you know Haſtings?

Bourne. Yes.

Mr. Serj. Parker. How long have you known it?

Bourne. Fifty-eight Years.

Mr. Serj. Parker. What Method muſt a Man take to be admitted a Freeman of Haſtings?

Bourne. The Way is to get the Good-will and Liberty of the Mayor and Jurats.

Mr. Serj. Parker. Suppoſing an eldeſt Son applies to be made free, does he apply to the Mayor and Jurats in the ſame Manner as another?

Bourne.

Bourne. Yes, he must make the same Application.

Mr. Attorney General. Has he any Right, without the Leave of the Mayor and Jurats?

Bourne. None that I know of.

Mr. Att. Gen. Was you the eldest Son of a Freeman?

Bourne. Yes, I was.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did you demand it as a Right?

Bourne. I demanded it as a Favour.

Mr. Att. Gen. Had you any Right, in case the Mayor and Jurats had refused you?——Bourne. No.

Mr. Serj. Eyre. Are the Freeholders within the Borough made free?

Bourne. No.

Lord Hardwicke. Suppose a Man has an Estate, and lives in the Town.

Bourne. It is all one, my Lord.

Lord Hardw. Did you ever know one of them admitted?

Bourne. No.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did they admit you immediately on your Application? or was there any Dispute, whether you should be admitted or no?

Bourne. Yes; it was two or three Court-Days before they admitted me; I believe, in all, about six Weeks.

Lord Hardw. When was you admitted?

Bourne. In 1701, my Lord.

Mr. Serj. Skinner. So it was six Weeks you was asking this Favour?

Bourne. Thereabouts.

Mr. Serj. Skinner. You went to their Houses, to ask leave that you might be free?——Bourne. Yes.

Mr. Serj. Skinner. Is it the Custom for any Persons that are non-resident to be made free?——Bourne. No.

Mr. Serj. Skinner. Did you ever know the eldest Son of a Freeman refused?

Bourne. No.

Mr. Serj. Skinner. Nor any others?——Bourne. Yes, some.

Mr. Serj. Skinner. Did you ever know any demand it as eldest Sons?

Bourne. I cannot say.

Mr. Strange. Do not you expect to be made free again?

Mr. Att. Gen. He expects to be a Freeman before your Client.

Lord Hardw. Was you ever a Jurat?——Bourne. No.

Lord Hardw. Or a Common-Council-Man?——Bourne. No.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, we rest it here.

Sir T. Abney. My Lord, I beg Leave to trouble your Lordship with a Word by way of Reply: And, notwithstanding what has been offered by the Gentlemen of the other Side, I agree, that, upon the Mandamus, we have laid down four Things as necessary Qualifications for claiming a Freedom in this Borough:

1st, That he must be an eldest Son.

2dly, That he be born within the Borough.

3dly, It must be after the Admission and Swearing of his Father. And,

4thly, It must be upon paying a reasonable Fine.

And, my Lord, I humbly apprehend, that if they have proved that any other of the Sons, or that all the Sons, are intituled as well as an eldest Son, it will not at all affect our Custom: Or, if we prove our Custom larger than we have laid it, that it will not at all impeach our Custom or Claim as an eldest Son.

My Lord, a Man lays a Custom, that he has a Right of Common for Sheep, and proves the Right to be for Horses, Cows, and Sheep too; ... shall not impeach his Custom.

And therefore, if any Evidence has been given to your Lordship and the Jury, that all the Sons of a Freeman are intituled to their Freedoms, then, my Lord, à fortiori, the eldest Son is intituled.

Lord Hardw. It is laid in Respect thereof, Sir Thomas Abney.

Sir T. Abney. My Lord, I humbly apprehend, those Words relate to the Act of the Father. It is, "Every Person, being the eldest Son of a "Freeman, and born within the said Town and Port, after the Admission "and Swearing of his Father into the Place and Office of one of the "Freemen of the said Town and Port, has a Right, in Respect thereof."

My Lord, that, in common Understanding, cannot be in Respect of his being born an eldest Son, but in Respect of his Father's being sworn and admitted a Freeman at the Time of his Birth.

Lord Hardw. Has a Right in Respect of his being born after his Father's Admission and Swearing.

Sir T. Abney. And, my Lord, the Customal, to make out that Fact, says, "Uno modo, per Nativitatem infra libertatem suam, si pater suus, "tempore nativitatis suæ, fuit liber:" If the Father was a Freeman at the Time of the Son's Birth, then he is to be made free.

My Lord, we have supported this Custom in the strongest Manner, by forty Entries, by a great Number of living Witnesses, and by their own Witnesses, Customal, and Entries too; insomuch that one Robert Evernden is the only Person they have been able to shew that was ever refused.

My Lord, we have gone so far back as the Year 1588 with our Entries, which, we humbly apprehend, is a very strong Proof of an ancient Custom; we have brought it down to within twenty Years of the present Time; and, in all that Space, they have not been able to shew one Instance of an eldest Son that was ever refused; and the Entries are equally full, and have shewn in the clearest Manner, that the eldest Son of a Freeman, born within the Borough, and after the Swearing and Admission of his Father, was always admitted.

My Lord, as to what Mr. Attorney says, that the Rules laid down in the Customal as to the making of Freemen, that these are Qualifications rather than Rights, and that we have not stated our Custom properly, and are gone on account of the Commorancy; my Lord, I do admit, that if the Witnesses had come up to that Point of Commorancy, we must have given it up.

But, my Lord, I must beg Leave to insist, that, although Mr. Attorney has bestowed so much Learning and Time upon the Words ubi commoratur, to shew that Residence arises from the Customal, and from this Article, which we have laid down as the Foundation of our Right; and that the Person admitted is to take an Oath to be true and faithful to the Borough where he dwells; yet, my Lord, the Words Possunt Majores et Jurati, &c. not only imply a Right, but they bespeak a Qualification: And, my Lord, we have fully shewn them to be Rights that were never contested.

My Lord, another Objection that has been made by the Gentlemen of the other Side, is, that, as we have laid it, it is necessary a reasonable Fine should be paid upon the Admission of every eldest Son; and that we have given Evidence only of a Fine of 6*s.* 8*d.* and that we should have given Evidence of different Fines paid, in order to take in the Custom as we have laid it. But, my Lord, I submit it to your Lordship and the Jury, whether the Sum required is unreasonable or no? Is this so? Can it be thought so? If on a Special Verdict it were to be found, that every Man had a Right upon paying 6*s.* 8*d.* I humbly apprehend, the Quantity of the Sum must shew that it is a reasonable Fine.

My Lord, as to the By-Law they have read, That, if any Freeman depart out of the Town for a Year and a Day, he loses his Freedom; with great Submission to your Lordship, I apprehend it is not at all applicable to the present Case. It does not say one Word of what is necessary in order to a Man's being elected a Freeman. We say, that in order to be admitted a Freeman, a Man must be an eldest Son, born within the Borough after his Father's Freedom: But they do not read one Word out of this By-Law, that no Man shall be elected a Freeman, unless he be resident; but it says, that, if any Freeman go and dwell out of the Town for a Year and a Day, he shall for ever lose his Freedom.

And as to their living Witnesses, they, I humbly apprehend, will have little Weight with your Lordship and the Jury. They are not so free as ours; they are Men disfranchised to serve a particular Purpose. It is true, they are legal Witnesses; but it will go to their Credit, and the Jury will think they are under a Bias, and that they are to be made free again, and therefore are prejudiced, and are determined to keep the Borough in the same narrow Hands they now have it. They have all said, that none but the Mayor and Jurats can give a Right; and that, if I was to be let into the Freedom To-morrow, (as Mr. Attorney told you) there is no Right but at the Will and Pleasure of the Mayor and Jurats only. With respect to one of the Jurats, and his own Right, Robert Bartholomew, it will have Weight with the Jury, that he is disfranchised; but much greater, to prove him perjured, which we shall do by three Witnesses of undoubted Credit, whom we shall call to contradict all this Talk that he tells you, that there is no such Thing as a Right but at the Will and Pleasure of the Mayor and Jurats.

Gentlemen, we have no other Evidence to trouble you with, but to contradict Bartholomew; and then, Gentlemen, we shall leave it upon the Strength of the Case; and we make no Doubt, but you will be of Opinion, that the Plaintiff has an undoubted Right, and therefore will find a Verdict for him.

Mr. Broadway sworn.

Mr. Strange. Pray, Mr. Broadway, do you know Robert Bartholomew?

Mr. Broadway. Yes.

Mr. Strange. Had you any Discourse with him about the Right of Freemen's eldest Sons?

Mr. Broadway. Yes; I was in Company with him about two Years ago, at the Sign of the Blue Anchor in Hastings; he then told me, that the eldest Sons of Freemen had a Right to be admitted to their Freedoms.

Mr. Strange. Did he say any thing, that they must come cap-in-hand to the Mayor and Jurats, and beg the Favour that they would please to admit them?

Mr. Broadway. No, nothing at all of that.

Mr. Strange. Did he say any thing further about the Right of eldest Sons?

Mr. Broadway. He said, he could remember the Time particularly well, when they were admitted without any Dispute.

Mr. Serj. Parker. Mr. Bartholomew, is that true? Was you at the Blue Anchor in Hastings with Mr. Broadway?

Bartholomew. No, there is no such Sign in Hastings.

Sir T. Abney. You must call John Sargent.

Mr. Att. Gen. Mr. Broadway says, you told him, that you remembered the Time particularly well, when the eldest Sons were admitted without any Dispute.---Barth. I never told him so.

(Here a Person who was upon the Pannel whispered to one of the Jurymen.)

Mr. Serj. Skinner. You must not talk to the Jury: Are you a Hastings Man?

——— No.

Juryman. He is upon the Pannel.

Mr. Serj. Skinner. Did he say any thing to you about this Cause?

Juryman. No.

Mr. Att. Gen. Mr. Bartholomew, do you remember that you said so, or no?

Barth. Last Summer I was there with Dodson; but I never heard any such Thing mentioned.

Mr. Marsh. How came you to tell them, they wanted to pry into the Corporation-Secrets?

Sir T. Abney. Did not you tell him you was admitted upon that Right?

Barth. No.

Sir T. Abney. Who is that Person?

Barth. The Minister of the Parish.

Mr. Serj. Skinner. So he came to pump you?

Mr. Marsh. He knows he told them so.

Henry Dodson sworn.

Mr. Marsh. Mr. Dodson, was you at Sargent's with Robert Bartholomew?---Dodson. Yes, about two Years since.

Mr. Marsh. Was Mr. Broadway, the Minister of the Parish, there?

Dodson. Yes, he was in Company with Bartholomew and me.

Mr. Marsh. Pray, what was the Conversation in relation to the Right of Freemen?

Dodson. I met with Mr. Bartholomew and Mr. Broadway at Sargent's. I told him, the Reason of our Meeting was to inquire of him what was the Right of Freemen's Sons. He said, That the eldest Sons of Freemen had an undoubted Right to claim their Freedoms; and he said, that formerly he had been requested to take up his Freedom, but that he had refused it, because in War-Time the Freemen were burthened burthened with Taxes, watching and working Night and Day; but that afterwards he had thought proper to accept of it, and was admitted for a Bottle of Wine. He said, he applied to the Mayor and Jurats, and was admitted.

Mr. Marsh. Did you say any Thing more to him?

Dodson. He told me this; but I said nothing to him, but took a Memorandum in Writing of it.

Mr. Marsh. Did he tell you any Thing more of the Right?

Dodson. He said, he looked upon the Sons of Freemen to have a Right.

Lord Hardwicke. Was this at the Time Broadway was with you?

Dodson. Yes.

Mr. Marsh. Was Bartholomew sober?

Dodson. Yes; it was in the Morning; he had drank nothing but one Glass of Wine.

Mr. Serj. Skinner. Did the Parson go with you to find out Evidence? You was the Attorney; Did the Parson go as another Agent to find out more Evidence?

Mark Whales sworn.

Mr. Strange. Mr. Whales, do you know that old Gentleman?

Whales. Yes.

Mr. Strange. Have you heard him make any Declaration concerning the Right of an eldest Son to be free?

Whales. About nineteen Years ago, he said that the Sons of Freemen had a Right.

Mr. Strange. Did you never hear him talk about an eldest Son?

Whales. I do not remember.

Lord Hardwicke. That Variance of the Fine, I wish you would apply yourself to that Point, Mr. Strange. The Admission seems to have been upon a certain Fine, 6*s.* 8*d.*

Mr. Strange. May it please your Lordship, and you Gentlemen of the Jury; you have heard a very long Evidence; and as the Gentlemen of the other Side have been pretty minute in their Objections, it will be proper for me as shortly as I can to reply to them.

And, my Lord, the chief Thing the Defendants contend for is, that there is no such Thing as a Right to a Freedom in this Borough; and that, though the electing Members to represent them in Parliament be one of the principal Privileges of every Freeman, yet that there is no Person whatsoever has a Right to come and claim the Consuetudo Regni; but the Mayor and Jurats may at their Pleasure chuse Members to represent this Borough in Parliament, and confine the Election in their own Hands, and may chuse them when, and in what Manner, and what Persons they please.

But, my Lord, to support this Right, they should have laid their Finger upon something that would have intituled them to this Right; and yet they have shewn no Circumstance upon the Face of the Earth that can possibly intitle them to it.

My Lord, there is no Corporation in England, but where if a Man serves an Apprenticeship, he has, by that Apprenticeship, a Right to his Freedom, and the Sons of Freemen have a Right to come and demand their Freedom. But here, my Lord, according to their Account of the Matter, in no Shape or Sort you can ever acquire a Right: A most extraordinary Privilege indeed! And, my Lord, I would beg Leave to make this Observation, that, as they began with attacking what Sir Thomas Abney set out with, the ancient Customal; so it appears, they have treated it in a ludicrous Manner, and with no Regard at all. They tell us, it is bound up with a great many miscellaneous Papers of no Use, and therefore it can have no Authority. And, my Lord, this Observation would have been material, if it had come out of our Custody; for then we should have shewn why it kept no better Company. But, as it comes out of their own Custody, can we oblige them to keep their own Book better than they have thought fit to keep it? Besides, my Lord, it goes equally to their own Book which they have produced; it is made up in the same miscellaneous Manner as ours is; and therefore this Objection is as strong against the Authority of their Book as ours.

But, my Lord, I submit it to your Lordship, that there is no Foundation at all to quarrel upon this Account.

Suppose it had been found loose, in no Company at all, and without any Cover; Is it the worse, if it had been loose, for being stitched? It rather argues it to be a Book of great Authority, and that this was done to preserve it; because, whilst it lay about loose, it was liable to Decay; and in order to preserve it, it was thought proper to bind it up.

My Lord, they say further, it would have been material, if it had been bound up with ancient Charters and Records of the Corporation: My Lord, I looked at it, and saw that the very Charters themselves are bound up with it.

My Lord, they tell us, this Customal, produced by them, has not at all left it clear, that the eldest Sons of Freemen have a Right; and they say, that whatever our Customal may prove, that our Entries, which have been read, are no Proof of any Right; they pray to be admitted, and therefore they have no Right.

But, my L[illegible], I beg Leave to observe, that it is not a Phrase that runs through all the Entries: In some of them, they are admitted upon their instantly requiring it; in others, it is secundum Consuetudinem.

But, my Lord, suppose it was so in all the Entries, it is the common Form of them, and of the Admission of all the Copyholders in England—

Lord Hardwicke. You need not labour that, Mr. Strange.

Mr. Strange. My Lord, they say there is a Circumstance of our Proof, which we have entirely failed in, and which they would prove for us, or that they shall help it out; and that is, that the Party is to be commorant within the Borough: And to prove this, they have read a By-Law, that says not one Word that he is to be commorant; but that, if a Man goes out of the Town for a Year and a Day, he shall lose his Freedom.

But, my Lord, I humbly apprehend, that a new By-Law, that appears before your Lordship and the Jury to have been made but a Year and Half, and contradicts an old Custom, is the strongest Evidence in the World, that it was the Custom till the By-Law was made.

To what Purpose else was the By-Law made? They had better have rested it upon the general Consent, than have introduced a new Bye-Law, which, upon the Face of it, appears to contradict an old Custom.

My Lord, Mr. Attorney, I think, was pleased to admit, that there must be a Customal; and that, taking this for Evidence of the Matters in Dispute, and so far as it is an Authority, it says, that the Comers in per Emptionem must have been commorant within the Borough a Year and a Day; and he says, the Reason of this is, that they should have some Knowledge of the Affairs of the Borough before they are made free of it.

But, my Lord, this Commorancy is not confined to the Comers in per Emptionem. The Words of the 39th Article are, "Et nullus fiat liber per "Emptionem, quousque in Portu vel Membro, ubi libertatem desiderat, per unum "annum et unam diem permansit, et si bene et honeste habuerit, &c." To what End should it be put, that a Man who comes into the Fredom per Emptionem should be resident a Year and a Day?——

Lord Hardwicke. It infers nothing one Way or other.

Mr. Strange. But one born out of the Town, and bred out of the Borough, it is not necessary for him to be resident, if the Mayor and Jurats please to admit him; and yet every one born in the Town, though he be the Son of a Freeman, must undergo the same Experiment by being resident.

My Lord, the 34th Article, as to the Words ubi commoratur, it is only a Part of the Oath every Freeman is to take upon his Admission, "That "he will be good and faithful to the King of England and his Heirs, and "that he will observe the Statutes of the Five Ports, and especially of "that Port where he resides." And it is not to be inferred from thence, that at the Time of his Admission he must be commorant, but that he will observe the Statutes of the Borough, and consult the Good of it.

My Lord, I do not apprehend, that, by the 38th Article, a Man, by being free of one Port, is intituled to his Freedom in all the other Ports. The Words are, "Et ipsi qui sunt in omnibus et singulis formis prædictis "facti liberi in aliquo Portu sive Membro, habeant libertatem consuetam in "omnibus aliis Portibus:" i. e. As a Member of one of the Ports, he shall have the general Liberty belonging to them, but not that he shall be a Member of all the Five Ports.

My Lord, as to the Words in respect thereof, they insist, that as we have laid it, they exclude all Persons from being intituled to any Freedom, but the eldest Sons of Freemen.

But I submit it to your Lordship, that as in the Mandamus other Circumstances are afterwards mentioned, that those Words in Respect thereof, are to be referred to the last antecedent Words, to the Freeman's being born withing the Liberty, and after the Admission and Swearing of his Father: And unless something be brought to make it improper to refer it to them, I submit it to your Lordship, whether it would in a Right have the Consequence they contend for.

My Lord, the Mandamus says, that the eldest Son is intituled; but this is not an Exclusion of the other Sons: For, if all my Sons are intituled to their Freedoms, then my eldest Son most certainly is.

If it had been a Question, whether all the Sons of a Freeman were intituled? and upon the Face of the Thing, the Man sets out only that he was the eldest Son, he would not enlarge the Custom; because it would have required more Proof: But, if he had been the youngest Son, he must have said that all the Sons are intituled, and there must have been an Averment, to make it square with our Case. They have not read above one Entry of the youngest Sons of Freemen. If we had laid it more confined, we might have failed upon the Proof: But as the Proof has come out, it would have been enough to have said he was filius of a Freeman.

My Lord, I have but one Thing more to trouble your Lordship with: The Gentlemen of the other Side insist, that a previous Application to the Mayor and Jurats is necessary in order to a Man's being made free; and they infer from thence, that it is not right, but mere Favour in the Mayor and Jurats. Even where a Man has the most indisputable Right in the World, by Servitude, he must produce and prove his Indentures, and his Master certifies that he has served an Apprenticeship faithfully; yet even in this Case, according to them, the Mayor says to the Jurats, Gentlemen, are you satisfied? and if they are, they admit him.

But, my Lord, it does not at all follow, that, because their Opinion is to be taken as to the Admission, that therefore they have a Right to refuse an Apprentice, who has by Servitude acquired a Right to his Freedom; but only whether they shall admit him as he states his Case.

My Lord, having troubled your Lordship so long, I will beg Leave only to say one Word more as to the Fine of 6*s.* 8*d.*

They object to us, That we have laid it as Part of the Custom, that the eldest Son is to be admitted on paying a reasonable Fine, and that it comes out to be a Fine certain. But I submit it to your Lordship, that 6*s.* 8*d.* is a reasonable Fine; the Sum is reasonable; and that the constant Payment of it upon every Admission is an Evidence what is a reasonable Fine: And I rely on those Instances we have read, that that is the reasonable Fine; and they are brought only to warrant that there is a reasonable Fine to be taken; and that therefore we are not wrong in saying, we have a Right upon paying a reasonable Fine. If we had laid it to have been upon a Fine certain, they would have objected it to us, and they would have shewn, that at one Time a Pipe of Wine was the Fine; and at another Time 20*s.* was the Fine; and therefore it would have been dangerous to have laid 6*s.* 8*d.* to be a certain Fine.

Lord Hardwicke. You have shewed no Evidence, Mr. Strange, that it has ever been varied.

Mr. Strange. They have taken 6*s.* 8*d.* always upon the Admission of Sons.

Lord Hardwicke. One of the Witnesses says, now the Fine as a Freeman's Son is 20*s.*

Mr. Strange. That, my Lord, is a reasonable Fine, and no certain Sum. That in a Church-Lease was a reasonable Fine at one Time, which is not so now; and the Corporation think that 20*s.* now, is not more than 6*s.* 8*d.* was formerly.

My Lord, we therefore submit it to your Lordship, upon the Circumstances of this Case, that we have fully proved our Issue; especially as they have not shewn who is intituled to a Freedom within this Borough.

Lord

Lord Hardwicke. It will be proper to consider, how much of this ought to be left to the Jury. Thus much is Fact, and that they must inquire of:

First, Whether it appears from the Evidence, that there is any Custom within the Borough, that the eldest Son of a Freeman, born after the Admission and Swearing of his Father, has a Right? I think the Words in Respect thereof are answered; the confining it in Respect thereof must refer to the two Qualifications, that of being born within the Borough, and after the Father's Freedom. I think it is no Objection, that they have proved the Right for all the Sons: For, as Sir Thomas Abney insisted, if a Man has a Right of Common, and lays it for Sheep, and proves he has a Right for Sheep, Cows, and Horses too, he shall prevail; and that I think the same with the present Case; for the Custom's extending to other Persons does not prove this bad, because laid more confined. The Jury therefore must determine, whether there be any Custom within the Borough for an eldest Son to be free.

Secondly, Then they must inquire, whether being born within the Town, after his Father was made free, be necessary Qualifications of the Custom, or not? For you have laid the Right to rise from thence. That was not necessary, but that you have laid it so.

Thirdly, It will be necessary for the Jury next to consider, if they believe Resiance to be another necessary Qualification?

If the Jury be of Opinion, that either of these two Qualifications, of being born within the Town, or after the Father was made free, are necessary; or that that Point Commorancy is not necessary; then they must find a Verdict for the Plaintiff.

But, if they should be of Opinion that the two former are not essential Qualifications, and the last is necessary; then they must find for the Defendants; and in that Case that Point must be saved.

The Point of laying a reasonable Fine must be saved, if the Jury find a Verdict for the Plaintiff.

I own, I am not satisfied: What Mr. Attorney-General said, that there is great Difference between a reasonable Fine and a Fine certain, has Weight in it.

A reasonable Fine is such as the Law will judge to be so; the general Usage of the Kingdom is, that it shall not exceed two Years and a Half's Rent. But what a reasonable Fine is, and who shall be the Judge of it, the Law has established no Rule: And if so, the Question will be, Whether the Jury should find that the Reasonableness is to be judged of by the Proportion of the Sum? And that Point to be reserved for the Determination of the Court, Whether there be a Variance from the Fine laid in the Issue?

If the Jury find for the Plaintiff, there must be a Rule for the Postea to stay; and that Point to be saved, for the Opinion of the Court.

Mr. Marsh. In laying the Evidence before the Court, my Lord, their own Witnesses said, that fourteen Years ago there was a Fine of 20*s.* paid.

Mr. Att. Gen. There is but one Instance, and that was in 1730.

Mr. Strange. We take it, Mr. Attorney, upon your own Witnesses Evidence.

Lord Hardwicke. He did not say how many Instances.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, he said one Instance, and no more.

Lord Hardw. The Books ought to be looked over for this Purpose. I apprehend you would have shewn Instances where there had been a Variance of the Fine. Call that Witness again: It was Thomas Caswell.—Mr. Caswell, you mentioned the Fine now taken to be 20*s.*

Caswell. Yes, my Lord.

Lord Hardw. How many Instances do you know of 20*s.* taken for the Fine?—Caswell. But one, my Lord; it is Mr. Hall.

Mr. Strange. Why did you say, that for about fourteen Years 20*s.* had been taken?

Caswell. I said, for about nine or ten Years 20*s.* had been taken; but it was always 6*s.* 8*d.* besides.

Mr. Strange. You are disfranchised, are you not?---Caswell. Yes.

Mr. Strange. Was you not a little while ago?--- Caswell. Yes.

Lord Hardw. I will not have another Examination of the Witnesses.

Mr. Strange. My Lord, I only asked him, what they asked me.

Mr. Att. Gen. What was that?---Mr. Strange. Nothing at all.

Mr. Marsh. What do you know of the others who were admitted? What did they pay?

Lord Hardw. Gentlemen of the Jury, This is a Writ of Mandamus, brought by the Plaintiff Henry Moore, to require the Defendants, the Mayor, Jurats and Commonalty of the Town and Port of Hastings, to admit him into the Place and Office of one of the Freemen of that Town: And the Writ sets forth, that the Plaintiff is the eldest Son of a Freeman, born within the Town after the Admission and Swearing of his Father; and has a Right, in Respect thereof, and also upon paying a reasonable Fine, to be admitted a Freeman of the Town.

And, Gentlemen, the Matter comes to this Issue, Whether Time out of Mind there has been a Custom, that every Person, being the eldest Son of a Freeman, born within the Town, after the Admission and Swearing of his Father into the Place and Office of one of the Freemen of the said Town and Port, has a Right in Respect thereof, and also upon paying a reasonable Fine, to be admitted into the Place and Office of one of the Freemen of the said Town and Port?

That, Gentlemen, is the Issue you are to try; and you have, no Doubt, observed on what Points this Question turns.

It appears, that Hastings is one of the Cinque Ports, and it is besides a Corporation.

Gentlemen, the Point insisted on by the Plaintiff's Counsel, and the first Thing produced to be considered by you, is a Book consisting of various Parts: One of the Parts is a Customal of the Town of Hastings, translated out of Latin into English,---in an old Hand,---of what Authority is not certain.

At last it comes to this, that in the Book appears to be an ancient Entry of the Customal of the Five Ports and their Members, the Time whereof the Memory of Man is not to the contrary.

From what Authority it comes, is not certain; but it is an ancient Book of the Town, and kept among the Records of the Corporation; and the Entry is in this Book. There are several other Papers bound up with it; Leases, the Rental of an Estate, a Copy of a Mortgage, and some other Things.

But that does not take off from the Credit of it; if it has any Credit in itself; for the Town-Clerk might bind up what he thought fit with it:

Gentlemen, the Entry relied on for the Plaintiff is this:

Concerning the making of Freemen in the Cinque Ports and their Members:

"The Mayor and Jurats, the Bailiffs and Jurats, in every Town and "Port where there is a Mayor and a Bailiff, may receive and make "Freemen three Ways:

1st, "Per Nativitatem infra libertatem suam, si pater suus, tempore nati-"vitatis suæ, fuit liber."

By Birth within their Liberty, if his Father; at the Time of his Birth, was a Freeman.

Another Way is by a Freehold Purchase:

And the third Way is by Buying a Freedom.

And it goes on and says, "And it is to be observed, no Man shall "enjoy the Freedom of any of the Ports, unless he take an Oath to be "good and faithful, to the End of his Life, to the King of England and "his Heirs; and to maintain the Liberties of the Cinque Ports, and "especially of that Port where he is commorant; that he will be obe-"dient to the Mayor and Jurats; that he will pay Scot and Lot, &c. "that he will not do any Thing to the Reproach of the Mayor, Bailiff, "and Jurats where he is commorant, but give Notice to them."

And there were other Clauses read; and one of them is, "That they "who are made free in this Form in one of the Ports, shall enjoy the "accustomed Freedom in all the other Ports."

And there is another Clause, "That no Man to be made free by Re-"demption, shall be admitted into the Freedom, till he has dwelt in the "Borough by the Space of one Year and a Day."

These, Gentlemen, are the Entries relied on by the Plaintiff. After reading these Entries, the Counsel for the Defendants objected, that this was not a particular Customal of Hastings, and therefore not so conclusive. But Hastings in the Mandamus is suggested to be one of the Five Ports.

Gentlemen, they have given Evidence of three different Species of Persons admitted under this Right.

The first is, where Persons were admitted as eldest Sons of Freemen, born within the Borough, and after the Swearing and Admission of the Father.

The next is, where the Admission has been of eldest Sons; born within the Borough; but it does not appear whether before or after the Admission of the Father. And,

The third Species, of Persons who were admitted as the Sons of Freemen in general; but they have not shewn that they were born in the Town, or after the Father's Freedom.

As to the first Species of Persons, who were admitted as eldest Sons of Freemen, born within the Town, after the Admission and Swearing of the Father; I think they read in Number eleven Instances: I need not repeat them. The first is Jeremiah Brysham, admitted the 12th of James the First, anno 1614; the last was Benjamin Medhurst, the 6th of May, 1721.

The next Species is of eldest Sons admitted, and Mention is made in the Entries that they are eldest Sons: But it is not clear, whether they were born before or after the Father's Freedom; but it appears they were born in the Town. They are in Number fourteen. They begin the 7th of May, 1608; and the last Instance of them is the 21st of November, 1678.

The third Species is of Admissions of Persons, mentioning them generally as the Sons of Freemen, without distinguishing between the eldest and other Sons; but it does not appear, whether they were born in the Town, or after their Fathers became free. They are in Number twenty. So that the Entries they have read are in all forty-five, under the several Species I have mentioned to you.

Gentlemen, after reading these Entries, to shew that such Persons have been admitted, mentioning them as eldest Sons, or Sons, the Fine that has been taken upon their Admissions appears to be 6*s.* 8*d.* in all they have read; and at the same Time other Persons were admitted with them, but in the Entries Notice is not taken of them as Sons of Freemen; and as to them, the Fine is 13*s.* 4*d.*

Gentlemen, besides these Entries, they have called several living Witnesses.

The first is Robert Evernden. He says, he is sixty-six Years old, and has lived in Hastings fifty Years. He says, he has heard Thomas Moore, an old Jurat, say, that the eldest Sons of Freemen had a Right, and that the usual Fine paid upon the Admission of an eldest Son is 6*s.* 8*d.* and that he has also heard John Moore, another Jurat, say the same Thing. He says, they are both dead, and that John has been dead about ten or twelve Years. He says nothing about the Qualification of Residence, or being born in the Town after the Freedom of the Father.

The next Witness they called is John Couzens. He says, he is sixty Years old, and that he always understood, and has heard several ancient People say, that the eldest Son of a Freeman had a Right by his Father's Charter; and takes it, that the Father must be free before the Birth of the Son. He says, he heard both Thomas and John Moore say the eldest Son had a Right, and never heard of an eldest Son's being refused till the Plaintiff Moore; and says, he heard Dr. Fiat say, the eldest Son had a Right by his Father's Charter.

Their next Witness is Drew Shengleton. He says, he is sixty-nine Years old, has lived fifty Years in Hastings, and speaks to the same Purpose with the two former Witnesses; and says, it has been the Discourse twenty Years back, that Freemen's eldest Sons had a Right.

John Boykett is the next: And he says, he is above sixty Years old; that he was born in Hastings, and has lived almost all his Time there; that about forty Years ago he went into the Court-Hall, and asked to be made free as a Favour; but the Mayor was against it; and then the Town-Clerk asked, if his Father was a Freeman; the Mayor said, No; and Waller replied, Then you may do as you think fit; to which the Mayor answers, I will not give my Consent to make a Dissenter free for 40*l.* He says, one Medhurst, the only Son of a Freeman, demanded his Freedom about fifteen Years ago, and was refused.

Jam

Joan White says, she is sixty-two Years old; has heard her Father say, the eldest Son of a Freeman had a Right.

Anne Sargent says, she is sixty-three Years old; that she has heard John Stevens, who was several Times Mayor of Hastings, say, that it belonged to the eldest Sons of Freemen to be free.

Susannah Medhurst is the next Witness. She says, she is sixty-six Years old; that her former Husband was Mayor of Hastings, and is dead; and that she has heard him often say, the eldest Son had a Right, and that they could not deny him; and says, that at that Time it was generally granted to eldest Sons.

Gentlemen, the last Witness for the Plaintiff is Thomas Colebrand. He says, he is eighty Years old; that when he lived there sixty Years ago, it was the Usage; that eldest Sons of Freemen had a Right; that old Waller the Town-Clerk, Thomas Lovell, and Thomas Rainolds, told him so; and that he has heard the Mayor and Jurats say so several Times. He says, that about sixty Years ago, one Medhurst, who was the eldest Son of a Freeman, came and demanded his Freedom; and Lovell the Mayor told him, it was an ancient Right, that the eldest Son of a Freeman should be made free; and that afterwards he saw Medhurst among the Freemen at an Election, and vote for Members of Parliament. Gentlemen, it appears upon the Admission of this Medhurst, which they have also read to you, that he paid a Fine of 6*s*. 8*d*. And this, Gentlemen, is the whole of the Plaintiff's Evidence.

For the Defendants, the Gentlemen of the other Side, insist, there is no Right at all to Freedoms in this Borough; but that all Admissions depend upon the Will and Pleasure of the Mayor and Jurats; that they may admit or refuse a Stranger or a Son, just as they please: And they insist, that, if there be such a Right, that it is restrained by these two Qualifications, of being born in the Town, and after the Swearing and Admission of the Father.

And another Qualification insisted on by the Defendants is, That he should be resiant within the Borough.

Gentlemen, the Matter of Law which will arise, if you are of Opinion that there is such a Custom, will be, Whether the Fine be a reasonable Fine, as the Plaintiff has laid it, or whether this is a certain Fine of 6*s*. 8*d*.?

Gentlemen, the first Evidence that has been produced for the Defendants is an old Book, in which there are Entries of an old Customal, and a By-Law dated the 12th of April, the 15th of Queen Elizabeth; by which it is decreed, "That, if any Freeman, now or at any Time "hereafter an Inhabitant of this Town, shall depart or dwell out of the "Town by the Space of a Year and a Day, he or they, so dwelling out "of the Town, shall lose his or their Freedom for ever."

I own, I do not know so extraordinary a Custom any where: For a Man to have a Right to be admitted a Freeman, who was not resident; and yet the Corporation could disfranchise a Man for Non-residence.

But this By-law will not be of much Weight one Way or other. It only shews the Act of the Corporation to disfranchise any Person that goes out of the Borough.

They have also produced for the Defendants another Book, in which, they say, is contained the Usage of Hastings Time out of Mind; and they have read out of it an Entry in old French, the Purport of which is, "That if a Foreigner resides in Hastings for a Year and a Day, he may "come before the Bailiff and Jurats, and be admitted to the Freedom "upon taking an Oath."

The Witness, who read this, swore there was no other Evidence in the Book relating to the making of Freemen.

They read this, to shew that there is no Right of Freedom at all in this Borough, if a Stranger, who has lived in the Town a Year and a Day, may come before the Bailiff and Jurats, and they may admit him upon taking an Oath.

Gentlemen, the next Evidence the Defendants have produced is from Entries of the Admission of Sons of Freemen, without mentioning that they were either eldest or younger Sons; and the Plaintiff admits many of these Entries; and they only shew, that the Fact is, that other Sons, as well as eldest Sons, have been admitted for a Fine of 6*s*. 8*d*.

The next Evidence is from living Witnesses: And the first Witness they have called is Henry Carlton. He says, he is eighty Years of Age, was born within a Mile of Hastings, and from fifteen Years old has lived there. He has been at several Meetings of the Mayor and Jurats, and has known several Honorary Freemen made, (Members of Parliament, and Captains of Ships) who did not reside; and yet he says, he never heard of any who do not live there, that had a Right to demand their Freedoms; and Persons who have lived there, and been Sons of Freemen, have been refused, and has known Instances. He says, he never looked upon it that any Person had a Right, unless according to the Pleasure of the Mayor and Jurats. He says, one Evernden, who was an eldest Son, applied to the Mayor and Jurats to be made free, and was refused; and that this was about thirty-five Years ago. He says, he has been a Jurat from 1701; and tells you, that the common Way of making free is, for a Man, if he be an eldest Son, to apply to the Mayor and Jurats, and ask the Favour of them to be made free; and if they consent, he comes to the Court, and asks it again; and if any Difference arises, they put it to the Vote; and this, he says, is the Method of proceeding in the Case of admitting Freemen's eldest Sons. He says, he was the eldest Son of a Freeman, not born in the Town; that he was admitted, and paid but 6*s*. 8*d*. Therefore this is not to be applied only to the Right of eldest Sons born within the Borough. He says, that several such have been admitted, but not upon the Foot of Right.

Their next Witness is Robert Bartholomew, aged eighty-two. He says, he was made free by the Favour of the Mayor and Jurats; and that, in his Opinion, Nobody but those whom the Mayor and Jurats please have a Right. He was asked, whether he did not tell Mr. Broadway and Mr. Dodson, that he remembered the Time particularly well, when the eldest Sons of Freemen were admitted without any Dispute? And he says, He never told them so.

Mark Boyley is the next. He is seventy-six Years of Age, and has lived all his Time in Hastings, and has been a Jurat six or seven Years. He says, there is no such Thing as demanding a Freedom by Right, and that the eldest Son of a Freeman has no more Right than any body else.

Their next Witness is Thomas Caswell. He says, he has been a Freeman ever since the Year 1716; that he is the eldest Son of a Freeman, and applied to the Mayor and Jurats for their Good-will to make him free; and knows no Difference between the Admission of an eldest Son and another, but paying half the Fine. He says, he never knew any Persons made free but who were resident in Town, nor upon a Freehold; and that it is entirely in the Pleasure of the Mayor and Jurats to make free. He says, when he was admitted, the Fine was 6*s*. 8*d*. but since they have taken 20*s*. But being called on to name Instances, he says, he knows but of one Instance.

William Bourne is the next: And he says, he has been a Freeman, but never a Jurat; that he has known the Town fifty-eight Years; and that the Way to be admitted is to get the Good-will of the Mayor and Jurats. He says, he is the eldest Son of a Freeman, but knows of no Right, and that he requested it as a Favour; and before they admitted him, they considered of it two or three Court-Days: And he says, that no Non-resiants can be admitted.

This, Gentlemen, is the whole of the Defendants Evidence.

By way of Reply, the Plaintiff has called two Witnesses to contradict what Robert Bartholomew has sworn.

Mr. Broadway is the first: And he says, that he was in Company with Bartholomew about two Years ago, at the Blue Anchor in Hastings; when he told him, that the eldest Sons of Freemen had an undoubted Right, and that he was admitted upon that Right, though he had before declined it, by reason of the Taxes.

Mr. Dodson was also present, and he says the same.

Upon this Bartholomew was confronted with Dodson and Broadway: And he said that he was not with them at such a Place, and that there is no such Sign as the Blue Anchor at Hastings. He denied he said the eldest Son had a Right; but owns he said, he thought they came to pry into the Secrets of the Corporation.

Upon this Evidence, Gentlemen, it will be proper for you to consider,

First, Whether you believe there is any positive Right in this Borough for an eldest Son to be free? As to the Right that has been set up for the Defendants, That all is at the Will and Pleasure of the Mayor and Jurats, and that there is no Right at all to be free; it is such an extraordinary Custom as I hardly ever heard of, and know no such Instance any where. Some Right there must be, although the Magistrates may have taken it into their own Hands. Therefore the Question will be, Whether you believe there is a Right in the eldest Sons to be free?

Gentlemen, you have heard the ancient Customal read. This, to be sure, is some Evidence, but not conclusive; and it is the Customal of the Five Ports in general, and there are separate Customs in each Port.

And here is one Method laid down of an Admission of Freemen in Right of a Purchase, and that, they shew you, has never been complied with.

But they have read many Instances of Persons who were admitted upon the first Right; thirty-five they have read who were admitted as eldest Sons, or Sons: Of the first Species, they read eleven in Number; and you must take it together with what the living Witnesses tell you, who all say, that they have taken the Custom to be so, that the eldest Son has a Right.

What Boykett swore is very material, that, when he applied to be admitted, Waller the Town-Clerk asked, if his Father was a Freeman? The Mayor said, No; to which Waller replied, Then do what you please.

Gentlemen, for the Defendants, the Witnesses have sworn, that they know of no Right to Freedom in this Borough, but at the Pleasure of the Mayor and Jurats; and that during their Time, and though particular Mention is made in the Entries that they are Sons, in Respect of the Difference of the Fine, and that they are admitted for paying 6*s*. 8*d*. they tell you it is not at all material being the Son of a Freeman.

Gentlemen, in the next Place you will consider, if you believe there is any Right for the eldest Sons of Freemen, then whether it be necessary that he be born in the Town, and after his Father was made free? because the Plaintiff has made it necessary for him to prove that he be born there after the Admission of his Father, by laying it in Respect thereof. And as to that, the ancient Customal says, "Uno modo, per Nativitatem "infra libertatem suam, si pater suus, tempore nativitatis suæ, fuit liber:" That every body has a Right by Birth within their Liberty, if his Father at the Time of his Birth was a Freeman. This the ancient Customal mentions; but this is not conclusive. Therefore, Gentlemen, you will consider it with the Evidence of the living Witnesses, and none of them have made that a necessary Qualification. One of them said, that the Father must be free before the Birth of his Son; and another said, it made no Difference, whether born before or after: But none of them said positively, that he must be born within the Liberty, after the Admission and Swearing of his Father. Therefore you will consider, whether these two Qualifications are proved essential to the Right to be made free.

In the next Place, it will be proper to consider, that the Customal supposes that no Man has a Right, unless he be resiant; and it tends to enlarge the Freedom of the Borough, to let in Persons not resident: But very little positive Evidence has been given of that.

The Defendants Witnesses have sworn positively, that the Mayor and Jurats can admit none but Resiants; and yet, that they may admit Honorary Freemen who are non-resident: Though the ancient Customal has an express Clause in it, which supposes, that, in order to be free, a Man must be resident. They swear to pay Scot and Lot, and to maintain the Liberties of the Five Ports, and particularly of the Port where they are commorant; which implies, that every Freeman should be commorant. And the Counsel for the Defendants have mentioned, that every Freeman is to take an Oath to maintain the Rights of the Five Ports, and especially of that Port where he is commorant.

You will consider therefore, Gentlemen, whether this imports as a necessary Qualification, that in order to be free, a Man must be resident?

The

The Counſel for the Plaintiff did not aſk the Witneſſes as to this Point of Reſidence.

The Witneſſes for the Defendants all ſwore, they took it to be ſo; but yet that Honorary Freemen, who were not reſident, might be made free.

It will be proper for you therefore, Gentlemen, to conſider,

Firſt, If you believe, on this Evidence, that there is no Right in the Son of any Freeman to demand his Freedom of the Mayor and Jurats, but that all depends on their Pleaſure:

But, if you believe that there is a Right in the Son of a Freeman, and that the Mayor and Jurats cannot deny him his Freedom: Then

You will conſider, whether the two Qualifications, of being born in the Borough, after the Freedom of the Father, are neceſſary, or no?

If you believe they are not neceſſary; but that whether he be born in or out of the Borough, or before or after he was made free, makes no Difference; in that Caſe you muſt find for the Defendants.

But if you believe a Right in the Sons of Freemen; and that being born in the Borough, and after the Father's Freedom, are eſſential:

Then you will conſider the Matter of Reſiance:

And if you believe Reſiance not neceſſary, then you muſt find a Verdict for the Plaintiff.

But, on the other Hand, if you believe being born in the Borough, and after the Father's Freedom, are not neceſſary; or, if neceſſary, that it is equally neceſſary that the Perſons ſhould be reſident; then you muſt find a Verdict for the Defendants.

Verdict for the Plaintiff.

Foreman. We find, that the eldeſt Son of a Freeman, born within the Borough, after his Father's Freedom, has a Right.

Lord Hardwicke. What do you find as to the Commorancy?

Foreman. My Lord, we find Reſidence not neceſſary; and that the eldeſt Son, born within the Borough, after his Father's Freedom, has a Right upon paying a cuſtomary Fine.

Lord Hardwicke. What do you find the Fine?

Foreman. We find the Fine to be 6*s.* 8*d.* and that that is reaſonable.

Lord Hardwicke. That Point of the reaſonable Fine muſt be ſaved for the Opinion of the Court; and let the Poſtea ſtay.

N. B. The Special Verdict was afterwards ſolemnly argued, and determined by the Court in Favour of the Plaintiff Moore.

NUMBER XIX.

An Account of the Behaviour of the late Earl of KILMARNOCK, after his Sentence, and on the Day of his Execution, Auguſt 18, 1746. By James Foſter.

MR. Foſter ſays, his firſt Acceſs to Lord Kilmarnock was on Thurſday, Auguſt 7, in the Evening; and after ſome ſerious Diſcourſe with his Lordſhip on Religion, he proceeds thus:

"He deſired me to adminiſter the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper to "him, which at firſt I declined, without abſolutely refuſing it. And "my Reaſon was this, That I choſe not to do it till I had Authority from "General Williamſon to tell him, that there remained no Hope of his Life. "Then I thought I ſhould have clearer Evidence, if he ſtill continued in "the ſame ingenuous Temper, that his Confeſſions and Repentance were "ſincere; and I conſented at laſt only upon this Condition, that he would "allow Mr. Fowler, the Gentleman-Gaoler of the Tower, to be preſent, "and renew his Acknowledgments before him. To this he made no "Objection; and the Queſtions which I propoſed to him, together with "his Anſwers, were in Subſtance as follows.

"Do you acknowledge, with deep Penitence and Contrition, the Guilt "of the late unprovoked, unnatural and wicked Rebellion in which you "engaged; the Share you had, by being involved in it, in the Oppreſ- "ſions and Murders of your Fellow-Subjects, and the Deſolation and "Spoil of your native Country; your great Guilt in rebelling againſt "your juſt and lawful King, and againſt a mild and gracious Government? "I do.

"Are you ready to declare, that it is your ſtedfaſt Reſolution to perſiſt "in this humble Confeſſion to the laſt, and to pray for the Proſperity of "King George, the Eſtabliſhment of his Royal Houſe, and the Welfare "and Peace of your Country, with your dying Breath? I readily declare "this to be my ſteady Purpoſe.

"Do you alſo, with Shame and Humiliation before God, acknowledge "the Irregularities and Exceſſes of your private Life; and will you en- "deavour to form your Mind to a deeper and deeper Repentance for both "your public and more perſonal Crimes? This is my Reſolution, which I "will adhere to, by the Help of God.

"Be pleaſed to declare, that you expect no Benefit at all from receiving "the Sacrament, if your Remorſe and Penitence be not ſincere. I do not "think, that it will be of any Service to me.

"I deſire, in the laſt Place, that you will alſo declare, what of your "own Accord you have mentioned to me before—That you conſider "yourſelf, in this Act of receiving the Sacrament under your preſent "critical and melancholy Circumſtances, as making an implicit Appeal "to God, that you expect no Mercy from him, if your Confeſſions are "feigned and hypocritical; and that you look upon the Death of Chriſt "(which you are now ſolemnly to commemorate as a Ratification of "God's Covenant of Mercy to unfeigned humble Penitents, and to them "alone) as both a ſtrong Encouragement and Motive to you, to endeavour "to ſtrengthen and perfect your Repentance. I conſider the whole of this in "the Light in which it has now been repreſented.

"I ſhall only add under this Head, that all the Confeſſions of this un- "fortunate Lord appeared to me to be free and ingenuous: He never "ſcrupled the Queſtions that were aſked him, nor took the leaſt Time to "meditate and prepare an Anſwer. His Confeſſions, likewiſe, were "perfectly conſiſtent and uniform, and never varied as to the general "Subſtance; and in no other Circumſtance than this, which will be "thought perhaps to redound to his Honour, that he continued to the laſt "recollecting and ſearching himſelf, and declaring particular Incidents "as they occurred to him, which tended, upon the whole, not to the "Extenuation, but to the Heightening of his Crime. And a few Days be- "fore his Death he ſaid, That he thought he ſhould rather prefer the "ſpeedy Execution of the Sentence, which was juſtly paſſed upon him, "than a longer Continuance in Life, if he was ſure that he ſhould be again "entangled by the Snares and Temptations to which he had formerly "yielded: What would really be the Event, if he was let looſe among "the Gaieties and Pleaſures of Life, he did not certainly know, and "ſomewhat dreaded; but in the Declaration he had made, he thought he "found himſelf clear.

"Heavy Charges of Inhumanity and Cruelty, I told him, were ſpread "among the People concerning him; and by many believed. I deſired "him therefore to be honeſt and free in clearing his Conſcience of ſuch "a Load of moſt unnatural Guilt, by anſwering to the following Inter- "rogatations, which included in them the Subſtance of theſe Charges. "And I here ſubjoin, for the Peruſal of the Publick, the Queſtions as I "propoſed, and have now tranſcribed them from a Paper written before I "went to the Tower, and his diſtinct Reply to each.

"Was your Lordſhip preſent in the Pretender's Council at Inverneſs, "or any other Place, before the Battle of Culloden, where it was propoſed "to deſtroy the Priſoners taken by the Rebels?

"I can moſt ſincerely and freely anſwer, No.

"Was you ever preſent in Council where this was propoſed? No.

"Did you ever move for ſuch an Order? No.

"Did you ever ſign ſuch an Order? No.

"Did you ever carry an Order of this Kind to the French General Sta- "pleton? Did you ever in his Preſence approve of ſuch an Order? Did "you at any Time, hearing it had been communicated to him, encou- "rage and excite him to the Execution of it? To all which he anſwered "in the ſame Manner, No.

"Did you ever know, or hear, that ſuch a Thing, or an Order to "give no Quarter, was debated, or agreed to, or ſigned in the Rebel "Army, till you was taken by the King's Forces, and a Priſoner at In- "verneſs? Or do you know yourſelf guilty of any Cruelties, by you au- "thorized or committed, againſt the King's Soldiers or Subjects taken "Priſoners by the Rebels? The Anſwer to both theſe Queſtions was "the ſame as before.

"As to what paſſed in the Church of St. Ninians, he told me, that he "knew nothing at all of it, till, upon the Retreat of the Rebel Army, "he was at ſome Diſtance from Stirling, where he had been confined to "his Bed by a Fever; that the firſt Notice he had of it, was the Noiſe "of blowing up the Church, of which he could never get any but an in- "diſtinct and confuſed Account; that it was repreſented by the Rebels "as accidental; but concerning this he could certainly ſay nothing; "only as to himſelf he ſolemnly declared, that he had no Knowledge before- "hand of, nor any Concurrence in, a deſigned Act of Cruelty. I told him, "however, that he was charged with an Inſtance of Barbarity to the "Priſoners confined in the Church at Inverneſs. And the Account which "he gave of the Fact, is as follows---That there were Orders iſſued by "the Pretender's Son, to ſtrip them of their Cloathing, for the Uſe of "ſome of the Highland Rebels; that the Warrant for executing this "Order was ſent to him; that he did not enter the Church in Perſon, "but committed the Execution of it to an inferior Officer; that the Pri- "ſoners, at firſt, refuſed to ſubmit, upon which there was a ſecond "Order, and their Cloaths were taken from them; but that in the mean "Time, the Perſon ſtiled the French Ambaſſador repreſented to him, "that this was an Outrage, which he thought ſcarce juſtifiable by the "Law of Nations, and the Rules of War; he therefore, while the Cloaths "lay in Heaps, with proper Centinels over them, in the Streets of In- "verneſs, went up to the Pretender's Son, and repreſented the Matter in "the Light in which the French Ambaſſador had ſtated it, and according "to what were his own Sentiments likewiſe; upon which, as it was "feared that ſuch Uſage might make an ill Impreſſion upon the Minds of "the People, the Cloaths were again reſtored; and this, he averred to "me, was the whole of the Truth, as far as it ever fell under his Know- "ledge.

"For myſelf, I muſt do this unhappy Criminal the Juſtice to own, "that he never appeared, during the Courſe of my Attendance upon "him, to be of any other than a ſoft, benevolent Diſpoſition. His "Behaviour was always remarkably mild and temperate. I could "diſcern no Reſentment, no Diſturbance or Agitation in him. This "indeed I feared, (as Perſons in his melancholy Circumſtances are "generally apt to think, that they ought to have the Preference in "Caſes of Reprieve or Pardon) when I was firſt informed of Lord "Cromartie's Reprieve; and therefore in the Morning before I waited "on him, I prepared myſelf to quiet and mollify his Mind. But one "of the firſt Things he ſaid to me was, that he was extremely glad that "the King's Mercy had been ſhewn to Lord Cromartie. My Lord, "ſays I, I hope you do not think you have any Injuſtice done to you? "His Anſwer was, Not the leaſt: I have pleaded guilty, I entirely ac-

" quieſce in the Juſtice of my Sentence, and if Mercy be extended to another, I " can have no Reaſon to complain, when nothing but Juſtice is done to me. I " do not believe, that my not being reprieved is owing to any Defect of Clemen- " cy in the King, who, by all the Accounts I ever received, is a very merciful " Prince; nor that it ſprings from any particular Reſentment or Prejudice " againſt me, either in his Majeſty or in the Duke; but from ſome Diſtinction " that they thought there was in the Circumſtances of Lord Cromartie's " Guilt and mine, or elſe from the public Demand for Juſtice, which made it " unfit that two out of three ſhould be reprieved. From this Way of think- " ing and diſcourſing, he never, to my Knowledge, varied to the laſt.

" I muſt add here another, and I think a great and unqueſtionable In- " ſtance of Lord Kilmarnock's Ingenuity. He had been charged, and he " imagined without a juſt Foundation, with having uttered a Falſhood, " when he ſaid in his Speech at the Bar of the Houſe of Lords, that it was " very eaſy for him to have eſcaped. This he ſtill thought was true upon " the Rebel Army's firſt giving Way, as the greateſt Part of that Body ac- " tually did eſcape, with whom he was joined. But after he had ſeparated " himſelf from them, and was advanced any conſiderable Way towards " the King's Troops, he believed that his Eſcape was not practicable. " But though he hoped that this would clear him from the Imputation of " having wilfully prevaricated in the Inſtance already mentioned; yet he " owned, that in another, induced by the Love and ſtrong Deſire of Life, " he had groſly falſified. The Caſe, as he repreſented it to me, was " thus:—He had aſſerted in his Speech, That though he could have eſcap- " ed, he did not chuſe it, becauſe the Conſequences, in an Inſtant, ap- " peared to him more terrible, more ſhocking, than the moſt painful or " ignominious Death: And therefore he choſe to ſurrender and commit " himſelf to the King's Mercy, rather than to throw himſelf into the " Hands of a foreign Power, the natural Enemy to his Country; with " whom to have Merit, he muſt perſiſt in continued Acts of Violence to " his Principles, and of Treaſon and Rebellion againſt his King and " Country: But the real Truth was, That he had no Intention at all to " ſurrender, and that his only View was to facilitate his Eſcape; for that " he thought the Body towards which he advanced, were not the King's, " but Fitz-James's Horſe; and that if he could reach them, by mounting " behind one of the Dragoons, his Eſcape would have been more certain, " than, as he was then on Foot, it appeared to him in his preſent Situa- " tion to be; though he did not find his Strength or Spirits in any con- " ſiderable Degree impaired. This, he thought, as it related to his in- " ward Intention only, could not be diſcovered but by his own Confeſ- " ſion, nor known to any but God and his own Conſcience. But he was " willing to unburden his Soul, and purge it of its moſt ſecret Guilt; " and therefore preſſed it upon me in a particular Manner, and eſpeci- " ally on the very Day before he was executed, Not to forget to publiſh " to the World this Circumſtance; becauſe, as he had ſolemnly uttered, " before ſo auguſt an Aſſembly as the Houſe of Lords, a direct and known " Untruth, he thought, if he ſhould die without a Retraction of it, and a " public Acknowledgment of his Offence, he muſt be conſidered as one, " who preſumed to appear before the Tribunal of God with a Lye in his " Mouth. And here I cannot help thinking myſelf bound, in Juſtice to " Lady Kilmarnock, to declare (and it is moſt proper to do it in this Place, " becauſe it will probably find more Credit, after ſuch a ſtriking In- " ſtance of the late Lord Kilmarnock's conſcientious Regard to Truth), " that he ſaid to me, though ſhe was bred in different Sentiments, that he " thought her now more inclined to Whiggiſh than Jacobite Principles. " And the Reverend and Honourable Mr. Home, and Mr. Roſs, his Lord- " ſhip's Solicitor, deſired me to inform the World of another Thing, " which he had expreſly mentioned to them, viz. That inſtead of excit- " ing him to, ſhe had diſſuaded him from entering into the late wicked and " horrid Rebellion.

" As the Public will, in all Probability, be curious to know what were " Lord Kilmarnock's Sentiments concerning Death, and the particular Kind " of Death which he expected, in Purſuance of his Sentence, would be " inflicted on him; I ſhall relate the Subſtance of the Diſcourſes that " paſſed between us, upon theſe great, and, to the Generality of the " World, moſt terrifying Subjects.

" On Monday, Auguſt 11th, General Williamſon deſired me, in the " gentleſt Terms I could uſe, to let him know that he had received the " Order for his and Lord Balmerino's Execution. I at firſt declined this " ungrateful Office, and told him, that I was ſo ſhocked at it, that I " could not think of delivering the Meſſage myſelf, but would endeavour " to prepare the unfortunate Lord, by diveſting him as far as I could of " all Hope of Life, for his informing him of it when he came to diſ- " charge me from my Attendance. And indeed to ſuppreſs all Glimmer- " ings of ſuch Hope was the main Drift and Bent of my Diſcourſe; and " I intended to go no further: But finding him in a reſigned and calm " Temper, I told him, as the General was coming up, That he would " ſee the vaſt Importance, nay, the abſolute Neceſſity, of attending ſeri- " ouſly to what I had been ſaying about his diligent and conſtant Prepa- " ration for Death, by what, as I appehended, he would ſoon hear. He " immediately aſked me, Whether the Warrant for his Execution was " come down? I told him it was, and that the Day fixed was the Mon- " day following. And as, upon this, the General immediately entered " the Room, I acquainted him, that Lord Kilmarnock knew already what " he intended to inform him of; that he was therefore at preſent under " no Neceſſity of ſaying any Thing further about it; becauſe the once " relating ſuch a melancholy Circumſtance was fully ſufficient.

" Lord Kilmarnock received this News with the outward Behaviour of " a Man, that knew and felt the Importance of the Scene of Death, but " without any Marks of Diſorder, without any unbecoming Anxiouſneſs " or Terror. And to eſtabliſh and ſupport him in his preſent Quietude " of Mind, I told him, That all Mankind were really under Sentence of " Death, though they knew not the Manner or preciſe Time when it would " be executed; it might be to any one, as ſoon or ſooner than his own; " that they not expecting it, nor having ſuch timely and certain Notice " of it, might die wholly unguarded and unprepared; while he had " Warning, and the moſt awakening Motives to fit himſelf in the beſt " Manner poſſible for this grand and deciſive Event. He ſaid, That he " had never been a Libertine in Principle, during all the Time that he " was moſt inconſiderate and licentious in his Conduct; that he had al- " ways firmly believed the great Truths of God's Being, and Providence, " and a future State of Rewards and Puniſhments for Virtue and Vice; " and that he had not been involved in the faſhionable Scepticiſm of the " Times with reſpect to Chriſtianity; that he was therefore naturally " concerned, and chiefly concerned, about the Conſequences of Death, " in Compariſon of which he thought the Thing itſelf a Trifle; that as " to the particular Manner of his Death, he thought he had no great " Reaſon to be terrified, for that the Stroke appeared to be ſcarce ſo much " as the Pain of drawing a Tooth, or the firſt Shock of the Cold Bath " upon a weak and fearful Temper. And when General Williamſon, upon " the Saturday preceding his Execution, gave him a minute Detail of all " the Circumſtances of Solemnity and outward Terror that would ac- " company it, he heard it with as much Show of Compoſure, as a Man of " a tender, compaſſionate Spirit would read the Account of it, in an In- " ſtance where he was not perſonally concerned. He was told, That on " Monday, about Ten in the Morning, the Sheriffs would come to demand " the Priſoners, who would be delivered them at the Gate of the Tower; " that from thence, if their Lordſhips thought proper, they ſhould walk " on Foot to the Houſe appointed on Tower-Hill for their Reception, " where the Rooms would be hung with Black, to make the more decent " and ſolemn Appearance, and that the Scaffold alſo would be covered " with black Cloth; that his Lordſhip might repoſe and prepare himſelf, " in the Room fitted up for him, as long as he thought it convenient, " remembering only, that the Warrant for the Execution was limited to, " and conſequently expired at One o'Clock; that becauſe of a Com- " plaint made by the Lord Kenmure, that the Block was too low, it was " ordered to be raiſed to the Heighth of two Foot; that it might be the " more firmly fixed, Props would be placed directly under it, that the " Certainty or Decency of the Execution might not be obſtructed by any " Concuſſion, or ſudden Jerk of the Body. All this Lord Kilmarnock, " without the leaſt viſible Emotion, expreſſed his Satisfaction in: But " when the General told him, that two mourning Hearſes would be pro- " vided, and placed cloſe by the Scaffold, that when the Head was ſtruck " off, the Coffins might ſoon be taken out to receive the Bodies; he ſaid, " That he thought it would be better for the Coffin to be upon the Scaf- " fold, for by that Means the Bodies would be ſtill ſooner removed out of " Sight. And being further informed, that an Executioner was provid- " ed that would perform his Work dexterouſly, and that he was a very " good Sort of a Man; my Lord anſwered, General, this is one of the moſt " Circumſtances that you could have mentioned; I cannot thoroughly like, for " ſuch Buſineſs, your good Sort of Men: For one of that Character, I appre- " hend, muſt be a tender-hearted and compaſſionate Man, and a rougher and " leſs ſenſible Temper might perhaps be fitter to be employed. After this Lord " Kilmarnock deſired, That four Perſons might be appointed to receive the " Head, when it was ſevered from the Body, in a red Cloth, that it " might not, as he had been informed was the Caſe in ſome former Exe- " cutions, roll about the Scaffold, and be thereby mangled and diſfigured: " For that though this was, in Compariſon, but a ſmall Circumſtance, " he was not willing that his Body ſhould appear with any unneceſſary " Indecency, after the juſt Sentence of the Law was ſatisfied. I could " not perceive, but that he talked of all theſe Particulars with Eaſe and " Freedom, though the Relation of them, I remember, made me tremble; " chiefly becauſe I feared that they would produce in him ſome Pertur- " bation and Diſtreſs of Mind. It is proper for me to add, that when he " was told his Head would be held up to the Multitude, and public Pro- " clamation made that this was the Head of a Traitor; he replied, That " this he knew to be uſual on all ſuch Occaſions, and ſpake of it as a " Thing that was of no Significancy in the Affair at all, and did not in " the leaſt affect him: And I never heard, either before or after he was " delivered into the Cuſtody of the Sheriffs, that he intimated the leaſt " Concern to have this Part of the diſmal Ceremony diſpenſed with. All " Lord Kilmarnock's Friends, who attended him in his laſt Moments, are " ready to concur with me in making the ſame Declaration, that we ne- " ver expected it would have been, and wondered it was, omitted.—— " After the Converſation above-mentioned between Lord Kilmarnock and " General Williamſon, I thought it proper to adviſe him, to think fre- " quently on the outward Appara'us and Formalities that would attend " his Death; that theſe Circumſtances, ſtriking to Senſe, might impreſs " his Mind with Horror, and diſarm him of Part of his Reſolution, if he " was not by Reflection thoroughly prepared for the Scene; but that if " they were habituated to the Mind, they would in a great Meaſure loſe " their Influence, and be conſidered as no more than the Appendages of a " Subject vaſtly more great, and worthy his Contemplation. And he de- " clared, on the Morning of his Execution, That he had taken this Me- " thod with himſelf, and hoped that theſe Things would diſcompoſe him " but little, nor create any Weakneſs or Indecency in his Behaviour. He " allowed, with me, That they were nothing ſo terrible in themſelves, as " the dying after a diſpiriting and lingering Diſtemper, in a ſilent, me- " lancholy, darkened Room, with languid and exhauſted Spirits, and his " Friends ſtanding round him, with lively Marks of Sorrow and Anguiſh " in their Countenances, expecting and deploring his Fate.

" I now come to the Concluſion of this diſmal Scene, his Behaviour " on the Day of his Execution. I attended him in the Morning about " Eight o'Clock, and found him in a moſt calm and happy Temper, " without any Diſturbance or Confuſion in his Mind, and with apparent " Marks of Eaſe and Serenity in his Aſpect. And that the World may " the better judge of the Propriety of his Behaviour from that Time to " the Time of his Death, I ſhall firſt declare, what his profeſſed Sen- " timents were concerning himſelf, and the Manner in which he " choſe to die; and then briefly point out what, in my Opinion, was the " utmoſt

" utmoſt Decency of Conduct in one in his Circumſtances, under the " Impreſſion of ſuch Sentiments and Principles. I had obſerved to him, " that to affect to brave Death, when he juſtly ſuffered for his Crimes, " could have no Show of a true Decorum in it; and that to manifeſt no " Concern at all, where the Conſequence was ſo awful, and the Stake in- " finite, was, in ſome Degree, unbecoming even in the beſt of Men; that " not to fear at all, where there was great Reaſon to fear, was altogether " as abſurd, as to be extremely dejected and puſillanimous where there " was Ground of Hope; and that true Penitence was always humble and " cautious, and not bold and arrogant. He aſſented to all this, and told me " further, That for a Man who had led a diſſolute Life, and yet believed " the Conſequences of Death, to put on ſuch an Air of Daringneſs and " abſolute Intrepidity, muſt argue him either to be very ſtupid or very im- " pious. He alſo told me, That, though he entirely acquieſced in the " Juſtice of his Sentence, and thought it his Duty wholly to reſign him- " ſelf to the wiſe and equal Diſpoſals of Providence, he had ſtill this Clog " upon his Mind, that he could not be ſure his Repentance was ſincere, " becauſe it had never been tried. I anſwered him, That, if he aimed at " Certainty in this grand Point, he might unneceſſarily perplex and diſ- " treſs his Mind; becauſe, for the very Reaſon which he had aſſigned, " i. e. for Want of proper Opportunities to try and prove the Truth of " their Repentance, ſuch a Certainty was not attainable by any Perſons " in his Condition: I adviſed him therefore to ſearch ſeriouſly and ſtrict- " ly into himſelf, not ſuffering himſelf to be amuſed and impoſed upon " in an Affair of ſuch infinite Importance; and if he found, after mak- " ing this Inquiry, that he had more Ground to hope that his Repentance " was ſincere, than he had to fear that it was inſincere, the Conſequence " would be, that he muſt, upon the whole, have more Reaſon to hope " than fear: And this, in my Opinion, was the higheſt Pitch to which " I could attempt to raiſe him. Let us ſee now, what Kind of Behaviour " was moſt juſt and decent in a Perſon, who, upon this Foundation, pro- " feſſed himſelf to have a Preponderance of Hope, but mixed with Diffi- " dence and Fear. It muſt ſurely be reſigned, but awful; free from an " Extreme of Dejectedneſs, but not eager and rapid to meet Death. " Such a conſiderate, calm Humility, and Tenderneſs of Spirit, would " be the only fit Behaviour, after having made the Profeſſions above- " mentioned, in one that was but perſonating a feigned Character: The " contrary would be condemned in a mere fictitious Repreſentation, and " therefore cannot be approved in the real Scene of Death.

" And this, which I have ſhewn was the only decent, was, in Fact, the " true Deportment of Lord Kilmarnock. He continued all the Morning " of his Execution in the ſame uniform Temper, unruffled, and with- " out any ſudden Viciſſitudes and Starts of Paſſion. This remarkably " appeared, when ſoon after I had, at his own Deſire, made a ſhort " Prayer with him, General Williamſon came to inform him, that the " Sheriffs waited for the Priſoners: For, at receiving this awful Sum- " mons to go to Death, he was not in the leaſt ſtartled, but ſaid, (calmly " and gracefully) General, I am ready; I'll follow you. At the Foot of the " firſt Stairs he met and embraced Lord Balmerino, who greatly ſaid " to him, My Lord, I am heartily ſorry to have your Company in this Ex- " pedition *. From thence he walked, with the uſual Formalities, to the " Tower-Gate, and, after being delivered into the Cuſtody of the She- " riffs, to the Houſe provided on Tower-Hill, with a Serenity, Mild- " neſs, and Dignity, that greatly ſurpriſed and affected the Spectators. " And as one of the Things that paſſed there, moſt worthy the public " Notice, was the ſhort Interview he had with Lord Balmerino; I ſhall " relate the whole Subſtance of their Converſation, to the beſt of my Re- " membrance, without Addition or Diminution; and, as far as I can " poſſibly recollect, in the very Words themſelves.

" B. My Lord, I beg Leave to aſk your Lordſhip one Queſtion.

" K. To any Queſtion, my Lord, that you ſhall now think it proper " to aſk, I believe I ſhall ſee no Reaſon to decline giving an Anſwer.

" B. Why then, my Lord, did you ever ſee or know of any Order, " ſigned by the Prince, [meaning the Pretender's Son] to give no Quarter " at the Battle of Culloden?

" K. No, my Lord.

" B. Nor I neither: And therefore it ſeems to be an Invention to juſ- " tify their own Murder, or murderous Scheme (one of the two Expreſ- " ſions, I am certain was made uſe of).

" K. No, my Lord, I do not think that this Inference can be drawn " from it; becauſe, while I was a Priſoner at Inverneſs, I was informed " by ſeveral Officers, that there was ſuch an Order, ſigned George Mur- " ray; and that it was in the Duke's Cuſtody.

" Lord George Murray! replied Lord Balmerino, why then they ſhould " not charge it upon the Prince.---After this he took his Leave, embra- " cing Lord Kilmarnock with the ſame Kind of noble and generous Com- " pliment as he had uſed before, but in Words ſomewhat different: My " dear Lord Kilmarnock, I am only ſorry, that I cannot pay all this Reckon- " ing alone; once more, farewel for ever! I have conſulted Mr. Home, " Mr. Roſs, and Mr. Jameſon, who were all preſent at this Confe- " rence; and are ready to atteſt, if required, that this is a true Account " of it.

" I then deſired Lord Kilmarnock, that he would allow me to de- " clare in his Name to the Sheriffs, and all Perſons there preſent, the Sub- " ſtance of the Profeſſions and Acknowledgments which he had ſo often " repeated to me; and which were more largely contained in a Paper, that " he had left to be publiſhed after his Death: And my Declaration was " in Words to this Effect: Lord Kilmarnock acknowledges King " George to be the only rightful and lawful King of theſe Realms; that " he engaged in the late wicked and unnatural Rebellion againſt his Con- " ſcience; he confeſſes the great Guilt of it with deep Shame and Contri- " tion; and aſks Pardon, for his Offence, of God, his King, and Coun- " try; and declares it to be his ſincere Reſolution to pray for the Pro- " ſperity of King George, the Eſtabliſhment of his Royal Houſe, and the " Peace and Welfare of his Country, with his dying Breath. To this " the unfortunate Lord gave his Aſſent, and ſignified to the Sheriffs, that " the only genuine Paper, that he had left behind him, was lodged with " me, and committed to my Care. The Time being now pretty far ad- " vanced (as I hinted to his Lordſhip by the Sheriffs Deſire), I told him, " that after having taken a few Minutes to compoſe himſelf, I thought it " would be proper to allow me to pray with him, and then proceed to the " Scaffold. After this I addreſſed myſelf to the Spectators of this mourn- " ful Scene, to join with me fervently in this laſt ſolemn Office, and in " recommending the Soul of an unhappy Perſon, who gave ſo many lively " Marks of his ſincere Penitence for the Crime of his Rebellion, to the " Mercy of God; with which Requeſt they all readily complied. I need " add nothing more, but that as Lord Kilmarnock had often proteſted, that " he would, in his laſt Moments, pray for his King and Country, towards the " Concluſion of my Prayer for him, I offered up the following Petitions to " that Purpoſe; which he had before, in the Tower, expreſſed his intire " Satisfaction in.---And we now, from our Hearts, and at the particular De- " ſire of thy Servant, upon whoſe Account eſpecially we preſume at this Time to " addreſs thy Throne, and offer up our united fervent Prayers, that thou wouldſt " preſerve, bleſs, and honour our only rightful Sovereign Lord King George; " that thou wouldſt crown him with Glory and Renown; that in his Reign " there may be Abundance of Peace; that his Royal Progeny may long ſit, with " Luſtre and Dignity, upon the Throne of theſe Kingdoms, unaiſturbed by Re- " bellions, and the Tumults of ſeditious and violent Men; and that our holy Re- " ligion, and ineſtimable Britiſh Liberties, may be tranſmitted down ſecure " and ſacred to our Poſterity, even to the lateſt Generations. After Prayer " was ended, Lord Kilmarnock took his laſt Farewel of the Gentlemen who " attended him, in a very affectionate Manner; and went out of the Room, " preceded by the Sheriffs, and accompanied by his Friends. And I am " informed of the following Particular by Mr. Home, that as he was ſtep- " ping into the Scaffold, notwithſtanding the great Pains he had taken " to familiariſe the outward Apparatus of Death to his Mind, Nature ſtill " recurred upon him: So that being ſtruck with ſuch a Variety of dread- " ful Objects at once, the Multitude, the Block, his Coffin, the Execu- " tioner, the Inſtrument of Death, he turned about, and ſaid, Home, this " is terrible. This Expreſſion, ſo ſuitable to the awful Occaſion, muſt, " to all who know the human Heart, appear to be nothing elſe than the " Language of Nature, and was far from being a Mark of unmanly Fear; " being pronounced with a ſteady Countenance and Firmneſs of Voice, " Indications of a Mind unbroken and not diſconcerted. His whole Be- " haviour was ſo humble and reſigned, that not only his Friends, but " every Spectator was deeply moved; even the Executioner burſt into " Tears, and was obliged to uſe artificial Spirits to ſupport and ſtrengthen " him. After having talked with his Lordſhip a conſiderable Time, to " ſupport him in his Penitence and Reſignation, I embraced, and left him " in the ſame calm Diſpoſition, having quitted the Scaffold ſome Minutes " before his Execution. And as to his Behaviour afterwards, I refer to " the following Account, in which, I think, I may thoroughly confide, " which was communicated to me by Mr. Jameſon, who attended him to " the laſt.

" Spectators at a Diſtance, not knowing the true Cauſe why the Stroke " was retarded for ſome Minutes longer than they expected, aſcribed it to " Puſillanimity: But, in Reality, that Delay was owing to a few trivial " Circumſtances which might have been omitted, had it not been neceſ- " ſary to mention them, in order to vindicate the Behaviour of that No- " ble Penitent, which was uniformly conducted by the Rules of juſt De- " corum, from all Imputation of unmanly Fear in the critical Moment. " My Lord's Hair having been dreſſed in a Bag, it took ſome Time to un- " do it, and put it up in his Cap. The tucking his Shirt under the Waiſt- " coat, that it might not obſtruct the Blow, was the Occaſion of ſome " further ſmall Delay. But as ſoon as theſe Preliminaries were adjuſted, his " Lordſhip gave the Executioner Notice what ſhould be the Signal, took " out a Paper containing the Heads of his Devotion, went forward to his " laſt Stage, and decently kneeled down at the Block. Whether it was to " ſupport himſelf, or as a more convenient Poſture for Devotion, he hap- " pened to lay his Hands with his Head upon the Block; which the Exe- " cutioner obſerving, prayed his Lordſhip to let his Hands fall down, " leſt they ſhould be mangled, or break the Blow. Then he was told, " that the Neck of his Waiſtcoat was in the Way; upon which he roſe " up, and with the Help of one of his Friends (Mr. Walkinſhaw of Scot- " ſton) had it taken off. This done, and the Neck made bare to the Shoul- " der, he again kneeled down as before. And what ſufficiently ſhews that " he enjoyed full Preſence of Mind to the laſt, Mr. Home's Servant, who " held the Cloth to receive the Head, heard him direct the Executioner, " that in two Minutes he would give the Signal. That dreadful Interval, " to his Friends, who were then upon the Rack, appeared much longer, " but thoſe who meaſured found it juſt about two Minutes. This Time " he ſpent in moſt fervent Devotion, as appeared by the Motion of his " Hands, and now and then of his Head. Having then fixed his Neck on " the Block, he gave the Signal, his Body remained without the leaſt " Motion, except what was given it by the Stroke of Death, which he " received full, and was thereby happily eaſed at once of all his Pain.

" Thus deſervedly fell, though humble and relenting, the late Lord " Kilmarnock, a Sacrifice to the Juſtice of his Country.———

JAMES FOSTER.

" P. S. I think myſelf obliged, in Juſtice to General Williamſon, " and at his Deſire, to declare, that Lord Kilmarnock often teſtified

* " Theſe particular Words I myſelf did not hear, but was informed of them by Mr. Jameſon."

"to me, that he had behaved towards him in a very civil and obliging "Manner; that upon the General's having desired, two Days before "his Death, that when he took his Leave of him on Monday, he would "do it in such a Manner, as would be an Evidence to all present, "that he was satisfied with his Behaviour; his Lordship answered, "That I will, General, you may depend upon it, and in such a Way too, as is "becoming a Gentleman, and a Man of Honour; and that Mr. Williamson "had, from the first, spoke of Lord Kilmarnock to me with great Esteem "and Humanity."

To the KING'S Most Sacred Majesty.

The humble Petition of William late Earl of Kilmarnock,

Sheweth,

"THE Petitioner having met with the Condemnation justly due "to his Crime, presumes, throwing himself at your Majesty's "Feet, to implore your Majesty's Royal Clemency, and, though very "sensible that nothing can excuse or mitigate his Crime, hopes he may "be considered, in your Majesty's Eye, as an Object of Compassion and "Pity.

"His Family's constant Attachment to the Revolution Interest and "that of your illustrious House, his Father's Zeal and Activity in "Support of both, when attacked by your late Royal Father's Enemies "in 1715, his own appearing in Arms (though then but young) under "his Father, the whole Tenor of his Conduct since that Time, and "the Sentiments of Duty and Loyalty in which he has educated his "eldest Son, who now has the Honour of bearing your Majesty's Com-"mission, though no Diminution of his Guilt, may yet let in a Pre-"sumption, that he has offended more from Rashness and the Designs "of wicked and ill-disposed Persons, than from any Principle of "Disaffection to your Majesty.

"The Petitioner humbly begs Leave to acquaint your Majesty, that "he influenced neither Tenant nor Follower of his to assist or abet the "Rebellion; but, on the contrary, that between the Time of the Battle "of Preston, and his unhappy Junction with the Rebels, he went to "the Town of Kilmarnock, influenced its Inhabitants, as far as he "could, and by their Means their neighbouring Boroughs, to rise in "Arms for your Majesty's Service; which had so good an Effect, that "two hundred Men of Kilmarnock appeared very soon in Arms, and "remained so all the Winter at Glasgow, or other Places, as they "were ordered. And even in the Midst of his greatest Delusion, when "in Arms against your Sacred Majesty and your Authority, it was the "Petitioner's constant Care (as far as in his Power) to protect your "faithful Subjects from Injury in their Persons or Estates. He extended "his Care to such of your Majesty's Troops as had the Misfortune "of falling into the Hands of the Rebels, both Officers and private Men "finding better Usage, and their Condition being rendered more sup-"portable through his Means, than it would otherwise have been; as "many of them can, and the Petitioner believes will, testify when "called upon.

"The Petitioner was not taken, but surrendered himself at the Bat-"tle of Culloden, having left those he was joined with, when they were "got so far, that most (if not all) of them escaped, except himself, "who from thence turned down to the Ground where the Dragoons "were drawn up at a considerable Distance, and this at a Time when "he might easily have made his Escape, being near Nobody, nor any "in Pursuit of him. He chose Submission, as far preferable to Obstinacy "in Rebellion. His first Principles revived in his Breast. He deter-"mined rather to run the Risque of an ignominious Death, as the "Atonement of his Treason, than to recur to, and become dependent "upon a foreign Power, that Power especially being the natural Enemy "of his Country, and your Majesty the Father of it.

"Under these Circumstances, SIR, it is, that the unhappy Peti-"tioner (more so from Remorse of having violated his Allegiance to "your Majesty, than from the Sentence he lies under) dares to approach "your Throne, and implore your Royal Mercy, and which he hopes "for, as he cannot reproach himself with any Guilt precedent to this "fatal Breach of his Duty."

Petitions to the like Effect were presented to the Prince of Wales and the Duke of Cumberland.

Extract of the late Earl of Kilmarnock's Letter to his Son Lord Boyd.

Dated, Tower, 17*th Aug.* 1746.

"Dear BOYD,

"——— I must take this Way to bid you farewel, and I pray God "may for ever bless you and guide you in this World, and bring you "to a happy Immortality in the World to come. I must likewise give "you my last Advice. Seek God in your Youth, and when you are "old he will not depart from you. Be at Pains to acquire good Habits "now, that they may grow up and become strong in you. Love Man-"kind, and do Justice to all Men. Do Good to as many as you can, and "neither shut your Ears nor your Purse to those in Distress whom it is "in your Power to relieve. Believe me, you will find more Joy in one "beneficent Action, and in your cool Mornings you will be more happy "with the Reflection of having made any one Person so, who without "your Assistance would have been miserable, than in the Enjoyments "of all the Pleasures of Sense (which pall in the using), and of all the "Pomps and gaudy Show of the World. Live within your Circum-"stances, by which Means you will have it in your Power to do Good "to others. Above all Things, continue in your Loyalty to his pre-"sent Majesty, and the Succession to the Crown as by Law established. "Look on that as the Basis of the civil and religious Liberty and Pro-"perty of every Individual in the Nation. Prefer the public Interest "to your own, wherever they interfere. Love your Family and your "Children, when you have any; but never let your Regard for them "drive you on the Rock I split upon, when on that Account I depart "from my Principles, and brought the Guilt of Rebellion and civil "and particular Desolation on my Head, for which I am now under "the Sentence justly due to my Crime. Use all your Interest to get "your Brother pardoned and brought Home as soon as possible, that his "Circumstances, and bad Influence of those he is among, may not "induce him to accept of foreign Service, and lose him both to his "Country and his Family. If Money can be found to support him, "I wish you would advise him to go to Geneva, where his Principles of "Religion and Liberty will be confirmed, and where he may stay till "you see if a Pardon can be procured him. As soon as Commodore "Barnet comes Home, inquire for your Brother Billie, and take care "of him on my Account. I must again recommend your unhappy "Mother to you. Comfort her, and take all the Care you can of "your Brothers: And may God of his infinite Mercy preserve, guide, "and conduct you and them through all the Vicissitudes of this Life, "and after it bring you to the Habitations of the Just, and make you "happy in the Enjoyment of Himself to all Eternity."

Paper delivered by the late Earl of Kilmarnock to Mr. Foster, Sunday 17*th* August, 1746.

"AS it would be a vain Attempt in me to speak distinctly to that "great Concourse of People, who will probably be present at my "Execution, I chuse to leave this behind me, as my last solemn Decla-"ration, appealing, for my Integrity, to God, who knows my Heart.

"I bless God, I have little Fear of temporal Death, though attended "with many outward Circumstances of Terror: The greatest Sting I "feel in Death is, that I have deserved it.

"Lord Balmerino, my Fellow-Sufferer, to do him Justice, dies in a "professed Adherence to the mistaken Principles he had imbibed from his "Cradle. But I engaged in the Rebellion in Opposition to my own "Principles, and to those of my Family; in Contradiction to the "whole Tenor of my Conduct, till within these few Months that I "was wickedly induced to renounce my Allegiance, which ever before "I had preserved and held inviolable. I am in little Pain for the Re-"flections which the inconsiderate or prejudiced Part of my Country-"men (if there are any such, whom my suffering the just Sentence of "the Law has not mollified) may cast upon me for this Confession. "The wiser or more ingenuous will, I hope, approve my Conduct, "and allow with me, That, next to doing right, is, to have the Courage "and Integrity to own, that I have done wrong.

"Groundless Accusations of Cruelty have been raised and propagated "concerning me, and Charges spread among the People, of my having "sollicited for, nay actually signed Orders of general savage Destruction, "seldom issued among the most barbarous Nations, and which my Soul "abhors. And, that the general Temper of my Mind was ever averse "from, and shocked at gross Instances of Inhumanity, I appeal to all "my Friends and Acquaintance who have known me most intimately, "and even to those Prisoners of the King's Troops to whom I had "Access, and whom I ever had it in my Power to relieve; I appeal in "particular, for my Justification as to this justly detested and horrid "Crime of Cruelty, to Captain Master of Ross, Captain Lieutenant "Rosen, and Lieutenant George Cuming of Alter.

"These Gentlemen will, I am persuaded, as far as relates to them-"selves, and as far as has fallen within their Knowledge or credible "Information, do me Justice; and then, surely, my Countrymen will "not load a Person, already too guilty and unfortunate, with undeserved "Infamy, which may not only fix itself on his own Character, but "reflect Dishonour on his Family.

"I have no more to say, but that I am persuaded, if Reasons of "State, and the Demands of public Justice, had permitted his Ma-"jesty to follow the Dictates of his own Royal Heart, my Sentence "might have been mitigated. Had it pleased God to prolong my Life, "the Remainder of it should have been faithfully employed in the Ser-"vice of my justly offended Sovereign, and in constant Endeavours to "wipe away the very Remembrance of my Crime.

"I now with my dying Breath beseech Almighty God to bless my "only rightful Sovereign King George, and preserve him from the At-"tempts of public and private Enemies. May his Majesty, and his "illustrious Descendants, be so guided by the Divine Providence, as "ever to govern with that Wisdom and that Care for the public Good, "as will preserve to them the Love of their Subjects, and secure their "Right to reign over a free and happy People to the latest Posterity."

NUMBER XX.

An Account of the Behaviour of WILLIAM late Earl of KILMARNOCK, and ARTHUR late Lord BALMERINO, from the Time of their being delivered into the Cuſtody of the Sheriffs of London, to the Time of their Execution. With every remarkable Incident that happened during that Time, and particularly the Conference between thoſe two Lords. As taken down by a Gentleman then preſent *. By Authority of the Sheriffs.

Monday, Auguſt 18, 1746.

THE Sheriffs of London and Middleſex having received the uſual Writs for the Execution of the Lords Kilmarnock and Balmerino this Day, between the Hours of Nine and One; they, accompanied with the two Under-Sheriffs, and attended by the other proper Officers, at Ten o'Clock went in Proceſſion to the outward Gate of the Tower; and having there received of the Deputy-Lieutenant of the Tower the Bodies of thoſe Lords, they then proceeded with them on Foot to the late Tranſport-Office near the Scaffold, Mr. Foſter and the Rev. Mr. Hume accompanying my Lord Kilmarnock, and the Chaplain of the Tower and another Miniſter accompanying my Lord Balmerino: Where, upon their Arrival, the two Lords were conducted into ſeparate Apartments, and their Friends admitted to ſee them.

My Lord Kilmarnock ſpent his Retirement here in a Manner ſuitable to his unhappy Circumſtances, Mr. Foſter frequently comforting his Lordſhip with ſeaſonable Exhortations; his Lordſhip ſeemed truly ſenſible of his Guilt, ſhewed the utmoſt Signs of a ſincere Repentance, and all that were preſent admired the Compoſure of his Lordſhip's Mind. His Lordſhip, in particular, recommended it to the Sheriffs Obſervance, "that he declared himſelf a Proteſtant, and thoroughly ſatisfied with the "Legality of his Majeſty King GEORGE's Title to the Throne of theſe "Realms; that he himſelf was educated in theſe Principles, and had con"ſtantly adhered to them, till after the breaking out of the Rebellion, "which he heartily repented he ever engaged in; and that he prayed for "the Good of his Country, and for the Continuance of the Crown in his "Majeſty and his Deſcendants till the lateſt Poſterity."

His Lordſhip then ſpent a few Moments in converſing with his Friends, and having refreſhed himſelf with a Bit of Bread and a Glaſs of Wine, he declared to the Sheriffs, "that he had within this Week taken the "Sacrament twice in Evidence of the Truth of his Repentance."

His Lordſhip moreover recommended it to the Sheriffs Notice, "that "what Papers he intended ſhould be communicated to the Public, he had "left in the Hands of Mr. Foſter only."

About Eleven o'Clock my Lord received a Meſſage from my Lord Balmerino, deſiring an Interview with his Lordſhip; which being conſented to, my Lord Balmerino was introduced into my Lord Kilmarnock's Apartments; where my Lord Balmerino, after addreſſing himſelf to his Lordſhip, and thanking him for the Favour of this Conference, aſked his Lordſhip, "If he knew of any Order being made before the Battle of "Culloden, for giving no Quarter to the Duke's Army;" at the ſame Time declaring, "that he himſelf knew nothing of any ſuch Order." To which my Lord Kilmarnock replied, "That he knew nothing of any ſuch Order, "but that ſince the Battle of Culloden he had been informed that there "was ſome Order to that Effect, ſigned George Murray, and that it fell "into the Hands of the Duke immediately after the Battle." My Lords Kilmarnock and Balmerino having then ſaluted each other, my Lord Balmerino bid my Lord Kilmarnock an eternal happy Adieu, and with a chearful Countenance added, "My dear Lord, I wiſh I could alone pay the Reck"oning, and ſuffer for us both;" to which my Lord Kilmarnock replied, "It was exceedingly kind and generous in his Lordſhip."

About Half an Hour after Eleven, my Lord Kilmarnock with the whole Company kneeled down to Prayers, Mr. Foſter performing the Office; after which my Lord having again ſat down a few Moments to refreſh himſelf with a Bit of Bread and a Glaſs of Wine, he about Twelve o'Clock roſe, ſaluted his Friends, and proceeded to the Scaffold, his Friends ſtill accompanying him there.

As ſoon as his Lordſhip aſcended the Scaffold, it was eaſily to be obſerved what Impreſſion his graceful Deportment made upon the Minds of the Spectators, to whom his Lordſhip made no Speech, but much better employed his Time with Mr. Foſter in his Devotions; upon the Concluſion of which Mr. Foſter told his Lordſhip, "He wiſhed he had a "Voice loud enough to inform this large Aſſembly with what Sentiments "his Lordſhip left the World."

My Lord then, with a Countenance perfectly ſerene and compoſed, embraced his Friends, and took his final Leave of them.

After that, the Executioner was introduced to his Lordſhip for his Forgiveneſs for the painful Office allotted to him; which his Lordſhip readily granted, and gave him a Purſe of Gold, deſired him to have Courage, and acquainted him, that "the ſignal for the Stroke ſhould be the dropping "of a Handkerchief."

His Lordſhip then prepared himſelf for the Block, and having with the Aſſiſtance of his Servant taken off his Coat, and the Bag from his Hair, his Lordſhip then put his Cap on, and under it tucked up his Hair; but his Lordſhip afterwards perceiving the Cap was too large to bind up his Hair, and fearing leſt by that Means the Blow might be intercepted, he requeſted a Gentleman, who was near him, to pin it cloſer; during which, that Gentleman having wiſhed his Lordſhip the Continuance of his Reſolution till he ſhould meet with eternal Happineſs, his Lordſhip thanked him, and with great Tranquillity added, "that he found "himſelf perfectly eaſy and reſigned."

His Lordſhip then kneeled down at the Block, and having with great Fervency prayed for about ſix Minutes, ſubmitted himſelf, and dropping the Signal, the Executioner at one Blow ſevered his Head from his Body; the Head was received into a Piece of ſcarlet Baize, and with the Body depoſited in a Coffin, and delivered to his Lordſhip's Friends; on which Coffin was the following Inſcription, Willielmus Dominus de Kilmarnock decollatus 18 die Auguſti, 1746. Ætatis ſuæ 42.

After the Execution was over, it was remarked by ſeveral Perſons, that the Head was not held up and expoſed by the Executioner; it was my Lord's particular Requeſt it might not be ſo, and the Law does not require it.——The only Reaſon that can be aſſigned for expoſing the Head (as has been frequently but not always the Caſe) is to ſatisfy the People that the Execution has been done; but in order to give them a greater Satisfaction, the Sheriffs directed that every Body upon the Scaffold ſhould kneel down, that they might ſee the Execution itſelf performed,—a Ceremony never practiſed before.

During this Time the Scaffold was put in Order for the Execution of the Lord Balmerino. The Under-Sheriff that attended during the firſt Execution went to my Lord Balmerino's Apartments, as a Notice to his Lordſhip that his Time was come; upon whoſe Entrance his Lordſhip ſaid, "I ſuppoſe my Lord Kilmarnock is no more;" and having aſked how the Executioner had performed his Duty, his Lordſhip upon receiving the Account ſaid, "Then it was well done; and now, Gentlemen, (ſaid "his Lordſhip) I will detain you no longer, for I deſire not to protract "my Life:" His Lordſhip then ſaluted the Company in a Manner ſo chearful, as drew Tears from every Eye but his own, and haſtened to the Scaffold.

But before we view his Lordſhip upon the Scaffold, it is but juſt to the Memory of that great, but unhappy Man, to acquaint the Public what was his Deportment in his Retirement here: It was graceful without Affectation, chearful but not preſumptuous; he converſed freely with his Friends, twice refreſhed himſelf with a Bit of Bread and a Glaſs of Wine, and deſired the Company to drink to him ain degrae ta Haiven; but, above all, he called frequently upon God, and ſeemed both willing and prepared to die.

When his Lordſhip mounted the Scaffold, he did it with ſo undaunted a Step as ſurprized every Spectator that was unacquainted with the Greatneſs of his Soul: His Lordſhip appeared there in the very ſame Regimentals he wore at the Battle of Culloden; and ſo far was he from having the leaſt Concern himſelf at the Fear of Death, that he frequently reproved his Friends that were about him for ſhewing any: His Lordſhip walked round the Scaffold, bowed to the People, read the following Inſcription upon his Coffin; Arthurus Dominus de Balmerino decollatus 18 die Auguſti, 1746, Ætatis ſuæ 58; ſaid it was right, and with ſeeming Pleaſure looked at the Block, which he called his Pillow of Reſt.

His Lordſhip then took a Paper out of his Pocket, which he read to the few about him, and delivered to the Sheriff to do with it as he ſhould think proper.

Whatever may be offered in Excuſe for his Lordſhip's making that Speech in his laſt Moments, nothing but the higheſt Authority can juſtify the publiſhing it.

His Lordſhip to the laſt profeſſed his entire Ignorance as to the Order for giving no Quarter to the Duke's Army; and added, "that he would "not (knowingly) have acted under ſuch Order, becauſe he looked upon "it as unmilitary, and beneath the Character of a Soldier."

Nor is it to be here omitted, that though his Lordſhip, from his unhappy political Principles, diſowned any Allegiance to his Majeſty; yet he, from his moral ones, acknowledged him to be a Prince of the "greateſt Magnanimity and Mercy."

His Lordſhip then called for the Executioner, who being introduced to him, was about to aſk his Lordſhip's Forgiveneſs; but my Lord ſtopped him, and ſaid, "Friend, you need not aſk me Forgiveneſs; the "Execution of your Duty is commendable." His Lordſhip then preſenting the Executioner with three Guineas, ſaid, "Friend, I never had "much Money, this is all I have, I wiſh it was more for your Sake, "and am ſorry I can add nothing elſe to it, but my Coat and Waiſt"coat;" which his Lordſhip inſtantly took off, and placed on his Coffin for the Executioner.

His Lordſhip then prepared himſelf for the Block by putting on a Flannel Waiſtcoat that had been made for the Occaſion, and a Plaid Cap upon his Head; after which his Lordſhip went to the Block, in order to ſhew the Executioner the Signal for the Blow, which was the dropping down of his Arms.

* To the PUBLIC. As I officiated for one of the Under-Sheriffs the Day of the Execution of the Lords Kilmarnock and Balmerino, I had an Opportunity of minuting down every thing that paſſed, worthy of Obſervation, upon that melancholy Occaſion.—This I did at that Time for my own Curioſity only, and the following is a faithful Relation as taken from thoſe Minutes; and which, at the Importunities of many Gentlemen, I have conſented to the Publication of, in order to ſilence the many erroneous Accounts that have been publiſhed, and to take off ſeveral cruel Aſperſions that have been thrown out touching the Behaviour of thoſe unhappy Lords.——I have made little or no Obſervations in the Narration, much leſs ſhall I do it here; being ſatisfied that thoſe whom the one will not, the other cannot convince.

Aldermanbury, Auguſt 22, 1746. T. FORD.

His Lordſhip then returning to his Friends, took his laſt Farewel of them; and having once more taken a View of the great Number of Spectators, his Lordſhip ſaid, I am afraid there are ſome who may think my Behaviour bold; and ſpeaking to a Gentleman near him, added, Remember, Sir, what I tell you, it ariſes from a Confidence in God, and a clear Conſcience.

His Lordſhip then obſerving the Executioner with the Axe in his Hand, took it from him, and having felt the Edge, returned it him again, at the ſame Time ſhewing him where to ſtrike the Blow, and animating him to do it with Reſolution: For in that, Friend, (ſaid his Lordſhip) will conſiſt your Mercy.

His Lordſhip then, with the ſame ſurprizing Countenance, kneeled down at the Block, and having with his Arms extended ſaid this ſhort Prayer, O Lord, reward my Friends, forgive my Enemies, * and receive my Soul, ſubmitted, and gave the Signal to the Executioner; and I wiſh I could conclude, that his Head had been taken off at one Blow: But the Executioner was ſo terrified at his Lordſhip's Intrepidity, and the Suddenneſs of the Signal, that notwithſtanding he ſtruck his Lordſhip in the Part directed, yet the Force of the Blow was not ſufficient to ſever the Head from the Body, though (happily) ſufficient to deprive him of all Senſation.---After the firſt Blow, his Lordſhip's Head fell back upon his Shoulders, but being afterwards ſevered at two more gentle Blows, was then received into a Piece of red Baize, and with his Body depoſited in his Coffin, and delivered to his Friends.

There were ſeveral Pamphlets publiſhed at this Time, relating to the different Behaviour of theſe two Lords, and ſome Advertiſements againſt Mr. Ford's Account; but as there was no Name put to them, they did not gain much Credit.---But one of theſe Pamphlets, intituled, Seaſonable Reflections on the dying Words and Deportment of that great but unhappy Man, Arthur Lord Balmerino, in a Letter to Mr. Ford, concludes thus in an Appendix: "There is a Gentleman of undoubted Veracity, who "attended the Execution of Lord Balmerino, poſitively affirms, and is "ready to corroborate his Affirmation by the moſt ſolemn Proof, that "when his Lordſhip kneeled down at the Block, and ſubmitted to the "Stroke of Juſtice, he made no Prayer whatever; but this will be bet-"ter expreſſed in the Gentleman's own Words in Writing, to the "Original whereof (now in the Hands of the Publiſher) his Name is "ſubſcribed, viz.

"I attended the Execution of the late Lord Balmerino, and was one of thoſe "who held the Cloth to receive Lord Balmerino's Head, and am ready to "make Oath, if required, that I heard No Prayer made by Lord Balmerino, "as is inſerted in Mr. Ford's Account; and that if there had been any Prayer, "I muſt have heard it, as well as any other Perſon preſent, &c.

"It is to be obſerved, this Gentleman avers that he himſelf kneeled "down ſo near the Block, when he held the Cloth, that if any Thing "had been ſpoken by his Lordſhip, it was impoſſible but he muſt have "heard it; that it was he who, after the ſecond Blow, took the Lord "by the Arm, and drew up his Body, to ſet the Head in a Poſition for "the Executioner's completing his Work. He adds further, (in mani-"feſt Contradiction to Mr. Ford) that his Lordſhip came upon the "Scaffold, in a Flannel Waiſtcoat and Shirt, and did not put either on "after he was there; but pulled off the Waiſtcoat, and had only the Shirt "on, when he laid his Head on the Block."

On theſe Publications, Mr. Ford advertiſed in the Public Papers, as followeth:

To the PUBLIC.

THE Account I publiſhed of the Behaviour of the Rebel Lords at their Execution, was for your Satisfaction only, beyond which I neither had or expected any Advantage; yet from that bare Relation with Truth and Impartiality, ſeveral nameleſs Pamphleteers and Advertiſers have, through Faction, or worſe Motives, preſumed to draw ſeveral unwarrantable Inferences as to my political Principles.

The Authors being concealed, are unworthy of other Notice, ſince nothing is eaſier to an ingenuous and unprejudiced Mind, than to diſtinguiſh between the Subject and the Man: My Lord Kilmarnock was happily educated in RIGHT Principles, which he deviated from and repented; whereas the great, though unhappy, Lord Balmerino, was UNFORTUNATE in HIS;------but as he lived,---he died.

Aldermanbury. T. FORD.

Copy of the Paper which was read by Arthur, Lord Balmerino, upon the Scaffold at Tower-Hill, and delivered by him to the Sheriffs of London, juſt before his Execution, on Monday, Aug. 18, 1746.*

I WAS brought up in True, Loyal, and Anti-Revolution Principles, and I hope the World is convinced that they ſtick to me.

I muſt acknowledge I did a very inconſiderate Thing, for which I am heartily ſorry, in accepting of a Company of Foot from the Princeſs Anne, who I know had no more Right to the Crown than her Predeceſſor, the Prince of Orange ***************.

To make Amends for what I had done, I joined the * (Pretender) when he was in Scotland in 1715; and when all was over, I made my Eſcape, and lived abroad till the Year 1734.

In the Beginning of that Year, I got a Letter from my Father, which very much ſurprized me. It was to let me know, he had a Promiſe of a Remiſſion for me: I did not know what to do; I was then (I think) in the Canton of Berne, and had Nobody to adviſe with: But next Morning I wrote a Letter to the * (Pretender) who was then at Rome, to acquaint the * (Pretender) that this was done without my Aſking or Knowledge, and that I would not accept of it without his Conſent.

I had, in Anſwer to mine, a Letter written with * (the Pretender's) own Hand, allowing me to go Home; and he told me his Banker would give me Money for my travelling Charges, when I came to Paris, which accordingly I got.

When * (the Pretender's Son) came to Edinburgh, I joined him, though I might eaſily have excuſed myſelf from taking Arms on Account of my Age; but I never could have had Peace of Conſcience if I had ſtayed at Home, \ made for a Company for his Son the Lord M'Leod; and as he had Reaſon to hope for Succeſs, he directed the Gentlemen whom he intended to be Subalterns in the Company, to levy the Men; and the Levies went on accordingly; and the Earl's Zeal for the preſent Government continued unſhaken until this Period: And for this he appeals to Sir John Cope, Mr. Forbes, and to the Atteſtations of eight Preſbyterian Miniſters, in the Hands of his Grace the Duke of Newcaſtle.

But when it was known that the Subalterns in Lord M'Leod's Company were to be named by the Lord Fortroſe, and the Subalterns that the Earl had in View were diſappointed, he was immediately beſet by deſigning Men, and they uſed all their Art and Cunning upon the Earl to ſeduce him from his Duty; but no Reaſon whatſoever could have had this Effect, if he had not been intoxicated with Liquor; and he no ſooner recovered his Underſtanding, but he reflected with Horror upon what he had done; and for this he appeals to Mr. Brodie, Lord Lyon's Declaration, in the Hands of the Duke of Newcaſtle, and to the Knowledge of the other Members of both Houſes of Parliament in the Earl's Neighbourhood.

This unhappy Lord, ſoon after engaging in this Rebellion, went to Perth, and continued there a Month, intirely in a private Capacity; for he aſſiſted at none of the Reviews of the Rebels, mounted none of their Guards, bore no Arms, iſſued no Orders, but employed his Time chiefly in the Company of his Majeſty's Officers, who were Priſoners there, and laboured Night and Day to procure them all Manner of Indulgences; and the only Uſe he made of his Credit in the Rebel Army, was to make their Captivity eaſy, in which he was fortunate enough to ſucceed in moſt Caſes; and he appeals to thoſe Gentlemen in this Reſpect.

He did, indeed, afterwards, accept of a Command to levy the Ceſs, Exciſe, and other Contributions in the Shires of Fife and Kinroſs, to the Amount of 13000 l. but he preſerved ſuch Diſcipline among the Soldiers under his Command, that though he intimated his Orders, upon Pain of Military Execution, agreeable to the Terms in which they were delivered to him, yet he avoided all Methods of enforcing them, and returned without levying one Shilling, which, in a great Meaſure, ſaved his Majeſty's faithful Subjects from thoſe Exactions; and during his Stay in thoſe Countries, the Inhabitants were uninjured in their Perſons, and protected in their Properties; and he gave up that Command, that he might not be an Actor in, or a Witneſs to the Severities which he then thought to be unavoidable; and for this he appeals to Certificates from Peers and Commoners of Fife and Kinroſs, in the Duke of Newcaſtle's Hands.

Upon his Return from this Command, he went, attended only by his own Domeſtics, to a Gentleman's Houſe, where he reſided for ſome Time in a private Way, without Command or Commiſſion, and without taking upon him any Concern, but the Continuance of all the good Offices he could exert for the Eaſe and Protection of his Majeſty's Subjects.

The Action of Falkirk gave him a freſh, but melancholy Opportunity, of doing all the Acts of Humanity in his Power to his Majeſty's Troops, that were either taken or wounded in that Conflict; and he extended his Cares even to many of the unfortunate Perſons who loſt their Lives in his Majeſty's Service.

When the Name of his Royal Highneſs the Duke obliged the Rebel Army to march North, he continued without any Command.

When he arrived at Inverneſs, a Command was again impoſed upon him, to repair to the Counties of Roſs and Sutherland, and there to raiſe all the Men in that Country in Arms, levy large Sums of Money by Contribution, and large Quantities of Meal; and with ſtrict Orders, that in caſe thoſe Demands were not complied with, to uſe all Manner of Military Execution, by burning Houſes, deſtroying Cattle, and other Severities: But ſo averſe was he to theſe Methods of Violence, that he levied no Men in thoſe Parts, and even his own Tenants in that Neighbourhood continued peaceable at Home; and he alſo granted Protections to all who aſked them, and he ſupported his Protections by Parties, and he preſerved the Houſe of Sir Robert Munro, and of his Brother Cullcairn, which were particularly doomed for Deſtruction by the Rebels; nor would he truſt this Protection to others, but went himſelf, and took the proper Meaſures for their Preſervation; and he uſed the ſame Tenderneſs and Care towards the Houſe and Family of the Earl of Sutherland, for which he appeals to that Noble Lord. And upon the whole of this Article, though the unfortunate Earl notified the Orders he had from the Pretender, with all the ſevere Injunctions they contained, yet he executed none of thoſe Severities; and his Delays were in ſome Meaſure ſalutary, as they prevented the full Execution of them, by thoſe who were ſent in his Place.

At the ſame Time his Houſe was a Sanctuary to the Effects of his Majeſty's loyal Subjects, and particularly of thoſe employed in his Majeſty's Service under Lord Loudoun.

He received His Majeſty's moſt gracious Pardon.

NUMBER XXII.

Relating to Lord LOVAT.

IN Lord Lovat's Trial, St. Tr. Vol. IX. p. *668. after the Confeſſion of the Attorney-General, read thus:

" Mr. Murray being brought to the Bar of the Court of King's-Bench, " by Habeas Corpus directed to the Lieutenant of the Tower, the fore- " going Record (p. *664, &c.) was read to him by the Secondary on the " Crown Side: And the Attorney-General prayed that Execution might " be awarded. The Secondary then demanded of him, what he had to " ſay why Execution ſhould not be awarded?

" The Priſoner Ore tenus pleaded, that he did ſurrender himſelf to the " Lord Juſtice Clerk of Scotland (who is a Juſtice of the Peace) at Edin- " burgh, the 28th Day of June laſt; whereupon the Attorney-General " declared, that he had Authority from his Majeſty to confeſs the Truth " of the Priſoner's Plea, and did accordingly confeſs it. And the Court " ordered the Priſoner's Plea, and the Attorney-General's Confeſſion, to " be recorded; and that the Attorney take nothing by his Motion, and " that the Priſoner be remanded." Foſter's Reports, p. 50.

And Page *678. in that Trial, after Mr. Murray's ſaying, " I did not " ntend at that particular Time to ſurrender myſelf; and I preſume it is " not neceſſary for me to ſay now, whether I ever did intend it, or not: " But at the Time that the Party of Dragoons came to the Houſe where " I then was, the Doors were ſhut, and I was in ſuch a Poſition, as that " I could have killed two of them myſelf; but I rather choſe to ſubmit " myſelf, and throw down my Arms," read as followeth:

The London Gazette, publiſhed by Authority, July 5, 1746, relates it thus:

" Edinburgh, June 29. Upon Information that John Murray, of " Broughton, late Secretary to the Pretender's Son, had on Friday Night " dined at Kilbucco, and had that Night gone to the Houſe of Mr. Hunter " of Polmood, who married Mr. Murray's Siſter; John Smith, Serjeant in " St. George's Dragoons, with ſeven private Men then under his Com- " mand at Broughton, was ordered thither with a Guide; and Yeſterday, " at Three o'Clock in the Morning, he ſeized Mr. Murray at the Houſe " of Polmood, and the ſame Day he was brought before the Lord Juſtice " Clerk, and was committed cloſe Priſoner to the Caſtle of Edinburgh. " Upon his Examination he declared, That the Pretender's Son, with " Sullivan and O'Neal, both Iriſh, and no other Perſon in Company, did, " about four Days after the Battle of Culloden, go off from Moidart in an " open Boat, in order to get on board a Ship: But that he (Murray) " being at that Time indiſpoſed, was not able to go with him. The " ſaid Murray had been moſtly with Lochiel, and his Uncle Major " Kennedy, and his Brother, in a ſtarving Way, lying on the Sides of " Hills all Day, and travelling or wandering all Night, with Scouts at a " Mile or half a Mile's Diſtance, never daring to ſtay two Nights in a " Place. Lochiel was very ill, wounded in the Heel, and obliged to uſe " a Horſe; and he (Murray), unable to bear Fatigue and Want any " longer, croſſed the Hill without a Servant, and came by Monteith to " the Place where he was taken."

Mr. Juſtice Foſter, in his Crown Caſes, p. 50. makes this Obſervation: " Note, This Gentleman was made Uſe of as an Evidence againſt Lord " Lovat on his Impeachment. And it was ſuggeſted on that Occaſion, " that the Attorney-General's confeſſing the Truth of the Plea by War- " rant from his Majeſty, was a Strain of Prerogative, calculated to elude " the Force of the Act of Attainder, and to ſerve the Turn of making " Mr. Murray an Evidence. But whoever conſidereth that he was " actually brought before the Lord Juſtice Clerk on the 28th Day of " June, (fourteen Days before the Time limited by the Act for his ſur- " rendering was expired) and was the ſame Day by him committed to the " Caſtle of Edinburgh, where he was kept cloſe Priſoner till he was re- " moved to the Tower; whoever conſidereth this, muſt admit, that, " with whatever View he might be brought up at this Time, he had " merely that Juſtice done him now by his Majeſty's Order, which at " one Time or other, whenever he ſhould have been brought up, on the " Foot of the Act of Attainder, could not be denied him.

" The Intent of the Act was anſwered by his being made ameſnable to " Juſtice before the Time limited for his Surrender. And he being kept " cloſe Priſoner till the Day for Surrendering was paſt, it was put out of " his Power to comply ſtrictly with the Letter of it; and therefore his " Non-compliance ought not to be fatal to him."---See Roger Johnſon's Caſe, Foſter, p. 46. Strange, Vol. II. p. 824.

The Judge ſays further, (in a Note) " I have been informed that " Mr. Murray was now brought up, to obviate an Objection that might " have been made to his Evidence upon the Authority of Lord Duffus's " Caſe, reported in Com. 440. but that Caſe differeth from this. Lord " Duffus was not ameſnable to Juſtice before the Expiration of the Time " given by the Act; nor, merely through his own Default, could be: But " I doubt Lord Duffus's Caſe favoured too much of the Summum Jus.

In Page *697. of Lord Lovat's Trial, Mention is made of the Lord Preſident's Letter to Lord Lovat, and his Anſwer to it: we here inſert the Letter, as it is an excellent one, and a Perſuaſive againſt his Lordſhip's ruining ruining himself and Family by running into the Rebellion, with Lord Lovat's Answer to it, from the Memoirs of the Life of Lord Lovat, p. 101.

Lord President's Letter to Lord Lovat, dated at Inverness, the 28*th* October, 1745.

" My Lord,

" AS I have now the Honour of being charged with the publick Affairs in this Part of the Kingdom, I can no longer remain a Spectator of your Lordship's Conduct, and see the double Game you have played for some Time past, without betraying the Trust reposed in me, and at once risquing my Reputation, and the Fidelity that I owe to his Majesty as a good Subject. Your Lordship's Actions now discover evidently your Inclinations, and leave us no further in the Dark about what Side you are to choose in the present unhappy Insurrection: You have now so far pulled off the Mask, that we can see the Mark you aim at, though, on former Occasions, you have had the Skill and Address to disguise your Intentions in Matters of far less Importance. And indeed, methinks, a little more of your Lordship's wonted Artifice would not have been amiss, whatever had been your private Sentiments with respect to this unnatural Rebellion. You should, my Lord, have duly considered and estimated the Advantages that would arise to your Lordship from its Success, and balanced them with the Risques you run if it should happen to miscarry; and above all Things, you ought to have considered your own Safety, and allowed that the chief Place in your System of Politicks; which, I persuade myself, would have induced your Lordship to have played the Game after a quite different Manner, and with a much greater Degree of Caution and Policy. But so far has your Lordship been from acting with your ordinary Finesse and Circumspection on this Occasion, that you sent away your Son and the best Part of your Clan to join the Pretender, with as little Concern as if no Danger had attended such a Step: I say, sent them away; for we are not to imagine they went of themselves, or would have ventured to take Arms without your Lordship's Concurrence and Approbation: This, however, you are pretty sure cannot be easily proved, which I believe indeed may be true: But I cannot think it will be a difficult Matter to make it appear, that the whole Strain of your Lordship's Conversation in every Company where you have appeared, since the Pretender's Arrival, has tended to pervert the Minds of his Majesty's Subjects, and seduce them from their Allegiance: And give me Leave to tell you, my Lord, even this falls under the Construction of Treason, and is no less liable to Punishment than open Rebellion; as I am afraid your Lordship will find when once this Insurrection is crushed, and the Government at Leisure to examine into the Affair. And I am sorry to tell you, my Lord, that I could sooner undertake to plead the Cause of any of those unhappy Gentlemen, who are just now actually in Arms against his Majesty, and I could say more in Defence of their Conduct, than I can in Defence of your Lordship's. The Duke of Perth and Lord Ogilvy never qualified, nor did they ever receive the smallest Favour from the present Government; but, on the contrary, were both stripped of their Titles and Honours, and from Men of the first Quality, reduced to the State of private Gentlemen, since the Revolution, and may both be supposed to act from a Principle of Resentment, and only take up Arms to recover what they thought themselves unjustly deprived of. Lord George Murray never had any Place or Pension from the Public, and was, no Doubt, drawn in by the Influence of the Marquis of Tullibardin, perhaps, touched with Pity and Commiseration for his eldest Brother, who has spent the best Part of his Life in Exile, and undoubtedly upon an Allowance much inferior to his Dignity. These and such-like Apologies may be offered in Defence of most of the leading Men in the present Rebellion: But what shall I say in Favour of you, my Lord? You, who have flourished under the present happy Establishment; you, who, in the Beginning of your Days, forfeited both your Life and Fortune, and yet, by the Benignity of the Government, was not only indulged in the Liberty of living at Home, but even restored to all you could lay Claim to! Nay, his Majesty's Goodness went so far as to employ your Lordship in his Service, and was pleased to honour you with the Command of one of the Independent Companies that were raised some Years ago in the Highlands, which you enjoyed for a very long Time: So that both Duty and Gratitude ought to have influenced your Lordship's Conduct at this critical Juncture, and disposed you to have acted a Part quite different from what you have done. But there are some Men whom no Duty can bind, nor no Favour can oblige; and, I am afraid, if a timely Repentance do not prevent it, your Lordship will, not unjustly, be ranked among that Number. You now see, my Lord, how unanimous the People of England are against the Pretender; and what Forces they are mustering up to oppose him. The King has ordered Home his Troops; several Noblemen have raised Regiments at their own Expences; and every County and Corporation throughout the Kingdom are entering into Associations in Defence of the present Establishment: So that these few unhappy Gentlemen, who are engaged in this Rebellion, will have Armies after Armies to encounter, and if your Lordship entertains any Hopes of their Success, you will find your Mistake, when it is too late to amend it. What I would therefore propose to your Lordship, as the only Expedient left to rescue you from the Hazard of a rigorous Prosecution, is to recall your Son and his Men immediately. This Step, I am persuaded, would produce several good Consequences; for, on the one Hand, it would prevent Numbers from joining the Rebels who now hang in Suspence; and, on the other, occasion a great many of those aleady engaged to desert and retire to their respective Habitations, and, perhaps, may be the Means of crushing the Rebellion, without further Bloodshed; which would do your Lordship a great deal of Honour, and such a remarkable Piece of Service would be amply rewarded by the Government. If you shall judge it proper, my Lord, to follow this Advice, it will give me a great deal of Pleasure, as it will contribute to stop the Progress of an unhappy Civil War, that threatens us with endless Calamities; but if your Lordship continues obstinate, and will not order your Men to disband and return Home, I shall be obliged to take you into Custody, be the Event what it will: And then your Lordship will run the Risque of having your Family extirpate as well as others of the Highland Chiefs. Now, my Lord, I have told your Lordship my Sentiments pretty freely, and no less out of Friendship to your Lordship than Duty to the Public. I might have advanced many other Arguments, to induce your Lordship to follow my Advice; but, methinks, what I have already said is sufficient; and so I shall only further add, that I am,

" Yours, &c.

Lord Lovat's Letter in Answer to the above, dated at Beaufort, 29*th* October, 1745.

" My dear Lord,

" I Received the Honour of your Lordship's Letter late last Night, of Yesterday's Date; and I own I never received one like it since I was born; and I give your Lordship ten thousand Thanks for the kind Freedom you make with me in it: For I see by it, that for my Misfortune, in having an obstinate, stubborn Son, and an ungrateful Kindred, my Family must go to Destruction, and I must lose my Life in my old Age. Such Usage looks rather like a Turkish or Persian Government, than like a British. Am I, my Lord, the first Father that has had an undutiful and unnatural Son? Or am I the first Man that has made a good Estate, and saw it destroyed in his own Time, by the mad, foolish Actions of an unnatural Son, who prefers his own extravagant Fancies to the solid Advice of an affectionate old Father? I have seen Instances of this in my own Time, but never heard till now, that the Foolishness of a Son would take away the Life and Liberty of a Father that lived peaceably, and was an honest Man, and well inclined to the rest of Mankind. But I find, the longer a Man lives, the more Wonders and extraordinary Things he sees. Now, my dear Lord, I beg Leave to tell you my Mind freely in my Turn. I thank God, I was born with very little Fear in the greatest Difficulties and Dangers by Sea and Land, and by God's Assistance, I have often saved my Life by the Firmness and Steadiness of my Resolutions; and though I have now but a little Remains of a Life that is clogged with Infirmities and Pain, yet, by God's Assistance, I am resolved to preserve it as long as I can. And though my Son should give way with the young People of his Clan, yet I will have six hundred brave Frasers at Home, many of them about my own Age, that will lose the last Drop of their Blood to preserve my Person; and I do assure your Lordship, if I am attacked, that I will sell my Life as dear as I can. For since I am as peaceable a Subject as any in the Kingdom, and as ready to pay the King's Taxes, and to do every thing that a faithful Subject ought to do, I know no Law or Reason that my Person should not be in Safety. I did use, and will use, the strongest Arguments that my Reason can suggest to me, by my Cousin Gertulegge, that he may repeat them to my Son; and if they should not prevail, is it any ways just or equitable that I should be punished for the Faults of my Son? Now, my dear Lord, as to the uncivil War that occasions my Misfortunes, and in which almost the whole Kingdom is involved, on one Side or the other, I humbly think, that Men should be moderate on both Sides, since it is morally impossible to know the Event; for thousands, ten thousands, on both Sides, are positive that their own Party will carry. And suppose that this venturous Prince should be utterly defeat, and that the Government should carry all in Triumph; no Man can think that any King upon the Throne would destroy so many ancient good Families, for engaging in a Cause that was always their Principle, and what they thought their Duty to support. King William was as great a King, as to his Knowledge of Government and Politics, as sate for many hundred Years upon the Throne of England; and when his General, who was one of the best in Europe, was defeat, and forced to run to save his Life, and all his Army routed at Killicranky by a Handful of Highlanders, not full two thousand in Number, King William was so far from desiring to extirpate them, that he sent the Earl of Breadalbane with twenty-five thousand Pounds Sterling, and sought no other Conditions from them, than that they should live peaceably at Home. So, my Lord, we cannot imagine, that though the Highlanders should be defeated at this Time, and most of them killed, and the Government full Masters of the Kingdom, that any Administration would be so cruel, as to endeavour to extirpate the whole Remains of the Highlanders. Besides, it would be a dangerous Enterprize, which we nor our Children would see at an End.

" I pray God we may never see such a Scene in our Country, as Subjects killing and destroying their Fellow-Subjects. For my Part, my Lord, I am resolved to live a peaceable Subject in my own House, and do nothing against the King or Government. And if I am attacked by the King's Guards, and his Captain-General at their Head, I will defend myself as long as I have Breath in me: And if I am killed here, it is not far to my Burial-place; and I will have, after I am dead, what I always wished, the Coronach of all the Women in my Country, to convey my Body to my Grave; and that was my Ambition, when I was in my happiest Situation in the World.

" I am, my Lord,

" Your Lordship's, &c."

An Account of the Behaviour of Simon Lord Lovat, from the Time his Death-Warrant was delivered, to the Day of his Execution. By a Gentleman who attended his Lordship in his last Moments.

THOUGH I was an Eye-witness of the extraordinary Behaviour of this Nobleman during his Trial, I little thought to find that uncommon Gaiety accompany him in his last Moments. I was indeed indeed too well acquainted with his Lordſhip to imagine he would ſhudder much at the Sight of Death; but yet I expected, that it would abate ſomewhat of his natural Vivacity, and reduce him to a more ſerious Turn of Mind: however, neither the Apprehenſion of Pain and Agony, or the Thoughts of his ſpeedy Diſſolution, ſeemed to give him any Uneaſineſs.

On Friday the 3d of April, when the Warrant came down for his Execution, and the Gentleman told him he was ſorry to be the Meſſenger of ſuch bad News; his Lordſhip replied very chearfully, God's Will be done! And then taking him by the Hand, drank his Health, thanked him kindly for the Favour (as he called it), and aſſured him he was ſo well ſatisfied with his Doom, that he would not change Stations with any Prince in Europe. His Lordſhip then ſat down with the Gentleman, drank Part of a Bottle of * Wine with Water, and ſeemed very compoſed.

In the Evening he ſmoked his Pipe, mentioned ſome Circumſtances relating to his Trial, and was very chearful. About Ten o'Clock he called for the Warders of the Tower to undreſs him, and while they were taking off his Shoes, told them, he ſhould not give them that Trouble much longer, for that he was to take his Leave of this World the next Thurſday.

The next Morning, his Lordſhip being informed of the Report that was raiſed, of an Engine to be erected to take off his Head, ſaid, "It "was a fine Contrivance; for, as his Neck was very ſhort, the Execu-"tioner would be puzzled to find it out with his Axe; and if ſuch a "Machine was made, they might call it Lord Lovat's Maiden."

He was very chearful all this Day, talked a good deal of his own Affairs, and, among other Things, ſaid, "That he was concerned in all "the Schemes that had been formed for reſtoring the Royal Family, "ſince he was fifteen Years old; but that he never betrayed a private "Man or a public Cauſe in his Life: That he never ſhed a Drop of Blood "with his own Hand, nor ever ſtruck a Man, except one young Noble-"man, whom he caned publickly for his Impertinence and Impiety."

Sunday. This Morning he roſe pretty early, and behaved as uſual; talked for ſome Time about his Family, and ſhewed us the Copy of a Letter he had ſent to his Son, which I ſhall here inſert, becauſe it contains his Lordſhip's Sentiments of Religion and a future State; and the Perſon who wrote it for him, aſſures me, it is an exact Copy of the Original.

A Copy of Lord Lovat's Letter to his Son Simon, now Priſoner in Edinburgh Caſtle.

"My dear Simon,

"NOtwithſtanding my great Diſtreſs and Affliction, you are always "preſent with me, and I offer my Prayers to Heaven for you.--- "You ſee now by Experience, that this World is but Vanity of Vani-"ties, and that there is no Truſt to be put in the Arm of Fleſh; you "ſee that God's Providence rules the World, and that no Man or "Family but muſt yield to it, whether he will or not. Happy is the "Man, that, in all the croſs Accidents of this Life, ſubmits himſelf to "the Will and Providence of God, with ſincere Humility and Patience. "It is the bleſſed Trinity, Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, that can de-"liver you and me from our preſent melancholy Situation: We have "provoked God by our Sins, which moſt certainly have brought theſe "Troubles upon us: I do ſincerely thank God for theſe Troubles, be-"cauſe they have brought me from the Way of Sin that I lived many "Years in, to a Way of Repentance and Humiliation, and inſtructed "me to follow my dear Saviour the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, as I ought to do. "I therefore, my dear Child, earneſtly beg of you, with the ſincere "Heart of a tender and affectionate Father, to repent of all your Sins "and Tranſgreſſions, and to throw yourſelf at the Foot of the Croſs of "Chriſt, begging for his Sufferings Sake, which you know were great, "to give you true Repentance, to forgive your Sins, and be reconciled "to you for the Sake of his Blood, that he ſhed upon the Croſs for Sin-"ners, and beg of him to preſerve you from the Snares of the Devil, "the World, and the Fleſh; which will be too many for you without "his divine Aſſiſtance; and if you have a true Contrition for your Sins, "and are reconciled with Zeal and Affection to your Saviour, you will "find Comforts that cannot be expreſſed. If you put your ſole Confi-"dence in Jeſus Chriſt, he will certainly bring you out of all your "Troubles, and make you the happieſt Lord Lovat that ever was. So, "my dear Child, I beg of you for God's Sake, for your own Sake, for "my Sake, and for the Sake of your Brothers and Siſters, to throw your-"ſelf upon God's Mercies, which have been ever of old; repent of your "Sins, and live a ſincere, Chriſtian, and righteous Life, and you will "certainly bring God's Bleſſing upon yourſelf, your Family, and "Kindred; and if you neglect this my paternal Advice, which by the "Laws of God and Nature I am obliged to give you, you may aſſure "yourſelf of being miſerable in this World, and eternally miſerable in "the next. I know not yet what my Fate may be; but bleſs God, I am "prepared to go to the Scaffold and Block To-morrow, if God in his "divine Will and Providence hath ordered it ſo. So, my dear Child, "do not be in the leaſt concerned for me; for I bleſs God I have ſtrong "Reaſons to hope, that when it is God's Will to call me out of this "World, it will be by his Mercy, and the Suffering of my Saviour Jeſus "Chriſt, to enjoy everlaſting Happineſs in the other World. I wiſh this "may be yours, and am,

"My dear Child,

"Your affectionate Father, &c."

Monday. His Lordſhip aroſe about Seven, and, according to his uſual Cuſtom called for a Glaſs of Wine and Water: Upon which the Warder aſked his Lordſhip, What Wine he would pleaſe to have? "Not white "Wine (ſays he), unleſs you would have me go with the Skitter to the "Block." For it ſeems white Wine generally gave him the Flux. Some Time after this, the Major came to ſee him, and aſked how he did. "Do! (ſays his Lordſhip) why, I am about doing very well, for I am "preparing myſelf, Sir, for a Place, where hardly any Majors, and very "few Lieutenant-Generals go."

A certain Nobleman came to ſee his Lordſhip this Day, and aſked him ſome Queſtions concerning his Religion. To whom he anſwered, "That he "was a Roman Catholick, and would die in that Faith: That he adhered "to the Rock upon which Chriſt built his Church; to Saint Peter, and "the Succeſſion of Paſtors from him down to the preſent Time; and "that he rejected and renounced all Sects and Communities that were "rejected by the Church." The Declaration of his being a Janſeniſt was occaſioned by the ſame Nobleman's aſking him, "Of what parti-"cular Sort of Catholicks? Are you a Jeſuit?" "A Jeſuit! No, "no, my Lord (anſwered he), I am a Janſeniſt." (The Janſeniſts are great Enemies to the Jeſuits.) And then owned that he was acquainted with ſeveral in France that were Janſeniſts, and was more intimate with them, than any other learned and religious Men in that Kingdom; and upon this Occaſion aſſured his Lordſhip, that, in his Senſe of a Roman Catholick, he was as far from being one as his Lordſhip, or any other Lord in the Houſe.

Having Occaſion this Afternoon to ſpeak of the late King George I: he gave his Majeſty a great Character, and added, "He was my Friend, "and I dearly loved him."---But we do not think proper to inſert the whole Converſation.

Tueſday. This Morning he roſe as uſual about Seven, and after drinking a Glaſs of Wine and Water, deſired one of the Warders to lay a Pillow at the Feet of the Bed, that he might try whether he could kneel down properly, and fix his Head low enough for the Block; which being done, he made the Eſſay, and told the Warder, "He believed, by this "ſhort Practice, he ſhould be able to act his Part in the Tragedy well "enough." He then aſked the ſaid Warder, if he thought the Executioner would be able to take off his Head without hacking him? "For (ſays he) "I have reſerved ten Guineas in a Purſe, which he ſhall have if he does "his Buſineſs well."

"My Lord (ſaid a Gentleman that came to wait upon him), I am "ſorry you ſhould have Occaſion for him at all." To this his Lordſhip replied, "So I believe are many of thoſe who were the Cauſe of my "coming hither, and for aught I know, all of them will by and bye. "The taking off my Head, I believe, will do them no Service; but if "it will, God bleſs them with it; though I cannot but think myſelf hardly "dealt by: In the firſt Place, I was ſtripped of every Thing, and might have "wanted even the common Neceſſaries of Life, had not my Couſin, "Mr. William Fraſer, advanced a conſiderable Sum of Money to General "Williamſon, and promiſed on certain Conditions to pay for my farther "Subſiſtence. And then, to be convicted by my own Servants, by the "Men that had been nurtured in my own Boſom, and I had been ſo "kind to, is ſhocking to human Nature; but I believe each of them has "a Sting of Conſcience on this Account, that will bear him Company "to the Grave; though I am very far from wiſhing either of them any "Evil. 'Tis a ſad Thing, Sir, for a Man's own Servants to take off "the Head of their Maſter and Chief." His Lordſhip then aſked the Gentleman, How he liked the Letter he had ſent to his Son? He anſwered, "I like it very well, it is a very good Letter." "I think "(ſays his Lordſhip) it is a Chriſtian Letter."

After this the Gentleman informed his Lordſhip, that one Mr. Painter, of St. John's College, Oxon, had ſent three Letters, viz. one to the King, one to the Earl of Cheſterfield, and the other to Mr. Pelham, deſiring that he might ſuffer in his Lordſhip's Stead: And that that to his Majeſty concluded in the following Manner: "In one Word, let Lovat "live! Puniſh the vile Traitor with his Life, but let me die; let me "bow down my Head to the Block, and receive, without Fear, that "friendly Blow, which, I verily believe, will only ſeparate the Soul "from its Body and Miſeries together." At which his Lordſhip expreſſed his Surprize. "This (ſays he) is an extraordinary Man indeed! "I ſhould be glad to know what Countryman he is, and whether the "Thing is Fact. Perhaps it may only be a Fineſſe in Politics, to caſt "an Odium on ſome particular Place or Perſon: But if there be ſuch "a Perſon, he is a Miracle in the preſent Age, and will be in the future, "for he even exceeds that Text of Scripture, which ſays, Greater Love "than this hath no Man, that a Man lay down his Life for his Friend. "However, this Man offers to ſuffer for a Stranger, nay, for one that "he ſtigmatizes with the Name of a vile Traitor. In ſhort, Sir, I am "afraid the poor Gentleman is weary of living in this wicked World, and, "if that be the Caſe, the Obligation is altered, becauſe a Part of the Bene-"fit is intended for himſelf."

Wedneſday. This Morning, about Two o'Clock, his Lordſhip prayed very devoutly for a conſiderable Time, and called upon the Lord for Mercy, which he often did before, with great Fervency. After this he fell aſleep, and we heard no more of him till Six, about which Time he called for the Warder to dreſs him, and ſeemed as gay as uſual. About Ten o'Clock he ſang Part of a Song, at which the Warder expreſſed his Surprize, and aſked his Lordſhip, How he could be ſo merry, when he was to die To-morrow? To which my Lord replied, that "he was as fit "for an Entertainment as ever he was in his Life." He then ſent for Mr. P——, the Barber, whoſe Father, they tell me, is a Muggletonian: While his Lordſhip was ſhaving, he talked a good deal about his Father's Principles; and when he was ſhaved, "Well (ſays he), pray give my "Service to your Father, and tell him I ſhall go to Heaven before him; "for I find he does not expect to go till the Day of Reſurrection, but I "hope to be there in a few Hours."

After this, he talked to a Gentleman who came to ſee him about ſome private Affairs, and then calling for a Baſon of Water to waſh himſelf, "Now, Gentlemen, I will ſhew you a Wonder (ſays he)! You ſhall ſee "a Man drown himſelf who was ſentenced to be beheaded, and by that "Means change the Law; and, Sir, I heartily wiſh it was in my Power "to change all Things; if it was, I would make a thorough Change "indeed."

About this Time another of his Lordſhip's Friends came to wait upon him, with whom he had ſome Talk concerning the Bill depending

* As his Lordſhip has been often branded with the Name of a Drunkard in the public Papers, I muſt do ſo much Juſtice to his Memory, as to aſſure the Public, that he never drank more than two Pints of Wine a Day during his whole Confinement, and never any without Water; and I have often heard his Lordſhip ſay, he was never drunk in his Life. 'Tis true, a conſiderable Quantity of Brandy and Rum was uſed every Night and Morning to bathe his Legs, which might probably give Birth to this Report; for he never drank a Dram himſelf, unleſs he was indiſpoſed, and then he generally took a little burnt Brandy with Bitters.

in Parliament with relation to the Scotch Affairs. His Lordſhip ſeemed very uneaſy about it, and wiſhed all thoſe Gentlemen who voted for it had the S——r.

He then told them he would have his Body carried to Scotland, to be interred in his own Tomb in the Church of * Kirk-Hill; and ſaid, that he had once made a Codicil to his Will, where all the Pipers from Johnie Groat's Houſe to Edinburgh were invited to play before his Corpſe, for which they were to have a handſome Allowance; and though that might not be thought proper now, yet he was ſure ſome of the good old Women in his Country would ſing a CORONACH (a Ceremony uſed at Funerals, much like the Iriſh Howl) before him. "And then," ſays he, "there will be "old crying and clapping of Hands, for I am one of the greateſt Chiefs "in the Highlands."

About this Time Sir H. M. and Sir L. G. came to take their Leaves of my Lord; he ſaluted them on their firſt coming in; but ſoon after told them, "If he had his Broad-ſword by him, he ſhould not ſcruple to chop off their "Heads, if he thought they were in the leaſt concerned in bringing in or "voting for the Bill now depending, for deſtroying the ancient Juriſdic-"tion and Privileges of the Highland Chiefs." And then added, "For "my Part, I die a Martyr for my Country."

After eating a hearty Dinner, he called one of the Warders to him: "Now, Willy," ſays he, "give me a Pipe of Tobacco, and that will be the "laſt I ſhall ever ſmoak, unleſs People ſmoak Tobacco in the other World."

Soon after this, the Governor of the Tower came to pay him a Viſit, when his Lordſhip aroſe, and offered him his eaſy Chair; which the Governor refuſing, and ſaying he was ſorry his Lordſhip ſhould give himſelf the Trouble to riſe out of his Seat on his Account, he anſwered, "What, "Sir, I hope you would not have me be unmannerly the laſt Day of my "Life."

Upon the Governor's coming in, his Lordſhip deferred ſmoaking his Pipe ſome Time longer, and talked about indifferent Matters. Mr. William Fraſer, his Lordſhip's Agent, and Mr. James Fraſer, came to wait on him at the ſame Time, with whom he talked a good while concerning his Family Affairs, and the Management of his Funeral.

After this he called again for his Pipe, and, while he was ſmoaking, aſked one of the Warders, if his Meſſage was carried to my Lord Traquair, and what Anſwer he brought? "His Lodſhip," replied the Warder, "bids "you an eternal Farewel, wiſhes you happy, and is offering up his Pray-"ers for you." "'Tis very kind of him," ſays my Lord, "and I thank "him for it. Come, Mr. Southbey," ſays he to the Warder, "give me "ſome Water, and put a little Wine upon it." And then taking up his Tobacco-ſtopper, "My Pipe is almoſt out," ſays he, "as well as my "Glaſs." He then aſked about General Williamſon's Family, ſpoke very kindly of the General; and being informed, that Miſs Williamſon was ſo affected that ſhe could not take her Leave of his Lordſhip, "God bleſs "the dear Child," ſays he, "and make her eternally happy, for ſhe is "a kind-hearted good Laſs." After this, his Lordſhip ſent a Meſſage to the Cook, deſiring her to roaſt a Piece of Veal, that it might be ready to mince for his Breakfaſt in the Morning. He then deſired the Warders to ſit down and ſmoak with him, which they did, and drank a Glaſs of Wine, and wiſhed his Lordſhip a good Journey. "Amen," quoth my Lord; and then knocking the Aſhes out of his Pipe, "Now, Gentlemen," ſays he, "the End of all human Grandeur is like this Snuff of Tobacco." His Lordſhip ſeemed to have a great Regard for his two Warders. After his Pipe was out, he thanked them kindly for taking ſo much Care of him; "And now, Gentlemen," ſays he, "I have but one Favour more to aſk "of you; and that is, to go upon the Scaffold with me, and not leave me "till you ſee this Head cut off this Body." They both promiſed his Lordſhip; and afterwards one of them told him, that if ever he lived to ſee his Son the Maſter of Lovat, he would let him know with what Tenderneſs his Lordſhip parted with him. "Do," ſays my Lord, "and he "will take Notice of you: If he don't, he won't do well. But pray," ſays he, "have you got any Wine for me in the Morning, and ſome Bit-"ters, if I ſhould want to carry any to the Scaffold?" Upon Inquiry, there was no Bitters left in the Bottle, and therefore his Lordſhip gave the Warder a Shilling to ſend for a Bottle of Stoughton's Elixir. When the Man was gone, the Warder recollected that there was ſome burnt Brandy and Bitters left in a Bottle, which his Lordſhip had with him to Weſtminſter-Hall, when on his Trial, and informed him of it. "'Tis very well, "very well, Sir," ſays he; "pray take it in your Pocket, and give me a "Sup if I ſhould want it." After this, a Circumſtance happened which ſurprized me prodigiouſly. His Lordſhip, who was eighty Years of Age, took up a Book with a ſmall Print. (I think it was the Size that the Printers call Long-Primer) and read by Candle-light near two Hours without Spectacles. Upon Inquiry, I was informed that his Lordſhip never uſed any. I knew he did not in the Day-time, but I thought he could not be able to ſee without their Aſſiſtance by Candle-light. This, I ſuppoſe, might be owing to his Lordſhip's Manner of Living, as alſo was that Circumſtance of his never having the Head-ach. I have obſerved already, that his Lordſhip was never drunk in his Life; and he has often declared, that he thought eating of Suppers was doing Violence to Nature, and committing a Sin againſt the Body. He ſeldom took any Breakfaſt; always made a very hearty Dinner, but never eat a Morſel for Supper. As his Lordſhip had a great Share of Learning, and ſpoke the Latin, French, and Engliſh fluently, and ſome other modern Languages indifferently, we aſked his Lordſhip concerning his Education. He ſaid, he ſtudied ſome Years at Aberdeen, and diſputed his Philoſophy in Greek. From this Topic he went to Religion again, and aſſured us, that he was bred a Proteſtant; but going abroad, and having ſome Diſputes with Father , he found himſelf very much ſtaggered in his Principles, and prayed to God to direct him in the right Way: That after this, he ſtudied Divinity and Controverſy three Years, and then turned Roman Catholick. "This is my "Faith," ſays he, "but I have Charity for all Mankind, and I believe "every ſincere honeſt Man bids fair for Heaven, let his Perſuaſion be "what it will; for the Mercies of the Almighty are great, and his Ways paſt "finding out."

After this, he pulled out a Silver Crucifix, and either kiſſed it, or rubbed his Mouth with it, I do not know which. Then handing it about, "Here's a Crucifix," ſays he, "did you ever ſee a better? Obſerve how "ſtrong the Expreſſion is, and how finely the Paſſions are delineated. We "keep Pictures of our beſt Friends, of our Fathers, Mothers, &c. and "pray why ſhould not we keep a Picture of Him who has done more than "all the World for us?"

His Lordſhip then aſked ſome Queſtion about Mr. Secretary Murray, which I cannot recollect, for indeed I did not very well underſtand it, and then ſaid, "We had a better Secretary when the Aſſociation was ſigned." After this, he mentioned Mr. Sollicitor Murray, and ſaid, he was a great Man, and he believed would meet with ſome Promotion, if he was not too far North.

About Nine o'Clock he deſired the Warders to undreſs him; and his Breeches, Shoes, and Stockings being pulled off, he ſtood before the Fire to warm him as uſual. The Warder aſked his Lordſhip, if he would pleaſe to go to Bed? "Not yet," ſays he, "I will warm my Feet a little more "firſt." "I think we have a very bad Fire," ſays the Warder. "That's "not my Fault," quoth his Lordſhip, joking; "you may e'en make a "better an you like it." Which he did, and then ſtanding up by his Lordſhip, told him, He was ſorry that the Morrow was to be ſuch a bad Day with him. "Bad! for what?" ſays my Lord; "Do you think I am "afraid of an Axe? 'Tis a Debt we all owe, and what we muſt all pay; "and do not you think it better to go off in this Manner, than to linger with "a Conſumption, Gout, Dropſy, Fever, &c. though I muſt needs own, "my Conſtitution is ſo good, that I could have lived twenty Years longer, "I believe, if I had not been called hither." Here my Lord offered to put off his Coat and Waiſtcoat; and as it was his Cuſtom to pull them off by the Bed-ſide, the Warder reminded him of it. "Good now," ſays my Lord, "I had forgot that I was ſo far from the Bed; but perhaps you "might have forgot too, had your Head been to be cut off To-morrow."

Thurſday. On this fatal Day his Lordſhip awaked about Three o'Clock in the Morning, and prayed moſt devoutly. At Five he got up, called for a Glaſs of Wine and Water, according to his uſual Cuſtom, and ſeemed ſtill as chearful as ever; then, being placed in his Chair, ſat and read till Seven, when he called for another Glaſs of Wine and Water. About Eight o'Clock he deſired Mr. Sherrington, one of the Warders, to ſend his Wig, that the Barber might have Time to comb it out. He then called for a Purſe to put his Money in for the Executioner, and deſired it might be a good one, leſt the Gentleman ſhould refuſe it. Mr. Southbey, one of his Lordſhip's Warders, I remember, brought him two Purſes, the one a green Silk knit, and the other a yellow Canvaſs, but which his Lordſhip made Choice of I really forget; However, it was a Purſe, as he obſerved, that no Man would diſlike with Ten Guineas in it.

As his Lordſhip was now within a few Hours of Death, and had behaved with ſuch ſurprizing Intrepidity during his whole Confinement, I was the more particular in obſerving every little Incident that happened. But though he had a great Share of Memory and Underſtanding, and an awful Idea of Religion and a future State, I could never obſerve, in his Geſture or Speech, the leaſt Shadow of Fear, or indeed any Symptoms of Uneaſineſs. His Behaviour was all of a Piece, and he was the ſame facetious Companion now, as he was before Sentence was paſſed againſt him. About half an Hour after Eight the Barber brought his Lordſhip's Wig, which not being powdered ſo much as uſual, on account of its being a rainy Day, he ſeemed angry, and ſaid, "That he went to the Block with "Pleaſure, and if he had a Suit of Velvet embroidered, he would wear it "on that Occaſion." After this, he ſpoke to the Barber again about his Principles, and told him his Notions were extremely ſingular: "For the "Soul," ſaid he, "is a ſpiritual Subſtance, and can no more be diſſolved "for a Time, or buried with the Body, than it can be annihilated en-"tirely;" and at the ſame Time ſmiled. "My Lord," ſaid the Barber, "you will ſee that." "Yes," anſwered his Lordſhip, "I hope to be in "Heaven by One o'Clock, or I ſhould not be ſo merry now." His Lordſhip then ſaluted the Barber, and bid him Farewell; and the Barber returned the Compliment, and wiſhed my Lord a good Paſſage; for theſe were his Words.

At half an Hour after Nine his Lordſhip called for a Plate of minced Veal, eat very heartily, and deſired the other Gentlemen that were with him to drink ſome Coffee or Chocolate, or both, which were brought for them; he then called for ſome Wine and Water, and drank the Healths of ſeveral of his Friends.

At Ten a terrible Accident happened upon the Hill, by the Fall of a Scaffold, which put all the People in great Confuſion; ſeveral

* In the Year 1736, Lord Lovat erected a ſtately Monument in the Church of Kirk-Hill, within a few Miles of Caſtle-Downey, with a pompous Inſcription. The brave Sir Robert Munro, (who was killed at the Battle of Falkirk) being on a Viſit to Lord Lovat, they went together to view the Monument. Sir Robert, upon reading the Inſcription, in a free Manner, ſaid, Simon, How the Devil came you to have the aſſurance to put up ſuch a bouſting romantic Inſcription? To which his Lordſhip anſwered, The Monument and Inſcription are chiefly calculated for the Frazers, who muſt believe whatever I their Chief require of them, and their Poſterity will think it as true as the Goſpel. The Inſcription is as followeth:

To the MEMORY of THOMAS Lord FRASER of LOVAT,
Who choſe rather to undergo the greateſt Hardſhips of Fortune, than to part with the ancient Honours of his Houſe, and bore theſe Hardſhips with undaunted Fortitude of Mind:
This MONUMENT was erected by
SIMON Lord FRASER of LOVAT, his Son,
Who likewiſe having undergone many and great Viciſſitudes of good and bad Fortune, through the Malice of his Enemies,
He, in the End, at the Head of his Clan, forced his Way to his paternal Inheritance, with his Sword in his Hand, and relieved his Kindred and Followers from Oppreſſion and Slavery:
And both at Home and in Foreign Countries, by his eminent Actions, in the War and the State,
He has acquired great Honours and Reputation.

Hic tegit oſſa lapis SIMONIS fortis in armis,
Reſtituit preſſum nam genus ille ſuum;
Hoc marmor poſuit cari Genitoris honori,
In genus afflictum par erat ejus amor.

Perſons

Perſons were killed, and Numbers maimed and bruiſed. At Eleven the Sheriffs of London ſent a Meſſage to demand his Body, which being communicated to his Lordſhip, he deſired the Curtains might be drawn, and that the Gentlemen would retire for a few Minutes while he ſaid a Prayer, which Requeſt was immediately complied with; but in a little Time he called for them again, ſaying, "I am ready."

When his Lordſhip had come down the firſt Pair of Stairs, General Williamſon invited him into his Room to reſt himſelf. On his firſt Entrance he paid his Reſpects to the Ladies with great Politeneſs, then to the Gentlemen, and talked very freely. He aſked the General in the French Language, "Whether he might have the Honour to ſee his "Lady, to return her his laſt Thanks for the Favours and Civilities he had "received?" To which the General anſwered in the ſame Tongue, "My "Spouſe is ſo greatly affected with your Lordſhip's Misfortunes, that ſhe "cannot bear the Shock of ſeeing you at this Time, and begs to be ex-"cuſed." He then made his Addreſſes to all the Company, and ſet out; but going down Stairs, he complained of them, (the Stairs) and ſaid, they were very troubleſome to him. When he came to the Door, he bowed to the People, and was then put into the Governor's Coach, and carried to the outer Gate, where he was taken out of the Governor's Coach, and delivered to the Sheriffs of the City of London and County of Middleſex, who conducted him in another Coach to a Houſe near the Scaffold which had been lined with black Cloth for his Lordſhip's Reception: Here he was taken into their immediate Cuſtody, and all his Friends and Relations denied Entrance. Upon which his Lordſhip inſtantly applied to the Sheriffs for the Time being, and deſired that his Friends and Relations, who accompanied him from the Tower, might be permitted to ſee him. Mr. Alderman Aſſop came to the Bottom of the Steps himſelf, and deſired his Lordſhip's Friends to walk up. After we entered, my Lord thanked the Sheriffs for this Favour, and ſaid, "It was a conſider-"able Conſolation to him, that his Body fell into the Hands of Gentle-"men of ſo much Honour;" and added, "I will give you, Gentlemen, "and the Government no farther Trouble, for I ſhall make no Speech; "though I have a Paper to leave, with which you may do as you think "proper." Here my Lord put his Hand in his Pocket, and delivered a Paper to one of the Sheriffs, and then told them, they might give the Word of Command when they pleaſed, and added, that he was accuſtomed to obey Command, for he had been an Officer in the Army many Years. After this a Gentleman preſent began to read a Prayer to his Lordſhip while he was ſitting; but my Lord called one of the Warders who attended him to help him up, that he might kneel. He then ſaid a Prayer by himſelf, which Nobody could hear; and turning about, was again ſet down in his Chair, and ſeemed very chearful. Mr. Sheriff then aſked his Lordſhip, "If he would refreſh himſelf with a Glaſs of Wine?" My Lord thanked him, but ſaid, "He could not drink any without warm "Water with it;" and that not being to be had in that Place, his Lordſhip took a little burnt Brandy and Bitters, which, as I obſerved before, he had ordered one of the Warders to take in his Pocket; and, turning to Mr. Sheriff, told him, "He was ready to go whenever he pleaſed." "My Lord," replied the Sheriff, "I would not hurry your Lordſhip;" and taking out his Watch, ſaid, "There is Half an Hour good, if your "Lordſhip don't tarry too long upon the Scaffold." My Lord then deſired that his Cloaths might be delivered to his Friends with his Corpſe, and not given to the Executioner, and ſaid, "For that Reaſon he ſhould "give him (the Executioner) ten Guineas."

He then aſked, if he might have the Axe brought him to feel if it was ſharp, and deſired that his Head, when taken off, might be received in a Cloth, and put into the Coffin. At this Mr. Sheriff ſtepped aſide, and obſerved to ſome Gentlemen preſent, "That he had received a Warrant "in the uſual Form for the Execution of his Lordſhip, and as it had not "been cuſtomary of late Years to expoſe the Head at the four Corners of "the Scaffold, he really thought he might indulge his Lordſhip with a "Promiſe as to that Point, for he did not think he could expoſe the "Head (though it was deſired, and indeed ordered by a Meſſage) without "being liable to Cenſure;" adding withal, "That he was truly ſenſible "of the Duty he owed his Majeſty, and ſhould always pay a great Regard "to the Orders he received from his Grace the Duke of Newcaſtle, or any "of the Miniſtry." And then turning to his Lordſhip, told him, "That "what he had deſired ſhould be punctually obſerved." My Lord thanked Mr. Sheriff very kindly, and then ſaluted his Friends, and told them, "He hoped his Blood would be the laſt ſpilled on that Occaſion."

When his Lordſhip came into the Paſſage leading to the Scaffold, he called to a Gentleman, and aſked his Name, who replied, it was North. "Well," ſays he, "let it be North and Gray." And added, with a Smile, "Come, my Lord North and Gray, conduct me to the Block." When his Lordſhip was going up the Steps to the Scaffold, he looked round, and ſeeing ſo many People, "God ſave us!" ſays he, "why ſhould there be "ſuch a Buſtle about taking off an old grey Head, that cannot get up three "Steps without two Men to ſupport it?"

Here turning about, and obſerving one of his Friends very much dejected, his Lordſhip clapped him upon the Shoulder, and ſaid, "Chear "up thy Heart, Man; I am not afraid, why ſhould you?"

The firſt Perſon he ſought when he came upon the Scaffold was the Executioner, who was immediately preſented to him; and after he had made his Obeiſance, my Lord put his Hand into his Pocket, and pulled out a Purſe with ten Guineas, ſaying, "Here, Sir, is ten Guineas for "you, pray do your Work well; for if you ſhould cut and hack my "Shoulders, and I ſhould be able to riſe again, I ſhall be very angry "with you." After this, he deſired the Executioner to ſhew him the Axe, which he refuſed to do without Leave from the Sheriff; but upon Application, this Requeſt was immediately granted; and when it was brought to him, he took Hold of it, and feeling upon the Edge, ſaid, "he believed it would do." Then he roſe from the Chair which was placed upon the Scaffold for him, and looked at his Coffin, on which was wrote, Simon Dominus Fraſer de Lovat, decollat. April 9, 1747, Ætat. ſuæ, 80.

He then ſat down again, and repeated the following Line out of Horace:

Dulce et decorum eſt pro Patriâ mori.

In Engliſh,

'Tis a glorious and pleaſant Thing to die for our Country.

And after that a Line out of Ovid:

Nam genus et proavos, et quæ non fecimus ipſi,
Vix ea noſtra voco.

In Engliſh,

For thoſe Things which were done either by our Fathers, or Anceſtors, and in which we ourſelves had no Share, I can ſcarcely call our own.

He then deſired all the People to withdraw from him, except his two Warders, who ſupported his Lordſhip, while he ſaid a Prayer. After this he called for Mr. William Fraſer, his Lordſhip's Sollicitor and Agent in Scotland; and holding up his Gold-headed Cane, ſaid, "I deliver you this "Cane in token of my Senſe of your faithful Services, and of my com-"mitting to you all the Power I have upon Earth." And then again embraced him. His Lordſhip now called for Mr. James Fraſer, and embracing him alſo, ſaid, "My dear James, I am going to Heaven, but "you muſt continue to crawl a little longer in this evil World." And taking his leave of both, he delivered his Hat to Mr. William Fraſer, and deſired him to take Care that the Executioner did not touch any of his Cloaths. He then took off his Wig, ordered his Cap to be put on, and putting off his Cloaths, delivered them with his Wig to Mr. Fraſer; and having unlooſed his Cravat and the Neck of his Shirt, he kneeled down to the Block, took Hold of the Cloth which was placed to receive his Head, and pulled it cloſe to him: But being placed too near the Block, the Executioner deſired his Lordſhip would remove a little farther back, which he did; and having placed his Neck in a proper Manner, he told the Executioner he would ſay a ſhort Prayer, and then drop his Handkerchief as a Signal. In this Poſture he remained about half a Minute, and then threw his Handkerchief upon the Floor, when the Executioner at one Blow ſevered his Head from the Body, which being received in a ſcarlet Cloth, was wrapped up, and, together with his Body, put into the Coffin, and carried in a Hearſe back to the Tower, where it remained till four o'Clock, and was then taken away by an Undertaker.

A Copy of the Paper delivered to the Sheriffs by Lord Lovat.

AS it may be reaſonably expected I ſhould ſay ſomething of myſelf in this Place, I declare that I die a true, but unworthy Member of the Holy, Catholic, Apoſtolick Church.

As to my Death, I cannot but look upon it as glorious, * * *

Reſolved, nemine contradicente, That the ſaid Pamphlet is an impudent, malicious, ſcandalous, and ſeditious Libel, falſely and moſt injuriouſly reflecting upon, and aſperſing the Proceedings of this Houſe, and tending to create Miſapprehenſions of the ſame in the Minds of the People, to the Diſhonour of this Houſe, and in Violation of the Privilege thereof.

Reſolved, nemine contradicente, That an humble Addreſs be preſented to his Majeſty, humbly to deſire his Majeſty, that he will be graciouſly pleaſed to give Directions to his Attorney General to proſecute the Authors or Author, the Printers or Printer, and the Publiſhers or Publiſher, of the ſaid ſcandalous Libel, in order that they may be brought to condign Puniſhment for the ſame.

Ordered, That the ſaid Addreſs be preſented to his Majeſty, by ſuch Members of this Houſe as are of his Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy Council.

The Day following, Mr. Comptroller reported to the Houſe, that their Addreſs of Yeſterday had been preſented to his Majeſty, and that his Majeſty had commanded him to acquaint the Houſe, that he had given Directions accordingly.

Accordingly he was tried on the following Information, July 6, 1752.

Of Michaelmas Term, in the twenty-fifth Year of King George the Second.

London. BE it remembered, That Sir Dudley Ryder, Knight, Attorney-General of our preſent Sovereign Lord the King, who for our ſaid preſent Sovereign Lord the King in this Behalf proſecuteth, in his proper Perſon cometh here into the Court of our ſaid preſent Sovereign Lord the King, before the King himſelf at Weſtminſter, on Wedneſday next after three Weeks from the Feaſt-Day of Saint Michael in this ſame Term, and for our ſaid preſent Sovereign Lord the King, giveth the Court here to underſtand and be informed, that *John Owen, late of London, Bookſeller, being a wicked, ſeditious, and ill-diſpoſed Perſon, and having no Regard for the Laws of this Realm, nor for the publick Peace and Tranquillity of this Kingdom, and well knowing that one Alexander Murray, late of the Pariſh of St. George, Hanover-Square, in the County of Middleſex, Eſquire, had been moſt juſtly and deſervedly committed to his Majeſty's Gaol of Newgate, in the City of London, by virtue of an Order of the Honourable Houſe of Commons of this Kingdom then aſſembled in Parliament, for a moſt groſs and flagrant Miſbehaviour and Contempt committed by him the ſaid Alexander Murray, againſt the ſaid Houſe, in refuſing to ſubmit to the Rules and Orders of the ſaid Houſe, and for acting in open Defiance of the Authority of the ſaid Houſe; but moſt unlawfully, wickedly, and maliciouſly, deviſing, contriving, and intending to aſperſe, ſcandalize, and vilify the whole Body of the Commons of this Kingdom in Parliament aſſembled, and moſt wickedly and audaciouſly to repreſent their Proceedings in Parliament as cruel, arbitrary, and oppreſſive; and to make it be believed and thought, as if the Commons in Parliament aſſembled were a moſt wicked, baſe, and degenerate Sett of Perſons, and had acted in their legiſlative Capacity in open Violation of the Conſtitution of this Kingdom, and had moſt daringly proſtituted their Power, and acted in Defiance of thoſe Laws which had been made and provided for the Security and Welfare of the Subjects of this Kingdom; and alſo moſt unlawfully, wickedly, and audaciouſly to repreſent the ſaid Houſe of Commons as a Court of Inquiſition; and moſt impudently to inſinuate, as if the Commitment of the ſaid Alexander Murray to his Majeſty's ſaid Gaol of Newgate was founded in Violence and Oppreſſion, and by that Means to arraign the public Juſtice and Proceedings of the ſaid Houſe, and to bring all the Commons of this Kingdom in Parliament aſſembled into an ill and bad Opinion, and into the utmoſt Hatred and Contempt, with all the Subjects of this Kingdom; and to raiſe, excite, and create moſt groundleſs and unreaſonable Fears and Apprehenſions in the Minds of all the ſaid Subjects, as if the Rights and Liberties of all the Subjects of this Kingdom, and the very Conſtitution of the Kingdom itſelf, were in the utmoſt Peril and Danger of being totally ſubverted and overturned, from an exceſſive and wanton Exerciſe of Power claimed by the ſaid Commons; and thereby to move, incite, and ſtir up all the Subjects of this Kingdom in a moſt unwarrantable Manner to vindicate, maintain, and aſſert their ſaid Rights and Liberties, without the leaſt Reaſon, Colour, or Pretence for the ſame; and alſo by that Means to moleſt and diſturb the happy State, and the publick Peace and Tranquillity of this Kingdom, at preſent ſo firmly and well eſtabliſhed under the mild and gentle Government and Adminiſtration of our ſaid preſent Sovereign Lord the King; upon the 29th Day of June, in the twenty-fifth Year of the Reign of our ſaid preſent Sovereign Lord George the Second, by the Grace of God, of Great-Britain, France and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, and ſo forth, with Force and Arms at London aforeſaid, (that is to ſay) at the Pariſh of St. Dunſtan in the Weſt, within the Ward of Farringdon Without, in London aforeſaid, a certain wicked, falſe, ſcandalous, ſeditious, and malicious Libel, intituled, "The Caſe of "the Hon. Alex. Murray, Eſq. (meaning the ſaid Alexander Murray, "Eſq. herein above-mentioned), in an Appeal to the People of Great-Bri"tain; more particularly, the Inhabitants of the City and Liberty of "Weſtminſter;" did moſt unlawfully, wickedly, ſeditiouſly, and maliciouſly print and publiſh, and did cauſe and procure to be printed and publiſhed: In which ſaid Libel, of and concerning the Houſe of Commons of this Kingdom in Parliament aſſembled, and alſo of and concerning the ſaid Alexander Murray, are contained (amongſt other Things) divers wicked, falſe, feigned, ſcandalous, ſeditious, and malicious Mat"ters, (that is to ſay) in one Part thereof according to the Tenor following, (to wit) "Whatever Air of Importance a Perſon may appear to aſ"ſume by thinking his particular Hardſhips a proper Object of the "public Attention; yet there are Inſtances, wherein the public and "private Intereſts are ſo intimately connected, that to let the latter paſs "unnoticed, would imply a tacit Reſignation of the former. Upon this "Principle, the Caſe of Mr. Murray (meaning the ſaid Alexander Mur"ray) may, without any Imputation of Vanity, be deemed worthy the "Conſideration of his Fellow-Subjects (meaning the Subjects of this King"dom): For though he alone may, hitherto, have felt the Weight of the "Puniſhment, it is not known how ſoon they may experience the fatal "Effects of the Precedent,—A Precedent founded on the moſt open Vio"lation of the Conſtitution, the moſt daring Proſtitution of Power, and "in Defiance of thoſe Laws provided for the Security and Welfare of a "free People (again meaning the Subjects of this Kingdom). But what "renders this Appeal, from a Sentence of the Repreſentatives, (meaning "the ſaid Order † of this Kingdom ſo aſſembled in Parliament as aforeſaid, by "virtue of which he the ſaid Alexander Murray was ſo committed to his Ma"jeſty's ſaid Gaol of Newgate as aforeſaid, for the Reaſons aforeſaid) to the "candid Judgment of their Conſtituents, (meaning the Subjects of this King"dom having a Right to vote in the Election of Members to ſerve in the Parlia"ment of this Kingdom) ſtill more neceſſary, is the peculiar Induſtry that "has been practiſed, to impoſe upon the Public a falſe Repreſentation of "the Offence, (meaning the ſaid Miſbehaviour and Contempt for which he "the ſaid Alexander Murray was ſo committed as aforeſaid) in order, if "poſſible, to juſtify the unexampled Barbarity of the Proſecution: For "whatever may have been the Pretence of vindicating the Honour and "Dignity of a particular Houſe, (meaning the Houſe of Commons of this "Kingdom ſo aſſembled in Parliament as aforeſaid) it will too plainly appear, "that greater Regard has been had to ſupport the private Pique and per"ſonal Reſentment of a certain turbulent Stateſman; whoſe Ambition "impatient of Controul, and whoſe Avarice abhorrent of Expence, de"termined him to offer up ſome exemplary Sacrifice to his devoted Thou"ſands, and an impious Oppoſition to his all-ſovereign Command." And in another Part thereof, according to the Tenor following, (to wit) "The Inhabitants of Weſtminſter, alarmed at the unconſtitutional Pro"ceedings carried on during the late Election (meaning the late Election "of a Member to ſerve in the preſent Parliament of this Kingdom for the City "and Liberty of Weſtminſter, in the ſaid County of Middleſex), and ex"aſperated to find a Repreſentative impoſed on them by the dictatorial "Authority of one Man in Oppoſition to a ſcrutinized Majority, had "Recourſe to the Houſe of Commons (meaning the Houſe of Commons of "this Kingdom then aſſembled in Parliament), flattering themſelves that "auguſt Aſſembly would vindicate their invaded Rights and Liberties, "nor ſuffer the Invaders to eſcape with Impunity; accordingly a Peti"tion (meaning a Petition of the Burgeſſes and Inhabitants of the ſaid City "and Liberty) was preſented, complaining of a falſe Return (meaning "the Return of the Member at the ſaid Election to ſerve in the preſent Parlia"ment of this Kingdom for the ſaid City and Liberty).——The D—l Fac"tion, conſcious of their illegal Practices, and apprehending a Detec"tion of them would inevitably be the Conſequence of a free Inquiry "into the Merits of the Election, (again meaning the ſaid Election of a "Member to ſerve in the preſent Parliament of this Kingdom for the ſaid City "and Liberty) determined at all Events to put a Stop to the Proſecution "of it (meaning the ſaid Petition); and, in order to ſtrike the Petitioners "with Terror, prevailed on their truſty Friend the High-Bailiff (mean"ing one Peter Leigh, Eſquire, the then High-Bailiff of the ſaid City and "Liberty, who was the proper Returning Officer at the ſaid Election), to aſ"ſume the laudable Character of Informer, and complain of ſome high "Crimes and Miſdemeanours committed againſt his ſacred Perſon; but "the more effectually to anſwer the Purpoſe, took eſpecial Care that the "Objects of this Complaint ſhould be ſome principal Witneſſes in Sup"port of the Petition (again meaning the ſaid Petition of the ſaid Burgeſſes "and Inhabitants of the City and Liberty aforeſaid, againſt the ſaid Return ſo "made as aforeſaid). However, as the Accuſation againſt the High"Bailiff (again meaning the ſaid Peter Leigh, then High-Bailiff of the ſaid "City and Liberty) was antecedent to his Complaint, it was thought, in "Point of Regularity and Juſtice, that the Conſideration of the latter "ſhould be poſtponed till the Determination of the former; more parti"cularly as the Offences alledged to have been committed againſt this "Magiſtrate, (again meaning the ſaid Peter Leigh) muſt neceſſarily appear "upon hearing the Merits of the Petition. This having produced a Debate, "and the S———r (meaning Speaker, that is to ſay, meaning the Right Ho"nourable Arthur Onſlow, Eſq. then Speaker of the Houſe of Commons of this "Kingdom), being called upon to give his Opinion in Point of Form and "Order, he (again meaning the ſaid Speaker) declared, That, To begin by "Inquiry into the Complaint of the High-Bailiff, (again meaning the ſaid "Peter Leigh, then High-Bailiff of the ſaid City and Liberty as afore"ſaid) was not only contrary to the Order and Method of Proceeding in that "Houſe (again meaning the ſaid Houſe of Commons), but of every other "Court of Juſtice, and inconſiſtent with Juſtice itſelf. Though theſe Rea"ſons might have ſome Prevalence with Part of the Houſe (again meaning "the ſaid Houſe of Commons ſo aſſembled in Parliament as aforeſaid), never"theleſs a Majority determined, that the High-Bailiff's Complaint "(again meaning the ſaid Complaint of the ſaid Peter Leigh, then High-"Bailiff of the ſaid City and Liberty as aforeſaid) ſhould be firſt heard, "which, if not ſufficient to terrify the Petitioners (again meaning the ſaid "Burgeſſes and Inhabitants of the ſaid City and Liberty) from their Purſuit "of Juſtice, would at leaſt produce the convenient Effect (to ſpeak in "the Phraſe of an inferior Court) of ſinking ſome material Evidence. "Thus, by a Kind of Parliamentary Legerdemain, the Accuſed became "the Accuſer, and the Witneſs had the Mortification to find himſelf "conjured into the Place of the Culprit. This equitable Determination "brought Mr. Murray (again meaning the ſaid Alexander Murray) to the "Bar (meaning the Bar of the ſaid Houſe of Commons then aſſembled in Parlia-

The Truth of the former Part of this Accuſation " Mr. Murray (again meaning the ſaid Alexander Murray) was ingenuous " enough to confeſs ;---and indeed, if this Species of Parliamentary " Smuggling was found neceſſary to be encouraged for any private " Reaſons of State, no Wonder an actual Attempt to prevent it ſhould " be deemed culpable by thoſe at the Helm :---But as in our Days this " cannot even be ſuppoſed, ſurely the mere ſaying a Man ſhould not do " what he ought not to do, is a Crime of ſuch a Nature, to which no " Legiſlators have even yet thought proper of annexing a Penalty. With " reſpect to the other Part, Mr. Gaſcoigne, and Mr. Carne the High- " Conſtable, Gentlemen entirely diſintereſted, teſtified, that they were " preſent, and heard the former Words, yet they never heard the latter " Expreſſion ; and what afforded the ſtrongeſt preſumptive Evidence " againſt ſuch a Declaration, was, that it evidently appeared no ſuch " Purpoſe was ever intended to be executed ; or how eaſy would it have " been for Mr. Murray (again meaning the ſaid Alexander Murray) with " his thouſand Volunteers, to have ſecured the Perſon of this Magiſtrate, " (again meaning the ſaid Peter Leigh, then High-Bailiff as aforeſaid) when " he met him (again meaning the ſaid Peter Leigh) going to the Huſtings " unſupported by a ſingle Peace-Officer or any other Attendant ? But in " order to turn the Scale entirely in Favour of Mr. Murray's Innocence, " the High-Bailiff himſelf was candid enough to acknowledge at the Bar, " (again meaning the Bar of the ſaid Houſe of Commons ſo aſſembled in Par- " liament as aforeſaid) that meeting Mr. Murray (again meaning the ſaid " Alexander Murray) in his Way from Baldwin's to the Huſtings, upon " being aſked the Queſtion, he (again meaning the ſaid Peter Leigh) did " then declare, That no Man could behave with more good Manners towards " him (again meaning the ſaid Peter Leigh) than Mr. Murray (again " meaning the ſaid Alexander Murray). Behold the next Witneſs coming " forth in the Character of a Journeyman Button-trimmer, and declar- " ing, That he ſaw Mr. Murray (again meaning the ſaid Alexander " Murray) at the Head of a great Mob, who meeting a Chimney-Sweeper, " aſked him, Who he was for ?—The Chimney-Sweeper anſwering, For Sir " George, (meaning Sir George Vandeput, Baronet, then a Candidate at " the ſaid Election of a Member to ſerve in the preſent Parliament for " the ſaid City and Liberty) Mr. Murray (again meaning the ſaid Alex- " ander Murray) replied, Then you are an honeſt Fellow, but Lord Trent- " ham (meaning the Honourable Granville Leveſon Gower, Eſquire, " commonly called Lord Viſcount Trentham, the other Candidate at the " ſaid Election) and the High-Bailiff (again meaning the ſaid Peter Leigh, " then High-Bailiff of the ſaid City and Liberty as aforeſaid) are two " great Villains, or two great damn'd Villains and Raſcals. What delectable " Dialogue !---Evidence how ſuited to the Solemnity of a Senatorial In- " quiry !---Muſt not the People (meaning the People of this Kingdom) " entertain the higheſt Opinion of their legiſlative Deputies, (meaning " the Commons of this Kingdom in this preſent Parliament aſſembled) when " they ſee them ſeriouſly attending, Auribus erectis, to ſuch im- " portant Diſcoveries ?---But unluckily, had this heinous Article of " Accuſation the Sanction of Truth to enforce it, what Matter does it " afford for the Cognizance of this Judicature ? (meaning the ſaid Houſe " of Commons ſo aſſembled in Parliament as aforeſaid.) Eſpecially, as it is " allowed to have paſſed long after the Declaration (meaning the Decla- " ration of the ſaid Peter Leigh, the ſaid High-Bailiff, by which the ſaid " Granville Leveſon Gower, Eſquire, commonly called Lord Viſcount Trent- " ham, was declared duly elected a Member to ſerve in the preſent Parliament " for the ſaid City and Liberty) was made ? Perſuaded I am, had the " Noble Lord himſelf (again meaning the ſaid Granville Leveſon Gower, " Eſquire, commonly called Lord Viſcount Trentham) given the leaſt Credit " to it, his punctilious Delicacy in Point of Honour would have ex- " pected a perſonal Explication from the Author of ſo ſcandalous an In- " dignity; nor is it to be imagined, a Perſon (again meaning the ſaid Gran- " ville Leveſon Gower, Eſquire, commonly called Lord Viſcount Trentham) " who ſo valiantly manifeſted his Heroiſm in a late French Affair, would " meanly buckle on the Armour of Privilege, and adopt a public Perſe- " cution in the Place of a private Reſentment. The next Authority " produced was that of a Tripe-Man, who paſſing along Henrietta-Street, " at the ſame Time the High-Bailiff was going to the Croſs-Keys, heard " Somebody behind him ſay, Is there Nobody will knock the Dog's (meaning the " ſaid Peter Leigh, then High-Bailiff as aforeſaid, his) Brains out ; when " clapping the High-Bailiff's Footman on the Shoulder, he told him, That is he " who uttered thoſe terrible Words, and then the Footman informed him that " Perſon's Name was Murray (meaning the ſaid Alexander Murray). " What a Janus-headed Witneſs is here ! who from hearing Words " uttered behind him in a Crowd, could identify the Perſon who ſpoke " them ? Did his Ears furniſh him with the Knowledge of the perſonal " Figure of Mr. Murray, whom he does not pretend to know before the " Footman's Information ? Or what Kind of Inſpiration enabled him to " diſcover, that the particular Dog's Brains meant by this Exclamation " belonged to the High-Bailiff ? But were it poſſible to pay any Regard " to ſuch inconſiſtent Evidence, ſtill the Commiſſion of this horrid " Offence muſt have been at leaſt two Hours after all Buſineſs relat- " ing to the Sanctum Sanctorum of St. Stephen's Chapel was finiſhed ; " conſequently ſubject to the Notice of ſome leſs ſacred Tribunal.——

" However ridiculous the Matter contained in theſe two laſt Articles of " Impeachment may appear, it cannot be denied, but that it muſt have " received a very notable Weight of Authority from the eminent Cha- " racters of the Witneſſes, who, from their Situation in Life, muſt be " concluded to have Underſtandings not to be impoſed upon, and Prin- " ciples of Honour not to be violated. What then will it avail the Cauſe " of Mr. Murray with the Public, any more than with the Senate, (again " meaning the ſaid Houſe of Commons ſo aſſembled in Parliament as aforeſaid) " to oppoſe the unqueſtionable Teſtimony of our Button-trimmer and " Tripe-man with that of a Noble Lord, an Honourable Baronet, and " a worthy Barriſter ? Nevertheleſs, as the ſame convincing Motives of " Condemnation may not poſſibly influence the Verdict without Doors, " I ſhall take the Liberty to produce the Authority of Lord Carpenter, " who was pleaſed to declare at the Bar, (again meaning the ſaid Bar of the " ſaid Houſe of Commons ſo aſſembled in Parliament as aforeſaid) that his " Lordſhip and Mr. Murray (again meaning the ſaid Alexander Murray) " were together from the Time the Declaration (again meaning the ſaid " Declaration of the ſaid Peter Leigh, the ſaid High-Bailiff, by which the " ſaid Granville Leveſon Gower, Eſquire, commonly called Lord Viſcount " Trentham, was declared duly elected as aforeſaid) was made till Dinner ; " that they were in Bedford-Street, where this great Mob was, by the " Button-trimmer, ſaid to be aſſembled, but never heard Mr. Murray " (again meaning the ſaid Alexander Murray) ſay any thing ſcurrilous of " Lord Trentham (again meaning the ſaid Granville Leveſon Gower, " Eſquire, commonly called Lord Viſcount Trentham) to a Chimney-ſweeper, " or any other Perſon whatever. His Lordſhip farther ſaid, that he was " Arm-in-Arm with Mr. Murray (again meaning the ſaid Alexander Mur- " ray) when the High-Bailiff paſſed cloſe by them through the Church- " Yard to the Croſs-Keys, (meaning the ſaid Tavern, commonly called or " known by the Name of the Croſs-Keys Tavern) which was near two " Hours after the Declaration, (again meaning the ſaid Declaration ſo made " by the ſaid Peter Leigh, the ſaid High-Bailiff as aforeſaid) but that he " never heard Mr. Murray utter the Exclamation laid to his Charge by " the Tripe-man ; and that if he had made uſe of any ſuch Expreſſions, " apprehended they could not have paſſed unnoticed by him ; that ſo " far from inciting the People to knock the High-Bailiff's (again meaning " the ſaid Peter Leigh, then High-Bailiff of the ſaid City and Liberty as " aforeſaid, his) Brains out, his Lordſhip declared, Mr. Murray (again " meaning the ſaid Alexander Murray) adviſed them, To leave him (again " meaning the ſaid Peter Leigh) to the Remorſe of his own Conſcience ; " aſſuring them, that would be a more ſevere Puniſhment than any they could " inflict. Sir John Tyrrell and Mr. Gaſcoigne, who were likewiſe cloſe by " Lord Carpenter and Mr. Murray (again meaning the ſaid Alexander " Murray) when the High-Bailiff paſſed from the Church to the Tavern, " were called to corroborate this Evidence ; which, in an Aſſembly " where moſt of its Members were ſo well acquainted with his Lord- " ſhip's Veracity and Honour, may ſeem an Act of Supererogation. In " the Courſe of this Examination, Lord Carpenter having ſaid, that he " and Mr. Murray were together all the Time, from the Declaration " till Dinner, and Sir John Tyrrell being aſked, if his Lordſhip was with " Mr. Murray when he firſt ſaw him, and anſwering he believed not, " one of the Members (meaning one of the Members of the ſaid Houſe of " Commons ſo aſſembled in Parliament as aforeſaid) (remarkable for his in- " ſuperable Modeſty) exulted on his Sagacity, in having, as he imagin- " ed, detected a notorious Contradiction in the Evidence ; but when it is " conſidered, that Sir John Tyrrell never ſaw Lord Carpenter till that Day, " it will require no great Stretch of Credulity, to believe that Sir John " might talk a Minute or two with Mr. Murray in a Crowd, without " particularly remarking a Perſon who was with him, and who at that " Time was an abſolute Stranger to him. Lo ! from this Mountain of " Contradiction, ridiculus mus naſcitur ; which however was ſcandalouſly " urged as ſufficient to invalidate the Teſtimony of two ſuch Honourable " Perſons ! To what pitiful Shifts muſt this Faction be reduced, when " obliged to have Recourſe to a Quibble, the moſt contemptible legal " Pettyfogger would bluſh to be guilty of ? The Reaſon of Lord Car- " penter's and Mr. Murray's ſtaying ſo long was, to uſe their Endeavours " to prevent any Inſult being offered to the High-Bailiff ; not perhaps " out of any Regard to the extraordinary Merits of that worthy Gentle- " man, but being ſenſible that they ſhould be made the Victims to expiate " any unlucky Accident that might happen ; and that this Apprehenſion " was not ill-grounded, evidently appears from the Fate of Mr. Mur- " ray, even when no Accident happened at all. Now appears the ce- " lebrated Mr. Pond, who is to give the Coup de Grace.—Hear him then " alarm the Houſe (again meaning the ſaid Houſe of Commons ſo aſſembled " in Parliament as aforeſaid) by declaring, That he heard Mr. Murray ſay " in the Mount Coffee-houſe ſome Days after the Declaration (again meaning " the ſaid Declaration ſo made by the ſaid Peter Leigh, the ſaid High- " Bailiff as aforeſaid) was made, that if his Advice had been taken, and the " Rails of the Portico cut down, the High-Bailiff (again meaning the ſaid " Peter Leigh, then High-Bailiff of the ſaid City and Liberty as afore- " ſaid) durſt not have returned Lord Trentham. Heavy Charge ! Nor " can the Truth of it admit of any Diſpute, when authenticated by the " Declaration of ſo worthy a Perſon, honoured with the Confidence of the " higheſt-born Gamblers, and conſtantly employed by them in the com- " mendable Quality of Bet-Broker ; nay, who during the Time of the " Election (meaning the ſaid late Election of a Member to ſerve in the preſent " Parliament of this Kingdom for the ſaid City and Liberty) is ſaid to have " very induſtriouſly exerciſed his Profeſſion, by laying conſiderable " Sums for the Noble Candidate himſelf on the Event of his Return " (meaning his Return as a Member to ſerve in the preſent Parliament of this " Kingdom). But how atrocious the Matter contained in this Accuſation, " to ſuppoſe (ſo long after) that to have happened which did not happen, " certainly juſtifies the Extremity of Puniſhment, as the Suppoſition of a " Fact is doubtleſs more criminal than the Execution of it. Had the Iron

" Rails

" Rails been cut down, what ought to have been the Conſequence? Mr. " Murray ought to have been puniſhed. But the Iron Rails were not " cut down; what is the Conſequence? Mr. Murray (again meaning the " ſaid Alexander Murray) is puniſhed. Excellent Reaſoning! righteous " Determination! Could the bare Intimation that he was the Adviſer " of ſuch a curious Stratagem be ſufficient to condemn him (again " meaning the ſaid Alexander Murray), when it does not appear that he " ever actually gave this Advice to any Perſon whatever, or that the leaſt " Attempt was made in conſequence of it? Who knows not that an Overt-" Act is required to the Conviction of a Perſon for High-Treaſon againſt " the King himſelf? Yet behold! no ſuch legal Nicety is thought neceſ-" ſary to conſtitute a læſa Majeſtas againſt the Honourable Houſe (again " meaning the ſaid Houſe of Commons ſo aſſembled in Parliament as aforeſaid). " It is obſervable throughout the whole Courſe of the Evidence, that not " ſo much as any one Act whatever is pretended to have been committed " by Mr. Murray, not even any oral Offence, (except that at Baldwin's, " with which the High-Bailiff (again meaning the ſaid Peter Leigh, then " High-Bailiff of the ſaid City and Liberty as aforeſaid) was not, till long " after, acquainted) which was not ſubſequent to the Declaration. How " then could the Returning Officer (again meaning the ſaid Peter Leigh) " produce it in Support of a Charge, founded on delaying the Election, " (again meaning the ſaid Election of a Member to ſerve in the preſent Parlia- " ment of this Kingdom for the ſaid City and Liberty) by obſtructing him in " the Execution of his Office? (meaning the Office of the ſaid PeterLeigh as " High-Bailiff of the ſaid City and Liberty.) Did he (again meaning the ſaid " Peter Leigh) cunningly diſcover Obſtructions after the Completion of " his Duty, which he was not ſenſible of during the Exerciſe of it? Or " by what Kind of Logic does it follow, that the treaſonable Words " againſt the Noble Lord's Honour, the terrifying Exclamation againſt the " High-Bailiff's Brains, or the Coffee-houſe Suppoſition concerning the " Rails, could occaſion this criminal Delay in the Election (again meaning " the ſaid Election of a Member to ſerve in the preſent Parliament of this King- " dom for the ſaid City and Liberty), when all muſt have happened long af-" ter the arbitrary Fiat had paſſed the hallowed Lips of one Member-mak-" ing Magiſtrate? Such is the Charge, and ſuch is the Proof of it, that " induced the Protectors of Britiſh Liberty (again meaning the ſaid Houſe of " Commons ſo aſſembled in Parliament as aforeſaid) to condemn a Britiſh Sub-" ject (again meaning the ſaid Alexander Murray) to cloſe Confinement in a " loathſome Priſon, appropriated for the Reception of Thieves and Mur-" derers, with every other Species of the meaneſt and moſt profligate Of-" fenders. But even this ſevere Exertion of Power was deemed too fa-" vourable, and muſt be embittered by the additional Cruelty of ſome ſtill " more mortifying Circumſtances. Mr. Murray (again meaning the ſaid " Alexander Murray) muſt receive this hard Sentence (meaning the Order " of the ſaid Houſe of Commons ſo aſſembled in Parliament as aforeſaid, by " virtue of which he the ſaid Alexander Murray was ſo committed and ſent " to his Majeſty's ſaid Gaol of Newgate as aforeſaid) upon his Knees. " Though his Reſolution might enable him to ſupport the former Part of " the Judgment, (again meaning the Order aforeſaid) his Spirit would by " no means ſuffer him to pay a ſlaviſh Submiſſion to the latter; for had this " reverential Token of Submiſſion been made the Price of his Acquittal, " he ſhould have thought the Penalty at leaſt equalled the Degree of his " Guilt; much leſs could he think of making ſo humble an Acknow-" ledgement of ſo extraordinary a Condemnation. However, this Refu-" ſal being held a high Inſult on the Dignity of the Houſe (again meaning " the ſaid Houſe of Commons ſo aſſembled in Parliament as aforeſaid), a freſh " Article of Pains and Penalties was invented, and the Uſe of Pen, Ink, and " Paper prohibited; which, though in Caſes of Conſpiracy and Treaſon, " had been practiſed by way of Precaution, was ſeldom known to have been " inflicted by way of Puniſhment. The d----l Faction, findingthe Venge-" ance they had procured far from being juſtified by the Senſe of the " Public, induſtriouſly endeavoured to propagate an erroneous Belief, that " the Severity proceeded merely from Mr. Murray's Obſtinacy, when on " the Face of the Proceedings it appears, that every Part of this tremen-" dous Sentence (again meaning the Order aforeſaid) (except what relates to " Pen, Ink, and Paper) was reſolved two Hours before it could poſſibly be " known, that Mr. Murray (again meaning the ſaid Alexander Murray) " would be guilty of ſo ſacrilegious a Contumacy, as to refuſe Knee-" worſhip to the aſſumed Divinity of his Judges (again meaning the Com- " mons of this Kingdom ſo aſſembled in Parliament as aforeſaid). While Mr. " Murray (again meaning the ſaid Alexander Murray) (in Cuſtody of a " Meſſenger) waited the Determination of the Houſe, (again meaning the " ſaid Houſe of Commons ſo aſſembled in Parliament as aforeſaid) ſome Friends " came to him, and, with a generous Concern, acquainted him with the " former Part of his Judgment (again meaning the Order aforeſaid): And " though he (again meaning the ſaid Alexander Murray) might poſſibly en-" tertain ſome Reliance on the Equity of thoſe (again meaning the Com- " mons of this Kingdom ſo aſſembled in Parliament as aforeſaid) who were " choſen by the People (meaning the People of this Kingdom, having a Right " to vote in the Election of Members to ſerve in the Parliament of this King- " dom) to defend their Liberties and Properties; yet he was the leſs ſur-" prized, having been informed, that his Fate was determined ſome Weeks " before at White's; where very large Sums had been laid upon his Com-" mitment, (meaning his the ſaid Alexander Murray's Commitment to his " Majeſty's ſaid Goal of Newgate as aforeſaid) and was adviſed to fly his " Country, in order to evade the Fury of theſe ſporting Legiſlators, who " it was apprehended might not pay the moſt conſcientious Regard to " their public Truſt, when placed in Competition with their private Ad-" vantage. With what Indignation muſt this Sentence inſpire every " Reader, who has imbibed the leaſt Spark of public Spirit! And how " much more will he be alarmed when acquainted with the rancorous Exe-" cution of it? Let us then attend this injured Gentleman (again mean- " ing the ſaid Alexander Murray) to his Dungeon; at which arriving at " about Four o'Clock in the Morning, the ſixth Day of February, not-" withſtanding he had been ill for ſeveral Days before, he was conducted " into a Room, (meaning a Room in his ſaid Majeſty's Gaol of Newgate) the " Windows of which were ſhattered, and the Walls plentifully bedewed " with Moiſture, proceeding from the unwholeſome Situation of the " Place, and not having had an unhappy Tenant in it during ſome Years. " Theſe unſalutary Circumſtances ſoon encreaſed his Indiſpoſition, and " the third Day brought on a violent Fever. Mr. Murray (again meaning " the ſaid Alexander Murray) ſent the Perſon who looks after the Con-" victs (and was likewiſe the only Attendant allowed) to procure him " (again meaning the ſaid Alexander Murray) the Aſſiſtance of an Apothe-" cary or Surgeon; but this Benefit, which was never refuſed the moſt " flagitious Offender, was not to be indulged him. Mr. Akerman (mean- " ing one Richard Akerman, Keeper of his Majeſty's ſaid Gaol of Newgate) " pleaded the peremptory Orders he had received from the Houſe (again " meaning the ſaid Houſe of Commons ſo aſſembled in Parliament as aforeſaid) " in Excuſe of his Refuſal." And in another Part thereof according to the Tenor following, (to wit,) " Ten Weeks did Mr. Murray (again " meaning the ſaid Alexander Murray) ſupport this rigorous Treatment, " debarred the Sight of any Face he had ever ſeen before, except that of " his Doctor's, while (though in this Condition) treble Doors were " thought neceſſary to ſecure him, the numerous Locks and Bolts of which " furniſhed a Sound, not much leſs entertaining than would have ſeemed " that of his Paſſing-Bell. About the Middle of April, Mr. Murray " (again meaning the ſaid Alexander Murray) was again ſeized in ſuch a " Manner, that his Attendant, or rather Guardian, who had been tried " for his Life, and whoſe Employment conſiſted in locking up the Con-" victs in their Cells (meaning the Cells in his Majeſty's ſaid Gaol of " Newgate); an Occupation not very apt to inſpire the tendereſt Sen-" timents: Yet, I ſay, even this very Fellow was ſo melted with Pity " and Compaſſion, to behold Mr. Murray's (meaning the ſaid Alex-" ander Murray his) Agonies, occaſioned by an Inflammation in his " Bowels, that he would not ſtir from him that Night. Lord Eli- " bank calling next Morning to enquire after his Brother's (meaning " the ſaid Alexander Murray his) Health, our Preſs-Yard Valet ex-" preſſed his Apprehenſions that he (again meaning the ſaid Alexan-" der Murray) could not live; but being informed the Doctor (mean- " ing one Doctor Lamont, Phyſician to the ſaid Alexander Murray) had " been there as ſoon as the Priſon-Gates were opened, his Lordſhip im-" mediately went to him, and requeſted he would acquaint the Houſe " (again meaning the ſaid Houſe of Commons ſo aſſembled in Parliament as " aforeſaid) with his Brother's (meaning the ſaid Alexander Murray his) " imminent Danger. Upon Dr. Lamont's Repreſentation, Mr. Palmer, " Deputy-Serjeant, attended by a Meſſenger, came to Newgate (meaning " his Majeſty's ſaid Gaol of Newgate) in the Evening, with an Order to " move Mr. Murray (again meaning the ſaid Alexander Murray) directly. " At their Entrance they found him (again meaning the ſaid Alexander " Murray) upon the Bed, and the Sheets which had been ſoaked through, " reeking at the Fire. Mr. Murray (again meaning the ſaid Alexander " Murray) inquired of Mr. Palmer the Reaſon of ſo ſudden a Reſolution? " who replied, it was owing to the Phyſician's Information of his Danger, " and that the Houſe, (again meaning the ſaid Houſe of Commons ſo aſſem- " bled in Parliament as aforeſaid) from its wonted Humanity, had ordered " him (again meaning the ſaid Alexander Murray) to be carried to a Meſ-" ſenger's. And ſurely, removing a Perſon from Newgate to Weſtminſter, " with an Inflammation in his Bowels, and in a high Fever, muſt be al-" lowed a very extraordinary Act of Humanity! However, the Force of " Mr. Palmer's Rhetoric was not ſufficient to prevail on Mr. Murray " (again meaning the ſaid Alexander Murray) to be of that Opinion; who " abſolutely refuſed to accept of this unmerciful Mercy; though there is " Reaſon to believe his Refuſal would have availed him little, had not " his Phyſician, (again meaning the ſaid Dr. Lamont) who chanced to be " preſent, declared his Opinion, that a Removal would be attended with " certain Death. This Authority juſtified Mr. Palmer for not putting " his Warrant in Execution; and upon Mr. Murray's (meaning the ſaid " Alexander Murray his) aſking him what the Houſe (again meaning the " ſaid Houſe of Commons ſo aſſembled in Parliament as aforeſaid) intended to " do with him (again meaning the ſaid Alexander Murray) at the Meſſen-" ger's, he anſwered, To confine him (again meaning the ſaid Alexander " Murray) there till his Recovery; but that Nobody was to be admitted " to him (again meaning the ſaid Alexander Murray); and if he (again " meaning the ſaid Alexander Murray) did not then make his Submiſſion " upon his Knees, he (again meaning the ſaid Alexander Murray) would " be remanded back to Newgate (again meaning his Majeſty's ſaid Gaol " of Newgate). As the ten Weeks ſevere Sufferings had not been able " to convince Mr. Murray (again meaning the ſaid Alexander Murray) of " the Heinouſneſs of his Offence, he replied, That he would not conſent " to it upon ſuch Terms, and that he would rather die ten thouſand " Deaths than violate his Conſcience by a Confeſſion of Guilt; and, by " a ſcandalous Submiſſion, give a Sanction to Proceedings (meaning the " ſaid Proceedings of the ſaid Houſe of Commons againſt the ſaid Alexander " Murray) ſo manifeſtly founded in Oppreſſion and Injuſtice." And in another Part thereof according to the Tenor following, (to wit,) " Let " us next behold this Gentleman (again meaning the ſaid Alexander Mur-" ray) appealing from the Violence of Power (meaning from the Order " aforeſaid) to the Protection of Law, and claiming the Benefit of that " ſacred Act, (meaning the Act of Parliament made in the thirty-firſt Year " of the Reign of his late Majeſty King Charles the Second, intitu- " led, An Act for the better ſecuring the Liberty of the Subject, " and for Prevention of Impriſonment beyond the Seas) which, " however it may ſometimes have been ſuſpended for the pub-" lic Safety, has ſcarce ever been violated on private Occaſions. " Mr. Murray (again meaning the ſaid Alexander Murray) having

" determined

" determined to apply for his Habeas Corpus, Counsel was first to be pro-
" cured; but who would imagine, that amongst the Swarm of Legal
" Orators, not one of any Eminence was to be found, who had Resolu-
" tion enough to engage in the Cause of so obnoxious a Client? The " British In——n (meaning Inquisition, that is to say, meaning the said House
" of Commons so assembled in Parliament as aforesaid) had struck such a Pa-
" nic throughout the Regions of Law and Justice, that even the all-pow" erful Fee was unable to subdue the Timidity of the mercenary Pro" fessors; but at the Request of Lord Elibank, an honourable Gentleman*,
" who had long abandoned the Business of the Bar, stood forth, and glo-
" riously despising any Penalty he might incur for vindicating the invaded " Laws and Constitution of his Country, moved the Court of King's-
" Bench, that Mr. Murray (again meaning the said Alexander Murray)
" might be brought up and admitted to Bail." And in another Part thereof according to the Tenor following, (to wit) " Though by this Appli" cation Mr. Murray (again meaning the said Alexander Murray) was " rescued for a few Hours from his Confinement, it was only to hear the " Puisne Judges of that Court pronounce the mortifying Sentence of " his Return to his Dungeon; founded upon this Principle of Law, That
" the House of Commons (meaning the House of Commons of this Kingdom in " Parliament assembled) was a superior Court of Judicature to the King's-
" Bench. Had the Constitution (meaning the Constitution of this Kingdom)
" complimented that House (again meaning the House of Commons of this
" Kingdom in Parliament assembled) with such executive Authority, it
" would certainly have been empowered to examine upon Oath; a Cir" cumstance absolutely necessary in the Administration of Justice. What " then is become of this boasted Barrier of British Liberty, the Habeas
" Corpus Act? (again meaning the Act of Parliament herein above-mentioned.)
" What shall distinguish Britons from those who groan under the most ar-
" bitrary Governments, if subject to the like tyrannical Acts of Oppression?
" And what shall defend a free People (meaning the People of Great-Britain)
" from these, whenever their Representatives (again meaning the Commons
" of this Kingdom in Parliament assembled) shall think fit to constitute them-
" selves their Judges, and wantonly inflict the severest Pains and Penalties
" by virtue of their mere Will and Pleasure? More especially, as from this " awful Tribunal (again meaning the said House of Commons so assembled in " Parliament as aforesaid) no Appeal is to be permitted, except to that only
" superior one of Heaven; and indeed who knows but even this might be " tortured into a high Breach of Privilege, as arraigning the Omnipo-
" tence of their terrestrial Jurisdiction (meaning the Jurisdiction of the said
" House of Commons so assembled in Parliament as aforesaid)?" And in another Part thereof according to the Tenor following, (to wit) " If there
" lives any one so abandoned to a Love of Slavery, as to remain unmoved
" by this Narrative, I shall leave him in Possession of his Chains, and " think them the most suitable Ornaments for so degenerate a Member of " a free Country (meaning Great-Britain). But satisfied I am, every
" uncorrupted Briton will be roused at a Scene much more becoming the " Meridian of an Oriental Tyranny than the Region of British Liberty; and
" though the Injury done a private Subject of the Community (again mean-
" ing the said Alexander Murray) should make little Impression; yet, surely,
" the Wound which the Constitution itself (again meaning the Constitution
" of this Kingdom) has received through him (again meaning the said Alex" ander Murray) must awake the most alarming Apprehensions. What " has been the Fate of one (again meaning the said Alexander Murray) may " prove that of Thousands; especially when it is considered, that the States-
" man is no less apt to quote the Authority of Precedent than the Lawyer.
" Who then, at any future Election, (meaning an Election of a Member to " serve in the Parliament of this Kingdom) shall be hardy enough to ex" ercise the Rights of a free Elector (meaning a Subject of this Kingdom hav-
" ing a Right to vote in the Election of a Member to serve in the Parliament
" of this Kingdom) when even an Approach to the Hustings, without
" a ministerial Passport, has been deemed so criminal? Who, hereafter,
" but must tamely acquiesce in the authoritative Decision of a Returning " Officer, (meaning an Officer having a Right to return Members to serve in
" the Parliament of this Kingdom) when a regular Impeachment of it is " held to be such a Parliamentary Profanation? These Essentials in " their Creation once removed, must not a House of Commons (again
" meaning the House of Commons of this Kingdom in Parliament assembled)
" become rather a Turkish Divan than a British Representative?
" And when this Constitutional Battery (again meaning the House
" of Commons so assembled in Parliament as aforesaid) raised to defend
" the People (meaning the People of Great-Britain) from the Attacks
" of arbitrary Power, shall, by the Intrigues of a State-Engineer,
" be once turned upon them, (again meaning the People of this King-
" dom) what remains but to surrender at Discretion?---When one Part
" of the Legislature (again meaning the said House of Commons so assem-
" bled in Parliament as aforesaid) assumes a Privilege peculiar to another,
" or wrests the Cognizance of Causes from those Courts erected for the " Determination of them, what Confusion will not arise in the System of " Government? And indeed what Security the People (again meaning the " People of Great-Britain) are to expect in such an Anarchy of Adminis" tration, the Case of Mr. Murray (again meaning the said Alexander
" Murray) too fatally evinces. Though the Law of the Land has " provided, that every Subject shall be tried by his Jury, have we not " seen a particular Power (again meaning the said House of Commons so as- " sembled in Parliament as aforesaid) uniting the three inconsistent Capa-
" cities of Judge, Jury, and Prosecutor? And though an express Pro" vision has been made against excessive Pains and Penalties, have not the " most severe been inflicted (meaning inflicted upon the said Alexander
" Murray) even for no Offence? But to conclude in the Words of a Noble
" Author: "This could not happen if there was the least Spirit among us
" (again meaning the People of Great-Britain); but there is none. The
" Mal-ration we (again meaning the People of Great-Britain) have seen
" practised, is Pusillanimity: Hence it comes that Corruption has spread and
" prevails. Consider then you (again meaning the People of Great-Britain)
" owe to your Country, (again meaning Great-Britain) to your Honour, to
" your Security, to the present and future Ages, that no Endeavours of yours
" be wanting to repair the Breach that is made, and is increasing daily, in the " Constitution (again meaning the Constitution of this Kingdom), and
" to shut up, with all the Bars and Bolts of Laws, the principal Entries
" through which these Torrents of Corruption (and Oppression) have been let in
" upon us" (again meaning the People of Great-Britain). To the great Scandal and Dishonour of all the Commons of this Kingdom in Parliament assembled, and in high Contempt of their Authority, to the great Disturbance of the public Peace and Tranquillity of this Kingdom, in Contempt of our said present Sovereign Lord the King and his Laws, to the evil and pernicious Example of all others in the like Case offending, and also against the Peace of our said present Sovereign Lord the King, his Crown, and Dignity. Whereupon the said Attorney-General of our said present Sovereign Lord the King, for our said present Sovereign Lord the King, prayeth the Consideration of the Court here in the Premisses, and that due Process of Law may be awarded against him the said John Owen in this Behalf, to make him answer to our said present Sovereign Lord the King, touching and concerning the Premisses aforesaid.

After Mr. Yorke had opened, the Attorney-General began with a Detail of the Westminster Election, between Lord Trentham and Sir George Vandeput, with the ill Usage of the High-Bailiff in the Return. He then mentioned the House of Commons calling the Rioters to Account, of whom Mr. Murray he said was the principal; the Sentence on Mr.
Murray to be given at the Bar of the House; how merciful for so atrocious a Crime; his Commitment to Newgate; his impudent Refusal to ask Pardon, which was to be Part of his Sentence; his bad State of Health in Newgate, which the House being informed of by his Friends, ordered him into the Custody of a Messenger, which was more than he deserved; his Refusal to be removed till the End of the Session, when the Law discharges him. " Then appeared the most scandalous and astonish-
" ing Libel that ever appeared in the World. The Case of the Honourable
" Alexander Murray, Esq. in an Appeal to the People of Great-Britain;
" more particularly the Inhabitants of the City and Liberty of Westminster.
" The Accused now becomes the Accuser. In it is stated and contained " Accusations of Partiality, Injustice, Corruption, and Barbarity, of the " House of Commons. It accuses the House of committing a great
" Breach in our Laws; that House which is the Guardian of our Liber-
" ties, and the Protector of our Properties. It accuses also the King's-
" Bench, with overturning that Bulwark of our Liberties, the Habeas
" Corpus Act. Every one must be shocked that reads this wicked, diabo-
" lically wicked, Pamphlet. The Parliament meet again, and vote the " Pamphlet a Libel: They vote it to be a false, malicious, infamous,
" scandalous, and seditious Libel, tending to create Confusion and Re-
" bellion; at least to sow the Seeds of Rebellion. And to me it is asto" nishing, how it could enter into the Mind or Heart of Man to write
" such a Libel. Now, Gentlemen, I shall shew to you the Nature of " this Libel, and begin in this Order. 1. The Title. 2. The Intro-
" duction. 3. The State of the Case, and the Evidence laid before
" the House of Commons. 4. How considered, and in what Light he " has put the Sentence of the Commons. 5. How wickedly and malici-
" ously he has insinuated the Thing. And, 6. His Treatment of the " Court of King's-Bench.

" First. What!—shall a Person appeal from the Judgment of that " Court, who are the only Judges of Things belonging to them, the " House of Commons, I mean. An Appeal! To whom? to a Mob?
" Must Justice be appealed from? To whom? to Injustice? Appeal to the " good People of England, particularly the Inhabitants of Westminster!
" The House of Commons are the good People of England, being the " Representatives of the People. The rest are—what?—nothing—unless
" it be a Mob. And what can be in a Mob but Confusion? But the clear
" Meaning of this Libel was an Appeal to Violence, in Fact; and to stig-
" matize the House; but he durst not speak plain. Then the Pamphlet
" tells you, that his Case is worthy the Consideration of his Fellow-Sub" jects; here he shews his Virulence. He says his Commitment is a Prece-
" dent founded on unparalleled Barbarity, striking at our Laws in a most " shocking Manner. Then he charges the House with sinking mate" rial Evidence; which in Fact is accusing the House of Injustice.
" This is a Charge the most shocking, the most severe, and the most " unjust and virulent, against the good, the tender House of Com-
" mons; that Safeguard of our Liberty, and Guardian of our Wel" fare." The next Accusation the Libeller brings against the House

* Sir John Philips, Bart.

" is,

" is, on their granting Mr. Murray's Removal, on the Application of " his Phyſicians,—in ſaying—they had a mind to kill Mr. Murray, by " removing him in the Midſt of a raging Fever; and on Mr. Murray's " refuſing to go in that Condition, the Houſe, when his Phyſician had " maſtered the Diſtemper, ordered that none ſhould ſee him. Next ac- " cuſing another Court that never injured any one; a Court the moſt " dignified by the Worthineſs of the Members; the Court of King's- " Bench. Gentlemen, this Libel, to whoſoever reads it, will be found " the moſt pungent Invective that the Skill of Man could invent: I will " not ſay the Skill, but the Wit, Art, and falſe Contrivance of Man, " inſtigated by Satan: An indirect Pamphlet—though not ſaid plain, yet " underſtood; as being underſtood, is a Libel: And to ſay that this is " not a Libel," is to ſay that there is no Juſtice, Equity, or Right in the " World. There can be no Court of Juſtice, if the Houſe of Commons " is not; and if the Houſe of Commons is not to be defended, and have " Protection and Relief at Common Law, yourſelves, your Houſes, can- " not have the Protection of the Law. The Thing you, Gentlemen of the " Jury, are to go on, is, whether the Caſe doth not mean the Houſe of Com- " mons; for we ſhall prove to you the Publication: Then you muſt find the " Houſe is charged by this Pamphlet to have been guilty of the moſt daring Pro- " ſtitution of Power. Can there be a greater Charge?"

Witneſſes called.

Peter Beck ſwore he bought the Pamphlet of William Owen, the 28th of June, 1751, at Homer's Head, near Temple-Bar. Sent by Ibbot to buy it, gave 1*s.* 6*d.* for two.—John Ibbot, Meſſenger to the Preſs, ſent Peter Beck the 28th of June, to buy the Pamphlet; and on the 29th he took Owen into Cuſtody, and ſeized ſeveral Pamphlets in his Shop.—Mealin, the 27th of June, 1751, went to Owen's, by Order of his Maſter Cook, to buy them: But Owen ſaid he had none by him, but he ſhould have them when ready; and in the Afternoon, William Owen let him have twelve. —Cook, Bookſeller, on the 27th of June, the firſt Time he ſaw the Pamphlet advertiſed, ſent his Servant to buy them.—Langford and Shorter alſo proved Owen's ſelling the Pamphlet.—Frewen called to prove the Writ for the Election at Weſtminſter.—Stanhope proved that there was an Election. —Barwell, Clerk of the Houſe of Commons, proved the Proceedings of the Houſe in this Affair.—The Pamphlet read in Court.—Then the Attorney-General aſked Mr. Ford and Mr. Pratt, if he need trouble the Court with proving more and other Things; and ſhould be glad to know what they intended for their Plea and Defence, in order to give the Court as little Trouble as poſſible. Mr. Ford anſwered, That in Juſtice to his Client, he could not tell him what they intended for their Defence; but would be ſo far candid with him, as to ſay, he would take Advantage of his Want of Proof; and therefore deſired him to prove all he could.

Mr. Sollicitor then got up and made a ſhort Speech to the following Purport*: " The Queſtion is, Whether the Jury are ſatisfied that the De- " fendant Owen publiſhed the Pamphlet? The reſt follows of Courſe. If the " FACT is proved, the LIBEL proves itſelf, Sedition, Diſturbance, &c. " Therefore the Printer muſt be affected with every Thing in the Pam- " phlet, if the Publication is proved, and that is what lies for your [the Jury's] " Determination; you being Judges of the FACT, the Judge determines the " LAW. But ſuppoſe you Judges of the Law, your own Breaſts may tell " you this is a Libel: It accuſes the Houſe of Commons of Injuſtice; " compares them to the Turkiſh Divan, meant by the Letters D——n; " and the Inquiſition, meant by the Letters In——n; and calls them a " bribed Aſſembly. Suppoſe a Pamphlet were publiſhed after this Trial, " that you [the Jury] were perjured and bribed, and this ſpread over the " Kingdom, would it not gall you?—Theſe Sort of Libels can tend to " nothing but Sedition; for how can the Mob or the People redreſs but " by Tumult and Rebellion, and thereby ſubvert the Conſtitution? For " this is a Part of the legiſlative Power; and if a third Part of the Legi- " ſlature is deſtroyed or expoſed, how can that be without riſing in the " Face of the Conſtitution? There have been ſeveral Papers, and Para- " graphs in the Papers, printed on Purpoſe to poiſon the Minds of the " People, and ſeemed calculated to influence the Minds of any Jury that " ſhould be on this Occaſion: But I dare ſay you, Gentlemen, who are " upon your Oaths here to try the Fact, and Caſe, wholly as it is, will " have no Regard to ſuch artful and falſe Inſinuations†. And I know " very well the Counſel on the other Side deſign to take no Advantage " or Notice of theſe falſe and malicious Hints. But as you are upon " your Oaths, you judge of the FACTS we have laid before you, now in Court, " and only them; and like honeſt Men bring in your Verdict accordingly."

The next who ſpoke was Mr. Ford, for the Defendant, as follows: " The Doctrine laid down by the Gentlemen for the King, that what a " Court of Juſtice does, whether legal or not, is not to be called in " Queſtion, nor any Remonſtrance to be made againſt it, is a Doctrine " that may be full of the moſt fatal Conſequences to all Sorts of Men; " ſince every inferior Court may do the ſame with equal Juſtice; for there " can be no Court but what is legally ſo: Therefore, if legal Courts do " wrong, muſt our Mouths be ſhut, and not complain or petition for " Redreſs? God forbid!—May you, Gentlemen, nor I, ever be ſenſible " of ſuch Injuſtice!—I ſay, if the Caſe can be ſo.—And here the Gen- " tlemen for the King ſeem to endeavour to confine the Counſel for the " Defendant, in their Argument, by ſaying ſuch and ſuch Arguments " will not be uſed; which is, in Fact, hinting that they ſhould not. " Why? If they have Liberty to make uſe of any Argument, Thought, " or Fact, for the King, ſurely the Defendant's Counſel ought to have " the ſame Liberty for their Client. I underſtand not the ſhutting of " Men's Mouths. Let every Man clap his Hand upon his Heart, and " examine how he would like it, was it his own Caſe. Shall a Man be " injured,———or ſuppoſe he fancies himſelf injured, which is the " ſame,———ſhall his Mouth be eternally cloſed, and no Redreſs for " the Injury ever be given; nor no Satisfaction to his own Mind, " for a right underſtanding, and clearing up of what he looked " upon even as an Injury? If Things ſhould come to this Paſs, which " Heaven forbid! what would be the Caſe of us all? We may be " ſcourged, afflicted, and wronged, and all for the Want of Liberty to " complain, and put forth our Caſe: The very Hand that hurts us may " ſtill continue that Preſſure, not knowing of the Grievances done to " thoſe who lie under it; and who, were this Doctrine to be allowed, " muſt ſuffer without Hope of Redreſs; for, unleſs our Mouths are open " to Complaints, there can be no Redreſs for poor ſuffering Mortals: " For how can that be redreſſed which is not known? or that known, " which is not allowed to be mentioned?—May never you, Gentlemen, " nor I, be ſenſible of ſuch a Maxim carried into Practice! Nay, the " very Gentlemen who put it, cannot from their Hearts conſent to it.— " We in this Caſe lie under Diſadvantages enough; our Adverſaries have " great Power; nay, their Power is unknown, even to themſelves, at all " Times; few of them know the Limits of it: It may be almoſt what " they have a mind. Though great, though wiſe this Houſe may be, " yet they are but a Body of Men, and therefore fallible; for it is not in " Men, or Bodies of Men, to be infallible.—By this great Power of the " Houſe of Commons, we, for our Client, are debarred from making " uſe of all the Means of Defence we could againſt other People. Much " might be ſaid, but much we dare not ſay; I own I dare not. But let " me ſuppoſe, only for Argument's Sake, that a Houſe of Commons " may do Wrong, it is not impoſſible for them to err; I do not ſay that " they do in this Caſe: Former Houſes of Commons certainly have err- " ed, and thoſe Errors have been redreſſed by a future Houſe of Com- " mons, and that on a Knowledge of the Caſe by Complaint: And if the " Houſe of Commons ever has erred, by the ſame Rule it may err again. " Therefore allow me to ſuppoſe, only for Suppoſition and Argument's " Sake, that the Houſe have done Wrong in their Votes on this Affair " (not that I ſay they have); they have voted this Pamphlet a Libel, and " have turned it over to the Common Law, for the Defendant thereby to " be tried for it; then they have left the Common Law to be Judge of it. " If ſo, ſhould the Defendant's Counſel be debarred (if it was neceſſary, " but which in my Opinion is not) from contradicting, and proving this " to be no Libel; which would, in Fact, be contradicting and oppoſing " the Opinion and Vote of the Houſe of Commons? I only put this by " way of Suppoſition; to ſhew, if theſe Arguments were neceſſary to be " gone upon, the Diſadvantage we lie under. Much might be ſaid, even " on this; but much I dare not ſay. I know not ſcarce what I dare ſay; " but I ſhall not go on this Point, as I think it is not neceſſary to our " preſent Purpoſe; and I hope we can and ſhall be able to ſucceed with- " out it. I only mentioned it, becauſe the Gentlemen on the other Side " ſeemed deſirous ſtill further to ſhut the Mouths of the Defendant's " Counſel, who are under Difficulties enough already. The Houſe of " Commons have voted this Pamphlet a Libel: Great is the Power of a " Vote of that Houſe; and where is the Man who dares find Fault with, " or contradict, the Opinion of the Houſe, eſpecially when voted ſo? I " dare not, and bold muſt be the Man who dares; he knows not the " Riſque he runs, by juſtifying or maintaining a Book not to be a Libel, " when the Houſe of Commons have voted it ſo. That Man may per- " haps have a Vote againſt himſelf; for what cannot a Houſe do, whoſe " Power is ſo great? What therefore I ſhall inſiſt upon is this:

" The FACT charged in the Information is, That the Defendant Owen, " publiſhed this Pamphlet, maliciouſly, ſeditiouſly, ſcandalouſly, and " falſely, to the Calumny of the Houſe of Commons of Great-Britain, and " in order to diſturb the Peace of the Nation; and this he has done wit- " tingly, wilfully, maliciouſly, ſcandalouſly, &c. This is the FACT laid to " his Charge; which the Gentlemen have been very far from PROVING. " Only proving the Sale of the Book, does not prove all thoſe opprobrious " and hard Terms laid in the Charge againſt him. If his ſelling and pub- " liſhing this Book maliciouſly, with a ſeditious Intent, ſcandalouſly and " falſely, with a Deſign to calumniate the Houſe of Commons, and in or- " der to diſturb the Peace of the Nation, is not proved, then this great " Charge in the Information fails. Let the Gentlemen prove thoſe " Words (the Intention) if they mean any thing by them; if they do not " prove theſe Terms, this bad Intent, for in that lies the Crime, then it " is no more than ſelling printed Paper, in which ſurely there can be no " Fault. Then what are theſe Words? If the Gentlemen mean any " thing by them, prove them; if they mean nothing, but Words of " Courſe and Form, let the Gentlemen ſcratch them out, they are need- " leſs; which if they do, their Information will be very defective. But " they will not conſent to ſcratch them out, I am ſure; why then they " muſt mean ſomething by them, which if they do, conſequently they " muſt prove them. Theſe Words conſtitute the Charge, which if they " do not make out, will you, Gentlemen, clap your Hands upon your " Hearts, and ſay this Man is guilty? Guilty of what? Nothing; for no- " thing is proved, unleſs ſelling Paper is a Crime. Surely, Gentlemen, " your own Breaſts, your own Conſciences, muſt tell you, when you " conſider of it,—and pray conſider it as your own Caſe, fancy each of " yourſelves here under a rigorous Proſecution, like this poor Man,— " there is no Crime proved, no malicious Intent, no ſeditious Deſign; " therefore not proved guilty of the Crime laid againſt him. If a Man be " even a bad Man, and you all know it, and is accuſed of a Crime he is in- " nocent of, ſurely none will find him guilty of a Crime, when that Crime " is not proved, becauſe you know him to be guilty of other Faults. " Theſe Things are plain, even to a Demonſtration, to every Man. " But this Defendant, whoſe Cauſe you are now Judges of, will appear

* From a Word Mr. Ford dropped in aſking one of the Witneſſes a Queſtion, Mr. Sollicitor gueſſed what would be the Scope of his Argument; and thereupon endeavoured to anticipate him; of which Mr. Ford afterwards ſeems to take Notice.

† This has Reference to a Letter in the London Evening-Poſt of Saturday, May 30, 1752.

" to be a Man of very fair Character; well-affected to the Government " and Conſtitution in his Principles; always was, and is a good Sub- " ject; a Member of the Church of England, and as well affected to " both Church and State as any Man in England. Therefore can any " Man believe, when we ſhall have made this appear by ſeveral Wit- " neſſes, Men of Worth, Subſtance, Honour and Credit, both Clergy " and Laity, that he could be guilty of theſe Things; that he intended " this Hurt laid to his Charge? We ſhall prove that he publiſhed more " Papers for the Government, in the late Rebellion, in 1745, and con- " taining the moſt Steadineſs for Government, and the moſt home and " inveterate Things againſt its Enemies, than any Printer of his Time; " ſo that I believe, if the Rebels had gained the Day, his Zeal might " have cauſed his Puniſhment. Will it then appear likely that he is " guilty of theſe Charges laid againſt him?

" I muſt obſerve one Thing, which is, the Danger of your finding a " Verdict SPECIALLY. Suppoſe you find him guilty of publiſhing and " ſelling this Book; Guilty includes Guilt, then guilty of what? Selling " Paper.---Where is the Guilt?---Take care, Gentlemen, of being " deceived, by finding him guilty any way; by bringing in your Verdict " any way againſt him, you render him liable to the Conſequences of the " whole; that is, to the ſame Penalties that he would have been liable " to, if he had committed the whole Crime laid to his Charge, and that " Charge fully proved againſt him. After you have brought in your Ver- " dict, it will be in vain for you to ſay, you did not intend he ſhould be " puniſhed; you only found that he had publiſhed, but not committed the " Crime; it will be in vain for you to petition for Mercy, Mercy will " then be in other Hands; it will be out of your Reach; and he will be " at the Mercy of others, who may not look with the ſame Eyes as you: " When you have found him guilty, it will be in other Breaſts to puniſh; " it will then be too late for you to interfere. By finding him guilty, " you do all that you can againſt him, and then it will be out of your " Power to ſerve him. You muſt therefore conſider him guilty of this " great Crime, and conſequently deſerving of great Puniſhment, or not. " But if you think he is not guilty, and not deſerving of great Puniſh- " ment, then he has not committed this great Crime; then conſequently " they have failed in their Information, and he is innocent of it; if " innocent, conſequently not guilty. Mr. Attorney tells you, this " Pamphlet means, and is writ with the Intent that is laid in the Infor- " mation; he ſays, becauſe the Pamphlet compares the Parliament to " In——n, it muſt certainly mean Inquiſition; and in my Opinion it " may, and does as likely, mean Information; and I aſſure you, Gentle- " men, I have very little Love for Information, as well as Mr. Attorney " for In——n; it is certain that theſe Things, which will bear ſeveral " Interpretations, muſt, nor can, have no Weight with you; who ſhould " either put a good Conſtruction upon them, or none at all. You muſt " conſider too, that there is a great Difference between the Author and " the Printer; the Author knew well what he intended, and the whole " Senſe of the Pamphlet; therefore liable to have the Senſe of the " Pamphlet interpreted againſt him; but a Bookſeller may ſell a Book, " and not have any Intent but Profit; and be quite ignorant of the Con- " tents, at leaſt the Spirit of them; therefore it is well worth conſidering " how Intent makes a Crime, and how far not; every Man may err, and " if unintentionally, he cannot be guilty of a Crime before God; and " if ſo, it would be Preſumption in Man, to make any Compariſon of " his own Juſtice; what is not criminal with God, cannot be with Man. " The Gentlemen on the other Side have not proved the Intention."

The Reverend Mr. Warner, Mr. Goſling, Mr. Hawkins, and ſeveral others were called, who proved Mr. Owen to be a good Subject, a true Man to the Church of England, zealous for the Eſtabliſhment; that he had printed ſeveral Papers for the Government, and would not have publiſhed the Pamphlet, had he known or thought the Contents bad, or any Hurt in them, and the fartheſt Man in England from doing ſuch a Thing.

Mr. Pratt next roſe up for the Defendant; and having for ſome Time gone upon different Parts of Mr. Ford's Argument (which it cannot be neceſſary to repeat, as Mr. Ford's Speech has juſt been given at length, and as nearly verbatim as poſſible), he ſaid, " Then, Gentlemen, to ſhew " you how neceſſary it is to prove the Intention; if there is an Indict- " ment preferred againſt a Man for an Aſſault, with an Intention to " raviſh; the Intention muſt be proved, or elſe the Jury cannot find him " guilty. The ſame of an Aſſault with an Intention to kill, if the In- " tention is not proved, he muſt be acquitted. If he kills, and the In- " tention is not proved, that is, if it is not proved that he killed pre- " meditatedly and of Forethought, it is but Manſlaughter. Therefore " in the Caſe before us, if that Part of the Information is not proved, " that he publiſhed maliciouſly, &c. you muſt acquit him.---The Privi- " leges of Parliament are not known to the Common Law; perhaps " they may judge and puniſh: I know not their Privileges, nor perhaps " are they to be known; nay, not known to themſelves wholly: They " may be juſt what they pleaſe. But they have not puniſhed this Man; " they have turned him over to the Common Law, therefore he muſt be " tried by the Common Law. Yet, as hath been juſtly obſerved, they " may take the Thing again into Conſideration, and puniſh him in the " Houſe; and if ſo, he may be puniſhed twice for the ſame Fault, by " two different Sentences; which by the Common Law a Man cannot. " Mr. Attorney will not anſwer for the Houſe of Commons, that it will " not be ſo. Then, Gentlemen, conſider what Injuſtice it would be to " puniſh a Man here, who is at the ſame Time liable to be puniſhed " there, if the Houſe thinks fit.---Much might be ſaid, more than we " dare ſay for our Client in this Caſe: Our Mouths are already half ſhut, " and the Tenets the Gentlemen on the other Side lay down, are to ſhut them " QUITE; but may you, this Nation, nor I, ever feel the Effects of ſuch " Tenets, or ſee them put in Practice. It is a Rule in Law, and a Principle " in Equity, to hear both Sides; therefore we may juſtly complain in this " Caſe. It is a common Proverb (and a very wiſe Chancellor affirmed " that Proverbs were the Wiſdom of a People), Loſers muſt have Leave to " ſpeak. In the Scripture Job complains of the Diſpenſations of Provi- " dence, the Cauſes and Conſequences of which he did not comprehend; " one would imagine, therefore, that as Complaints are ſo natural to Suf- " ferers, they may merit ſome Excuſe where the Affliction exceeds proper " Bounds. It may be ſaid indeed, they are capable of raiſing a dangerous " Compaſſion. But to prevent this, will it be right to tell a free People, " happen what will, you ſhall never complain? Before this is ſaid, it ſhould " be well conſidered." [Mr. Pratt then went again upon different Parts of Mr. Ford's excellent Speech, which he enforced in a very ſtrong and fine Manner, and with which he concluded.]

The Attorney-General got up again and made a Reply, the principal Matter in which was, " That in an Indictment for Murder were always " theſe Words, which are Words of Courſe, and of mere Form, viz. " not having the Fear of God before his Eyes, and being inſtigated by the Devil. " Now, according to the Rule laid down by the Gentlemen, this muſt be " proved, which is impoſſible; for the Man would ſay, he was not ſo " inſtigated, and had the Fear of God before his Eyes; and who could prove " that it was otherwiſe? Now this evidently ſhews all thoſe Things to " be merely Matter of Form."

The Chief Juſtice next ſummed up the Evidence; and delivered it as his Opinion, that the Jury OUGHT to find the Defendant guilty; for he thought the FACT of Publication was fully proved; and if ſo, they could not avoid bringing in the Defendant guilty.

The Jury went out and ſtayed about two Hours; when they came into the Court, the Foreman anſwered for the reſt, and when the Queſtion was put, he ſaid, Guilty; NOT GUILTY, NOT GUILTY, MY LORD—the firſt Word guilty being ſaid by Miſtake; upon which there was a loud Huzza; and the Jury went away. But, at the Deſire of the Attorney-General, they were called into Court again, and aſked this leading Queſtion, viz. " Gentlemen of the Jury, do you think the Evidence " laid before you, of Owen's publiſhing the Book by ſelling it, is not ſuffi- " cient to convince you that the ſaid Owen did ſell this Book?" At which the Foreman appeared a good deal fluttered; and the Judge repeated the Queſtion; upon which the Foreman, without anſwering the Queſtion, ſaid, " NOT GUILTY, NOT GUILTY;" and ſeveral of the Jurymen ſaid, " That is our Verdict, my Lord, and we abide by it." Upon which the Court broke up; and there was a prodigious Shout in the Hall. The Attorney-General deſired more Queſtions might be aſked, but the Judge would not, neither would the Noiſe permit it.

Note, The Jury could not ſay, to the Queſtion, that the Evidence of publiſhing was not clear, without Perjury; and if the Jury had anſwered Yes, and not found the Defendant guilty, one does not know what might have been done to the Jury, or before whom called. But they found Owen not guilty on the whole of the Caſe, taking in that which included Guilt or not, and judged as to Facts, Law, and Juſtice, of the whole; and therefore did not anſwer that leading Queſtion, which was ſo artfully put to them.

NUMBER XXIV.

In the Caſe of Earl FERRERS, April 17, 1760 *.

THE Houſe of Peers unanimouſly found Earl Ferrers Guilty of the Felony and Murder whereof he ſtood indicted; and the Earl being brought to the Bar, the High Steward acquainted him therewith; and the Houſe immediately adjourned to the Chamber of Parliament. And having put the following Queſtions to the Judges, adjourned to the next Day:

Firſt, " Whether a Peer indicted of Felony and Murder, and tried " and convicted thereof before the Lords in Parliament, ought to receive " Judgment for the ſame, according to the Proviſions of the Act of " Parliament of the 25th Year of his Majeſty's Reign, intituled, An " Act for better preventing the horrid Crime of Murder?"

Second, " Suppoſing a Peer ſo indicted and convicted ought by Law " to receive ſuch Judgment as aforeſaid, and the Day appointed by the " Judgment for Execution ſhould lapſe before ſuch Execution done, " whether a new Time may be appointed for the Execution, and by " whom?"

On the 18th, the Houſe then ſitting in the Chamber of Parliament, the Lord Chief Baron, in the Abſence of the Chief Juſtice of the Common Pleas, delivered in Writing the Opinion of the Judges, which they had agreed on, and reduced into Form that Morning.

His Lordſhip added many weighty Reaſons in Support of the Opinion, which he urged with great Strength and Propriety, and delivered with a becoming Dignity.

To the Firſt Queſtion.

" We are all of Opinion, that a Peer indicted of Felony and Mur- " der, and tried and convicted thereof before the Lords in Parliament,

* From Judge Foſter's Reports, p. 138, &c.

" ought to receive Judgment for the ſame according to the Proviſions of " the Act of Parliament of the 25th Year of his Majeſty's Reign, inti- " tuled, An Act for better preventing the horrid Crime of Murder."

To the Second Queſtion.

" Suppoſing the Day appointed by the Judgment for Execution ſhould " lapſe before ſuch Execution done (which however the Law will not " preſume); We are all of Opinion that a new Time may be appointed " for the Execution, either by the High Court of Parliament before which " ſuch Peer ſhall have been attainted, or by the Court of King's-Bench, the " Parliament not then ſitting; the Record of the Attainder being pro- " perly removed into that Court."

The Reaſons the Judges went upon, in their Anſwer to the firſt Queſtion, are, I preſume, too obvious to be mentioned at large. And the Houſe reſolved and ordered, that Judgment ſhall be pronounced in Weſtminſter-Hall, purſuant to the late Act.

The Reaſons upon which the Judges founded their Anſwer to the ſecond, relating to the further Proceedings of the Houſe after the High Steward's Commiſſion diſſolved, which is uſually done upon pronouncing Judgment, may poſſibly require ſome further Diſcuſſion. I will therefore, before I conclude, mention thoſe which weighed with me, and I believe with many others of the Judges.

The Houſe, before they adjourned to the Court-Room in Weſtminſter-Hall for pronouncing Judgment, reſolved and ordered, that Execution be reſpited to the 5th Day of May following. Upon which Day Execution was done at Tyburn purſuant to the Judgment, and the Body delivered at Surgeons Hall to be diſſected and anatomized.

[The Writ to the Sheriffs for Execution, ſee in the Account of his Execution.]

REASONS, &c.

EVERY Proceeding in the Houſe of Peers, acting in its judicial Capacity, whether upon Writ of Error, Impeachment, or Indictment removed thither by Certiorari, is in Judgment of Law a Proceeding before the King in Parliament. And therefore the Houſe, in all thoſe Caſes, may not improperly be ſtiled, The Court of our Lord the King in Parliament.

This Court is founded upon immemorial Uſage, upon the Law and Cuſtom of Parliament, and is Part of the original Syſtem of our Conſtitution.

It is open for all the Purpoſes of Judicature during the Continuance of the Parliament: It openeth at the Beginning, and ſhutteth at the End of every Seſſion; juſt as the Court of King's-Bench, which is likewiſe in Judgment of Law held before the King himſelf, openeth and ſhutteth with the Term.

The Authority of this Court, or, if I may uſe the Expreſſion, its conſtant Activity for the Ends of public Juſtice, independent of any Special Powers derived from the Crown, is not doubted in the Caſe of Writs of Error from thoſe Courts of Law whence Error lieth in Parliament, and of Impeachments for Miſdemeanors.

It was formerly doubted, whether in the Caſe of an Impeachment for Treaſon, and in the Caſe of an Indictment againſt a Peer for any Capital Crime removed into Parliament by Certiorari, whether in theſe Caſes the Court can proceed to Trial and Judgment without an High Steward appointed by ſpecial Commiſſion from the Crown.

This Doubt ſeemeth to have ariſen from the not diſtinguiſhing between a Proceeding in the Court of the High Steward, and that before the King in Parliament. The Name, Stile, and Title of Office is the ſame in both Caſes; but the Office, the Powers and Preheminences annexed to it, differ very widely; and ſo doth the Conſtitution of the Courts where the Offices are executed. The Identity of the Name may have confounded our Ideas, as equivocal Words often do if the Nature of Things is not attended to; but the Nature of the Offices properly ſtated will, I hope, remove every Doubt on theſe Points.

In the Court of the High Steward, he alone is Judge in all Points of Law and Practice; the Peers Triers are merely Judges of Fact, and are ſummoned by virtue of a Precept from the High Steward to appear before him on the Day appointed by him for the Trial, Ut rei veritas melius ſciri poterit.

The High Steward's Commiſſion, after reciting that an Indictment hath been found againſt the Peer by the Grand Jury of the proper County, impowereth him to ſend for the Indictment, to convene the Priſoner before him at ſuch Day and Place as he ſhall appoint; then and there to hear and determine the Matter of ſuch Indictment; to cauſe the Peers Triers, tot et tales per quos rei veritas melius ſciri poterit, at the ſame Day and Place to appear before him: Veritate queinde compertâ, to proceed to Judgment according to the Law and Cuſtom of England, and thereupon to award Execution *.

By this it is plain, that the ſole Right of Judicature is, in Caſes of this Kind, veſted in the High Steward; that it reſideth ſolely in his Perſon; and conſequently without this Commiſſion, which is but in Nature of a Commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer, no one Step can be taken in order to a Trial. And that when his Commiſſion is diſſolved, which he declareth by breaking his Staff, the Court no longer exiſteth.

But in a Trial of a Peer in full Parliament, or, to ſpeak with legal Preciſion, before the King in Parliament, for a Capital Offence, whether upon Impeachment or Indictment, the Caſe is quite otherwiſe. Every Peer preſent at the Trial, and every Temporal Peer hath a Right to be preſent in every Part of the Proceeding, voteth upon every Queſtion of Law and Fact; and the Queſtion is carried by the major Vote; the High Steward himſelf voting merely as a Peer and Member of that Court, in common with the reſt of the Peers, and in no other Right.

It hath indeed been uſual, and very expedient it is in point of Order and Regularity, and for the Solemnity of the Proceeding, to appoint an Officer for preſiding during the Time of the Trial and until Judgment, and to give him the Stile and Title of Steward of England. But this maketh no Sort of Alteration in the Conſtitution of the Court. It is the ſame Court founded in immemorial Uſage, in the Law and Cuſtom of Parliament, whether ſuch Appointment be made or not.

It acteth in its judicial Capacity in every Order made touching the Time and Place of the Trial, the poſtponing the Trial from Time to Time upon Petition, according to the Nature and Circumſtances of the Caſe, the Allowance or Non-allowance of Counſel to the Priſoner, and other Matters relative to the † Trial; and all this before an High Steward hath been appointed. And ſo little was it apprehended, in ſome Caſes which I ſhall mention preſently, that the Exiſtence of the Court depended on the Appointment of an High Steward, that the Court itſelf directed in what Manner and by what Form of Words he ſhould be appointed. It hath likewiſe received and recorded the Priſoner's Confeſſion which amounteth to a Conviction, before the Appointment of an High Steward, and hath allowed to Priſoners the Benefit of Acts of General Pardon where they appeared intituled to it, as well without the Appointment of an High Steward, as after his Commiſſion diſſolved.

And when, in the Caſe of Impeachments, the Commons have ſometimes, at Conferences between the Houſes, attempted to interpoſe in Matters preparatory to the Trial, the general Anſwer hath been, " This " is a Point of Judicature upon which the Lords will not confer, they " impoſe Silence upon themſelves," or to that Effect. I need not here cite Inſtances; every Man who hath conſulted the Journals of either Houſe hath met with many of them.

I will now cite a few Caſes applicable, in my Opinion, to the preſent Queſtion. And I ſhall confine myſelf to ſuch as have happened ſince the Reſtoration. Becauſe in Queſtions of this Kind, modern Caſes, ſettled with Deliberation, and upon a View of former Precedents, give more Light and Satisfaction, than the deepeſt Search into Antiquity can afford. And alſo becauſe the Prerogatives of the Crown, the Privileges of Parliament, and the Rights of the Subjects in general, appear to me to have been more ſtudied and better underſtood at, and for ſome Years before that Period, than in former Ages.

In the Caſe of the Earl of Danby and the Popiſh Lords then under Impeachments, (Lords Journal) the Lords on the 6th of May, 1679, appointed Time and Place for hearing the Earl of Danby by his Counſel upon the Validity of his Plea of Pardon, and for the Trials of the other Lords; and voted an Addreſs to his Majeſty, praying that he would be pleaſed to appoint an High Steward for thoſe Purpoſes.

Theſe Votes were on the next Day communicated to the Commons by Meſſage in the uſual Manner.

On the 8th, at a Conference between the Houſes upon the Subject-matter of that Meſſage, the Commons expreſs themſelves to the following Effect: " They cannot apprehend what ſhould induce your Lordſhips to addreſs " his Majeſty for an High Steward for determining the Validity of the " Pardon which hath been pleaded by the Earl of Danby, as alſo for the " Trial of the other five Lords, becauſe they conceive the conſtituting " an High Steward is not neceſſary, but that Judgment may be given in " Parliament upon Impeachment without an High Steward." And concluded with a Propoſition, that for avoiding any Interruption or Delay, a Committee of both Houſes might be nominated to conſider of the moſt proper Ways and Methods of Proceeding.

This Propoſition the Houſe of Peers, after a long Debate, rejected.

Diſſentientibus, Finch ‡ Chancellor, and many other Lords.

However, on the 11th, the Commons Propoſition of the 8th was upon a ſecond Debate agreed to, and the Lord Chancellor, Lord Preſident, and ten other Lords were named of the Committee, to meet and confer with a Committee of the Commons.

The next Day the Lord Preſident reported, that the Committees of both Houſes met that Morning, and made an Entrance into the Buſineſs referred to them. That the Commons deſired to ſee the Commiſſions that are prepared for an High Steward at theſe Trials, and alſo the Commiſſions in the Lord Pembroke's, and the Lord Morley's Caſes.

That to this the Lords Committees ſaid, " The High Steward is but " Speaker pro Tempore, and giveth his Vote as well as the other Lords. " This changeth not the Nature of the Court. And the Lords declared " they have Power enough to proceed to Trial, though the King ſhould " not name an High Steward §.

" That this ſeemed to be a Satisfaction to the Commons, provided it " was entered in the Lords Journal, which are Records."

Accordingly on the ſame Day, " It is declared and ordered by the " Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament aſſembled, That the Office " of an High Steward upon Trials of Peers upon Impeachments, is " not neceſſary to the Houſe of Peers; but that the Lords may proceed " in ſuch Trials if an High Steward be not appointed according to their " humble Deſire ‖."

On the 13th the Lord Preſident reported, that the Committees of both Houſes had met that Morning, and diſcourſed in the firſt Place on the Matter of a Lord High Steward, and had peruſed former Commiſſions for the Office of High Steward. And then putting the Houſe in mind of the Order and Reſolution of the preceding Day, propoſed from the Committees, that a new Commiſſion might iſſue, ſo as the Words in ‡ Afterwards Earl of Nottingham.

§ In the Commons Journal of the 15th of May it ſtandeth thus: Their Lordſhips further declared to the Committee, that a Lord High Steward was made hac Vice only. That notwithſtanding the making of a Lord High Steward the Court remained the ſame, and was not thereby altered, but ſtill remained the Court of Peers in Parliament. That the Lord High Steward was but as a Speaker or Chairman, for the more orderly Proceeding at the Trials.
‖ This Reſolution my Lord Chief Baron referred to and cited in his Argument upon the ſecond Queſtion propoſed to the Judges, which is before ſtated.

the Commiſſion may be thus changed, viz. inſtead of, Ac pro eo quòd officium Seneſchalli Angliæ (cujus præſentia in hac parte requiritur) ut accepimus jam vacat, may be inſerted, Ac pro eo quod Proceres et Magnates in Parliamento noſtro aſſemblati nobis humiliter ſupplicaverunt ut Seneſchallum Angliæ pro hac vice conſtituere dignaremur; to which the Houſe agreed *.

It muſt be admitted, that Precedents drawn from Times of Ferment and Jealouſy, as theſe were, loſe much of their Weight; ſince Paſſion and Party-Prejudice generally mingle in the Conteſt. Yet let it be remembered, that theſe are Reſolutions in which both Houſes concurred, and in which the Rights of both were thought to be very nearly concerned; the Commons Right of Impeaching with Effect, and the whole Judicature of the Lords in Capital Caſes. For if the Appointment of an High Steward was admitted to be of abſolute Neceſſity, (however neceſſary it may be for the Regularity and Solemnity of the Proceeding during the Trial and until Judgment, which I do not diſpute) every Impeachment may, for a Reaſon too obvious to be mentioned, be rendered ineffectual; and the Judicature of the Lords, in all Capital Caſes, nugatory.

It was from a Jealouſy of this Kind, not at that Juncture altogether groundleſs, and to guard againſt every Thing from whence the Neceſſity of an High Steward in the Caſe of an Impeachment might be inferred, that the Commons propoſed, and the Lords readily agreed to the Amendment in the Steward's Commiſſion, which I have already ſtated. And it hath, I confeſs, great Weight with me, that this Amendment, which was at the ſame Time directed in the Caſes of the five Popiſh Lords when Commiſſions ſhould paſs for their Trials, hath taken Place in every Commiſſion upon Impeachments for Treaſon ſince that Time †. And I cannot help remarking, that in the Caſe of Lord Lovat, when neither the Heat of the Times, nor the Jealouſy of Parties had any Share in the Proceeding, the Houſe ordered, "That the Commiſſion for appointing a "Lord High Steward ſhall be in the like Form as that for the Trial of "the Lord Viſcount Stafford, as entered in the Journal of this Houſe on "the 30th of November, 1680, except that the ſame ſhall be in the Engliſh "Language ‡."

I will make a ſhort Obſervation on this Matter.

The Order in the 13th of May, 1679, for varying the Form of the Commiſſion, was, as appeareth by the Journal, plainly made in conſequence of the Reſolution of the 12th, and was founded on it; and conſequently the conſtant, unvarying Practice with regard to the new Form, goeth in my Opinion a great way towards ſhewing that in the Senſe of all ſucceeding Times that Reſolution was not the Reſult of Faction or a blameable Jealouſy, but was founded in ſound Reaſon and true Policy.

It may be objected, that the Reſolution of the 12th of May, 1679, goeth no further than to a Proceeding upon Impeachment.

The Letter of the Reſolution, it is admitted, goeth no further, but this is eaſily accounted for. A Proceeding by Impeachment was the Subject-Matter of the Conference, and the Commons had no Pretence to interpoſe in any other. But what ſay the Lords? The High Steward is but as a Speaker or Chairman pro Tempore, for the more orderly Proceeding at the Trials; the Appointment of him doth not alter the Nature of the Court, which ſtill remaineth the Court of the Peers in Parliament. From theſe Premiſes they draw the Concluſion I have mentioned. Are not theſe Premiſes equally true in the Caſe of a Proceeding upon Indictment? They undoubtedly are.

It muſt likewiſe be admitted, that in the Proceeding upon Indictment, the High Steward's Commiſſion hath never varied from the antient Form in ſuch Caſes; the Words objected to by the Commons, Ac pro eo quod officium Seneſchalli Angliæ (cujus præſentia in hac parte requiritur) ut accepimus jam vacat, are ſtill retained. But this proveth no more than that the Great Seal having no Authority to vary in Point of Form, hath from Time to Time very prudently followed antient Precedents.

I have already ſtated the Subſtance of the Commiſſion in a Proceeding in the Court of the High Steward. I will now ſtate the Subſtance of that in a Proceeding in the Court of the Peers in Parliament. And ſhall make uſe of that in the Caſe of the Earl of Kilmarnock and others, as being the lateſt, and in Point of Form agreeing with the former Precedents.

The Commiſſion, after reciting that William Earl of Kilmarnock, &c. ſtand indicted before Commiſſioners of Gaol-Delivery in the County of Surry, for High Treaſon, in levying War againſt the King; and that the King intendeth, that the ſaid William Earl of Kilmarnock, &c. ſhall be heard, examined, ſentenced, and adjudged before Himſelf in this preſent Parliament touching the ſaid Treaſon; and for that the Office of Steward of Great-Britain (whoſe Preſence is required upon this Occaſion) is now vacant as we are informed, appointeth the then Lord Chancellor Steward of Great-Britain, to bear, execute, and exerciſe (for this Time) the ſaid Office, with all Things due and belonging to the ſame Office in that Behalf.

What therefore are the Things due and belonging to the Office in a Caſe of this Kind? Not, as in the Court of the High Steward, a Right of Judicature. For the Commiſſion itſelf ſuppoſeth that Right to reſide in a Court then ſubſiſting before the King and Parliament. The Parties are to be there heard, ſentenced, and adjudged. What Share in the Proceeding doth the High Steward then take? By the Practice and Uſage of the Court of the Peers in Parliament, he giveth his Vote as a Member thereof with the reſt of the Peers; but for the Sake of Regularity and Order he preſideth during the Trial and until Judgment as Chairman or Speaker, pro Tempore. In that reſpect therefore it may be properly enough ſaid, that his Preſence is required during the Trial and until Judgment, and in no other. Herein I ſee no Difference between the Caſe of an Impeachment and of an Indictment.

I ſay, during the Time of the Trial and until Judgment, becauſe the Court hath, as I obſerved before, from Time to Time, done various Acts plainly judicial before the Appointment of an High Steward, and where no High Steward hath ever been appointed, and even after the Commiſſion diſſolved.

I will to this Purpoſe cite a few Caſes.

I begin with the lateſt, becauſe they are the lateſt, and were ruled with great Deliberation, and for the moſt Part upon a View of former Precedents.

In the Caſe of the Earl of Kilmarnock and others, the Lords, on the 24th of June, 1746, ordered that a Writ or Writs of Certiorari be iſſued for removing the Indictments before the Houſe. And on the 26th the Writ, which is made returnable before the King in Parliament, with the Return and Indictments, was received and read. On the next Day upon the Report of the Lords Committees, that they had been attended by the two Chief Juſtices and Chief Baron, and had heard them touching the Conſtruction of the Act of the 7th and 8th of King William "for regulating "Trials in Caſes of High Treaſon and Miſpriſion of Treaſon," the Houſe, upon reading the Report, came to ſeveral Reſolutions founded for the moſt Part on the Conſtruction of that Act. What that Conſtruction was, appeareth from the Lord High Steward's Addreſs to the Priſoners juſt before their Arraignment. Having mentioned that Act as one happy Conſequence of the Revolution, he addeth, "However injuriouſly that "Revolution hath been traduced, whatever Attempts have been made to "ſubvert this happy Eſtabliſhment founded on it, your Lordſhips will "now have the Benefit of that Law in its full Extent."

I need not after this mention any other judicial Acts done by the Houſe in this Caſe before the Appointment of the High Steward, many there are. For the putting a Conſtruction upon an Act relative to the Conduct of the Court, and the Right of the Subject at the Trial and in the Proceedings preparatory to it; and this in a Caſe entirely new, and upon a Point, to ſay no more in this Place, not extremely clear; was undoubtedly an Exerciſe of Authority proper only for a Court having full Cognizance of the Cauſe.

I will not minutely enumerate the ſeveral Orders made preparatory to the Trial of Lord Lovat, and in the ſeveral Caſes I ſhall have Occaſion to mention, touching the Time and Place of the Trial, the Allowance or Non-allowance of Counſel, and other Matters of the like Kind, all plainly judicial, becauſe the like Orders occur in all the Caſes where a Journal of the preparatory Steps hath been publiſhed by Order of the Peers. With regard to Lord Lovat's Caſe, I think the Order directing the Form of the High Steward's Commiſſion which I have already taken Notice of, is not very conſiſtent with the Idea of a Court whoſe Powers can be ſuppoſed to depend at any Point of Time upon the Exiſtence or Diſſolution of that Commiſſion.

In the Caſe of the Earl of Derwentwater and the other Lords impeached at the ſame Time, the Houſe received and recorded the Confeſſion of thoſe of them who pleaded Guilty long before the Teſte of the High Steward's Commiſſion; which iſſued merely for the Solemnity of giving Judgment againſt them upon their Conviction.

This appeareth by the Commiſſion itſelf (See the Proceedings in Vol. VI.). It reciteth, that the Earl of Derwentwater and others coram nobis in præſenti parliamento had been impeached by the Commons for High Treaſon, and had coram nobis in præſenti parliamento pleaded Guilty to that Impeachment; and that the King, intending that the ſaid Earl of Derwentwater and others de et pro Proditione unde ipſi ut præfertur impetit' accuſat' et convict' exiſtunt coram nobis in præſenti parliamento ſecundum legem et conſuetudinem hujus regni noſtri Magnæ Britanniæ, audientur, ſententientur, et adjudicentur, conſtituteth the then Lord Chancellor High Steward (hac vice) to do and execute all Things which to the Office of High Steward in that Behalf do belong.

The receiving and recording the Confeſſion of the Priſoners, which amounted to a Conviction, ſo that nothing remained but proceeding to Judgment, was certainly an Exerciſe of judicial Authority, which no Aſſembly, how great ſoever, not having full Cognizance of the Cauſe, could exerciſe.

In the Caſe of Lord Salisbury, who had been impeached by the Commons for High Treaſon, the Lords upon his Petition allowed him the Benefit of the Act of General Pardon paſſed in the ſecond Year of William and Mary, ſo far as to diſcharge him from his Impriſonment, upon a Conſtruction they put upon that Act, no High Steward ever having been appointed in that Caſe.

On the 2d of October, 1690, upon reading the Earl's Petition, ſetting forth that he had been a Priſoner for a Year and nine Months in the Tower, notwithſtanding the late Act of Free and General Pardon, and praying to be diſcharged; the Lords ordered the Judges to attend on the Monday following to give their Opinions, whether the ſaid Earl be pardoned by the Act. On the 6th the Judges delivered their Opinions, That if his Offence was committed before the 13th of February, 1688, and not in Ireland, or beyond the Seas, he is pardoned. Whereupon it was ordered, that he be admitted to Bail; and the next Day he and his Sureties entered into a Recognizance of Bail, himſelf in 10,000*l.* and two Sureties in 5000*l.* each; and on the 30th he and his Sureties were, after a long Debate, diſcharged from their Recognizance.

It will not be material to enquire, whether the Houſe did right in diſcharging the Earl without giving the Commons an Opportunity of being heard. Since in Fact, they claimed and exerciſed a Right of Judicature without an High Steward, which is the only Uſe I make of this Caſe.

They did the ſame in the Caſe of the Earl of Carnwarth, the Lords Widdrington and Nairn, long after the High Steward's Commiſſion diſſolved.

Theſe Lords had Judgment paſſed on them at the ſame Time that Judgment was given againſt the Lords Derwentwater, Nithſdale, and Kenmure, (State-Trials, Vol. VI.) and Judgment being given, the High Steward immediately broke his Staff, and declared the Commiſſion diſſolved. They continued Priſoners in the Tower under Reprieves till the paſſing the Act of General Pardon in the 3d of King George the Firſt.

On the 21ſt of November, 1717, the Houſe being informed that theſe Lords had ſeverally entered into Recognizances before one of the Judges of the Court of King's-Bench for their Appearance in the Houſe

* This Amendment aroſe from an Exception taken to the Commiſſion by the Committee for the Commons, which as it then ſtood did in their Opinion imply that the conſtituting a Lord High Steward was neceſſary. Whereupon it was agreed by the whole Committee of Lords and Commons, that the Commiſſion ſhould be recalled, and a new Commiſſion according to the ſaid Amendment iſſue, to bear Date after the Order and Reſolution of the 12th. Commons Journal of the 15th of May.

in

in this Seſſion of Parliament, and that the Lords Carnwarth and Widdrington were attending accordingly, and that the Lord Nairn was ill at Bath, and could not then attend, the Lords Carnwarth and Widdrington were called in; and ſeverally at the Bar prayed that their Appearance might be recorded, and likewiſe prayed the Benefit of the Act (3 Geo. I. c. 19.) for his Majeſty's General and Free Pardon.

Whereupon the Houſe ordered that their Appearance be recorded; and that they attend again To-morrow in order to plead the Pardon. And the Recognizance of the Lord Nairn was reſpited till that Day Fortnight.

On the Morrow the Lords Carnwarth and Widdrington then attending, were called in; and the Lord Chancellor acquainted them ſeverally that it appeared by the Records of the Houſe, that they ſeverally ſtood attainted of High-Treaſon, and aſked them ſeverally what they had to ſay why they ſhould not be remanded to the Tower of London.

Thereupon they ſeverally upon their Knees prayed the Benefit of the Act, and that they might have their Lives and Liberty purſuant thereunto.

And the Attorney-General, who then attended for that Purpoſe, declaring that he had no Objection on his Majeſty's Behalf to what was prayed, conceiving that thoſe Lords, not having made any Eſcape ſince their Conviction, were intitled to the Benefit of the Act, (ſee Sect. 45. of the 3*d* Geo. I.) the Houſe, after reading the Clauſe in the Act relating to that Matter, agreed that they ſhould be allowed the Benefit of the Pardon as to their Lives and Liberties, and diſcharged their Recognizances; and gave them Leave to depart without further Day given for their Appearance.

On the 6th of December following, the like Proceedings were had, and the like Orders made in the Caſe of Lord Nairn.

I obſerve that the Lord Chancellor did not aſk theſe Lords, what they had to ſay, why Execution ſhould not be awarded. There was, it is probable, ſome little Delicacy as to that Point. But ſince the Allowance of the Benefit of the Act as to Life and Liberty, which was all that was prayed, was an effectual Bar to any future Impriſonment on that Account, and alſo to Execution, and might have been pleaded as ſuch in any Court whatſoever; the whole Proceeding muſt be admitted to have been in a Court having compleat Juriſdiction in the Caſe, notwithſtanding the High Steward's Commiſſion had been long diſſolved. Which is all the Uſe I intended to make of this Caſe.

I will not recapitulate: The Caſes I have cited, and the Concluſions drawn from them, are brought into a very narrow Compaſs. I will only add, that it would ſound extremely harſh to ſay, that a Court of Criminal Juriſdiction founded in immemorial Uſage, and held in Judgment of Law before the King himſelf, can in any Event whatever be under an utter Incapacity of proceeding to Trial and Judgment either of Condemnation or Acquittal, the ultimate Objects of every Criminal Proceeding, without certain ſupplemental Powers derived from the Crown.

Theſe Caſes, with the Obſervations I have made on them, I hope, ſufficiently warrant the Opinion of the Judges upon that Part of the ſecond Queſtion in the Caſe of the late Earl Ferrers which I have already mentioned. And alſo what was advanced by the Lord Chief Baron in his Argument on that Queſtion, "That though the Office of High Steward "ſhould happen to determine before Execution done according to the "Judgment, yet the Court of the Peers in Parliament, where that "Judgment was given, would ſubſiſt for all the Purpoſes of Juſtice du-"ring the Sitting of the Parliament." And conſequently that in the Caſe ſuppoſed by the Queſtion, that Court might appoint a new Day for the Execution.

An Account of the Execution of the late Laurence Earl Ferrers, Viſcount Tamworth, and of his Lordſhip's Behaviour, from the Time of his being delivered into the Cuſtody of the Sheriffs of London and Middleſex, until the Time of his Execution. By the Authority of the Sheriffs.

ON Friday the ſecond Day of May, 1760, the Sheriffs of London and Middleſex received the following Writ under the Great Seal of Great-Britain, for the Execution of Laurence Earl Ferrers, Viſcount Tamworth, on the Monday following.

"George the Second, by the Grace of God of Great-Britain, France and "Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, and ſo forth, To the Sheriffs of "London and Sheriff of Middleſex, greeting. Whereas Laurence Earl "Ferrers, Viſcount Tamworth, hath been indicted of Felony and Mur-"der by him done and committed; which ſaid Indictment hath been cer-"tified before us in our preſent Parliament, and the ſaid Laurence Earl "Ferrers, Viſcount Tamworth, hath been thereupon arraigned, and up-"on ſuch Arraignment hath pleaded Not Guilty: And the ſaid Laurence "Earl Ferrers, Viſcount Tamworth, hath before us in our ſaid Parlia-"ment been tried, and in due Form of Law convicted thereof: And "whereas Judgment hath been given in our ſaid Parliament, That the "ſaid Laurence Earl Ferrers, Viſcount Tamworth, ſhall be hanged by the "Neck till he is dead, and that his Body be diſſected and anatomized, "the Execution of which Judgment yet remains to be done: We re-"quire, and by theſe Preſents ſtrictly command you, that upon Monday "the fifth Day of May Inſtant, between the Hours of Nine in the Morning "and One in the Afternoon of the ſame Day, him the ſaid Laurence Earl "Ferrers, Viſcount Tamworth, without the Gate of our Tower of Lon-"don, (to you then and there to be delivered, as by another Writ to the "Lieutenant of our Tower of London, or to his Deputy directed, we have "commanded) into your Cuſtody you then and there receive; and him "in your Cuſtody ſo being, you forthwith convey to the accuſtomed "Place of Execution at Tyburn, and that you do cauſe Execution be "done upon the ſaid Laurence Earl Ferrers, Viſcount Tamworth, in your "Cuſtody ſo being, in all Things according to the ſaid Judgment. "And this you are by no Means to omit at your Peril. Witneſs Ourſelf "at Weſtminſter the ſecond Day of May, in the thirty-third Year of our "Reign.

"YORKE and YORKE."

Upon the Receipt of this Writ, the Sheriffs immediately iſſued their Orders for making all the neceſſary Preparations for the Execution, and for the Performance of it in a Manner ſuitable to his Lordſhip's Rank.

When the foregoing Precept was delivered to the Sheriffs, they had Notice of the following Writ being ſent to the Lieutenant of the Tower of London or his Deputy, for the Delivery of his Lordſhip into their Cuſtody.

"George the Second, by the Grace of God of Great-Britain, France "and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, and ſo forth, To the Lieu-"tenant of our Tower of London or his Deputy, greeting. Whereas Lau-"rence Earl Ferrers, Viſcount Tamworth, hath been indicted of Felony "and Murder by him done and committed, which ſaid Indictment hath "been certified before us in our preſent Parliament; and the ſaid Lau-"rence Earl Ferrers, Viſcount Tamworth, hath been thereupon arraigned, "and upon ſuch Arraignment hath pleaded Not Guilty; and thereupon "the ſaid Laurence Earl Ferrers, Viſcount Tamworth, hath before us in "our ſaid Parliament been tried, and in due Form of Law convicted "thereof, and for the ſame is adjudged to ſuffer Death, the Execution of "which Judgment yet remains to be done; We require, and by theſe "Preſents ſtrictly command you, That upon Monday the fifth Day of "May Inſtant, between the Hours of Nine in the Morning and One in the "Afternoon of the ſame Day, him the ſaid Laurence Earl Ferrers, Viſcount "Tamworth, unto the uſual Place without the Gate of the ſaid Tower you "bring, and him to the Sheriffs of London and Middleſex then and there "deliver; which ſaid Sheriffs, by another Writ to them directed, we "have commanded then and there to receive the ſaid Laurence Earl Fer-"rers, Viſcount Tamworth, that Execution of the aforeſaid Judgment "may be done in Manner and Form as to the ſaid Sheriffs of London and "Middleſex we by our ſaid other Writ have commanded; and this you "are by no Means to omit at your Peril. Witneſs Ourſelf at Weſtminſter "the ſecond Day of May, in the thirty-third Year of our Reign.

"YORKE and YORKE."

In Obedience to theſe Commands, the Sheriffs, on Monday the 5*th Day of* May, being attended by their Under-Sheriffs, and other proper Officers, went to the Outward Gate of the Tower of London, and at Nine o'Clock in the Morning ſent Notice to the Lieutenant that they were there, ready to receive the Body of Laurence Earl Ferrers, Viſcount Tamworth, purſuant to the King's Writ in that Behalf.

His Lordſhip being informed of it, ſent a Meſſage to the Sheriffs, requeſting their Permiſſion that he might go in his own Landau, which was waiting for him within the Tower, inſtead of the Mourning-Coach which had been provided by his Friends; which Requeſt being granted, his Lordſhip, attended by the Reverend Mr. Humphries, the Chaplain of the Tower, entered into his Landau, drawn by ſix Horſes, and was conducted in it, by the Officers of the Tower, to the Outward Gate, and there delivered into the Cuſtody of the Sheriffs, upon their giving the following Receipt:

Tower-Hill, 5*th May*, 1760.

"Received then of Charles Rainsford, Eſq. Deputy-Lieutenant of the "Tower of London, the Body of the within-named Laurence Earl Ferrers, "Viſcount Tamworth, delivered to us in Obedience of the King's Writ, "of which the within is a true Copy.

GEO. ERRINGTON, Sheriffs of London, and PAUL VAILLANT. Sheriff of Middleſex.

Mr. Sheriff Vaillant accompanied his Lordſhip in the Landau from the Tower Gate to the Place of Execution; and, upon his Entrance into it, addreſſing himſelf to his Lordſhip, he told him, That it gave him the higheſt Concern to wait upon him upon ſo melancholy an Occaſion, but that he would do every Thing in his Power to render his Situation as eaſy as poſſible; and hoped that, whatever he did, his Lordſhip would impute to the neceſſary Diſcharge of his Duty.——To which his Lordſhip anſwered, Sir, I am very much obliged to you,—I take it very kindly that you are pleaſed to accompany me.—His Lordſhip being dreſſed in a Suit of light Cloaths, embroidered with Silver, ſaid, You may, perhaps, Sir, think it ſtrange to ſee me in this Dreſs, but I have my particular Reaſons for it.

The Civil and Military Powers attended the Sheriffs from thence to the Place of Execution, and the Proceſſion was as follows:——

Firſt, a very large Body of the Conſtables for the County of Middleſex (the greateſt probably that had ever been aſſembled together upon any Occaſion), preceded by one of the High-Conſtables.

Then a Party of Horſe-Grenadiers, and a Party of Foot;

Then Mr. Sheriff Errington in his Chariot, accompanied therein by his Under-Sheriff Mr. Jackſon;

Then followed the Landau, eſcorted by two other Parties of Horſe-Grenadiers and Foot;

Then Mr. Sheriff Vaillant's Chariot, in which was his Under-Sheriff Mr. Nicols;

Then a Mourning-Coach and Six;

And, laſtly, a Hearſe and Six, which was provided for the Conveyance of his Lordſhip's Corpſe from the Place of Execution to Surgeons-Hall.

The Proceſſion was conducted with the utmoſt Solemnity; but moved ſo very ſlow, that it did not reach the Place of Execution till a Quarter before Twelve, ſo that his Lordſhip was Two Hours and Three Quarters in the Landau; during the whole of which Time he appeared to be perfectly eaſy and compoſed, and his decent Deportment ſeemed greatly to affect the Minds of all that beheld him; inſomuch that although his Lordſhip thus paſſed through many hundred thouſand Spectators, yet ſo reſpectful was the Behaviour of all towards him, that not the leaſt Affront or Indignity was offered to him by any one; but, on the contrary, many Perſons ſaluted him with their Prayers for his Salvation.

His Lordſhip aſked the Sheriff, If he had ever ſeen ſo great a Concourſe of People before? and upon his anſwering that he had not; I ſuppoſe, ſaid his Lordſhip, it is, becauſe they never ſaw a Lord hanged before. He ſaid, that he had wrote to the King, to beg that he might ſuffer where his Anceſtor the Earl of Eſſex had ſuffered; and that he was in the greater Hopes of obtaining that Favour, vour, as he had the Honour of quartering Part of the ſame Arms, and of being allied to his Majeſty;---and that he thought it was hard that he muſt die at the Place appointed for the Execution of Common Felons.---But whatever his Lordſhip's Thoughts were upon that Account, thoſe Conſiderations will for ever throw an additional Luſtre on his Majeſty's Impartiality and Juſtice.

Mr. Humphries the Chaplain, who, it ſeems, had not attended his Lordſhip till this Morning, took Occaſion to obſerve, that the World would naturally be very inquiſitive concerning the Religion his Lordſhip profeſſed; and aſked him, If he choſe to ſay any Thing upon that Subject? To which his Lordſhip anſwered, That he did not think himſelf at all accountable to the World for his Sentiments on Religion; but that he had always believed in, and adored One God, the Maker of all Things;---that whatever his Notions were, he had never propagated them, or endeavoured to gain any Perſons over to his Perſuaſion;---that all Countries and Nations had a Form of Religion by which the People were governed, and that whoever diſturbed them in it, he looked upon him as an Enemy to Society;---but that, if he himſelf was wrong in his Way of thinking, he was very ſorry for it.---That he very much blamed my Lord Bolingbroke, for permitting his Sentiments on Religion to be publiſhed to the World.---That the many Sects and Diſputes which happen about Religion, have almoſt turned Morality out of Doors.---That he could never believe what ſome Sectaries teach, that Faith alone will ſave Mankind; ſo that if a Man, juſt before he dies, ſhould ſay only, I believe, that that alone will ſave him;—" Shew me thy Faith."——Here his Lordſhip ſtopped;—but by which Quotation he plainly meant, according to the Holy Writer, (St. James, chap. ii. ver. 18.) whoſe Words they are, that Faith without Works is a dead Faith.

Concerning the unfortunate and much-to-be lamented Mr. Johnſon, whoſe Death occaſioned the Trouble of this Day, his Lordſhip declared, That he was under particular Circumſtances; that he had met with ſo many Croſſes and Vexations he ſcarce knew what he did; and moſt ſolemnly proteſted, that he had not the leaſt Malice towards him.

The Slowneſs of the Proceſſion made this Journey appear ſo very tedious to his Lordſhip, that he often expreſſed his Deſire of being got to the End of it, ſaying, that the Apparatus of Death, and the paſſing through ſuch Crowds of People, were ten times worſe than Death itſelf; but upon the Sheriff's taking Notice to his Lordſhip, that he was glad to ſee that he ſupported himſelf ſo well, his Lordſhip replied, I thank you, Sir, I hope I ſhall continue ſo to the laſt.

When his Lordſhip had got to that Part of Holborn which is near Drury-Lane, he ſaid, he was thirſty, and ſhould be glad of a Glaſs of Wine and Water; but upon the Sheriff's remonſtrating to him, that a Stop for that Purpoſe would neceſſarily draw a greater Crowd about him, which might poſſibly diſturb and incommode him; yet if his Lordſhip ſtill deſired it, it ſhould be done; he moſt readily anſwered,---That's true, I ſay no more, let us by no means ſtop.

When they approached near the Place of Execution, his Lordſhip told the Sheriff, That there was a Perſon waiting in a Coach near there, for whom he had a very ſincere Regard, and of whom he ſhould be glad to take his Leave before he died; to which the Sheriff anſwered, That if his Lordſhip inſiſted upon it, it ſhould be ſo; but that he wiſhed his Lordſhip, for his own Sake, would decline it, leſt the Sight of a Perſon, for whom he had ſuch a Regard, ſhould unman him, and diſarm him of the Fortitude he poſſeſſed.—To which his Lordſhip, without the leaſt Heſitation, replied, Sir, if you think I am wrong, I ſubmit; and upon the Sheriff's telling his Lordſhip, that if he had any Thing to deliver to that Perſon, or any one elſe, he would faithfully do it; his Lordſhip thereupon delivered to the Sheriff a Pocket-Book, in which was a Bank-Note, and a Ring, and a Purſe with ſome Guineas, in order to be delivered to that Perſon, and which was done accordingly.

The Landau being now advanced to the Place of Execution, his Lordſhip alighted from it, and aſcended upon the Scaffold, which was covered with black Baize, with the ſame Compoſure and Fortitude of Mind he had enjoyed from the Time he left the Tower; where, after a ſhort Stay, Mr. Humphries aſked his Lordſhip, if he choſe to ſay Prayers? which he declined; but upon his aſking him, If he did not chooſe to join with him in the Lord's Prayer? he readily anſwered, He would, for he always thought it a very fine Prayer; upon which they knelt down together upon two Cuſhions, covered with black Baize, and his Lordſhip with an audible Voice very devoutly repeated the Lord's Prayer, and afterwards, with great Energy, the following Ejaculation, O God, forgive me all my Errors, ---pardon all my Sins!

His Lordſhip then riſing, took his Leave of the Sheriffs and the Chaplain; and after thanking them for their many Civilities, he preſented his Watch to Mr. Sheriff Vaillant, which he deſired his Acceptance of; and ſignified his Deſire, that his Body might be buried at Breden or Stanton, in Leiceſterſhire.

His Lordſhip then called for the Executioner, who immediately came to him, and aſked him Forgiveneſs; upon which his Lordſhip ſaid, I freely forgive you, as I do all Mankind, and hope myſelf to be forgiven.——He then intended to give the Executioner five Guineas, but, by Miſtake, giving it into the Hands of the Executioner's Aſſiſtant, an unſeaſonable Diſpute enſued between thoſe unthinking Wretches, which Mr. Sheriff Vaillant inſtantly ſilenced.

The Executioner then proceeded to do his Duty, to which his Lordſhip, with great Reſignation, ſubmitted.---His Neckcloth being taken off, a white Cap, which his Lordſhip had brought in his Pocket, being put upon his Head, his Arms ſecured by a black Saſh from incommoding himſelf, and the Cord put round his Neck, he advanced by three Steps upon an Elevation in the Middle of the Scaffold, where Part of the Floor had been raiſed about eighteen Inches higher than the reſt; and ſtanding under the Croſs-Beam which went over it, covered with black Baize, he aſked the Executioner, Am I right?——Then the Cap was drawn over his Face:---and, then!---upon a Signal given by the Sheriff (for his Lordſhip, upon being before aſked, declined to give one himſelf) that Part upon which he ſtood, inſtantly ſunk down from beneath his Feet, and left him entirely ſuſpended; but not having ſunk down ſo low as was deſigned, it was immediately preſſed down, and levelled with the reſt of the Floor.

For a few Seconds his Lordſhip made ſome Struggles againſt the Attacks of Death, but was ſoon eaſed of all Pain by the Preſſure of the Executioner.

From the Time of his Lordſhip's aſcending upon the Scaffold, until his Execution, was about eight Minutes; during which his Countenance did not change, nor his Tongue faulter:---The Proſpect of Death did not at all ſhake the Compoſure of his Mind.

Whatever were his Lordſhip's Failings, his Behaviour in theſe his laſt Moments, which created a moſt awful and reſpectful Silence amidſt the numberleſs Spectators, cannot but make a ſenſible Impreſſion upon every humane Breaſt.

The accuſtomed Time of one Hour being paſt, the Coffin was raiſed up, with the greater Decency to receive the Body, and being depoſited in the Hearſe, was conveyed by the Sheriffs, with the ſame Proceſſion, to *Surgeons-Hall, to undergo the Remainder of the Sentence (viz. Diſſection).---Which being done, the Body was on Thurſday Evening, the 8th of May, delivered to his Friends for Interment.

He was privately interred at St. Pancras near London, in a Grave dug twelve or fourteen Feet deep, under the Belfry.

* The Statute made in the 25th Year of his late Majeſty's Reign for preventing the Crime of Murder, enacts, " That the Body of every Perſon convicted of Murder ſhall, " if ſuch Conviction and Execution ſhall be in the County of Middleſex, or within the City of London, or the Liberties thereof, be immediately conveyed by the Sheriff or " Sheriffs, his or their Deputy or Deputies, and his or their Officers, to the Hall of the Surgeons Company, or ſuch other Place as the ſaid Company ſhall appoint for this " Purpoſe, and be delivered to ſuch Perſon as the ſaid Company ſhall depute or appoint, who ſhall give to the Sheriff or Sheriffs, his or their Deputy or Deputies, a Receipt " for the ſame; and the Body ſo delivered to the ſaid Company of Surgeons, ſhall be diſſected and anatomized by the ſaid Surgeons, or ſuch Perſons as they ſhall appoint " for that Purpoſe; and that in no Caſe the Body ſhall be ſuffered to be buried, unleſs after ſuch Body ſhall have been diſſected and anatomized."
